Perugia, Perugia, Perusium, and Pervasium, was a very ancient City, and famous for the Calamity which befell it, when Ottavius Augustus block'd up L. Antonius, the brother of Marcus the Triumvir within it; and having forc'd him to surrender, let him go without any harm, pardon'd the Soldiers; but executed the utmost degree of Rage, not only on the Perusians, but also on the Romans, not sparing those of the first and second Quality, who were cruelly Butcher'd at the Altar of Julius Cæsar, tho' this seems to have been the effect rather of the brutal fury of the Soldiers than the Orders of the General. One of the Citizens of Perusia, having set fire to his House with all his Goods, and thrown himself into the Flame, it burnt so violently that it quickly brought the Neighbourhood into the same Calamity; and in a little time the whole Town, except the Temple of Vulcan, was reduc'd to Ashes. But not long after, a new City sprung up from these, which was call'd Augusta Perusia. Between this City and Cortona lies the Lacus Thrasimenus, or Perusinus, famous for the signal overthrow which the Romans, under the Consul Flaminius, in the second Punic War, receiv'd from Hanibal the Carthaginian General, on the North Borders of it. It was one of the first 12 Tuscan Colonies, and is at present a large and pretty well Inhabited City, Situated on a Hill near the Tyber, about 28 Miles from Osvieto to the North, and 60 from Rome to the North-West, and 12 from Affesi, towards the Lake now call'd, Lago di Perugia, or Lugo di Castiglione, which is about 9 Miles from the City. It has the Title of a Bishoprick, and is adorn'd with an Univerfity, and defend- ed by a strong Citadell.

Citta di Castello, Tifernium Tiberinum, is a Fortified Town, and well Inhabited, on the Confines of Tuscany, near the Tyber, 25 Miles North from Perugia, and gives name to the Country about it, call'd il Contado di Citta di Castello.

The Marquisate of ANCONA, or Marca d'Ancona, Marchia Anconitana, which anciently made up the greater part of Picenum, is a Fertile and Pleasant Country, producing particularly abundance of Wax and Flax; only the Air is bad. It is Bounded on the North with the Gulf of Venice, on the East with the Duchy of Urbino, on the West with the farther Apruzzo, and on the South divided from Umbria, by the Apennines. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Ancona, Ancona, is a very ancient City, said to have been Built by the Syracusians, who left their Country to avoid the Tyranny of Dionysus. It stands on the Adriatick Shoar, over against Dalmatia, near the Promontory, anciently call'd Cramerum, now, il monte S. Ciriaco, about 30 Miles from Fermo to the North, 15 from Osimo to the North-East, between Loretto to the East, and Sinigaglia to the West, and 110 from Rome to the North. It has a very good Harbour (as Mr. Miffon relates) but the Trade is quite ruin'd. The unevenness of its Situation, renders it very inconvenient. The Streets are narrow and dark. There are neither fair Houses, nor fine Churches in it. The Citadell commands both the City and Haven; and at the entrance of the Mole or Peer, there is a Trium- phal Arch of very fine white Marble; which was Erected for Trajan by order of the Senate. The fore-cited Author says, that Victuals are very dear and scarce in this Place: Insomuch that a Fricasse of 3 Eggs, or as many Pilchards, was brought them for a Supper to serve 6 Persons; and that you must fight for them too before you can have 'em.

Macerata, Macerata, stands on a Hill, not far from the Ruins of Helvia Recina, in the midst between Recanati to the East, and Tolentino on the West, and 20 Miles South from Ancona. It was Built (as some say) from the Ruins of Hebria Recina, Ann. 410. Pope Nicholas IV. Erected its Univerfity in the year 1250. and Pope John XXII. made it a Bishoprick in the year 1586.

Ascoli, Asculum Picenum, stands on a Hill, near the River Tronto, on the Confines of the farther Apruzzo, and was anciently the Chief City of Picenum. It is divided (as Busdand says) into 4 Parts, has two old Castles, 100 old Towers, 6 Bridges and 9 Gates; and is distant 20 Miles from the Adriatick Sea to the West, 9 from Montalto to the South, 18 from Fermo, and 20 from Aquila: and is a well-inhabited and For- tified Town.

Osimo, Auximum, or Oximum, stands on a Hill, about 10 Miles from Ancona to the South, and about as much from Jesi to the West, and Loretto to the East: and is in a decaying condition, tho' it has the name of a Bishoprick; which in Italy are generally small, as they are very numerous.

Camerino, Camorinum, is Situated at the Foot of the Apennines, on the Confines of Umbria in the midst between Macerata to the North-east, and Spoleto to the South-west, and 60 from Rome to the North. It is an Episcopal See, subject to none but the Pope, and formerly was govern'd by its own Dukes.

Fermo, Firmium, mention'd by Strabo, Mela and Cicero as a Town and Colony of Picenum in Italy, is pretty well Inhabited, and Built on the rising ground, near the Coast of the Adriatick Sea, 30 Miles South- East from Ancona, and 90 from Rome to the North- East. It was Dignified with the Title of an Archie- piscopal See by Pope Sixtus V. who had formerly been Bishop there.

Loretto, Lawretum, stands about 3 Miles from the Shoar of the Adriatick Sea, 10 from Fermo to the North-West, 20 from Ancona to the South-East, and near 100 from Rome to the North-East. It is a lit- tle Place, but very well Fortified, and has the Title of a City and Bishoprick, Erected by Pope Sixtus V. Anno 1586. to which the See of Recanati was united Anno 1591. Loretto has been a famous Place for a long time, but because every body docs not particularly know the reason why it is so, they must be put in mind, that it is pretended that the House in which the Virgin Mary is said to have been Born, where she was Betroth'd and Married to Joseph, where the Angel saluted her, and where the Son of God was Incarnated, was brought by the Angels from Nazareth to Dalmatia, and plac'd on a lit- tle Mountain call'd Terzatto, on 12 May 1291. That 3 Years and 7 Months after it was remov'd thence, and brought by them to a Forest in the Ter- ritory of Recanati in the Marca d'Anconens; from whence after it had been 8 Months there, it was re- mov'd a Mile further to the same Hill where it now stands. But a difference happening between 2 Bro- thers, to whom the ground belong'd, it was remov'd some Paces from thence, and set down in the midst of a High-way, from whence it has never stirr'd since. To prevent inconveniences that might happen, par- ticularly a new removal, they Built a Magnificent Church, Church, in the midst of which it remains secure against all Assaults; about which they have since Built 4 Walls. The Sacra Casa consists of one Chamber, 44 Spans Long within, 18 Broad, and 23 High; 1½ Palm, being 13 Inches English Measure. The Holy Tabernacle stands East and West, and over the little Chimney in the Chamber, in a Nich, stands the great Lady of Loretto, about 4 Foot High, made (as they say) of Cedar-wood, and Wrought by St. Luke. The Ornaments with which she is usually deck'd, especially the Mantle, which is Adorn'd with an infinite number of precious stones, are of an inestimable Value. She has a great number of Robes for change, and 7 different Mourning Habits for the Holy Week. Her Triple Crown was presented her by Lewis XIII. of France, who also gave a little Crown to the Infant Jesus, both wonderful Rich, the former being all cover'd with precious stones. The Altar made by the hands of the Apollites, and the Stone upon which St. Peter celebrated his first Mass, were Transported at the same time with the House. All round the Statue there is nothing but Lamps, Sarcophagi, Busts, and other Figures of Gold and Silver; 28 Candlesticks of Silver and Vermilion, 12 of Massy Gold, Weighing 37 Pound each. 'Tis incredible what vast numbers of Pilgrims come here to pay their Devotion, especially at Easter, and the Virgins Nativity; (which is Solemniz'd in the Month of September) inasmuch that in the years of greatest concourse, they have counted 20000 Pilgrims and upwards, during these 2 Festivals. The Treasury-Chamber is a spacious Room, having 17 large Presses with Folding-Doors, instead of Wainscot to the Walls; which are fill'd with pure Gold, Jewels of the greatest Value, and Vessels and Ornaments more precious than Gold; for Silver is not admitted into these Presses, but lies in confus'd Heaps, in several Places, till they have occasion for't. 'Tis impossible to imagine the vast quantity and variety of Riches that are amass'd here; and it would be in vain to attempt a particular account of them. They have been bestow'd by Princes, States, and People that own the Papal Supremacy, who have emulously strove who should out-do one another. Nor is the Treasury all the Riches that belong to this Place, There are settled Revenues, and Lands Purchas'd out of Sight, and they have Built not only a stately Church, but also a Magnificent Palace, and no doubt have Chests full of Money. There is also an Arsenal; but not very considerable. In the publick Place an admirably beautiful Fountain of white Marble, enrich'd with Statues of Brass, and a fine Statue of Pope Sixtus V. Erected by the Inhabitants of Loretto, in acknowledgment of the Privileges they received from him. The principal Trade of this little City, consists in Medals, Rosaries, Sanctified Beads, Images Agnus Dei's, and such like Commodities.

Recanati, Recinetum, is a little City on the Top of a Hill, near the River Potenza, about 4 Miles from Loretto to the South-west, 10 from Macerata; and 13 from Ancona to the South. It has been an Episcopal See, since the year 1240. but in the year 1591. it was united to that of Loretto.

Tolentino, Tolentinum, is a little Town, Situated on a rising Ground, about 25 Miles from Ancona to the South, and 15 from Camerino to the North-East. It was made a Bishoprick by Pope Sixtus V. Ann. 1586. under the Archbishop of Formo, but it is now united with the See of Macerata.

San-Severino, Septempeda, is a little Town, on the Banks of the River Potenza, 6 Miles from Tolentino to the West, and 12 from Camerino to the North. The ancient Town of Septempeda was destroyed by the Goths, in the year 543, and from its Ruins Septempeda Nova did arise, or Fanum Sancti Severini (from whence the Modern Italian name San Severino) in the year 1198. where formerly a little Castell stood, call'd Castrum Regale, near the Ruins of the old Town. It was Erected into a Bishoprick by Pope Sixtus V. Ann. 1586. whereas formerly it was in the Diocess of Camerino.

The Dutchy of URBINO, Urbinus Ducatus, is a part of the ancient Umbria, beyond the Apennines, where the Vilumbri dwelt of old; and is Bounded on the North with the Gulf of Venice, and Romandiola, on the East with the Marca d'Ancona, on the South with Ombria, and on the West with Tuscany. It had formerly Dukes of its own; and the Family of Ravero was the last that had it; for the Male Race failing in the Person of Francis Maria Ravero, he sometime before he died, to prevent all discords that might happen after his Death, gave it to Pope Urban VIII. in the year 1631. It may be divided into these Countries, the Dutchy of Urbino, the County of Montefeltro, the Territory of Gubbio, the Signiory of Pesaro, and the Vicariate of Senigaglia; and comprehends these Towns,

Urbino.	}	Pesaro.
Cagli.		Sinigaglia.
Gubbio.		Urbania.
Fossombrone.

Urbino, Urbinum, stands on a Hill near the Head of the River Foglia, about 20 Miles from the Adriatick Shoar, 80 from Florence to the East, and 100 from Rome to the North. It was Erected into an Archbishoprick by Pope Pius IV. Ann. 1563. and was the Birth-place of Polydore Virgil, and the famous Painter Raphael.

Gubbio, Engubium, anciently call'd Iguvium, stands at the foot of the Apennines, on the Confines of the Marca d'Ancona, 26 Miles from Urbino to the South, and 16 from Perugia. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Urbino, but not subject to his Jurisdiction.

Fossombrone, Forum Sempronii, stands near the River Maro, about half a Mile from the old Town, 10 Miles from Urbino to the East, in the midst between Pesaro to the North, and Cagli to the South, about 15 Miles from either. It was Sold to Frederick Duke of Urbino by Galeazzo Malatesta, Lord of it, for the Sum of 13000 Florins of Gold, in the time of Pope Sixtus the IV.

Pesaro, Pisaurum, the Name anciently of a Town and Colony of Umbria in Italy, according to Pliny and Prolocmy, is at present a large, well built and pleasantly situated Town, on the River Foglia near to where it empties it self into the Adriatick Sea; in the midst between Sinigaglia to the East, and Rimini to the West, and 20 Miles from Urbino to the North-East. It was rais'd by Totila King of the Goths, and rebuilt by Belisarius (as Procopius relates) and is an Episcopal See Suffragan to the Archbishop of Urbino. It is tolerably well Fortified, tho' somewhat after the old Fashion, and the Houses are generally handsome: And it is excellently provided with all the Conveniencies of Life. The best Meat (as Mr. Misson says) costs not full two Farthings a Pound, which weighs 18 Ounces; and the Bread, Wine and other Things are proportionally cheaper: But the Air is very bad in Summer, and extremely dangerous in July and August.

Sinigaglia,

Sinigaglia, Senogallia, anciently a Town of Umbria in Italy, according to Pliny, Strabo, Paul, Diaconius and others. Prolomey calls it Sena Gallica: And it is mentioned by Livy, Polybius and Stephanus. It was built by the Galli Senones, in the 396th year of the City of Rome: And is now a little but delightfully situated Town in a Plain, near the Adriatick Sea, and on the Confines of the Marca d'Ancona, in the midst almost between Ancona to the East, and Pesaro to the West, 22 Miles from either, and 34 from Urbino to the East. It belong'd formerly to the Family of Malatesta, afterwards to the Dukes of Urbino, till it fell in to the Church in the time of Pope Urban the VIII.

Urbania. Urbania, a little, and no very old Town, distant about 7 Miles from Urbino to the South-West, and 8 from Citta di Castello. It was formerly call'd Castel Durante, from William Durant, a Frenchman, Bishop of Mande, who built it, An. 1280. Pope Urban the VIII. erected it into a Bishoprick, under the Archbishop of Urbino, and call'd the Town after himself Urbania, An. 1635.

ROMANDIOLA Propria, or ROMAGNA, anciently call'd Æmilia Regio, is bounded on the West with the Bolognese, on the North with the Dutchy of Ferrara, on the South and West with the Dutchy of Urbino and Tuscany. A great part of it towards the Apennines is subject to the Duke of Tuscany, and therefore call'd Romandiola Florentina. The most considerable Towns in that part of it which belongs to the Church are,

Ravenna.	}	Forli.	}	Cervia.
Faenza.		Bertinoro.		Cesena.
Imola.	}	Rimini.	}	Sarsina.

Ravenna. Ravenna, anciently a City of Gallia Cispadana, according to Pliny, Strabo and Prolomey, was one of the chief Cities in that Country we now call Italy, and the Residence of the Exarch or Governour sent by the Emperour of the East to govern that Country. It was formerly the Principal Haven that the Romans had on the Adriatick Gulf: And its situation is represented by the ancient Geographers like that of Venice; but the Cafe is quite altered now; for not only the Lagunes are dried up, but the Sea has retir'd almost three Miles from it, and those Plains that were formerly under Water, are now the most fruitful Fields in Italy. There are to be seen in the Walls towards the Sea, great Rings of Iron, which served formerly to fasten the Vessels, and the Remainers of the Pharos are still visible. By reason of the many Disasters which this City hath suffered by the Wars, there are but few Marks of Antiquity left in it. Without the Walls, near the ancient Haven, stands the Mausoleum which Amalsintha erected for her Father Theoderick, King of the Ostrogoths, who kept his Court at Ravenna, which they have turn'd to a little Church, and call it Rotunda; and which is covered with a Stone 38 Foot in Diameter and 15 thick. The Cathedral is an old Church, the Nave or Body of which is supported by 56 Pillars of Marble, of the Archipelago. There are several other fine Churches, as, that of the Theatines, St. Vitalis, St. Apollinaris, St. Romaldus, St. Andrew, St. Celsus. In the Great Place stands a fair brazen Statue of Pope Alexander the VII. and at the other end of it are two Columns, upon which were the ancient Patron, and the Arms of Venice, while Ravenna belong'd to that State; but since it belong'd to the Church, the Pope has plac'd on these Pillars, the Statues of Victor and Apollinaris, who are the Patrons of Ravenna. It was taken by the Longobards in the Year, 744: and is now the chief City of Romandiola, distant about 45 Miles from Bologna to the East, 102 from Ancona to the North-West, 60 from Florence to the North-East, and 42 from Ferrara to the South-East.

Faenza, Faventia, anciently a Town in Gallia Cisalpina, according to Livy and Pliny, upon the River Aneno, now Lamone, in the midst between Imola to the West, and Forli to the East, and 8 from the Confines of the Great Duke of Tuscany's Dominions, 25 Miles West from Ravenna to the North. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Ravenna.

Imola or Jumola, Forum Cornelii, anciently a City belonging to the Lingones in Gallia Cispadana, sometimes call'd Convelium, and Sylla Forum, is at present a pretty near Town, and well Inhabited, distant about 20 Miles from Bologna, to the East, 10 from Faenza, 15 from Ravenna, and 16 from the Confines of the Dominions of Florence to the North: and is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Ravenna.

Forli, Forum Livii, anciently a City of the Senones, in Gallia Cispadana, Situated in a Plain near the Mountains, 15 Miles from Ravenna to the South, and 4 from Citta di Sole, and the Confines of Tuscany; and is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Ravenna.

Rimini, Ariminum, stands in a Plain, on the Coast of the Adriatick Gulf, at the Mouth of the River Ariminus, now la Marecchia. Baudrand, (who Travelled that Country not very long ago, and is reckon'd a pretty good Geographer) calls it culta & elegans; but Mr. Misson says, it is a little poor City. It is distant 20 Miles from Pesaro to the North-West, 25 from Ravenna to the South-East, somewhat less from Urbino to the North, and in the midst between Bologna to the West, and Ancona to the South-East: it was Fortified by Sigismundus Pandolphus Malatesta, but at present it has only a Wall, and that in no good condition. The Bridge of Marble, Built by Augustus and Tiberius, and the Triumphal Arch Erected by Augustus, the Ruins of an Amphitheatre, the Tower of Brick, which was anciently the Pharos, but now encompass'd with Gardens (since the Sea has fallen back half a Mile) are the only Monuments of Antiquity now remaining. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Ravenna.

Cervia, Cervia, anciently call'd Phicoele, Ficoele, and Ficode, stands in the midst of a Boggy Country, near the Coast of the Adriatick Gulf, about 12 Miles from Ravenna to the East, and 15 from Rimini. It is but thinly Inhabited, by reason the Air is very bad, inasmuch (as Baudrand relates) there are not above 400 Inhabitants in it; but it has the Title of a Bishoprick, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Ravenna.

The Country call'd BOLOGNESE, Bononiensis Ager, was anciently Inhabited by a part of the Boii, and Lingones in Gallia Cispadana; and is Bounded on the North with the Dutchy of Ferrara, on the East with Romandiola, properly so call'd, on the West with the Dutchy of Modena, and on the South with Tuscany, from which it is separated by the Appennine Mountains. It's Soil is very Fertile and well Improv'd: and it was given to the Church by Pepin King of France, and Charles the Great. The most considerable Places in it are, Bologna, and Bertinoglio, tho' there are several others of less Note.

Bologna,

Bologna, Bononia (commonly call'd the Fat) is plac'd in Gallia Cispadana by Pliny, Livy and Tacitus: and was at first call'd Felsina, from Felsinus a Tuscan King, by whom it is said to have been Built. It stands on the little River Reno, 25 Miles from Ferrara, and 92 from Venice to the South, 54 from Florence, and 192 from Rome to the North-West, between Milan to the West, and Ancona to the East, 125 from the former, and 135 from the other. It has been the Seat of an Archbishop (who has also the Title of a Prince of the Empire) since the year 1582. that Pope Gregory XIII. Erected it: and is Greater and Richer, as Mr. Misson relates, than Florence, and containing more Inhabitants by a third part. All the Fortification of this City is a single Wall; for when it submitted it self to the Pope, Ann. 1278. (Nicholas being then in the Chair) they made an Honourable Composition with his Holiness, viz. That he should never Bridle them by a Citadel, or Consecrate their Estates upon any pretext whatsoever; and that they should have an Auditor of the Rota, and an Ambassador at Rome. The Houses are generally Built of Stones or Brick, Plaster'd over, and the Streets are pretty straight. The University was Founded by Theodosius the younger, Ann. 425. but it owes most of its splendor to Charlemain. There are several fine Churches in this City, particularly that of St. Petronius which is the greatest; and in which is to be seen Cassini's Meridian Line, drawn on a Copper Plate, set in the Pavement, and is 220 Foot long. The Church of the Dominicans, in which are the Chapel and Tomb of St. Dominick, is very magnificent. There are also several stately Palaces in this City, whereof that which belongs to General Caprara is the finest. The Cardinal Legate, and the Gonsalvior with his Counsellors Lodge in the Publick Palace, above the Gate of which there is a Statue in Brafs of Gregory XIII. which weighs 11000 Pounds, and on one side of the Gate, that of Boniface VIII. There are likewise in this City several Cabinets of Curiosities, particularly that of Aldrovandus. It is also worth ones while to observe the great Tower Afinelli, which was Built by Gerrard Afinelli, Ann. 1109. It is 376 Foot high, as that of the other Tower near to it, call'd Garisenda from its Founder, is 130. The latter was Built by Orbo, and Philip Garisendi, Ann. 1110. and leans to one side like the Tower of Pisa: and its inclination is about 9 Foot. The shining Stones, known by the name of Bonianian Stones, are found on the Hill Paderno, about 3 Miles from the City. There are in this City 400 Silk-mills: and the Trade consists chiefly in Wax, Hemp, Flax, Hams, Sauciges, Soap, Snuff and Perfumes; and sometime their little Dogs turn'd to a very good Account.

Bentivoglio, Bentivolium, formerly call'd Pons Poledranus, stands about 10 Miles to the North of Bologna, towards Ferrara. It was formerly a very fine Place, but now is almost quite Ruin'd. From hence the Bentivoglio's had their name, who had the Jurisdiction of this Place many years.

The Dutchy of FERRARA, properly so call'd, became a part of the Ecclesiastical State, after the Death of Alphonfus II. Ann. 1598. and is Bounded on the North with the Polesine di Rovigno, on the West with the Dutchy of Mantua, on the South with the Bolognese, and Romandiola properly so call'd and on the East with the Gulf of Venice. It is divided (by Baudrand) into these following Parts, il Polesine di Ariano, il Polesine di Ferrara, il Polesine di S. Georgio, la Valle di Commachio, la Valle di Marrara, la Valle di Maremorta: and the most considerable Towns in it are, Ferrara, Comachio, and Cento.

Ferrara, Ferraria, anciently call'd Forum Aferni, stands on a little Branch of the Po, call'd Po Morto, from whence there is a Canal made to Francolino, about 6 Miles long, for the conveniency of Commerce. It stands in the midst between Mirandola and Comachio, and about 28 Miles from Bologna to the North-East, 30 from the Adriatick Sea to the West, and 60 from Venice to the South: While it remain'd in the Hands of the Princes of the House of Este, it might justly have been reckon'd one of the most flourishing Cities in Italy; but since it became a part of the Ecclesiastical State, it has mightily decayed, insomuch that at present tho' it be a large and pretty handfom Town, it is very ill Peopl'd, Poor and almost Desolate. In the year 1570. in the space of 40 Hours, it suffer'd 160 jolts of a dreadful Earthquake, which had well nigh reduc'd it all to Rubbish. The Citadel, which was Built by Clement VIII. and which they say, cost 2000000 Crowns, is still in good order; but the other Fortifications are quite neglected. The Ducal Palace, the Marquis de Villa's House, the Cathedral and several other Churches and Convents, are worth a Traveller's Notice; but do not deserve a particular description.

Comachio, Comalchum, or Comacina, is a little Town standing in a Marsh Ground, about 3 Miles from the Adriatick Shoar to the West, 20 from Ravenna to the North, and 35 from Ferrara to the East. It is Inhabited only by a few Fishermen, by reason of its unwholsom Situation; but has been mightily distress'd by the Venetians, who in the year 932. almost quite destroy'd it. It is however an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Ravenna.

The Republick of St. MARINO has its name from a Mountain in the Province of Romandiola, and a Town of that same Name; which is so call'd from a certain Holy Man call'd Marinus, who liv'd a Hermit there in the time of the Emperor Dioclesian. It has been a free State ever since the year 600. and has under its Jurisdiction several little Towns and Villages in the adjacent Country; for in the year 1100. in the time of the Emperor Orbo the III. it Bought the Castell of Penmarossa from the Count of Monterrat; and that of Casolo, in the Reign of the Emperor Frederick Enobarbus; each of which places is about a Mile distant from St. Marino. In the year 1463. Pope Pius II. gave them the Castels and Villages of Serravalle, Faento, Mongiardano, and Fiorentino, and the Village of Pragge. It had several others, but the Dukes of Urbino have taken them from this State: so that the whole Inhabitants of this little State, are not thought to be above 6000. The Town of St. Marino (Tirano) stands on a steep Hill, and is pretty well Fortified. It is Govern'd by 2 Officers, call'd Captains, who are chang'd twice a year, viz. in the Months of March and September. This Town is distant above 30 Miles from Ravenna to the South-East, 20 from Urbino to the North-East, and about 60 from Florence to the East.

C H A P. XIII.

The Kingdom of Naples, Regnum, Neapolitanum.

THE Kingdom of Naples, which comprehends those Parts of Italy, that were anciently call'd Sammium, Campania, Apulia, and Magna Græcia, owes its Modern name to the City of Naples; it having been formerly call'd the Kingdom of Sicily, on this side the Pharo, (viz. of Messina) It came to be reduc'd into the form of a Kingdom (as Cluverius and others relate) in this manner. About the year of Christ 1000. the Saracens being in possession of this Country and the Island of Sicily, one Tancred a Norman, who had 12 Sons, and not over-much to give them, came together with them into Italy, and offer'd his Service against the Saracens; who being happily expell'd Italy and Sicily; he and his Sons had large Possessions assign'd them, both in the Kingdom of Naples and Sicily. After which his Son Robert was made first Duke of Apulia and Calabria; whose Son Roger was Created King of Sicily and Naples; and both together were call'd the Kingdom of the 2 Sicily's; for that which is now call'd the Kingdom of Naples, was then call'd Sicily on this side the Pharo, and the Island it self Sicily beyond the Pharo. Roger was succeeded by his Son William, Ann. 1135. His Son William, surnam'd the Good, (as his Father had been call'd the Bad) Succeeded him. Ann. 1166. who left both the Kingdoms to his Bastard Son Tancred: against whom the Pope conceiving a mortal hatred, and resolving to do him a Mischief, caus'd Henry VI. Son of the Emperor Frederick I. Duke of Swaben to Marry one Constance, whom he brought out of a Nunnery, and declar'd him Heir of those Kingdoms. The Emperor Frederick II. Henry the Vith's Son by that Marriage Married Iole, John of Brenne's Daughter, King of Jerusalem, and by that means laid claim to the Title, and therefore the succeeding Kings of Sicily were likewise call'd Kings of Jerusalem. The Popes still entertaining an inveterate hatred against this Frederick and his Posterity, Pope Urban VIII. prevail'd with Charles I. Earl of Anjou, to come from France and Invaide Manfred; and having first Kill'd him, and then Conradin Frederick the IId's Grand-child, he took Possession of the Kingdom. But he did not enjoy it long; for he with his Frenchmen did so oppress the Sicilians, that they form'd a Conspiracy against them, and on Easter Eve, Ann. 1282. upon a Signal given as was agreed, put all the French to the Sword; which Action is still known by the name of the Sicilian Vespers. Peter of Aragon, who had Married Constance, Manfred's Daughter, and whom Conrad a little before his Death had appointed his Heir, deliver'd the Sicilians from the Tyranny of the French, and having made Charles II. who had been bear at Sea, his Prisoner, did not dismiss him before he had consented to content himself with Naples, Calabria, Apulia, and Tarentum, and resign Sicily and Sardinia to the Aragonians. Robert who in vain attempted to recover Sicily, Succeeded Charles, to whom Succeed Joanna I. After her Charles of Durazzo, then Ladislaus, next Joanna II. who first nam'd Alphonfus of Aragon her Heir, but repenting of that before 2 years were at an end, She nam'd Lewis IV. Duke of Anjou, who disparted the Kingdom of Naples with Alphonfus, till the year 1434. that both he and Joanna Died. Afterwards Alphonfus did expell René, who pretended to succeed his Brother: and by his latter Will appointed Ferdinand I. his Ballard, his Heir: with whom John Duke of Lorraine, René's Son, disputed the Title, and was Crown'd by Pope Pius II. But after several Battels, fought with various success, was forc'd to leave the Kingdom; Charles VIII. King of France claiming the Crown as Heir to the Earl of Anjou. Charles did also drive Ferdinand II. out of the Kingdom, but shortly after, Charles's Affairs obliging him to return to France, Ferdinand was call'd home by the Neapolitans. At last Frederick, Ferdinand's Uncle, being at once attack'd by Lewis XII. of France, and Ferdinand the Catholick, and not being able to make head against both, surrender'd himself to the former, and let his Kingdom fall to the Conquerors; but a strife arising about the dividing of it, they went by the Ears, and the Spaniards drove the French clear out: and Ferdinand united Sicily, and Naples to his other Dominions. And so ever since the year 1504. it hath been subject to the King of Spain, who pays a certain acknowledgement of Homage due to the Pope, as a white Genet, and a Sum of Money, present-ed with great Ceremony every year, in Testimony of this Kingdom's dependence on the Holy See.

This Country has been variously divided at different times. Under its first Kings, it was divided into 4 Parts, viz. The Provinces of Lavaro, Abruzzo, Apulia and Calabria: afterwards into 7 Provinces, and at last into 12. of which we shall treat particularly hereafter. It is Bounded on the North with the Gulf of Venice, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, on the East with the Mouth of the Gulf of Venice and the Ionian Sea, and on the West with the Ecclesiastical State: and is in length (according to Cluverius) from the River Trento, to the Promontory now call'd Capo Spartivento, 360 Miles, in Breadth, from the Promontory Massa to Monte di St. Angelo, 120.

The Air in some places is excessively hot, especially on the South-side of the Apennines, but on the other Temperate, except in Apulia. It is almost every where well provided with Springs and Rivers, which flow from both sides of the Apennines. The Soil produces Wine and Oyl, and pretty good Pasture: and the Neapolitan Horses are in great esteem. Also good store of Almonds, Olives, Figs, Citrons, Oranges, Grapes, Corn, Hemp, Line, Pulse, Anise-seed and Coriander Seed. There are said to be no Venomous Creatures in this Country, except the Tarantula and Cheersydras, an amphibious kind of Serpent; and the Locust that sometimes annoys the product of the Ground. The Soil of Campania, is so Fertile, that it produces the same Flowers twice a year. The Air of the hither Principality is reckon'd very temperate, and the People live to a great Age. The farther Principality abounds in Cattle, and several sorts of good Fruit. Basilicate produced Saffron, and plenty of Honey and Wax. Calabria, especially affords good store of Manna. The hither Calabria, produces Corn, Oyl, and Mulberries, the farther excells in good Horses, and fine Honey. Apulia pulia, by reason of the excessive Heat, is so plagued with Flies, that it is a common Proverb, If one would have a fore-taste of Hell Torments, let him go spend a Summer in Apulia. In Capitanata, the Soil is dry and sandy, and the Grass short, but very good. In Bari, the Air is pretty Temperate, but the Tavantiula is very Troublesom, and so are some other little Serpents, whom the Strk is a great Enemy to. Otranto is said to produce as much Oyl as might serve all Italy. In Molise there's no great plenty of Venison, that it is much cheaper than Beef or Mutton. The hither Abruzzo is the coolest place of the Kingdom, yet produces plenty of Corn, Wine, Oyl and Saffron.

As to the Genius and Manners of the Neopolitans, we shall only tell you the Proverb that passes commonly in Italy, viz. The Kingdom of Naples is a Paradise, but the Inhabitants Devils. They are naturally Seditious, and abominably unclean. They are very Sumptuous in their Apparel, especially on Sundays and Holidays, inso much that 'tis hard to distinguish a Lady from a Cobler's Wife.

It is very well known the Kingdom of Naples is Govern'd by a Viceroy sent by the King of Spain, whose Government is commonly for 3 years: He is commonly one of the Grandees of Spain; and the People have no great reason to brag of the Gentleness of his Government. The Revenues of this Kingdom are said to be about 3000000 Ducats, and if we may believe Mr. Lassels, the Kingdom is able to raise 150000 Foot, and 100000 Horse. The number of Cities and great Towns in this Kingdom are said to be 148. Archbishopricks 20. Bishopricks 128. and the number of Princes, Dukes, Marquesses and Earls is incredible.

The latest and most common division of the Kingdom of Naples, as we said before, is into 12 Provinces, as you may see in the following Table.

- I. The Province of Lavaro.
- II. The farther Principality.
- III. The hither Principality.
- IV. Basilicata.
- V. The hither Calabria.
- VI. The farther Calabria.
- VII. The hither Abruzzo.
- VIII. The farther Abruzzo.
- IX. The County of Molise.
- X. The Province of Capitanata.
- XI. The Province of Bari.
- XI. The Province of Otranto.

The Province of LAVARO, Terra Laboris, comprehends a part of the ancient Campaniana, Felix, (so call'd by Pliny for its fruitfulness) and Latinum Novum; and is Bounded on the North with the County of Abruzzo, on the East with the County of Molise, and the farther Principality, on the South with the hither, and on the West with the Tyrrhenian Sea, and the Champaign of Rome. It is watered by the Garigliano, and the Volturno: and is said to be about 74 Miles long, and 40 broad. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Naples. Neapolis, which Cicero, Pliny and Strabo, place in Campania Felix; was anciently call'd Parthenope, from the Sea-Nymph, or Cirene of that Name, whose Inchantments, as the Story goes, Ulysses and his Companions had enough to do to escape: or from Eumelus the King of Theffaly's Daughter, who is said to have brought hither a Colony. Some are of opinion that the Grecians Built it, and call'd it Neapolis; others affirm that Augustus gave it that name; but however that may be, it is certainly one of the noblest and finest Cities in the World, distant about 100 Miles from Rome to the South East, 200 from Palermo to the North-east, 200 from Florence to the South-east, and about 300 from Venice Lat. 410. Long. 3240. It is seated on a Gulf of the same name with the City, and has a large and safe Harbour to the Mediterranean Sea. It is a large and well Peopl'd City, and is reckon'd nine Miles in compass round the Walls, and 18 if you include the Suburbs. It is divided into 29 Parts, call'd Ortime, and is Pav'd throughout with large square Stones, Chequer-wife. The Streets are straight, and most of 'em broad. The Houses are high and uniform, and have flat Roofs, and are generally very beautiful. The Sea washes it on the South-side, on the North there are little Hills, that rise insensibly into Campania Felix, on the East, a Plain which leads to Mount Vesuvius, and on the West the upper Town. There are in this City many very fine Palaces, viz. that of the Viceroy, those of the Dukes of Matalone, Gravina, Airola, and de la Tour, &c. The three Castles which defend the City; the Academy, which they call Studi Neovi, the Academy for Riding the great Horse, the Convents, Arsenal and Magazines for the Gallies, are all very fine Buildings. There are also many Fountains, which are very convenient, and serve to adorn the City. But above all, the Number and Magnificence of Churches surpasses imagination. Their Frontispices and Gates, the Chappels, Altars and Tombs, seem to be pieces of the finest Architecture in the World. One that would see the rarest Pictures, Sculptures, and Vessels of Gold and Silver, must go to the Churches. The Roofs, Waincoats, Walls are all cover'd with pieces of precious Marble, most Artificially laid together, or with Compartments of Eass Relievo, or Joiners Work, Guilded and Enrich'd with the Work of the most famous Painters. There is nothing to be seen, but Jasper, Porphyre, Mosaick of all Fashions, all Master-pieces. In a Cloyster belonging to the Carthusians is to be seen, the famous Crucifix of Michael Angelo, drawn as they say, after the Life from a certain Peasant, whom that Painter Crucified for the purpose. The Picture is upon Wood, and is not above half a Foot high. Mr. Misson finds fault with Michael, for he says the Crucifix holds his Head exactly straight, which is not like a Man expiring on a Cross.

Altho' the greatest part of the Antiquities of this Place be buried in the Ruins, yet there are several to be seen still. The Front of St. Paul major, one of the Theatine Churches, is the old Frontispice of the Temple of Apollo. The Columns of San. Restituta are said to have been taken from Temple of Neptune. There are also some remains of an Amphitheatre, and a Statue of the Nile, Supported by a Crocodile: Also the Head and neck of a large Brazen Horse, without a Bridle; which formerly stood in one of the Publick Places of Naples, as an Emblem of its Liberty, when it was a Common-wealth; but King Conrad caus'd a Bit to be put in the Mouth of it, it, to signifie they had now lost it. In this City, as in most places of Italy, the Women are all hid. The Habits and Equipages of this City are of Black and Dark Colours. They are forbidden to Wear Gold or Silver, or Silk upon Silk, and the Spanish Dress is generally used. The greatest Lord can keep but 2 Staffieri, or Footmen, and their Coaches are for the most part drawn by Mules. The Trade of this City is much decay'd; and consists at present in Soap, Snuff, Stockens, Watcoats of fine Naples Silk, &c.

It will not be improper to subjoin to this short Description of Naples, a brief account of those Things that are most Remarkable in the Neighbourhood of it. In the first place the famous Mount Vesuvius, to which the Ancients gave different Names, but all ending or sounding very like this. It is now call'd by the Italians Vesuvio, or Monte di Somma, and is distant about 8 Miles from the City of Naples. During the first 4 Miles along the Coast, there are many good Villages, and a very well Manur'd Country, which seems to have receiv'd little or no Damage by the Eruptions; but tho' one may travel on Horseback 2 Miles farther, it must be through loose Stones, and Heaps of burnt Earth, which the Mountain hath vomited up: and the further one advances, he finds the Ground Crack'd, Dry, and Cover'd with calcin'd Stones, and the Channels of Sulphur and Bitumen, which have run down the Mountain. To omit the less formidable and more recent Eruptions, since the Birth of Christ it is said to have had Twelve dreadful ones, particularly that in December, 1631. when the Sea retir'd several times, and left the Ships dry on the Shoar, and the Floods of Fire ran in great Streams into the Sea, many Villages were turn'd roffy turvy, and above 30000 Persons, with an infinite number of Cattle Perish'd; and the Beautiful City of Naples was threaten'd with its last Calamity. But we must refer the Reader to be more fully and particularly inform'd, concerning the more ancient Eruptions before Augustus's time, and those that have happen'd since the middle of this Age, with the several Alterations they have made on the Mountain, to those Authors who have wrote fully and Learnedly on the Subject, particularly Julius Casar Recupitius, and Mr. Misson; the latter of which tells us, that the Country about it is very Rich, and that the East-side of the Mountain it self bears abundance of good Vines; and 'tis from hence we have the famous Greco, Malateste, and Lacryme Christi.

Between the Suburbs of Naples and Puzzoli, there's a little Hill call'd Pauslypus; which has a most charming Situation, and is all cover'd over with Houses of Pleasure, and abundance of excellent Vines, and is very well cultivated. The Ascent to it is not very difficult, and might have been easie, but out of an extravagant humour, they have Pierc'd the Mountain, and made a Hole, which is a shorter, but much more troublesome Passage. This Cave is call'd the Grotta of Puzzoli, and is in some Places cut through the Rock, in other Places thro' the Sand. It is almost a Mile Long, between 30 and 40 Foot high, and about 18 Broad. It has no light but at the ends, and thro' a little Hole in the middle, over an Oratory which is made in the Rock, by enlarging that part of the Way a little. This is an ancient Work, and Seneca makes mention of it. It is said to have been made by one Cocceius; but whether he was a Prince of that Country, or only the Undertaker, is no easie matter to tell.

A little beyond Pauslypus is the Lake Agnane, between two little Hills. It is round, and about a Mile in Circumference. On the Banks of it are two Caves, which deserve to be taken notice of, viz. the Caves call'd the Bath of S. German, and the Grotto del Cane. The former of which is said to be an excellent Remedy for the Gout, and several other Distempers; for you no sooner go down 3 or 4 Stairs, than you are Seiz'd with a Heat, which smells of Brimstone, and puts one into a sudden Sweat. The other is as it were the beginning of a Cave, at the Foot of a Hill, and is 9 or 10 Foot Long or Deep, 4½ Broad, and 5 High. There arises out of the Earth in this Grotto, a thin and piercing Exhalation, without any Smoak, which Seizes on the Breath, and choaks one in a Moment; but two Foot or less from the Earth there is no danger, because the Spirits or Steams, grow thin, and are dispersed. The Experiment has been try'd on Dogs, and other Animals, and sometimes on Malesactors; who in an instant lost their Breath, and seem'd to be quite Dead, and would really have been so, if they had not immediately been put into the Lake, (which is not above 20 Paces from this Grotto) where in a Minute they resume their Spirits, and come to themselves again; which effect the open and free Air has often produc'd.

Puzzoli, Puteoli, Anciently a great and famous City, which Pliny says was formerly call'd Dicæarchia, and Delos Minor, according to Festus, because there was a Temple there Dedicated to Apollo, after the manner of that at Delos. It was Built by the Sami, (according to Stephanus) and is said to owe its name to the word Putor, Sink or Rankness, because of the Sulphurous Exhalations that arise near it. It was anciently (according to Strabo) a Haven belonging to the Cumani, and that which is now call'd the Gulf of Naples, was then call'd Sinus Cumanus. It was the most famous Port on all that Coast, for the Corn and Goods brought thither from Egypt: And here were the Houses of Pleasure, and delightful Retreats of the Roman Emperors; but now it is a very inconsiderable Place, about 8 Miles from Naples to the West, and 3 from Baia. Wars, Earthquakes, Infuls of the Sea, and Time, that brings all things to Destruction, having almost reduc'd it to nothing. The great quantity and variety of stately Ruins that are to be found about it, do evidently demonstrate its former Magnificence. There are the Ruins of an Amphitheatre, the Arena of which was 172 Foot long, and 88 broad: near to which there are other Ruins, almost quite Buried, which they say was anciently a Labyrinth, but it looks like those of a Fish-pond. The Cathedral is Built on the Ruins of a Temple of Jupiter. Betwixt the City and the Amphitheatre, are to be seen the Ruins of a Temple of Diana: and when the Sea is Turbulent, it throws out several marks of the Magnificence and Richness of the ancient Palaces of this Place, among which are oftentimes Cornelian Stones, Agats, Jasper, Amethysts, &c. and between this and the Lake Lucrin, are to be seen the remains, as they call 'em, of the famous Bridge, which Caligula Built between Baia and Puzzoli; tho' there is better reasons for believing that Caligula's Bridge was of Boats, and not of Stone or Bricks.

The Lake of Lucrin is about 2 Miles from Puzzoli, and is now but a little Pond (as Mr. Misson says) ½ Mile long, 100 Paces broad, and about 70 from the Sea; to which it was formerly joyn'd, but separated from it by Art. The Waters of it are Salt; and the Oysters found in it were anciently reckon'd the best. The new Mountain, call'd Monte Nuovo, hath almost fill'd it up. This Mountain was brought forth in the Night, between the 19th and 20th of September 1538. Its perpendicular Height is about 400 Fathoms, and its Circuit about 3000 Paces. On the other side of the Lucrin Lake stands another Mountain, call'd Monte di Christo, and about a large Mile from it, is the Lake of Averno, that other Gulf of Hell; which is as big almost as that of Agnano. Whatever Virgil, Lucretius, Silius Italicus, Pliny, and others have written concerning the deadly Vapours that ascended from it, and Choaked those poor Creatures, whose hard Fate it was to fly over it, it is certain (says Mr. Misson) that now Birds fly over it, and swim in it, without any harm.

Near to this, is the Cave which they call the Grotto of Sybill, the principal Entry to which, they say, was near Cume, but is now fill'd up. It has been about a League long, 10 Foot broad, and 12 high; and does not at all seem to be the Lodging of Sybil, it being too large for her either to have Made, or Liv'd in. The Italian Cimerians, who liv'd between Baia, and the Lake Averno, were notorious Robbers and Murderers, seem rather to have been both the Work-men and Inhabitants of it. Read Mr. Misson's Discourse concerning it.

Capua, Capua, anciently a famous City in Campania Felix, standing in a Plain, near the River Vulturinus, and Built by the Osce, according to Halicarnassus. It Revolted to Hanibal in the second Punick War, which so enraged the Romans against it, that they laid Siege to it, and having taken it, put 80 of their Senate to Death, made 300 of their greatest Men of their City Prisoners, and Sold a vast number of the Inhabitants. It was Raz'd by Gensericus, King of the Vandals, Rebuilt by Narjes, and afterwards destroy'd by the Longobards. From its Ruins there arose another Capua, upon a Neighbouring Hill call'd Pisfens; but it being often almost quite destroy'd by Fire, Count Lando, and Laudulphus the Bishop remov'd it to the Place where New Capua now stands, about the year 836. It is Situated in a most fertile Plain, on the River Voltorno, 2 Miles from the Ruins of the ancient City of Capua, 16 from Naples to the North, as many from Seffa to the South-East, and 12 from the Tulcan Shoar. Pope John XIII. made it an Archbishoprick, in the year 968. Conrad, Son of the Emperor Frederick II. did almost quite Ruin it; which with several other Calamities it hath since suffered, have put it in a Decaying condition, insomuch that at present (as Mr. Misson Relates) it is a very small and inconsiderable City in all respects.

Sorrento, Surrentum, mention'd by Pliny, Strabo, and Livy, as a Town in Campania, stands on the Shoar of the Gulf of Naples, in a pleasant Plain, on the Confines of the hither Principality, 24 Miles from Naples to the South, and 6 from il Capo Campanello, or Promontorium Minervæ. It is thought by some to owe its name to the Sirens, who had their Residence near this Place. The Surrentini Colles, (now la Mounsagna Sorrento) were famous for the excellent Wine that grew upon them.

Nola, Nola, anciently the name of a Town and Colony in Campania, stands about 14 Miles from Naples to the East, and somewhat nearer to Sarno and Acerra. It is pretty well Inhabited, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Naples. Augustus Cæsar Died in or near this Place, and St. Paulinus its famous Bishop was Born in it.

Aversa, or Adversa, Aversa is a little City; Situated in a delightful Plain, in the midst between Capua to the North, and Naples to the South. It is said to have been Built from the Ruins of Atella, or S. Arpino, by Robert Guiscard Duke of Normandy. It was destroyed by Charles I. King of both Sicilies, and afterwards Rebuilt. The Bishoprick of Atella was Translated hither by Pope Leo IX. and tho' the Bishop Lives within the See of Naples, he is not under that Archbishop's Jurisdiction.

Gaeta, Caieta, anciently a City belonging to the Aurunci in Latium Novum, according to Ptolemy, is Situated on a Rock, on the Tyrrhenian Shoar, about 40 Miles from Naples to the West, 155 from Rome, and 15 from the Confines of the Pope's Dominions to the East. Between this Town and Formis, (now Mola) stood the Villa Ciceronis, call'd also Formianum, where Cicero was Murder'd by an Order from Anronius, by Herennius a Centurion, and Papilius a Tribun, (for whom he had once Pleaded when he was Try'd for Murder) in the 64th year of his Age. Here are to be seen, the Tomb of Charles of Bourbon, Constable of France, who was Kill'd at the Sacking of Rome: and an ancient Mausoleum of Minutius Plancus, now call'd the Tower of Orlando, or della Guardia. The Cathedral Church, (the Steeple of which they say, was Built by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, by way of Penance for his Sins) is very well worth the seeing. There is a Pillar in it, which they pretend belongs to Solomon's Temple, and an ancient Vessel in form of a Bell, made of white Marble, which serves for a Font in the Baptistry of the Church: and is a curious piece of Work. This Place is defended by a Garrison of Spaniards; and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Capua, but not subject to his Jurisdiction.

Aquino, Aquinum, anciently the name of a Town and Colony, on the Confines of Campania, stands on the Rivulet Melfa, not far from the Liris or Garigliano, and about 5 Miles from the Borders of the Pope's Dominions, and 45 from Naples. It was Sack'd by the Emperor Conrad, and is at present a place of no great note; but an Episcopal See, and the Birth-place of Thomas Aquinas, that famous Schoolman.

Sora, Sora, stands on the Liris, or Garigliano, about 16 Miles from Aquino to the South, 28 from Gaeta to the North, and 55 from Rome to the East. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to none; and the Title of a Dutchy, appropriated to the Family of Boncompagno, and the Birth-place of the Learned Cardinal Caspar Baronius, Cassino, Casinum, anciently a City of the Volsci, in Latium Novum, on the Confines of Campania, but now lying in its Rubbish: from which hath arisen the Town of S. Germano, distant about 48 Miles from Naples to the North, towards Aquila, 5 from the River Gariglione, 6 from Aquino to the North-West, and 12 from the Confines of the Pope's Dominions. Near to this Place is the Hill call'd Monte Cassino, upon which stands the fair Monastery of the Benedictines, where their Founder Liv'd many years, and where he also Died.

Venafro, Venafrum, is a little Town Situated upon a rising Ground, near the River Voltorno, 26 Miles from Gaeta to the South-East, and 22 from Capua to the South-West. It is Honoured with the Title of a Principality, which one of the Family of Sabelli in Rome enjoy, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Capua.

Teano, Teanum Sidicinum, is a small Town, Situated on a Hill, in the midst between Seffa to the West, and Calvi to the South-East, 6 Miles from either, either, 12 from Capua, and 20 from Cassino. It is an Episcopal Sec, under the Archbishop of Capua.

The Farther PRINCIPALITY, Principatus Uterior, anciently Inhabited by the Hirpini, lyes towards the Appennine Mountains, between the Capitanata to the North and East, Campania Felix to the West, and the higher Principality to the South. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Benevento.	}	St. Agatha.	}	Monte Morano.
Conza.		Trevico.		Monte Verole.
Avellino.	}	Bisaccia.	}	Nusco.
Ariano.		la Cedogna.

Benevento, Beneventum, anciently a City and Colony of the Sammnes, Bordering upon the Hirpini. Pliny says it was formerly call'd Maleventum, and Ptolomy calls it Vencontum. It is said to have been Built by Diomedes, and is distant 28 Miles from Capua to the East, as many from Salerno to the North, and 32 from Naples to the North-East. It stands at the Conflux of the Rivers Sabato and Calore, and call'd by Frontinus Concoidia Colonia. It was given to Pope Leo IX. by the Emperor Henry III. in the year 1053. for Bamberg, a Town in Germany, and is an Archiepiscopal Sec. Near to this Place Manfred, King of both the Sicilies, was Defeated and Kill'd by King Charles of Anjou, Ann. 1266. It gives name to the adjacent Country call'd by the Italians, il Territorio di Benevento; but the Dutchy of Benevento was of much larger extent, comprehending all Apulia, Sannium, Campania, and a small part of the Country of the Bruttii. It was Erected by Aubaris King of the Longobards, and lasted till about the year 850. Consult Camillus Peregrinus of Capua's Dissertation on this Subject.

Conza, Compsa or Consa, stands on a rising ground, at the Foot of the Appennines, near the Springs of the River Aufidus, or Ofanto, on the Confines of the Capitanata, and the higher Principality. 50 Miles from Naples, 25 from Salerno, and 30 from Benevento to the South-East. Baudrand says, there is not now above 70 Families, and 120 Souls in it; so small a Town is it at present.

Avellino, Abellinum, anciently a Town belonging to the Hirpini, stands about a Mile from the River Sabato, in the midst between Benevento to the North, and Salerno to the South, 16 Miles from either, and 40 from Naples to the East, and 4 from Monte Vergene. It is Honour'd with the Title of a Principality, Enjoy'd by the Family of Caraccioli, and is an Episcopal Sec, under the Archbishop of Benevento, but united to that of Friocenti.

Ariano, Arianum, stands on a steep Hill, at the Foot of the Appennines, 12 Miles from Benevento to the East, and 30 from Salerno to the North-East. It is a pretty neat Town, subject to the Duke of Bovino, who is Count of this Place, and an Episcopal Sec, under the Archbishop of Benevento. There is another Town of this name in the Dutchy of Ferrara, near the Confines of the Venetic Dominions.

Sant. Agatha di Gori, Agathopolis, or Fanum S. Agathe Gothorum, stands near the Confines of the Terra di Lavaro, in the midst between Benevento to the East, and Capua to the West, 14 Miles from either: and is an Episcopal Sec, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Benevento.

La Cedogna, Laquedonia, or Aquilonia, anciently a Town of the Hirpini, in Sannium, according to Livy and Pliny, but destroyed a long time since. Clugerius thinks this ancient name belongs rather to Carbonara, a little Town in this Principality, near the River Aufidus or Ofanto, in Capitanata, between the ancient Alecidonia to the West, and Monte Verde to the East, and as many from Benevento, but the former opinion seems more probable. It is an Episcopal Sec, under the Archbishop of Conza.

Monte Marano, Mons Maranus, is a very small Town, on the Banks of the River Calore, about 10 Miles from Avellino to the East, and 6 from Nusco. It is an Episcopal Sec, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Benevento.

Monte Verde, Mons Viridii, a small Town, on the Banks of the Aufidus, or Ofanto, on the Frontiers of the Capitanata, and Basilicata, between Melfi and Cedogna, 13 Miles from Conza to the East, and 23 from Acerenza to the North-West: and is an Episcopal Sec, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Conza.

Nusco, Nyscum, is a very little Town, at the Foot of the Appennines, between Monte Marano, and St. Angelo, 18 Miles from Benevento to the South-East, and 25 from Salerno to the North-East.

The higher PRINCIPALITY, Principatus Citerior, comprehends that part of Italy which the Picentini anciently Inhabited, and the West part of Lucania: and is Bounded on the North with the farther Principality, and part of Campania Felix, on the West with the Tyrrhenian Sea, and on the South and East with the Province of Basilicata. It reaches from North-West to South-East, for the space of 70 Miles; and the most considerable Towns in it are,

Salerno.	}	Campagna.	}	Nocera.
Amalfi.		Scala.		Minoi.
Aerno.	}	Policastro.	}	Capaccia.
Sarno.		Mariusco Nuovo.		Caggiana.

Salerno, Salernum, anciently a Town and Colony of the Picentini, stands on a Bay of the same name, near the Coast of the Tyrrhenian Sea, 24 Miles from Naples to the South-East, as many from Capo Capanello, and 30 from Benevento to the South. It is the chief City of this Province, and was formerly the Title of the eldest Sons of the King of Naples. It is an Archiepiscopal Sec, and has a very good Harbour, and strong Castle, and is pretty well Inhabited. On a Hill hard by it, there are to be seen several Vestiges of a Town; which has made some People think that Salernum stood formerly there. The University of this place has been famous for the study of Physick.

Amalfi, Amalphis, anciently a Town belonging to the Picentini, now a little and Ill-inhabited one, on the Bay of Salerno, (the West part of which is call'd la Costa d' Amalfi) 11 Miles from Salerno to the South-West, and 24 from Naples to the South-East. It is an Archiepiscopal Sec, and Honour'd with the Title of a Dutchy. The use of the Seamans Compass is said to have been first found out here, by one Flavius Blendus, or Gioia, about the year 1300. and here they say, the Body of St. Andrew the Apostle is kept.

Aerno, Acernum, anciently a Town belonging to the Picentini, is now a very small one, (tho' a Bishop's Seat, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Salerno) standing at the Foot of the Hills, about 15 Miles to the North-East of Salerno.

Sarno, Sarnum, stands partly on a Hill, and partly on a Plain, about 13 Miles from Salerno to the North, 8 from Nola, and 5 from Nocera, and the Source of the River of the same name. It is an Episcopal Sec, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Salerno, and belongs to the Family of Barberini.

Campagna, Campania, stands near the Rivers Atrio and Tenza, 16 Miles from Salerno to the East, and 11 from the Sea-Coast. It is an Episcopal Sec, under the the Archbishop of Conza, and formerly belong'd to the Prince of Monaco.

Scala, Scala, anciently call'd Camà, stands about 2 Miles from Amalfi to the East, and as many from the Bay of Salerno. It seems by the Ruins and Vestiges that are still to be seen, that it was formerly a great Town, but at present it is a very inconsiderable one, not containing above 150 Houses. It is an Episcopal Sec, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Amalfi.

Policaastro, Policastrum, or Paleocastrum, is a small Town, almost deserted, and no better than a Village, on the Coast of the Tufcan Sea, 8 Miles from the Confines of the Province of Basilicata, 17 from the Promontory of Palinuro to the East, and 55 from Salerno to the South-East. It is an Episcopal Sec, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Salerno.

Marsico Nuovo, Marsicum, is so call'd to distinguish it from Marsico Vecchio, in the Province of Basilicata; and is a pretty little Town standing on a rising Ground, at the Foot of the Appennines, near the Source of the River Agri, on the Confines of the Basilicata. 6 Miles from Marsico Vecchio to the North-west, 55 from Salerno, and 10 from the Gulf of Policaastro to the North; and is an Episcopal Sec, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Salerno.

Nocera, Nuceria, anciently a Town of Campania Felix, by Livy, call'd Alphaterna, and mention'd by Silius in his 8th Book, stands between Sarno and Caeva, 10 Miles from Amalphi to the North, 8 from Salerno to the North-West, and 22 from Naples. It is an Episcopal Sec, under the Archbishop of Salerno, and Honour'd with the Title of a Dutchy, enjoy'd by the Family of Barberini. There is another Town of this name in Ombria, within the Pope's Dominions.

Capaccio, Caput-aqueum, a Town of no great Note, which sprung from the Ruins of the ancient Pestum, or Pestii; which was Raz'd by the Saracens, Ann. 930. and stood 3 Miles from Capaccio; which formerly stood on a Neighbouring Hill, and was defended by a strong Castle, before it was destroy'd by the Emperor Frederick, Ann. 1249. but was afterwards Built on a Plain at the Foot of the same Hill, and lies now in Ruins, about 22 Miles from Salerno to the South; and retains the Title of a Bishoprick under the Archbishop of Salerno.

The Province of BASILICATA, which formerly comprehended the greater and better part of Lucania, is Bounded on the North with the Province of Bari, and a part of Otranto, on the East with the Bay of Taranto, on the West with the 2 Principalities, and on the South with the hither Calabria: and is a Barren Country, and no ways improv'd or well Inhabited. The Towns of any note in it are,

Acerenza. } Melfi.
Potenza. } Rapolla.
Tricarico. } Venosa.
Lavello. }

Acerenza, or Cirenza, Acherontia, or Acherontus, is the chief Town of Basilicata, and stands at the Foot of the Appennines, 10 Miles from Venosa to the South-East, and 28 from Matera. It is a little Town, and in a decaying condition, but has the Title of an Archbishoprick, to which the Sec of Venosa is united.

Potenza, Potentia, stands at the Foot of the Appennines, about 15 Miles from Acerenza to the South-West, and as many from Marsico Nuovo to the South: and is an Episcopal Sec, under the Archbishop of Acerenza.

Lavello, Lavellum, or Labellum, is a little Town, on the Confines of the Capitanata, about 3 Miles from the River Aufidus or Ofanto, between Melfi to the West, and Minervino to the East, and 20 from Acerenza to the North-West. It is subject to the Prince of Minervino, and an Episcopal Sec, under the Archbishop of Bari, and there are several pieces of Antiquity to be seen about it.

Melfi, Melfis, stands upon an uneven Height, on the Rivulet Melfa, on the Confines of the Capitanata, and the farther Principality, 4 Miles from the River Ofanto, 65 from Naples to the East, and 40 from Policaastro. It is an Episcopal Sec, under the Archbishop of Acerenza; and has been united with the Sec of Rapolla, since the year 1528. It is a pretty large and well Inhabited Town, and is honoured with the Title of a Principality, enjoy'd by the Family of Doria.

Rapolla, Rapolia, is a little Town, almost desolate; about a Mile from Melfi to the East, 20 from Conza to the East, and 50 from Policaastro to the North. It is an Episcopal Sec, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Siponto, but was united to the Sec of Melfi, by Pope Clement VII. in the year 1528.

CALABRIA, which was otherwise call'd Mesapia, was quite different from the Country that bears that name now. It was Bounded on the North and East with the Adriatick Sea, on the South with the Salentini, and on the West with Apulia Penecetia. The Country that bears that name, now lies towards the South, over against Sicily, and is that part of Magna Græcia, which the Bruttii anciently Possess'd. It has the Title of a Dutchy, which formerly the Eldest Sons of the King of Naples used to have: And is Bounded with the Province of Basilicata on the North, with the Ionian Sea on the East, the Tyrrhænian Sea on the West, and on the South with that of Sicily; and sometime comprehended the Country of Basilicata. Also Calabria strictly taken, is divided into the hither and farther Calabria. The former of which lies most Northerly, and comprehends these Towns, viz.

Bari, Barium, Bavis Varia, stands on the Adriatick Sea, in the middle between Polignano to the East, and Trani to the West, 20 Miles from either, 35 from Manfredoni and 120 from Naples to the East, and (according to Festus) has its name from Bara, a little Island near Brindisi. It has the Title of an Archbishoprick.

Andria. Andria, is a pret y large and well-inhabited Town, Situated in a Plain, 4 Miles from Barletta, 6 from Trani, and 25 from Bari to the West. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Trani, but a very little one, for it reaches no farther than the Town.

Monopoli. Monopolis, is a little but finely Built Town, 20 Miles from Bari to the East, 25 from Taranto to the North, and 40 from Brindisi to the North-West. It stands on the Gulf of Venice, and is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Bari, but has little or nothing under its Jurisdiction without the Town.

Trani, Tranium, stands on the Coast of the Adriatick, in a fruitful Country, about 6 Miles from Andria, and 24 from Bari to the West. The Inhabitants pretend that it was anciently call'd Trajanum, from the Emperor Trajan, who they say, Built it. It is an Archbishoprick See, and once had a very good Harbour, but now 'tis fill'd up with stone.

The Province of Otranto, Hydruntina Provincia, where anciently the Salentini and Calabri dwelt, is almost in form of a Peninsula, and is Bounded with the Adriatick Sea on the East, and partly on the North, the Gulf of Taranto on the South, the Province of Bari on the North, and Basilicata on the West. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Otranto.	} Castellaneta.	} Matera.
Brindisi.
Lecce.	} Gallipoli.	} Nardo.
	} Ostuni.	} Taranto.

Otranto, Hydruntum, anciently a City Inhabited by the Calabri, stands on the Adriatick Sea, and is a Place of Strength with a Castle, which Mahomet II. Emperor of the Turks, Took and Pillag'd in the year 1480. but was retaken by the Christians, and is possess'd by the Spaniards. It was formerly the chief City of this Province, but is in a decaying state. It stands on the Sea-shore, on the extreme South part of Italy, 40 Miles from Brindisi to the South, 20 from Lecce, 24 from Gallipoli to the East, about 20 Leagues from the nearest part of the Coast of Epirus, and 19 from Capo d' S. Maria di Leuca to the North, and has the Title of an Archbishoprick.

Brindisi, Brindisium, anciently a City of the Sal-

entini, call'd otherwise Brendisium, by Ptolemy, and Prentesium by Stephanus, is a Town with a large and safe Harbour, on the Adriatick Sea, 36 Miles from Taranto to the East, 40 from Otranto to the North, and 64 from Bari to the East. It is said to have been Built by the Aeoli, Diomedes's Companions: and here Cesar Octavius, and M. Antonius lay Encamp'd, the latter being nearer the Town, because he had invested it: and Servilius designing to go over from hence to Cesar, with a Body of 7000 Horse, was surpris'd by Antonius with a handful, and routed near (Ovia) before they were quite awake. Cesar in the 1st Book of his Comment, gives a description of the Harbour of this Place.

Lecco, Aletium, and Litium by latter Writers, anciently a Town belonging to the Salentini, is a large and well inhabited City, and one of the most Populous in all the Kingdom of Naples, the City of that name only excepted. It stands between Brindisi to the North, and Otranto to the South, at the distance of 20 Miles from either, 7 from the Adriatick Sea to the West, 15 from Nardo, 50 from Taranto. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Otranto.

Gallipoli, Gallipolis, or Callipolis, anciently belonging to the Salentini, stands on a Rock in the Gulf of Taranto, and tho' it be little, is a very strong and well inhabited Place; being surrounded by the Sea, except at one Place where it is join'd to the Land by a Bridge, which is defended by a strong Fort; which with its Situation makes it almost impregnable. It is distant 25 Miles from Otranto to the West, 36 from Taranto to the South-East, and 24 from the Promontory call'd Capo di S. Marcadi di Leuca, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Otranto, but the Bounds of the Diocess, are the same with those of the City.

Taranto, Tarentum, anciently a City of the Salentini, call'd Taras by Strabo, and Oebalia by Virgil. It was Built by the Lacedemonians, and was once the Head of a Republick, which made War against the Romans, in the year of their City, 472. After Pyrrhus, whom the Tarentines had invited over to their Assistance, was defeated, the Romans became Masters of it. In the Punick War, Hannibal Took it, but it was Retaken by Q. Fabius Maximus, who brought away their famous Colossus of Heracles, made of Brass, and the Workmanship of Lysippus, and set it up in the Capitol at Rome. In the year of the City, 631. Tarentum was (according to Volleius) made a Roman Colony. It is now a little Town, but well Inhabited, and defended by a Fort, in which there are a strong Garrison of Spaniards. It is Situated in a Peninsula, in the bottom of the Gulf of Taranto, near the Mouth of the River Tara, 32 Miles from Brindisi to the West, 20 from the Ruins of Actapontus, 90 from Premontorium Fapygium, now il Capo di S. Maria di Leuca to the West, and 35 from Matera to the East. It has the Title of an Archbishoprick: and had once a very large Harbour, but it is now so stopp'd up with great Stones, and spoil'd, that none but very small Vessels can come into it.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Islands on the Coast of Italy.

THESE Islands, since they belong to some State or another in the Continent of Italy, cannot be more properly plac'd than after the description of that Country. We shall Treat of them according to their Dignity, and in their particular descriptions inform the Reader, in whose Possession they are at present. The number and order of them are to be seen in this short Table.

Sicily.	} The Isles of Lapari .	} Capri .
Sardinia.			} The Isles about Sardinia .	} Ischia .
Corsica.

The Island of Sicily and Sicilia.

SICILY, is the Largest and most Fertile Island in the Mediterranean Sea; and if we will believe the ancient accounts of it, once a part of the Continent of Italy. We shall not trouble the Reader with a tedious Enquiry into the Erymology of its Name, only putting him in mind that it was call'd Silicia from the Siculi, a People in Italy and Sicania, from a King call'd Sicanus, who before the time of the Trojan War, Landed there with a great Body of Iberians or Spaniards, and call'd both the Island and People after his own Name. It has also been call'd Trinacria and Triguerra, from its Triangular Form. It lies between 35 Deg. 40 Min. and 38 Deg. 30 Min. Latitude, and 35 and 39 Longitude. Its greatest Length (according to Cluverius) between Pelorum, or the Capo di Faro, and Lilybaeum, or the Capo Boco, is 200 Miles; its Breadth from Pachinum, or il Capo Pessaro, to the Town Cephalidis, or Cefalut, 180. and its Circuit 600.

The Air of Sicily is very Good, and Healthful, and the Soil so Fertile, that this Island hath been deservedly call'd, the Store-house of Italy 3 for it abounds in Corn, Wine, Fruits, Sugar, Honey, Wax, Oyl, Saffron, and Silk. It affords also some Mines of Gold, Silver, Iron and other Metals; Salt Agates, Emeralds, Jasper, Porphyry, &c. and on the Coasts towards Trapano, the Inhabitants find a good deal of excellent Coral.

The first Inhabitants of this Island (according to Cluverius) were the Cyclopes and Lestrigones, Barbarous and Savage People. After these came the Iberi from Spain, under the Conduct of Sicanus, as we said before. Next came the Siculi from Sicily in Italy. After these came the Phœnices from Tyre and Sidon, and Possess'd themselves on the Coast of this Island; but the Grecians drove these away, and introduc'd their own Language.

The Form of Government that was first used here was Monarchical; which continu'd till the Carthaginians had made themselves Masters of the greatest part of the Island. But the Romans having Defeated these, became Masters of it, and reduc'd it into the Form of a Province, which was the first they ever made. In the time of the Emperor Justinian, the Vandals from Africk, took Possession of it; but Belisarius, General of that Emperor's Forces, having driven them out, the Saracens afterwards Invaded it. At last Tancred the Norman Expell'd them, and his Grandchild Roger was declar'd King of Apulia and Sicily. Afterwards the Suevoi from Germany, became Masters of Sicily; but were Expell'd by the French; who being all cut off, at the famous Sicilian Vespers, the Island fell first into the hands of the Kings of Aragon, and at last into those of the Kings of Castile.

This Island is govern'd by a Viceroy, sent from the King of Spain, and the yearly Revenue Paid to His Catholick Majesty, is said to be about Four Millions of Crowns; the Inhabitants (as Puffendorf observes) are an ill sort of People, who must be kept under, according to the old Proverb, Insulani quidem mali, Siculi autem pessimi.

Sicily has been variously divided at different times, but is now commonly divided into 3 Parts or Provinces called Valleys, as you may see in the following Table.

Palermo, Panormum, or Panormus, is a large and well Built City, on the North-Coast of the Island, distant about 60 Miles from the Promontory, anciently call'd Lilybaeum Promontorium, now il Capo Baeo to North-East, 4 from Mont Real, 140 from Messina to the West, and 150 from the Promontory, now call'd Capo di Faro, anciently Pelorum Promontorium. It was Built by the Phœnicians, about the time of the Grecians coming into Sicily, and made the Metropolis of the Island, in the time of Roger Count or Earl of Sicily: and is now the ordinary Residence of the Spanish Viceroy. It has a large and safe Harbour, and and is defended by a strong Castle, call'd Castel a Mare, with a Garrison of Spaniards. It is an Archbishopric See, and near it the Spaniards and Dutch were foundly Beat by the French, in the year 1676.

Montereal, Mons Regalis, is a little Town standing on a Hill, about 4 Miles from Palermo, where William the II. King of Sicily, Built a Magnificent Church, and Endow'd it with large Revenues, and procur'd the Title of an Archbishopric to this Place, from Pope Lucius the III. in the year 1182.

Maxara or Maxera. Maxara, stands on the South-side of the Island, at the Mouth of a River of the same Name, with a Large, Safe, and well defended Harbour, in the midst, almost between Termini to the East, and the Capo Baeo to the West, 24 Miles from Trepani to the South-East, and 55 from Gergenti to the West. It was formerly the Residence of the Saracen Princes, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Palermo.

Gergenti, Agrigentum, call'd Agragas by the Grecians, was anciently the Greatest and Richest City in all this Island: and no less Famous for its Hospitality to Strangers, than 'twas Infamous for its Luxury. It was Built by the Gelenes, near the River Agragas, now call'd, (according to Baudrand) il Fiume di S. Biagio, or Gergenti. It stands about 3 Miles from the Sea, 55 from Palermo to the South, 64 from the Capo Baeo to the East, and 72 from the Capo Pessaro, or Pachynum. It was anciently 10 Miles in Compas, but is now much decayed. On the North side it is defended by a strong Fort, and there is but one Passage into it. It was formerly remarkable for the Cruelty of the bloody Phalaris, who used to torment People in his Brazen Bull, which Perillus made; and had the first Experiment of it try'd upon himself. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Palermo.

Marsala, Marsala, stands on the West side of the Island of the Promontory, call'd il Capo Baeo, and has risen from the Ruins of the Town of Lilybeum. It was so call'd by the Saracens, and had once an excellent Harbour, before Charles the Vth. caus'd the Mouth of it to be stop'd up with great Stones, lest the Africans should make use of it.

Trapano, Drepanum, anciently a famous Mart-Town, with an excellent Harbour, on the West side of the Island, about 15 Miles from Lilybeum promontorium to the North, 22 from Maxara, and 55 from Palermo to the South-West, near the Foot of the Mountain Eryx, now il Monte di Trapano, where there was a Temple of Venus, and Anchises's Burial Place. It was well Fortified by Hamilcar, Hanibal's Father, who kept it a considerable time, and made it the Seat of War against the Romans, till by an Order from Carthage, he made a Peace with Lutatius.

Messina, Messana, Mesene or Messane, anciently call'd Zancbe is a large and fine City, and the greatest Mart-Town in all the Mediterranean Sea, having a very large and safe Harbour, about 6 Miles from the Coast of the Farther Calabria to the West, 12 from Reggio, about 140 from Palermo, 12 from the Capo di Faro to the South, and 60 from Catania. The private Houses in it are very fine, and the publick Buildings Magnificent, especially the Viceroy's Palace, and the Arsenal, which is very well Furnish'd with Arms and Ammunition. It has 4 Suburbs, call'd Zacra, San Filippo, San Deo, and Porta Imperial, which lye stretch'd along the Shoar for a great way, and its Situation between the Mountains, and the Sea makes it a very long City. The Emperor Charles the Vth Fortified it with 14 Bastions, and 4 Forts, in the year 1535 whereof one is within the Town, the rest without for the Defence of the Port. This City was recover'd from the Saracens by Roger the Norman, in the year 1060. and afterwards Govern'd by the Kings of Sicily, now by a Spanish Officer, whom they call il Stradigo. But being mightily gall'd by the Spanish Yoke, it was provok'd to shake it off, on the 7th of July, 1674. and maintain'd its Liberty, with the Assistance of the French, till the 16th of March, 1673. when it willingly return'd to its former Allegiance. Its chief Trade consists in Silk, with which it turnishes a great part of Europe: And it is an Archbishopric See.

Catania, Catana, or Catina, stands on the Coast or Ionian Sea, on a Gulf of the same Name, near the little River Judicella, 40 Miles from Syracuse to the North, and 50 from Messina. It was Built by the Chalcidencs, as Eusebius Relates, and was Fortified by Charles the Vth. It is the great Unhappiness of this Town, that it stands so near Mount Erna, which is now call'd Il Mon-Gibello, whose fiery streams have often prov'd fatal to the Neighbouring Country. This Mountain is reckon'd 9 Miles High, but not of Perpendicular Height, and in Compas 50. The South side of it is almost cover'd over with Vines, and the North side with other Trees and Shrubs, and no part of it is Barren and Unmanur'd, except the Top. The most considerable Eruptions that have happen'd, were in the years 1169. 1329. 1403. 1444. 1447. 1536. 1554. by the last of which, Catania and the adjacent Country were well nigh destroy'd, as they were also in the year 1669. But we must refer the Reader for the causes of those Eruptions, and a particular account of them to those who have written fully on the Subject, particularly Thomas Fazellus, and Philippus Cluverius.

Patti, Patte, or Patia, a pretty well Inhabited little Sea Town, on the North-Coast of the Island, near the Ruins of Tyndaris, now call'd S. Maria di Tyndaro, 48 Miles from Messina to the West, and $\frac{1}{2}$ a Mile from the Tyrrhenian Sea. It has the Title of a Bishopruck, under the Archbishop of Messina.

Noto, Netum, or Nea, from which the third Division or Valley of Sicily has its Name, is a large and well Inhabited Town, standing on a high Hill, surrounded with High and Steep Rocks, in the South part of the Island, 8 Miles from the Sea, 15 from Capo Pessaro to the North-West, and 25 from Syracuse to the South.

Syracuse, or Saragosa, Syracusa, anciently a famous and great City, said to have been Built by Archias a Corinthian, consisting of 5 Parts, viz. Azardina, Tyche, Neapolis, Insula, and Epipole, and 180 Stadia, or 22 $\frac{1}{2}$ Miles in Compas. It was first grievously oppress'd by the Dionysii, afterwards by Agathocles and others. It suffer'd a Siege of 3 years, by the Romans, in the first Panick War, when its holding out so long was owing to the singular Art of that famous Mathematician Archimedes, who was unhappily Murder'd by a barbarous Soldier, contrary to the express Orders of the Roman General Marcellus, when he took the City. It has now lost much of its ancient Splendour and Greatness, being confin'd within the Island Ortyzia, but has 2 Harbours, which the Inhabitants call il Porto Maggiore, and il Porto Piccolo, and one Gate on the little Istibus, defended by 2 Forts. It is distant 40 Miles from Catania to the South, 23 from Augusta, 33 from the Capo Pessaro, and 60 from the little Town, now call'd Castro Foami. It was formerly an Archbishopric, but is now under the See of Montreal.

Augusta, Augusta, a little but well Inhabited strong Town, Built at first in a Peninsula, on the East side of the Island, about 18 Miles from Catania to the South, and 24 from Syracuse. It was Built by the Emperor Frederick, in the year 1229. who also Built a Fort which commands it, in the year 1232. Above an hundred years since it was Fortified, and the Peninsula on which it stood made an Island, and joynd to the Continent by a Wooden Bridge. It was taken by the French, after a vigorous Resistance, in the year 1675. and deserted by them 3 years after. It has a very large and safe Harbour, and as Cluverius says, was anciently call'd Xiphonia.

The Island of Sardinia.

The Island of Sardinia, which the Grecians call'd Sarden and Jehnyfa, lies North and South, between the Tufcan Sea on the East, and the Sea of Sardinia on the West; between 37 Deg. 20 Min. and 40 Deg. 10 Min. Lat. and 31 Deg. 10 Min. and 33 Deg. 15 Min. Long. It is in Length from Calaris or Cagliari, to the Channel betwixt Sardinia and Corsica, (according to Cluverius) 180 Miles, and in Breadth from the Capo di Monte Falcone, and Capo di Argentera, to the Capo Sarda, 104. But Baudrand, who makes it 500 Miles, in Compass, will have it to be only 170 in Length, from South to North, and 90 in Breadth, and others less, as to both. We shall not trouble the Reader with the various conjectures about the Etymologies of its name, and the first Inhabitants of it; but only put him in mind, that anciently the Carthaginians were Masters of it; next them the Romans, who kept possession of it, till the declining State of that Empire, when it fell into the hands of the Saracens; who were expell'd by the Genouefe and Pisans. At last in the year 1326. Pope Boniface the VIIIth. gave it to James the III. King of Aragon, who after a great deal of strugling made himself Master of it, and handed it down to his Posterity. It is now subject to the King of Spain, who governs it by his Viceroy.

The Air of this Island is very Unhealthful, but the Soil is good, and fit to produce Corn, Wine, and Oyl; but the Inhabitants, being for the most part Barbarians, are Lazy, and do not Cultivate and Improve the Ground as it ought to be, which is the reason why this Island tho' it be large, is not very Rich. It was formerly divided into 4 Parts, which were subject to their respective petty Princes; but now it is divided into two Parts or Provinces, call'd il Capo di Cagliari, and il Capo di Logudori; which with their several Towns are to be seen in the following Table.

I.	}	Cagliari.
Capo di Cagliari, in which are these Towns.		Oristagni.
		Villa d' Iglefias.
		Galtelli.
		S. Pietro.
II.	}	Sassari.
Capo di Logudori, in which are these Towns.		Castel Aragonese.
		Bosa.
		Algheri.
		Sardata.
	Terra Nuova.

Cagliari, Calaris, is the chief City of Sardinia, and gives Name to a Province, a Gulf, and a Promontory, and is the Residence of the Spanish Governor. It is said to have been Built by the Phenicians, and afterwards Inhabited by the Carthaginians. It was destroyed by the Arabians, and afterwards Rebuilt by the Pisans. It was taken by James the III. King of Aragon, in the year 1330. since which time it, together with the whole Island, has been subject to Spain. It is a pretty large City, having 3 Suburbs, viz. Eskampache, Villa Nova, and la Marina, and is distant 30 Miles from Oristagni to the East; and has the Title of an Archbishoprick.

Oristagni, Arborea, stands in the West part of the Island, 6 Miles from the Sea, 60 from Sassari, and 30 from Bosa. It has the Title of an Archbishoprick, as also that of a Marquisate, which was formerly govern'd by its own Princes, call'd Judges, who are famous in the Histories of those times, when the Aragonians Invaded this Island; but at present it is very thinly Inhabited because of the Unhealthfulness of the Air.

Sassari, or Sacer, Sassaris, is a pretty large Town, in the North part of the Island, about 12 Miles from the Ruins of Turritana, or Turris Libissonis, (which the Longobards Raz'd, in the year 596.) to the South, as many from the Sea, and 18 from Algheri. It stands in a Plain, but is well Fortified: And the Archiepiscopal See of Turritana, was Translated hither, by Pope Eugenius the IVth. Ann. 1441.

Castel Aragonese, Castrum Aragonense, is a little well Inhabited and Fortified Town, with a Castell, in the North part of the Island, standing on a Rock, and having the advantage of a good and large Harbour, at the Mouth of the River Coquinas. It is distant about 100 Miles from Caligari to the North, 80 from Oristagni, and 24 from Sassari. The See of Emporie was remov'd from thence to this Place, in the year 1503. and is under the Archbishop of Sassari.

Bosa, Bosa, stands on the West part of the Island, on the Coast of the Sea of Sardinia, at the Mouth of the River Bosa, 30 Miles from Oristagni to the North, and 35 from Sassari. It has the advantage of a large Harbour, and a Fort call'd Saravalle.

Algheri, or Algher, Alerium or Algaria, is a little but well and Fortify'd Inhabited Town, in the North-West part of the Island, about 16 Miles from Sassari to the South, and as many from Bosa. Cluverius says it was anciently call'd Coraxa; but Franciscus a Vico, a Sardinian, says, it sprung from the Ruins of a Neighbouring Town, call'd Tylium. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Sessari.

The Island of Corsica.

The Island of Corsica, call'd also Cyrnus by Ptolemy and Strabo lies between 40 Deg. 20 Min. and 42 Deg. 15 Min. Lat. and 31 Deg. 20 Min. and 32 Deg. 30 Min. Long. It is in Length according to Cluverius, from the Sacrum Promontorium, now Punta di Marono, or Capo Iorso, to the Promontory Gramianum, or Capo di Manza, 120 Miles; in Breadth, from the Promontory call'd Capo di Foro, to Aleria Destrutta 80. But Baudrand, who makes it 280 Miles in Compass, allows it only 110 of Length, and 50 of Breadth.

It has been subject to the Republick of Genova, since the year 1144. that they expell'd the Saracens out of it; notwithstanding the several attempts that have been made by the Pisans, and the Kings of Aragon to take it from them, particularly in the years 1320. and 1435. and the Doge of Genova is Crown'd with with a Royal Crown of Gold, and a Scepter put in his hand, because of the Kingdom of Corfica. It is Govern'd by one sent thither every 2 years from that State, who is assisted by a Lieutenant, and several Commissaries.

The Air of this Island is very unwholsom, and the Soil for the most part but indifferent, the Country being Mountainous and Woody, and the Ground Stony. In some Places however, it brings forth good Corn, Vines, and several sorts of Frúits, as Figs, Almonds and Chestnuts; nor are the Forests and Pastures unprovided of Venison, Cattel and Wild-Fowl. The Natives of Corfica are said to be Revengeful, Cruel and Unciviliz'd, and some are of Opinion that the Word Corsairs, which signifies Pyrats, or Rovers on the Sea, has its Original from them.

The Island of Corfica is computed to be about 100 Miles from Genoua to the South, 60 from Leghorn to the South-West, and 65 from Piombino to the West. It was formerly divided into 2 Parts, viz. South and North, but is now (according to Baudrand) divided into 4. viz. Di quo di Monti, or on this side the Mountains; Il lato di dentro, or the inner side; Di la di Monti, on the other side of the Mountains; and Il lato di fuori, or on the outer side: And the Towns that are now, or have been of any Note in it, are,

Bastia.	}	Ajazzo.
Corte.
Nebbio.	}	Bonifacio.
Mariana.		St. Fiorenzo.
Aleria.	}	Calvi.
Sagona.		Accia.
St. Pietro.	}	Sarteni.

Bastia, Bastia, or Basila, is the chief City of this Island, Situated in the North part of it, with the advantage of a good Harbour, and a Fort, distant about 20 Miles from the Capo di Corso to the South, and 70 from Bonifacio to the North. It stands where the Town of Mantimum formerly stood, and is the ordinary Residence of the Genouefé Governor.

Corte, Cenestum, a small City next Bastia, reckon'd the chief of the Island, it stands in the very Centre of it, and is an Episcopal See.

Nebbio, Nebbium, a Ruinous and Decay'd Town, in the North part of the Island, about a Mile from the Sea, not about a half from St. Fiorenzo; which some think arose from its Ruins, and 9 from Bastia to the South-West. It was the Seat of a Bishop, who now Resides at St. Fiorenzo, and is Suffragan to the Archbishop of Genoua; but at present there are not above 15 Houses, and about 70 Souls in it.

Mariana, Mariana, was anciently a considerable Town, and the Name of a Roman Colony, and Adorn'd with several Magnificent Buildings, and a Colossus; but is now lying in its Ruins, which are call'd le Rouina di Mariana, nothing remaining but the Cathedral Church, and some other Buildings, without Roofs. It stood upon the River Eolus, which divid'd it into 2 Parts, viz. the South, call'd Casinea, and the North, call'd Mariana: And is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Genoua. It is distant 20 Miles from the Ruins of Aleria to the North, and 15 from Bastia, where its Bishop hath Resided since the year 1575.

Ajazzo, Adjacium, anciently call'd Urcinium, is a pretty well Inhabited Town, with a Fort and a good Harbour, on the West side of the Island, on a Bay of its own Name, about 40 Miles from Bonifacio, to the North-West, 40 from Calvi to the South, and about one from the Ruins of the old Adjacium. It is subject to the State of Genoua, but its Bishop is under the Archbishop of Pisa.

Bonifacio, Bonifacium, is a Fortified and well Inhabited little Town, on the South Coast of the Island, Situated on a Rock, which is almost Surrounded by the Sea; and from it the Channel which separates this Island from Sardinia is call'd, le bocche di Bonifacio, formerly Pretum Tapres.

Calvi, Calvium, stands on the West side of the Island, with a very strong Fort, in form of a Peninsula, which makes it only accessible at one Place, where the Franciscans Convent stands. It has been several times in vain attempt'd by the Saracens and French; and is distant 35 Miles from Bastia to the West, and 30 from Ajazzo to the North.

Several other Islands of less Note.

The Liparean Islands which Pliny calls the Æolis, and Vulcania, and the Grecians Hephestiades, lie off the North Coast of Sicily, in the Tyrrhenian or Tuscan Sea, where as the Poets say, blustering King Æolus Reign'd of old. These Islands did anciently belong to Sicily; but afterwards the Kings of Naples unjustly wrested them from it, and Charles the Vth. confirm'd the Possession of them to Naples, till at last, in the year 1609. they were restor'd to Sicily, to which they are still subject. They are in number 7. viz.

Lipara , now Lipari .
Hiera , now Volcano .
Strongyla , now le Saline .
Eponymos , now Lisca bianca .
Didyme , now Stromboli .
Ericusa , now Pasclu .
Phenicusa , now Felicur .

Lipari, Lipara, is the biggest of all the Æolian or Vulcanian Islands, being 18 Miles in Compass; and distant about 40 Miles from the North Coast of Sicily, and 50 from the nearest part of the Farther Calabria. This Island did formerly Vomit up Fire, as may be seen still by the Vestiges and Marks of it, and its Baths were very wholsom. There is a Town in it of its own name, which was almost destroyed by Barbarossa, the Turkish Admiral in the year 1544. but afterwards Repair'd and is now pretty neat and well Inhabited, and has a strong Fort, call'd la Pignataro. Pope Eugenius the III. Erected this Place into a Bishoprick, in the year 1151. and since the year 1627. it has been exempted from the Jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Messina, till of late, that it owns its subjection to that Metropolitan.

The most considerable of those little Islands that lye about Sardinia, are,

St. Pietro.	}	Di Toro.
St. Antioccha.		Tavolato.
Di Vaccha.		Asinaria.

The most considerable of those that lye along the Coast of Italy, between the Liparean Islands and Genoua, are these,

Capri.	}	Monte Christo.
Ischia.		Formiche.
Ponza.		Pianosa.
Gianuti.		Capraccia.
Giglio.		Maloria.
Elba.		Gorgona.

Capri, Capree, an Island in the Tyrrhenian Sea, belonging to the Kingdom of Naples, in the Province of Terra di Lavaro, at the entry of the Gulf of Naples, near the Capo Campanello, from which it is divided by a Channel 3 Miles Broad, call'd le bocche di Capri. It is about 12 Miles in Circuit, and has a little Town in the South part of it, of its own name, which has the Title of a Bishoprick, the Revenues of which are Paid in Quails, which at two Seasons of the year are catch'd in vast numbers in this Island. This Place was once the delightful Retreat of the Emperor Tiberius Augustus: and the Island is call'd Telenis by Silius. It contains at present about 1500 Souls, who are exempted from all manner of Taxes.

Ischia, or Isela, Ischia, otherwise call'd Inarime, and Enaria, lies in the Tyrrhenian Sea, off the Coast of Naples, in the Province of Terra di Lavaro, from the Coast of which it is distant 2 Miles, as many from the Capo Miseno, and one from the Island of Prochita. It is about 20 Miles in Compass, having a Town of its own name, with a strong Fort, on the South side of it, joyn'd to the Island by a Bridge. Ferdinand King of Naples made this his Refuge, in the time of Charles the VIIIth. King of France, who in a few Days over-ran that whole Kingdom, in the year 1495. This Town has the Title of a Bishoprick, under the Archbishop of Naples.

Ponza, Pontia, is an Island in the Tyrrhenian Sea, reckon'd a part of the Kingdom of Naples, but belonging to the Duke of Parma, 13 Miles from the Circæum Promontorium, now Monte Circella, 20 from Terracina, and 8 from Pandataræ, now Santa Maria. There was a Colony sent into this Island (as Livy Relates) in the year of the City 441. and a Town Built in it by the Volsci; but being quite dispeopl'd afterwards, there were new Inhabitants sent into it, in the year of Christ, 1583. It was anciently a Place where many Banish'd Romans were oblig'd to go, particularly Caligula's Sisters, whom he sent thither.

Giglio, Egilium, or Igium, is an Island in the Tuscan Sea, off the Coast of the Sinise, of which it is a part, and subject to the Great Duke of Tuscany, 10 Miles from the Shoar of Cosano, and as many from il Monte Argentario. It is subject to the spiritual Jurisdiction of the Abbot of Tre-fontane, near Rome, and about 25 Miles in Compass.

Elba, Ilua, or Æthalia, is an Island in the Tuscan Sea, over against Piombiono in Tuscany, from which it is distant about 10 Miles. It is about 40 Miles in Compass, and abounds in Iron, belong'd formerly to the Republick of Siena, but is now a part of the Principality of Piombino, under the Protection of the King of Spain, who has a Fort in it of considerable Strength, call'd Porto-longone, and the Duke of Tuscany has another, call'd, Porto-Ferraro.

Capraria, Capraria, so call'd, from the great abundance of Goats which used to be in it, is an Island in the Tuscan Sea, lying between the State of Tuscany to the East, and Corsica, (on which it depends) to the West. It is very Mountainous, and about 18 Miles in Compass. It belongs to the Coast of Genova, who have a Fort and a Garrison in it, to defend it from the Pyrats, and contains about 600 Inhabitants.

Gorgona, Gorgon, or Urgo, according to Pliny, is a little Island in the Tuscan Sea, between the Coast of Tuscany to the East, and Corsica to the West, and about 25 Miles from Leghorn to the South-West. It was formerly subject to the Pisans, but belongs now to the Great Duke of Tuscany. It is 10 Miles in Compass, and has only one little Town, and a sort of a Fort in it.

SPAIN.

By Rob. Falconer.

SPAIN and PORTUGAL

S PAIN, is the Western Part of all the Continent of Europe, environ'd on all sides with the Sea, except towards France, from which it is separated by the Pyrenean Mountains. It is Bounded on the East and South with the Mediterranean Sea, the Streights of Gibraltar) anciently call'd Fretum Gaditanum) and a part of the Atlantick Ocean; on the West with the same Ocean; and on the North with the Bay of Biscay, and the Pyrenean Mountains, by which it is separated from France. It is Situated betwixt 37 and 44 Degr. of Latitude, and 8 and 20 of Longitude. It is in form of a Peninsula, and commonly compared to an Oxes Hide, the Neck making the Isthmus, which separates it from France, and is said to be (according to Cluverius) in its greatest Length, from the Sacrum Promontorium, now call'd

Cabo de S. Vincente, to Fons Salsule, or Salsas, on the Confines of France, on the Mediterranean Sea, 760 Miles. Its greatest Breadth from the Promontorium Celticum, or Cabo Finis terra, to the Promontorium Saturni, or Cabo de Palos, 600.

The Romans anciently divided it into 3 Provinces, viz. Batica, Lusitania, and Tarraconensis. Batica, was Bounded on the North and West with the River Anas, or Guadiana, on the South with the Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea, and on the East with the Tarraconensis. Lusitania was Bounded on the North with the River Durius, or Duero, on the West with the Ocean, on the East with Tarraconensis, and on the South with the River Anas, or Guadiana. Tarraconensis comprehended all the rest of Spain; which was otherwise divided into 4 Parts, viz. Citerior and Uterior; or the the Hither and Farther; and from hence it is, that we sometimes find Hispania, in the Plural number, put to signify Spain. Hispania Citerior, was the same with Tarraconensis, the Uterior comprehended the Provinces of Berica and Lusitania.

As to the different names that have been given this Kingdom at several times, tho' 'tis hardly worth the while to account for them, it being a thing full of uncertainty and conjecture; yet because 'tis usual, we shall put the Reader in mind, that we find it sometimes called Hesperia, either from Hesperus, a supposed King thereof, or from Hesperus the Evening Star, under which the Ancients, they say, supposed it Situated; and call'd it Ultima, to distinguish it from Italy, which they likewise call'd Hesperia, with the addition of Minor. It was also call'd Iberia, either from the famous River Iberus, now Elbro, or the Iberi, a People Inhabiting Georgia in Asia; and Celtiberia, from the Celts in Gaul's mixing with these Iberi. But how it came by the name of Hispania, is what the Critics have warmly disputed, and are never like to agree upon. Some maintaining that the Grecians call'd it Ἰσπανία, from the thinness of its Inhabitants, and dryness of its Soil: Others, especially Bischopt, from the Punick Word Spanija, which signifies a Conie, because the Country abounded with such. Justinus will have it call'd Hispania, from a certain King call'd Hispanus, and Cluverius is of Opinion, that it owes its name to Hispalis, the chief City, anciently of the Kingdom; But we leave the Reader to choose which he likes best, having given him variety of conjectures concerning it.

As to the first Inhabitants of Spain, we will not trouble the Reader with the dispute concerning Tubal, Noah's Grandchild's coming into it, nor long after the Deluge, or whether the Celts, the Offspring of Aschenez, were the first that Peopl'd it, and several other Countries in Europe; only put him in mind that Spain was in ancient times divided into a great many States independent of one another; which was at that time the condition of most other Countries of Europe. And by reason of this Division, and their scarcity of good Commanders, it was, that they were neither formidable to their Neighbours, or able to defend themselves at home. For not to mention how the Celts pass'd out of Gaul, and the next adjacent Parts of Spain, who being mix'd with the Iberians, were from thence call'd Celtiberians; neither how the Rhodiens built Refes: The Citizens of Zant, Zaguntum; the Phenicians, Cadix, Malaga, and other Cities: the Carthaginians above the rest, immediately after the first Punick War with the Romans, began to Conquer a great part of Spain. Wherefore in the second Punick War, the Romans did at first send their Forces into Spain, where they Fought so long with the Carthaginians, till at last Scipio Africanus, made a great part of it a Roman Province; the other parts were subdu'd by degrees, till Augustus at last entirely Subdu'd the Cantabrians, who liv'd next to the Pyrenean Mountains, joyn'd all Spain to the Roman Empire, under whole Protection it was peaceably Govern'd for a considerable time, except that the Spaniards now and then were drawn in to take a part in the Civil Wars among the Romans. But the Western parts of the Roman Empire declining, the Vandals, Suevi, Alani, and Silingi, Invaded Spain, and divided it among them, but did not enjoy it long; for the Vandals passing over into Africk, the Suevi Routed the Alani, and Subdu'd the Silingi; and by that means were in a fair way to make themselves Masters of all Spain, had they not been prevented by the Goths; who having under their King Alarick, Ranack'd Italy and Rome it self, settled themselves upon the Borders between France and Spain; Possessing themselves first of Catalonia and Languedock, and not long after of other Provinces of Spain. About the year 586. the Empire of the Goths was arriv'd at its highest pitch of greatness, as comprehending not only some Neighbouring Provinces of France, and a great part of Mauritania, but also all Spain, except a small part Possess'd as yet by the Romans; from whence they were Chas'd afterwards by King Suimbila, about the year 646. Afterwards the Goths degenerating from their ancient Valour, and Roderick having provok'd Julian, his Governor of the Gothish Mauritania, and that part of Spain, that lies about the Streights, by Ravishing his Wife; Julian to revenge the Affront, sow'd Sedition among the Goths, and brought over vast numbers of Saracens from Africk, and gave his Matter Roderick Battle; who being kill'd in the Flight, and his faithful subjects dispers'd, and left without a Head, all the great Cities fell into the Hands of the Enemy; Asturia, Biscay, a part of Gallicia, and some Countreys lying near the Pyrenees remaining to the Goths. Thus fell the Power and Splendor of the Goths, which had been famous in Spain for 300 years; and the Saracens became Masters of it.

About the year 726. Pelagius descended from the Gothish Kings, being chosen King, recollected the remaining Forces of this unfortunate Nation, and defeated the Moors, and took several Towns from the Saracens: And his Successors, (tho' most of them did nothing considerable) did several times defeat, and gain'd ground on the Enemy. Ramirius gave them a particular overthrow, and Gasfas was Victorious also, but Dyed soon: And his Brother transferr'd the Seat of the Spanish Kingdom from Oviedo to Leon, and Dyed in the year 932. About this time Gasfas Semenus Erected the Kingdom of Navarr, as Aznar, Son of Eudo Duke of Aquitain, did the Earldom of Aragon: And Lewis Son of Charles the Great, confitured Bernard Earl of Barcelona. About the year 1025. Sanctius, King of Navarr, having Married the Sister of Gasfas, Earl of Castile, who was Murder'd by his own Vassals, took upon him the Title of King of Castile. Thus Castile and Navarr were united; and Leon shortly after was added to them by the Marriage of Ferdinand of Leon's Sister and Heiress. Thus all the Provinces of Spain which were possess'd by the Christians, were joyn'd in one House. But the division which Sanctius Major made among his 4 Sons, prevented the Expulsion of the Moors, which otherwise might have been easily brought about; for leaving to his eldest Son Gasfas, Navarr and Biscay; to Ferdinand, Castile; to Gonsalvo, Suprabie and Riparosa; and to Ramirius, Aragon, and to each of them the Title of King, they quickly fell by the Ears, all of them affecting to be Superior. Ferdinand Sirmam'd the Great, (who Dyed in the year 1065.) did also divide the Empire among his 3 Sons, to the great detriment of Spain, the same natural effect following, as after the former Division. Alonso VIII. about the year 1140. divided his Kingdom again, leaving to his Son Sancho IV. Castile, and to Ferdinand, Leon and Gallicia. In the year 1210. these Kings in Confederacy, Fought the memorable Battel of Lasa, against the Moors; where the latter were Beat, with the loss of 200000 Men; and by that means lost all their Strength; for in the year 1232. King James of Aragon took Majorca from them:

them: In the year 1234. Mino.ca, and in the year 1238. Tuica. In the year 1230. Ferdinand took from them Merida and Bojador, and several other Places; and in the year 1236. the City and Kingdom of Corduba; and Murcia Surrendred it self to the protection of Castile. In the year 1243. Zaen, Sevil, and the greatest part of Andalusia. In the year 1324. the Moors receiv'd a great Reinforcement out of Africk: Nevertheless the Castilians obtain'd a signal Victory over them, in the year 1340. where they lost 200000 Men, and the Spaniards 25000. In the year 1478. in the Reign of Ferdinand, (whom the Castilians call the Vth. or the Catholick) the famous Inquisition was instituted against the Moors and Jews; and in the year 1492. an end was put to the Kingdom of the Moors in Spain, after it had stood there for above 700 years. And to prevent their ever increasing again, there were 170000 Families of Moors and Jews Banish'd out of Spain; which despoild that Kingdom not only of a great number of Inhabitants, but also of vast Riches. In the year 1478. Ferdinand the Son of John II. King of Aragon and Navar, by a second Wife, Marrying Isabella, Sister and Heiress of Henry IV. King of Castile and Leon, united all these Dominions in one House, and by that means laid the Foundation of the Spanish Monarchy, and of the great Power of that Kingdom; which was mightily advanc'd and improv'd by his Grandchild, and immediate Successor Charles V. Emperor of that name.

Concerning the Genius of the Spaniards, we shall borrow almost the very words of the judicious Puffendorf. The Spanish Nation, says he, is commonly esteem'd to be very Wise, and to take remote Prospects, thoroughly weighing a thing before it undertakes it: Whereby nevertheless, the Spaniards being over cautious in executing their Counsels, do often lose the opportunities of Action. They are very constant in their Resolutions, and tho' they fail once in an attempt, they will try their Fortune again. They are very fit for War, and not only Brave at the first Attack, but will also hold out till the last; and their sober way of living, and spare Bodies, make them fit for hardship. They are grave in their Words, and proud in their Behaviour, to a Proverb, but some are of opinion, that this Gravity of theirs is not so much the effect of their Pride, as of a melancholy Constitution and ill Custom. They are seldom fit for any Trade or Business, where any hard labour is required; such as Husbandry, or any other Handycraft Trades; wherefore these are chiefly manag'd among them by Foreigners. It is credibly reported, that in Madrid alone there are above 40000 Frenchmen, being for the most part Merchants, Artists, Handycraftsmen and Labourers; who go under the name of Burgundians, thereby to avoid the hatred, which the Spaniards naturally bear against the French. Altho' the Spaniards think such trifles as these below them; yet they think nothing to drudge all their life time under a Musket, in hopes (sometime to be made an Officer. Their Pride, Cruelty, Covetousness, and rigorous Proceedings, make them hateful to all such as are under their Command: Spain at present has hardly a number of Inhabitants proportionable to its extent; for which several Reasons may be given. For the Women by reason of the Climate, and the thin constitution of their Bodies, are not so fruitful as in the Northern Parts. Whoring also being allow'd here, many choose rather to make shift with a Whore, than be at the trouble and charge of maintaining of a Family. Then, those who are in Holy Orders must not Marry, which deprives the Nation of a vast number of People, these being very numerous. The Wars also, especially in Italy and Flanders, have devour'd a great many Spaniards. The Peopling of America, and Banishing so many Jews and Moors out of Spain, (as we said before, have effectually contributed to the Dispeopling this Kingdom.

Concerning the Soil of Spain, it is not Fertile alike in all Places; the most remote Parts: from the Sea-Coast being barren, and producing nothing fit for the subsistence of Men or Beasts; but nearer the Sea-shore, for the most part it is very Fertile. There is abundance of Sheep here, and the Horses are very fine, but too few to serve themselves withal. This Kingdom is very well fitted for Trade, being surrounded almost by the Sea, and having abundance of good Harbours. The product of their Ground, and Commodities fit for Exportation are, especially Wool, Silk, Wine, Oyl, Raisins, Almonds, Figs, Citrons, Rice, Soap, Iron, Salt and such like. In former times the Spanish Go'd Mines were most famous, but now-a-days, neither Gold nor Silver is digg'd out in Spain. Some will alledge for a Reason, that it is forbidden under severe penalties, to keep it as a reserve, in case of great extremity, but 'tis more probable, that the Avarice of the Spaniards hath entirely exhausted the Mines long ago.

The greatest Revenue of Spain comes from the West-Indies, from whence Gold and Silver flow into it, and are from thence convey'd into other parts of Europe, in so great streams, that considering how much of it falls to the share of the Italian, French, English and Dutch Merchants, it will be found that the least part remains to Spain; so that the Spaniards (as a judicious Author observes) may be said to keep the Cow, but others have the Milk; by which means other Nations are empower'd to chastise the haughty Spaniard with his own Money. And 'tis but just it should be so, considering the unparalleled Cruelty and Barbarity by which they attain'd those Countries; which were possess'd by People not so Barbarous, as some imagine; there having been found among them such excellent Laws and Constitutions as would make some Europeans blush. But whether the pretended Barbarity of the People, or the Bull of Pope Alexander VI. or a Providential possession, (which some Christian Authors make a sufficient Title) makes the Spaniards Title to those Countreys good enough, we leave to others to decide.

Considering the many and large Dominions belonging to this Crown, Spain must be look'd on as a powerful Kingdom; for besides the Kingdoms of Peru and Mexico, and those vast Islands of Hispaniola, Cuba, and Porto Rico in America, there are under the Spanish Jurisdiction, the Canary Islands, Sardinia, Sicily, the Kingdom of Naples, the Dukedom of Milan, the Netherlands, and the Philippine Islands in the East-Indies. Nevertheless, this vast Kingdom has its Infirmities, which has brought it so low that it is scarce able to stand on its own Legs. Among those the want of Inhabitants in Spain is one, there not being a sufficient number in it to keep those great Provinces in obedience, and at the same time to make Head against a powerful Enemy. Another weakness is, that those Provinces are mightily disjoin'd; which makes it a very hard matter to send Succours to them when they are attack'd by any Neighbouring State; or to enquire into the Mal-administration of the Governors or Grievances of the People; which may sometime provoke them to shake off the Yoke, when a fit opportunity is put into their hands. Besides, America being the Treasury of Spain is divided by the vast Ocean from the Court, where by their Silver Fleets are expos'd to the hazard of the Seas, and Pyra.s. And it is happen that such a Fleet is lost, the whole Government mu't needs suffer extremely by it; the Inhabitants of Spain being so exhauſted, as not to be able to raise ſufficient Sums to ſupply the publick Neceſſities. The Spaniards alſo are mightily deficient in regulating their West-India Trade; which is ſo ill manag'd, that the greateſt part of thoſe Riches are convey'd into other Nations: And the Nobles, partly by the careleſneſs of ſome of their Kings, and partly by the long Minority of the preſent, have ſo encreas'd their Power, that they have got all the Riches into their hands, and left very little to the Commonalty; nor are they ever-forward in aſſiſting the King, when the Neceſſities of the State require it. And ſhould the preſent King, (as is more than probable) dye without Children, it is no hard matter to foreſee the confuſion and diſmal conſequences which muſt follow to that Kingdom.

The moſt conſiderable Rivers in Spain, are, 1. the Ebro, which riſes near the Mountains of Aſtuvia, and after it has receiv'd the ſtreams of ſeveral other leſſer ones, falls into the Mediterranean Sea, 9 Miles beyond Tortoſa. 2. Guadalquivir, which riſes in the Mountains call'd La Serra de Cazorla, near the Confines of Murcia, and empties it ſelf into the Bay of Cadix, near S. Lucar de Barameda. 3. The Tajo, which riſes from a double Spring, one of which the Inhabitants call Las vequillas de Tajo, the other Fuente Garcia, at the foot of the Mountains Vallezillo, in new Caſtile, on the Confines of Aragon, near the Village call'd Frias; and falls into the Atlantick Ocean, 6 Miles below Lisbon. 4. Duro, which riſes near the Town of Agrada, in old Caſtile, near the Confines of Aragon, and empties it ſelf into the Atlantick Sea, near O Porto. 5. Minho, which riſes in Gallecia, near a Town call'd Caſtro de Rey, and empties it ſelf into the Atlantick Ocean, 15 Miles below Tuy. There are ſeveral others of leſs Note, moſt of whom joyn their ſtreams with thoſe above mention'd. The moſt conſiderable Mountains are, 1. The Pyrenees, which divide France from Spain. 2. Thoſe formerly call'd Idubeda, which have different names given them by the different People who live near them, as, in Biscay, Los Montes Segura, in old Caſtile, Los Montes d' Occa, on the Confines of new Caſtile, la Sierra d' Atienza, Los Montes de Toledo, &c. 3. Oroxopeda, or La Penna de los Enamorados. 4. Culpe or Ceuta. 5. Ivi, near Barcellona.

The Univerſities, great and ſmall in Spain, are thoſe of Avila, Baeza, Erected in the year 1538. Zaragoza, by the Emperor Charles V. Alcala, by Francis Cardinal Ximenes, in the year 1517. Compoſtella; Granada, by the Emperor Charles V. Ann. 1537. Sevil, a very ancient one; Lerda, before the time of Pope Calliſtus III. Omnate, a very little one, in the year 1543. Hueſca, an ancient one; Oviedo, by Ferdinand Valdes, Ann. 1536. Pacenza, Pampeluna, Ann. 1608. Salamanca, by Alphonſus IX. King of Leon, Ann. 1200. Tarragona, under the Reign of King Philip II. Toledo, a very ancient one; Valencia, Ann. 1470. Valadolid, by Pope Clement VI. in the time King Alphonſus XI. Ann. 1346. and Oſuna, Ann. 1549. There are 8 Archbiſhopricks, viz. Toledo, Burgos, Compoſtella, Sevil, Granada, Zaragoza, Tarragona and Valencia; and 46 Biſhopricks, without including thoſe of the Kingdom of Portugal. Of all which the Reader may find a particular account in the deſcription of thoſe Places.

The Chriſtian Faith is ſaid to have been Planted here by S. James the Apoſtle, about 4 years after the Death of our Saviour; but Barenus and others rejeſt this Tradition. That S. Paul deſign'd to come hither is evident, and that he did actually come, is affirm'd by Chryſoſtom, Theodoret, and ſeveral others: And tho' S. Peter did not accompany him in the Journey, yet he ſecund the Preaching of that Apoſtle, by ſending the Biſhops and other Preſbyters into thoſe Parts, as appears from the Martyrologies. Since the year 1478. that the Inquiſition was eſtabliſh'd, no other Religion but the Roman Catholick is Profes'd or Tolerat'd here. This Inquiſition was firſt Inſtituted againſt the Jews and Mcors, but hath ſince been turn'd againſt Proteſtants, or indeed, againſt all who are not rampant Roman Catholicks. It is deſervedly eſteem'd an inhuman and execrable Tribunal among other Nations, and carries the greateſt Injuſtice with it, in ordering the Children to bear the guilt of their Parents; not permitting any body to know his Accuſers, to clear himſelf againſt them. The leaſt ſuſpicion of Heretie, or Commerce or Affinity with Hereticks, reproving the Lives of the Clergy, keeping prohibited Books, or even diſcourſing matters of Religion, are ſufficient Crimes. If 2 Witneſſes cannot be found, Torture muſt be then uſed; and if neither Witneſſes nor that will do, yet they muſt be under ſevere reſtraint, and endure great hardſhip for ſeveral years, to terrifie others: And if they come off lo, upon the firſt ſuſpicion, the ſecond infaſtibly brings preſent Death. A ſtrange way for propagating the Chriſtian Religion, which is gentle and full of Mercy, or for reclaiming thoſe who are in error; ſince by ſuch means Hypocrites may be made, but not ſincere Chriſtians.

All the Spaniards, (ſays Mariana) at preſent uſe one Language, which we call Caſtilian, and is compounded of many other Tongues, eſpecially the Latin, which appears by the name it bears, being call'd Romane; and is ſo great affinity, beyond the Italian; for that Latin, or Spaniſh, either in Proſe or Verſe, agree in the very words and manner of Compoſition. The Portugueſe have a Language peculiar to themſelves, being a mixture of the French, and Caſtilian. The People of Catalonia and Valencia, uſe a diſtinct Language, very like that of Languedoc: Only the Biſcainers ſtill retain their Mother and Barbarous Tongue, void of all Elegancy, totally different from any other in Spain; but the Ancienteſt, and that which was formerly uſed throughout the whole Kingdom, before the coming of the Romans, who ſpread their Language wherever they Conquer'd.

Moſt European Nations look on the Spaniſh Habit, as ridiculous, and they on the other hand look upon other Europeans as Fools for changing their Faſhions of Cloaths. The Spaniards appear at Court in Black, which Colour is generally wore over all the Kingdom. Their Habit conſiſts of a Doublet, ſtreight Breeces, buton'd down the Thighs, a ſhort Cloak, and a Girdle about their Belly: Shoes cut out, and reſembling thoſe which Rope Dancers uſe, black Stockens, ſo like Net-work, that the white ones under are plainly ſeen: A Sword about four Foot and a half long on the left ſide, and a Dagger on the other. The finer ſort of the Men have a little Hat lined with black Taſſeta, and a Band of black Lace about it; and a Gonille or Ruff about their Neck for a Cravat. They are ſure always to have a little Pocket in their Doublet for Snuff, Snuff, without Snuff-box, or Paper about it; which they use very frequently, when they can't find one to borrow from. Their Complexion is Tawny, their Hair black and short, and their Mustaches in form of a Crescent, and with all these Accoutrements they march along as grave as so many O'Rages. The Women also wear Black, with large Vertugadins, or Verdingales, as wide as the Hoop of a Tun; and their Faces look as if they were plastered. Among the other Customs which the Spaniards have singular to themselves from all Europe, their wearing of Spectacles is not the least; for not only old Men and Women, but also young People of both Sexes, sitting at Table and walking in the Streets wear them, without any manner of Necessity, but only for Gravity; and the larger they are, the more honourable the Person that wears 'em is esteem'd. The Women never go to Processions; but are allowed to come to the Balconies, both to perform their Devots to these, and also to see and be seen by their Lovers. The Jealousie of the Husbands seldom allows the Wives to come abroad; and when they go to Church, they are under a large Vail, and guarded by an old Woman; but they find out ways to see their Gallants now and then, either at a Friend's House, where they go to Visit, or some other convenient Place. They have been very hard put to't of late, for formerly it was the Custom for the Men to stand by the Holy-water Pot, and present the Water to the veiled Ladies when they came into the Church; and by that means had a convenient Opportunity to give or receive a Billet; but the Nuncio has forbid that Custom some Years ago, under pain of Excommunication. The excessive heat in Spain obliges the Inhabitants to keep within Doors, either on their Beds, or in cool Rooms, from ten in the Forenoon to five in the Afternoon; insomuch that during all that time, you shall rarely see a Shop open, or any Body walking in the Street.

The Diseases that reign in most Spain, are, a Swelling in the Throat, which often degenerates into the King's Evil; a Rheumatism, which if neglected, quickly over-runs the whole Body and makes it impotent. The finels of the Air is commonly blam'd for this; for if they do not take special care to shut the Windows of their Bed-Rooms at Night, and cover their Stomacks well in the Morning, they are infallibly put in disorder. The Spaniards are temperate in their eating and drinking. The People of Quality have great Retinues of Servants, much Plate, but few and ill-fill'd Dishes. Bread is often very scarce among them; both because there is scarcity of Corn, and because they have few Wind-Mills, and their Water-Mills have oftentimes no Water by reason of the excessive Drought. The Women never sit at Table, because, according to the Custom of Spain, they are not allowed to sit on a Stool, but on the Ground, with their Legs (unnaturally) a-crofs, as our Taylors do. People travel commonly in Spain, on Mules, who walk with almost as much Gravity as their Masters: And it is very seldom that one rides post, except the King's Courier, or those who have a Licence from the Court.

Concerning the Money of Spain, they have Pieces of Gold which they call Dub'one, that is, Pistols, others of Silver, call'd Reals, and Pieces of Eight Reals, about 58 Pence in value. That which they call Reals of Billon, are only imaginary Money, as Livres are in France, or Pounds in England. The other Pieces of Money are only Augmentations or Diminutions of Pistols or Reals, as double Pistol, Quadruple, Half, &c. and a fourth or eighth part of a Real. It is to be observed, that they do not weigh their Money in Spain; and therefore the Jews who clip the Coin of that Country and send it elsewhere, make a vast Profit by it.

The Crown of Spain is Hereditary, descending to the eldest Son; and the presumptive Heir is call'd Prince of the Asturias, because it was to that Part of the Kingdom that Pelagius retir'd with the handful of Chritians, who would not acknowledge the Moors, after they had conquer'd almost all Spain; And because it was the first that shook off the Yoke of the Infidels.

After the Gothish Splendor and Greatness in Spain had come to a Period in the Person of Roderick, who was kill'd in a Battel against the Saracens, who at that time made themselves Masters of Spain, about the Year 714. the first that undertook to recover the Liberty of that Country, was one descended from the Race of the Gothish Kings, call'd,

1. Pelagius, who being chosen King by the Remnant of that unfortunate Nation, was victorious over the Moors and Saracens, and was succeeded by his Son
2. Favila, who did nothing worth mentioning, and was succeeded by his Son
3. Alonso the Catholick, who died, Anno 757. and was succeeded by
4. Favila, his Son, who, after he had been victorious over the Moors, was kill'd, Anno 768. and was succeeded by his Brother
5. Aurelius, who died, Anno 774. and was succeeded by
6. Silo, Alonso the Catholick's Son-in-Law, who died, Anno 783. and was succeeded by
7. Alonso, the Son of Favila, who was driven out of his Kingdom by the Usurper Murwegatus, and died, Anno 788. and was succeeded by
8. Veremundus, who was succeeded by
9. Alonso the Chaste, who died, Anno 844. and was succeeded by
10. Ramirus, an excellent Prince, who died, 851. and was succeeded by his Son

11. Ordonius, who died, Anno 862. and was succeeded by his Son
12. Alonso III. fir-nam'd the Great, who was fortunate in his Wars against the Moors, but dethron'd by his Son
13. Gasias, whose Reign was short, and who was succeeded by
14. Ordonius II. who transferr'd the Seat of the Spanish Kings from Oviedo to Leon. He died Anno 923. and was succeeded by his Son
15. Favila, a bloody Tyrant, who was succeeded by
16. Alonso IV. who surrender'd the Government to his Brother
17. Ramirus II. who died, Anno 950. and was succeeded by his Son
18. Ordonius III. who was a valiant Prince, but his Reign was short, and he was succeeded by his Brother
19. Sanctius Crassus, who was succeeded by
20. Ramirus III. who was succeeded by
21. Veremundus II. who died about the Year 999. and was succeeded by his Son
22. Alonso V. to whom succeeded his Son
23. Veremundus III. in whose time Gasias, Earl of Castile, being murdered, and Castile falling to Sanctius King of Navarre, who had married Gasias's Sister, he assum'd the Title of King of Castile, and was call'd
24. Sanctius Major, and obliged Veremund to give his Sister and Heiress Sanctia in Marriage to Ferdinand his Son; by which means, Leon, Navarre, and Castile, were united in one House. He died, Anno 1035. having divided his Dominions among his three Sons; the eldest of whom was
25. Sanctius III. who, having taken Possession of the Territories belonging to his Brethren, was slain in the Siege of Camora, and was succeeded by his Brother
26. Alonso VI. who died, Anno 1109. and was succeeded by
27. Alonso VII. King of Aragon, who had married Urraca, Daughter and Heiress of Alonso; but was forc'd to part with the Kingdom to
28. Alonso VIII. Son of Urraca, by Reymund of Burgundy, her first Husband. He died, Anno 1157. having divided his Dominions betwixt his three Sons, giving Castile to the eldest, who was call'd
29. Sanctius IV. who died, Anno 1158. and was succeeded by his Son
30. Alonso IX. in whose time the famous Battle of Lasa was fought against the Moors, where 200000 of 'em were kill'd. He died, Anno 1214. and was succeeded by his Son
31. Henry, who dying without Issue, Anno 1217. was succeeded by
32. Ferdinandus Sanctus, Son of Berenzaria, Henry's Sister, who was married to Alonso King of Leon; by whose death Leon and Castile were reunited, under Ferdinand, who died, Anno 1252. and was succeeded by his Son
33. Sanctius V. in whose Reign, Anno 1282. happened the Sicilian Vespers. He died, Anno 1295. and was succeeded by his Son
34. Ferdinand IV. who died in the flower of his Age, and was succeeded by his Son
35. Alonso XI. in whose time the Castilians obtain'd a signal Victory over the Moors, (Anno 1340.) where 200000 of 'em were kill'd. He died in the Siege of Gibraltar, Anno 1350. and was succeeded by his Son
36. Peter, fir-nam'd the Cruel; who was kill'd in a Battle, Anno 1369. by his Bastard-Brother, call'd
37. Henry II. whom the Castilians, having rebell'd against Peter, had set up for their King. He died, Anno 1374. and was succeeded by his Son
38. John II. who died by a Fall from his Horse; Anno 1390. and was succeeded by his Son
39. Henry III. who died, Anno 1407. and was succeeded by his Son
40. John III. a Child of two Months old, who died, Anno 1453. and was succeeded by his Son
41. Henry IV. whom the Castilians deposed, and set up his Brother Alonso; who dying during the Intestine Wars, Ferdinand Son of John II. King of Aragon, married Isabella, Henry's Sister. Henry, at last, after much ado, being reconciled to them, died in the Year 1472. and was succeeded by
42. Ferdinand V. call'd the Catholick, and Isabella, in whom the Kingdoms of Castile and Aragon, were united, and under whom the bloody Inquisition was establish'd, Anno 1478. and the Kingdom of the Moors in Spain brought to a Period after it had stood 700 Years. Isabella dying, Anno 1504. and Ferdinand returning to Aragon, they were succeeded by
43. Joan, Princefs of Castile, and Philip the Netherlander; but he happening to die soon after, and she not being in her right Wits, the Administration of the Government was committed to Ferdinand, who dying, Anno 1516. was succeeded by his Grand-son
44. Charles V. Emperor of that Name; who voluntarily abdicated the Government, leaving the Imperial Crown to his Brother Ferdinand, and all his Kingdoms and Territories, except those in Germany, to Philip. He died in the Convent of St. Justus, in Spain, Anno 1558. and was succeeded by
45. Philip II. whose Invincible Armado (with which he made no doubt to destroy England) consisting of 150 Sail of Ships, which carried 1600 great Pieces of Brass Cannon, and 1050 of Iron, 8000 Seamen, 20000 Soldiers, besides Volunteers; and whose Preparations cost twelve Millions of Ducats, was almost destroyed, few returning home, and those in a miserable condition. He died, Anno 1598. and was succeeded by his Son
46. Philip III. who died, Anno 1621. and was succeeded by his Son
47. Philip IV. who died, Anno 1665. and was succeeded by his Son
48. Charles II. being then a Child of four Years old.

The King of Spain's Dominions being very large and scattered, is the reason why he appoints so many Viceroyes and Governors of Countries. Of the former there are nine, viz. those of Naples, Sicily, Sardinia, Aragon, Valencia, Navarre, Catalonia, Peru, and new Spain. The principal Governors are those of the Netherlands, Milan, Galiccia, Biscay, the Isles of Majorca and Minorca; and in the Indies, Lima, Castra, St. Michael, Plata, &c. Those in Europe are for three Years, and those in the Indies for six.

The Cortes (which is somewhat like our Parliament) is the High Court of the Nation; but (according to a Regulation made by Charles V.) only sixteen Towns and two Burroughs have a Privilege of sending Deputies to it, viz. Burgos, Leon, Granada, nada, Seville, Cordoua, Murcia, Jaen, Toledo, Segovia, Salamanca, Havila, Toro, Zamora, Cuença, Sorria, Guadalaxar; and the two Burroughs are, Valadolid and Madrid, because they are not enclosed with Walls. There are several sorts of Councils that sit within the Palace at Madrid: As 1. The Council of State, whose number is not fixt, but meets every Monday and Thursday, and twice on Saturday. 2. The Council Royal of Castile, consisting of 48, which meets every Friday for deliberating about the Affairs of Castile. 3. The Council of War, which was establish'd in the Year 720. and meets every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, about the Affairs of the Army; but the number of Counsellors is not fixt. 4. The Council of Inquisition, which (as we said before) was instituted by Ferdinand and Isabella, Ann. 1478. 5. The Council of Orders, which was establish'd, Ann. 1489. for considering of Affairs relating to the Knights of Calatrava, Alcantara, and St. Jago. 6. The Council of Aragon, establish'd by Ferdinand, Ann. 1494. and confirm'd by Charles V. for judging in the Affairs of Aragon, Valencia, the Isles of Majorca, Minorca, and Sardinia. 7. The Council of Italy, erected by Charles V. for considering Affairs of the Spanish Dominions in Italy; and consists of a President and six Counsellors. 8. The Council of the Indies, erected in the Year 1511. which takes Cognisance of the Affairs of the new World. 9. The Council of Finances, or the Hacienda, erected by Philip III. in the Year 1602. for inspecting of the Royal Revenues; and it consists of a President and eight Counsellors. 10. The Junta de Millions, erected by Philip IV. Ann. 1653. to ease the Council of Finances, when they had too much, or too weighty Business on their Hands; and is properly a General Court for receiving all the Duties upon Goods; and because the greatest Sums pass through their Hands, this Court is call'd that of Millions. 11. The Council of the Croisade, establish'd, Ann. 1509. by virtue of a Bull of Pope Julius II. which allowed the King of Spain a Privilege to raise a Tax upon Ecclesiasticks, on Condition that the same should be employed against such Infidels as infested the Coasts of Spain. This Council gives Orders for publishing of Jubilees, Licenses for printing of Books, and eating of Meat, &c. 12. The Council of Flanders, erected by Philip IV. Ann. 1628. for taking Cognisance of the Affairs of the Netherlands. 13. The Council d' Apostento, establish'd by Don Alonso, Ann. 1341. for ordering the Lodgings of the Officers of the King's Household, and Cognoscing of the Right which his Majesty has in all the Houses of Madrid. 14. The Council of the Chamber of Castile, erected by Charles V. Ann. 1518. to give an account to the President of Castile of all the Posts and Offices that were vacant in the two Castiles. 15. The Junta de Bosques Reales, erected by Charles V. to have Inspection of the King's Woods and Forests.

As to the Revenues of the Crown of Spain, if his Catholick Majesty did not draw vast Sums from the Indies, all that he has from the Low-Countries and Italy, would prove little enough for maintaining a suitable number of Men for the security of those Countries. And his whole Revenues from Spain, the Indies, the Netherlands, Naples, Milan, Sicily, &c. are thought to amount to no more than Twenty Four Million, Eight Hundred and Twenty Two Thousand Livers, one Year with another in time of Peace; so that it seems pretty clear that he could not by his own Forces maintain his Dominions abroad, if his Neighbours and Allies did not assist him. These Revenues arise principally from the Duties on all manner of Commodities Exported and Imported, and the Imposts on Bread and Wine, and all sorts of Provision; which are only Sold by Commissioners appointed by the Farmers of these Duties. His Majesty also receives considerable Profit from Stamp'd Paper; the Tax upon which is in proportion to the use they make of it, or according to the Importance of the Subject that is written on it.

Concerning the Forces of Spain, this Monarch is not much to be Feared either by Sea or Land; and his Preparations are always very slow. Eight Thousand Men together at once make a great Spanish Army, and Twenty Five War Ships are seldom seen under the Command of one Admiral. The Spanish Infantry is thought generally very good, but the Cavalry indifferant.

There are three sorts of Grandees in Spain, distinguished by certain Priviledges. The first are those who are cover'd before they speak to the King; the second are those that are cover'd after they have begun to speak; and the third those who are not cover'd before they have done speaking, and return'd to their Place: And this Honour being sometimes annexed to certain Lands and Seigniories, falls often to Daughters, who confer it on their Husbands. There are also some who enjoy it only for themselves, but cannot transmit it to their Posterity: And neither one nor the other put on their Hats before the King makes a sign to them, which he never fails to do. The Spanish Nobility are not very much esteem'd, unless they be dignified with some Military Order, or Cloath'd with the Title of Duke, Count or Marquis; however they enjoy a certain Priviledge, call'd Mayozango, by which, if their Creditors should happen to Arrest their Rents, the Judge is obliged to alow them a suitable maintenance for themselves and their Retinue; which sometimes exceeds the yearly Rent of their Estate: For the Spaniards keep a great many Servants; and the Custom among them is, that when a Master dies, his Servants pass into the Service of his next Relations; which, as it mightily encreases the number of their Domesticks, so it quickly empties their Coffers; because these are all at Board Wages, and ly out a Doors.

In the Beginning of our Description of Spain, we put the Reader in mind of the Ancient Divisions of it, and now we come to those that have been made by late Geographers; who generally agree in dividing it into fifteen Parts, commonly call'd Kingdoms: As you may see in the following Table; where we have plac'd them as they ly from North to South, in the same order as we design to Describe them.

The Kingdom of Spain divided into Fifteen Parts.

BISCAY, Biscaia, is bounded on the North with the Sea of that Name, anciently call'd Mare Cantabrum.

Centricum; on the East, with the Provinces of Alava and Guipuscoa; on the South, with Old Castile; and on the West, with Asturia. It was anciently Governed by Princes of its own, of the Family of Haro; who failing, in the Siege of Algeyira, it fell in to John King of Castile. It is said to be about 100 Miles long, but not near so broad; and is divided into several Parts, call'd Merindades, viz. Garnica, Busturia, Oribe, Arratia, Bedia, Corzona, Durango, Murguina, and Prestanero Major. There are in this Country several good Mines of Iron and Steel; which turn to good account to the Inhabitants, there being (as is computed) about 30000000 pound weight Exported from thence into other Countries every Year. The most considerable Towns are,

- Bilbao. } Ordunna.
- Durango. } S. Sebastian, in
- S. Andero. } Guipuscoa.
- Laredo. }

Bilbao, thought to be the ancient Flaviobriga, a Town Inhabited of old by the Asturigenes, in Cantabria, formerly call'd Portus Amanus, is now the Chief City of Biscay, and a famous Mart-Town, standing on the River Navio, about 6 Miles from the Mouth of it, and about 50 from S. Andero to the East. Lat. 43. 30. Long. 14. 30. Jo. Mariana says that this Town is not so ancient, it having been built by Didacus Lupus of the Family of Haro, Lord of Biscay, about the Year 1298, in the place where Portus Amanus formerly stood. But whether this or that be the true Opinion, it is at present a Place of great Trade, and one of the most considerable Ports in Spain, tho' great Vessels cannot come up so far, but must ly at a place half a League nearer the Sea. It's Trade consists chiefly in Swords and Armour; the former of which are famous over all Europe.

Durango, Durangum, is a pretty well Inhabited Town, about 12 Miles from the Sea, 16 from Bilbao to the East, and 24 from Placentia, and is the Title of a Family in that Country.

S. Andero, Andreapolis, Anciently call'd (according to some Authors) Flavionavia, stands on the Bay of Biscay, on the Confines of Asturia, and has a very Commodious Harbour, defended by an old Castle, distant, about 50 Miles from Bilbao, and 24 from Laredo to the West, and as many from Sant Illana. It was formerly destroyed, but afterwards Rebuilt by Alonso IX. King of Castile, in the year 1174, and was formerly well Inhabited, and neat, but is now in a decaying Condition. It is in the Diocess of Burgos; and has been lately Honoured with the Title of a Bishoprick.

Laredo, Laredum, is a little Town on the Coast of Biscay, but has a large and safe Harbour, and reckon'd one of the four Principal Sea Port Towns of that Country. It stands among rugged Rocks and Hills, about 30 Miles from Bilbao to the West, and 6 from S. Andero.

Ordunna, Ordunia, is a little Town, situated near the Mountains, about 36 Miles from Bilbao to the South, and 5 from the Sea of Biscay: And was formerly (according to Gregorius de Argaiz) call'd Dardania.

The Country call'd GUIPUSCOA, is a Province of Spain, and a part of Biscay, taken in a large Sense; but was formerly a part of the Kingdom of Navarre; and was anciently Inhabited by the Varduli and Cavisti. It is bounded on the North with the Sea of Biscay; on the West with Biscay properly to call'd; on the South with the Province of Alava; and on the East with Navarre, and part of France. Alonso IX. King of Castile, took it from Sancho the last of that Name, King of Navarre. The Towns of greatest note in it are,

- S. Sebastian. } Tolosa.
- Fuentaravia. } Plesencia.

S. Sebastian, or Donastien, as the Inhabitants call it. Sebastianopolis, or Fanum Sebastiani, is a Fortified Town, situated at the Foot of the Mountains, on the Coast of Biscay, at the mouth of the River Orio about 10 Miles from the Borders of France to the West; and has the advantage of a commodious and large Harbour. It is reported of this Town, That no Stranger is allowed to higher a House for himself but must Lodge with some of the Burgers, ever since the Flemings began to Traffique here; for to oblige the Inhabitants at first, they voluntarily allowed their Landlords one in the hundred of all the Goods they Sold there; and now the Spaniards have brought that Custom into a sort of a Law.

Fuentaravia or Fontarabia, Fons Rapidus, is a Fortified Town upon the Coast of the Sea of Guienne; at the Mouth of the River Bidasoa, on the very Confines of France, near the Ruins of the ancient Olso, or Aiso, about 12 Miles from S. Sebastian, and 24 from Bayone. It was Built by the Goths, in the year 625, and was formerly included within Aquitain, it lying on the French side of the Pyrenees; and belonged to the Diocess of Bayone; till the year 1571, that Philip II. King of Spain, separated it from thence. The River upon which it stands separates France from Spain, Fontarabia being on the Border of Spain on one side of the River, and Andaye on the Border of France, opposite to it, on the other. The French exact Custom from those that go into Spain, and the Spaniards from those that go into France. This River also Forms that little Island, call'd by the French Ile de Faisans, where the Peace was concluded between the two Crowns, in the year 1659.

Tolosa, Tolose is a pretty handsome Town, standing near the River Orio, near the Foot of the Pyrenees, about 16 Miles from the Sea of Biscay to the South, as many from S. Sebastian, and about as much from Monte de S. Adrian. The French call it Tolofette, to distinguish it from Tolouse in Languedoc.

Plasencia, Placentia, is a little Town in this same Province, first begun by Alonso IX. King of Castile, in the year 1343; and is Famous for the Arms of all sorts that are made there.

The little Province of ALAVA, which was formerly of much larger extent, is bounded on the North, with Guipuscoa; on the East, with Navarre; on the West, with Biscay; and on the South, with Ruconia or La Rioja. It was once a part of Navarre, till the year 1342, that Alonso IX. King of Castile took it from Sancho, the last of that Name, King of Navarre, and for ever United it to the Kingdom of Castile. The Towns of greatest Note in it are,

- Vitoria. } Salvaterra.
- Trevinno. }

Vitoria, Victoria, is the Chief Town of this Province, situated at the Foot of the Mountain call'd Monte de S. Adrian, near the Province of Biscay, about 60 Miles from Pampelona, to the West; 48 from Bilbao, to the South; and 80 from Burgos to the North East. It was Built (according to Mariana) ra.) by Sancho, King of Navarre, about the year 1180, where formerly stood a Village call'd Gastejo.

Uesinno and Salvaterra, are so inconsiderable that they hardly deserve a particular Description; The former of which stands about 20 Miles from Vitoria, to the South West. The other about 12 to the East, near the Province of Guipuscoa.

ASTURIA, Lies on the West of Biscay, between that and Galecia; The former of which Bounds it on the East; the latter on the West; Old Cassile and Leon on the South; and the Sea on the North. It is about 140 Miles in Length, from East to West; and about 60 Broad, South and North. It is commonly divided into Asturia de Oviedo, that lies next to Galecia; and Asturia de Santillana, which is the East part of it, and lies next to Biscay: And is otherwise divided into 7 parts call'd Merindades. The little Province of Lieba, which lies among the high Mountains call'd Europe, (and of which we shall take occasion to speak afterwards,) is a part of it. It was into this Province that Pelagius the famous Maintainer of the Spanish Liberty, Fled, with the other Christians who would not submit themselves to the Moors, when they Conquered the rest of Spain: And it is the Title of the Presumptive Heir of Spain. The most considerable Towns in it are,

- Oviedo*. } Santillana.
- Aviles*. } S. Vincent de la Varquera.
- Gijon*. } Llanes.

Oviedo, Ovetum, is the Chief City of this part of Asturia, distant about 20 Miles from the Sea of Biscay to the South; 70 from Astorga, and about 60 from Leon to the North West. It was formerly the Seat of the Kings of Oviedo, and gave Name to the Kingdom. It is now neither in good Condition, nor well Inhabited; but is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Compostella, and has a sort of an Univerfity, Erected in the year 1580.

Aviles, Avila, is a little Town in this Asturia, near the River Nalon, and not far from the Sea of Biscay, about 36 Miles from Oviedo to the North; and 12 from Cabo de Penas; and is by some thought to be the ancient Flavionavia Pescorum.

Gijon, Gigia, is a little Town Seated in a Plain, near the Cabo de Penas, about 20 Miles from Oviedo to the North; 60 from Leon; and near 50 from the Confines of Galecia to the East. It is almost surrounded by the Sea, and has the advantage of a Harbour and a Castle; and was formerly the Chief Town of the Province.

Sant Ullana, Fanum Sanctæ Juliane, is a little Town, but the Chief one in that part of Asturia to which it gives Name. It stands about 3 Miles from the Sea of Biscay, and 20 from S. Andero to the West; and is thought to have been formerly call'd Concana.

The little Province of LIEBANA (as we said before) is Situated among the high Mountains of Asturia, call'd Europe, or los Montes de Europa, in Asturia Santillana, and is above 30 Miles Long, and near 20 Broad; and is divided into 5 Vallies, call'd, Cillorigo, Voldeprado, Vabebaro, Cereceda, and Polanés; in which they reckon 366 Villages and Hamlets, but very little ones, and indifferently Inhabited. The Chief Town of it is Potes, a little Town about 30 Miles from Santillana.

GALLICIA, or Galiçia, according to the Spanish Pronunciation, Gallecia, is the most Western Province of Spain; and anciently Inhabited by the Callaici Luceses, and a part of the Callaici Braccarii. It is Bounded on the North and West by the Atlantick Ocean, on the South by Portugal, and on the East by Asturia and the Kingdom of Leon. It is about 180 Miles Long, and 150 Broad. There are in it several Springs of hot Waters, which make the Air somewhat unwholsom. There are also several Mines of Gold, Copper, Lead, Iron and Vermilion; and the Sea Coast is plentifully provided with many sorts of good Fishes. It had formerly the Title of a Kingdom, but is now by most Authors reckon'd a part of that of Leon, and entirely Subject to the King of Spain. It is a very Mountainous Country. And the most considerable Towns in it are,

- Compostella*. } Monednedo.
- Corunna*. } Tuy.
- Lugo*. } S. Maria Finis Terre.
- Orensé*. } Mongia.
- Baiona*. } Rivadoto.

Compostella, Compostella, the Capital City of Galiccia, stands on a rising Ground, about 36 Miles from Corunna to the South, and 50 from Cabo Finistere to the East. It was built by King Afonso the Chaste, Ann. 835. from the Ruins of Iria Flavia, which stood about 10 Miles to the South of the place where Compostella now stands; and is now call'd Padron. This City is chiefly famous for the great number of Pilgrims that resort hither to pay their Devotions to St. James; for they say, that this Apostle being sent into Spain to preach the Gospel, suffered Martyrdom at Compostella; that in the year 835 his Body was found in this Place: And that in the year 844, he appear'd to King Ramirius, and assur'd him of certain Victory over the Moors, on Condition he would refuse to pay the yearly Tribute of an Hundred Christian Virgins, which Mawregatus King of Leon, had formerly undertaken to pay them. Since which time Spain has Honour'd this Apostle as their Patron. But whatever may be of that, Afonso caus'd a stately Church to be Built at Compostella, and obtained a Bull from Pope Leo III. for transferring the Episcopal Seat of Iria Flavia hither. It was made the Seat of an Arch-Bishop by Calixtus II. in the year 1124 in the place of Emerita Augusta, or Merida, which was then miserably oppress'd by the Saracens. The Spaniards commonly call it Santiago, and some give it the Name of Iria Nova, for the reason above mentioned. There are here a small Castle and an Univerfity; and this was the Birth-place of Afonso I. King of Castile and Leon.

Corunna, Coronium, which Protolomy makes mention of as a Town in Hispania Tarracoenfis, stands upon the North Coast of this Province, between the two Promontories of Cabo Finistere, and Cabo de Ortegal, about 30 Miles from Compostella to the North, and 360 from Lisbon; having the advantage of a large Harbour, and is defended by two Neighbouring Forts. It is a place of great Riches, and good Trade, and by the English commonly call'd the Groyne: And is an Episcopal See, Subject to the Arch-Bishop of Compostella.

Lugo, Lucus Augusti, mentioned by Pliny, as the Chief Town anciently belonging to the Callaici Luceses, in Hispania Tarracoenfis, is now a little Town, Situated among the Mountains, near the Head of the River Minho, about 70 Miles from Compostella to the East, 30 from the Confines of Asturia de Oviedo, as many from Monednedo to the South;

South; and about 50 from Orense. Aloñso recover'd it from the Moors, Anno 753, and it is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Compostella.

Orense, Auria, or Aque Calide Celinorum, mentioned by Protony, as a Town in Hispānia Tarracōnensis, call'd Aque Celine by Antoninus, and Amphilochia by Strabo. Stands upon the River Minbo, about 56 Miles from Compostella to the South East, as many from Lugo to the South, and near as much from Tuy. It has its ancient Name from its excellent hot Baths, which prove an effectual Cure for several sorts of Diseases: And it is an Episcopal See under the Arch-Bishop of Compostella. Some are of opinion, that these old Names belong rather to Baiona, a Town on the Coast of this Province, at the Mouth of the River Minbo; but the other seems to have a better Title to them.

Mandomedo, Mindonia, or Mindon, thought to be the ancient Ocelum, is a little Town that owes its rise to the Ruin of a Neighbouring one, called Bretonia, or Bretagna, in the same Province: And stands about 16 Miles from the Sea of Biscay to the South; 33 from Lugo to the North; and 24 from Rivadeo, a little Town in this Province. It is situated in a Valley call'd Valdeabria, and is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Compostella; but is at present very inconsiderable and thinly Inhabited.

Tuy, Tyde, is a little Fortified Town, in this Province, on the Confines of Portugal, standing on the River Minbo, about 24 Miles from the Mouth of it; 48 from Orense to the West; and above 60 from Compostella to the South; and is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Compostella.

S. Maria Finisterre, is a little Town about 40 Miles from Compostella to the West; near the Promontory call'd Cabo Finisterre, anciently call'd Artabrum, and Celticum by Pliny, and Nerium by Protony and Strabo; which juts out into the Sea to the West; and is very well known by the European Mariners. Petrus de Medina thinks these old Names belonged rather to another Promontory call'd Cabo Towinban, 20 Miles to the North of Finisterre.

Navarre, Navarra,
And Navarræ Regnum.

NAVARRÉ, which is the North East part of the Kingdom of Spain, was anciently Inhabited by the Vascones; and is bounded on the North with France; on the East and South with Aragon; and on the West with Old Castile; and is divided by the Pyrenean Mountains in two parts, viz. the Higher and the Lower: The former of which is much the larger, and belongs to Spain; The other belongs to France, and lyes on the French side of the Mountains. Navarre was formerly Govern'd by its own Kings for several Ages, until the year 1512 that Ferdinand V. King of Aragon, Invaded it, and drove out its Lawful King, John Albret, without any Cause of Offence given, or any Allowance from the Pope; tho' the Spaniards pretended a Bull granted by Julius II. for that end; but the French alledge, and Mezeray, particularly, proves, that this Bull was afterwards procured by the sollicitation of the Spaniards. But whether of the two be in the right, we will not now enlarge upon it; only this is certain, that since that time, the Higher Navarre has been subject to Spain, as the Lower has been to France, since the time of Henry the Great. The Higher Navarre is a Dry, Barren, and very ill Cultivated Country; inasmuch that the King of Spain does not Receive so much Revenue out of it as maintains the Troops he is oblig'd to keep there: But the Lower is both well Watered, Improved and well Inhabited. The Higher is divided into Five Districts, call'd Merindades, viz. Merind. de Pamplona, Merind. de Olite, Merind. de Sanguesa, Merind. de Estella, and Merind. de Tudela. And the most considerable Towns in it are,

Olite .
Sanguesa .
	} Tudela.

Pampelona, Pampelon, and Pompeopolis, anciently a City in Hispānia Tarracōnensis, belonging to the Vascones, according to Strabo and Protony, is the chief Town of this Province, and a place of great strength, with a strong Citadel to bridle the French, built by King Philip II. It hath been subject to Spain since the Year 1512. that Ferdinand of Aragon invaded this Country. It stands upon the River Arga, in a Valley surrounded with high Mountains, about 60 Miles from Baiona to the South, 75 from Bilboa, and 110 from Burgos to the West. It is said to have been built, or at least repair'd, by Pompey the Great, who, together with Metellus, obtain'd several Victories over Sertorius in this Country; and therefore Strabo calls this place Pompeii Torpaa. In the Year 735. King Aloñso, having driven out the Moors, took this Town and several others in this Country from them; and here Ignatius Loiola valiantly fighting, was so wounded, that he was obliged to lay aside the Sword, and betake himself to a Monastick Life, and afterwards instituted the famous Order of the Jesuits.

Olite, Olitum, or Oligitis, the chief Town of the Merindada or District of that name, stands on the little River call'd Cidacos de Navarra, near Tafalla, 24 Miles from Pampelona, to the South, and as many from Tudela.

Tudela, Tutela, is a fine and well situated Town, standing on the River Ebro, where the Rivulet Queiles falls into it; 24 Miles South from Olite, 16 from Tarazona to the North-East; and 60 from Zaragoza; and gives name to the District in which it lies.

Old Castile, Castella Vetus.

OLD CASTILE, which was anciently inhabited by the Aevacce Murlogi, Vaccei, and part of the Celtiberi, is bounded on the North, with Asturia Santillana and Biscay; on the East, with Navarre, and part of Aragon; on the South, with New Castile; and on the West, with the Kingdom of Leon. It is divided into seven Districts, call'd Merindades; and taken in a large sense, comprehends Alava, Biscay, both the Asturias, and Guipuscoa; but otherwise Old Castile is Castile properly so call'd, and known by this name for two Centuries, before the Kingdom of Toledo was call'd New Castile. Old Castile was formerly a Kingdom by it self, but was united with Aragon by the Marriage of Ferdinand and Isabella, in the Year 1474. It is a mountainous and barren Country, except in the little Vallies and Dales, which produce Corn and Wine, and several sorts of good Fruits. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Burgos,	} Segovia,	} Lerma,
Avila,			} Valladolid,	} Frias,
Calaborra,			} Osma,	} Soria,
La Calzada,				} Nagera.

Burgos, Burgi, the chief City of this Province, stands among the Mountains, near the River Arlanza, upon a rising Ground, about 140 Miles from Madrid to the North; 60 from the Coast of the Sea of Biscay to the South; 160 from Zaragoza to the West; and Placentia to the East. It is said to have sprung from the Ruins of the ancient Auca, now call'd, Nuestra Señora de Occa, and was formerly the Seat of that little Kingdom. It was made a Bishop's Seat in the Year 1075, and an Archbishoprick, in the Year 1571. by Pope Gregory XIII. And the yearly Revenues of that Prelate are said to amount to 40000 Ducats. It claims the first place in the Estates of the two Castiles, the Toledo disputes it. It has an excellent Bridge over the Duera, which joins the City to the Suburbs; but the Streets of it are narrow, and the Houses ill Built. The Cathedral Church is very Magnificent; and the Abby of las Hueglas, wherein are mainrain'd 150 Nuns, all Daughters of Noblemen, is a large Pile of Building. There is also a Royal Hospital, the yearly Revenues of which amount to 80000 Livres, a College of Jesuits, a Monastery of Augustines, and another of Dominicans. This City is also adorn'd with several Palaces and many Fountains. Alonso the VII. King of Aragon, recovered it from the Saracens, Anno 1166 and not far from hence, there is said to be a Well whose Water effectually cures Fluxes.

Avila, Abula, mentinn'd by Ptolomy, in Hispania Tarraconensis; and by some call'd Arbacula and Albu-cella, stands on a little Hill, hard by the Rivulet Adia, Surrounded with Hills and Rocks, and enclosed with very good Walls: In the midst between Madrid and Salamanca, about 60 Miles from either; and 100 from Burgos to the South. It is an Episcopal See, under the Arch-Bishop of Compostella; and is reckon'd famous for being the Birth-place of S. Teresa: And is the Title of a Noble Family.

Calaborra, Calaguris, a Town in Hispania Tarraconensis, according to Pliny; otherwise call'd Caligurris, by Livy; and Calagorina by Ptolomy; stands near the River Ebro, where it Receives the Rivulet call'd Cidacos de Castilla, on a rising Ground, on the Confines of Navarre, in the midst between Logrono to the West, and Tudela to the East, about 24 Miles from either, 90 from Burgos to the East; and as many from Pamplona to the South. Afranius (as Mariana Relates) did so closely Besiege this place, that the Townsmen lived for some time, upon the Flesh of their Wives and Children; which gave occasion to the Romans, to call any great Famine, Fames Calagurritana; but at last the Town was taken and demolish'd, and the Inhabitants put to the Sword. It was first made an Episcopal See, under the Arch Bishop of Tarragona, by Pope Alexander VI. Anno 1498, but is now under the Arch-Bishop of Burgos.

Calzada, Calcicata, call'd also Dominicopolis, and sometimes by the Inhabitants Domingo de la Calzada, is a little Town in the Province of Rioja, standing on a River, in a Plain surrounded almost with high Hills, distant about 48 Miles from Calaborra to the West, and 12 from Najera. It was anciently only a Monastery, but is now an Episcopal Seat, under the Arch-Bishop of Burgos, and since the year 1236, its See has been united with that of Alava; which was transfer'd to Calaborra by Pope Alexander VI. in the year 1498.

Segovia, Segovia, or Segubia, according to Ptolomy, anciently a Town belonging to the Arevaci, in Hispania Tarraconensis, stands in a pleasant Valley, at the foot of the Mountains, the North side of it being wash'd with the little River Eresina, into which two Torrents fall, call'd Clamores and Frio 90 Miles South from Burg; and 37 North East from Avila. It is a large, fine, and well Peopled Town; and is call'd Labriosa, because there's no Body to be there seen either Idle or Begging, except such as Age or Sicknefs have rendered unfit for Work or Business. There are two things principally remarkable in this City, the first is an Aqueduct of a prodigious length, consisting of two Rows of Arches, the one above the other, which carry's Water to Serve the whole City; but they are not agreed by whom it was made, some giving King Hispalus the Honour of it; others, the Emperor Trajan; others, Lacinus Governor of Spain, under Vespasian; and others, the Moors; but these seem to have no Title to it, since it is probable that it was Built before they had any footing in Spain. The second thing is the famous Mint-House, where the Mony is struck by a Machine managed by the force of Water: Every Body is free to Coin their Mony here, of the same Weight, and with the same Impression as the King's has, provided only they furnish the Silver or Gold, and pay a small Duty to the King; which is entirely laid out upon the House, so that the King has no profit by it. This City is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Toledo, and is famous for its Wooll'n Manufactories.

Valadolid, Pintia, anciently a Town in Hispania Tarraconensis, belonging to the Vaccæi, is a large and fine City, but without any Walls, standing in a Plain, on the River Pisuerga; which a little below falls into the Duero, on the Confines of Leon, 45 Miles South from Burgos, and 50 North from Segovia. It hath sometime been the Residence of the Spanish Kings, and there is still a Palace Royal in it; where were born, Henry IV. King of Castile, Ann. 1425. Phillip II. King of Spain, Ann. 1527. Phillip IV. Ann. 1605, and Anna of Austria, Queen of France, Ann. 1601. Its Situation is very delightful, being in a plentiful Country; and the Inhabitants, for Civility and Politeness, are said to be inferiour to none in all Spain. It was made an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Toledo, by Pope Clement VIII. on the 25th of November, in the Year 1595. and the King soon after gave it the Title and Privileges of a City.

Osma, Uxama, the name of a very ancient Town in Hispania Tarraconensis, destroy'd by Pompey the Great, afterwards rebuilt, and at last sack'd and raz'd by the Moors, and now consists of a few sorry Houses, which stand upon the Duero, where the Rivulets Avion and Uxero fall into it; but near to it, on the other side of the River, there is a place call'd el Borgo d' Osma, where the Bishop resides; and there is a sort of an Univerfity, founded in the Year 1550. and is distant, 40 Miles from Signenza, to the North West; 80 from Burgos. to the South East, and 42 from the Rubbish of Numentie, now call'd Garay.

Soria, Soria, is a Town standing near the Head of the River Duero, 3 Miles from the Ruins of Numentia, call'd Garay, 30 Miles above Osma, and 100 East from Valadolid, and 32 from Tarazona, to the South West. It is situated among Hills, and is well inhabited, and has Jurisdiction over a great many neighbouring Villages.

Nagera, Nagara, stands on a Rivulet, at the Foot of the Mountains, in the Province of Rioja, (which is a part of Old Castile) and has the Title of a Dukedom; but its Episcopal See was removed to Calzada. It stands between Logronno to the West, and Calzada, to the South West; and is remarkable for a memorable Battle, fought between Peter the Cruel, and Henry, Kings of Castile, in the Year 1367.

The Kingdom of Leon, properly so call'd.

Legionense Regnum proprie dictum.

The Kingdom of LEON, taken in a large sense, is of much greater Extent than that we are now treating of; for Gallicia, Asturia d' Oviedo, Asturia Santillana, the Province of Extremadura, and likewise Old Castile, were all anciently under the Dominion of the Kings of Leon, Which Kingdom, as the Spanish Writers say, did begin, under King Pelagius, in the Year 717. But the French Historians are of another Opinion, and say, That the Kingdom of Leon had not Kings of its own, of the Race of Pelagius, till a great many Years after; and that at last, in the Year 1230. it was for ever united unto that of Castile, under King Ferdinand. But however that may be, Leon, which we are now describing, is of much lesser Extent, comprehending only that part of Spain that lies stretch'd towards the North; which was anciently inhabited by the Astures Cismontani, a part of the Vaccæi, and some of the Vettones; and which is bounded, on the North, with the Principality of Asturia; on the East, with Old Castile; on the South, with Extremadura Legionensis; and on the West, with Portugal and Gallicia, and is about 150 Miles long, and 120 broad. It is divided into two Parts by the River Duero, viz. Leon on this side the Duero, which lies most Southerly; and Leon beyond the Duero, which lies most Northerly. This Country is Mountainous, but in some places produces good increase of Corn, and near Zamora there are abundance of that precious Stone call'd Turquoise found. It was subdued by Augustus Caesar; and after it had been subject to the Romans for the space of about 500 Years, the Goths made themselves Masters of it; who about 400 Years after, were expell'd by the Moors and Saracens; who possess'd it till the Year 722. that Pelagius, a Prince of Gothick Extraction, recovered this Province from them. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Leon.		Zamora.
Palencia.		Toro.
Salamanca.		Astorga.
Ciudad Rodrigo.		Alca de Tormes.
Medina del Campo.		Tordesillas.

Leon, Legio Germanica, and Septima, anciently a City of Hispania Citerior, according to Ptolomy, is seated at the Foot of the Mountains of Asturia, near the Source of the River Eslla; in the midt between Valadolid and Oviedo, 70 Miles from the former to the North West, and 50 from the latter to the South East, and 70 Miles from Burgos to the West. It was built (according to Mariana) under the Emperor Trajan, by the Soldiers of the seventh Legion, call'd Gemina, after they had quitted Sublancia in Asturias, because it stood on the Ridge of a Hill. It was taken from the Moors by Pelagius, in the Year 722. and in the Year 985. it was taken from the Christians

(after a Year's Siege, and a resolute Resistance) by these Infidels; who put all within it to the Sword, without any distinction, either of Sex or Age. It was for some time the Royal City of the Kingdom; but now, tho' it is large, yet it is but thinly inhabited. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Compostella; and has hardly any thing remarkable in it except its Cathedral Church.

Palencia, Palantia, anciently a City of the Vaccæi in Hispania Tarracensis, according to Ptolomy, stands in a Plain, on the River Carrion, which a little below falls into the Pesuegra, on the Confines of Old Castile, about 48 Miles from Burgos, to the West; 32 from Valadolid, to the North; and 60 from Leon, to the South East. It was ruined during the Wars with the Infidels; but repair'd by King Sancho, in the Year 1032. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Burgos; but was formerly Suffragan to the See of Toledo, and is now in a flourishing Condition.

Salamanca, Salmantica, anciently (according to Ptolomy) a Town belonging to the Vettones, in Hispania Lusitania, probably the same with Elemanica in Polybius, is a pretty large Town, standing on the River Tormes; but very ill built, being situated on three Hilllocks, most part of the Houses being ruinous, except the Churches, Colleges, and Monasteries. It is distant, 30 Miles from Zamora, to the South; 44 from the Confines of Portugal; about 50 from Valadolid, to the South West; and 50 from Ciudad Rodrigo. King Ferdinand of Castile, to oblige the Inhabitants of this Country, and because this place was conveniently situated for that purpose, transfer'd the University of Palencia hither, about the Year 1239. his Father Aloynso King of Leon, having laid the Foundation of an University there before. The University has for a long time been in a flourishing Condition, and all the Professors are very well provided for. This City is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Compostella.

Ciudad Rodrigo, Rodericopolis, has its name from Count Roderick, who laid the Foundation of it, under the Reign of Ferdinand, King of Leon, Ann. 1170. and is a pretty neat and well inhabited Town, on the River Agueda, situated in a pleasant Country, and distant about 12 Miles from the Confines of Portugal, to the East; and 45 South from Salamanca. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Compostella.

Medina del Campo, Metina Campensis, so called because of its Situation in that Tract of Ground in this Country call'd la Tierra de Campos, and to distinguish it from others of that name. It stands on the little River Zapardiel, on the Confines of Old Castile, about 30 Miles from Valadolid, to the South; 6 from the River Duero, and about 40 from Avila. It was formerly a pretty large Town; but is now in a decaying Condition. Ferdinand I. King of Aragon was born here, Ann. 1380. The Emperor Ferdinand I. Ann. 1503. And Isabella Queen and Heiress of Castile, died here, 26 November, 1504.

Zamora, Semica, anciently (according to Ptolomy) a Town belonging to the Vaccæi, in Hispania Tarracensis, is now a wall'd Town, standing on a rising Ground, on the River Duero, about 32 Miles from the Confines of Portugal, to the East; 45 from Valadolid, to the West; and in the midt between Astorga, to the North, and Salamanca, to the South, about 40 Miles from either. It was ruined by the Moors, Ann. 888, and afterwards repair'd, and made made an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Compostella, Ann. 1124.

Astorga, Asturiga Augusta, anciently (according to Ptolemy) a Town and Colony of the Astures Cismon-tani, in Hispania Tarraconensis, bordering with the Vaccæi; is now a decaying Town, and thinly inhabited, upon the River Tuerto, about 21 Miles from Leon, to the South West; 80 from Burgos, to the West; 40 from Zamora; and near 40 from Zamora, to the North; and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Compostella.

Tordeillas, Turris Syllana, stands on the River Duero, about 20 Miles from Valladolid, to the West; 12 from Simancas; 20 from Toro; and 34 from Zamora to the East. It is sometimes call'd Fugum Syllarum, and Otero de Sillas; and there is an old Castle in it, in which Joan, Queen of Castile, and Mother to the Emperor Charles V. died, Ann. 1555.

Catalaunna, Catalonia.

CATALONIA, which is said to derive its name from the Goths and Alans, as if one should say Gothalonia, was anciently inhabited by the Ause-tani, Castellani, Illergetes, Indigetes, Leſtani, and Lacetani, People of Hispania Tarraconensis; and is bounded on the West, with Aragon and Valencia; on the East and South, with the Mediterranean Sea; and on the North, with the Pyrenean Mountains. It was formerly govern'd by the Counts of Barcellona, under the Protection of the Kings of France; but afterwards fell to the Kings of Aragon, in the Year 1137. by the Marriage of Raymund, Count of Barcellona, with Petronilla, Queen and Heiress of Aragon. It is a mountainous Country, but pretty Fertile, and well water'd; and if the Soil is not so good as could be with'd, the Bowels of the Earth make, in a good measure, amends; for they produce Amethists, Agars, Crystal, Alum, Alabaster, Coral, Gold, Silver, Vitriol, and Salt; whereof there are several Mines, particularly that at Girone. In the Year 1640. the Catalonians revolted; and being assisted by the French, came under the Protection of that Crown, which sent Viceroy's or Governors to Rule it, till the Year 1659. that by the 42d and 43d Articles of the Peace, then concluded, it was agreed; That the Pynees should be the Bounds betwixt the two Kingdoms of France and Spain. This Country is divided into two Parts, viz. Old Catalonia and New Catalonia; the former whereof comprehends the East part of it, as the other does the West. It hath been variously divided at several times; sometimes into 56 Regions, sometimes into 17 Districts or Vicariates, &c. The Inhabitants are said to be the most liberal and industrious People in all Spain: And Buno, particularly, says there are 56 Cities and free Towns in it: The most considerable of which are,

Barcellona, Barcino, a Town (according to Pliny) in Hispania Tarraconensis; which Ptolemy calls Barcinon; Livy, Barchino, and others, Faventia, is the chief City of this Province, and a famous Mart-Town, with a tolerable Road for great Ships, and strong Fort, and a Mold that runs out into the Sea, for the space of 750 Paces; which secures the Gallies against the Violence of Winds and Storms. It is situated on the South Coast, between the Mouths of two Rivers, viz. Besòs on the East, and Ladròs on the West; about 40 Miles from Tarragona, to the East, 50 from Girone, to the South West, and 40 from Vich de Offena, Lat. 41. 109. 20. It is a very ancient City, insomuch that some will have it to be built by Hercules; but 'tis generally agreed, that it was built by Hamilcar, fir nam'd Barcas, a Carthaginian, about 300 Years before the Birth of Christ. In the Year 805. the Emperor Leou the Pious routed the Moors, and recover'd this City; and in the Year 985. the Moors laid Siege to it on the first of July, and took it on the sixth; but it was quickly recover'd by the Christians. In the Year 1472. it was besieged by the King of Aragon, and surrendered upon honourable Terms, after it had made an obstinate Defence. On the 17 Octob. 1652. after a tedious Siege of fifteen Months, it surrendered to the King of Spain; because, by reason of the Civil Wars in France, it could not have necessary Succours from thence. It was besieged by the French in the Year 1697. and, after an obstinate Defence, surrendered to Duke de Vendosme, but restored in the succeeding Treaty at Ryswick. It is well fortify'd, and several of the Churches are very magnificent; and the common Opinion is, That it is as big as Naples, but falls short in the number of Inhabitants. The Nobility enjoy great Privileges in this City, it not being in the Power of any Man to put a Gentleman in Prison. The High Court of Justice of this Province sits in this City, as does also a Court of Inquisition, and it is the Residence of the Viceroy; and an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Tarragona: The Pope is Heir to the Bishop; whose Breath is no sooner out of his Body, than his Holines's Officer (whom he has always ready there on such Occasions) seizes on all the Goods and Chattels belonging to him.

Salfona, Celsena, stands at the Foot of the Mountains, on the River Cardoner, about 60 Miles from Barcellona to the North, 30 from Girone to the East, and 40 from the Pyrenean Mountains to the South. It is in no good Condition, and thinly inhabited; but is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Tarragona.

Tortosa, Dertosa, anciently (according to Ptolemy) a Town of the Illercoones in Hispania Tarraconensis, by others call'd Dertossa, and Dertusa, is a fortified Town, of great Importance, being seated near the Mouth of the Ebro, and therefore fitted for Traffick; which is not so great now as it has been formerly. It is distant, about 12 Miles from the Confines of Valencia, to the East; 40 from Tarragona, to the West; and 42 from Lerida, to the South. In the Year 1148. Raymund, Earl of Barcelena, with the Assistance of the Genese Fleet, took it from the Moors. It was taken by the French in the Year 1649. and surrendered to the King of Spain in September 1650. when both it, and all the Country along the Ebro, was reduced, and return'd to their former Allegiance to that Monarch. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Tarragona.

Girone, Gerunda, anciently (according to Pliny) a Town belonging to the Ausetani in Hispania Tarraconensis, stands about 20 Miles from the Coast of the Mediterranean to the West; the County of Rouffillon, to the North; 62 from Perpignan to the S. and about 50 from Barcellona to the N. E. It is Seared (says Mariana) on the side of a Hill. at the Foot whereof runs the River, anciently call'd Thici, now Tera; which has so wash'd away the Banks next the City, that they add considerably to its Strength. The Walls are well Built, the Towers of Stone, and Strong. In the highest part of the City stands the Cathedral, and Bishop's Houfe, a large and beautiful Fabrick: It was besieg'd and taken by the French in the year 1285. Taken also by them in the late War, and restor'd to his Catholic Majesty by the Treaty of Ryswick, Ann. 1697. and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Tarragona.

Lerida, Ile da, Anciently (according to Cesar and Pliny) the chief Town belonging to the Hergetes, is Seated on a little Hill, which insensibly almost terminates in a Valley, upon the River Segre, 70 Miles from Tarragona to the North-West, 50 from Tortosa to the North; about 100 from Barcelona to the North-West; and 80 from Zaragoza. It was recover'd from the Moors, Ann. 1143. and hath been since that time often Taken, and Retaken, and in the year 1643. It Surrender'd to his Catholic Majesty, after an obstinate Defence, and return'd to his Allegiance, from the French, who had taken it under the Command of Mons. de la Motte. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Tarragona, and has a sort of an University, Founded in the year 1300.

Puycerda, Jugum Coretanorum, is the chief Town of the little Province of Cerduna, standing on the River Segre, in the North part of the Province, on the Confines of France, about 42 Miles from Perpignan to the East, and 18 from Urgel. It was taken by the French in the year 1678. and restor'd to the Spaniards the year following, by the Treaty of Nimigen.

Roses, or Rofas, by the Inhabitants Rhoda, anciently (according to Livy) a Town in Hispania Citerior, belonging to the Indigetes, which Stephanus calls Rhoda, and Ptolomy Rhodopolis, stands on the Borders of France, and County of Rouffillon, on the Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, about 40 Miles from Rouffillon, or Perpignan to the South; and 28 from Girona to the North. It was taken by the French in the year 1645. and restor'd by the Pyrenean Treaty; and again taken by them in the year 1693. and restor'd by the Treaty of Ryswick. It was first Fortified by the Emperor Charles V. it being only an Abbacy before that time.

Tarragona, Tarraco, anciently (according to Livy, Strabo, and others) a famous Town in Hispania Citerior, from it was call'd Tarracensis; stands on the South Shoar of the Mediterranean Sea, at the Mouth of the River Francoli, 52 Miles from Tortosa to the East, and 60 from Barcelona to the West. It was Built by Cneius and Publius Scipio; and for many years was the Metropolis of the Roman Empire in Spain; where they kept their Courts, and the Majesty of their Government Resided. It was anciently so noble and large a City, that as Buno, particularly says, in Strabo's time it was as Populous as Carthage. It was destroy'd by the Moors, but Rebuilt afterwards, and is now nothing like what it was formerly; it having been often expos'd to the calamities of War in these late times. There are to be seen in it several marks of its Antiquity and Greatness, particularly, the Ruins of an old Circus, in the Street call'd Placa de la Fuente; and it was adorn'd with an University by Cardinal Gaspard de Corvantes, its Archbishop, in the time of Philip II.

Urgel, Urgella, call'd, La Seu d'Urgel, stands on the River Segre, in the County, or little Province of Cerduna, at the Foot of the Pyrenees, about 20 Miles from the Border of France, to the South; and 70 from Perpignan to the West. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Tarragona; and gives name to a pretty large Tract of Land, call'd, el Plano d'Urgel. Palamos, Palamus, is a Fortify'd Town, with a Harbour, on the Mediterranean Sea, about 20 Miles from Girona to the East; as many from Ampurias to the South; and 66 from Barcelona to the North-West.

Rouffillon, formerly part of this Province, being now subject to France, hath been already spoken of in our account of Languedoc.

Aragon, Aragonia.

ARAGON, which takes up a great part of the ancient third part of Spain, call'd Tarracensis, and has its name from the River Aragon, is Bounded on the North with Navarre, and France, from which it is separated by the Pyrenean Mountains; on the East with Catalonia; on the West with the 2 Castiles; and on the South with Valencia. It was at first only a County; but several Places that were taken by the Moors, being annexed to it, as also the Kingdom of Sobrarbe, which comprehended the Counties of Sobrarbe, and Ribagorza, it became a Kingdom, under King Ranirius; and was govern'd by its own Princes, till the time of Ferdinand V. that it was united to the Kingdom of Castile, Ann. 1474. The Kingdom of Aragon, properly to call'd, is divided into 2 by the River Ebro; and is a dry and barren Country, except the Vallies, which produce Corn, and Wine; as the Mountains do some Mines of Gold and Iron; which turn to no great account. This Province was one of the first that shook off the Yoke of the Moors: And finding that the Race of their ancient Kings was extinct, chose for their Prince, one Garcias Ximenes, a Man of great note in that Country; but did so limit his Authority, and rye up his Hands, that he held his Government at their Discretion: The least breach of the Contract made betwixt them, being enough to Depose him, and free them from their Allegiance. But the manner of his Swearing to a strict observance of these Conditions, and the great Privileges which the People assum'd, were abolish'd in an Assembly of the States, in the presence of King Pedro, surnam'd El Punnal, who gave them other Privileges in lieu of the former; This Country was formerly divided into 5 Parts, call'd Juntas, viz. Caragoza, Huesca, Sobrarbe, Exea, and Tarazona; but is now divided into 7 Diocesses, viz. those of Balbastro, Caragoza, Jacca, Albarazin, Huesca, Teruel, Tarazona. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Caragoza .	Teruel .
Balbastro .	Tarazona .
Calatajudo .	Venasca .
Jacca .	Monzon .
Albarazin .	Boria .
Huesca .

Caragoza, or Saragoza, Cesar Augusta, anciently (according to Pliny) a Town in Hispania Tarracensis belonging to the Editani, stands on the River Ebro, near to where the Rivers Guerva and Gallego fall into it, about 90 Miles from Tortosa to the North-West, 60 from the Confines of old Castile to the East, 70 from the Pyrenees to the South, and 160 from Valencia, to the North. It is the Capital Province, and was formerly the Residence of its Kings, who kept their Court in a Palace that stood without the City, which which serves for a Court of Inquisition. The Christians recover'd it from the Moors in the year 1118. was made a Metropolitan See by Pope John XXII. Ann. 1318. and is reckon'd one of the chief Cities of Spain. It is adorn'd with an University, defended by a strong Garrison, and is the place where the Supreme Court of Justice of that Province is held.

Zaica, Jacca, anciently (according to Protolomy) a Town in Hispania Tarraconensis, belonging to the Vascones, stands on the River Aragan, near the Foot of the Pyrenes, 64 Miles from Saragoza to the North. 32 from Huesca; and was as many from the Confines of France. It is thought to have been Built by Pompey the Great, and was once the Capital City of the County of Aragan. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Saragoza, and is defended by a naturally strong Castell.

Albarazin Lobetum, anciently (according to Protolomy) a Town in Hispania Tarraconensis, Inhabited by the Lobetani, is now a little Town, Situated on a Hill, the Foot of which is wash'd by the River Guadalaviar, on the Confines of New Castile, about 15 Miles from Teruel to the West. 42 from Cuenca to the North-East; and 80 from Saragoza to the South. It is said to be a very ancient Town, and was made an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Saragoza, in the year 1171.

Huesca, Osca, anciently (according to Protolomy) a Town in Hispania Tarraconensis, belonging to the Ilergetes, and Situated on a little River, about 30 Miles from Saragoza to the North-East; 24 from Jacca to the South; and about 20 from Balbastro to the West. It is now a little Town, but neat and well Inhabited, and is thought to be a very ancient one; there being a sort of an University there, Founded by Sertorius, (who was Killed here by Perpenna, and his Accomplies) for the Education of young Gentlemen of Spain, who were given as Hostages. It was recover'd from the Moors, Ann. 1094. and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Saragoza.

Tarazona, Turiaso anciently (according to Protolomy and Antoninus) a Town in Hispania Tarraconensis, Inhabited by the Celtiberi, stands on the River Queior, near the Frontiers of Old Castile, about 12 Miles from Tudela to the South-West; and 60 from Saragoza to the West. Afonso VIII. recover'd it from the Moors, Ann. 1010. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Saragoza.

Valencia, Valentia.

This Country, was anciently Inhabited by the Ede- tani and Contestani, is Bounded on the East with Catalonia, and the Mediterranean Sea; on the North with Aragan; on the West with New Castile, and the Kingdom of Murcia; and is divided into 3 Parts, viz. de Millares, which is the most Northerly; de Xucar, which is in the middle, and de Segura; which is the most Southerly. The Air in it is so temperate, that there one may be said to enjoy a perpetual Spring; which is the reason why the Soil for its Fer- tility may be said to be best in all Spain. The most considerable Towns in it are,

- Valencia.* } Xatia.
- Segorve.* } Elche.
- Orighuella.* } Alicant.

Valencia, Valentia, anciently a City in Hispania Tarraconensis, belonging to the Edetani, stands in a Fruitful and Pleasant Country, on the River Guadalaviar near the Mouth of it, into the Gulf of Valencia to the South-West; as many from Toledo to the East; about the same from Saragoza to the South; and 30 from Denia to the North. It was Built by Junius Brutus, in 816th year of the City of Rome. Roderigo Bivar, surnam'd El Cid, recover'd it from the Moors, in the year 1025. But after his Death, it was Retaken by them, till the year 1236. that James I. King of Aragan took it from them. In the year 1492. Pope Alexander VI. made it an Archbithoprick; whereas before it had been Suffragan to the See of Toledo. It is a Large, Noble, and Rich City, not yielding to any in Spain, except Madrid or Lisbon, for Neatness, and Number of Inhabitants. It is honour'd with the chief Court of Justice, and a flourishing University, and is the Residence of the King's Viceroy. There is no Garrison kept in it, be- cause the Citizens Guard themselves. Among the other Riches that are to be seen in the Cathedral Church, there is a Calice of Agat, which they say, is the same as our Saviour used at his last Supper with his Disciples; and several other Relicks, too tedious to be here Related.

Segorve, Segobriga. Geographers, and others, pre- tending to the skill of Antiquity, are not agreed in this matter: Some maintaining that a Village, call'd La Cabeza el Griego, or Iniesta, a Town hard by it, has the best Title to the ancient name Segobriga; but others, with more reason think, that that ancient Town stood where Segorve now stands, which is upon the River Morvedre, about 24 Miles from Valencia to the North; 15 from the Ruins of Saguntum, or Moraedre; as much from the Gulf of Valencia; and 63 from the Tortosa to the South-West. It is a little Town, and thinly Inhabited; but was made an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Toledo, in the time of King Bambas.

Orighuella, Orcelis, anciently (according to Protolomy) a Town belonging to the Basitani, in Hispania Tarraconensis, is now a small Town, and in no good condition; but Seated in a pleasant Valley, at the foot of the Mountains, upon the River Seguera, 12 Miles from the Town of Murcia to the East; 15 from the Gulf of Alicanti; and 72 from Valencia to the South. It is sometimes by later Authors call'd Orcila, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Valencia.

Xativa, Setabis, mention'd by Pliny and Protolomy, a Town in Hispania Tarraconensis, and sometimes call'd Augusta Valeria, stands on a little Hill near a Rivulet of the same name, about 27 Miles from Valencia to the South; and 18 from the Gulf of Valencia to the West. It is an ancient Town, and was long ago made an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Toledo, but is now very inconsiderable, and almost Ruinous.

Alicante, Alone, or Alone, mention'd by Mela and Protolomy, in Hispania Tarraconensis, stands on a Gulf of the same name, in the Mediterranean Sea, about 30 Miles from Murcia, to the North-East; 54 from Valencia to the South, and 42 from Carthagena to the North-East. It is a large and safe Harbour, de- fended by a strong Fort, Built by Philip II. which makes it a place of great Commerce and Trade, with all Nations in Europe, especially for good Wine and Fruits.

New Castile, Castella Nova.

This Country was anciently Inhabited by the Car- petani and Oretani, People of Hispania Tarraconen- sis, and is Bounded on the North with the Old Cas- tile; on the East with Aragan and Valencia; on the South with Murcia and Andalusia; and no West with the Province of Extremadura. It comprehends the South Part of the Kingdom of Castile, and is commonly call'd the Kingdom of Toledo, and is a very Fruitful and Plea-

Pleasant Country. It is divided into 3 Parts, viz. L' Algarria, which lies most Northerly, La Mancha, most Southerly, and La Sierra, which makes the East Part of it: And the most considerable Cities and Towns in it are, Madrid.	}	Siguenza.

Toledo.		Alcala.
Ciudad Real.		Calatrava.
Cuenca.

MADRID, Madritum, stands in the first division of this Country, call'd Algarvia, on the little River Manzanares, about 15 Miles from Alcala; 36 from Toledo to the North, and 120 from Burgos to the South. Lat. 40 25. Long. 13. 45. It is said to have rise from the Ruins of Mania Carpetanorum, now called Villa Mantua, about 2 Miles from it, and is at present a flourishing City. It stands on a little height, upon an uneven Foundation, and has been look'd on as the Capital City of Spain, ever since Philip II. and his Successors made it their ordinary Residence. The Air about it is very wholesom, inasmuch that the Emperor Charles V. is said to have been cur'd of an Ague by it. Some Spaniards have represented it as a City as big as Paris, but this is what no body, especially a Frenchman will allow; For Madrid, including all the Gardens and Suburbs, is said not to be above 15600. common Paces in the Compass; whereas the Circuit of Paris, together with its Suburbs, is said (by Frenchmen) to be about 26850. And altho' the foresaid little River, that runs by ite almost dry in Summer; yet Philip II. thought fit to Build a Bridge over it, at so great Charge, that some were pleas'd to say, that His Catholic Majesty would be oblig'd to Sell the Bridge to Buy Water for the River. The Streets of this City are for the most part ill laid, and very dirty, because they throw our all their Nastiness into 'em. The Houses generally, are but indifferently Built, and the first Floor belongs to the King, unless the Proprietor Buys it of him, which many can't afford to do: And if one happens now and then to meet with a fine House, he may certainly conclude, that it has been Built by some Viceroy or Governor, after he has return'd from his gainful Post. The Place Major, is the finest in all the City, being environ'd with the stateliest Houses in it, 6 or 7 Stories high, but without Cimetry or Order, and loaded with Balconies, from whence they may see the Bull Baiting, on certain Festival Days. The Royal Palace is very Spacious, but its Magnificence is not proportionable to the Grandeur of the King of Spain; and one may venture to say, that there are Subjects in Madrid, that have more convenient Lodgings, and better Furnish'd than His Catholic Majesty has. The Cathedral Church is a Magnificent Building: And the Altar of the Blessed Virgins Chappel, and the Rails are of Massy Silver; and there is to be seen a Statue of the Virgin, which St. James (as they say) brought from the Holy Land.

Besides the Royal Palace in Madrid, the King has two other that ought not to be quite omitted, viz. Aranjuez and the Escorial; the former of which one of the most delightful Situations in all Castile, between the Rivers Tejo and Xarama, which meet below it. Within the Apartments there is hardly any thing that's very fine, except some pieces of Painting; but all the Beauty and Greatness is within the Gardens and Park, where there are several long and very fine Walks, a great number of rate Brass Statues and Jetteda's.

The Escorial, Scorial or Escorial, is the name of a Village on the Confines of Old Castile, about 20 Miles from Madrid, near to which King Philip II. Built a noble Monastery, for the Order of St. Jerom, with a stately Church, in honour of St. Lawrence, on whose day his Generals obtain'd a Signal Victory at St. Quintin, over the French, in the year 1557. It was begun the 23d April, 1563. and the Work continu'd and carry'd on till year 1584. It is of a square figure, each side being 250 Paces; which makes the Circuit of it 1000. and has all the Splendour, Richness and Ornament that was requir'd to make it Great and Magnificent. Philip IV. augment-ed the Church by adding to it a Chappel, for a Burying-place for the Kings and Queens of Spain; which is call'd the Pantheon, because it is Built after the manner of that of Rome. It is 35 Feet Diameter, and all cover'd over with Black Marble. But it is to be observ'd, that not all the Kings and Queens of Spain are honour'd with this Burial place, but only such of them as give a Successor to the Crown; and therefore the late Queen is laid in another Vault apart: And if this Rule is observ'd, 'tis very like his present Majesty King Charles II. will be sent to keep her Company.

Toledo, Toletum, anciently (according to Ptolomy) the Capital City of the Carpetani, in Hispania Tarraconensis, stands almost in the middle of Spain, for the most part upon an ascent; and is distant 48 Miles from Madrid to the South; 190 from Burgos, 168 from Cordoba, 200 from Valencia to the West; and about 300 from Lisbon. Three Parts in four (says Mariana) are encompass'd by the River Tagus; which cou'd up betwixt high Banks, runs in very narrow Channels among the Rocks. The other part which is on a high and steep Ascent, was enclos'd with the ancient Roman Wall, not so large as that of Wamba, the Ruins of it are still (says he) to be seen in the Market-place of Xocochover, and at the Gate del Hierro. It was (as we have said) at first the Capital City of the Carpetani, and afterwards the Residence of the Gothic Kings, and a large Metropolis, when S. Eugenius the Martyr, first enlighten'd it with the Christian Faith; but it was taken by the Saracens, in the year 705. and became the Seat of the Moorish Kings, till the year 1085, that Alonso King of Castile, drove them out and recover'd it. Altho' Madrid pretends to be the Capital City, by reason of the King's Residing there; yet in the Assembly of the Estates, Toledo assumes the first Rank, while Madrid takes place only as a Burrough. It is a large City, divided into 3 Parts, call'd Barrio's and contains 38 Monasteries, for both Sexes; but it is in a decaying condition, and is said now not to contain above 8000 Inhabitants. Its Diocess is very large, comprehending 800 parochial Churches; and the Archbishop assumes the Title of Primate of Spain: And his yearly Revenue amounts to 300000 Ducats. This City is famous for the great number of Councils that were held in it, which were above 20. On the North side of the City, without the Walls, are to be seen some Vestigia, of an ancient Theatre: And here is also to be seen the remains of a Machine, which the Moors made long ago, for raising the Water of the Tejo to a height, from whence it was convey'd into the several parts of the City; but through the negligence of the Spaniards it is quite Ruin'd. The Cathedral Church is one of the most Magnificent Structures of that kind in all Spain, and its Treasury is full of inestimable Riches; among the rest, a Mantle of the Blessed Virgin, cover'd over with Pearl, and Bordred with Diamonds, Rubies, and Emeralds. About a Mile and a half from the City, are to be seen the Ruins of the Enchanted Tower, which King Rodrigo caused to be open'd, and entred, and where he saw strange things, in the days of Tore; and some Miles further is to be seen the Forrest of the Hundred Maids, call'd La Debeffa de las cien Donzellas; in which the Moors used to keep the Hundred Maids, which they had oblig'd the Spaniards to pay them as a Tribute, till they should have an opportunity to send them over to Africk.

Ciudad Reale, otherwise call'd, el Pozuelo, Civitas Regia, is a little Town about 10 Miles from Calatrava, but is so inconsiderable, and in such a decaying State, that we have nothing more to say concerning it.

Cuenca, Concha, is the Chief Town in that part of this Province, which is call'd La Sierra, Situated among Mountains, on the Acent of a Hill, on the River Xucar, where the Rivulet Guefar runs into it, about 30 Miles from the Confines of Aragon to the West; and near 80 from Toledo to the East. It was Built by the Goths, from the Ruins of a Neighbouring Town, call'd Valeria, for which it is often taken. The Spaniards recover'd it from the Moors, in the year 1177. And it is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Toledo.

Segunza, Seguntia, anciently (according to Livy and Pliny) a Town in Hispania Tarraconensis, belong to the Celtiberi, stands on a little height, at the Foot of the Mountain Atienza, about 24 Miles from the Confines of Aragon; 90 from Saragosa to the West; and near 100 from Toledo to the North-West. Ambrosius Moralis thinks, that not this Town, but not another call'd Villa Vieja, about a Mile from it, stands in the room of Seguntia, and if so, then this Town must have only risen from the Ruins of it. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Toledo, and is Fortified with a Wall and Castle, hard by which the River Henares runs.

Alcala de Henares, Complutum, stands in a Plain, on the River Henares, near 20 Miles from Madrid; 45 from Toledo; and not far from the Source of the Tajo. During the Gothick Empire in Spain, it was an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Toledo, and in the time of King Aloiso the Wise, it was call'd Alcala S. Justi, because that Saint suffer'd Martyrdom without the Walls of it. Cardinal Francis Ximenes, Archbishop of Toledo, Founded an University there, after the manner of that of Paris, in the year 1517. which among other things, has been famous for the Biblia Complutensia Polyglotta, which was Printed there, at the Charges of the foresaid Bishop.

Calatrava, Calatrava, which gives name to the Country about, stands on the River Guardiana, about 14 Miles from its Source, and 50 Miles South from Toledo. It owes its rise to the Ruins of the ancient Calatrava, or Oretum, about 6 Miles from it. In the year 1130. it was taken after a long Siege, from the Moors, and given to the Archbishop of Toledo; who gave it to the Knights Templers; but these not being able to defend it against the Moors, restor'd it to the King, who could find no body that would undertake to keep it, except two Cistercian Monks; who were mightily commended for their undertaking, and assist'd with Men and Money by the Archbishop, and the People in the Country about, at his persuasion. And many having joynd the Monks for the defence of this Place, was the Original of the Knights of Calatrava, the King having given the Town to the Cistercians for ever: And the Order was confirm'd by a Bull of Alexander III. Ann. 1164. 6 years after that brave undertaking of the Monks.

Esvemadura, Extramadura.

This Country, which makes the South part of the Kingdom of Leon, is Bounded on the North with Leon, on the South with Andalusia; on the West with Portugal; and on the East with New Castile. It is divided into 3 Parts, viz. Tra los Guadiana, that lies to the North; entre Tojo e Guadiana in the middle and Tra los Tajo to the South: And the most considerable Towns in it are,

Alcantara.	} Placentia.
Bajadoz.
Merida.
	} Trugilla.
	} Medelin.

Alcantara, Norba Caesarea, a Town anciently (according to Pliny) in Lusitania, stands on the River Tajo, 120 Miles from Toledo to the West, 9 Miles from the Confines of Portugal to the East, and 120 from Salamanca to the South. It is a little Town, but has been Fortified in these latter times, to bridle the Incursions of the Portugueses. It has the advantage of a noble Bridge over the Tajo, said to have been Built by Trajan, 670 Foot long, 28 broad, and 200 high. This Town was recover'd from the Moors, by King Aloiso VIII. Ann. 1013. and given to the Knights of Calatrava, for good services to be done against the Enemy.

Bajadoz, Pax Augusta, which Pliny calls Colonia Pacensis, and Srabo Paxaugusta, is the Chief Town of this Province, and a large and Fortified one, with a Castel lately Built, standing on the River Guadiana, (over which it has a stone Bridge) on the Confines of Portugal, 45 Miles South from Alcantara. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Compostella; and was in vain Besieg'd by the Portugueses in the year 1658.

Merida, Emerita, or Augusta Emerita, anciently the Capital City of Hispania Lusitania, stands 27 Miles from Bajadoz to the East; 70 from Sevil to the North; and 40 from Alcantara to the South. It is said to have been Built by Augustus Caesar, and bestow'd by him on his invalid Soldiers. It is now but a little Town, under the superiority of the Knights of St. James de Spatba; and its Archiepiscopal See was transferr'd to Compostella, by Pope Celixtus II. Ann. 1122.

Placentia, Placentia, is Situated in a Plain, on the River Xerte, about 36 Miles from Coria to the East; 60 from Toledo to the West, 78 from Salamanca to the South; and 20 from the River Tage to the North. It sprung from the Ruins of Deobriga, a Town in Lusitania, belonging to the Vertones; And was Built in the year 1180. by Aloiso VIII. and is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Compostella.

Medelin, Metallinum, which Pliny calls Metallensis Colonia, stands on the River Guadiana, about 56 Miles from Bajadoz to the East; and 15 from Merida. A little above it there is a stately stone Bridge over the Guadiana; which River some have reported to come above ground near this place, after it had hid it self for the space of 20 Miles; but these Authors have either dream'd it, or been mightily misinform'd.

Andalusia, Vandalitia.

Andalusia, properly so call'd, makes up the greatest part of the ancient Betica; and is Bounded on the North with Extramadura, and New Castile; on the

the East, with the Kingdom of Granada; on the West, with Portugal; and on the South, with the Ocean, and the Mediterranean Sea, and is about 140 Miles long, and 150 broad. The Soil of this Country may justly be call'd the best in Spain; since it produces plenty of all Things that grow in any part of that Kingdom; and its Pasturage, among other Beasts, nourishes the famous Spanish Horses, call'd Gennets, so much esteem'd over all Europe. And altho' some of the Mountains in it are barren, because of the excessive Heat of the Climate; yet there are found within them, Mines of Silver, Brass, Lead, Quick-Silver, and Vermilion. Those who speak of the excessive Jealousie of the Spaniards, say, That it reigns most in this Country; for the Wives, for the most part, are bred up to that degree of Submission, that they serve their Husbands at Table, altho' they have abundance of Servants to do it for them; which unreasonable Treatment often provokes the Women, who possibly might otherwise be honest enough, to plant a pair of Horns on their Husband's Head, whenever a fit Opportunity offers. Most part of the Domestick Servants in this Country are Christian Slaves, which is directly opposite to the Laws of Christianity; which the Spaniards are not over observant of, when their Avarice, Ambition, or Luxury must be served. The Moors did formerly establish two little Kingdoms in this Country, viz. those of Cordoua and Sevilla; which Ferdinand III. annexed to the Kingdom of Castile, when he drove the Moors into Granada. The most considerable Towns in this Province, are,

Sevilla.		Cadix.
Xeres de la Frontera.		Fuen.
Ecija.		Ubeda.
Baeca.		Medina.
Gibraltar.		Sidonia.
Cordoua.		Arcos.

Sevilla or Sevil, Hispalis, the Capital City, anciently, of Hispania Betica, according to Pliny; who calls it also Colonia Romulensis, is now the chief City of Andalusia, properly so call'd, or the Lower. In the utmost part of Spain (says Mariana) towards the West, stands the City of Sevil, the Metropolis of Andalusia; and for Riches, may be reckoned the chiefest in Europe. Its Strength consists not only in the Walls, but the number of Inhabitants, its Beauty in the numerous, stately Buildings, and splendor of the People. Betwixt this City, which is on the left Hand, and a Suburb call'd Triana, on the right, runs the River Guadalquivir, hemmed in with high Keys, and carrying Water enough for Ships of great Burden; which render it commodious, for the Trade of the Ocean and Mediterranean. A Bridge of Wood built upon Boats, joins the Suburb to the City. In the City is the old Palace, inhabited by the ancient Kings; in the Suburb, facing the East, is another stately Royal House. Near the River stands a Tower, for the excellency of its Workmanship, commonly call'd the Golden Tower, Near the Cathedral, is another Tower of Brick, exceeding all the others; being 60 Yards in breadth, and four times that high. So far this famous Historian. This City, notwithstanding the great Trade of Cadix, is very considerable, especially by reason that all the Gold and Silver that comes from the Indies for Spain, is unloaded there; and there is the General Mint, for Coyning the Pieces, which the Inhabitants call, la Casa de la Contratacion de las Indias. There is also in this City a famous University, and a magnificent Cathedral, 150 Paces long, and 100 broad, where is to be seen the Tomb of Ferdinand III. who drove the Moors out of Sevil, 22 Decemb. 1248. after a Siege of sixteen Months; these Infidels having been Matters of it for the space of 534 Years. It is the only place in Spain, except Segovia, where Gold is coin'd. It is an Archbishopicopal See, and is distant, 48 Miles from the Shoar of the Ocean, to the East; 66 from Cordoua, 108 from Granada, 165 from Lisbon, and as many from Toledo, to the South.

Baexa, Bitia, anciently a Town (according to Pliny) in Hispania Betica, and formerly call'd Orbs Betica, is now a pretty large Town, situated on a Hill, in the most eastern parts of the Province, 3 Miles from the River Guadalquivir, to the North; 50 East from Cordoua, 120 South from Toledo, and 40 North from Granada. It was anciently a Colony of the Romans, and was recovered by the Christians, in the time of Ferdinand, King of Castile, Ann. 1227. It has an University, founded in the Year 1538. and was formerly an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Toledo; but in the Year 1249. it was united with that of Jaen, by Pope Innocent IV.

Gibraltar, Calpe, is a little fortified Town, with a large Harbour, in the Streights of that name, standing at the Foot of a steep Hill that terminates towards the Sea in a Plain, and juts out into the Sea for about 2 Miles, and is call'd one of Hercules's Pillars, or Ne plus ultra, over against Abyle, or la Sierra de las Monas, in Africk, the other Pillar; from which the Town is distant, 15 Miles to the North; 40 from Tangier; 48 from Cadix to the South East, and 4 from the Ruins of Heraclea, now call'd Gibraltar Vieja. At the end of the foresaid Plain, there is a Chappel dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, which they call, Nuestra Seneca d' Europa; and over against it, on the top of the other Hill in Africk, there is another Chappel, call'd Nuestra Sennora de Africa.

Cordoua, Corduba, anciently a famous City in Hispania Betica, and the Birth-place of Seneca and Lucan, is seated (as Mariana describes it) almost in the midst of Andalusia, in a Plain, at the Foot of Sierra Morena. On the left hand it is watered by the River Guadalquivir; which having received many other Streams is there Navigable. The City lying along the Bank of the River, makes a long Square. Whil't the Moors possess'd it, much of its beauty was lost, they being not at all curious in Architecture. Formerly it had 5 Gates, now 7. The Suburbs are as great as a good City, especially that which is call'd Axarquia, on the Bank of the River, without the East-Gate, which is encompassed with a Wall, and joins to the City. The King's Palace is on the West side, shut up within a particular Wall. On the River is a beautiful Bridge, the Foot of which reaches to the Cathedral. It was formerly call'd Colonia Patricia, because of the great number of Nobility that lived there. All the Country round about it is fruitful and pleasant, and even the Mountains bear Vines, Olives, and other sorts of Trees. Thus far the Historian. Whil't the Moors possess'd this City, they built a noble Mosque, the best they had next to that at Mecca. It had 24 Gates; it was 600 Foot long, and 50 broad; and was supported by 850 Columns of black Marble, about a Foot and a half a half diameter; and was afterwards turned into the Cathedral Church. This City stands in the midst between Granada to the East, and Sevil to the West, about 60 Miles from either, 126 from the Streights of Gibraltar, and 24 from Ecija, to the East, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Sevil.

The Island of Golding, Cadix, Gades, lies in the Atlantick Ocean, between the Mouth of the River Guadalquivir and the Streights of Gibraltar, and is called by Prology, Gadita; by Strabo, Erythia, and in the most ancient Times, Carimsa. It is about 12 Miles long, lying East and West, but was formerly both longer and broader. It lies off the Coast of Andalusia, and so near to it, that it is joined to it by a Bridge, call'd, la Puente de Suaco. The Gulf of Cadix is about 12 Leagues in Circuit, and 2 broad; and is defended by several strong Forts; the principal of which are those call'd, Puntal and Maragorda, built on the Shoar, at the narrowest place of the Gulf. The Ports of St. Mary and Cadix, are the best and most frequented in all the Bay; and 'tis in the latter of these where the Gallions, designed for the Indies, do rendezvous. It was built by the Tyrians, and was taken and plundered (as was the whole Island) by the English, under the Command of Drake, in the Year 1596. It is now a strong and populous Place, and a great Mart-Town, in the West side of the Island, about 70 Miles from Sevil, to the South; 26 from the Mouth of the River Guadalquivir, and 56 from Gibraltar to the North West. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Sevil.

Javn, Giumum, stands at the Foot of the Mountains, call'd Sufanna, about 8 Miles from the River Guadalbollen, 36 from Granada, to the North; 12 from the Guadalquivir; and 10 from Bacza, to the South. It was recovered from the Moors, by King Ferdinand, in the Year 1246. and two Years after erected into a Bishoprick, under the Archbishop of Toledo.

Medina Sidonia, a Town mentioned by Prology, in Hispania Batica, situated on a High, 27 Miles from Cadix, to the East; 60 from Sevil, to the South; and 12 from the Shoar. It has the Title of a Dukedom, and was once an Episcopal See.

Arcos, Arcensium Colonia, anciently a Town in Hispania Batica, is now a pretty near Town with a Castle, situated on a high and steep Rock, on the River Guadalete; 16 Miles from Xera de la Frontera, to the East; 48 from Sevil, to the South; 20 from Medina Sidonia, and 70 from Gibraltar.

MURCIA, Murcia, or Regnum Murcianum.

This Country, as most Authors think, was anciently inhabited by the Bastirani, and whilst it was a Kingdom, was of large Extent, but is now bounded, on the North, with New Castile; on the East, with the Kingdom of Valencia; on the West, with that of Granada; and on the South, with the Mediterranean Sea, and the Gulf of Cartagena. It has the Title of a Kingdom, because it was once so, under the Moors, for many Years. It owes its name to its Capital City, and is but a little Province, not above 70 Miles long, and 60 broad. It is a Mountainous Country, but produces abundance of Fruits of several sorts, as, Oranges, Citrons, Olives, and Mulberry-Trees, for the nourishing of Silk-Worms, which turn to a very good account to the Inhabitants; as also Rocks of Allum, Amethyst, and Cassidony; but Corn and Wine is not so plentiful in this Country. The Towns of greatest note in it are, Murcia. } Caravaca.

Cartagena. } Alinacaren.
Lorca. }

Murcia, Murcia, anciently call'd Ve gilia, is the Capital City of this Province, and stands in a delightful Plain, on the River Segura, on the Confines of Valencia, 9 Miles from Orieknella, to the West; and 18 from Cartagena, to the North. It is a pretty large and populous Town, and was recovered from the Moors, by Afonso X. King of Castile, Ann. 1265. It used to have a great Trade in Silk, but the only Thing that is very remarkable about it, besides its pleasant Situation and delightful Gardens, is the famous Stair-Cafe of the Scepter, where, they say, a Coach drawn by Horses or Mules may go up.

Cartagena, Cartago Nova, anciently (according to Prology) a City in Hispania Tarraconensis, belonging to the Contestani, said to be built by Asdubal, General of the Cartaginian Army, a little before the second Punick War, in a Peninsula, about 20 Miles from Murcia, to the South; as many from the Promontory, call'd, el Cabo de Pales, to the West; and 96 from Valencia, to the South. It was formerly one of the most considerable Towns in all Spain, and gave name to the adjacent Country; and Laws, as 'tis reported, to 62 several sorts of People. It was first taken by Scipio the same day he came before it, then destroyed by the Vandals, and next by the Goths, who raz'd it to the Ground. After which it lay buried in its own Rubbish, until the Year 1570. that Philip II. King of Spain, caus'd it to be re-built. It has the advantage of one of the best Harbours in all Spain, and is defended with a strong Fort; and is remarkable for the great quantity of Mackrel that are catch'd there, by reason of which fishing the neighbouring Island is call'd Scombraria. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Toledo; but its Bishop has resided at Murcia ever since the Year 1291.

Caravaca, Caravaca, call'd Cruz de Caravaca, is a little Town with a Castle, standing on the River Segura, near the Confines of New Castile, and situated among Mountains; and remarkable only for a Story that's told, and believed by such as easily swallow down such Things, of a Cross that's kept there, which, they say, fell down from Heaven, whilst a Priest was about to administer his Office before a Moorish King, on the 3d day of May, 1231.

Lorca, Eliocarta, anciently (according to Antonimus) possessed by the Bastetani, in Hispania Tarraconensis, and otherwise call'd Ilorcia, stands on the River Guadalentin, near the Confines of Granada, about 40 Miles from the Sea, and the Gulf of Cartagena; as many from Baza, to the East; and 48 from Murcia, to the West. It is a little Town, and was the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Toledo, in the time of the Gothish Empire in Spain, but its See was afterwards united with that of Cartagena.

GRANADA, Granata, or Granatense Regnum.

This Country, which comprehends the East part of Betica, and is properly the Highler Andalusia, has has its modern name from its Capital City; and is bounded, on the North and West, with Andalusia, properly so call'd; on the East, with the Kingdom of Murcia; and on the South, with the Mediterranean Sea. It is surrounded with Mountains, which makes the entry to it very difficult, especially, about Mancha, the Country of the valiant Don Quixote; for there is but one Passage cut through a high Mountain, about 15 Miles long, and not above four Yards broad. Ever since King Philip III. drove the Moors out of this Country, it has lain desert and uncultivated, although the Soil is very good and fertile. It is about 220 Miles long, and not above 90 broad, at its greatest breadth, and the most considerable Towns in it are, Granada. } Malaga.

 Guadix. } Ronda.
 Almeria. } Baza.

Granada, Granata, is the Capital City of this Province; which, (as Mariana describes it) by reason of its Situation, Largeness, Forts, Walls, and Bulwarks, seems impregnable. On the West-side of it is a large Plain, 15 Leagues in Compass, pleasant and fruitful, as well of its own Nature, as by reason of the Blood that has been there shed for many Years, which made it far; besides 36 Springs running down the Mountains, do render it more beautiful and rich than can easily be imagined. On the East of it is the Mountain Elvira, where formerly stood the City Liberis, as appears by the name Elvira. The snowy Mountain, call'd Sierra Nevada, lies on the South side of it, and runs down as far as the Mediterranean Sea. The City it self is seated partly upon the Plain, and partly upon two Hills; betwixt them runs the River Darro, which, as soon as out of the City, mixes with, and loses its name in the River Xenil, that runs quite a-cross the Plain in length. Between the two Castles, Alhambra and Albaizin, lies the City. The Suburb, call'd Churra, and the Street de las Gomeles, is on the side of Alhambra, on the other side the Street, Elvira, and the Ascent Xenete most ill contrived, the Streets narrow and crooked, because the Moors were nothing curious in their Houses. Thus it was in this native and famous Historian's days, to whom we refer the Reader for a more particular Account and Description of it. The Arsenal of Granada is one of the best furnish'd in all Spain; full of Arms, ancient and modern, and Statues of all sorts of Metal. The City it self, as it is one of the greatest, so it is one of the best built Cities in Spain, enclosed with good Walls, with a hundred and thirty Towers. It has eighteen Gates, and five great Places, and one that would walk round it must spend four hours before he can end his Journey. Towards the Plain, where the access is easiest, stands the Cathedral, once a Moorish Mosque, nothing curious, now beautiful and rich: And near the Church is the great Market-Place, call'd Bavarambla, 200 Foot broad, and three times as long. After the Moors had possess'd this City, together with the little Kingdom whose Capital it is, for the space of 700 Years, Ferdinand the Catholic, in the Year 1492. drove them thence and out of all Spain, together with 124000 Jews. It is commonly represented, as divided into 4 Parts, viz. Granada, Alhambra, Allaizin, and Antiquerula; and is distant, about 100 Miles from Sevil, to the East; as many from Murcia to the West, and 38 from Jaen to the South, and 45 from the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea. It was made an Archiepiscopal See by Pope Alexander VI. shortly after it was recovered from the Moors, and the University was founded by King Ferdinand.

Guadix, Acci, anciently a considerable Roman Colony, but now of no great Note, stands at the Foot of the Mountains, near the River Fardes, 30 Miles from Jaen, to the South West; 27 from Granada, to the East; 20 from Baza; and 50 from Almeria, to the North. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Sevil, and was taken from the Moors by King Ferdinand V. Ann. 1489.

Almeria, Almeria, stands on the Coast of this Province on the Mediterranean Sea, having the advantage of a large and good Harbour, about 60 Miles from Granada, 45 from Guadix; and between the Promontory, call'd el Cabo de Gates, to the East, and Adra to the West, 20 Miles from either. It has its name from Amelicus, a Gothish King, who ruled Spain, about the Year 515. It was taken from the Moors, by Aloiso, King of Aragon, in the Year 1147. and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Granada; Ctesiphon, one of St. James the Apostle's Disciples, having been, as they say, first Bishop of it.

Malaga, Malaca, or Malcha, stands in a Plain on the Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, about 70 Miles from Sevil, to the South East; as many from Ca-dix, to the East; 60 from the Straights of Gibraltar, and 64 from Granada. It was built by the Phenicians, and, after a long Siege, was taken by Ferdinand and Isabella, in the Year 1487. It is a famous Mart-Town, especially for the Exportation of Wine, and other Goods, from Granada and the adjacent Country. It has a Mole 570 Paces long, and 20 broad, defended by two Castles, whereof one commands the other, call'd el Alcazaba and Gibralfaro; and between which there is a Passage betwixt two Walls. It is the Armory and Outworks of all Spain, against any Attempts from Africk: And is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Granada.

Ronda, is a little, but pretty near Town, standing on the Confines of Andalusia, near the River Guadiaro, and not far from two others, viz. Goza and Guadalquivirejo; about 36 Miles from Gibraltar, to the North; and almost 40 from Malaga, to the West. It rose from the Ruins of the ancient Arunda, which is now call'd Ronda la Vieja, and is the most considerable Town of the little Country about it, call'd la Serrana de Ronda.

The Isles of Majorca, Minorca, &c.

The Islands of Majorca and Minorca were anciently call'd Baleares and Balearides, probably from the Greek word βάλλω, to throw, because the Inhabitants were wonderfully dexterous at throwing Darts and such like. They were also call'd Gymnesse by the Grecians, because the Inhabitants are said to have gone naked. They lived by Piracy, and used to assist the Carthaginians against the Romans till about 20 Years after the third Punic War, that Metellus (who was for that reason called Balearius, subdued them. Afterwards the Moors, from Africk, invaded, and made themselves Masters of them, and having added Veica, to the Isles of Majorca and Minorca, erected the little Kingdom of Majorca; which lasted till the Year 1230. that James, King of Aragon, recovered them from the Moors, and gave them to his second Son; but they were afterwards united to the Kingdom of Aragon, and are now Subject to the King of Spain, as King of Aragon.

The Island of Majorca (or Malorca, by the Inhabitants) lyes on the Mediterranean Sea, about 70 Miles from the Coast of Valencia, between 20 and 21 deg. Longitude, and 38. deg. 40. min. and 40 deg. Latitude, and between the Island Minorca, to the East, and Ivica to the West. It is, according to Baudrand and others 120 Miles in Compass: And, as Mariana describes it, its Figure is Square, the four Angles pointing to the four Parts of the World. In the West side (says this Historian) is the Port Palumbaria, and opposite to it, the Island Dragoneira. Cape Selinus looks towards the South, and in the Mid-way betwixt it and the Port, is seated the Principal City, call'd as well as the Island, Majorca. The Capes Piedra and St Vincent, Point to the East and North: Thus far he. The ancient Inhabitants of this Island, as well as these of Minorca are said to have been so Plagued with Hares and Rabbits, who destroy'd all their Corn, that they were forced to beg of the Emperor Augustus, that he would send them some of his Troops to assist them against those formidable Enemies. The only Town of any note in this Island is Majorca.

Majorca, or Malorca, stands on the West side of the Island, and has the advantage of a good Harbour. It is the Residence of the Spanish Viceroy, or Governor of these Isles, and the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of Tarragona; and the Inhabitants have the Reputation of the best Privateers in the Mediterranean.

The Island of MINORCA, Minorica, or Balearis Minor, lyes 30 Miles to the East from Majorca, between 39 deg. 30 min. and 40 deg. Latitude, and 21 deg. 15. min. and 22 deg Longitude; Its greatest length being 36 Miles, and greatest breadth 27. and in Compass 100, according to some, tho' Baudrand and others, allow it to be in Circuit only 56. It abounds in Cattle, especially great Mules. The Town of greatest note in it is Citadella.

Citadella, thought to be the same with the ancient Janna, which is mentioned by Ptolomy and Mela, stands on the West side of the Island, over against Majorca, and has a pretty large Harbour, with some fort of Fortifications; but not near so considerable as the Town of Majorca.

The Island of IVICA, Ebusus, is one of the two Pityuse, and was formerly a part of the Kingdom of Majorca. It lyes between the Island of Majorca, which is distant 48 Miles from it to the East; and the Coast of Valencia, which is 60 Miles from it to the West; and between 38 deg. 30 min and 39 deg. Latitude; and between 19 and 20 deg. Longitude. Its circuit (according to Baudrand, who finds fault with others who allow much more) is only 20 Miles or 5 Spanish Leagues; but Scamler Geographers say, it is 30 Miles long, 18 broad, and 80 in circuit. It produces Corn, Wine, Fruits, and Salt in great abundance; and tho' it be a very Woody Country, there is no kind of Veromous Creatures to be seen in it. The only Town in this Isle that deserves to be taken notice of is Ivica, which stands on the South Coast of it, and has the advantage of a pretty good Harbour.

The Island of FORMENTERA, is the other of the Pityuse, and lyes about 4 Miles to the Southward of Ivica; but it is so full of Serpents, that no Body can live in it. And if this proceeds from the Nature of the Soil, it must be very much different from that of these other three Islands where no such Creatures are said to be found. There are some who say, that the first Inhabitants of Majorca, Minorca, and Ivica, Transported all the Serpents that were in these Islands to Formentera. because, according to their opinions, they ought not to kill any living Creature; for fear the Soul of some of their Ancestors might be lodg'd within them: but the Reader may believe as much of this Story as he shall think fit.

There are a great many little Islands scattered up and down about Ivica; but they are so inconsiderable, that they hardly deserve a particular Description, and therefore we shall only Name some of them, for the sake of those who may have occasion to Sail that way. To begin at the most Easterly of them, there is the Isleta Negra, and Isleta de los Abogados; and nearer the Coast, where the Salt is Ship'd, Isla de la Esponja; near Fort St. George, la Isla de los Ratones, and a little way from the Shoar two other, call'd de los Pores; near the Fort of Ivica, La Isla del Escollo Negro, and del Bixete; and somewhat further from the Shoar, two little Islands, call'd de los Dardos, and el Escollo Dorado; and next to these, Borafuego, and de los Conejos, Isla de Cabo Librel. La Isla de la Punta del Arabi, Tago Mago; and toward the South, two Islands call'd La dos Hormigas, Balanzat, Las Isla Murada, then the four call'd, Las Bladas, and several others, which are hardly worth mentioning.

The Kingdom of Portugal, Portugallia.

By Rob. Falconer.

Consult the Map of Spain.

THE Ancient Lusitania, (which was one of the three Parts into which Spain was divided by the Romans) comprehended the greatest part of that which is now call'd the Kingdom of Portugal, a part of Old, and some of New-Castile; and was Bounded on the North with the River Durius, or Douro, on the West with the Ocean, on the East with Hispania Tarraconensis, and on the South with the River Anas or Guidiana. So that altho' the modern Portugal is taken for the ancient Lusitania by the Generality of Authors, it is evident that their Bounds are not the same; since all Portugal is not comprehended within the ancient Lusitania, nor this within the modern Bounds of that; altho' the most part of Lusitania lyes within Portugal. For all the Ineraminis Province, or the Country commonly call'd entre Douro e Minho, was without Lusitania; and that part of Lusitania which lay next to Tarraconensis (now call'd Extremadura) is not a part of Portugal; which is bounded, on the West with the Atlantick Ocean; and on the South with the same, if you take in Algarve, which is United to this Kingdom; on the North with Gallicia; and on the East with Leon, Estramadura and Andalusia; and lyes between 36 deg. 36 min. and 42 deg. Latitude; and between 8 and 12 deg. Longitude.

Concerning the Soil of this Country, as Portugal is not very large, so neither is it very Fruitful, the Inhabitants living most upon such Corn as is imported: Yet is the Country full of Cities and Towns, and has a great many Commodious Sea-Ports. The Commodities of the Growth of Portugal, fit for Exportation (as Puffendorf observes) are Salt, of which a great quantity is from Seubal or St. Hubez, Transported into the Northern Countries: As also Oil, some Wine, and all sorts of Fruits. The Silver Mine call'd Guacaldane, is said to be of the yearly value of 178 Quentos of Silver (each Quento amounting to 2673 Ducats, 8 Reals, and 26 Marvedoes.)

We shall not trouble the Reader with the various and tedious Conjectures that are about the ancient and modern Names of this Country; since 'tis no great Matter whether it was called Lusitania, from Lysus and Lysas, two Fabulous Companions of Bacchus, or from the Lusitani who Inhabited it; or whether the Modern Name of Portugal or Portugallia, comes from Portus Cale, the Latin Name of O Porto, or from Portus Gallorum, because the French frequented this Harbour very much while the rest were in the possession of the Moors.

Concerning the Origin of this Kingdom, we shall refer the Reader to our Account of Spain for the first Inhabitants, and more ancient State of this Kingdom, and here only put him in mind, That the Province, which the Romans call'd Lusitania, fell, with the rest of Spain, under the last Gothic King Roderick, into the hands of the Moors; who were in Possession of it for a long time; till the year 1093, that Alonso I. King of Castile and Leon, making all possible preparations against the Moors, and craving also the Assistance of Foreign Princes, and others who would Signalize themselves in this War; among others who came, was one Henry, whom some will have to be Descended of the House of Burgundy, and make him a younger Son of Robert Duke of Burgundy, whose Father was Robert King of France, Son of Hugh Capet: Others derive his Pedigree from the House of Lorain, and say that he was call'd a Burgundian, because he was Born at Besancon. But whether the former or latter of these be the truer Account, this is certain, that Henry did so distinguish himself on this occasion, that Alonso thought fit to Reward his Valour by giving him in Marriage Theresa his Natural Daughter, together with all that part of Portugal which was then in the Possession of the Christians, comprehending that part of the Country where are the Cities of Braga, Coimbra, Visco, Lamego, and Porto, as also that Tract of Ground which is now call'd Tra los Montes; with full Power to Conquer the rest of that Country, as far as the River Guadiana, and to keep it under his Jurisdiction; upon condition only, that he should be a Vassal of Spain, repair to the Dyets of the Kingdom, and be obliged to Serve in the Wars with 300 Horse. His Son Alonso I. of Portugal, defeated the Castilians in a Battle, by which Victory he pretended to have freed himself from the Spanish Subjection; and having undertaken an Expedition against King Ismar, (whose Dominions lay on the other side of the Tajo; assum'd the Title of King, and defeated Ismar, with four other little Moorish Kings, who had join'd in Confederacy with him: And afterwards took a great many Cities from the Moors, particularly Lisbon, in the year 1147. Of his Race were the next Succeeding eight Kings; Ferdinand, who died Ann. 1383; was the last of the true Race of the Kings of Portugal; his Daughter Beatrice being Married to John King of Castile, was the Cause of great Troubles in Portugal; the Portugueses not enduring to be rul'd by the Castilians, after a great deal of Confusion and Bloodshed, chose John the Natural Son of Peter King of Portugal; in whose Family the Crown remained till the death of Henry the Cardinal, Ann. 1580. After which Philip II. King of Spain sent the Duke of Alba into Portugal with a powerful Army, who made himself Master of it in a short time, and so it continued under the Jurisdiction of Spain till the year 1640, that the Portugueses shook off that Yoke and chose John IV. Duke of Braganza their King; and by that means became a Free Independant Monarchy, and continue to be so.

The Portugueses (says Puffendorf) are not inferior to the Spaniards in Pride and Haughtiness; tho' they are not esteemed so Prudent and Cautious as these, but are over Secure in Prosperity, and in time of Danger Rash and Fool-hardy, and Rigorous and Cruel when they get the upper-hand. They are mightily addicted to Covetousness, and love Usury, and have search'd after Money in all Corners of the World. Some will have them to be very malicious, which they say is the Remnant of the Jewish Blood intermingled with that of the Portuguese Nation. Tho' this Country for its bigness, is very Populous, yet it is (considering the number of Portuguese that have Settled in Brasile, on the Coast of Africk, and the East-Indies;) not able to raise a numerous Land Army without Foreign help, or to fit out a great Fleet of War Ships; and have enough to do to Garrison well their Frontiers, and to keep Convoys for their Merchant Ships. However, in case they should be Attack'd by Spain, they are able to bring out 25000 Men into the Field, which is the greatest number that Spain can keep on Foot on that side, by reason of the scarcity of Provisions. The Welfare and Strength of Portugal depends chiefly on their Commerce with the East-Indies, Brasile and Africa; by which it is evident, that the Strength and Power of Portugal in comparison of other more Potent States, is not capable to Attract any of 'em, or gain any thing upon them. So that it seems more its true Interest to preserve it self in the Condition it now is, than to endeavour the enlarging of its Dominions, or engaging in a War with any other State that is strong at Sea.

The Roman Catholic Religion alone is Tolerated in Portugal; and altho' there are a great many Jews in it, yet they pretend to be of the Religion of the Country, and frequent their Churches, seemingly with as much Zeal and Devotion as any; but neither the Jewish Converts to Christianity, nor their Children are capable of enjoying any Office in the Administration of Justice, except it be by the special Favour of the King, or for some considerable Service done to the State. The Jews, whose Fate it is to be discover'd, and fall into the hands of the Inquisition, are burnt alive without Mercy.

The Portuguese, generally wear Black, and their Habit is not much different from that of Spain, only the King and Court follow the French Mode. They count their Money by Rees, 2000 whereof goes to a Pistol, 600 to a Real Marcado, 500 to a Crusade, 100 to a Teston, and 20 to a Vingtin.

The King of Portugal is an Absolute and Independent Monarch, and in all his Patents Stiles himself, King of Portugal and Algarve, Prince of Brasil, Lord of Guinea, of the Navigation, Conquests and Commerce of Ethiopia, Arabia, Persia, and the Indies. His Revenues are said to be eight Million and nine hundred Thousand Livres, besides the Revenues of the House of Braganza; which are not annexed to the Crown of Portugal, and may amount to about two hundred and fifty Thousand Livres.

There are several other Countries and Places belonging to the Crown of Portugal, besides what they possess in Spain taken in a large Sense, viz. Brasile, which is a long tract of Land in America, but very narrow, extended along the Sea Coast, and producing abundance of Sugar, Ginger, Cotton, Wool, Indigo, and Woad for Dyers. The Portuguese are also Masters of the Islands of Cape-Verd, and the Azores in the Atlantick Sea, whereof Tercera and Madera are the principal; of Mazagan on the Coast of Barbary, and the Fortresses of Mina, Arquin, and some others on the Coast of Guinea; also some on the Coast of Congo, Lovango and Angola:

The Forts of Sofala, Mosambique, Merlinda, Quiloa, and Monbazo, on the Coasts of Zanquebar. In Asia, of Goa, Diu, Daman, and Chaul near Surat; Macao in an Island not far from the Continent of China, and the Island of Timor on the Coast of China, &c. Their Trade on the West side of Africa is not very considerable, since the Hollanders have interest in the West side, and those parts which they possess on the East side serve only to enrich their Governors. The Portuguese had formerly a great Interest in Japan which was chiefly procur'd by means of the Jesuits, who are said to have Converted above 400000 of the Japanese to the Christian Religion; but about 40 years ago, the Dutch by their Practices and Artifices render the Portuguese suspected to the Emperor of Japan, having Intercepted or Forg'd a Letter from the Jesuits to the Pope wherein they promised to bring, ere long, the whole Kingdom of Japan under the Obedience of the See of Rome. Which the Hollanders improv'd and Interpreted to their own Advantage and the Ruin of the Portuguese in that Country; for they made the Emperor believe that the new Converts had a mind to Dethrone him, and that the Pope would certainly give his Dominions to the King of Spain, to whom Portugal then belong'd. They also shew'd the Emperor of Japan, in a Map, how the Conquests of the King of Spain did extend on one side, as far as Manilla, on the other as far as Macao, so that by Subduing of Japan, he would have the opportunity of Uniting his Conquests. The Japanese were easily perswaded, and there followed a most horrible Persecution against the Christians; neither did they cease, till there was not one Christian left in Japan, and the Portuguese were upon pain of Death for ever Banish'd the Country. And the Hollanders (as Puffendorf, to whom, particularly, we owe this short Account, goes on) when afterwards they sent any Ships to Japan, used to forbid their Subjects to shew the least appearance of Religious Christian Worship; but if they were ask'd, whether they were Christians? To answer, They were not, but were Hollanders. It ought to be matter of great sorrow to all good Christians, that such an Answer should ever have come from any that did but bear the Name of Christian, or that any, especially of the Reform'd Church, should have been the cause of so Bloody and Cruel a Persecution: Quid non mortalia pectora cogit, Auris Sacra fames?

The Cronological Succession of the Kings of Portugal.

1. Henry Earl of Portugal, was succeeded by his Son
2. Alfonfus I. of Portugal, who assum'd the Title of King, and was very successful against the Moors, and took Lisbon. He died Ann. 1185 and was succeeded by his Son
3. Sanctius, who was successful against the Moors, and died 1212, and was succeeded by his Son
4. Alfonfus II. who died 1223. and was succeeded by his Son
5. Sanctius II. Sirnam'd Capellus, who being a careless Man and rul'd by his Wife, was remov'd from the Administration of the Government, and his Brother Alfonfus advanc'd to it. Sanctius died an Exile in Toledo, 1246.
6. Alfonfus III. was Excommunicated by the Pope, for putting away his Wife because she was somewhat

- what Ancient and Barren, but his Reign was, otherwise, very Glorious. He died, Ann. 1274. and was succeeded by his Son
7. Dionysius, who was singularly famous for his Justice, Liberality and Constancy. He died Ann. 1325. and was succeeded by his Son
 8. Alfonfus IV. Sirnam'd the Brave, who died Ann. 1357. and was succeeded by his Son
 9. Peter, Sirnam'd the Cruel, who died Ann. 1368. and was succeeded by his Son
 10. Ferdinand, who by his frequent wars prov'd very pernicious to Portugal, and died, 1383. being the last of the true Race of the Kings of Portugal; his Daughter Beatrice being Married to John King of Castile, was the occasion of great troubles in Portugal: The Portugueses not enduring to be Ruled by the Castilians, after a great deal of Bloodshed, and much Confusion, did Chose: John the Natural Son of Peter, King of Portugal.
 11. John, the Bastard, who died, Ann. 1433. and was succeeded by his Son
 12. Edward, a very Vertuous Prince, but short Liv'd. He died of the Plague, Ann. 1438. and was succeeded by his Son
 13. Alfonfus V. who after great Contests with Ferdinand the Catholick and Isabella, died Ann. 1481. and was succeeded by his Son
 14. John II. who was the first that found out the way to sail unto the East-Indies. He died, Ann. 1495. leaving no Heirs behind him, and was succeeded by his Cousin
 15. Emanuel, Son of Ferdinand Duke of Visco, Grandchild of King Edward, under whose Reign the Jews and Moors were expell'd Portugal; the first Sea Voyage to the East-Indies made; the whole Trade and Commerce of Africa, and the remotest parts of Asia engros'd by the Portugueses; and Brazil discover'd. This King (whose Reign was called by the Portugueses, the Golden Age) died Ann. 1521, and was succeeded by his Son
 16. John III. who sent the famous Francis Xavier, and some other Jesuits into the East-Indies, to plant the Christian Religion. He died, Ann. 1557. and was succeeded by his Grand-child.
 17. Sebastian, a Child of three years of Age; who when he came to Age, undertook a fatal Expedition into Africa, where, in the year 1578. while he was assisting Muley Mahomet King of Morocco, against Muley Molucco, his Uncle, who had Banish'd him, they all three fell in that famous Battle, where the Flower of the Portugueses Nobility was miserably Routcd, and all the Soldiers cut to pieces or made Prisoners. Sebastian was succeeded by
 18. Henry the Cardinal, his Uncle, who dying in the year 1580,
- Philip II.* King of Spain, sent the Duke de Alba with a great Army into Portugal, who in a few days became Master of the whole Kingdom, which lay under the Jurisdiction of Spain till the year 1640, that the Portugueses shook off the Spanish Yoke, and Proclaim'd for their King
19. John IV. Duke of Braganza, whose Grandmother had stood in Competition with Philip II for that Crown. John died in the year 1656, and was succeeded by his Son
 20. Alfonfus VI. who being a wild and awkward sort of Man, was forced by his Brother Don Pedro to surrender to him the Administration of the Kingdom, receiving to himself a Maintenance only of 270000 Livres per Ann. and the Palace of Braganza, with all its Appurtenances: Don Pedro in the mean while assuming only the Title of Regent, and Marrying his Brother's Wife by the Pope's Dispensation.

The Kingdom of Portugal, if you take in Algarve, may be divided into 6 Provinces, which you may see in the following Table, in the same order they lye, North and South; with their Vulgar Names, and the most Remarkable Cities and Towns that lye within them.

Portugal Divided into 6 Provinces, viz.

- I. El Entre Douro e Minho.
- II. Tra los Montes.
- III. La Beira.
- IV. Extremadura Portugallia.
- V. El Alentejo, or Entre Tejo e Guadiana.
- VI. Algarve.

The Province call'd EL ENTRE DOURO E MINHO, Interamensis Provincia, or Interamnis Portugallia, which was Inhabited by the Callaici Baccarii, is bounded on the North with the River Minho, on the South with the Douro, which divides it from Beira, on the West with the Atlantic Ocean, and on the East with a part of Gallecia and the Province of Tra los Montes; and the most remarkable Places in it are,

Braga. } Viana
O Porto. } Puente de Lima.

Braga, Bracara, or Augusta Bracarum, anciently the chief City belonging to the Braccarii, in Hispania Tarracotensis, stands on the River Gretones, about 15 Miles from the Sea; as many from Viana de Foç de Lima, to the East; between Tuy, to the North; and O Porto to the South; about 20 Miles from either. Lat. 41. 35. It is a very ancient Town, and was the Residence of the Suevian Kings for the space of 170 years: And is the Seat of an Archbishop, who is also a Temporal Prince, and had formerly many more Suffragans under him than he has at present.

O Porto, Portus Cale, is a large and famous Mart Town, especially for Wine, of late, having a large and safe Harbour, and seated near the mouth of the River Duero, about 2 Miles from the Sea, about 20 from Braga, to the South, and 36 from Lamego, to the West; and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Braga.

Viana de Foç de Lima, Viana Limii, stands on the shoar of the Atlantic Ocean, at the mouth of the River Lima; about 18 Miles from Braga to the West, and about 9 from the mouth of the River Duero, and was anciently the Seat of a Bishop.

The Country call'd TRA LOS MONTES, Transmontana Provincia, is that part of Portugal, which is bounded on the North with Gallecia; the River Duero on the South; the Kingdom of Leon on the East; and the Province call'd, el entre Douro e Minho on the West. It is divided into 4 Districts, which they call Comarca's, and the Towns of greatest note in it are, Miranda de Douro and Braganza.

Miranda de Douro, Miranda Durii, stands on the Confines of the Kingdom of Leon, about 2 Miles from the River Douro, 36 from Zamora to the West; as many from Salamanca to the North-West; and 18 from Braganza to the South. It is pretty well Fortified towards the Mountains, and is said to have been Built in the year 1312: And was made an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Braga, by Pope Paul III. in the year 1555, Braganza, Brigantia, or Brigecium, stands near the Confines of Gallecia and Leon, 21 Miles from Miranda, to the North; 100 from Barga to the East; and 45 from Zamora to the West. It is an ancient Town mentioned in Antoninus, and is Honoured with the Title of a Dukedom, whose Duke was chosen King of Portugal, after that Kingdom had shook off the Spanish Yoke, Ann. 1640.

The Province of LA BEIRA. Beira, lyes between the Rivers Douro, on the North; and Mondego on the South; the Atlantick Ocean on the West, and the Kingdom of Leon to the East. It is divided into 6 Districts, call'd Comarca's, and the Towns of greatest note in it are, Coimbra. } } Lamego.

La Guardia. } } Viseo.

Coimbra, Conimbrica Nova, stands on the River Mondego, which divides it in Two; about 20 Miles from Lisbon to the North; 18 from the Atlantick Ocean; and 90 South from Barga; 24 from the mouth of the foresaid River; It rose from the Ruins of the ancient Conimbrica, which was destroy'd by the Alani, and is now a pitiful Village, call'd Condexa la Vieja: The Town we are Describing, is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Braga, and has an University, founded in the year 1290, by King Dennis; but it was Transferr'd afterwards to Lisbon, from whence it was brought back to this place, by John III. in the year 1550. It was the Birth-place of several Kings of Portugal, viz. Sancho I. Alonso II. Sancho II. Alonso III. Alonso IV. Pedro and Ferdinand: And here died, Alonso Henrique, First King of Portugal, in the year 1185. as also his two Successors, Sancho I. in the year 1212. and Alonso II. Anno 1223.

About 24 Miles from Coimbra, are the Waters, or Fountains of Cedima; which have such a surprising attractive quality that they suck in and swallow whatever but touches their Waters, as great Logs of Wood and such like, as has been found by many Experiments; but none more convincing than one, which a Dane (as a late Traveller relates) who being hard of Belief, would needs try it upon his Horse; and having put a Rope about his Neck, and another about his Leg, and tyed the other ends of 'em to a Ring fixed some Paces from the Water, put the Poor Creature into it; who had no sooner entred than he was drawn in with so great force that the Rope that was about his Neck broke, the other being stronger, or the force not being so great upon it, kept fast the Leg, which was all the Gentleman had left him to ride home upon.

Lamego, Lameca, or Lamacum, stands on the Confines of Miho, in the mid't between Braga to the South-East, and Guarda to the South-West; 3 Miles from the River Douro to the South; and 36 from O Porto to the East; and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Braga.

Guarda, stands 60 Miles South-East from Lamego, and 70 East from Coimbra; it is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Lisbon. It sprung out of the ancient City Igedita.

Viseo, Viseum, stands near the Rivulet Montorio, 27 Miles from Lamego to the South; and 36 from Guarda to the West. It was once Honoured with the Title of a Duchy, and has still the Name of an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Braga. It is the same Town with that which in some Maps is call'd Viseu, but ought not to be so call'd.

The Province call'd ESTREMADURA, or Estremadura Portugalia, to distinguish it from Estremadura in the Kingdom of Spain, strictly to call'd, lyes towards the mouth of the River Tajo, and is bounded on the North with the Province of Beira, on the East and South, with that call'd Alentejo; and on the West with the Ocean. It is divided into 6 parts, and the Principal Towns in it are,

Lisbon. } } Alanquer.
Santaren. } } Setuval, or St. Ubes.

LISBON, Olisippo, or Ulyssippo, is not only the chief City of this Province, but also of the whole Kingdom of Portugal: And stands (according to the Spanish Historian Mariana) almost in the middle of Portugal on the North side of a large and secure Port formed by the River Tajo or Tago, about 6 Miles from the Sea; 18 from the Cabo de la Roca Sintra, to the West; 18 from the Cabo de Espichel to the North; 135 from O Porto; and 100 from Coimbra to the South; 150 from Sevil to the North-West; and 240 from Toledo to the West. Some Authors will have it to have been Built by Ulysses, after the Siege of Troy, and for that reason call'd Ulyssippon. It was taken by King Alonso II. of Leon, from the Moors, in the time of Charlemaine, about the year 792. In the year 1148, Alonso I. King of Portugal took it from them again. And in the year 1384, King John of Castile laid Siege to it, but was forced to raise it.

It is the noblest and richest City in Portugal, the Seat of the King, and one of the Places of greatest Trade in Europe. At the back of it (says the aforementioned Historian) are certain Hills of easie ascent, and the tops of 'em covered with Buildings. The breadth of the City is not so much as the length (which some late Travellers say is about 6 Miles) Most of the Streets are narrow and crooked; and in some places very steep; but the new Buildings surpass the old in beauty. About it are many Villages, and good Country-houses, and a Soil beautified with Vineyards and Orchards, of Orange and Lemmon-Trees. The Palace Royal stands below the City, and has the Prospect of the Port. It is a pretty regular Pile of Building, in and about which are to be seen several Master-Pieces of Painting, Sculpture, and Architecture. In short, the Magnificence of this Court is greater than that of Spain. The Cathedral Church, dedicated to St. Vincent, who, they say, suffered Martyrdom there, has hardly any thing extraordinary about it, except its Antiquity. This City had formerly the Title of an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Merida; but in the Year 1390. Pope Boniface IX. made the Bishop of it a Metropolitan.

About a Mile from Lisbon, towards the Sea, and on the Banks of the Tajo, there stands a little Town call'd Belem, where the Kings and Queens of Portugal are buried. Their Mausoleums are within the Church of the Hieronimites, which is all lined with white Marble. Near to Belem, there is a Tower, upon which are planted a good number of Cannon, and over against it another little Fort, which together ther, serve to hinder any Enemy's Ships from entering the Port: And besides these, there are several other little Forts, down as far as the Sea; the Principal one of which is that of St. Katherine at the Mouth of the River, which answers to that on the other side, call'd the Wooden Fort, because it stands on Piles, in the Sea.

Santarem, Scalabis, or Julium Præsidium, is a pretty large Town, seated on a rising Ground, near the River Tajo, 42 Miles from Lisbon, to the North East; and 32 from the Atlantick Ocean, to the East. It is said to have its name from one St. Irene a Virgin, who having been kill'd in a Town call'd Tomar, about 20 Miles from hence, and her Body thrown into the River Nabaen, was carried by great Tajo, into this place, and there buried with great Solemnity. Wherefore this Town, laying aside its former name, began to assume that of St. Irene's, which afterwards was corrupted into that which it now has.

Setúval, or St. Ubes, Cetobrica, or Cetobricæ, according to Ptolomy, stands at the Mouth of the River Zadaon, on the Atlantick Ocean, 18 Miles from Lisbon to the South; as many from the Cabo de Espichel, to the East, and 48 from Euora, to the West. It has the advantage of a good Harbour, and is a place of considerable Trade, especially for the excellent Salt that is found near that place.

The Province of ALENTEIO, Trans-Tagana Provincia, is otherwise call'd Entre Tejo e Guadiana, because it lies between these two Rivers, by the former of which it is bounded on the North; by the other on the East and South East, as it is by the Atlantick Sea, on the West, and Algarve on the South. It is divided into five Districts, and the Towns of greatest Note in it are,

Euora. ? } Elvas.
Beja. } ?

Euora, Ebova, or Ebura, is a pretty large Town, and the Capital one of this Province, situated among the Mounrains, 48 Miles from Bajadoz to the West, 24 from the River Guadiana, and 57 from Lisbon to the S. East. It had formerly the Title of an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Merida, afterward that of Compostella; and at last its Prelate was made a Metropolitan, by Pope Paul III. Ann. 1540. There was an University founded in it by Henry the Cardinal; and it was taken by John of Austria, in the Year 1665. but bravely recovered by the Portugueses a few days after.

Beja, Pax Julia, anciently inhabited by the Turdetani, is now a pretty near Town, and honoured with the Title of a Dukedom. It is distant, 6 Miles from the River Guadiana, to the West; 39 from the Atlantick Ocean; 37 from Euora, to the South; and about 60 from Bajadoz, to the South West. Near to this place there is a Lake, which roars like a Bull, so as to be heard 15 or 16 Miles round, before great Rains, or a Storm.

Elva, Helva, or Elva, stands on a Hill, on the Borders of Esfremadura, a Province of the Kingdom of Leon, 6 Miles from the River Guadiana; 33 from Euora, to the East; and 12 from Bajadoz, to the West. It has been pretty well fortified of late; and therefore in vain besieged by the Spaniards, in the Year 1659. who received a signal Overthrow from the Portugueses near to it. It was made an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Euora, by Pope Paul IV. in the Year 1555.

The Province of ALGARVE, Algarbia, whose greatest length from East to West, is not above 60 Miles; and greatest breadth from North to South, not above 25, is divided from the rest of Portugal by the Mountains Caldeaan and Monchique; and is bounded on the North with Portugal, strictly so call'd; on the East, with Andalusia; and on the West and South, with the Atlantick Ocean. It was annexed to Portugal by King Alonso III. with the Title of a Kingdom, and is divided into two Districts or Commarcas, viz. Commarca de Tavira, and Commarca de Lagos.

Tavira, Tavira, is a Town on the Sea Coast, 20 Miles East from the mouth of the River Guadiana, about 60 Miles West from Cape St. Vincent, and is by some Authors taken for the ancient Balsa, mention'd by Ptolomy and Pomponius; but others think that that old Name belongs rather to Albuferra, which lies on the Coast, between Lagos to the West, and Faro to the East; about 15 Miles from either; 50 from Beja, to the South; and 30 from Cabo de S. Vincent to the East.

Faro, Pbarus, stands on the Bay of Caos near the Cabo de S. Maria, 27 Miles from Tavira to the West, and about 40 from Cabo de S. Vincent to the East. It has the advantage of a good Harbour, and has been an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Euora, since the Year 1590.

SCANDINAVIA,

COMPREHENDING

Norway, Sweden, and part of Denmark.

S C A N D I N A V I A, which Pliny falsely calls Insula incompta Magnitudinis, an Island, whose Bounds were unknown; and which according to Diodorus and Ptolemy, was anciently call'd Balthæa and Basilæa, (the latter perhaps being but a corruption of the former) comprehended all that vast Tract of Land, in form almost of a Peninsula, which is now call'd Sueden and Norway. It is the utmost Bounds of Europe, towards the North, and is Bounded with Denmark and Germany on the South, with the Ocean on the North and West, and Russia on the East, and lies between the 56th and 72d. Degree of Latitude, and 25th and 60th of Longitude.

Its Soil according to Andrew Bureus, and others, in the South parts of it, where the elevation of the Pole is not above 60 Degrees is abundantly Fruitful, and the Air pretty Temperate: But about the middle between the 60th Degree, and the Arctick Circle, the Soil is much encumbered with Woods and Rocks, and otherwise but indifferent, and the Air very Cold. But the most Northern parts which lie beyond the Arctick Circle, have very little of the Blessings of either the Heavens or the Earth: Only Nature has kindly provided the Inhabitants with Plenty of Fish and Venison to supply the wants of Fruit and Corn.

How

How it came to be called Scandinavia or Scandia, and what the Etymologies of these and such like words are, is hardly worth the Enquiry; and whether the Scanij gave name to the Place, or the Place to the People. That being neither instructing nor delightful, we shall rather proceed to give a brief Account of the ancient Inhabitants of that Country, and how they were seated in respect to one another. The Scanij or Scandij possess'd that part now called Schonen. The Hilleviones, whom Tacitus calls Hellsij, and Amianus. Marcellinus, Heilij, inhabited Haland; the Sitones, whom some have called Ganipotes, Norway; which was anciently called Nerigon. Beyond these lived the Marchio-Finni, commonly call'd Marchfennen, and the Serito-Finni. To the East of whom were the Lappones or Lappij. To the South lay the Suiones, commonly called Suedi or Sweeds; and next to them the Guta or Guti, whose Country is now called Gutland or Gotbland.

Scandinavia seems to have been much more populous of old than it is now, as appears by the frequent Expeditions that have been made from thence into other Parts of the World, which may be attributed partly to the fruitfulness of the People, partly to the barrenness of the Soil and scarcity of Provisions which forced them to seek better, as well as to the war-like disposition of the People. The great heaps of Stones, which formerly have been gathered together for clearing their Grounds, and now found in the middle of large Woods, are a probable Argument that those Places were once well cultivated.

Some Writers have attempted to give account of the Religion, Policy, Government, and way of Living of these People, but we will neither trouble the Reader with our own Guesses nor repeat those of others. Only thus much we think, that 'tis more than probable, these People lived more like Brutes than Men, that they were absolute Strangers to all manner of Commerce, without Laws, Government, or Religion, and buried in profound Ignorance. And so we leave them and return to the Country, which, as we have said, comprehended Norway and Sweeden, and a great part of Denmark. But Norway being now subject to the King of Denmark, and Denmark being the noblest and better part of that Prince's Dominions, we shall give it the first Place, and afterwards Travel thro' Norway and Sweden.

DENMARK, Dania.

DENMARK is one of the most ancient Kingdoms of Europe, and is divided into two Parts by the Baltick Sea, viz. Jutland and the Islands. The former is that which was Anciently call'd Cbersonsus Cimbrica, and is now Divided into North and South Jutland. It is bounded on the North and West with the German Ocean, on the East with the Middlefart Sund, commonly called the Lesser Belt, and the Baltick; and on the South with the River Eyder which divides it from Holstein. The length of it (according to Buno) from Cape Scagen to Holstein is 212 Miles; the breadth is not alike in all parts of it, but at most does not much exceed 80 Miles. The Islands which make up the other part of this Kingdom are Seeland, Falster, Langeland, Funen, Laland, Bornholm, and many others of less note; as, Mona, Femeren, Alsen, Arroe, Anoer, Lesloe, Sanfoc, &c. of all which hereafter more particularly. The King of Denmark hath also other Territories, as the Isles of Fero and Island, &c. The Countries of Oldenburg and Delmenborff in Germany; Christianburg on the Coast of Guinea; a Fort call'd Tranquebar, in the East-Indies, and St. Thomas's Island in the West-Indies: But we must Refer the Reader for a Description of these to the Kingdoms and Countries where they lye.

The Duchy of HOLSTEIN, tho' in strictness it be reckon'd part of Germany, yet having been several times subject to the King of Denmark, we have chosen to Place the Description of it here, preceeding to Sleswick, to which it is contiguous, as the Reader will find after we have done with the general account of Denmark.

The AIR, tho' very cold in Denmark is not so sharp as in some places of Germany, that are Situate much more South; which may be attributed to the Seas flowing about it, which (as in England) keeps the Air warm in Winter, and by gentle breezes makes it cooler in Summer. The SOIL, tho' in most places Barren and beset with Mountains and Woods hath been of late much improv'd by the Inhabitants, and yields the Husbandman Corn, Hay and Pasture, wherein vast Herds of Kine are fed, and an excellent Race of Horses bred. The Rivers of Denmark cannot be brag'd of; for according to Mr. Moldsworth, there is not one Navigable; the Eyder is the best, the Elbe being to be reckon'd only a Boundary and not in this Country: There are indeed some Lakes that afford good quantities of Fish. The Forests are abundantly stock'd with Venison of all sorts, as Stags, Elks, Wild-Boars, Hares, Conies, &c. and Wild Fowl in great plenty.

The extent of Denmark cannot be exactly set down, because of the disjunction of its parts, and intervention of the Sea. It was much larger before Schonen, Bleeking and Haland, were taken from it by the King of Sueden, to whom these were granted for ever, at the Treaty of Roschild, in 1658. which was again confirm'd in 1660. We have already spoken of the extent of Futland, and the Islands will be particularly describ'd hereafter.

The Commodities of Denmark for Exportation are very few, Cattle is the chief, which they vend to the Netherlands: But Manufactories they have none.

The first INHABITANTS of Denmark were the Cimbri and Teutones, who were also call'd Dani and Codani, from whom (as Cirverius says) the Country derives its name. This Kingdom is thought to have been establish'd long before the Birth of Christ, but for want of good Histories, it cannot be precisely determin'd when it began, how long each of its ancient Kings Reign'd, or what great Acts they did. According to Mr. Daudisree the Cimbri Inhabited Futland and the Teutones the Isles. It is uncertain from whence they came into that Country: but finding it at last (says he) too little for them, resolv'd to seek themselves a more convenient Seat: And about 110 years before Christ, joyning all in one Body, they march'd into Germany, and having travers'd all that Country divided themselves into two Bodies and took different courses. The Teutones and Ambrones, march'd into Gau, and committed great Ravage there. The Cimbri march'd against the Roman Army, Commanded by M. Funius Syllanus, and both in that and several other Engagements, worsted the Romans, till Marius happily put a stop to the Carrier of their Victory, by Routing the Teutones, and Ambrones at Aix in Provence, as he did the Cimbri afterwards at Vorecil.

After the Cimbri and Teutones had left the North, (as this Author continues) the Furie, a People originally of Germany, took possession of their Country, and chose for their King Danus, the Son of Fiumblus King of Gothia, who Reign'd about the year of the World, 3909. And after his Family was extinct, Hoter the Son of Attila, King of Sueden Reign'd, whose Posterity fail'd in the Person of Haldan III. But the History of those times being very Imperfect and Fabulous, we shall trouble the Reader no more with them.

It is evident, (as Puffendorf observes) the Danes are not so Warlike now as they were formerly. The Nobility is turn'd Lazy, and the Commons have follow'd their Example.

The Danish LANGUAGE, is no other than a corrupted High-Dutch, being manifestly a Dialect of the Old Teutonic; and High-Dutch it self is much affected by the Gentry, and ordinarily spoken in Copenhagen, and other Trading Cities.

The Popish Religion had been predominant here, till the time of Frederick I. who introduc'd the Augsburg Confession into all the Churches of his Dominions, and made a League with the Protestant Princes of Germany; whose Son Christian III. continu'd the work, and establish'd the LUTHERAN, which has ever since been the only RELIGION profess'd here, except one French Calvinist Church at Copenhagen, and one Popish Chappel at Gluckstadt.

The form of GOVERNMENT in Denmark, is mightily alter'd from what it was; formerly the States had all the solid and substantial part of Government and Management of Affairs, and left the King nothing but the appearance of Royalty. He could neither make Peace nor War without them, nor lay any Taxes on the Subject but by their consent. They oblig'd him to Swear at his Coronation, that he would consent to his own degrading if without their allowance or consent, he but touch'd the Publick Treasure which was kept in Crozenburg, and reserv'd for the extraordinary necessities of State: And besides this, they had the disposal of all Offices and vacant Fiefs, which created them many Dependants and Creatures. But the Case is now quite otherwise, for in the year 1660. the Crown was made Hereditary, and the King absolute. This remarkable Revolution is particularly related by Mr. Moldsworth, who tells us, that upon the finishing the War between Sueden and Denmark, a large debt remain'd on the Nation; wherefore the States were assembled, to consider of the Ways and Means for Paying that, and re-establishing the Publick Affairs: But a difference happening between the Nobility and the Commons, the former pretending themselves Priviledg'd from Taxes, and the latter having Fought well during the War, and been very much exhausted by it; and withal the Nobility having always exercised a sort of despotick Power over their Tenants, and now in this Assembly express'd great contempt of the Commons; they were so far provok'd, that breaking up from the Assembly, the Commons, together with the Clergy, (which compos'd the other Estate) assembled themselves in another place, and in few Hours resolv'd to make the King a Present of an absolute Power, and his Family the Succession to the Crown, (that was before this Elective) which they accordingly the next day put in execution; and tho' at first the Nobility hesitated on the matter, they also were fain to comply, and in three days time the alteration was compleated: And since that the King Governs in such manner as he thinks fit, without the contradiction of the Nobility or Senate.

For the administration of Justice, there are 4 Tribunals in Denmark. 1. The Byfoght's Court, in Cities and Towns. 2. Heredsfoght's Court, of the same nature in the Country; from both which lies an Appeal to the 3 Landstog or general Head Court of the Province; but the 4th and Supream Court is the High-Reche, which is held at Copenhagen, and compos'd of the Principal Nobility of the Kingdom, and even even the King himself sometimes sits in it. There are also a Chancery Court; a Rent Chamber, like our Exchequer, for judging the Causes relating to the Revenue; and an Admiralty Court for Maritime Affairs. But it is very remarkable, that Law-causes are the soonest decided here of any place whatsoever, none being permitted to lie above a year and a month, altho' it pass thro' all the Courts. The whole body of the Law is compriz'd in one Volume in Quarto, and written so plainly, that every Man understands it, and may plead his own Cause. The Judges are appointed by the King, and their Salaries paid out of the Exchequer, no Fees being paid them by the Clients: And upon unjust proceeding they forfeit half their Estate, whereof one moiety to the injur'd Person. Altho' the word Nobility be used, it is not to be understood, as in England, for there are not above half a dozen that bear the Title of Counts or Barons; the rest tho' without that Title, having the same Honours and Privileges. The greatest distinction seems to be the Order of Knighthood of the Elephant, which is conferr'd by the King, on Persons of eminent Honour and Merit; it is a very ancient Order, but when comenc'd is uncertain; the Knights wear a white Elephant, adorn'd with 5 large Diamonds, in a blue Ribbon cross their Shoulder. They have also another Order call'd the Danebroge, Founded by King Waldemar I. and reviv'd by the late King in the year 1672. the Knights wear a White Cross edg'd with Red, in a Red Ribbond.

The Revenues of the King of Denmark, are reckon'd by Mr. Mildsworth to amount to 2 Millions, and 200000 Rix Dollars; each Rix Dollar being somewhat less than an English Crown. They arise by Excises, Customs, Tolls, Poll-Tax, or Fortification-Tax: The Revenues of Norway, Crown-Lands, and the Toll or Ships passing thro' the Ore Sundt and Belt. This Duty or Custom on Ships is very considerable; for the Straight of the Sound, being the most frequented of any in Europe, except that of Gibraltar, and all Nations except Suedes, Paying for every Ship that pass'es, (the Sum uncertain, because it has been often alter'd, but as near as I can gather,) about 150 Rix Dollars. Great Controversies have at several times arisen, between the Danes and the Hollanders, as also the Hanse Towns, about the exorbitant encrease of this Toll, from time to time, which produc'd several Treaties and Agreements about it: And since the Suedes have had the opposite Shoar of Schonen, the Danes have always been more moderate in their Demands.

The ancient History of Denmark is so confus'd, that 'tis not possible to draw out an exact Chronology of the Succession of their Kings; wherefore omitting the earlier times, we will give a List of those since Christianity began to be Preach'd here, which is as follows.

A Chronological Table of the KINGS of Denmark.

CHAP. II.

Of HOLSTEIN.

HOLSTEIN, Holfatia, lyes on the South of the Cimbria Cersonesus, or Peninsula of Jutland. Bounded on the East by the Duchy of Lawenburg and the Baltick Sea; on the South by the River Elbe; on the West by the German Ocean; and on the North by the Duchy of Stefwick. Its Extent from North to South is about 50 Miles, and from East to West about 100 Miles. The whole Country including Ditmasch, Wagerland and Stormar, was formerly known by the Name of Nordalbingia, or the Country Northward of the Elb: The modern Name of Holfstein, being derived (as Adam Brenensis says) from Hols-Gescten, i. e. seated in a Wood or Forest. It was at first only a Province of the great Duchy of Saxony, but was bestowed by the Duke (afterwards Emperor) Lotharius, upon Adolph Earl of Schaumburg about the year 1114. and at last chang'd into a Dukedom by the Emperor Frederick III. Anno Dom. 1474. in favour of Christi- an the twelfth Earl, who succeeding in the Throne of Denmark, conveyed Holfstein to that Crown, and the Danish Kings are on that account reckon'd among the Princes of the Empire, tho' not obliged to repair to the Dyets. Afterwards it became an Appenage, and with the Title of Duke was conferr'd on Adolph Brother to Christian III. Upon the Decease of this Duke without Issue, the Title was conferr'd upon Ulrick Brother to King Christian IV. From him have in time sprung up divers Families or Houses of Holfstein, as Sunderburg, Norburg, Arnsbeck, Gottorp, Ploen and Oettingen; of these Christian Alvert Duke of Holfstein Gottorp is the chief; and claims the same Authority and Privileges as were given to Duke Adolph above mentioned. But the Grandeur of this Prince giving Jealousie to the late King of Denmark, or rather being provok'd by his siding against him, during his War with the Swede in 1675, he Seized on his Person and Country, obliging him him to renounce and resign his Right; but the Duke afterwards protesting against these Violences, and the Neighbouring Princes at length intermediating in his favour, especially his Majesty King William III. of Great-Britain, the greater part of his Countries were restored in 1689: But in this year 1700, a new War hath been Commenced here, by the King of Denmark, by reason of some Forts the Duke of Holstein has Built, which the King of Denmark would have demolish'd, the success of which War is in every Bodys Memory.

The Country is very Fertile, and being Seated conveniently for Trade, Holstein is reckon'd the Richest part of Denmark. The Inhabitants are of a strong Constitution and undaunted Courage, and so Sincere and Just, that Holstein Glaube, or the Fidelity of a Holsteiner has even pass'd into a Proverb.

The Towns in Holstein properly so called, that chiefly deserve to be taken Notice of are these, viz.

Kiel, Chilonum, a well frequented Mart-Town on the Baltick Sea, so call'd (as some are of opinion) from its situation in a Neck of Land, between the Mouths of two Rivers, the German word Kiel signifying a Wedge. It stands in the Latitude of 54. 15. and the Longitude of 30. at the distance of 50 Miles from Hamburg to the North, and about 40 from Lubeck to the North-West. It has a large commodious Haven, well frequented by Ships from Germany, Sweden, &c. and a Castle on the Top of a Hill which secures the Town and Haven. The Industry and Traffick of its Inhabitants makes the Town Populous and Wealthy, which together with its being the Place where the Annual Assembly of the States of Holstein are held, renders this the Capital of all Holstein. It is adorn'd with a Stately Palace and other fair Buildings, particularly a Franciscan Monastery Founded by Adolph of Schaumburg; but since the Reformation, changed into an Hospital: Here is also a College, and an Univerity Established in the year 1669. This Town suffer'd much during the War between Sweden and Denmark.

Rensburg, or Reinolsburg, stands on the River Eyder (by which it is almost encompass'd) on the Borders of Sleswick, near 20 Miles West from Kiel. It is reckon'd the strongest Town in Holstein, having besides its Situation, a strong Castle, and good Fortifications for its Defence. The Castle was Built by Gerhard II. Earl of Holstein, but the Town owes its Foundation to one Reinold, of whom there is no certain Account, except that he was a Prince of the Blood, or at least a very considerable Nobleman. Its Fortifications are lately much improv'd and render'd, a la Moderne, very considerable.

Wilsler, is a neat well Built Town, seated on a River of the same Name, which falls into the Stoor; about 30 Miles South West from Rensburg.

Itzhoa, stands a few Miles East from Wilsler, on the Navigable River Stoor, which furnishes it with Fish, and Traffick from abroad.

Nieumunster, about 20 Miles more Eastward, nor far from the Head of the River Stoor.

DITMARSH, lyes between Holstein Proper, and the German Ocean. having the River Elbe for its Southern, and the River Eyder for its Northern Bounds. Some write the word Deutchsmarsh or Teutschmarcb, i. e. Dutchmarsh, because the Inhabitants of this Province, are the Offspring of the ancient German Saxons, and retain'd so much of their ancient Valour as not to be made submit to the Earls of Holstein, as their Neighbours the Stormarians and Wagrians had done, until the force of all Denmark threaten'd them, when the Earldom was United to the Crown; nay, even then, they soon threw off the Yoke, and refused to do Homage to Christian Earl of Oldenburg and Holstein, to whom the Emperor Frederick III. had given their Country: But at last they were by Frederick II. King of Denmark, Anno 1559. assisted by the Duke of Holstein, entirely subdued, and the Country shar'd between the King and the Duke. The chief Towns in it are.

Meldorp, seated on the German Ocean, 30 Miles South West from Rensburg, and 20 Miles North from Gluckstadt, the chief Town of the Province, and a place of good Trade, Heyde, a large but poor City, seated on the Border of the great Barran Sand of the same Name, which over-spread the middle of the Country.

Lunden, near the Mouth of the Eyder, 15 Miles North from Meldorp.

Brunsbüttel, a Sea Town on the Elbe Stroom, about 12 Miles South from Meldorp. And Weslingburn, near the Sea shoar about the midway between Meldorp and Lunden.

STORMAR or STORMARSH, according to the signification of its Name is a Morass or Marthy Ground lying along the Banks of the River Stoor; it lyes on the South of Holstein Proper, and from it is divided by the River Stoor; and on the North of the River Elbe and Lunenburgh. The Soil here, as also in Ditmarsh is rich, and in most places resembles that of Holland, not only in its Fertility and manner of improvement, but also in the Dikes and Banks raised by the Inhabitants, to keep out the swelling Ocean, which however often overflows the lower Grounds. The People here make good Advantage by the Traffick they are able to carry on by means of their Neighbourhood to the Elbe and the City of Hamburg, which stands in the Limits of this Province, but is one of the Hanse-Towns and Governed by its own Magistrates. Having already given a Description of that City, in our Account of Germany. we refer the Reader thither, and shall now proceed to speak of the other Places of note in this Province.

Altena, a small City, remarkable for the Treaty held there between the King of Denmark, and the Duke of Holstein; stands within a Mile or two of Hamburg.

Gluckstadt, is a little City seated on the Bank of the Elbe, 30 Miles below Hamburg, and 35 Miles South of Rensburg. It was first Fortified by Cristian IV. King of Denmark, about the year 1620. and afterwards much improv'd by his Successors, tho' its Strength soon after the Building was so considerable as to resist the Siege the Emperor Ferdinand II. laid to it, for two years together. It is at present, a Strong-hold, and of considerable Importance to the Dane, for it Commands the passage of the Elbe, and thereby keeps the Hamburger's in Awe.

Krempe or Crempen seated on a small River of the same Name, which a little below falls into the Stoor, about 5 or 6 Mile from Gluckstadt, is also a place of great Strength and reckon'd one of the Keys of Denmark. Christian IV. likewise Fortified this, and and in the years 1627. and 1628. it was famous for gallantly resisting a Siege and furious Attacks of Count Wallensteine for thirteen Months; and tho' at last it was forced to submit to that fortunate General, yet obtain'd very honourable Terms.

Pimmenberg stands about 20 Miles South East from Gluckstadt, and 10 from Hamburg; it is not very considerable, and only mention'd because it gives Name to a County.

Bredenberg is one of the fairest little Towns in all Denmark, and the ancient Seat of the Noble Family of the Renzow's. It was remarkable for the stout opposition it made to Count Wallensteine, who at last took it, and put all the Garison to the Sword.

WAGEREN or WAGERLAND. Wagria, lyes on the East of Holstein, is almost encompassed by the Baltick Sea, and the two Rivers, Trave on the South, and Suenin on the West. Its extent is about 50 Miles from North to South, and about 30 from East to West. The Country had its Name from the Wagrii a People of Slavonia, who Conquered these Parts, and is a Fertile Land well Peopled. In the Limits of this Province stands the Hans-Town Lubeck, which being like Hamburg, an Independent State, and part of the Empire, we have already described it also in our Account of Germany. And therefore pass on to the other places of Note here, Sezeberg, stands on the River Trave, about 12 Miles from Lubeck Westward, and 40 from Gluckstadt to the East. According to Pontanus, it was anciently call'd Aelberg, and took its present Name from the Castle Built by the Emperor Lotharius about the year 1134, upon a high Hill, to Check the Slavonians.

Oldelslob, or Odelse, is a fair Town seated also on the Trave, about 10 Miles west from Lubeck, and not above 7 South from Sezeberg. It was purchased in the year 1338. by John Earl of Wagria, for 10000 Marks of Silver, and continued for a long time in a flourishing condition: But having suffered much in the Wars between Eric of Pomeran, and the Dukes of Sleswick and Holstein, it could never yet recover its beauty and Grandeur.

Ploen is a Town of good Antiquity, and has been always valued for its Strength. It stands on a Lake (to which it gives Name,) that almost surrounds it, and has a strong Castle built not long since by Joachim Ernestus Duke of Holstein. This place has the Honour to give a Title to one of the Houses of Holstein; the Valiant Prince that bears it at present, has signaliz'd himself on several occasions in the late War.

Oldenburg, a place considerable for its ancient State, stands in the North-East Corner of Wagerland upon the River Broockaw, about 25 Miles from Ploen to the North-East. It gives Name to a small County, and was anciently the Metropolis of the Wagri and Venedi, two Warlike Nations, to whom the greatest part of Mecklenburg was subject. Orbo the Great founded a Bishoprick here, which was afterwards Translated to Lubeck. It had a great Trade, and was exceeding Populous, but the Port being stop't up by command of Queen Margaret, and a great Fire having destroy'd its Buildings, the place is now not very considerable.

CHAP. III.

Of South-Jutland, or SLESWICK.

THE Duchy of SLESWICK, is an ancient Dependence on the Kingdom of Denmark, which King Nicolas I. in the year 1128. gave to his Nephew Canute Son of Eric, Surnamed Ejzod. Margaret Queen of Denmark confirm'd it to the Earl of Holstein and his Successors in the year 1338. which Earl the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, Created Duke of Sleswick, whose Posterity failing in the Person of Adolphus in the year 1459. Christian I. United it to the Kingdom of Denmark, and now it is partly under the Jurisdiction of Denmark, and partly Subjected to the Duke of Holstein Gottorp; but their Dominions and the Divisions of the Country are so intermix'd that it is hard to give a distinct Account of them. The Bayliages of Hadersteben, Ripen, Flensburg, the Territory of Christianspris, the Isles of Roem, Mandoe and the West side of the Isle of Foer are under the King of Denmark. The Bayliages of Gottorp, Tondern, Appenrade, Hulsem, Eyderstedt, and Lobm-Closter, the Isles of Femeven, Northstrand, Sylt, and the East side of Foer are under the Duke of Holstein. And Aroe and Alsen are under the Duke of Sunderburg. The Chief Towns in Sleswick are these Sleswick or Sleyswick, Sleswicum, the Metropolis of the whole Province, is seated on a River, or rather a small Arm of the Sea Nam'd de Sbe, at the distance of about 20 Miles from Kiel to the North-West. Christianity was Established here in the ninth Century, and the great Church was then Founded by King Eric Barn, assist'd by St. Anshar Bishop of Hamburg; and in 930 King Harald Blatand Established an Episcopal See in it; afterwards in 1064 the Slavonians, invaded these parts, ruin'd the Church and Re-established the Heathenish Superstitions; but soon after these Foreigners were entirely expelled, Christianity Restored, and the Cathedral Reedified. In the next Century it was a Place of very great Trade, and much frequented by Merchants from Britain, France, Spain, Flanders, &c. And even so considerable was this City that Adam Bremensis, who flourished about the year 1100, calls it Civitatem Opulentissimam ac Populosissimam. The Angles, who were great Traders here, Built the Church Dedicated to the Holy Ghost, and the Hospital adjoining. In the last Age, viz. 1556. King Fredrick II. took this City and annexed it to his Dominions. Near the Walls of it are to be seen the Ruins of a Temple, which the Slavonians Built in Honour of the Deity which they Worshipped.

Within a few Miles from Sleswick to the South are yet to be seen in many places the Ruins of the famous Wall and Trench, which was Built in ancient ent times by the Danish Kings against the Incurfions of the Saxons. It is thought to have been begun by Gotheric, or Gothofred, King of Denmark, to exclude the Armies of the Emperor Charlemaign, about the year 808. afterwards improved by Queen Tlyra and other Danish Monarchs, and made fo strong as to be effemed impregnable, by the Cuncellors of Huny the Lyon, Duke of Saxony, who difsuaded that Victorious Prince, from attempting fo hazardous an undertaking. This Rampart was called Danewark, and like Hadrian's Wall in England, is reported to have reached from Sea to Sea, quite crofs this Neck of Land.

Gottorp, the ancient Palace of the Earls and Dukes of Holftein, ftands about 15 Miles Weft from Sleswick, on a Lake made by the River Sleye, which almoft Environs it; the Waters whereof are clear and full of Fifh; and carries Veffels of fmall burden to and from the Baltick Sea: This is reckoned one of the fineft Seats in all thefe Northern Parts, having vvery large Gardens, beautified with curious Fountains, Walks, &c. befides a noble and fpacious Park, or, rather Forest adjoining, well ftock'd with Deer, wild Boar and other forts of Game. The Palace is a noble Building, and is efppecially adorn'd with a very choice Library containing a large Collection of Printed Books and Manufcripts, and among other Rarities one of fingular Ingenuity, viz. a Globe of Copper Ten Foot and half in Diameter, with a Sphere, wherein the Sun moves on the Ecliptick, and all the Heavenly Bodies are carried round in exact order by the means of certain Wheels which are turned about by Water convey'd from the adjacent Mountain. Gottorp is well Fortified, and has a Toll-Booth, or Custom-Houfe, where Toll is paid every year, for 50000 Head of Cattel, which pafs out of Jutland into Germany.

Eckrenford or Ekelford, ftands on the bottom of a Bay of the Baltick Sea, which makes a very Commodious Haven, about 10 Miles South from Sleswick, and near 20 North from Kiel. Its faid to have its Name from the abundance of Squirrels found in the Neighbouring Woods, tho' with more probability, it is called fo from an old Cattle, out of whole Ruins it arofe. It is a Town of good Trade, and one of the fafeft Ports on the Baltick fhoar.

Chriftianpris is a Sea-Town about 15 Miles South-Eaft from Eckrenford, Seated on the neck of the Haven of Kiel, and feems to have been built to command that Paffage.

Frederickftadt, is a little Town on the Bank of the River Eyder at the diftance of 30 Miles from Eckrenford to the Weft. It owes its Foundation to Frederick Duke of Holftein, and Sleswick who endeavour'd to fettle a Silk Trade there, and to that purpofe fent a famous Embaffy to Mufcovy and Persia which gave occafion to Adam Olearius Secretary of it to Publifh an excellent Book of Travels in an account thereof.

Tonningen Seated alfo on the River Eyder about 5 Miles below Frederickftadt, and about 4 Leagues from the German Ocean, is a place of Traffick, and very well Fortified.

Hufum ftands upon the Gulf of Hever 10 Miles South from Frederickftadt, and has a good Harbour, which opens to the German Ocean; it is defended by a Citadel built by Adolph Duke of Holftein in 1581. after his Victory over the Ditmarfians: It was fortified during the late Wars, but the King of Denmark has fince Demolifhed them.

Over againft the Gulf of Hufum lyes the Ifland of Nortstrand.

Flensburg, fo called from the Bay of Fiens on which it ftands, and by it receives Ships of Burden from the Baltick Sea; is about 20 Miles diftant from Hufum to the North-Eaft. It is a fair City of one large ftreet near two Miles in length, and the Haven fo commodious that the Burghers can Load and Un-Load the Ships at their very Doors; the Suburbs are Guarded by a Cattle that ftands on the top of a Hill, and Commands both the Town and Harbour. The Situation of this Place is extrem Pleafant, being a Fruitful Valley encompass'd with Hills. The Country lying between this place and Sleswick was formerly Inhabited by the ancient Angles, that Invaded Britain, and gave it the Name of England, as Ethelweerd an ancient English Saxon Historian affirms.

Apenrade is Seated on another Bay of the Baltick Sea, about 15 Miles North from Fufburg, and is much frequented by Danish Fifhmen.

Luxburg or Glucksburg, a little Town and Cattle 4 Miles Eaft from Flensburg, has the Honour to give Title to the Dukes of Holftein Gulcksburg.

Haderleben, a Noted Sea Port, on a River or rather narrow Bay, that about 3 Leagues below falls into the Baltick Sea, about 30 Miles diftant from Flensburg, and 15 from Apenrade to the North, is a fair well built Town, the Streets large, and the Buildings uniform. It had formerly a ftrong Cattle on the top of a Hill near the Town, for its defence, but that was demolifhed by John Earl of Holftein, Son to King Chriftian I. who began to build a new one called from his Name Hansburg (or John's Building) which was afterwards finifhed by King Frederick II. This Town and Cattle were twice taken by the Suedes, during their Wars with the Danes, and reftored by the Peace concluded in 1658. It is alfo remarkable for giving Birth to Frederick III. in 1609.

Tunderen, two Port Towns, the greater and lefs, ftand on the Weftern Shoar, or Coaft of the German Ocean, about 25 Miles Weft from Apenrade, and the fame diftance North from Hufum.

Lohm Clofter ftands about 10 Miles North from Tunderen.

The Iflands adjacent to Sleswick, are thefe.

ALSEN, Situated in the Baltick Sea, over-againft the Country that lyes between Flensburg and Apenrade; on it are two Towns, befides feveral Villages, viz.

Sunderburg, which ftands on the South part of the Ifland, and is the ordinary Refidence of the Dukes of Holftein Sunderburg: It is a good Town and adorn'd with a ftately Cattle built by Chriftopher I. King of Denmark. This is a very ftrong Hold, and was able to fustain the Attack of General Wrangel, and even make him quit the whole Ifland.

Nordburg, Seated on the North part of the Ifland, and the Refidence of another Duke of the Family of Holftein, who has his Title from it. Was Built by King Suene, called Grottenbede, about the middle of the Twelfth Century.

And on the Weftern Coaft in the Ocean, are thefe Iflands.

NORTSTRANT which lyes over-againft Hufum, with feveral fmaller Ifles about it.

FORA a little North of it, and Anvom behind it. SYLT over-against Tunder. ROM a little North of it, with Lordland, Mindo, &c. but on these are no very considerable Towns, and therefore we shall pass them by; and proceed to the Third and last Division of Holstein.

CHAP. IV. Of North-Jutland.

JUTLAND, which takes up all the Northern part of this Continent, was the Country of the ancient Jutes, who assisted their Neighbours, the Angles in the Conquest of Britain; and according to the Opinion of divers Learned Men, was very anciently Inhabited by Men of a Gigantick Stature, who being in this Country Language, call'd Kempers gave occasion to the Romans, who wanted the Letter K. to call them and the whole Nation from them Cimbri whence the whole County, together with Sleswick and Holstein, Cimbria Chersonesus, q. d. The Peninsula of the Cimbri or Kempers. The whole Country is subject to the K. of Denmark, and is divided into divers great Lordships; but according to other Geographers, we shall consider it as divided into 4 Bishopricks, and note the most considerable Towns therein.

The Diocesis of RIPEN takes up all the South-West part of Jutland, and has within the Districts of it (according to Baudrand) 30 Prefectures, 282 Parishes 10 Royal Forts, and these 7 Cities, viz.

Ripen, Seated on the River Nipsick, which parting its self into 3 Streams, divides the City into so many parts, and falling into the German Ocean, makes a commodious Haven; about 50 Miles South-West from Flensburg, and 30 West from Haterleben. It is a place of considerable Traffic, and good Structure; the Cathedral especially is magnificent, being Built of hewn Stone, and has a Steeple of great height, which serves as a Land-mark, to the Sailors on these Coasts. This Church was Founded by King Eric Barn, about the year 848. but the Episcopal See, not establish'd till 150 years after, when the Pagan Idolatry having again prevail'd here, was expell'd, Christianity reestablish'd, and the Church reedified. It is also adorn'd with a sort of Univerfity, and Guarded by a Castle of Reasonable Strength. In the Swedish War A. D. 1645, this City was taken by them, but recovered by the Danes soon after.

Kolding, Seated on a River that falls into a Bay of the Baltick Sea, over against the Island of Finland, near 30 Miles East from Ripen, and 70 North from Sleswick, is a City of good Trade and Strength; being the Seat of the King's Custom-house, where the Oxen and Horses, and other Cattel, and Merchandize, that pass from North-Jutland to Holstein and other parts, are oblig'd to pay considerable Impotts; and is Fortified by a strong Citadel or Castle nam'd Amsburg. The City was Founded about the year 1268. by King Eric Glipping, in the place of an old ruinous Castle, and strengthened with good Walls, and deep Ditches, to serve as a Frontier to the Danish Dominions, which at that time extended no farther. King Christian III. was so pleas'd with the Situation and Pleasantsness of the Neighbouring Country, that he not only Repair'd the Castle of Amsburg, but remov'd his Court thither, and Dwell'd in it. The Buying and Selling of Cattle by the Drovers that come from all parts every year, is a great part of the Trade of this Town.

Fredericksodde, is a small Port, on the Banks of the lesser Belt, 20 Miles East from Kolding; not remarkable, except on account of Gustavus's Passage over the Ice, from it to Funen, and the other Islands, in the year 1657.

Weil, Seated like Kolding, on a little River that falls into the Baltick, and makes a large Harbour, is a compact, neat and well Built City, but not very large; about 15 Miles distant from Kolding to the North. Over against it about 30 Miles directly West, stands Warde on a River that falls into the German Ocean, and makes it a place convenient for Trade.

Ringkoping, stands about 30 Miles North from Warde, on a Bay of the German Sea, made by a Neck of Land, that stands near 30 Miles from North to South, between it and the Ocean, and thereby makes an excellent Haven.

Lemwick, stands on the Banks of the Bay of Limford, whence it has its name, on the utmost Northern Bounds of the Diocesis of Ripen; about 30 Miles North from Ringkoping.

Hodfellbro, or Hofbrebo, stands about 20 Miles South-East from Lemwick, and about the same distance North-East from Ringkoping. It is an Inland Town, but stands on a River which falls into a Lake, that opens to the German Ocean.

The Diocesis of ARHUSEN is the South-East part of Jutland, extending about 60 Miles along the Coasts of the Baltick Sea, and contains 304 Parishes, 5 Castles or Forts, and these 7 Cities and Wall'd Towns.

Aarbus or Arhusen, stands on the Cagat, at the Mouth of the Gude, which falls into the Baltick, 110 Miles directly North from Sleswick, 60 Miles East from Ringkoping, and Hodsebro, and about 90 Miles South from the Seager-Riff or utmost North-Land of Jutland, and 30 Miles North from the Island Funen. It is a neat and pleasant Town, Seated in the heart of Jutland, and furnish'd with all manner of necessaries, which the Country affords them plentifully; and Foreign Commodities of all sorts are daily brought them by Shipping. It is adorn'd with a Cathedral Church, of curious Architecture, and Beautified with many stately Monuments of Prelates, Noblemen, &c. But the Bishop's Palace, which was formerly a magnificent Structure, is fallen to decay. The Episcopal See was establish'd here about the latter end of the Tenth, or beginning of the Eleventh Century. This City was taken, and almost destroy'd by the Swedes, in 1644.

Horsens, stands about 15 Miles South from Aarbus, on a River that falls into a Bay of the Baltick. Randers stands about the same distance North from Aarbus, and has the same convenience for Navigation, being Seated on the River Gudden, that a few Leagues below falls into the Baltick, and is a place of good Trade, and famous for the best Salmon in Jutland.

Ebelsfofr 15 Miles, and Grinaa 20 Miles North-East from Aarbus, are both Towns of Trade, on the Baltick; as is also,

Mariager,

Mariæger, about 12 Miles North from Randers, Hobro, stands on the same River a few Miles above it.

The Diocess of WIBURG, lies into the middle of Jutland, having Akøburg on the North, Arhusen on the East, and Ripen on the West and South. It is of smaller extent than the other Diocesses, being not above 40 Miles over, and of form near round. Altho' it be an Inland Country, it wants not the convenience of Navigation, for here are large Lakes that branch out into several parts of this Land, and from whence by the means of the Lymford that passes out of them, and falls at last into the Baltic Sea, they receive Vessels of great Burden: Among these Bays or Lakes, there is one, nam'd, Orthesundt, from the Emperor Otho, firnam'd the Great, who about 948. made an inroad this way, and penetrat'd even as far as this Land, and casting his Javelin into the Water, gave it the name it still retains; the best Horses in Denmark, are bred in that part of this Diocess, nam'd Salling. In this Territory are comprehended 16 Baylywicks, 218 Parishes, and 3 Garrisons. the Towns of chiefest note are these,

Wiburg, which stands in the very middle of Jutland, in an exact Line, between Hodsebro to the East, and Randers to the West, 130 Miles North from Sleswick, 35 North-West from Aarhus, and 35 South from Aalborg. It is a place of great Resort, being the Seat of a High Court of Judicature, which receives the Appeals from Inferiour Courts, but none can be made from it, save to the King: It has been the See of a Bishop for above 600 years, but the exact time cannot be fix'd, for it is a matter still disput'd whether this or Aalborg be the most ancient.

This place was anciently call'd, Cimmersburg, as being the Chief City of the Cimbri, and whence it had its present name, is not very certain; but by a reasonable Conjecture, a late Author supposes it to be call'd so from its being the Habitation of the Pyrates, that anciently were very powerful in these parts and were call'd Wigs or Wikenger.

Harkjer, 25 Miles North from Wiburg, and Nybe, about 10 Miles North-East from it, are both noted Horse-markets.

The Diocess of AALBURG, otherwise call'd Burglaw, is the extrem North part of Jutland, and surrounded by the Sea, on all parts but the South, where it is divided from Wiburg and Ripen, by the Bay, call'd the Lymford, which runs from the Baltick Sea, above 100 Miles an end, and is shut out of the German Ocean, by a narrow Isthmus, made by the Sandhills on the West Shore of Jutland; over against the great Shoal, call'd the Fusche Riff. It is a fruitful Country, and pretty well enrich'd by Trade. Its Length from North-East to South-West, is 130 Miles, but the Breadth is not proportionable. It is divided into 13 Bailywicks or Herriets, which contain 165 Parishes, 100 Castles, and 6 Principal Towns.

Aalborg, stands on the narrow Branch of the Lymford, about 15 Miles from the Sea, 50 Miles from Arhus, and 35 from Wiburg to the North. The Bishoprick was Founded about the year 1060. but the Bishops Resided at Borlum, a Neighbouring Village, till the Reformation; since when the Lutheran Bishops have had their Palace here. The City was anciently call'd Burgle, and is said to have taken its present name from the multitude of the Fels taken near it in the Lymford, and by the Inhabitants Sold to other parts.

Tysted, stands near 50 Miles from Aalborg, in the middle of a Peninsula, made by the Lymford, and the German Ocean, which is reckon'd the most Fertile part of this Diocess. The Place is noted for a kind of Univerity in it, which was at first a Free School only, Founded by King Christian III.

Nikoping, about 15 Miles South-East from Tysted, stands in an Island made by the Lymford, call'd Mors Insula.

Northward of Aalborg, lies the Country call'd Wensyssel, whose Inhabitants are reckon'd the lusticst and hardiest of the King of Denmark's Subjects; the chief Town bearing the same Name, stands about 20 Miles West of Aalborg.

Seeby, a Port Town on the Eastern Shoar, 20 Miles North from Aalborg, stands in this Territory; as does also, Scagen, Seated on the Promontory, the most Northern Land of Jutland, which it gives name to; and is, a place of considerable Trade, being much frequented by Merchants, from all parts of Europe.

On the Eastern Coast of these Countries lie several Islands, whereof Samsøe over against Aarhus, and Lessow over against Aalborg, are only worth mentioning.

Of the BALTICK SEA, and the rest of the Principal ISLANDS of DENMARK.

The BALTICK SEA, (call'd also the East Sea) wherein these Islands that make so considerable a part of the Kingdom of Denmark, do lie, was anciently call'd Sinus Codanus, q. d. the Danish Bay, and 'tis thought took its Modern name from the Word Belt, as the Straights between Seeland and Funen, and that between Funen and Jutland, are at this day call'd. It is a very large Bay extending from the 54th Degree of Latitude to the 66th, and washes the Shores of Denmark, Sueden and some part of Poland and Muscovy; by the means whereof the Inhabitants of those Countries enjoy the great convenience of Navigation, and cheap communication, with all the Maritime parts of Europe. The passage into it is by the narrow Straights of the Belt, and the Sundt, the former as we have said, lying between the two Islands, &c. the latter is on the East side of Seeland between that and Sueden, which is the most frequented, and by the power the King of Denmark has over it, he raises a vast Income, by the Toll of Ships that pass in and out, pay him at his Castle of Cronenburg.

C H A P. V.
Of S E E L A N D.

SEELAND, or ZELAND, the largest and most fruitful Island in the Baltick Sea, lies in the Latitude, between 55. 31. and 56. 32. Longitude, between 31. 0. and 33. 0. being in Length about 60. and in Breadth about 40 Miles. It is divided from Schonen, a part of Sueden on the East by the Sound, and from Funen on the West, by the greater Belt, and has Falster and Laland on the South. It is a Country in most places, very pleasant, being beset with little Hills, Woods of Beech-Trees, Rivulets and Lakes; the Soil also is very fertile, producing Rye, Oats and Barley in abundance, and the Pastures have very good Grass. Some pretend its modern name, came from the plenty of Corn, that is Seeland q. Seedland. The Lakes and Rivers are stor'd with Fish, and the Forests with Game, such as Stags, Roe-Bucks, Wild-Boars, &c. According to Cluverius, this and the Neighbouring Islands, were Inhabited by the ancient Teutones, who by a variety of Dialect, were call'd Godani, Codani, and Dani, whence the Island was anciently nam'd Codononia. In it are 340 Parishes, and these Principal Cities and Towns.

COPENHAGEN, Hafnia, aut Havnia, the Chief City of the Island, and the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom, stands in a Plain on the Banks of the Sundt, about 5 Leagues West from the Coasts of Schonen, call'd by the Inhabitants Kjæbenhavn, and by the Germans Copenhagen, corruptly for Kjæbsmanhaven: q. d. Portus Mercatorum, or the Merchants Haven. It is a place of no great Antiquity, having grown up from a Castle, Built about the year 1168. by Axil Wide, the Archbishop, which being a Protection from the Pyrates, the Neighbouring Inhabitants resorted thither, and Building themselves Houses, laid the Foundations of a Town, which being improv'd by all the Danish Kings, especially Christian IV. it is become a City of the first Rank, and for the Beauty Strength and Bulk, not exceeded by very many. It was also at several times endow'd with Immunities, especially in the year 1443. by Christopher of Bavaria, King of Denmark; which were afterwards Ratified by King Christians III. and Frederick II. The Situation of this City is exceeding advantageous, having on the Land-side, a very pleasant Country, and on the Sea side one of the finest Havens in the World, capacious enough to hold 500 Sail of Ships, the Road without is very safe, and fenc'd from the violence of the Waves by a large Bank of Sand, and the entrance of the Port so narrow, that but one Ship can pass at a time; this is shut up every night with a Boom, and the Passage Guarded by the Citadel on one side, and a Block-House on the other. The whole City is environ'd with deep Ditches and high Ramparts of Earth, according to the modern Fortification, and on the East side it is join'd by a Bridge to the Island Amaka. The Streets are broad, clean and neat; and tho' formerly Citizens Houses were but poorly Built, at present they are fair enough. The chief Churches are those dedicated to the Holy-Ghost, S. Nicholas and the Cathedral of S. Mary, wherein the Kings are usually Crown'd: It is adorn'd with a stately Copper Spire, Built at the Cost of King Christians IV. This is a Bishops See, and the Seat of an University, Founded by Christians I. in 1478. And not many years ago an Academy was establish'd here for teaching all sorts of Martial Exercises, Foreign Languages and the Mathematicks: The late King much improv'd this College, and endow'd it with considerable Revenues and Privileges. Among the other publick Buildings, the chief are the Citadel, the Observatory, call'd the Round Tower, the Royal Palace, with the adjoining Gardens, and Banqueting-House of Rosenburg, the Exchange, and the Arsenal, which is reckon'd one of the best in Europe, and much celebrated for that wonderful Celestial Globe, of 6 Foot Diameter, made by Tycho-Brabe: The Market-Place is very spacious, and a great Ornament to the Town. The City is govern'd by 4 Burgo-Masters, one of whom is for Life. In the Suedish War Copenhagen was Besieg'd by Charles Gustavus, Ann. 1659. but the City held out, and the Suedes were forc'd to leave it.

Over against Copenhagen, on the other side the Haven to the Eastward, lies the Island of Amaga, about 6 Miles in Length, which is wonderfully stock'd with all sorts of Fowl and Venison, has plenty of Corn and Milch-kine, and furnishes the Markets at Copenhagen, with Weekly Supplies. In this Island are 2 Towns, call'd Hollander Dorp, and Sundbye. The Suedish Forces, made a Descent here on the 9th Octob. 1658. and the next day burnt down the Villages, but on 10 Decemb. following, they were so warmly attack'd by the Danes, that King Charles Gustavus, and General Wrangle were forc'd to leave their Army Engag'd, and make their escape in a Fisher-Boat.

Roschild, stands at the bottom of a narrow but deep Bay, call'd the Bay of Ifore, 20 Miles West from Copenhagen. It was formerly the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom, having had in it (as Lysander informs us) no less than 27 fair Churches; but the encroase of Copenhagen so near it, has drawn off its Trade and Inhabitants, and the place is at present not very considerable. About the year 1012. King Sueno establish'd an Episcopal See here, which is now remov'd to Copenhagen. Afterward Sueno Gratenbede Fortify'd the Town with a Wall, Ditch, and Ramparts. The Cathedral is a large old Church, and famous for the Tombs of many Danish Kings, some whereof are very Magnificent: Among these stands a Marble Pillar, on which Margaret Queen of Denmark hung the Whetstone that Albert King of Sweden scornfully sent her to sharpen her Needles; but the Jest cost him dear, for this Heroine defeated and took and detain'd him Prisoner Seven years, and made him renounce his Right to the Kingdom of Sueden. It is still a Town of some Trade, and is notable for a Treaty of Peace concluded in it, between the Suedes and Danes, in 1658.

Elfenour, Elfenore, Helfchenoor, Helsingor or Helsingor, (as it is variously Written) is so nam'd q. d. Hals en Oor, i. e. an Ear in the Neck, as being at first only a Watch-Tower, Built on the Neck, or Straight of the Sea, call'd the Sound, or Ore Sundt; It is also probable that the Cattle of Helsingburg, on the opposite Shoar derives its name from the same Origine: Between these 2 Forts pass all Vessels that Trade in the the Baltick, so that this Straight next that of Gibraltar, may be esteem'd the most frequented of any in Europe. Elfenore stands about 15 Miles North from Copenhagen, and is defended by the Neighbouring impregnable Castle of Cronenburg, which commands this side of the Sound, as Helsingburg does the other. It was Built by Frederick II. of Free-stone brought from Gotland. Every Ship that passes this Straight must strike Sail at Cronenburg, and come to the Town to Compound for the Custom, under a Penalty of Confiscating his Vessel and Cargo. Charles Gustavus King of Sueden, took it in the year 1658, and restor'd it at the Treaty of Copenhagen, in 1660.

Fredericksburg, about 12 Miles W. from Elfenore, and 20 N. from Copenhagen, is a stately Castle and Royal Palace seated in a pleasant Wood. It was a Monastery, and turn'd into a Castle by Frederick II. whose Son Christian IV. not only completed the Building, but adorn'd it with Painting, Statues, and the richest Furniture; to which his Successor Frederick III. still added, so that it has the character of one of the finest Palaces in Europe, and is the King's place of Retirement for Pleasure.

Holbeck, stands about 18 Miles West from Roskild, at the bottom of a Bailywick, it has the advantage of a small Traffick.

Kallenburg, stands on the Western Coast of the Island, just over against Copenhagen, at 50 Miles distance from it, and 35 from Roskild, to the West. It is a place of considerable Traffick, and has a very safe and commodious Harbour; formerly being a small Village Inhabited by Fishermen, it was call'd Herwig, till Esbern, Brother to Axel or Absalom Huyd, Archbishop of Lunden, about the middle of the 12th Century, rais'd it to the dignity of a City, and beautified it with a Church, Castle and other publick Edifices.

Ringsted, Seated near the middle of Seeland, about 15 Miles from Roskil to the South, and 15 from Koge to the West, is a place of the greatest Antiquity in Seeland, except Roskild, and has been honour'd with the Intetment of many Danish Kings, particularly Waldemar I. and Eric the Pious; But it being a place of no Trade is not at present very considerable.

Sor, Soor or Sora, is seated in a pleasant Woody Country, 7 Miles from Ringsted. About the middle of the 12th Century, Absalom Huyd, Archbishop of Roschild, and Bishop of Lunden, Founded a fair, Monastery here, and endow'd it with large Revenues for the maintenance of Learned Men, by the encouragement whereof, Saxo Grammaticus collected Materials, and compos'd his excellent History of the Danish Kings. Esbern the Archbishop's Brother enlarg'd it, and augmented the Revenues by the addition of 14 Villages. Afterwards King Frederick II. remov'd the School he had establish'd at Fredericksburg, for the Education of young Noblemen to this Place, and from a rich Popish Monastery, it was converted into one of the noblest Free Schools in the Reform'd part of Christendom; to which Christian IV. added Professors with proper Salaries, to teach Academical Learning; And also constituted an Academy, with Masters to instruct young Gentlemen in all sorts of martial Exercises. So that Sora became a considerable Univerfity, and well Endow'd, the Lands of the Demolish'd Nunnery of Mariæbo in Laland, having been given to it in 1621. But at present all its Revenues are possess'd by the King; and tho' he sometimes talks of restoring them, the Professors of Copenhagen will use their interest against it, and Sor is still likely to remain only a pleasant Country Town.

Koge, is a small but very Populous Town, Seated on a small Bay of the Sound, 20 Miles South from Copenhagen. It is enrich'd by Traffick, which consists chiefly in Corn and Fish, and the Country about it is remarkably Pleasant.

Prestoe, a Trading Town, stands on the Bay of the Sound, on the South side of Seeland, over against the Island Mona, 30 Miles South from Koge.

Warienburg, stands about 10 Miles South West from Prestoe, on another small Bay, over against the Island Falster, and is a place of some Trade.

Nestved stands 20 Miles North from Warienburg, on a small River that falls into the Belt.

Skelskor, stands on the West side of Seeland, on the Coast of the Belt, 30 Miles North-West from Warienburg, and 35 West from Koge.

Korsor, about 8 or 9 Miles, North-West from Skelskor, stands on a Promontory or small Cape, that jets out over against Funen, and makes a good Haven, on the North side of it. This was the Place that Carolus Gustavus, King of Sueden, first arriv'd at with his Fleet, in 1658. when he Invaded this Island.

FUNEN, or FIONIA, the next considerable Island of Denmark, lies on the West of Seeland, between that and Jutland, being separated from the former by the Straight, call'd the greater Belt on the East, and from the latter by the Straight, call'd by the Inhabitants the Medilsarsund, or the lesser Belt: It is about 50 Miles long, and 40 Miles broad, and produces plenty of Corn, even enough to export abroad, and has Pasture for a vast number of Cattle that are bred here; whereof the Horses are much esteem'd. This Island is an Appenage of the eldest Son of the King of Denmark; and the Governmen. of it is one of the most considerable in the Kingdom. Here are 264 Villages, 4 Garrison, and these 4 considerable Towns.

Odensee or Ortensee, the chief City, stands in the middle of the Island, about 80 Miles West from Copenhagen, 70 North from Sleswick, and about 20 Miles South from the beginning of the Straight of the Belt. The annual Sessions of the Nobility and Magistrates are held here, as were formerly the general Conventions of the Realm, till the Crown was made Hereditary, in the year 1660. It is a handfom Town, the Buildings being fair, and the Streets broad and uniform; the Town-House is a stately Structure, and stands on a very spacious Market-place. Among other publick Buildings are 2 fair Churches, dedicated to St. Francis, and St. Crute a Danish King, who was Marry'd in this City, Ann. Dom. 1086. and whose Body was found in this Church, as the Work-

Workmen were Repairing the Quire, in the year 1582. the Coffin that contain'd it was of Copper Gilt, adorn'd with precious Stones, and bore an Inscription, declaring who it was. This is an Episcopal See, Erected in the year, 950. and in the Town-Hall the ancient League between the Crown of Denmark, and the Dukes of Holstein, and Sleswick was renew'd by Frederick II. in the year 1575.

Nuburg, or Nyburg, Seated on the Eastern side of the Island, over against Korsor in Seeland, 15 Miles East from Odersee, is one of the Principal Towns in Fünen, and the usual passage from thence to Seeland; And has a capacious and safe Haven, wherein Ships of the largest Burden may ride at Anchor. It is also well Fortify'd, and has been anciently honour'd with the Residence of the Danish Kings, and the Session of their Parliaments.

Schwinnburg, stands on the South-East corner of the Island, 30 Miles South from Nuburg, and has a large and commodious Harbour; it is famous for the passage of the Swedish Forces, over the Ice (in the year, 1658.) from hence to Seeland.

Foborg, stands also on the South Coast, 10 Miles Westward from Schwinnburg.

Affens, stands on the western Coast over against Hatersteben in Sleswick, and 30 Miles South West from Nuburg.

Middlefar lies also on the Western Shore, 25 Miles North from Affens, and is the common passage from this Island to Kolding in Jutland. Charles Gustavus, King of Sweden, led his Army from Jutland, over the Ice to this place, on the 13 Jan. 1658. and overrun all the Island.

Sophiadde stands about 10 Miles North from Middlefar, just over against Frederickodde in Jutland.

C H A P. VII.

Of Langeland, Laland, and the rest of the smaller Islands of D E N M A R K.

LANGELAND, so call'd from its long narrow Form, lies on the South-East of Fünen, in length about 30 Miles, but in breadth hardly 8. It is a fruitful Soil, and adorn'd with many Noblemens Seats; on it are 16 Parish Churches, and a strong Fort, call'd Franecker. The chief Town is Ruskoping, Seated on the Western Coast, over against Schwinnburg in Fünen; between which lies the small Island Tassing. And a little to the West and on the South of Fünen, over against Foburg, lies ARROE, another small Island.

LALAND, or LAWLAND, lies on the S. of Seeland, from which it is separated by the narrow Strait of Gronsfond, or Golderfond, as it is written in the Maps, and takes its name from its low Situation. Its extent is about 30 Miles from East to West, and 20 from North to South, having a Rich Soil that produces Corn and Pasture in abundance. In it are 4 Herriets or Lordships, and 4 good Towns, among which Naxkow that stands on a Bay that opens to the Belt, is the Principal, and is well Fortified. Newstads, was once famous for a noble Monastery, Founded there Ann. 1268. And the Nunnery of Mariebo mention'd in the description of Sor, was sometime as remarkable as any place in the Island.

FALSTER adjoyns to Laland, being divided by only a narrow Bay, and lies on the South of Seeland (whence it is separated by the Gronsfundt) just over against Warrenburg. Its length from North to South, is about 20 Miles, but the lower part of it is but very narrow; on the North part it is about 16 Miles broad. Its Soil is very fruitful, and much Corn is sent from hence to Mecklenburg, and other parts of Germany. It is divided into 2 Bailiwicks, viz. Narreherriet and Synder Herriet; and has several Towns, among which the Principal are, Nykoping, Seated on the West side of the Island, one of the most pleasant and best Built Towns in the whole Kingdom, and fill'd by Dr. Heylin, the Naples of Denmark. Stubbkoping, Seated on the North Coast and a place of Trade, and the usual passage from Seeland, MON, MEUN, MONEN, or Mona lyes on the North-East of Falster, and South of Seeland, 15 Miles in length, and about 5 or 6 in breadth. It is a Landmark to the German Vessels, that frequent these Coasts. And because of its Situation was formerly given to the Admiral of Denmark, being a convenient place for his Residence. Its chief Town is Stekke or Stege, which was remarkable for the gallant defence it made against the Lubeckers in 1510. And the Valour of the Inhabitants of the whole Island, was signalized in 1659. when they defended themselves better against the Suedes, than the other larger Islands had done.

FEMEREN Seated on the Coast of Wagerland, from whence it is parted by a very small Channel; tho' it be but a small Plot of Ground, has always been esteem'd of great importance, being one of the Keys of Denmark on the side of Germany. And on that account King Christian IV. in the year 1628. caused the chief places on it, especially Borg, to be strongly Fortified.

SAMSOE, lyes on the North of Fünen, and a few Leagues East from the Coast of Jutland over against Aarbusen. It is an Island of small extent, yet has been lately Erected into a County by the late King Christian V. in favour of Madam Mose a Citizen's Daughters of Copenhagen, on whom that Prince begot two Natural Sons, and Created the Mother Countess of Samsøe.

HUEN, or, as others Write it Ween, is a small Island Situate in the Strait of the Sound between Seeland and Schonen, to the North-West of Copenhagen, and was formerly famous for the Castle or Tower of Uraniburg, wherein that noble Danish Baron Tycho Brahe made his Astronomical Observations; but it is now demolished: He had also here a deep Dungeon called Stelliburg, from whence he could view the Stars in the Day time.

The Island of BORNHOLM lyes very remote from Denmark, viz. 25 Leagues from Seeland to the East,

East, and not above 6 Leagus from the Coast of Schonen to the South-East. It is about 20 Miles in extent, from North to South, and about 12 from East to West, and of an Oval Form. It was anciently called Boringia, Borunda, and Holma, and is said to have been discovered by Thieloraus, the Son of a Futland Prince. It is a place of great Importance for its Situation and Fruitfulness; and once belonged to the Archbishop of Lunden, but Christian II. took Possession of it 1524. being absolutely necessary for the Fleet which he designed against the Sweeds. Which Usurpation George Sefleberg, who was then Archbishop, opposed with all his Power, but in vain, for he was at last forced to fly into Germany, to avoid the effects of the King's displeasure. During the late War this Island was often wasted by the Sweeds, to whom it was surrendered by the Treaty of Roschild, but the Danes have since redeemed it by the Exchange of several Lands in Schonen. Sandwyck on the Northern Coast, and Rottum on the South-western, are the chief Towns, besides which, there is the Town of Nexoa and the Castle of Hammerbusen, and several Villages.

There are many other small Islands on the Coasts of Futland and Zeeland, but they are not considerable enough to deserve a particular Description.

Besides the Continent and Islands above mentioned the King of Denmark is possessed of the two Counties of OLDENBURG and DELMEN-

HORST in Germany, which lye separated from Holstein by the Duchy of Bremen.

OLDENBURG is a flat Moorish Country lying in the Circle of Westphalia, between the Duchy of Bremen on the North-East, East-Friesland, or the County of Einden on the West, and part of the Bishoprick of Munster to the South, and the German Ocean on the North: It is about 50 Miles in length, and 25 in breadth. The chief Town which gives Name to the County, is seated on the River Hunte, at the distance of 50 Miles from Emden to the East, and 30 from Bremen to the West. It is well Fortified with Walls and Ditches, and a strong well built Castle. The Houses are very mean, but the place hath a pretty good Trade by means of the River, which falling into the Weser, Ships of small Burden can come up to the Town. This Country is noted for an Excellent Breed of Horses, introduced some years ago, by Anthony Hunter, the last Count, descended from Witiking the first Duke of Saxony, whose Line intirely failing in the year 1676. this County fell to the King of Denmark, who is descended from that Family.

The small County of DELMENHORST adjoyns to Oldenburg on the South East, the chief Town of the same Name, stands on the River Dilma, 16 Miles East from Oldenburg, and 14 West from Bremen: It is strongly Fortified, but otherwise not very considerable.

NORWAY,

NORWAY, Norwegia.

Consult the Map of Sweden.

NORWAY has its Name from it's Situation towards the North Pole; for Nordweg in the Language of that Country signifies the Way of the North. It was anciently according to Pliny called Nerigon, and by others Nordmania. As the story commonly goes, Norus the Son of Humbius King of Sweden was the first King, who by his prudent Management, and good Example, reclaim'd and Civiliz'd, the barbarous Sitones, the first Inhabitants of this Country. After his Death, they fell to parting the Kingdom among themselves, and so were engaged in Civil Wars; and at last being either weary of shedding their own Blood, or forced for want of Provisions, they left their own Country, and betaking themselves to Piracy on the Seas, became at last formidable Conquerors. They Ravag'd the Coast of Friezland and Britain, and after many Engagements, wherein they always came off Victorious, France at last became the Object of their Ambition, and having enter'd the Mouth of the Loire, after the Death of Charlemaign, they Sack'd the Cities of Nantes, Tours, and Angers, but from thence Marching into Gascogne were repulsd and entirely defeated. A party of them went into Italy, expecting the Fortune of the Goths, but proceeded no further than the surprizing some places in Liguria, and return'd to France, where they joined a new Herd of their Countrymen, and under the Name of Normans became considerable; insomuch that in the time of Charles the Simple, they settled themselves in Neufria, from them, since called Normandy; which that Prince was oblig'd to surrender to them. Some Historians are of opinion that Charles encouraged them, in order to have their assistance against Eudo his Rival for the Crown, for he Married his Daughter Giselle to Rollo, their General, who became Duke of Normandy, and was succeeded by his Posterity. The Posterity of Norus being extinct Subdager Son-in-Law to Gram King of Denmark, came to be King of Norway. Harald Surnamed Harfager Reigned about the year 978, and after the Death of Olaus, the last of his Race, the Crown of Norway was convey'd to Denmark by the Marriage of Haquin their King, to Margaret Daughter of Waldemar III. King of Denmark A. D. 1387. Since which time Norway has been Governed by a Vice-Roy of the King of Denmark. The Norwegians have made several attempts to set up Kings of their own Nation, particular Hermolus Huldphat, but to no purpose, and these Conspiracies have only tended to the encreasing of their Chains. The best account we can give the Reader of the Succession of these Kings (the History of this Country being very obscure) is here set down.

An Interregnum of 4 years,

NORWAY is a long, but narrow (in comparison of its length) Tract of Land, on the West side of Scandinavia, between Sweden and the Ocean; having on the East side a long Ridge of Mountains call'd at parts by different Names, as Fille-Field, Dofre-Field, Rund-Field, Daar-Field, &c. but they are commonly by Historians tiled the Dofrine Mountains: These divide Norway from Sweden, and the Ocean washes all the Western Coast, as also the Southern and Northern. It lyes between 58 and 72 Deg. of Lat. and 24 and 32 Deg. of Long. its length is about 800 Miles, Reckoning from the North Cape in Finmark, to the Nave in the mouth of the Baltick, but its breadth is not above 100 Miles, and in some parts not near so much. The Southern Part is reasonably Temperate; but the AIR is very Cold, and the Land produces very little Corn or Fruits; its Wealth consistng chiefly in the vast Forests of mighty Fir Trees, whose usefulness in Building makes the Merchants of England, Holland, and other Nations flock thither to Buy 'em: The Earth hath Mines of Iron, Copper, and some Silver; with Pitch and Tar, and Fish, (whereof great quantities are taken on the Coasts and expofed,) are COMODITIES of this Country.

The INHABITANTS are generally Strong and Courageous: And (as Puffendorf observes) undergo all sorts of hardship, with more Vigour than the Danes, being inured to Severity by their Soil and Climate: But the Danes keep them under, and give 'em no opportunities of shewing their Strength, and have gradually removed all their ancient Nobility, to prevent any potent Faction to arise. The King being being careful to keep this Country to himself, especially on account of the good Revenue he receives from it, which is reckon'd by Mr. Moldsworth, at seven hundred Thousand Rix Dollars per Annum. The Norwegians are good Sea-men, and are therefore Cherished by the Hollanders.

The Christian RELIGION is said to have been planted here, about the middle of the Tenth Century, and the Reformation was Introduced by the Danes, so that Lutheranism is the profes'd Religion.

Norway is divided into five Dioceses or Prefectures, viz. those of Aggerhusen or Obflo, Bergben, Drontheim, Wardbus, and Babus, and several Islands.

The Map of Norway is joynd to that of Sueden, and contained in the same Plate.

The Province of AGGERHUSE is the South East part of Norway, being Scated between the Province of Bergben on the West, the Confines of Sueden on the East, the mouth of the Baltick Sea on the South, and the Government of Drontheim on the North; its extent from North to South is about 250 Miles, and from East to West in the South part about 180, but grows narrower Northwards till it ends in a Point, being in form of a Cone. The Land is Mountainous and Woody, but the Vallies are reasonably Fruitful, watered by many Rivers and Lakes, that pass through the Country and fall into the Baltick. It is divided into six smaller Governments, viz. Agdesinden, Hallingdal, Hammer, Hennemark, Romerikee, and Tellemark which Orstelius takes to be the ancient Thyle. The chief Cities and Towns are Anflo or Obflo, call'd also Christiana, seated at the bottom of a narrow Bay, at the distance of about 14 Leagues from the Baltick Sea, and 50 Leagues from the Scagen Cape in Jutland to the North, in the Latitude of 60 deg. 30 min. and Longitude 28. 30. is the Seat of the chief Court of Judicature for the whole Kingdom, as also an Episcopal See. The City owes its Foundation to King Harold, Cotemporary with Sueno Estbrith King of Denmark, who about the Middle of the eleventh Century kept his Court here: But the old Town being destroy'd by Fire, Christian IV. King of Denmark and Norway Rebuilt it about the year 1614. and gave it the Name of Christiana, by which it is at this day generally called, and is a place of good Trade for Fir Timber, Pitch, &c. The Cathedral is Dedicated to St. Alward, and in it is shewn the Sword of Haquin, one of their ancient Kings, the Hilt whereof is of Crystal, and is a notable Curiosity for Art, as well as Antiquity. In this City the Nuptial Rites between King James VI. of Scotland, afterwards King of England, and Ann the Daughter of Frederick II. King of Denmark, were Solemniz'd on 23 November 1589. that Prince having taken a Voyage hither upon the Ladies being driven back by contrary Winds when the first set out for Scotland.

Aggerhusen, or Aggerhuslor, from which the whole Province takes its Name, is a strong Castle seated on the other side of the Bay, over against Anflo, from which it is distant but a few Leagues to the West. It was remarkable for the brave resistance it made against the Suedish Army in the year 1567. which Besieged it hoily for eighteen weeks together, but was at last bear off, and forced shamefully to Retire.

Frederickstadt stands on another Bay of the Baltick, called the Catgar, and the mouth of the River Glammen, that rises in Drontheim, and having passed through the Province of Aggerhusen, here falls in the Sea, and by the convenience thereof affords the Town a good Trade. It is seated about 60 Miles from Christiana to the South East, and about the same distance from Jutland to the North. It had its Name from Fredrick III.

Saltzberg stands on the River Drammen, about 20 Miles North-West from Christiana, it is a good City having a considerable Trade from the Neighbouring Copper and Iron Mines.

Tonsberg, seated on the Bay of Opflo, and Scheen but a few Miles from it, about 40 Miles South from Saltzberg, are both places of good Trade, by means of the same Mives, and a Silver one that was discovered in the Reign of Christian IV.

Hollen, seated on the Lake Nordsee, 15 Miles North-West from Tonsberg, is remarkable for its Church, which is cut out of the Rock call'd Tear, and has a Burying place on the Top of it; it is very ancient, and supposed by Olaus Wormius to be originally a Heathenish Temple.

Hammer formerly a Bishops See, which is now united to that of Auslo, stands on the River Glammon, 80 Miles North from Auslo or Christiana. Near this City in a little Island call'd Moos (as Olaus Meguus reports) a monstrous Serpent always appears before any Notable Revolution in the State of Norway.

The Northern part of this Province is very Mountainous, and not very Populous, so that there are few Towns of note that way.

The Province or Government of BERGHEN takes up all the West side of Norway, lying between the Government of Aggerhusen, and the Coasts of the Ocean, from the Cape called the Naze in the South, up to the Latitude of 63. 0. where the Government of Drontheim begins. It is divided into the Governments of Berghen and Staffenger. Which are again subdivided into smaller Prefectures. Those under Berghen are, Nord-Hotland, Sud-Hotland, Hardanger, Vestfirdal, Lordal, Soghne, Sud-fiord, Nord-fiord, and Sundmarland.

Berghen, an ancient and famous Sea-Port mentioned by Pomponius Mela and Pliny, stands on a Bay of the Ocean which makes a Commodious Harbour, in the Latitude of 61. 0. at the distance of 140 Miles from the Naze to the North, and as many from Christiana to the West; it is almost surrounded with Hills, from whence it has its Name. It is reckon'd the largest, most beautiful and most Populous City of Norway, as also the Principal Mart and Magazine for Merchandize, divers sorts of Furrs, vast quantities of Hides, Tallow, Fir Timber, &c. being brought hither from the Neighbouring Provinces and Shipt off to Foreign parts. The Inhabitants especially, drive a great Trade in Stock-Fish, which are taken on these Coasts. The Buildings were formerly very mean, but through the flocking of Strangers hither, on account of Trade, from Hamburg, Lubeck, Holland, England, &c. the Place is so Enriched, that the Houses are not only new Built, but it is also Beautified with a Fair Exchange. The Haven is surrounded with Hills, which render it secure from the Weather, is very Capacious, and deep enough to receive Ships of above 200 Tuns, and is defended by a strong Castle. The City is endowed with many Privileges, and Honoured with the Presence of the Viceroy. All which, render this the Metropolis of the Kingdom of Norway.

Eyde about 15 Miles East from Berghen, and Bischofsware 10 Miles from Eyde, are reckon'd the other Principal Towns in this Government.

Staffanger or Stavanger, is seated in a Peninsula, upon a spacious Bay of the Ocean, full of small Islands, at the distance of 90 Miles from Berghen to the South, and 150 from Christiana to the West. The Harbour is very large and safe; and tho' the City be but a small one it is the See of a Bishop, and the chief of a Government, which has under it the Prefectures of Carmen, Rysfoll, Feren and Dalene: And is Guarded by the strong Fortrels of Doefwick which stands to the Sea-ward, about 2 Miles from the Town.

The Government of DRONTHEIM is the largest part of Norway, being near 500 Miles in length, and in some parts 120, tho' generally about 80 Miles in breadth. It lyes a long the Coasts of the North Sea, from the 63d. to the 69th Degree of Latitude, having some Provinces of Sueden and the Suedish Lapland on the East, the Ocean on the West, Berghen on the South, and Wardhuys on the North. The Country is Mountainous, Woody, Cold and Barren; so that tho' it be large the Towns are not very considerable. For Civil Government, it is divided into the Prefectures or Districts of Nardmer, Surendal, Fofferlen, Stadt-burgen, Nordbregden, Nomandal, Faderogen, Massen, Scorduel, Serinden, Selboe, Lenstrand, Bynes, Schoenien, Guldael, Mesdael, Oorckedael, Singefegan, Renekbone, Obdael and Salten. The Provinces of Jemmland and Hardendal, were also part of this Government before they were united to the Crown of Sueden by the Treaty of Brosbroe; and indeed the whole Country was given to the Suedes by the Treaty of Roschild in 1658. but was restored by the Treaty of Copenhagen in 1660.

Drontheim or Truntheim is seated on the Coasts of the Northern Ocean, at the mouth of the River Nider, from which it was anciently Named Nidrosia, in the Latitude of 65. 20. about 300 Miles North East from Berghen. It is an Archiepiscopal See, and was heretofore the Royal Seat of the ancient Kings of Norway, being then a large City, but is at present not considerable, having suffer'd thro' many Conflagrations particularly in 1522. when the Stately Cathedral, Dedicated to St. Olaus, which surpass'd in Beauty all the Churches in the Northern Countries, was almost destroy'd. The Palace also is fallen to decay, and the Walls, Bulwarks, and Trenches in Rubish; so that the City is rather now a Village, the Port is incommodious, the Entrance being obstructed by Rocks, and in general the place not at all considerable, except for the Seat of the Governor, who usually Resides in the Castle.

The Country round about is very Barren, and even Wood is so scarce that a little beyond the City, the People are fain to use Fish Bones for Fuel and divers Utensils.

Leesstrand stands about 10 Miles South from Drontheim.

Strenden stands 40 Miles South East from Drontheim, on the River Nider.

Scoordale stands on the other side of the same Bay, about 7 Leagues North West from Drontheim.

Opdael and Sundael, both seated at the bottom of a narrow Bay about 10 Leagues from the Ocean, and 100 Miles South from Drontheim.

Romsdalen stands at the bottom of another Bay, 70 Miles South East from Opdael and 170 from Drontheim.

Solendal about 30 Miles South West from Romsdalen stands on another Bay. They are all places of some Trade, but we find nothing Remarkable of 'em in Authors.

Northward, on the extrem Point of this Province, near the Confines of Wardhuys, and in the Latitude of 69. 20. stands Melanger, upon the Bay of the Ocean, and about 80 Miles from it stands Scheem, which are the two chief Towns of the North Division of Drontheim, called the Government of Salten.

The Province of WARDHUYS, or the Norwegian Lapland, and Finmark, or as it is called by the Natives Taakemark, is the most Northern part of Norway, and bounded on the North and West

West by the Ocean, on the East by the Muscovite Lapland, and on the South by the Suedish Lapland. Its extent is near 300 Miles from East to West, and 200 from North to South. From the Northern Situation we cannot expect much produce of the Earth, or plenty of People, and consequently no Cities or considerable Towns that make any figure in History. It was anciently Inhabited by the Finni, of whom Tacitus says, They are a People extraordinary Savage, and miserably Poor, have neither Horses, Arms, House, nor Home; but feed upon Roots, and such Provisions as their Bows and Arrows can procure, and are Cloathed with the Skins of Wild Beasts. And to this day they live very Rudely; but their Manners being much the same with the Suedish Laplanders, we shall refer the Reader thither, intending to speak more particularly of these People who are so different from other Nations.

Wardhuys, the Seat of the Governor, is a Castle, with a Street or small Town of Cottages, Inhabited by Fishermen, on the Island Wardz, which lies on the North-East point of Norway, near the Confines of the Muscovite Lapland; the Castle is old and not very well Fortify'd, and the Island is but small being only 14 or 15 Miles in Circumference, and separated about 2 Leagues from the Continent. The Inhabitants of this and the Neighbouring Islands live upon Dry'd Stock-fish, and have neither Bread nor Beer, but what is brought them from other Parts, by the English and Dutch Ships that come this way for Fish.

On the Island Maggero, (the Land whereof makes the North Cape, or Promontorium Reticæ) as also on Suroy and Trommes, 2 other Islands more Southward, are Churches for Christian Worship, but on the Continent the People are Stupid Idolaters.

We have said above that the Government of Wardhuys comprehends Finmark, and the Norwegian Lapland, 'tis necessary to subjoin that the Maritime part of it is Finmark, and the upland and Southern part is Lapland.

There are a great number of Islands lie along on the Coasts of all this Kingdom, but they are not considerable enough to deserve naming. Only Iseland must not be omitted.

ISELAND, so call'd from its extream Coldness, is an Island Seated in the Northern Ocean, about 150 Leagues Eastward from the Coast of Norway, and 120 Leagues North from Scotland. The Arctick Circle, and the First Meridian both pass over this Island, so its Latitude and Longitude is easily guess'd at. Its extent from East to West, is near 300 Miles, and from North to South about 150. The Soil (tho' the most South part of the Island, lie in near the same Latitude with Drontheim, where the Land is barren) is reasonably Fertile, and affords Pasture for Horses, Cows, Oxen, and other Cattel: The Air is extream Cold, but very Healthy, and the Inhabitants are strong and remarkable for their long Lives, without knowing the use of Physick. In the Woods are White Bears, Foxes, Hares, and other Game, of whose Skins the Inhabitants make their Cloaths. On the Coasts they catch Whales, and so great a quantity of other Fish, that when they want Hay, they dry 'em to give their Cattle. The Mountains are always cover'd with Snow, three of them are Vulcanos, and continually cast out Fire, the most remarkable whereof is Mount Hekla, which cannot be approach'd nearer than 2 Leagues without Danger; at the Foot of it are several Mines of Brimstone; such Shoals of Ice with melted Snow come down from the Mountains, that frequently Trees and Cattle are carry'd away. The People are Honest, and reckon'd the best and faithfulllest Servants in the World; and in the Towns, the Christian Religion, according to the Lutheran persuasion, is profess'd, but in the ruder parts Idolatry is still follow'd. The chief Town is Skalholt, which stands in the Latitude of 66.0. to the North-East of Mount Hekla; the other chief Towns are Hols on the North Coast, Bered on the South-East, Hamer on the South-West, &c. In the Castle of Bested the King's Vicerey Resides. The Houses are Built of Wood, and cover'd with the Bark of Trees, Skins or Turfs; the Villages upon the Sea-Coasts, and along the Rivers remove their Houses, as their occasions or inclinations lead them. The Havens of Hancfruid and Kopurich, are much frequented by Ships from Hamburg, Denmark, England, and other parts, who bring the Inhabitants the necessaries they want, and receive in Exchange, Tallow, Hides, Butter, Whale-oil, Dry'd Fish, and Sea-Horse-Teeth, which is as good as Ivory.

The Islands of Scherland and Fera, which lie between Iseland and Swolend, in the same Latitude with the Government of Berghen in Norway, are also Subjects to the King of Denmark.

The King of Denmark also reckons Groenland and Greenland part of his Dominions; but of it we shall speak hereafter when we come to treat of the Countries, lying about the North and South Poles.

And now having pass'd from the Naze to the North Cape, and taken a sufficient View of Norway, we might pass on to Sweden, but that the little Province Babus, tho' belonging to the Suede, was formerly part of Norway, must be mention'd here.

The Province or Government of BAHUS, is the most South part of Norway, a narrow Tract of Land lying on the Coast of the Baltick Sea, about 90 Miles in Length, from North to South, between the Baltick on the West, Sueden on the East, Aggerhusen on the North, and Gotthland on the South; its Breadth is not proportionate to the Length, being in some parts but 10. in none above 25 Miles Broad. The Country is fruitful enough, but a great part of it is taken up by large Lakes of Water. It formerly belong'd to the King of Denmark, till by the Treaty of Roschild, in 1658. it was given to the Suede, to whom it is now subject; and is divided into two Parts, Inlandt and Wschfiden.

Babus, which gives name to the Province, is a strong Castle, Built on a small Island, made by the River Trolbeta, 150 Miles South-East from Aggerhusen, 9 Miles from Gotteberg, and 20 Leagues East from the Cape Schagen in Futland. It was Founded by Harquin II. King of Norway, in the year 1309. and stands on a steep Rock near the Banks of the River, and was reckon'd a sufficient Bulwark against the Suedes and Ostrogoths. It was Surrender'd with the Province to the Suedes, in 1658. but afterwards in 1678. when the Danes assembled to retake it, it withstood their Assaults.

Maelstrand or Maelsterland, is the only remarkable Town in the Province of Wschfiden, and is seated on a Rocky Peninsula, about 10 Miles below Babus; it is a place of great Trade for Herrings, and other Sea-Fish; and is guarded by a strong Castle, Built at the Mouth of the River Wener, which not far from thence falls into the Catgat. It was taken by the Danes, in 1676. but restor'd by the Treaty at Fountainbleau, in 1679.

S U E D E N, which makes up the greatest part of Scandinavia, is Bounded with Norwegian, Lapland, and the North Sea on the North, the Baltic Sea on the South, Muscovy on the East, and Denmark and Norway on the West. The extent of the whole Kingdom is about 800 Miles from North to South, and much about the same from East to West. It lies between the 58 Degrees, 40 Min. and the 68 Degrees, 30 Min. of North Latitude, and from the 30th Degree to the 60th Degree of Longitude, in form resembling a Vine Leaf, whereof the Gulf of Bothnia, is the Stem, round which the several parts of Sueden, are seated; Gotland and Sueden Proper on the West side, Finland and Livonia on the East and Lapland on the North. The Country is very much cover'd with Lakes and Forests, and some parts with craggy Mountains; however, the other parts of the Land afford Corn sufficient for the Inhabitants, Pasture and Breeds of Horses and Cattle; Westmania and Dalecarlia, have rich Copper Mines, and even one Silver one. Finland produces Pitch, Tar, and Fir-Timber, and Vermelandia

good store of Malts for Shipping. So that the Native COMMODITIES of Sweden are Copper, Iron, Tar, Pitch, Hemp, Malts, Deal Boards, &c. which are so useful Commodities, that all the Nations of Europe Resort hither, and bring the Inhabitants every thing they want in Exchange. But the Commodities whereof they make the greatest account, are Copper and Iron, which they Manufacture, and send abroad in great Quantities.

The Seas which wash the Coasts of Sweden are, the Öre Sund, vulgarly call'd the Sound: The Baltick or East-Sea: The Gulf of Bothnia, or as the Natives call it the Bodom Zee, and the Gulf of Finland. The Sund, divides Gothia and Scania from Denmark; the Baltick flows between Schonen and Germany, and also between Gothia and Poland: The Bothnick-Bay, lies between Sweden and Finland and Liesland, and has also communication with the Lake Ladoga, by means of the River Nieva, which passes out of that Lake into the Gulf. The Lakes within the Land are almost innumerable, but those of greatest extent are the Wener, Wetter and Meller in Gothia, the Ula Twest in Bothnia: The Jende or Pejende in Finland: The Onega and the Ladoga on the Confines of Finland and Muscovy, and the Peibus in Livonia. Into these and the other Lakes, run a vast number of Rivers, which not only afford the Inhabitants abundance of Fish, but also a conveyance of their Copper and Iron, as the Forests do Fuel, by means whereof their Mines are wrought with great facility; and do in effect produce more of these Metals, than any other Country in the World.

The INHABITANTS, are undoubtedly the Progeny of the ancient Goths, (of whom more hereafter) with great mixture of Germans, and other Neighbours. They are in their Temper Honest, Frank and Plain-Dealers, of a large Stature, and handsome Proportion; the Gentry Travel much, and usually speak several Languages. The Women are also Handsom, Modest and Neat, and the Common People Laborious and Frugal.

The ancient Bards that sung the Stories of their Heroes, and the Runic Character in which they Wrote them, are curious Speculations to Learn'd Critics; but otherwise Learning was anciently in no great Vogue in Sweden; but since Christianity has been Establish'd, many Universities have been Erected, and several Persons of eminent Learning, have flourish'd here.

The LANGUAGE of Sweden is a Dialect of the ancient Teutonic, and not exceedingly different from the German and Danish; it is harsher of the three, and therefore in Writing the Dutch is rather used by the Gentry.

The ancient Inhabitants of the Sweden were gross Idolaters in Religion, till about the year 800. at the Request of Bjorno then King of Sweden, the Emperor Charles the Great, sent able Ministers to Preach Christianity here, which was continu'd with application, but the Establishment of it not effected, till 1015. at which time Ethelved King of England, sent Sigifrid Archbishop of York on this Pious Work, who Baptiz'd the King Olaus, and caus'd Churches to be Built in every Province, and Christianity continu'd to be exercis'd, but with the intermixture of Popish Superstition, till about the year, 1530. King Gustavus I. establish'd the LUTHERAN REFORMED RELIGION, which has ever since been profess'd here.

Of the ancient State of Sweden.

The various and different accounts of Authors, about the Primitive State of Sweden, is so disagreeing, that it is almost impossible to draw a coherent Story out of them, and therefore we chuse rather to give the Reader a summary of what is related on this Subject by the Judicious Historian Samuel Puffendorf, who was a Native of this Country, and an able Statesman, and may be suppos'd to know the Affairs of his own Country. The Swedish Historians, says he, have out of their ancient Monuments, shew'd the World that this Kingdom is the most ancient in Europe, and that this Country was after the Deluge sooner stor'd with Inhabitants than the other parts of Europe: Nevertheless, it is very uncertain who were the first Inhabitants, and at what time they first settled here, as likewise whether they were immediately Govern'd by Kings, or whether the Fathers of Families had the chief sway among them, till the Regal was grafted on the Paternal Power. The Names and Deeds of their Kings, and the times of their Reigns are also not easie to be determin'd, for the List of these Kings which have been Publish'd, is not so authentick, but that it may be call'd in question. And as to the Transactions of those Times, they are most of them taken out of ancient Songs, and fabulous Legends, and some of them out of the allegorical Traditions of their ancient Poets, or Scalders, which perhaps have been wrongfully Interpret'd by some Authors. And Johannes Messenius in his Scandinavia Illustrata, does not stick to say that the old Swedish Historiographer Johannes Magnus, did strive to outdo in his History, the Danish Historian Saxo Grammaticus. Joh. Magnus, makes Magog the Son of Japhet, and Grandson of Noah, the first Founder of the Scythick and Gothick Nations, and says, that from his Two Sons, Sveno and Geiber, or Gog, they had their Names. He Relates, that after this Family was extinguish'd, Sweden was for the space of 400 years, under the Government of certain Judges; and that about 800 years after the Deluge, both the Kingdom of Swedes and Goths were united under Bericus, who in Person Planted a Colony of the Goths, beyond the Seas, after having Conquered the Ulmiruzes, who then Inhabited Prussia; from whence he extended his Conquests over the Vandals. A considerable time after, these Nations settled themselves not far from the Mouth of the Danube, near the Black-Sea; from whence having undertaken several Expeditions, both into Asia and Europe, at last in the Third and Fourth Centuries after the Birth of Christ, they enter'd the Roman Provinces on this side the Danube, and carried their Conquering Arms into Italy and Spain, where they Erected Two Kingdoms. But the former part of this Relation is contradicted by Messenius, who also rejects the List which Joh. Magnus has given us of the Kings before our Saviour's Birth, alleging that the times before Christ's Nativity, are all involv'd in fabulous Narrations, as to those Northern Parts: And that most of these Kings Liv'd after the Birth of our Saviour. But the Chronology even of the first Centuries after our Saviour, and the Genealogies of those Kings being uncertain, we shall only give the Reader a List of the Names and Succession of those that have Reigned since Christianity began to be Preach'd here; which according to Puffendorf is as follows.

Charles XI. his Son Succeeded. 1666.

Charles XII. his Son now Reigning. 1697.

'Tho' the Suedish and Gothick Nations have been anciently famous for Warriek Archievements, and the Men are very fit to endure the fatigues of War, yet were their Military Affairs in former times, but very indifferently order'd; their chief Force consisting in the Boors, till Gustavus, and his Successors with the assistance of some German and Scotch Officers and Soldiers, have introduc'd such Discipline as that now they do not stand in need of Foreigners, except upon an emergency to make up the number of Men, where-with they are not overstock'd, especially since the late great Wars under Gustavus Adolphus. The late King has put their Forces both Horse and Foot into a better condition than ever they were before, and they are maintain'd with very small Charge to the Crown, the Foot being maintain'd by the Boors, and the Horse have for the most part small Farms of the Kings assign'd them, the Rents whereof are their Pay; so that only the King's Guards are Paid out of the Treasury. For the Naval Security the Kingdom of Sueden has a considerable Fleet of Ships of War, the Station whereof was formerly at Stockholm, but of late years a new Harbour has been made at Bleking, whence the Ships may put to Sea with more expedition and convenience. And on the Land side Sueden is Guarded with inaccessible Rocks towards Norway, and strong Forts towards Muscovy and Poland.

Of the Government of Sueden.

The Crown of Sueden was anciently bestow'd by Election of the Great Men, and Estates of the Realm, on such person of Merit as they thought fit, till the Kings of Denmark by their Interest, having got into the Throne, and used the Suedes with too much severity, especially Christiern II. who committed great cruelties on them, Gustavus Ericus, a Nobleman of great Courage and Honour, and Nephew to Steno Sture, the preceeding King, appearing at the Head of the remainder of the Suedish Nobility, that had escaped the Massacre, drove out the Dane, and in reward had the Crown conferr'd on him, and made made Hereditary to his Posterity; this happen'd in the year 1544. And tho' the Estates at that time reserv'd to themselves the power of choosing again, if the Race of that Prince should happen to fail, yet when Queen Christina, the only Issue of Gustavus Adolphus, resign'd the Crown, and nominated Charles Gustavus Duke of Deux Ponts, her Nephew, to succeed her, it was not oppos'd: And furthermore in the Year, 1680. in the Assembly of the Nobility held at Stockholm, it was agreed, That in case of the King's dangerous Sickness he might nominate his Successor without the Advice of the Five Great Officers, which was confirm'd by the Estates. And in 1682. it was further enacted that Daughters should succeed in case of failure of Male Issue.

The Estates of the Realm (whose Authority was much greater before the Form of Government was chang'd) consist of four Orders, viz. The Nobility, the Deputies of the Clergy, Burgeses and Peasants. The Nobility have for their President the Marshal of the Dyet, appointed by the King; the Clergy the Archbishop of Upsal, as Primate of the Kingdom: The Burgeses usually the Burgomaster of Stockholm; and the Peasants chuse a President or Speaker of their own.

Next to the States General the Senate is the most considerable Body in the Nation. The Number of Senators is not fix'd, they are sometimes more, and sometimes fewer, as the King sees fit. In Queen Christina's time they were Forty, in Charles Gustavus's time Twenty four, and now they are but Twelve. They were formerly called Senators of the Kingdom, but now the King's Senators. Formerly they were Judges of the King's Actions, but now they are no more than Witnesses. And altho' he takes their Advice in Matters of State, they are not permitted to prescribe. The King alone has the Power of establishing Imposts, of regulating the Magazines for the Soldiers in the Provinces, of Coining Mony, and Digging Saltpetre-Mines. He Names all Magistrates and Officers, and has Power, in case of necessity, to take the tenth Man in the Nation for the Wars; though oftentimes he takes Mony for them, and hires Foreigners, which is the Reason there are so many Strangers, and especially Germans in the Swedish Armies.

The Five Officers of the Crown are, 1. The Droefter, or Chief Justice; 2. The Lord High Constable, 3. The High Admiral, 4. The High Chancellor, and 5. The Treasurer. The Droefter is the Chief Officer in the Nation, and was formerly a kind of Vice-Roy; he has the Honour of putting on the King's Crown at the Coronation: He Presides in the Supreme Court of Justice, to which there is appeal from all other Courts. The Constable Presides in the Council of War, and has the Inspection of the Discipline and managing the Army, and has many great and honourable Privileges. The Admiral's Power is also very great, he has the ordering of the Fleet, and the naming all the Officers in it, with many other Privileges. The Chancellor is the Chief Officer in the State for administering Justice under the King, for rectifying Abuses, and giving necessary Rules for the good of the Publick; he keeps the Great Seal, and Dispatches all Affairs of State. The Lord High Treasurer has the Administration of the King's Revenues, Pays all the Officers of the Kingdom, and Presides in the Chamber of Accounts: He has also many Privileges.

The REVENUES of the KING of Sueden were anciently so small, that they were hardly enough to maintain him, consisting only of Duties on Exported and Imported Goods, and the discovery of Mines. But the Riches and Revenues of the Church, that have been Seculariz'd since the Reformation, have contributed much to the increase of them: And the Resumption of Lands granted away from the Crown by preceding Kings, to the Nobility and Gentry, have raised them to the highest Degree. This was done by the late King, in the Year, 1680. and tho' it was much oppos'd by the Assembly of the Estates, yet the lower Orders consenting, the Nobility were fain to comply. Besides these Branches the King has a third part of all Fines, when they do not exceed 40 Marks of Silver; and if they do, he takes it all. He has also all Forfeitures upon Account of High-Treason; and the Estates of Strangers, if their Heirs do not appear within a Year after their Death.

The Administration of JUSTICE in Sueden is perform'd in Five several Courts. 1. The King's Chamber, wherein all superior Causes, as between Noblemen, Senators and Publick Officers are heard, and Appeals received from inferior Courts: The Droefter sits as Judge here. 2. The Court Marshal, wherein all Matters relating to War are determined: The Grand Marshal of the Army is President of it, and has two Assessors that are Senators or Officers of State, to assist him. 3. The Court of Chancery, where all Mandates, Edicts, Commissions, &c. in the King's Name are made: The Chancellor of the Kingdom presides in it, and is assisted by four Senators, Assessors, and the two Secretaries of State. 4. The Court of Admiralty, which transacts all Business Marine: Here the High Admiral Presides, attended with four Vice-Admirals, as many Senators, and several Captains Assessors. 5. The Court of Exchequer for deciding Controversies relating to the King's Revenue. The Grand Treasurer Presides here and has four Assessors, two Senators, and two Noble-men to assist him.

There are other Courts that Judge all common Causes, both Civil and Criminal without Appeal; they were Established by King Gustavus Adolphus, and planted in convenient places all over the Kingdom. Each consists of a President, who is a Senator, and a certain number of Lawyers and Gentlemen for Assessors. These Parliaments are held at these Cities, viz. 1. Stockholm. 2. Fonekoping in Gotbia. 3. Abo, in Finland. 4. Derpt, in Livonia. And 5. at Wismar, in Germany.

The Dominions of the King of Sueden, consist of these Eight Parts.

I. S U E D E N properly so called, lying between Norway on the West, and the Bohnick-Bay on the East.

The particular Description of the Kingdom of SUE DEN.

CHAP. II.

Of SUE DEN properly so called.

SUE DEN Properly so called is bounded on the North with Lapland, on the South with Gotland and Schonen, on the East with the Bothnic Bay, and the West with the Dofrine Mountains; extending 300 Miles from North to South, and 200 from East to West, a Fruitful but in some parts Mountainous Country, abounding with Rich Mines of Copper, and affording Conveniencies of Water and Fuel for Working them. It is divided into Eleven Parts, viz.

1. Uplandia, a small Province, but the most Fruitful, it is surrounded by the Baltick Sea on the North-East and South-West, having Sudermania on the South, Nericia and Westmania on the West, and Gestricia on the North.

2. Sudermania, divided from Upland, on the North, by the Lake Meller; hath East-Gotland on the South; Nericia on the West; and the Baltick on the East. This is the place of Building Ships.

3. Westmania, lyes on the West of Uplandia, having Nericia on the South, and Dalecarlia on the North. The Soil is Fruitful, and the Mines afford Steel, Iron, Copper, Lead and Sulphur.

4. Nericia, lyes between the three above mentioned. It abounds with Mines.

5. Gestricia, is North of Upland, along the Coast of the Bothnic Gulf. It has some Iron Mines, and good Corn.

6. Helsingia, North of Gestricia, having the Bothnic Gulf on the East, and Dalecarlia on the West. The Soil produces Corn and Pasture, and the Inhabitants are chiefly employ'd in Breeding Cattle.

7. Dalecarlia, an inland Province on the West of these Two, and bounded on the West by Norway; it is a large Tract of Land from North to South, but is a Woody, Barren, and somewhat Mountainous Country, however 'tis Considerable on account of the Mines of Copper, Allum and Vitriol, with which it abounds.

8. Medelpadia on the North of Helsingia, and formerly part of it, is a smaller Country of the like Soil, only more Woody and Mountainous.

9. Angermania. And 10. Jemphia, lye on the North of Medelpadia and Dalecarlia; the former is a very Fruitful and Pleasant Country, the Soil Rich, and producing plenty of Corn, but withal somewhat Mountainous; it has the Botbnic Gulf on the East, and Botbnia on the North. Jemphia is more Mountainous, and lyes on the West of Angermania.

11. Botbnia, called West-Botbnia, the opposite Land in Finland being the East-Botbnia, is a narrow Tract of Land lying along the Shoar of the Botbnic Bay, and on the other parts surrounded by Lapland. It is a Sandy Barren Soil, but has store of Fish.

The Cities and chief Towns in these Provinces are these.

Stockholm, Holmia aut Stocholmia, the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom, being the Seat of the King; Is Situated on the side of the Lake Meller, on several small Islands like Venice, in the Latitude of 59.0. and Longitude of 38.0. but few Leagues from the Baltick Sea, near 300 Miles from Copenhagen to the North East, and as many from Christina to the East. It is encompass'd especially toward the Sea with steep craggy Rocks, as also with high Mountains and Lakes, which render its Prospect somewhat uncouth. It was heretofore a place of little note, founded by King Birgerus in 1291. and took it's Name from the great quantity of Timber us'd in Building it;

Stock signifying Wood, and Holm an Island. In 1407. it was consum'd by Lightning, and some Thousands of People perished in the Conflagration. By the Tyrannical Oppression of Christian II. King of Denmark the Inhabitants fled away, but were called home again by Gustavus I. in 1529. In 1552 a Fire happened, which by reason of the Wooden Houses consumed the greatest part of the Town. But it was soon Re-built upon Piles, partly with Stone and partly with Brick, so that it is at present a beautiful City, and has for these two Ages been the Seat of the Suedish Monarchs. It's Haven which opens into the Baltick, is of dangerous access by reason of the Rocks, but within is one of the most Commodious in Europe, for the Ships of the largest size lye close to the Keys, and so securely from the Wind, that they need no Anchors or Cables to hold 'em: Its Entrance is defended by two Forts, and the City is guarded by a Strong Castle. It is the most considerable place for Trade in the whole Nation, and one of the chief Empora of Europe: Corn, Honey, Wax, Fir-Timber, Copper, Iron, Steel Lead, Pitch, Tar, Hides, and Tallow, are the Commodities they Export. The City consists of Six small Islands and two Suburbs, the Islands are Stockholm, Riddersholm, Konungsholm, Heglandsholm, Schipsholm, and Ladduggarland, which are joynd together by Bridges. In the first, which is properly called the City, stands the Palace of Kjaddarchuset, where are held the Assembly of the States, the Grand Market place, the Citadel and Castle, which is the King's Palace, the King's Chappel, and the Magnificent Church of St. Nicholas, Founded by King John, on Marble Pillars and cover'd with Copper. In the Castle, besides the stately Apartments of the King and Queen, are the Senate House, the Court of Chancery, the Criminal College, and a famous Library. In Riddersholm, or the Knights Island, are many pleasant Gardens, and the Cloister Church, wherein the two late Kings Gustavus Adolphus, and Carolus Gustavus, lye Interr'd. Heglandsholm is Inhabited chiefly by Mechanicks. In Schipsholm are the Courts of Admiralty, the Arsenal, and other Magazins of Naval Stores. Ladduggarland is filled with Houses of Pleasure, Gardens, and the King's Warren, Aviaries, &c. And in the Southern Suburbs live the Wealthy and Industrious Merchants, who have a stately Exchange, and drive a great Trade to all the Neighbouring Nations.

Upsal stands on the River Sall; (which falls into the Lake Ekolen.) 40 Miles from Stockholm to the North. It was heretofore the Capital City of the Kingdom, and Seat of the King, and is at present the only Metropolitan See, and a University. The See was Established in 1148. and the Archbishop is esteemed the first Person in the Kingdom, next the Royal Family: There are seven Suffragan Bishops, and many Superintendents that exercise Episcopal Jurisdiction under him. At the Reformation the Learned Johanes Magnus, who was then Archbishop, not submitting to the Lutheran Confession, was forc'd to retire to Rome. The University begun at first in the year 1306. by a College of four Professors, but in 1476. being honour'd with large Priviledges by Pope Sixtus IV. and Endowed with large Revenues and Immunities by King Charles IX. and Gustavus Adolphus, it became considerable as any, and is stiled by Authors, Academia Insignis & Illustris. The Cathedral Church is cover'd with Copper, adorn'd with a Clock of admirable Workmanship, and honoured with the Tombs of divers Princes, and honoured with the Tombs of divers Princes.

Here is also a Royal Palace, wherein the late Queen Christina Abdicated the Crown: And a Castle of Modern Fortification seated on a Neighbouring Hill, which Commands the Town.

Enköping stands on the Lake Meller at the Confines of Westmania, near 40 Miles Westward from Stockholm, and 20 South from Upsal.

Nyköping the chief City of Sudermania, and the Seat of it's Ancient Dukes, stands on the Baltick, 50 Miles South-West from Stockholm; it has a good Haven, and is a Place of Trade. As are also Trefa and Telga, both standing on the same Coast, in the way to Stockholm.

Stregnes a Bishop's See, stands near the Lake Meller, 30 Miles North from Nyköping, and as many South from Enköping.

Torsilia, stands on the same Lake, 18 Miles North-West from Stregnes.

Orrebro, The Chief Town of Nericia, stands on the Hielmer Lake, or Yelmer Sea, at the Mouth of the River Trefa, 40 Miles East from Torsilia.

Orosio or Westeras, the chief City of Westmannia, stands on the North-side of the Lake Meller, 35 Miles West from Upsal. It is a Bishop's See, and in the Cathedral are found several ancient Gothic Inscriptions. In this City the Agreement was made by the Estates of the Kingdom in 1544. whereby the Crown of Sweden was given to Gustavus I. who had rescued the People from the Tyranny of the Danes, and made it Hereditary to his Family, whereas before the Kings were always Elected.

Coping or Köping, and Arbogia, stand to the West of Orosio, the former 20, and the other 25 Miles distant.

Gevalia, The Chief City of Gestrucia, is seated on the Gulph of Bothnia, at the Mouth of a River of the same Name, 50 Miles North from Upsal, and is a Place of good Trade.

Copenberget stands 50 miles West from Gevalia.

Hundswickwald, The Chief Town of Helsingia, stands on the Gulph of Bothnia, 80 miles North from Gevalia, a Place of great Trade for Fir-Timber, Pitch, Rosin, Corn, Hides, &c.

Dillsbo stands 25 miles West from Hundswickwald and Alta, near 40 miles South from Dillsbo.

Tuna, the chief Town of Medelpadia, stands on the River Niewand, near the Botbnic Gulph, 25 miles North-West from Hundswickwald, and is said to have been the Seat of the ancient Kings of Helsingia.

Indal stands on a River of the same Name, 20 Miles North from Tuna, and as many West from the Botbnick Bay.

Hernofand is the chief Town of Angermania, and stands on the Botbnick Bay, 50 Miles from Hudfswickwald, and like that, is a place of good Trade.

Natra stands 30 Miles to the North of Hernofand.

Uma in West-Bothnia, standson the Botbnick Gulf, at the mouth of a River of the same Name, 20 Miles North of Hernofand.

Pila and Lula likewise stands at the mouths of two Rivers to which they give Name, 80 Miles North from Uma.

Torne the chief Town of West-Bothnia, stands at the botom of the Gulf of Bothnia, near the Confines of Lapland, 60 Miles North-east from Pitba. It has a good Haven, and is a place of Trade.

Resjundt a Fortrefs in Jemptria, stands 80 Miles West from Hernofand.

Lidb or Lida reckon'd the Chief Town of Jemptria, stands about 20 Miles North from Resjundt.

Tho' Dalecarlia be a very large Province, yet being an Inland Mountainous Country, it hath but few Towns of note.

Idra, which stands on the River Elfswan, 170 Miles West from Hundfswickwald.

Lima, 50 Miles South from Idra, and Hedemora on the River Dalcarlen, near the Confines of Westmania, 60 Miles North-west from Upsal; are reckon'd the chief Towns.

C H A P. III.

Of G O T H L A N D, or Gothia.

GO T H I A or Gothland, a large Fruitful Country, lyes on the South of Sweden, properly so called, and surrounded on the East, West and South, with the Baltick-Sea. Its extent from the Confines of Dalecarlia in the North, to the Coasts of Schonen in the South, is about 270

Miles, and from Gottberg in the West to Steeberg in the East, about 160 Miles. It is divided into three great Parts, East-Gothland, West-Gothland, and South-Gothland, which are again sub-divided into Provinces, thus East-Gothland; contains,

East-Gothland properly so call'd; the chief Towns whereof are,

- Nortköping.
- Soderköping.
- Lincoping.
- Wadstena.
- Schoning.

Smaland; the chief Towns are,

- Calmar.
- Wexia.
- Joneköping.

East-Gorhland, properly so call'd, lies between Sundermania on the North, Smaland on the South, the Baltick-Sea on the East, and the Lake Wetter on the West; it is a Champaign Country, and produces plenty of Corn and Cattle, as also Fish, Fowl, and Venison.

Smaland has East-Gorhland on the North, Bleking on the South, the Baltick on the East, and Halland on the West; it is a large Province, abounds much in Wood, and has great store of Cattle which are exported abroad; here are also Mines of Copper, Lead, and Iron.

Oenalandia is a pleasant and fruitful Island, lying off the Coast of Smaland, formerly belonging to the Dane, but yielded to Gustavus Adolphus, A. 1613.

West-Gorhland, properly so call'd, is also a large Province, lying North from Smaland, between the Lake Wetter on the East, and Halland and the Baltick on the West; it affords abundance of excellent Pasturage, whereby great quantities of Cattle are bred, and the Country made wealthy by the Vent of them.

Wermeland is parted from Westro-Gorhland, on the South, by the large Lake of Wenner, hath Dalecarlia on the North, Westmannia and Nericia on the East, and Dalia on the West. It is a mountainous and woody Country, having some Mines of Iron, and one of Copper; many Lakes, and some Rivers.

Dalia, a smaller Province than any of the former, lies on the West of the Lake Wener and Wermeland, hath the Government of Babus (already mention'd in our Account of Norway) and the Province of Aggerbuys on the East and South: It is a mountainous and barren Country; but being water'd with many Rivers and Lakes, it affords pretty good Pasturage for the Cattle, which are of a larger size than ordinary.

Schonen or Scania, is a Peninsula, surrounded by the Baltick Sea, except on the North, where it is joyned to Smaland. Luyts calls it Provincia Nobilissima Gothiæ; it abounds with Corn, Cattle, Fowl, and all Conveniencies of Life, and hath also Mines of Silver, Lead, and Iron: It is in Form near Square, and about 50 or 60 Miles over either way. This Province formerly belong'd to the Dane, and was yielded to the Sweeds in 1660. as was also at the same time

Bleking, a narrow Tract of Land, lying along the Coast of the Baltick on the South of Smaland, and East of Schonen: It is a mountainous and woody Country, and not to compare for fruitfulness with Schonen.

Hallandia is another Tract of Land, lying along the Coast of Sinus Codanus, or mouth of the Baltick, having Westro-Gothia on the East and North, and Schonen on the South: It is a pleasant and fruitful Country. This also was formerly part of Denmark, but was in 1645. put into the Hands of Queen Christina, as a Province for the Sweeds free passing the Sound; and since, by Treaty at Ryschild in 1658. it was granted to 'em for ever.

A more particular Account of the Cities and Towns of chief Note in Gorhland.

Lunden, the Metropolis of Schonen, stands in the Latitude of 56 Deg. 30 miles East from Copenhagen, 250 South East from Stockholm, and about 10 miles West from the Strait of the Sound. It was formerly the Seat of an Archbishop; but in 1658. when the Sweeds took the City, that Dignity was removed to Copenhagen; and it is now only an Episcopal See, and adorn'd with a University, erected by the Sweeds in 1668. It has been a very considerable City, having in it 22 Churches; whereof the Cathedral of St. Lawrence is a magnificent Structure, having a very high Spire that is a Land-mark for Sailors; and a Clock of most ingenious Contrivance, said to be the Work of Caspar Bartholinus; which not only shews the Hour, Day, Month, and Year, together with all the Festivals, but also the Movements are so artificially contriv'd, that at the Hours two Horsemen come forth and encounter each other, giving so many blows as the Hammer is to strike upon the Bell; then a Door opens, discovering the Virgin Mary sitting on a Throne with Christ in her Arms, and the Magi doing Reverence, and two Trumpeters sounding the while. The Altar also of this Church is of beautiful Structure, and the Vault under the Quire very spacious. At present, the City is not in so flourishing a State as it has been. Near it is a Hill, where (according to Joan. Meursius) in ancient Times the Kings were elected.

Malmogen, a Port-Town of good Trade, stands on the Sound, over against Copenhagen, and 10 miles South East from Lund; it is sometimes named Elzbogou.

Landskroon stands also on the Sound, 16 miles West from Lund; it is a strong, well fortified Town, built by Ericus VIII. in 1413. having a very good Haven, a fair Market-Place, and is much resorted to by Merchants, especially at its Annual Fair at Midsommer. Christian III. King of Denmark, built the Castle and improv'd the Fortifications; and it is at present a Place of great Importance and Strength.

Helsingberg a mean Town, but fortified with an impregnable Castle, stands on the Shoar of the Sound, 20 miles North West from Lund, over against Esseneur, and is the other Key to the Passage of the Sound; in the Castle there is a very high square Tower, which is a Direction to Sailors; and in the Town are held two Annual Fairs, wherein great Quantities of Merchandize are vendid. It was granted to the Sweeds by the Treaty of Roschild in 1558. re-taken by the Danes in 1676. but restored the next Year.

Aluys in Bleking, stands on the Ballick, on the Confines of Schonen.

Christianstadt stands a few miles to the Northward; it is a strong Place, being built in a Marsh which renders it inaccessible; but it was taken by the Danes in 1676. and re-taken by the Sweeds two Years after.

Elholm or Elckholm, are both Port-Towns on the Ballick, as is also Christianeople, the chief Town in Bleking, situated on the extrem East part of it, 100 miles North East from Lund, and near 30 South from Calmar: It was very well fortified by Christian IV. against the Irruptions of the Sweeds.

Calmar, the Capital of Smaland, is a considerable City, situate on the Ballick, over against the Island Oeland, 160 miles South West from Stockholm, and about 100 North East from Lund. It has a very convenient Harbour much frequented by Merchants from divers Nations, and gives name to the Channel between it and Oeland, called Calmar Sund. The City is regularly fortified, and the Cittadel much esteemed for its Strength. This was formerly a Bishop's See, and the Cathedral dignified with the Privileges of an Ecclesiastical College; at present a Superintendent for the Government of the Clergy resides here, who is honoured with a Place in the publick Consistory of the Kingdom. In 1647. so dreadful a Fire happen'd here, that the whole City, except about 60 Houses, were burnt down; but it was soon re-built, and is a Place of very good Trade, and the Passage from Sweden to Germany. In the Wars between Sweden and Denmark, this City was several times taken and re-taken, particularly in 1611. Christian IV. King of Denmark gaining it by Storm, put all the Inhabitants to the Sword.

Wexio, a Bishop's See, where some of the first Planters of Christianity lie buried, stands on the Bank of a Lake near 60 miles West from Calmar.

Westerwick, a Port-Town of good Trade on the Ballick Sea, stands 50 miles North from Calmar.

Ekesio stands 50 miles West from Westerwick, And, Fenecoping 20 from it, 75 from Calmar to the North West, and 35 directly North from Wexio, and stands on the Lake Wetter. It is a City naked of Walls, but of great Antiquity; and some Trade by means of the Lake.

Hahnstadt, the Capital of Holland, stands on the Sinus Codanus, or Mouth of the Ballick, 130 miles West from Calmar, and 60 North from Lund, is a good Port and a Place of Trade.

Falckenberg stands on a River of the same name, not 20 miles from Helmstadt.

Laholm, a fortified Town, on the South side of Helmstadt, on the River Laga: And, Warberg about 20 miles North from Falckenberg, are all Port-Towns and Places of Trade.

Gottenburg or Gotthburg, the chief Town of Westro-Gothia, stands on the Sinus Codanus at the Mouth of the River Trolbetta in the Latitude of 58.0. about 110 miles North from Lund, 170 West from Calmar, and 260 South West from Stockholm. It is a considerable Mart-Town, with a very commodious Harbour, and endowed with many Privileges which make it frequented by Merchants Ships from all Nations. The Town is strongly fortified, and was able to resist the Danish Fleet, who attack'd it in 1644.

Scara or Scaren, the ancient Seat of the Gothish Kings, and at present a Bishop's See, stands 75 miles to the North East of Gottenburg. It is now a fenceless City, tho' heretofore the Metropolis of West-Gothia.

Lidkoping stands 15 miles North from Scaren, and on the Banks of the Lake Wener; and Marienstadt on the same Lake, 30 miles East from Lidkoping, are both Cities, but at present not very eminent.

Daleborg, the chief Town of Dalia, stands on the Lake Wener, 45 miles North from Gottenburg.

Tweta, stands also on the same Lake, 30 miles more to the North.

Carolstadt, the Capital of Wermelandia, is seated on the North East side of the same Lake Wener, 150 miles West from Stockholm. It was built by Charles IX. King of Sweden in the place of the ancient City Tingoalla.

Philipsstadt stands about 20 miles East from Carolstadt: And,

Rusfog about the same distance South from Philipsstadt.

Linkoping, the Capital of Ostro-Gothia, stands in the middle of that Province, 80 miles North from Calmar, and near 100 South East from Carolstadt. It is a pleasant, but small City, the See of a Bishop, and has a stately Church, built by one Herebertus, one of the first Planters of Christianity here.

Suderkoping, a handsome, but fenceless City, stands about 20 miles East from Linkoping.

Stegeborg stands on the Ballick, a few miles East from Suderkoping.

Norkoping stands on the Banks of a Lake, between Linkoping and Suderkoping.

Sebening was anciently a famous City, wherein a Council was held in 1284. but is now a ruin'd and inconsiderable Town.

AN D now having survey'd Gothland and Sweden, we shall pass to Lapland, the Inhabitants whereof being far different in their Manners and Customs from the other Europeans, we shall detain the Reader with a short Account of them.

S W E E D I S H L A P L A N D is a large Country lying North of Sweden, properly so called, extending from East to West above 400 miles; and from the 65th to the 68th Degree of Latitude; being bounded on the North by the Province of Wardbys, or the Norwegian Lapland; on the East by the Muscovian Lapland; on the West by the Mountains of Daarfeild, which divide it from Norway; and on the South by the Provinces of Femptia, Angermania, Wett Botnia, the Gulf or Sea of Bothnia, and East Bothnia. The Air is extream Cold, and the Soil barren, except in the southern Parts, where some Pot-herbs and Roots, as Parsnips, Coleworts, &c. are produc'd, but no sort of Grain will grow here. The Country is water'd with many Rivers and Lakes, to that vast Woods are found here, which shelter abundance of wild Beasts; such as Bears, Elks, Rain Deer, Stags, Wolves, Foxes, Sables, Martins, Ermines, Otters, Beavers, &c. the Skins whereof afford the Inhabitants Cloathing, and their Flesh, Food. Horses, Oxen and Sheep they have none, but make use of Rain-Deer to draw the Sledges on which they Travel and carry Burdens, and slide along on the Snow with great Celerity. The Inhabitants are of short Stature, but strong and nimble, and employ themselves in Hunting the wild Beasts: They are in their Temper, superstitious, timorous, and mean spirited, exceedingly addicted to Magick, and very revengeful; but withal, they are Charitable; and tho' notoriously Deceitful in bargaining, are never guilty of Theft. Their Houses are but Tents, made of Posts, and cover'd with Canvas, or by the poorer sort, only with Boughs of Trees; and are removed as their Occasions for Hunting or Fishing require, or as the Season invites 'em Northward or drives 'em Southward. Their Garments are made of the Skins of some Fowl, with the Feathers outwards, and Wings on. Their Diet is either Fish, or the Flesh of Rain-Deer, which they sometimes eat raw, or the better sort boil it, but most commonly it is dried in the Sun; and for Bread, they make use of dried Fish ground small: Their Drink is fair Water, and sometimes when they can get it, Brandy, which they much esteem, as also Tobacco: Their Children they use to great Hardiness, dipping 'em as soon as born in cold Water, afterwards in hot Water; and then covering 'em in Moss, carry 'em many Miles to be Baptiz'd; as they grow up, they use them betimes to the Bow and Arrow, and place their Victuals on a Post which they must shoo down before they eat it. Marriage is held sacred among them, and Adultery rarely committed, or if known, constantly punished; Polygamy is never allowed, nor clandestine Marriages ever contracted. Their Wealth consists in the numbers of Rain-Deer; and the Tribute they pay the King, consists in dried Fish, Furrs, and sometimes Rain-Deer, or in lieu of it Money, which every Man pays annually, according to his Circumstances, to the King's Commissioners. They have Markets and Fairs among them, to which Merchants resort out of Sweden, Muscovy, and Norway, to buy Furrs and sell Cloaths and other Necessaries: Some Money the richer sort have, but not much; and the generality live without it upon the Beasts and Fish they catch themselves.

The Laplanders are supposed by some, to have been descended from the Finlanders and Samoieds, who were driven from their own Country, first by the Tartars, and afterwards fled from the Sweeds, when about the middle of the Thirteenth Century King Ericus subdued the Finlanders and planted Christianity among them. The word Laplander implies a banish'd Man or Runagade, wherefore the better sort of 'em will not to this day be call'd so. They lived for some Ages in a stragling condition, without Laws or Government, practising their stupid Idolatry and diabolical Magick, till in the end they were intirely subdued by the Sweeds about the Year 1600. and Christianity planted among them. King Gustavus Adolphus built publick Schools and many Churches, which by the pious care of succeeding Princes being encreas'd, and Ministers maintain'd by the King out of the Tributes paid by the People, Christianity has made considerable Advances; not but that there are still a great many Idolaters and Magicians in Lapland. In their Idolatry they worship the Sun, and several Deities which they represent in Wood, every Family having one. The chief God to whom they make publick Sacrifice, they call Thor; he is represented by the Stump of a Tree, and the usual Sacrifice is a Rain-Deer; another of their Gods they call Storjunker, whom they suppose to be Thor's Lieutenant. The Temples of the God Thor are usually in the Woods, consisting in Trees laid in round form one on another without any covering; Storjunker they worship in Mountains and Rocks. Their Magick is exceeding wonderful, at least if the Relations of Travellers be true; for they tell us, that the Mariners for a Sum of Money, can procure of them such Winds as their Voyage requires, receiving a String with several Knots, which being untied, cause the Wind to encrease. In their Divinations they use a Drum, which having struck violently on, they lye down as in a Trance for a short space, and then answer the Question. They have also magical Darts, whereby they do what Injuries they please; and even to powerful are their Charms, that they will split Rocks and level Mountains. But these devilish Practices are suppress'd by the Sweeds, and being discovered are severely punished, which makes 'em much less frequent than formerly.

The Swedish Lapland is divided into five Provinces, viz.

Torne Lapmark the most Northern part, in which stands the Town Tingwara, in the Latitude of 68. 40. Segwuo about 30 miles to the South of it; Peldojersfui 100 East from Tingwara; Kittilabay on the Confines of Kimi Lapmark, 70 miles South from Peldojersfui; and Torne a Port-Town at the bottom of the Bothnick Gulf.

Kimi-Lapmark on the East of Torne, and on the North of Cajania; in it are Somby, Kimibi, Kolajersfui, all within 20 miles of one another, at the Foot of the Mountains, which part this from the Norwegian and Muscovite Lapland. Solden-Kyle and Kittijersfui more to the Southward, and Kimi on the Bothnick Gulf near Torne.

Lula-Lapmark lies on the South of Torne from the Confines of West Bothnia to the Dofrine Mountains, and has these Towns, Torpajour in the North part, Sirkefucht 30 miles more South, and Jekemuka to the Westward.

Pitha-Lapmark the next southern Province, hath Sitononia in the North near the Dofrine Mountains, and Lochtari near the Confines of Bothnia.

Oma-Lapmark the last and most southern Province, adjoining to Angermania with Bothnia on the East, and the Dofrine Mountains on the West, hath Laisy or Laisby in the middle, and Semisjerse on the Confines of Pitha.

In the Province of Torne-Lapmark is a Mine of Iron, and in Pitha-Lapmark is a Mine of Silver.

F I N L A N D.

FINLAND, a large Country, extending from the Arctic Circle, or the Confines of Kimi-Lapmark in the North, to that Branch of the Baltick Sea, to which it gives name in the South; the Onega-Lake and Muscovy being its Boundary on the East, and the Bothnick Bay on the West, being 400 miles in length and as many in breadth. It was formerly a barbarous Nation, govern'd by Kings of their own, but conquer'd about the middle of the Thirteenth Century by Ericus IX. King of Sweden; and since that hath been sometimes the Inheritance of the Brothers of the Kings of Sweden, but is now united to the Crown. It is divided into these seven Parts, viz.

CAJANIA, otherwise called East Bothnia, the most northern Province extending from Kimi-Lapmark along the Gulf or Sea, to which this and the other Bothnia give name, near 300 miles in length: It abounds with Rivers which empty themselves in the Bothnick-Bay, and hath a large Lake called Ola Tresk; Mountains also fill up the northern and eastern Parts, and the rest of the Country is reasonably Fertile.

SAVOLAXIA, which hath Cajania on the North, Carelia on the South, Kexholm on the East, and Tavasthus on the West. This Province, as also Kexholm, abounds with Lakes and Rivers which discharge themselves into the great Lake Ladoga, and afford the Inhabitants abundance of Fish.

KEXHOLM lies between Savolaxia on the West, and Muscovy on the East, Muscovian-Lapland on the North, and the Lake Ladoga on the South. It is a large Tract of Land, but on the North and East very mountainous, and the other part almost cover'd with Lakes. It formerly belong'd to the Russians, but conquer'd by Gustavus Adolphus, was granted to him at the Treaty in 1616. This Province, by some Geographers, is included under the general name of Carelia.

CARELIA lies on the South of Savolaxia to the Banks of the Gulf of Finland and Lake of Ladoga. It is a flourishing Country, extending from East to West near 200 miles, but its breadth is not proportionable.

NYLANDIA is a small Province on the Gulf of Finland, between Carelia on the East, Finland on the West, and Tavasthia on the North, so call'd, q. d. New Land, because its ancient Inhabitants the Finlanders being driven out, new Colonies of Sweeds were sent to possess it.

TAVASTIA is an inland Province between Finland on the West, Savolaxia on the East, Cajania on the North, and Nylandia on the South; it hath several Lakes, especially the great one of Jende.

FINLAND, properly so call'd, hath Nylandia and Tavasthus on the East, the Finnic-Bay on the South, Cajania on the North, and the Bothnick-Bay on the West. It is in some parts mountainous, but otherwise a rich Soil; and being half encompass'd by the Sea, hath the advantage of much Traffick. The Country is so pleasant that some have fancied it to be called Finland, q. d. Fine-Land. This Province, Nylandia and Carelia afford good Pasturage and large Breeds of Oxen, Horses, and other Cattle.

The Cities and chief Towns in the respective Provinces are these, Cajaneburg, is a Fort seated on the North-East side of the Lake Ula, about 30 or 40 miles from the Confines of Lapland, and 120 from the Coast of the Bothnick Gulf, in the Latitude of 65. 0.

Ulabourg, another Fortres stands on the Coast of the Bothnick Bay, in the same Latitude with Cajaneburg.

Ula is a Sea Town near it, at the Mouth of the River, to which it gives name.

Lochta and Wassa are both Sea-Towns on the same Coast; the former 60 and the latter 150 miles to the South of Ula.

Koskinpa the chief Town of Savolaxia, stands on a Lake in the Latitude of 62. 0. about 180 miles from the Bothnick Coast.

Nyflot is a strong Fort, seated on a Lake about 80 miles East from Kospinge. It was built in the Year 1475. by Eric Axelsson, Governor of Abo, and is of use against the Invasion of the Muscovite.

Rumal is named by Luytz as one of the chief Towns of this Province, but by the Maps Saminge, which stands on the Banks of the same Lake, a few miles South from Nyflot, as Rumal does about 30 miles more to the West, seems rather to deserve the Character.

Lexa, in the North part of the Province of Kexholm, stands on the Banks of a Lake in the Latitude of 63. 40. Longitude 55. 0.

Kexholm, which gives name to the Province, but called by the Russians, Carelogorod, stands on the West-side of the Lake Ladoga, in the Latitude of 61. 10. It is a strong Town, and with the Province, formerly was subject to the Muscovite, till about the beginning of this Century, when the Czar promised Charles IX. King of Sueden to surrender this Town and Country to him if he would assist him against the Poles, by whom he was then hardly beset; but being freed from the Danger, refused to perform, which made the Sweeds invade his Countries, and oblige the Russes to yield up by Treaty, in the Year 1616. Not only this place, but also the most considerable Places of Ingria.

Wiborg, the chief City of the Suedish Cavelia, stands at the bottom of a Bay of the Finnick Gulf, about 40 miles South-West from Kexholm: It is a Place of great Trade, and the See of a Bishop; has a convenient Haven, and is fortified with Trenches, Forts, and a strong Castle, by the means whereof it has often resisted the furious Attacks of the Muscovites.

Mala stands about 30 miles South from Wiborg, on a small Bay that reaches to Kexholm, and falls into the Lake Onega.

Wekelax is a Sea Port on the Finnick Bay, about 60 miles West from Wiborg.

Helsingfors the chief City of Nylandia, stands near the Mouth of the River Winda, which falls into the Finnick Gulf, 150 miles West from Wiborg, and about 90 East from Abo.

Borgo, another Port-Town, stands at the Mouth of a small River, about 20 miles East from Helsingfors.

Tavasthus, called also Croneburg, the Capital of Tavasthia, is a strong Fortres built by Berjerus Fersl, the Suedish General in 1250. when he had conquer'd this Country and establish'd Christianity there. It stands 70 miles North from Helsingfors, and about 90 North-West from Abo.

Haubo stands on a Branch of the Lake Jende, which extends almost the length of this Province, about 20 miles North from Tavasthus.

Padaficki stands on the Lake Jende, about 30 miles North-East from Haubo.

Abo, the Capital of South Finland, stands on the River Aviorki, near the Baltick-Sea, and about 50 miles from the Gulf of Finland, in the Latitude of 61. 0. Longitude 44. 0. and 160 miles North-East from Stockholm. It is the See of a Bishop, and adorn'd with a Univerity; and is also a City of good Trade.

Biorneburg, the chief Town of North Finland, stands on the Coast of the Bothnick Gulf, 90 miles North from Abo.

Raumo and Nykirky stand both on the same Coast, the former 30 and the latter 60 miles South from Biorneburg.

Masko stands about 10 miles West from Abo.

Raseborg stands on the Gulf of Finland, 50 miles East from Abo. It is by some Geographers reckon'd to stand within the Limits of Nylandia; and has sometime had a Territory belonging to it which constituted a Principality.

C H A P. VI.

LIVONIA or Liefland.

LIVONIA, or as it is called in the Language of the Country, LEIFLAND, is a Fertile Country, lying on the South side of the Gulf of Finland, having a part of the Baltick Sea, denominated the Gulf of Riga, on the West, Muscovy and Ingria on the East, the Duchy of Courland, and some part of Lithuania on the South, and as we have said, the Finnick Gulf on the North. So that it is surrounded on the West and North with the Sea, on the East hath the great Lake of Peibus, and on the South the commodious River Dwina; which rising in Muscovy, passes by the Confines of Livonia, dividing it from Courland, and thereby the convenience of Navigation is afforded to every part of this Province: In the middle of it are three other Lakes, and many small Rivers, which water the Country; and tho' in some Parts it is marshy, yet in the general 'tis very fruitful, yielding especially Corn, Pasture, and Honey in abundance. Its Extent from North to South is about 160 miles, and from East to West 120 miles. The many Conquests this Country has suffered render its Inhabitants a mixture of Muscovites, Suedes, Polanders, and Germans, the latter whereof being the most numerous makes their Language generally spoken. In its ancient State the Dutchy of Cowland and Samigallia were reckon'd part of Livonia; but the Suedes having this, and the Poles those, it has, for some time stood thus divided. From the first Conversion of this Country, the Archbishop of Riga and the Teutonic Order seem to have had the Government of it, 'till about 1557. upon a Difference between the Archbishop and the Grand Master, the Czar of Muscovy invaded Livonia; but the Suedes being call'd in to assist the Lieflanders, drove out the Muscovites; and the Poles having Pretensions to this Country, for some time a Contest was carried on between them, 'till by the Muscovites gaining Ground, they perceiv'd their Mistake and agreed; and finally, in the Year 166c. this Province was resign'd to Sueden by John Casimir King of Poland. It is to be noted, that the most southern Part of Liefland is still subject to Poland. It is divided into three Parts, 1. Esten or Esthonia, which takes up all the northern Part. 2. Odepoa, the middle; And, 3. Letten or Letitia, the southern Part. Esthonia is again divided into five Parts, viz. Alentakia, Wiria, Harrja, Wicia, and Fervia. The chief Towns in this Province are these,

Narva is seated on a River of the same name (which separates Livonia from Ingrja, and here falls in the Finnic Bay) in the Latitude of 59. 0. Longitude 50. 0. at the distance of 170 miles from Riga to the North-East, and 100 from Revel to the East, and is called the German Narva, to distinguish it from the Russian Narva. It is a place of great Strength and Consideration, and well garison'd by the Suedish Soldiers; it is also defended by a strong Castle, named Juanogorod, which stands on the other side of the River in Ingrja, and was taken by Gustavus Adolphus in 1617. In general it is reckon'd one of the best Fortresses in this Country. The Town was built by Waldemar II. King of Denmark in 1223. was taken by the Muscovites in 1558. recover'd by the Suedes in 1581. and granted to them by Treaty in 1599. It has a convenient Port to the Gulf of Finland, and is a place of Trade.

Niestor or Neuschloss is a strong Fort on the River Narva, near the Lake Peipus.

Borchholm stands about 60 miles West from Narva.

Wesenberg, 20 miles North-West from Borchholm, near the River Weissenaa, is a place of Strength, and was taken from the Muscovites by the Suedes in 1581.

Tolsburg, a Port-Town on the Finnic Gulf, is about 12 miles distant from Wesenberg to the North.

Revel or Revalia, anciently the Metropolis of Liefland, is a small but handsome and well fortified City, seated on the Finnic Gulf, about 60 miles from Tolsburg, and about 100 from Narva to the West. It is one of the most considerable Mart-Towns in these Parts, and is adorn'd with a Gymnasium or small University, wherein Professors and Tutors are maintain'd to teach the Liberal Arts. It was formerly an Episcopal See, but since Lutheranism has been establish'd here, a Superintendent governs the Ecclesiastical Affairs. The City was founded by Waldemar II. King of Denmark in 1230. was sold to the great Master; and in 1561. being in danger of falling into the Muscovites Hands, it subjected its self to the Suede, who has ever since had the Protection of it, but it still enjoys large Immunities, and is very considerable on account of its Trade and commodious Haven.

Badis or Padis, is a Fort seated on the River Assa, about 20 miles West from Revel.

Habsel, Seated on a small Gulph of the Baltick, to which it gives Name, over against the Island Dagbo, 30 miles South-West from Padis, and about 40 South-West from Revel, was formerly subject to the Danes, but in 1572. being taken by the Muscovite, was gained by the Suede, in 1581. and was sometime the See of a Bishop.

Lehal stands also on the Baltick, 15 miles South from Habsel, is a place of Strength, and has a Castle of good Force.

Wickel or Wyke, is another Fort in the same Neighbourhood.

Wittenstein, 70 miles East from Lehal, and 45 South-East from Revel: As also Oberpalen and Lanate, all Places of Moment for Strength.

Parnaw, Parnavia, seated on a River of the same Name, which here falls into a small Bay of the Baltick, at the distance of about 50 miles from Revel to the South, 90 from Riga to the North. It is a small City, but a Place of good Trade, great quantity of Corn especially being Ship'd hence for the Netherlands. It is pretty well Fortified, but owes its Strength chiefly to its Citadel. The Polanders made this the Capital of one of their Palatinates, when it was under their Jurisdiction; but since the Year, 1617. it has been subject to the Suede, after having been taken and re-taken many times in the last Age.

Derpat or Derpt, Torpatum, a large and ancient City on the River Embeck, 15 miles from the Lake Peipus, and somewhat more from the Werczer-zee another Lake, 100 miles from Parnow to the East, and 120 from Riga to the North-East. It was formerly the See of a Bishop, and is at present adorn'd with an Univerfity founded by Gustavus Adolphus in 1632. on account of its being a pleasant, healthy Place, and abounding with Provisions and all Necessaries: The Buildings are of Stone and Brick, but not so well maintained and inhabited as they have been. It has a strong Castle for its Defence, seated on a Hill, but has however been subjected to many Matters, for the Teutonic Knights took it from the Muscovites in 1280, the Poles took it in 1582, afterwards the Suedes drove them out, but in 1603 they regain'd and kept it till 1625, when the Suedes finally took it again, and have ever since possessed it.

Nienhaus 40 miles South from Derpt, on the Borders of Muscovy. And Marienborg, about 20 miles South-west from Nienhaus, are all three Forts of good Strength.

Odenopol, 12 miles South from Derpt, is a small Town, and only considerable for giving Name to this Division of Livonia.

Fellin stands on a small River that passes from the Werczer-zee to Pernaw, 50 miles from that City to the East, and as many from Derpt to the West.

Ringen is a Fort 35 miles distant from Fellin to the South.

Tarnest is another Fort formerly very strong when in the Hands of the Muscovites, but so demolished when the Poles took it, that tho' the Suedes have spent much in repairing it, is not yet arrived to what it was.

Riga called Riig by the Inhabitants, and Rigen by the Germans, is the Metropolis of Livonia, the See of an Arch-bishop, and a great Emporium. It is seated on the River Dwina near its Mouth which makes a commodious Haven, from the Gulf of the Baltick Sea that takes its Name from this City, in the Latitude of 57. 0. Longitude 46. 0. and at the distance of 90 miles from Pernaw, and 120 from Revel to the South, 25 from Mitaw in Courland to the North, not above 4 Leagues from the Gulf of Riga to the East, and about 80 Leagues from Stockholm to the South-East. It is a very considerable City, being well built, full of Inhabitants, and a place of vast Traffick for Corn, Hemp, Flax, Pitch, Tar, Planks, Skins and Furs of all sorts, all which with many other necessary Commodities are brought hither on Sledges over the Ice and Snow in the Winter, and stor'd up for the English, Dutch and German Merchants, who send large Fleets of Ships in the Summer-time to fetch these, and carry the Inhabitants the other Goods of Southern Countries. The City was first founded about the latter end of the Twelfth Century, and in 1215, was made a Metropolitan See by Pope Innocent III. It was sometime the Seat of the Great Master of the Teutonic Order, and afterwards entered in the Hanseatick League, and was for some Years a free Town, under the Protection of the Emperor; in 1591. it was taken by the Poles, and soon after endowed with large Immunities: The Suedish King, Charles IX. twice attempted it, and his Son Gustavus Adolphus finally took it, since when it has always been subject to the Suede.

It is a large City, but however well fortified, having strong Walls, Bulwarks, and a very large Trench on the Land-side, and a strong Castle on the River, wherein resides the general Governor of Livonia. The Haven is furthermore securely guarded by the Dunamund-Fort, or as it is called, the Dunamunder Schans, seated about 2 Leagues below the City near the Mouth of the River Dwina, as its name declares, and is a Fortrefs of great Importance, having the command of the Passage to Riga; so that without leave from the Governor no Ship can sail thither. It was always esteemed a Place of great strength, but could not however resist the Courage of the King of Poland's Saxon Army, who by general Assault took it in the Year 1699.

Kakenhusen or Kockehaus, is a strong Fort seated on the River Dwina, 60 miles East from Riga: It was anciently the Residence of the Archbishop.

Sewold or Segenwold, stands 30 miles, and Wenden 45 miles, North-East from Riga, both on the South-side of the River Teyder: And, Wolmer stands on the North-Bank of the same River, 60 miles North-East from Riga.

Many lesser Towns and Forts are found in this Country, particularly Dünenburg, seated on the Dwina, 60 miles above Kakenhusen; but this being subject to Poland, may be more properly spoken of there.

I N G R I A.

INGRIA or INGERMANLAND is a fruitful and pleasant Province lying on the North-East of Livonia, having on the North the Lake Ladoga, the River Nieva (which divides it from Carelia in Finland) and the Gulf of Finland, on the South and East Muscovy, and on the West Livonia. Its Extent from East to West, is near 150 miles, and from North to South about 80 miles. It is a good Country, free from Lakes, but water'd with Rivers, and produces the Necessaries for Life. It abounds with Cattle and Beasts; and has especially a great number of Elks, who in the Summer Season change their Quarters and swim over the River Nieva into Carelia; but at the approach of Winter return the same way. This Country was formerly subject to the Muscovite, but added to Sueden by Gustavus Adolphus, to whom it was entirely resign'd by the Czar Michael Federowitz, in the Treaty of Stockholm, A. D. 1618. which was afterwards confirm'd in 1661. Its Situation renders it very considerable, being a Communication between Finland and Livonia, and a Frontier against Muscovy.

Muscovy. It is by some Geographers divided into three Parts, 1. Ingria, 2. Ingermania, and 3. Soluska. The chief Towns in this Province are, Notteburg, or Oreska. } Ivanogorod.

Coporio. } Samagorod.

Notteburg, called by the Russians, Oreska or Nut, from its compactness and strength, is seated on a small Island, in the Mouth of the River Nieva, near the Lake Ladoga, in the Latitude of 60. o. Longitude 54. o. 300 miles from Riga, and 120 from Narva to the North-East. It is the chief Town of this Province both for Trade and Strength, being very well fortified, and besides well secured by the breadth of the River. When Gustavus Adolphus besieged it, in the Year 1614. it made so vigorous a Resistance, that 'till an unhappy Distemper seized the Inhabitants, he was by no means able to take it.

Ivanogorod, called also the Russian Narva, is seated over against Narva, and built on a Rock in an Isthmus, made by the Confluence of two Rivers, and is a Place of very great Strength.

Coporio, a strong Fort, stands on the Finnick Gulf, 30 miles North from Ivanogorod.

Samagorod, another Fortrefs, is seated on the River Laga, about 15 miles from Ivanogorod to the South-East.

These and several other Towns and Forts, together with the whole Country, were delivered up to the Suedes by the Muscovites, at the Treaty above mentioned.

C H A P. VIII.

' The ISLANDS belonging to Sueden are these.

GOTHLAND Isle, situate in the Baltick, 20 Leagues from the Coast of Gotbland to the East, about 60 Leagues from Livonia to the West, and in the Latitude of 56. It is a narrow Tract of Land, stretch'd out in length from North to South about 70 miles, and not above 20 in breadth. It is fruitful, and affords good Pasture for Cattle, especially Horses and Oxen. This Island was formerly subject to Denmark, but granted to the King of Sueden in 1645. in 1677. re-taken by the Danes, and in 1679. restored by Treaty to the Suedes.

Wisby or Visburg, the chief Town of this Island, and the Seat of its Governor, was heretofore a large and famous Mart, containing 10 Churches, and 4 Monasteries, but is now much decayed. It is reported, that Hydrographical Tables and Sea Charts, and the Rules for Navigation were first Printed here.

OELAND, a narrow slip of Land over against the Continent of Gotbland, from which it is distant nor above 5 or 6 Leagues, is in length about 70 miles from North to South, but hardly 10 miles broad. The Soil affords good Pasture, and many Herds of Oxen, Horses, and Fallow Deer. The chief Place upon the Island is Bornholm or Barkholm, a strong Fortrefs seated in the middle of the Isle, just over against Calmar. There are many other Forts and Castles to defend this Island, which has been often attack'd; in 1536. Frederick III. King of Denmark took it; soon after it was regain'd by the Suedes, but being lost again, Gustavus Adolphus finally recover'd it in 1613. since when it has been constantly possess'd by the King of Sueden.

OESEL and DAGHO two Islands lying off the Coast of Livonia, make the Gulf of Riga; the former is much the larger of the two, being about 40 miles long and 20 broad; whereas the other is hardly 20 miles either way. Oesel lies about 15 Leagues West from Pernaw, and has on it the City of Arnsburg, fortified with a Castle, and another Fortrefs called Sonneburg.

Dagbo lies to the North of Oesel, about 7 Leagues West from Lehal; it is of a Triangular Form, and has on it two Castles, called Padem and Dagheroart.

ALAND, an Island in the Mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia, surrounded with a great number of smaller Islands, lies between Uplandia to the West, and Finland to the East, in near the same Latitude with Upsal, and in the Midway between Stockholm and Abo. It abounds with Fish, and has some Cattle; on it stands the Fort of Castleholm.

HUENA, a very small Island in the Ore Sund, just over against Landskroon, Lat. 56. 20. On it stands Uraniburg, a small City and Castle, built at the Cost of the King of Denmark, for the use of the famous Mathematician Tycho-Brabe. It was surrendered to the Suede by the Treaty in 1660.

RUGEN, an Island on the Coast of Pomerania in Germany, is also subject to the King of Sueden; but of that, as also of USEDOM and WOLLIN, having already spoken in our Account of Germany, need not here be repeated.

To the King of Sueden are also subject some part of Germany, as the Upper Pomerania, and the Dutchies of Bremen and Ferden; which have likewise been spoken of in their proper Places.

As also the Province of Babus, whereof we have spoken already in our Account of Norway.

POLAND.

POLAND.

CHAP. I.

Of POLAND in General.

THE Kingdom of POLAND which is now of vast Extent, was at first (according to Cluverius) not above 320 Miles long, and 240 broad, consisting at that time only of that part, which for distinction, is usually Named, Poland properly so called, but it hath since Received great Additions; Lithuania, the Lesser or Red-Russia, Pod-lia, Volhinia, Polesia, Maffovia, Prussia, Samogitia and part of Livonia, having been annexed to it. The Sarmatae, as the same Author shews, were the first Inhabiters of it, and the Country anciently Nam'd Sarmatia. It owes it's present Name, as Reiskius particularly says, to some Colonies of the Sclavi who came into that Country, and either drove out or mingled themselves, with the ancient Sarmatae, and called the Land Pole, which signified in their Language, a Plain. Tho' some are of opinion, that the word Polacki, is as much as to say, the Posterity of Lechus. This Nation, as Puffendorf says, did formerly Inhabit nearer to Tartary; but after vast numbers out of Germany enter'd the Roman Provinces, their places were supplied by the Nations behind them; and it seems that Poland being in the same manner left by its Inhabitants, which were then the Venedi or Wends, they made room for the next that took their place. These then as it is said, having taken Possession of this Country, about the year 550 did under the Conduct of Lechus lay the Foundation of a new State.

Poland as it is now extended, is bounded on the North with Livonia, Muscovy, and the Baltick; on the South with Upper Hungary, Transilvania, and Walachia; on the East with Muscovy, and the Little Tartary; and on the West with Germany. Its Extent is from the Frontiers of Silesia in the West, to the Frontiers of Tartary in the South-east, above 700 Miles; and from the Frontiers of Livonia, to the Carpatas or Krempach Mountains, which are the Limits of Hungary, above 500 Miles. And its Situation is between the 48th. and the 27th. Degree of Latit. commencing in Longit. at the 37th. Degree from Teneriff, and extending to the 5th. Degree: And some part of Volhynia, even 2 Degrees more.

By the Situation it may be guessed that the CLIMATE is Temperate, and the AIR not excessive Cold, as in effect it is, except in the Northern part of Lithuania. The SOIL also is generally very Fertile, fit for Tillage and Pasture, and produces vast quantity of Corn and Cattle; even enough to Feed the Populous Nation of Holland, who yearly send vast Fleets to Dantzick to Buy the Corn and Oxen, sent downthither from the several parts of Poland. Lithuania produces Honey, Wax, Hemp, Flax, Leather, Porashes, Salt, Woad, Saltpetre, Vitriol, and Quicksilver. With these Staple Commodities they purchase those of other Nations, viz. Wines, Cloath, Stuffs, Wrought-Silks, &c.

It is a plain flat Country, rather enclining to Marsh than Mountain Lands, so that no considerable Mountains are found here, except those that make the Frontier to Hungary, which is a craggy Ridge of 300 Miles in Length, and called the Carpatas or Krempach Mountains. But RIVERS it abounds with, the most considerable whereof are the Vistula, the Niemen or Chronus, the Nieper or Boristhenes, the Niester or Tyras, the Bog or Vegus, whose Springs and Courses, are more distinctly perceiv'd by Viewing the Map, than by giving account of them.

As to the GENIUS of the People, they are, as Puffendorf observes, commonly Downright and Honest; very seldom guilty of Diffimulation, of a Generous Spirit and expect a great deal of Respect, to which they make you suitable returns. They are also fierce and extravagant, much inclin'd to an uncontrolled Liberry, or rather Licentiousness and Perulancy, which produces frequent Factions and Conspiracies. They do not want Courage; but are more fit for sudden Action than the long Fatigue of a War: This is spoken of the Gentry. But the meaner sort are Poor Spirited, and therefore the Polish Infantry are not valuable, but Cossacks, or Foreigners are made use of on all occasions of War. This abject Spirit of the Peasantry proceeds from the Servile Vassalage they pay to their Lords, who exercise it with all the Haughtiness imaginable; and not only does the poor Labourer never acquire Wealth, but he is even hardly permitted to gain himself Bread, being oblig'd to Work for his Lord four or five days in the Week without Pay or Food.

As to the Military Force, their chief Strength consists in the Nobility. It has been given out that the Poles could raise 150000 or 200000 Horse, but unless one should Reckon their Attendants and Servants, the number is too great to be Credited. It must be acknowledged, there is no Kingdom in Europe can pretend to so great a Number of Nobility as they can do; and therefore considering that they are Brave, 'tis morally impossible to Conquer their Country so long as they are unanimous. And the surprizing progress that the Army of Charles Gustavus made here, was owing to the differences at Home; which was made appear by the precipitate Flight of the Suedes as soon as the Poles return'd to their Duty. The Cossacks can furnish them a considerable Infantry, and their Neighbours readily serve in their Armies, if the Nobility will permit the King to Levy Taxes to Pay 'em: But tho' they are Rich enough, they are not over ready in giving Supplies, or paying them when Affairs'd.

The Inhabitants of Poland were Converted from Paganism to Christianity by Adelbert Archbishop of Gnesna, about the year 964. and ever since the RELIGION of the Church of Rome hath been Predominant here; except in Red-Russia where the People adhere to the Greek Church; and in Prussia there are whole Cities of Lutherans, as Dantzick, Elbing, Thorn and Marienburg, and some Calvinists, especially in the Ducal Prussia. Faufstus Socinus the Reviver of the Arian Heresy, was of this Nation, and his followers from him call'd Socinians, grew numerous in the last Century, but King John Casimer expelled them in the year 1658.

Concerning the Form of GOVERNMENT in Poland, it is to be observ'd, that the Poles live under one Head, who bears the Title, and lives in the Splendor becoming a King; but if you consider his Power, as it is circumscrib'd within very narrow Bounds, he is in effect no more than the Prime or Chief Regent in a Free Commonwealth; since he can do nothing without the bounds of that Authority, which the Laws of the Land have given him, and the Nobles take care to maintain. This King is always Chosen by a Free Election, where every Nobleman present has his Vote; and tho' the Poles may have some inclination to the Royal Race, yet have they never consented to declare a Successor during the Life of the present King, but have always expected the Vacancy of the Throne, that they might at that time regulate Abuses and by the Paſſa Conventa which the King solemnly Assents to, secure to themselves their Liberties. During an Interregnum the Archbishop of Gnesna is ex Officio Regent of the Kingdom, or if there be no Archbishop of Gnesna the Office devolves to the Bishop of Cujavia; and if that See be Vacant, to the Bishop of Poznania. The Poles have had an ancient Maxim, That their King ought rather to be Elected out of a Foreign Princely Family, than out of their own Nobility; being of opinion that thereby the equality among the Nobility may be the better preserved. In the two Elections preceding this last, they swerved from this Maxim, and Chose out of their own Nobility; but whether it had not been better to have done so now too, Time will shew, if they are not sensible of it already.

'Tis the Nobility or Gentry only, that have any share in the Government, the other Subjects being by the Laws deemed Boors; for the Traders being mostly Foreigners, and the Husbandmen meer Vassals, the Gentry totally exclude them both from any share in the Legislation or Administration. The Senate or Diet of Poland, is made up of the Bishops, Great Officers of State, viz. the Great Marshal of the Kingdom, the Great Marshal of the Duchy, the High Chancellor of the Kingdom, the Chancellor of Lithuania, the Vice-Chancellor of the Kingdom, the Vice-Cancellor of Lithuania, the Treasurer of the Kingdom, the Treasurer of Lithuania, the Marshal of the Court of the Kingdom, and the Marshal of the Court of the Duchy, and the Palatines: To which are added the Lesser Senators, which are the Castellans or Lieutenants of the Palatinates, and the Deputies of the Nobility: This Court which in the whole consists of one hundred and fifty Persons, is look'd upon as the Bulwark of the Commonwealth, against the attempts of the King, and therefore four of them are always about his Person, on pretence of giving him Counsel, but in truth to be Spies upon him. However the King having the disposal of the Great Offices, and the Bishopricks, he can in time make a sufficient Party in the Senate, and the rather, because the Palatines are commonly divided among themselves. This is the Legislative Power of the Nation, like as our Parliament in England, but with this difference, that the Deputies of the Nobility, are like the Tribunes of the People in Old Rome, and have Power by the Dissent of but one Voice, to hinder the Passing any Decree. And the Time of the Dyet's Sitting being confined to six Weeks, it has often happen'd that the Labour of a whole Session has been lost, by the Caprice of one Member.

But the Great Dyet, or General Assembly of the Nation, is the whole Body of the Nobility or Gentry, (for they are not distinguish'd by Titles in these Countries) which is exceeding Powerful, both by reason of their Number and Wealth. These meet on Horseback in the Plains near Warsaw, and are seldom Assembled but for the Election of a King. And 'tis they that prescribe the Rules by which he must Govern, call'd the Pacta Conventa: The Heads of the Principal parts whereof, it will not be amiss to set down, viz. The King must not call in, or admit Foreign Forces, without the Consent of the Estates. He must not encrease the number of the Militia, raise Forces privately, or send Aid to any other Prince without the Consent of Estates. He must not commit the Trust of Forts and Castles, to Strangers or Boors. He must not make an Offensive War, without the General Assembly. He must not make Peace, without the Approbation of the Estates: Only ancient Alliances may be Renewed by the King, with consent of the Senators residing at Court. And because the King has the disposal of all Civil and Ecclesiastical Dignities, it is usually stipulated in the Pacta Conventa, that he shall not encrease or Diminish the number of those Officers. Many other Conditions are prescribed in the Pacta Conventa, which the King solemnly Swears to maintain.

For the Administration of Justice, Civil and Criminal, several Courts as usual, are held in Poland, but the most considerable are the Parliaments, Compos'd of a certain Number of Gentlemen, Clergy and Laity, who are Chosen in each Palatinate, the Lay Members once in four years, and the Ecclesiastical once in two years. Of these Parliaments there are two for the Kingdom, and one for the Duchy. Those for the Kingdom, Sit at Lublin in Upper, and Petricow in Lower Poland. And that for the Duchy is held one year at Vilna, and the other year at Minski or Novogrodeck by turns. These Courts receive Appeals from Inferior Courts, and from them Lyes no Appeal, except to the King and Senate.

The Revenues of the King of Poland arise out of the Salt-Pits, the half of the Customs of Danzick, and the Royal Oeconomics, all which may amount to 100000 l. per Annum, but then it is all clear to himself, for he pays no Troops, not even his own Guards. And all the Officers of the Household are Gentlemen of Poland, who Serve without Salary in expectation of some Office. And all the Charges of the Army, and other publick Expences, being provided by the Senate, he has no manner of Charge but that of his own Family. Moreover the Estates provide a suitable Maintenance for the Queen, after the King's Death; but then he cannot Marry or Divorce, without their consent, nor can the Queen be Crown'd without being of the Romish Religion.

The Succession of the Kings and Princes of POLAND, as well as it can be Collected from History, is as follows.

C H A P. II.

Of P O L A N D, properly so call'd; divided into the Upper and Lower.

THE Upper or Lesser Poland, is situated between the Lower Poland and Warsovia on the North, Hungary on the South, Russia on the East, and Germany on the West, containing in extent from East to West, near 200 Miles; and from North to South, above 120; lying between 49. and 51 Degrees of Latitude. The River Vistula passes through it, the River Warta hath its Source here, and several other smaller Rivers Water the Land, which is reasonably fruitful, but over-run with Woods. It is divided into three Palatinates, wherein are these Cities and chief Towns, viz.

In the Palatinate of Cracow, being the South-west part of the Province, are

- Cracow.
- Novoguiria.
- Severia.
- Czenterow.
- Lelow.
- Ozwiecin.
- Zator.
- Wielicz.
- Bochna.
- Sandecz.
- Lubowla.
- Byecz.

In the Palatinate of Sandomir, which is the middle part, are

- Sandomir.
- Zawichoff.
- Kunow.
- Schedlowitz.
- Radom.
- Zarnaw.
- Malogocz.
- Pikzow.
- Vistickia.
- Corezin.
- Polaniez.
- Pilsno.

In the Palatinate of Lublin, which is the North-east part, are

- Lublin.
- Kazimiers.
- Piotrowin.
- Urzendow.
- Opol.
- Scodleck.

Cracow, Cracovia, the Metropolis of the Kingdom of Poland, is seated on a Rocky Bank of the River Vistula, about the middle of the Palatinate, 50 Miles North from the Confines of Hungary, 40 East from Germany, 250 South from the Baltick-Sea, and in the Latitude of 49. 40. Longitude 40. 20. It had its Name as is supposed from one Cracus a Person of great Reputation, and as the Bohemians brag, one of their Princes, whom the Polanders entreated to take upon him the Government, after they were weary of the Twelve Waywodes, that succeeded King Lechus I. but others make it the Carodunum of Protony. It is the largest and best built of any Town in Poland, the Houses being of Free-Stone and very high, the Streets large, and the publick Buildings Magnificent: Among which the King's Palace seated on a Hill which affords it an admirable Prospect, the Cathedral of St. Stanislaus, the Church of St. Mary in the Grand Place, surrounded with four ws of very fine Buildings, with 50 other Churches, are the most considerable. This City was made the See of an Arch-bishop, at the first planting of Christianity here, in the year 964. but about 100 years after, upon some difference with the Pope, it was reduced to an Episcopal, and made Suffragan to Gnesna. It is also adorned with a University; Honoured with the Session of the Supreme Court of Judicature, the keeping of the Royal Ensigns or Regalia, and is the place of the King's Coronation. Cracow in general Comprehends, the three parts of 1. Cracow, 2. Sradomira, and 3. Cazamira. The first is encompassed with a Ditch and Wall, Flank'd with round Brick Towers, and in it stands the Castle a Mile in Compass, Founded on a Rock, with noble Buildings of Stone, round a square Court, and Galleries supported by Marble Pillars; the King's Apartments are adorn'd with very curious Paintings and Statues; and the North Gallery Built by King Sigmund affords a Prospect over all the fine Country in the Neighbourhood.

Novoguiria 25 miles west from Cracow. Siberia 30 miles North from it. Lelow the same distance North-east from Siberia, with some other Towns in their Neighbourhood, are noted for their Silver and Lead Mines. Czentocho on the River Warta, near the Confines of this Palatinate, 60 Miles North-west from Cracow, is famous for its well endowed Monastery of Hermits and Religious Votaries. Ozwiecin and Zator on the South side of the Vistula, over against Novoguiria, are Honoured with the Title of Dukedoms. Wielicz on the same side of the Vistula a few Miles from Cracow and Bochna, famous for Rock Salt, as hard as Stones dug out of Mines.

Sandecz 40 Miles South from Cracow, hath Mines of Gold and Copper; as Byecz 20 Miles East from it, hath of Vitriol. Lubowla 20 Miles South from Sandecz, is a strong Fortrels, formerly in the hands of the Hungarians, but now Possessed by the Poles.

Sandomir the Capital of the Palatinate, stands on a Rock near the Banks of the Vistula, where it Receives the Sanus, about 100 Miles East from Cracow, and 120 South from Warsaw. It is a pleasant City and Fortified with Walls, a strong Castle, and some Regular Out-works raised by Casimer the Great. Among the publick Buildings, the Monastery of Dominican Fryars, is chiefly remarkable. This Town was Sack'd by the Tartars in 1240. and was taken by the Suedes in 1655. but Restored the year following.

Zawichoff stands on the East side of the Vistula, near 20 miles below Sandomir. Kunow 40 Miles North from Sandomir, hath Quarries of Marble. Schedlowitz 30 Miles West from Kunow, and 50 North-west from Sandomir, abounds with Iron and Steel.

Radom stands on the North-East of Schedlowitz about 20 Miles, and Zarnaw is about 40 Miles from it to the West. Malogocz stands 70 Miles East from Sandomir, and Pikzow 25 South from it. Vistickia stands in the midway between that and Corezin, which stands on the Vistula, as doth Polaniez, about 25 Miles below it. Pilsno stands on the South, about 20 Miles Miles from the Vistula, and near 60 from Sandomir.

Lublin, the chief Town of the other Palatinate, stands at the Foot of a Hill near the River Vstrieza, 50 miles from Sandomir, and 90 from Cracow to the North-East, and 80 from Warsaw to the South-West. It is not a very large, but well built Town, and much frequented by Merchants from Muscovy, Germany, and other Parts, at the three great Marts kept Annually here. The great Church dedicated to St. Michael, and several Monasteries here are magnificent Structures; and the Town is honoured with being the Seat of one of the two Supreme Courts of Judicature in Poland. It is walled round, and environ'd with Marthes; and is, besides, defended by an adjacent Castle that was at first built by the Russians, all which render this a Place of Strength.

Kazimiers and Pietrowin, stand on the Vistula, about 15 miles a-sunder, and 25 from Lublin. Orzgendow is about 12 miles South-East from Pietrowin. Opal stands 25 miles North from Lublin and Scodlock as far beyond it near the Confines of Warsavia.

The LOWER or larger POLAND, so called, because Lechus the first King of the Peles chose this Country for his Seat, lies on the North of the Upper Poland, between Warsovia on the East, Germany on the West, Prussia on the North, and the Lesser Poland and Silesia on the South. It extends from the 51st to the 53d Degree of Latitude, and from the 37th to the 42d Degree of Longitude; being from North to South about 100 miles, and from East to West above 200 miles. It is generally a level Campaign Country, abounding with pleasant Rivers, Lakes, and Ponds, among which the River Warta is most considerable, and passes thro' a great part. The Land produces plenty of Corn, and the Inhabitants are plentifully furnish'd with Cattle, Fish, and Fowl. This Province comprehends 10 Palatines, wherein these Cities and Towns are of chiefest Note, viz.

The Palatinate of Sirad is the most southern Part of the Lower Poland, Pofna, Pofnania, called Poznan by the Inhabitants, and Pofen by the Germans, is situated on a Plain, in the midst of Hills, and on the Banks of the River Warta, 170 miles North-West from Cracow, 150 West from Warsaw, and 100 miles South from Dantzick. It is a City of small Compass, but well built and adorn'd with a stately Castle: It is also the See of a Bishop, and a Place of good Trade: The Mayor or chief Magistrate, who is chosen Annually, is dignified with the Title of, General of Great Poland. John Lubranski, sometime Bishop here, founded a small University, in the Suburbs of Pofna; which Structure was afterwards very much beautified by Adam Canar one of his Successors, and it is in a flourishing state. The other most considerable Buildings are the Jesuits College and Monastery. The Inhabitants of this City are very Wealthy and Civil, and appear finer in their Apparel and Houses than ordinary.

Rogofno stands about 20 miles North from Pofna. Krofian in the very middle of the Palatinate, 30 West from Pofna. Cieblow 20 miles West from Krofian, stands on a small River that a little below falls into the Oder.

Kalifb stands in a marshy Land near the Banks of the River Drofna, 40 miles South-East from Pofna. It is fortified with a strong Brick-Wall, and adorn'd with a stately College of Jesuits.

Gnefna, called Gnifen by the Germans, the chief City of the Lower Poland, and formerly the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom, and Seat of the King, stands in the middle of the Palatinate, 30 miles from Kalifb to the North, and as far from Pofna to the West. It was built, as is generally reported, by King Lechus I. Founder of this Monarchy, and called Gnefna from an Eagle's Nest found there, which in the Polish Language is called Gnefiad. A dreadful Fire which happen'd in 1613. miserably laid it wast, and it has ever since declined. This is the See of the Archbishop, a Person of great Dignity and Power, being Primate of all Poland, Legate of the Holy See; and in case of the King's Death, is Regent till a new King be chosen, whom also he claims the right of Declaring and Crowning. The Cathedral is a venerable Building and exceeding Rich, having Gates of Corinthian Brass, and a Treasury of inestimable Value.

Kamin and Laudeck, both stand on the River Warta, 20 or 30 miles East and South-East from Gnefna. Nakel stands on a River to which it gives name, 35 miles North from Gnefna.

Brzeftye stands upon a Causey among Marthes, 60 miles East from Gnefna, and is only considerable on account of its being the Seat of a Palatine. Cowale stands upon the Vistula, 20 miles East from Brzeftye. Krufwick stands upon the Lake Gropi, about 30 miles West from Brzeftye, and is remarkable for the Death of Popiel II. Duke of Poland, who was devour'd by Rats, a just Punishment nishment from Heaven for having poisoned a great number of his Friends and Relations at a Feast, as Staravolscius relates. Bidget, in this Palatinate, has been mention'd in History on account of the Treaty of Peace concluded there, Nov. 6. 1657. between the King of Poland and the Duke of Brandenburg.

Wladislaw, Wladislawia stands upon the Vistula in the Midway between Ploczko and Thorn, about 20 miles from Brzeſtſe, to the North, in a marshy Soil, but surrounded with a plentiful Country. It is the Seat of the Bishop of Cujavia, whose stately Palace is the chief Ornament of the City. The Cathedral is an old Building, but very rich in Plate and Furniture. This is the chief Palatinate and Capital of Cujavia.

Inowloz about 30 or 40 miles West from Wladislaw, is the Seat of the third Palatine of Cujavia, but otherwise not very considerable. Bydgosz, a wall'd Town, stands on the River Barde which falls into the Vistula, and is a Place of good Trade, especially for Salmon.

Dobrzin is a little Town, built upon a Rock near the Banks of the Vistula, about 15 miles East from Wladislaw, and only notable for being a Palatinate; and about 25 miles North from it stands Libna and Rippina, a Fortrefs.

Ploczko the chief City of the Palatinate, and the See of a Bishop, is seated on a high Bank on the Vistula, whence is a fair Prospect of a pleasant and fruitful Country: It is distant 15 miles from Dobrzin to the South, near 30 from Brzeſtſe to the East, and about 50 from Warsaw to the North-West; and is a populous Place, having several Religious Houses and Churches, besides the Cathedral, very well endowed. Rassuntz and Plenko stand about 30 miles to the North-East from it.

Rawa, a populous City, the Head of the Palatinate, stands on a River of the same name, 50 miles South from Ploczko, and about as far South-West from Warsaw. It is built and guarded by a Castle which is the Prison of such Persons of Quality as are committed, and also the Repository of part of the Crown Revenues. Here is also a wealthy College of Jesuits. About 25 miles North from hence stands Lowicz, the Residence of the Archbishop of Gnesna, whose Palace is a magnificent Fabrick: The Town is very populous, and much resorted to by Merchants at its Annual Fair. Gostyrin stands about 10 miles North from Lowicz on the River Bsura, as does Gabin 10 miles East from it.

Lancicia or Lanſchet, which gives Denomination to a Palatinate, stands on the River Bsura, about 40 or 50 miles from Rawa to the North-West, and 80 from Warsaw to the West. It stands among Marshes, and hath a good Castle for its Defence, built on a Rock. Bressini and Inowloz, stand in the extreme South-West part of this Palatinate, near the Confines of Upper Poland, about 60 miles from Lancicia.

Sirad stands upon a Plain on the Banks of the River Warta, 60 miles West from Rawa, and near 70 South from Posna: 'Tis a mean built Town, the Houses being of Wood, but is surrounded with a strong Brick-Wall. It is the Head of a Palatinate, and was formerly a Dukedom, usually given to the second Son of the King. Petrikow, about 30 or 40 miles from Sirad, to the East, is a near and well built Town, but stands among Marshes, and was almost quite burnt down in the Year 1640. Here was formerly a Royal Palace, but is now ruinous. The other Parliament or Supreme Court of Judicature in Poland, is held yearly in this Town for deciding Differences between the Nobility, and determining Causes by Appeal from inferior Courts. Widlim is a near Town built of Brick, stands about 25 miles South from Sirad.

OF P R U S S I A.

PRUSSIA is a large Country, lying on the North of Poland Proper, between that and the Baltick Sea, with Lithuania and Samogitia on the East, and Pomerania on the West. Poland Proper, as we have said, with Warsavia, being the southern, as the Baltick Sea and Samogitia is the northern Bounds. It lies between the 53d and 55th Degree of Latitude, and in Longitude from the 38th to the 44th Degree. Its length is about 200 miles; the breadth in the Eastern part is at most but 80 miles, but in the Western part it runs up to near twice as much. The Soil is reasonably fruitful, but somewhat over-run with Woods: and abounds with Rivers, whereof the Wesel or Vistula is the most considerable; that River rises in the Mountains, on the Borders of Hungary, passes cross Poland, and falls into the Baltick at Danzick, having first divided its self into several Branches, and made the three Islands called the Werder: The larger Branch passes by Marienburg, and at Elbing falls into the Bay called Frisch-Haft, which is a safe Harbour from the Baltick. Here are also many small Lakes, which afford the Inhabitants plenty of Fish, as the Woods do with Venison, and the Lands with Cattle and Corn; one Commodity especially, Prussia hath peculiarly, which is Amber, found on the Sea Coasts in great plenty. Prussia was formerly a rude Country, inhabited by Barbarian Idolaters, long after Poland had received Christianity; for though many Endeavours were used to Convert 'em, nothing could be effected till the Knights of the Teutonic Order attempted it; who in the middle of the Thirteenth Century conquer'd the Country, planted Christianity, and succeeded in the Sovereignty of the Eastern part of it; and Albert, Marquis of Brandenburg and first Duke of Prussia, becoming Master of the Order, conveyed the Dominion of that part, since called the Ducal Prussia, to his Successors the Marquises of Brandenburg, who still enjoy it: But the Eastern part was conquer'd by the Poles, and is still part of their Country. At the Reformation the Lutheran Religion prevail'd here, and is still generally profess'd in the Regal Prussia; but the late Marquis of Brandenburg introduced duc'd Calvinism into Koningsberg, and other Parts of the Ducal Prussia.

Prussia is divided into two large Parts, viz. Royal and Ducal. The former subject to the King of Poland, is the Western part, bounded on the North by the Baltick, on the South by Poland, on the East by the Ducal Prussia, and on the West by Pomerania. It is divided by the River Vistula, that part lying on the East of the River, being called Pomerelia. The chief Cities and Towns are these, viz.

In Pomerelia,

Dantzick.
Dischbow.
Stargard.
Grabow.
Pautzko.

Within the Weissel,

Elbing.
Marienburg.

Dantzick, Dantsicum aut Gedanum, the Capital City of Pomerania, is seated on a Bay of the Baltick-Sea, near the Mouth of the River Vistula, 140 miles North-West from Warsaw, near 120 East from Stetin in Pomerania, and about 30 West from Elbing, in the Latitude of 54. and Longitude of 40. It is a large, well-built, rich, and populous City, the greatest Emporium of the Baltick-Sea, and perhaps one of the greatest Granaries in Europe. It is one of the chief of the Hanse Towns, and a famous Mart Town for Corn and other Commodities of Poland; vast Fleets of Holland Ships come yearly hither, from whence they fetch almost all the Corn used in Holland and Zeland. It was erected into a City in 1295, by King Primistaus, and in 1343. walled round by the Knights of the Teutonic Order, whose Master Conrad Wallenrod built that part of the City called De rechte Stadt in 1390. besides which, Dantzick consists of two other Parts, which are govern'd by three distinct Senates, and so might be called three Towns; but is, however, but one City, under the Government of its own Magistracy and Protection of the King of Poland. Two Rivulets pass thro' the Town, and feed it with Water, as well as drive many Mills for the Conveniency and Profit of the People. The publick Buildings are very fair, especially the Church of St. Mary, which is very magnificent in its Building, and rich in its Ornaments, the Font alone being said to have cost five thousand Pounds; The Town-House, the Arsenal, the Exchange, the place of St. Dominick, and a College of Jesuits, with several Churches, are the other Buildings of chiefest Note here. This City hath suffer'd many Revolutions: About the Year 1100. the Danes possess'd it, afterwards the *Poland*ers gain'd it; in 1305. the Teutonic Knights were Masters of it; in 1454. Casimir III. King of Poland regain'd it, and granted great Privileges to the Citizens; who afterwards, in defence of the Augsburg Confession, sided with Maximilian of Austria against the Poles, which provok'd King Stephen Batori to besiege them in 1577. but by the Mediation of other Princes, they were restor'd to their Religion and Liberties in 1597. and in 1632. the City was made a Member of the State, and admitted to a Suffrage in the Election of the King. In 1656. they vigorously repuls'd the Suedes, and adhered to the Interest of King John Casimir.

Stargard and Dischbow stand about 20 miles South from Dantzick, the latter on the Vistula. Grabow stands on the Borders of Pomerania, 80 miles South-West, and seated on the Bay.

Elbing stands on a little River of the same name, which rises out of the Lake Drausen, and falls here into the Frisch Haff, a Bay of the Baltick, which is the Haven of this City, at the distance of 4 or 5 miles from the Vistula, 30 from Dantzick to the East, about 60 from Uladislaw to the North, and 120 North-West from Warsaw. It has a most delightful Situation, is very populous, and a Place of great Trade, the Inhabitants being wholly addicted to Business and Commerce. The City was built in 1239. and is divided into the Old and New Town. It was at first a free and imperial City, but afterwards fell into the Hands of the Knights of the Teutonic Order, and when Dantzick and Thorn shook off their Yoke, it followed the example, and submitted its self upon certain Conditions to the King of Poland. In the Year 1629. it was taken by the Suedes, and being afterwards surrender'd, was taken again by them in 1655. There is an University in it, which was founded by Albert of Brandenburg, Duke of Prussia. This Town, together with Thorn and Dantzick, are the Repositories of the Treasure and Archieves of Royal Prussia. On the 14th of October, 1698. General Brandt, with a Body of Horse, of the Elector of Brandenburg's Forces, came into the Neighbourhood of this Place, with a design to put a Garrison into it, upon account of an Agreement formerly made between the then King of Poland, and the late Elector of Brandenburg at the Treaty of Velaw and Bidgoff, that this City should be put into the Hands of the Elector as Security for Payment of a Debt of 400000 Dollars due to him for the Assistance he had given the Republick of Poland in the War against Sueden, neither of which having been performed he came now to demand it, but the City not receiving his Garrison, he block'd it up and made every thing ready for Bombarding it. Upon which the Citizens, unwilling to let things come to extremity, and despairing of Relief from Poland, which was then in great Confusion, submitted upon Articles, and 1200 Brandenburgers entered the 11th of November, and kept Possession of the Place till the beginning of the Year 1700. when the Poles agreed to pay the Money; and 'till it could be raised, put into the Elector's Hands the Jewels of the Crown, and accordingly the Brandenburgers quitted the City which remains in its former State.

Marienburg, Marienburgum, called also Margemburg by the Inhabitants, and Malbork by the *Poland*ers, is seated on the Nogat, a Branch of the Vistula, at the distance of 25 miles from Dantzick to the South-East, and about 20 from Elbing to the South-West. It was heretofore the chief Seat of the Teutonic Knights, having been founded by a Cross-bearer of that Fraternity; and took its name, they say, from a miraculous Image of the Virgin Mary. The Castle was built in 1281. and reckon'd one of the strongest in these Parts; but in the Suedish Wars in 1644. it was burnt down, and the new one since built is not so considerable, nor the Town very notable; the Houses being of Wood and but mean, and the Inhabitants but poor. The Town was taken by the Poles in 1460. and by the Suedes in 1625, and in 1655. but was restored afterwards to the Poles, who still possess it.

Culm, an ancient famous City, stands on a Hill, the Foot whereof is water'd by the Vistula, 50 miles South from Dantzick, and 40 North-West from Uladislaw; it is at present in mean State, having suffer'd much in the Suedish War, but was anciently a Fortrefs of great importance; the Town built by the Crots-beaters of the Teutonic Knights in 1223. and afterwards well fortified against the Irriptions of the Heathen Prussians. Heiman de Saix, Master of the Order, preferib'd Laws for its Government, which were so considerable as to be taken notice of publicly, and a Specimen of them have been publish'd by Lambecius. It was also honoured with an Episcopal See, but since the decay of the City, the Bishop hath been translated to Colmensee or Culmsee, a small Town about 12 miles South-East from Culm.

Thorn, Torunum, which stands on the Vistula, about 20 miles South from Culm, and 30 North-East from Uladislaw, 100 North-West from Warsaw, and 50 South-East from Dantzick, is the fairest and best built Town in Royal Prussia, the Streets being much broader, and the Houses stielier than at Dantzick; it is also adorn'd with a Gymnasium, or small University, a Library, Hospital, and a stately Town-Houle, exceeded by none but Amsterdam. All which Structures were erected in the beginning of this Century, thro' the Care and Industry of Henry Ströband, one of the Burgo-masters, who died in 1609. It was heretofore subject to the Teutonic Order, from whom it revolted in 1454. and was afterwards a free imperial City; and tho' at present exempted from the Empire, and under the Protection of Poland, enjoys many Privileges. Here is a Bridge over the River; and at Old Thorn, a mile off, are still the Ruins of a Castle. The famous Nicolas Copernicus, Author of the Theory, was born here. This City was taken and regain'd several times in the Suedish Wars, from 1655. to 1665.

Braunslaw stands on the Frisch-Haff, 20 miles North East from Elbing.

Wartemberg is 45 miles East from Elbing, in that part of the Regal Prussia, which advances forward into the middle of the Ducal.

The Ducal Prussia (which may now be also called Royal, in regard that the Electors of Brandenburg hath chosen this part of his Dominions to Honour with the Title of Kingdom, in his late Creation) is bounded on the North with the Baltick and Samogitia, on the South with Wassovia, on the East with Lithuania, and on the West with Prussia Royal. It is the larger part of Prussia, extending Eastward from the Sea Coast above 100 miles, and Southward towards Wassovia as far. The chief Towns in it are,

Königsberg. } Pillaw.
Labiau. }

Königsberg, the chief City of the Ducal Prussia, and a Place of great Trade, stands at the Mouth of the River Pregel, which here falls into the Frisch-Haff, 80 miles East from Dantzick, about as far West from the Confines of Samogitia, and 130 miles North from Warsaw. It is a large and well built Town, divided into three parts; whereof that which is properly the Old Königsberg, and was built in 1260. by the Teutonic Order, hath the Ducal Palace in it; the second stands in an Island, and is called Kneiphoff, from an Officer of that name, who joined it to Königsberg in 1380. In this part stands the Cathedral of the Bishoprick of Smarland, and an University founded by Duke Albert; the third is called Lebeniche, which Berthold of Austria, added to the two former. The Lake called the Frisch-Haff opens to the Baltick Sea, and makes a convenient Port to this City which is thereby a great Emporium, and hath been subject to the Brandenburger since the Year 1525.

Memel stands at the extrem North part of Prussia, upon a Lake of fresh Water, called the Curisch-Haff, which opening to the Baltick makes a convenient Port, at the distance of 90 miles from Königsberg to the North, and 60 from Mittaw in Courland to the West. It is seated among Lakes, and is fortified with a strong Castle which renders it the northern Key of this Country.

Labiau stands at the bottom of the Curisch-Haff, about 25 miles North-East from Königsberg. Pillaw, a very safe Port on the Baltick, at the Mouth of the Frisch-Haff, about 30 miles West from Königsberg. Heiligspeil stands over against it, within side the Lake.

C H A P. IV.

Of Samogitia and Courland.

SAMOGITIA lies on the North of Prussia, in a Triangular Form, between Courland on the North, Lithuania on the East and South-East, and Ducal Prussia on the South-West; a small part of it extending quite to the Baltick on the West, and the extent of it is about 100 miles. It is a marshy Soil, whence the Country has its name, Samogiz signifying such in the Language of the Inhabitants, and hath abundance of Rivers and Lakes that often overflow the Land, which yields Pasture and Corn; but especially Woods in abundance; wherein great quantity of excellent Honey is found: A Race of Horses are bred here, which, tho' small, are of a sprightly generous Nature. The River Chronus, otherwise called the Russe, passes thro' the South Point of this Country, whence running cross Prussia falls into the Lake Curisch-Haff. The Inhabitants are a dull stupid People, and were with great difficulty converted from Paganism by King Uladislaus Jagello; nor even to this day is it intirely rooted out, the Inhabitants of some of the more desert Parts worshipping Idols. This Country was sometime subject to the Russians, afterwards to the Teutonic Order, and at last conquer'd by Uladislaus Jagello King of Poland, in the Fourteenth Century, and hath ever since been part of the Kingdom.

There are no considerable Cities here; those of greatest Note are,

Rosiem.	} Birze.
Midnik.		} Kjedany.
Schwanden.

Rosiem or Rosienie, is a small City seated near the River Dubissa, in the Latitude of 55. about 70 miles East from the Baltick Sea, near 50 West from the Confines of Lithuania, near 30 North from the River Rufs, and about 80 miles North-East from Koningsberg. It is a place of no great Note, but is by some reckon'd the Capital of Samogitia: Tho' others give that Honour to Midnick or Vormatia; because it is the Seat of the Bishop of Samogitia: It stands on the River Wirwta, about 25 miles North-West from Rosiem, and is but a very poor ordinary Place.

Kjedany stands 30 miles South-East from Rosiem. Schwanden 60 miles to the North of Rosiem, and near the Confines of Courland. And Birze, which bears the Title of a Dukedom, stands 100 miles East from Schwanden.

C O U R L A N D, or Kureland, lies on the North of Samogitia, between that and the River Duina, which divides it from Livonia; whereof this was formerly reckon'd a part. The Baltick Sea bounds it on the West, the Gulf of Riga and Duina on the North, Samogitia on the South, and Lithuania on the East. It is in length above 150 miles, but the breadth is not proportionate, being but 40, and in the Eastern part not above 20 miles. The Country is plain and fruitful, abounding with Corn and Honey; some parts of it are Fenny and full of Lakes and Rivers. The River Duina washes its Coasts, and affords them Water Carriage for their Goods to Riga, as the Baltick Sea does for Foreign Trade. This Country was formerly subject to the Teutonick Order, afterwards to the Poles, and tho' at present it has its own Duke, he pays Homage to the King of Poland. It is divided into two Parts, 1. Courland, and 2. Semigallia; the chief Towns whereof are,

In Courland, which is the Western part, divided from Semigallia by the River Mussa, } Goldingen.

	} Windaw.
	} Piltyn.

In Semigallia, the Eastern part beyond the Mussa, } Mittaw.

	} Egypren.
	} Bauske.

Goldingen is usually reckon'd the Capital of Courland, but otherwise not considerable. It stands upon the River Wetaw, about 30 miles from the Baltick, 130 miles North from Koningsberg, and 60 South-West from Riga.

Piltyn is the Seat of the Bishop of Courland, and stands upon the same River about 20 miles North from Goldingen.

Windaw, called by the Inhabitants Kies, is seated at the Mouth of the River Wetaw near the Baltick. It was formerly the Seat of the Provincial of Liesland; and the Sessions of the Parliament of Courland made it populous; but its ancient Splendor is lost, and at present 'tis only considerable on account of some Trade, Pitch, Tar, Wax, and other Commodities being exported hence to Foreign parts.

Mittaw stands on the Banks of the River Mussa or Mausi, 50 miles South-East from Goldingen, 35 South from Riga, and above 250 North from Warsaw. It is the Capital of Semigallia, and the Seat of the Duke of Courland. The Town is mean, but the Castle is magnificent. It was taken by Gustavus Adolphus in 1621. but restored in 1629.

Bauski stands upon the same River, about 25 miles East from Mittaw.

Egypten stands on the Borders of Lithuania, 70 miles East from Bauski.

CHAPTER V.

Of the Great Dutchy of LITHUANIA.

LITHUANIA, called Litwa by the Inhabitants, Litweski by the Poles, and Littawen by the Germans, the largest Province of the Kingdom of Poland, lies on the East of the Provinces we have been speaking of, and is bounded on the North by Courland, Livonia, and Muscovy, on the South by Volbinia and Polesia, and on the East by Polachia and Samogitia. It extends from the 52d to the 56th Degree of Latitude, and from the 44th to the 45th Degree of Longitude, in Form almost Circular, and about 250 miles over. The Land is flat and marshy, and was formerly over-run with Woods, but by the Industry of the Kings they are in some measure cut down and the Land cultivated: Here are many Lakes and Rivers which afford the Inhabitants plenty of Fish, as the Forests do Venison, Honey, Pitch, and Furs; which last is very useful to the Inhabitants, for the Air is very cold and makes such Cloathing very necessary. The Land yields Corn (but the Cold often spoils the Harvest) and feeds great Herds of Cattle, wherewith the Country is well stock'd. Pitch, Tar, and Timber are sent hence by the Merchants, and Wine, Salt, and Woollen Cloth receiv'd in Return; all other Necessaries the Inhabitants have at home.

Lithuania was formerly govern'd by its own Prince, called the Great Duke, and comprehended also Volbinia and Polachia; 'till Uladistaus Jagello, their Duke, being chosen King of Poland, annexed it to that Crown, but with the preservation of the ancient Laws and Form of Government: This was sometimes, in future Successions, opposed by the Lithuanians, and many Differences happen'd thereupon; 'till in the Year 1569. it was finally agreed that the Lithuanians should never elect a Great Duke, but should assemble with the Polish Nobility upon an Interregnum, and both Nations together choose one Prince, and that Volbinia and Polachia should be granted to Poland.

The Inhabitants were formerly most stupid Idolaters, till Uladislaus Jagello being converted, introduced the Christian Religion here, built a Cathedral, and founded a Bishoprick at Vilna, and erected divers other Churches; so that in time Idolatry was suppress'd; but the lower sort being very ignorant and stupid, do to this day in many places retain some remains of it, and because a Serpent was the God they worshipp'd formerly, do still keep in their Houses an Adder which they feed and cherish with great Care. The Nobility here, as in Poland, are very Proud, and domineer over the Comonalty, which are as sneaking, and submit to a strange degree, the Tenant being his Lord's Slave, and the greatest part of his time bestow'd in his Service. The whole Country is divided into eight Palatinates, wherein are these Cities and Towns of Note.

In the Palatinate of Wilna which adjoyns to Samogitia.

Wilna.
Wilkomirz.
Osmiana.

In the Palatinate of Braslaw, which adjoyns also to Samogitia, and lies on the North of Wilna.

Braslaw.
Miadzial.
Narocz.

In the Palatinate of Poloczko, lying East from Braslaw.

Poloczko.
Druio.
Drissa.
Plissa.

Eastward of Poloczko lies the Palatinate of Witepsk; in which are,

Witepsk.
Wisicissa.
Ula.
Surafs.

On the West of Wilna lyes the Palatinate of Troki, divided into two parts by the River Niemen.

Troki.
Kowno.
Grodno.
Bielica.
Merecz.

The Palatinate of Minski, lies on the East of Wilna, and South of Braslaw, in which are.

Minski.
Borissow.
Brodziet.
Swissloz.

In the Palatinate of Mscislaw which lies on the East of Minski, and South of Witepsk.

Mscislaw.
Mobilow.
Orssa.
Robaczow.

The Palatinate of Novogrodeck is the South-west corner of Lithuania, having Troki on the North, and Minski on the East.

Novogrodeck.
Wolkowisca.
Nesweis.
Slonim.
Slucz.

Wilna or Vilna, called also Vilenski by the Inhabitants, and die Wilde by the Germans, is seated at the Confluence of the Wilna and Wilna Rivers, in the Latitude of 54 30 at the distance of 120 Miles from Koningsberg to the East, 180 from Warsaw to the North-East, and near 120 South from Mittaw. It is the Capital of Lithuania, and is a large and very populous City, founded by Duke Gediminius in 1305. the Houses are low, of Wood and mean; but the publick Buildings are fine, among which are the Castle, the Duke's Palace, the Cathedral and several Churches all built of Stone, the Bernardine Monastery, the University Founded by King Stephen, in 1579. and the foreign Merchants Houses, which are built of Stone, and well adorn'd, especially that of the Muscovian Company. Wilna is an Episcopal See, founded as we had said by King Uladislaus Jagello, and a Place of Trade, but it is chiefly carried on by Foreigners, the Inhabitants being Poor and much addicted to Drunkenness. The Parliament or chief Court of Judicature sit here one Year and the next Year at Minsk. The Ducal Palace hath an Armory very well furnished. About two Miles from hence stands another Palace built of Wood by King Sigismund, adorned with a Park, Orchards and Gardens: It is called Wirsupa, being near the Water, which the Word signifies. In 1655. the Muscovites took Vilna, but it was afterwards recover'd.

The River Wilna, on which this City stands, divides the Palatinate into two equal Parts, and then washing the Borders passes through some part of Samogitia and Prussia, and falls at last into the Baltick, having first received several other Rivers, and changed its Name into that of Russe.

Wilkomirz stands in the lower part of the Palatinate, 35 miles North-West from Wilna, on the River Swiera: And Osmiana stands in the upper part, 25 Miles South West from Wilna.

Braslaw stands near the Confines of Cowland, 70 Miles North-East from Wilna; it is the Capital of a Palatinate, and has a strong Castle built upon a Rock. The Town is seated upon a Lake, whence issues a small River, that about 20 Miles off falls into the Duina.

Miadzial stands 50 miles South from Braslaw, upon another small Lake and River, and Narocz stands upon a River of the same Name, 20 miles South-West from Miadzial. Both these Towns by means of this River have communication with Wilna.

Poloczko stands upon the River Duina, and another small River to which it gives Name, 100 miles East from Braslaw. It is the Capital of the Palatinate, which was formerly a Duchy, a large and populous Town, and guarded by two Castles, one on the Duina, and the other on the Polotta. It was taken by the Muscovites in 1563. regain'd by K. Stephen in 1579. and since that again taken by the Muscovites, and retaken by the Poles.

Druio stands upon the Duina 70 Miles below Poloczko, and 30 East from Braslaw, and hath a Castle near it. Drissa stands at the Mouth of a River of the same Name which falls into the Duina, 20 miles East from Druio; and Lissa is about 30 miles South from it.

Witepsk, the Capital of a Palatinate is seated on the Duina, where it receives the Wirzba 50 miles East from Poloczko; it hath a Castle which was often taken and retaken in the last Muscovite War. It had formerly Dukes of its own, till Olgard was chosen Great Duke.

Wisicissa, stands near the Duina, 20 miles below Witepsk, and Ula 20 Miles below it at the Mouth of a River of the same Name. Surafs on the Duina, also is about 25 miles East from Witepsk.

Troki the Capital of a Palatinate, and formerly the Seat of the Great Duke, is seated among inaccessible Marshes, whence issues the River Brasala that 10 miles below falls into the Wilna: It is distant about 20 miles from Wilna to the West, and hath a strong Castle for its defence, built by Guedimin Great Duke, in 1322. taken by the Muscovites, and the Town very much destroy'd, in 1655.

Kowno stands on the River Niemen near its mouth into the Wilna, 30 miles West from Troki. Grodno is seated partly on a rising Ground, near the Banks of of the River Niemen, over which it has a stately Bridge of Wood. The Town is Fortified with a Castle Founded upon a Rock, and is 60 miles distant from Troki to the South. Bielica stands also on the Niemen 60 miles above Grodno. And Merecz 40 miles below Grodno on a River of the same Name which there falls into the Niemen.

Minsk the Capital of another Palatinate, is seated in a Marsh near the River Swistocz, 80 miles South-east from Wilna. It is a well Built Town, and hath a Castle for its defence. Boryssow stands upon the River Berezina, 50 miles East from Minsk, which is a regular Fortification, with deep Ditches, and a double Palisade, and hath a Morass on one side. Brodzieck upon the same River 40 miles to the South. And Swistocz 20 miles more South where the River of the same Name falls into the Berezina.

Mscislaw stands upon the River Sesl, in the Confines of Muscovy, 170 miles East from Minsk. It was taken by the Muscovites in the last War, and regained by King Sigismund I. whose General Constan-tinus Duke of Ostrog, did here cut to pieces the Muscovite Army of 40000 Men. Mobilow, seated on a Hill near the Banks of the River Boristhenes or Nieper (which passes quite through this Palatinate) 50 miles South-east from Mscislaw, is a good well built Town. It was taken by the Muscovites in 1654. and retaken by the Poles in 1656. Ossa stands also on the Nieper, where it receives the River Osa, 60 miles West from Mscislaw. It is a good Town and hath a strong Castle, but was taken by the Muscovites.

Robaczow, the Capital of a Territory, which by some Geographers is reckon'd as separate from this Palatine, is a large good Town seated on the Nieper; where it receives the Odrucz, 80 miles South-west from Mscislaw.

Novogrodeck, call'd also Litawiski, is one of the best Cities in Lithuania, and used formerly to be given to the Great Duke's second Son. It is Seated upon the River Niemen, 60 miles South-west from Minsk, and 60 South from Wilna. In this City and in Minski, the Dyet or Parliament of Lithuania is alternately held. Walkowisca stands upon the River Rofs 60 miles West from Novogrodeck. Slonim stands upon the Szura, 30 Miles South from Novogrodeck, and Nesweis stands on the Eastern Confines, 60 miles from Novogrodeck, and as far South from Minski. Slucz bears the Title of a Duchy, and was formerly a separate Territory. The City stands upon a River of the same Name, 80 miles South-west from Novogrodeck, and is a large Town, but the Houses are of Wood. Near this City a famous Victory was obtain'd by the Poles over the Tartars, in the time of King Sigismund I.

And now having Survey'd Poland properly to call'd Prussia, Lithuania, Samogitia and Cowland, we shall proceed to Warsovia, wherein stands the City Warsaw, whence passing through Polakia, Polesia, Red-Russia, Podolia and Volbinia finish our Journey in the Ukraine, the extrem South-east part of the Polish Dominions.

CHAP. VI.

Of Warsovia, Polachia and Polesia.

WARSOVIA or Masovia, called by the Poles, Mazowje, and by the Germans, Die Masaw; may be reckon'd the most considerable part of the Polish Dominion, being the Seat of the King, and the Grand Dyet of the Kingdom, as also of a vast number of Nobility. It lies in the middle of the Countries we have been Treating of, having Prussia on the North, the Upper Poland on the South; Polachia which parts it from Lithuania on the East, and the Lower Poland on the West. This is it's present Bounds, but formerly all Polachia, and that part of Lower Poland on the other side the Vistula, that is, the Palatinates of Dobrzyń and Ploczko, were part of it, and the whole Govern'd by a Duke of it's own, doing Homage to the King, till in the year 1495. the Race being Extinct, Ploczko and Dobrzyń were United to the Crown, and the rest given to Conrade Brother to King John Albert, whose Issue Male failing, in the year 1526, it was finally annexed to the Crown. And Polachia which had been join'd to Lithuania, was also annexed to the Crown in 1567.

It lies between the 51 Deg. 30 Min. and 53 Deg. 20 Min. of Latitude, in form near Oval, extending from North-east to South-west about 130 miles, and in breadth about 90 miles. It has the benefit of several Navigable Rivers, especially the Vistula, or VVeissel, which runs through the Southern part, and the Bug passes quite cross from East to West. The Country is plain; and the Soil fruitful, yielding Corn, Cattle, Fish and Fowl in plenty.

It is but one Palatinate denominated from Czeresko, which is the Seat of the Palatine; but Warsaw is the Principal City, which with the other chief Towns are as follow.

Warsaw .	}	Zakrotin .
Czeresko .		Novogrod .
Latowiecz .		Lumsa .
Wwiescbgrad .

Warsaw, the Metropolis of Poland, is Seated upon the Vistula, in the Latitude of 52 Deg. 10 Min. 150 miles North from Cracow, 120 South from Koenigsberg, 100 East from Gnesna, and about 100 West from the Confines of Lithuania. It is a large and populous City, the Seat of the King of Poland, and of the Sessions of the Grand Dyet of the Kingdom. It is divided into four parts, viz. The Old and the New Town, the Suburbs of Cracow, and the Prag. The Palace is a noble Structure, in form four-square, built by Sigismund III. and much beautified by his Successors. The chief Church of St. John Baptist is very fine, as are the other public Buildings, which are the Arsenal, the Castle, the Market-place, &c. Over the River here is a stately Wooden Bridge, and beyond it stands another Palace

Palace of the King's, called Viasdow, wherein the Dyer Assemble. It stands amidst many delicate Gardens and Groves; and not far from it in the Suburbs of Cracow, is to be seen the Monument of Demetrius Suifcius Great Duke of Muscovy, who being taken Prisoner, died a Captive in Poland, whose King to Honour him, built a small Chappel over it. In the Plains near this City the Election of the King is made.

Czersko stands also on the Vistula, 30 miles South from Warsaw. It is a small City, the Seat of the Palatine, but else not very considerable. Latowicz stands on the River Lipier 30 miles East from Czersko. Wischnograd is seated on the Vistula, where the Bug falls into it, about 50 miles North-west from Warsaw, and hardly 20 from Ploczko. Zakroczin stands upon the Bug 20 miles above Wischnograd. Nowigrod is seated on the River Narew in the North-east part of this Province, 80 miles from Warsaw; and 20 miles above it stands Lumsa.

POLACHIA, call'd by the Inhabitants Podlaske, and by the Germans Podlachien, is but a small Province, lying between Massovia and Lithuania, with Polesia and Lublin Palatinate on the South, and Prussia on the North. It extends in length, from North to South 120 miles, but in breadth it is hardly 30. The River runs through the Southern part, and several smaller Rivers water the other parts. It is but one Palatinate, whereof the Capital is Bielsk. The Towns of chiefest note are,

- Bielsk*.
- Drogiezyn*.
- Mielnick*.
- Loziczce*.

Bielsk the chief City of Polachia is seated on the River Biala, in the midway between Grodno in the North, and Breste on the South, 100 miles East from Warsaw, and 80 West from Slucz. It is guarded by a strong Castle, and is a place of good Force. Drogiezyn stands on the River Bug, 50 miles South-east from Bielsk, as doth also Mielnick 10 miles above it. Loziczce is on the other side of the River, 20 miles to the South. Narew stands 15 miles from Bielsk to the North, and Suras 20 miles further, and Augustow in the extream North part 60 miles from Bielsk.

POLESIA is of much larger extent, comprehending in length from East to West above 200 miles, but in breadth not above 60, or at most 70 miles: It lies on the South of Lithuania and Polesia, on the East it is bounded with Volbinia, on the West with Upper Poland, and on the South with Red Russia, and Volbinia. It is a very Marshy Soil, and abounds with Forests, and Rivers, and consequently hath plenty of Venison and Fish: Honey also is found in the Woods, which the Inhabitants vend abroad. This Province is sometimes call'd the Palatinate of Breste or Bressici, that being the chief City and Seat of the only Palatine in the whole Province. The chief Cities are these, viz.

- Bressici*.
- Kodan*.
- Miedzyrzeczi*.
- Fanow*.
- Bialla*.

- Wyhoneff*.
- Olewsko*.
- Pinsk*.
- Davidow*.
- Wielisk*.

Breste or Bressici, is Seated on the River Bug, 50 miles South from Bielsk, and 100 East from Warsaw; it is the Capital of this Province, and is Fortified with a Castle built upon a Rock. Kodan stands upon the same River 20 miles above it. Miedzyrzeczi stands in the Confines upon the River Kyffina 30 miles to the West. Upon the same River 10 miles to the East, and 20 West from Kodan stands Bialla, the Palace of the Duke of Radziwill, adorn'd with a Gymnasium or a small University. Fanow stands upon the Bug, 20 miles West from Breste. Pinsk stands upon the River Pina, 90 miles West from Breste. Wyhoneff is 30 miles North from Pinsk. Davidow 70 East from Pinsk. And Widlec a Castle, 20 miles more to the East. Olewsko stands in the extream South-east part of Polesia, on a River of the same Name.

C H A P. VII.

Of Red Russia, Podolia, Volhynia and the Ukrain.

RED-RUSSIA in its ancient extent comprehended all Volbinia and Podolia, as well as the Province which now bears that Name, Russia, because formerly possess'd by Russes, and Red from a Clay of that Colour very frequent here; and because in the Woods the Earth is very Black, the Country is by some call'd Black-Russia, as also Little-Russia, to distinguish this from Russia or Muscovy: And in those days it was Govern'd by Princes of their own, who were formidable both to Poland and Muscovy; till in the year 1341. Casimer II. call'd the Great, did incorporate it with Poland. It's present Bounds are Polesia on the North, Volhynia and Podolia on the East, Upper Poland on the West, and on the South the Carpathian Mountains divide it from Hungary and Transilvania. It extends from 48. to 51 Degrees 20 Minutes of Latitude. 200 Miles from North to South, and in the Southern part 160, but in the North but half so much in breadth. The Country is something Mountainous, but water'd with abundance of Rivers, which render it very Fruitful. The River Bug rises here, and passes from South to North, almost the whole length of the Country. The River Niester by the Ancients Nam'd Turra, hath also it's Source here.

The whole Province is divided into three Palatinates, which passing from North to South Occur in this Order.

The Palatinate of Chelm in which are,

- Chelm*.
- Kranoslaw*.
- Turisk*.

The Palatinate of Belz.

- Belz*.
- Zamoscie*.
- Rubiszow*.

The

The Palatinate of Lemberg. Whereof the South-East part is called Pocutia or Pocouk.

Lemberg.
Przemyslaw.
Jaroslaw.
Nidmerow.
Grodock.
Fellin.
Halicz.
Sniatyn.

Chelm stands in the Latitude of 51 Degrees; 60 miles South from Bresle, 110 South-East from Warsaw, and 30 East from Lublin. It is but a small City tho' the chief of the Palatinate, and formerly an Episcopal See; but this place being much destroyed by the Muscovites and Tartars, during the Wars, the Bishops Seat was Translated to Krasnostaw. So that at present the Town is not very considerable, but is Guarded by a Castle of Wood.

Krasnostaw, or Krasnostaw, stands 20 Miles to the South-west from Chelm, on the River Wieprz which here makes a Lake; it is a small City, but in good Condition, and enjoys the Honour of an Episcopal See. Tuwisk stands on the Borders of Volhinia 30 Miles East from Chelm.

Belz, or Belcz, stands among Marthes 50 Miles South from Chelm. It is a small City built of Wood, and only considerable by being the chief of the Palatinate. Zamoscie stands about 30 Miles South from Chelm, and 40 North-west from Belz, and Rubieszow, 30 Miles from Samoscie, and as far North from Belz.

Lemberg, Leopolis call'd Lwow by the Poles, is the most considerable place of this part of Poland, being an Archi-Episcopal See, the Capital of a Palatinate, and of all Red-Russia, and also a City of very good Trade. It is Seated upon the River Peltew which falls into the Bug, and is distant 40 miles from Belz to the South, 90 North from the Confines of Transilvania, 150 East from Cracow, and 180 South East from Warsaw. It is no very large City but well Built, and in good State, and hath two Castles for its Defence, one within the Town, and the other without the Walls. Przemyslaw, Premisla, a well Built Populous City, and Episcopal See, is seated on the River Sana, 60 miles West from Lemberg. Neimeraw stands 20 miles West from Lemberg, and Jaroslaw 40 miles beyond that Eastward. Grodock is 30 miles South-west from Lemberg. And Fellin is near 30 miles South-west from it.

Halicz the Capital of the Territory of Pocutia, stands upon the River Tyra 50 miles South-east from Lemberg. It was formerly a very considerable place, having been the Capital of a little Kingdom, afterwards had its own Dukes: and lastly, was the Seat of the Arch-bishoprick, now Translated to Lemberg. But the Wars and Revolutions have altered its State, and it is now not very notable, but hath a Castle for its defence. Sniatyn upon the River Pruth, 40 miles South east from Halicz on the Confines of Moldavia is by some reckon'd the Capital of Pocutia.

PODOLIA lyes on the East of Red-Russia, having Volhinia on the North, the River Niester or Turta on the South, Oeciacow Tartary on the East, and the Palatinate of Lemberg on the West. It is a large Country being 250 miles long, and near 80 miles broad. The River Boegb runs quite through it from West to East, and the River Niester washes its Southern Frontier, and several other smaller Rivers water the Country, which is exceeding Fruitful, yielding especially Wax and Hony in abundance. The Neighbourhood of the Turks, hath subjected this Province to frequent Invasions, especially in the year 1672. the Turkish Army entred it, and took Caminiec, which the King of Poland granted to them, to obtain a Peace; but the Nation resenting it, in 1673 declared War against the Turks, and the Polish Army under the General John Sobieski, afterwards King, obtain'd a great Victory, and took some places; but Caminiec remained in the Turks Hands till the late Peace at Carlowitz, wherein it was agreed that it should be restor'd to the Poles, and the Turks quit all pretensions to Podolia, and the Ukraine. The Eastern part of this Province, altho' it be good Land, is in a manner a perfect Desert, by reason of the frequent Invasions and Ravage of the Turks.

It is divided into two parts Upper, and Lower, wherein are these Towns, viz.

In Upper Podolia, which is the Western part, a Populous and Fruitful Country.

Caminiec.
Bouczkowka.
Trambowl.
Tarnopol.
Zbaras.
Bar.
Chelminck.

In the Lower Podolia, the Eastern part, call'd also the Palatinate of Braclaw.

Braclaw.
VVinnicza.
Haman.
Konicpole.
Oribow.
Cazarns.

Caminiec or Kaminiec, call'd Kaminiec Podolski by the Poles, is the Capital of Podolia, and of a Palatinate, seated on the River Smotrzic, which a little below falls into the Niester, at the distance of 100 miles from Lemberg to the South-east, and not above 12 from the Confines of Moldavia. It is a Populous well built City, and an Episcopal See, surrounded with high craggy Rocks, and besides Fortified with Walls, and a very strong Castle; so that it is the strongest place on this side, and used to be reckon'd the Key of Poland. It hath several times been attacked by the VValachians, Tartars and Turks; in the year 1669, it suffer'd miserably by Fire, and in 1672. was taken by the Turks, who kept possession of it, and thereby often made Inroads into Poland, and carried away vast numbers of Captives, till by the late happy Peace concluded at Carlowitz, in the year 1699. it was agreed to be surrender'd, and accordingly the next Spring evacuated, and the Poles put in possession of it. Bouczkowka stands 20 miles West from Caminiec, Trambowl 40 miles North from it, and Tarnopol 30 miles more North. Zbaras hath the Title of a Dukedom; it stands 20 miles North from Tarnopol, and near the Confines of Volhinia. Felstyr stands 50 miles North from Caminiec. Bar 60 miles North-east from Caminiec, is a strong Fortrefs. Chelminck stands on the River Boeg among Marthes, on the Borders of Volhinia.

Braclaw the Capital of a Palatinate, and of the Lower Podolia, is seated on the River Bug, at the distance of 90 miles from Caminiec to the East, and 40 from the Confines of Moldavia: It cannot be expected that this should be a very flourishing City, considering the long Neighbourhood of the Turks, by whom it was laid wast in 1672. VVinnicza stands upon the same River, 30 miles to the North. Haman stands 60 miles East from Braclaw towards the Ukraine. Konicpole stands upon the Bug 60 miles South-

South-east from Braclaw. Orshow is seated on the other side the Nieper in the Confines of VValachbia. And Cazarne is a Fort on the Confines of Oczakow Tartary near the Nieper, in the South-east Corner of this Province.

VOLHINIA is a very large Tract of Land, especially if we comprehend the Upper Volhina, otherwise called the Ukrain, for then it is 500 miles in length from East to West; but of that we shall speak by it's self, and at present consider Volhina Superior, or the Palatinate of Lusuc; which is generally known by the Name of Volhina, and is of it self a large and plentiful Country, near 200 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. It is bounded on the North with Polesia, on the South with Podolia, on the East with the Ukrain, and the on West with Red-Russia. And hath in it's Limits these Cities and Towns of note.

Lusuck or Lucko .	}	Olyka .
Krzemienec .		Baranowka .
Ostrog .		Zytomericz .
Zaslav .		Berdiczow .

Lusuc called Lucko by the Inhabitants, is the Metropolis of Volhina, and the Palatinate to which it gives Name. It is seated on the River Ster 90 miles North-east from Lemberg, 130 miles North from Caminiec, 170 miles South-east from Warsaw. It is a large City, and the See of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Arch-bishop of Gnesna; but is chiefly Inhabited by Jews, Armenians and other Eastern People, that Traffick in these Countries. Krzemienec is a small City seated on a Hill near the River Icua, 35 miles South-east from Lusuck, it is the Capital of a Territory, and hath a Castle founded on a Rock. Ostrog formerly the Seat of a Duke, to whom a great part of this Country was Subject, stands about 50 miles East from Lusuck. Olyka 20 miles East from Lusuck bears the Title of a Duchy; as doth also Zaslav, 20 miles South from Ostrog. Beretsko stands 20 miles South from Lusuck. Zytomericz stands towards the Confines of the Ukrain, 120 miles from Lusuck to the East, and Berdiczow upon the same Confines 40 miles South from Zytomericz.

VOLHINIA INFERIOR, commonly call'd the UKRAIN, or the Palatinate of Kiow, is of much larger extent than the Upper Volhina, being near 300 miles in length, and 150 in breadth. The River Boristhenes or Nieper passes through the middle of it, from North-west, to South-east; and it hath besides abundance of other smaller Rivers. The Land is very Fruitful, but the Eastern part of it is however, a meer Desert by reason of the Neighbourhood of the Tartars. This is the Country of the COSACKS, which being a People often mention'd in the History of these parts, it will not be amiss to give a short account of 'em. They have their Name from Kosae Scythe, their usual Weapon, and were originally a Crew of dissolute Rovers, that Assembled together from the Frontiers of Russia, Volhina and Podolia, to practise Piracy on the Baltick Sea: They appear'd first in the Reign of Sigismund I. to the Number of six Thousand, who with shallow Boats, could pass those Rocks in the mouth of the Boristhenes, that hinder the Navigation from the Ukrain to the Black Sea, and during the Summer they Rov'd all over the Black Sea, and it's Coasts, pillaging and spoiling wherever they came. This they continued many years. Stephen Bathory King of Poland form'd them into an orderly Militia, intending to use them against the Tartars, gave them the Town and Territory of Trethymirov, appointed a General over them, and gave them many Priviledges; and for some time they were serviceable to Poland, in opposing the Tartars. But being sensible of their Strength, they began to set up for themselves, and in the year 1587. Rebel'd, but their General being taken and Executed, it was quieted for a time. About the year 1600. they were so Powerful that the Poles were forced to raise a large Army against them, who often worsted 'em, and took their Generals, but still they continued mutinous, wherefore their Priviledges were taken away, and they continued in a state of enmity: Till about the year 1640. King Uladislaus, VI. making War upon the Tartars, collected them together, and set over them for General Bogdan Chmielniski; who was afterwards a bitter and formidable Enemy to Poland: For the Cossacks, being oppressed by the Polish Lords their Landlords, and on complaint receiving no redress, they Armed in vast Numbers, and calling in the Tartars, furiously attack'd the Poles; but King John Casimer so well resisted them, that the Tartars accepted of a Peace in 1649. But Chmielniski not trusting to that, obliged the Prince of Moldavia to join with him, which produced another War, in the year 1651. wherein the Tartars and Cossacks were worsted. And since that time they have not been so considerable.

The Land as we have said, is fruitful, producing Corn and other Commodities, but by reason of the Ravage of the Turks, hath been but little Cultivated: For in the year 1677. by Agreement, this Country was Relinquish'd to the Grand Seignior, who kept it till the year 1699. when by the Peace concluded at Carlowitz, it was restored to the Pole.

The whole Province is but one Palatinate, denominated from Kiow, the chief Cities and Towns, whereof are these.

Kiow .	}	Czernobel .
Bialograd .		Trethymirov .
Bialacerkew .		Czirkassy .
Kotelma .		Kudack .

Kiow, Kiovia, is seated on the River Boristhenes or Nieper, in the Latitude of 51. at the distance of 200 miles from Lucko to the East, 60 miles South from the Frontiers of Lithuania, and 100 North from Podolia. It is an Episcopal See, a Palatinate, and Adorn'd with a kind of University; hath Ten Churches, whereof four for the Roman, and the rest for the Greek way of Worship; it is also a place of some Trade for Corn, Furs, Tallow, &c. and is Guarded by a Castle, and Surrounded with a Trench, and some other Fortifications; but is not very Populous, nor comparable to the ancient Kiow, which stood a little distant, and was formerly a very large and opulent City, whereof the Ruins of many stately Buildings and large Walls, are still to be seen. The two Churches of St. Sophia, and St. Michael, which remain in tolerable good State, were Sumptuous Buildings, the Walls of the former being Adorn'd with Mosaic Work; and the Roof of the latter very richly Gilt. The City was Founded by a Russian Prince Named Kjus in the year 861. and was the Metropolis of Tawro Scythia. Then it became the Seat of the Russian Empire, and was afterwards Govern'd by it's own Princes. It was Storm'd and Pillag'd by the Tartars in 1615. and has ever since declined.

Above Kiow about 30 miles to the South, stands Strajky, and 10 miles above that Ryszow, both noted for Passage of the River Nieper.

Bialograd, stands 20 miles South-west from Kiow. Kotelma on the Frontiers of the Upper Volhinia, 40 miles South-west from Kiow. Bialacerkiew stands about the same distance South from Kiow. Tretmirow the place which King Bathory, as has been said, gave to the Cossacks, stands upon the Nieper, 50 miles above Kiow, and is a place of Strength having a Castle for it's defence. Czernobel stands also on the River, but as many miles below Kiow. Czyrkassy, stands upon the River too, 80 miles above Kiow, and Kudack a strong Fort, built by the Polanders in 1635, against the Incurfions of the Tartars, stands in the extream East Confines of the Pelish Dominions, on the West fide of the River near the Confines of Tartary.

Some part of the Ukrain on the East fide of the River, is Subject to the Muscovite.

And thus we conclude our Account of Poland, having passed through all the Provinces of this great Kingdom, and according to the best Informations could be procured, not omitted mentioning any considerable City or Town.

MUSCOVY.

MUSCOVY or RUSSIA.

Muscovia, aut Alba Russia.

CHAP. I.

Of MUSCOVY in General.

MUSCOVY otherwise called White Russia, and Russia Magna, to distinguish it from the Province of Poland, called Russia Rubra, was anciently the greatest part of the Sarmatia Europea. The Name of Russia was taken from the People, called Rossi, q. d. dispersed or scatter'd, being Originally wanderers without any Government. The Moschi mention'd by Strabo, were one Nation of these People, whence the Name of the Province of Muscovia, most probably, was derived; and since the Monarch has made this his Seat, the Name of this Province hath been Communicated to the whole Empire. It is the largest Country under one Government in Europe, nay perhaps in the World, being above 3000 miles broad. It lies between the 46th. and 70th. Degree of Latitude, including from the 7th. Climate of the Temperate Zone, to the 2d. Climate of the Frigid Zone: And in Longitude from the 55th. to the 105th. Degree. It is bounded on the North with the Ocean, Denominated from its Shoars Muscovian and Tartarian, Nova Zemla, divided from the Continent by the Straights of Weygat. On the South with Tartaria Minor, the Palus Meotis, Crim-Tartary and Turky, and the Caspian Sea, which parts it from Persia. On the East with the Asiatick or Great Tartary, and on the West with some Provinces of Sueden, Lithuania, Poland and the Ukrain. It is in vain to talk of it's utmost Extent, for the Eastern part is all Wildernets, by reason of the Tartars; and the North part the same, because of it's extrem cold Climate. So that tho' the whole Empire be reckoned 3000 miles extent either way, yet that part of it that is Populous and well Cultivated (being the South-west part) is not above 600 miles Square.

The CLIMATE must necessarily be very different in so vast a Tract of Land, but in general it is very Cold, and at Moscow it self, in the Winter time the AIR is not tolerable, the extrem parts of Men's Bodies, as Noses, Ears, &c. being often mortified with the Cold; and tho' they wrap themselves up in Furrs, yet without continual Chafing their Noses and Fingers they are in danger of losing 'em when they come out of the Air. 'Tis said if a Man spits it shall be frozen by that time it comes to the Ground, and Water thrown into the Air will fall down Ice. The Summer on the contrary is sultry hot, but then it is short, and immediately follows the Winter; for no sooner is the Snow off the Ground, but the Corn shoots up so fast, that in two Months time they cut it; this is Attributed to the Snow, which lying on the Ground not only Mellows the Land, but also keeps the Plants from the Air, and lets them take good Root. As soon as they have Reaped they must Sow immediately for the Summer is not above three months long. But notwithstanding this extrem Cold, the SOIL is very Fruitful, producing Plenty of Corn and divers Sorts of Fruits, particularly excellent Melons; also Rhubarb in great quantity, Flax, Hemp, good Pasture, Wax and Honey. Many of the Provinces have large Forrests, wherein are taken Bears, Foxes, Sables, Ermins, and those other Wild Beasts, whose Furrs are so esteemed in all Parts; besides which, Russia furnishes the World with the Leather, called Russian and Buff, Pot-ashes for Soap, Cavear made of the Rows of Sturpion and Belluga, Icing-glass, Morfe's Teeth, Sperma Cetis, and divers other very useful COMMODITIES, which are very Commodiously Transported by means of the many Navigable RIVERS wherein this Country very much abounds. Those of chiefest note are the Wolga, the Don or Tanais, the Occa, the Suchana and Fugh which compose the Dvina, the Kama, the Oby, and the Jensaida. Of these the Wolga must be reckon'd the Noblest, being of singular use to the Russians who by the means of it, have Water-Carriage from Persia, quite up into the very Heart of their Country. This was the Rha of the Ancients, and hath it's Source in the Province of Reschow, which lyes on the West of Moscow; and after a Course of near 2000 miles, it falls into the Caspian-Sea, in 70 mouths at Astrachan, in its way receiving the Occa, which rises in Worain, and receives the Moska, as it passes by that Province, and falls into the Wolga at Nisi-Novogorod; The Kama, which rises in Piermia, and falls into the Wolga, a little below Casan; and several other smaller Rivers, which contribute to enlarge this great Stream, so as to make it several Leagues broad, before it issues into the Sea. A particular account of it, is given us by a late Dutch Traveller, who Sail'd down the Stream from Moscow quite to Astrachan, by whose Journal it appears that he was near 4 months on his Voyage.

The Don or Tanais, by some reckon'd the Limits of Asia and Europe, on that side, rises in the Province of Rezan, and passing by Pole, and the Rosdori Donski (dividing it from Crim Tartary) comes so near to the Wolga, that an attempt was made to cut a Canal from one to the other, but the Nagayan-Tartars, who at that time possessed the Kingdom of Astrachan opposed it, and with a great Army beat off the Crim-Tartar and Turks from the Work: From hence the River Don winding to the West, falls at last into the Palus Meotis at Azoph. The Oby, the greatest River of Muscovy, flows out of the Lake Katbay in Great-Tartary, passes through the Muscovian-Tartary, making in its Course divers Lakes and Islands, and receiving many other Rivers, falls into the Northern Ocean at Samoieda. The Jensaiza rises also in Tartary, and falls into the same Sea, 100 Leagues East from Oby. The Dvina falls into the White Sea at Archangel; the Courses of the Suchana and Fugh, whose confluence Compose it, will be seen in the Map, as will also the Course of the other Rivers, which we shall have occasion to mention in our following Description of the Country.

The INHABITANTS of Muscovy have the misfortune to bear but an ill Character abroad; whether they deserve so bad as they have, I cannot determin; but considering that they want the two chief means of Improving Men's Morals and Manners, which are Learning and Travel, we may the less scruple to believe Travellers, who all affirm that they are perfectly Illiterate and Brutiſh, and so very much addicted to Drunkenness, that more than ordinary severe Laws are made against that Vice, and smooking Tobacco, with which they also used to Intoxicate themselves. They affect Farness, looking upon it as Graceful. In their Dealings they are Crafty and not over Honest; Jealous, Cruel and Proud; but wihal of mean Spirit, when severely Treated. The Common People live in great subjection to the Lords, and they in as absolute dependence on the Emperor, who takes Care to keep 'em Ignorant, and therefore no Publick School, much less a University, is to be found in all his Dominions; even the Priesthood have no more Learning than serves them to Read Divine Service. Also the Gentry are by Law forbid to Travel. But the Present Czar, having himself in the years 1696. and 1697. taken a Journey abroad and Visited the Courts of Poland, Sueden, Denmark, Germany, Flanders, Holland, and England; in seeing the Politeness of those People (added to his own Inclination to Arts and Sciences) hath been induced to change that Politique and on the Contrary to encourage the Study of Languages: and already hath Erected Schools at Moscow, and sent the young Nobility to Travel, so that in all Probability this Nation will in a short time be much improved. They are of a robust and healthy Constitution, Strong and fit to endure any Fatigue in War; the Women are well Favoured and fair enough, very Obedient to their Husbands, and patient under their Churlishness, tho' it often proceed to Blows; nay some Authors relate that they expect Beating, and Love their Husbands the better for it.

The Russian LANGUAGE is a Dialect of the Sclavonian as well as the Polish; so that he who under-understands either of them cannot be at any great loss in this. The Bibles and such few other Books as they have, are writ in Sclavonian; and those who pretend to any degree of Learning, affect that Language in their writing and speaking: The Character they use has a near resemblance to the Greek, but they have augmented the number of their Letters to thirty eight.

The Christian RELIGION was first taught in Muscovy in the Time of Wolodomir Great Duke of Russia (A. D. 989.) who having by the Conquest of many Provinces render'd himself very considerable, was honoured with an Embassy from the Emperor Basilus, in whose Time (according to Zonaras) a Bishop was sent from Constantinople to convert the Russes, the Prince himself embracing Christianity, and soon after marrying the Daughter of Basilus, he contributed all his Power to the establishing it, which was accordingly effected. This is the most certain Account in History of the Conversion of Russia from Paganism. But the Russes pretend that St. Andrew the Apostle planted Christianity here, which was afterwards expell'd by the Tartars. As they receiv'd Christianity from Constantinople, so they have always continued in the Faith and Practice of the Greek Church, disbelieving Transubstantiation and Purgatory, communicating in both kinds, but pray to Saints and use Images; the Athanasian Creed is their Rule of Faith; and they have a fettered Liturgy which is used three times a day. They observe Lent and many other Fasts very religiously, and have abundance of Festivals in Comemoration of Saints. But by reason of their Ignorance, they are miserably involv'd in superstitious Ceremonies. The Government of the Church is by Metropolitans, Archbishops, and Bishops; whereof the Metropolitan of Moscow, who was ordain'd by the Patriarch of Constantinople, was Primate, 'till about the Year 1588. when Hieronymus, Patriarch of Constantinople (that City being then in the Hands of the Turks) came to Moscow and very solemnly resign'd his Patriarchal Dignity to the Metropolitan of Moscow, whose Successors have ever since born that Dignity, and is supream Head of the Russian Church: Immediately upon the Elevation of this Metropolitan (who was before the only one) two other Archbishops were made Metropolitans, viz. those of Novogorod, Veliki and Rostow, and since that two more have been added, whereof one resideth at Casan and the other at Moscow. The Bishops are chosen by the Emperor, and the Patriarch by the Bishops.

The GOVERNMENT of Russia is absolutely Monarchical; for the Grand Duke, who is called Czar (supposed to be deriv'd from Cesar) is absolute Master over all his Subjects; the Legislative, as well as the Administrative, Power being solely in him. He appoints the Waywoods or Governors of Provinces, and all the Civil and Military Officers. The Nobility are very numerous, and were formerly very considerable, the Dukes being absolute Lords in their Provinces; but the Czars have from time to time taken away their Power, and they, as well as the other Nobles, are now Dependants on the Emperor, by whose Favour they obtain the Governments and Offices of Honour and Profit. At present, the chiefest degree of Nobility, is that of the Boiars, which are those whom the Emperor honours with being of his Council; out of which he chooses the Waywoods and other chief Officers.

The LAWS for deciding Civil Controversies formerly depended upon the Equity of the Judge: But in the Year 1647. by the Czar's command, a Code or Body of the Law was compiled by the wisest Men in the Kingdom, and comprehended in one Volume in Folio, intitled, Sabrena Ulovenia; that is to say, Universal and General Right: By which the Judges are to regulate their Sentences.

Several Courts of Judicature are held suitable to the Causes that come before 'em; whereof 'tis unnecessary to give a particular account.

A Short Abstract of the History of Russia.

IT is almost impossible to know the Origine and Acts of a roving Nation of illiterate People; wherefore the Reader must not expect a very ancient Account of the Russes, whose very Name, as we have said, denotes Straglers; and who have apparently chang'd their Seat; for the Russia Rubra, now a Province of Poland, had undoubtedly its Name from them; and that Volhinia also was possess'd by the Russes is evident, since the Seat of their Monarchy was Kjow, before Wolodomir remov'd it to the City of his own Name, which he built; so tho' the Muscovites are now in Possession of some Provinces formerly belonging to Lithuania and Poland, they are but an equivalent of what they have quitted to Poland. But the Acquisitions of the Russes have been all on the other side, viz. on the Tartars, who were for many Ages their most cruel Enemies: So that the Conquests of the Tartarian Provinces they now possess is a singular happiness to them; for whereas formerly the Tartars made Inroads upon the Russes to the very Heart of their Country, and imposed most ignominious Terms upon their Princes. [as for Example, Batus the Tartar in 1237. having slain the Great Duke George, order'd that the Tartars hereafter should choose the Princes of Moscow, who should be obliged to go out to meet the Tartarian Ambassador on foot and bare-headed, present him a Platter of Mare's Milk, and give his Horse Provender out of his Cap; and for 200 Years together the Tartar had a House and a Guard in the Castle of Moscow] I say, whereas formerly the Tartars were their cruel Masters, the Case is now so alter'd, that almost all the European Tartary is subject to the Muscovite. At what time all these vast Regions were conquer'd, will be seen in this Account of the Princes of Russia.

Of these Princes we have no certain History before the Time of

1. Wolodomir, who having made great Conquests Eastward, removed the Regal Seat to Wolodomir, the chief City of that Province, which he built and gave name to. He also, as we have said, married the Daughter of the Emperor Basilus, and planted Christianity in Russia. He died in the Year 1015. and was succeed by his Son
2. Wolodomir, or according to others Jareflow, and said to have built that City. He died, A. D. 1146.

3. Wolodomir.

3. Wolodimir his Son succeeded, and was succeeded by his Son
 4. Vitzzevoldus.
 5. George, slain by Battus, a Tartarian Prince, in the Year 1237. from which time the Russes were Tributary to the Tartars.
 6. Jareflau, Brother to George, succeeded.
 7. Alexander his Son.
 8. Daniel or Danielou, surnam'd Caleta. He remov'd the Regal Seat to Moscow, and assum'd the Title of Great Duke.
 9. Ivan or John, his Son succeeded, being chosen by the Tartar, and much favour'd by him.
 10. Ivan Ivanowitz, or John's Son succeeded.
 11. Demetri Ivanowich. He obtain'd great Victories over the Tartars, but at last was slain by them.
 12. Vaslie or Basil Demetriowich. He chased the Tartars out of Russia, and conquer'd Bulgar. Thro' Jealousie of his Wife he disinherited his Son, and was succeeded by his Brother
 13. George, who at his death restor'd the Crown to his Nephew
 14. John Vasiliewick Grotzdyn. He was the first that united Russia into one considerable Body, by taking away the Power of the Dukes, and uniting their Dominions to the Crown. He called himself Czar, King, or Emperor rather, and by some thought to be, g. d. Cesar, in imitation of the western Emperor. He is judged to have begun to Reign about the Year 1450. He conquer'd the Duke of Novogorod, and added that Province, as also Twer to the Crown. He turned the Tartar-Governor out of Moscow, and shook off their Yoke. He put by his eldest Son, and appointed Gabriel, his Son by a second Marriage, to succeed him, who changed his name to
 15. Vaslie Ivanowich, and began to Reign in 1492. conquer'd Plescow and Smolensko, and gained great Victories against the Tartars, over whom he set a Governor. He died in 1532. leaving his Uncle George Guardian to his Son
 16. Ivan Vasiliewich a Child, who began to Reign in 1540. He became a very great Tyrant, but withal a great Conqueror. In his Time the Tartars ejected the Governor placed over them by his Father, and invading Russia, proceeded as far as Moscow, which they burnt and pillag'd, in such manner that the Czar was forced to submit to very ignominious Terms. This War was carried on by two Brothers, Mendligeri and Sapperi; who returning homeward, Sapperi sett'd himself King of Casan, but Mendligeri sat down before Rezan; and summoning it to surrender, told the Governor what had happen'd at Moscow, who replying, he could not believe it, the Tartar sent him the Original Instrument, subscrib'd by the Czar to convince him; the Governor seizing the Paper, return'd answer, That he would keep that and the City as long as he had Life: And so courageously he defended it, that the Tartar was forced to raise the Siege; and then the Governor sent the Writing to the Czar, with an account of what had happen'd; which so chang'd the Face of Affairs, that an Army was presently rais'd and march'd against Sapperi, who was still in Casan; which City, after a long Siege, he took, July 9. 1552. and thereby very much enlarg'd the Russian Dominions; and pursuing
- his Victory, in the Year 1552. he took Astrachan also, which brought the Monarchy to its utmost height. He died, March 28. 1584.
 17. Fedor or Theodore, Son to Ivan Vasiliewich, succeeded, and was a weak Prince. He married the Sister of Boris Fedorowich Godanove, who murder'd him and his Brother Demetri; and having made a Party in the Kingdom, was chosen Emperor. Theodore reigned 12 Years, and died, A. 1597.
 18. Fedorowich Godmcu. He made away with many of the Nobility, and gave his Family all the profitable Employments; which gave such Disgust, that an Impostor starting up in the name of Demetrius, the Brother of Fedor abovemention'd, obtained such countenance, that the Army revolted to him. Fedorowich died, April 13. 1605. suppos'd by Poisson, and soon after his Wife and Son Fedor. So that
 19. Demetrius the Impostor entering Moscow the 20th of June 1605. was crown'd without opposition; but the Russes soon discovering their mistake slew him, and advanced to the Throne
 20. Vaslie Ivanowich Zuskie, who was crown'd June 1. 1606. Another pretended Demetrius started up in Poland, and being assisted by that Nation caus'd great Troubles; and in the end Zuskie was deposted and thrust into a Monastery, the Russes chusing for their Monarch
 21. Uladislaus Son to the King of Poland; which raising the Minds of the Polish Army, at that time before Moscow, made 'em Insolent; and upon a Quarrel with the Russes, run in and plunder'd and burnt the City, pillag'd the Treasury, and made such miserable Havock, that it is said 40000 Houses were burnt, and 200000 Persons slain. In this desperate State the Russes were quite heartless, till a Butcher stepping out, propos'd a Gentleman named Pozarskey for their General, under whom, with an honest Treasurer, he told 'em the Disorders might be compos'd. Accordingly the People immediately chose Pozarskey for their General, and made the Butcher Treasurer, bringing to him what Money they could spare; with which he rais'd an Army, which, together with a Body of Cossacks then in Service in Muscovy, soon expell'd the Poles and restor'd in some measure the publick Peace; whereupon the Nobility assembled and chose for their Czar Michael Federowich, Son to Philaretus Nikiditz of the House of Remanoue who was made Patriarch.
 22. Michael Federowich began to Reign, A. D. 1613. and by the Advice of his Father (a Man of great Wisdom and Virtue) soon restor'd the publick Tranquility. He made Peace with the Poles, and with the Suedes; who, during the Troubles, had possess'd themselves of divers Russian Cities and Provinces; these were restor'd, and Muscovy made happy in a wise and good Monarch, who dying in 1645. was succeeded by his Son
 23. Alexis Michaelowich a Martial, but mild Governor, who having reigned successfully thirty Years, died in the Year 1675. and was succeeded by his Son

24. Feodore Alexiowich, who died in 1682. leaving two Sons, who for some time reigned together, but the elder being found incapable by reason of his natural Weakness, was put by, and the younger
25. Peter, his present Czarist Majesty has ever since had the Sole Government. He is a Valiant Prince, a Lover of Science, especially Mathematics: And if it please God to give him Life, he will in all probability raise the Russian Empire to the highest degree it ever was: For he has already in the late Turkish War made himself Master of Azoph, an eminent Port at the Mouth of the Don in the Palus Meotis, whence is a passage to the Black Sea, as also taken Kasikermert on the Black Sea, at the Mouth of the Nieper; and is very buisly in Building Ships of War, by the means whereof he may in time be able to dispute the Mastery of the Black Sea with the Turk: And moreover by the Encouragement he gives the Nobility to Study and Travel abroad, their Manners will be abundantly Polished and the Russians become fit for Conversation, and be esteemed like other Nations.

The REVENUES of this mighty Prince is very large, it arises by 1. The Crown Lands, valued at 250000 Rubbles per Annum, each Rubble being of the value of Ten Shillings Sterling. 2. The Tagla and Podat, which are an Imposition upon Corn, and a Subsidy upon every Town, Reckon'd to bring in 400000 Rubbles yearly. 3. The Customs, producing about 300000 Rubbles per Annum. 4. The Duty upon Stoves. 5. A great Duty upon Law Suits. 6. The Czar hath the Monopoly of Commodities as Furrs, Ising-glass and Caviare. 7. Lands set apart for the maintenance of his Guards. And besides the Nobility and Gentry are oblig'd to Serve him in the Wars with Men, Horses, Arms, and Provisions, proportionate to the Lands they possess; in the Nature of Knight's Service.

The Emperor maintains a Constant Guard of 16000 Foot, and near 4000 Horse at Moscow, and in Garrisons on the Frontiers to the Number of 100000 Men more; and in time of War, he hath ordinarily an Army in the Field of 300000 Men well Arm'd and provided, besides his Garisons and Guards.

Thus much for the Civil, proceed we to the Geographical Account of this Great Empire.

Muscovy Consists of a great number of Provinces. which being not distinguished by Priority of Judicature we shall consider them according to Situation, dividing the whole Empire into three Parts, viz.

C H A P. II.

The Western Provinces of MUSCOVY, lying between the Wolga, and the Lesser Tartary.

HAVING in our Table shewn Muscovy divided into three large Parts, we shall in this following Account of it, begin with the western Provinces adjoining to Poland; and having Survey'd all the South-west Part, pass Northward to Lapland; and then return from North to South, through the midland Provinces; and lastly, proceed to the Muscovian Tartary. Accordingly in passing from Poland to Muscovy, we may enter either at Pleskow, Bielski, Smolensko, Novogorod, or Czernihow. But that we may proceed in a Travelling order, and pass through all the Countries as they lye, we will begin with the most South-west part of Muscovy, which is

The Duchy of CZERNIHOW bounded on the South by the Ukrain, on the West by Lithuania, and on the East by Severia; it is in length near 120 miles, and in breadth, in the South, about 80 miles, but decreases Northward till it ends in a Point.

The chief City, Czernebow, is seated on the River Dezna, but a few miles from the Confines of the Ukrain; and is a well built, tho' small City.

The Duchy of SEVERIA or NOVOGRODECK SEWERSKI adjoyns to Czernebow on the East. It is a large and fruitful Province, formerly subject to its own Princes, who in time became Feodals to the Duke of Lithuania, and afterwards to the Czar; but the Duke being accused of Treason, in the Reign of Vasilie, lost his Royalty, and the Country was annexed to the Crown.

The chief City Novogrodeck Siverski stands upon the River Dezna, 50 or 60 miles above Czernihow; hath a Castle and good Fortifications, according to the Russian manner, for its Defence. Brausko reckon'd the other chief City stands 100 miles more North.

WOROTIN another Duchy, lyes next to Severia on the East, having the Lesser Tartary on the South, whereby being expos'd to their Ravage, that part is Desert and Woody. But the Northern part is a good Country, Fertile and Populous.

The chief City Worotin, stands on the River Occa, about 200 miles North-East from Novogrod Sewerski, and is guarded by a Castle. And higher upon the same River stands Bolgoff, Aarol and Crom, the Towns that are next considerable.

On the North of these two last mentioned Provinces, lyes the Duchy of SMOLENSKO. Stretcht out from East to West, about 200 miles, but in breadth not half so much. And was formerly subject to Lithuania, but Conquer'd by the Czar, and afterwards Recover'd by the Poles, who kept it for some time, notwithstanding the frequent Attacks of the Russes, till in the year 1654. it was finally Surrender'd and is still subject to the Czar. The River Nieper or Borishenes rises in the North-east Border of this Country, and passes quite through it.

Smolensko the Capital, is seated on the Nieper, near the Confines of Poland; a large well built City, Fortified with good Walls and a strong Castle. Baudrand says, the Walls are six Cubits broad, and have 52 Towers upon them, and that the City contains 8000 Houses, or more. This City hath frequently chang'd it's Masters; for sometimes it belonged to the Poles, sometimes to the Muscovites, as did the whole Province. Sigismund III. King of Poland, Established here an Archbishop for the Greeks of the Roman Communion, and a Bishop for the Roman Catholics; but Czar Alexus put a Grecian Bishop in their place. The City is surrounded with Woods, wherein are taken the best Furs in Muscovy. Dragobusa the next chief place, is seated also on the Nieper, 50 miles above Smolensko.

BIELSKI, a very small Province, lyes on the North of Smolensko; whose chief City Bielba or Bielow, stands on the River Osca, about 80 miles North-east from Smolensko. This was formerly a Dukedom, and Govern'd by its own Princes, subject to Lithuania, till Basilus subjected himself to the Czar.

RESCHOW, another Duchy, lyes on the North of Bielski and Smolensko, it joyns to Lithuania on the West, and was sometimes subject to that Duke. The Country is full of Forests and Lakes, particularly the Forest of Wolckoniski, wherein the River Wolga hath its Source, as also the River Dzwinna which passes through Lithuania and Livonia. The chief City Reschow, stands in the East part of the Province in the way to Moscow. And Woloczka 40 miles South from it, this place is noted for a People remarkably Courteous and Genteel, and for White Hares in the Neighbouring Forests, the Hunting whereof is often the Diversion of the Czar.

TWER, a small Province lying on the North-east of Reschow, with the Title of a Duchy, is a very fruitful and Populous Country. The chief City Twer seated on the Tweartza (at its Confluence with the Wolga) 40 miles North from Reschow, is a large Town, having near sixty Churches, very Populous and Rich; the See of a Bishop, and the Station of a Mint. Tersack or Torsack another large Town, stands upon the same River, 20 miles to the North.

The Duchy of MUSCOVY or MOSCUA the chief Province of the Empire, adjoyns to Twer, Reschow, and Smolensko, and hath Resbow on the North, Rezan on the South, and Rezan and Susdal on the East. Its extent is near 200 miles in length, from East to West; and the breadth about 100 miles. The SOIL is not very fruitful, but the AIR exceeding wholesom; which with the convenience of its Situation amidst the best Provinces of the Empire, makes it Chosen for the Residence of the Czar.

The City Moskow, the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom, is seated on the River Moska, in the Latitude of 55. 36. Longitude 64. Of its Magnitude in former times, strange things are related; but it is so subject to Fire by reason of its Wooden Houses, that mighty Conflagrations have happen'd there, and reduced the bulk of it half in half. In the great Fire and Ravage of the Tartars, which happen'd in 1540. they relate that 80000 Persons perish'd, being either Burnt, Slain, Drown'd or Trod to Death. In 1611. the Poles burnt down (as they Report) 41000 Houses: And yet in the year 1662. when my Lord Carlisle was there, Embassador from our King Charles, it was judg'd to be 16 miles in Compass, and contain'd about 40000 Houses; but the Russians pretend it contain'd above twice that Number. It is of Circular Form, and consists of 4 distinct Parts, viz. 1. Cataigorod or Mid-City, surrounded by a Brick-Wall, in it stands the Castle, which is Fortified with 3 strong Walls and a Ditch, and in the Castle are 2 Palaces of the Czar's, one of Timber, and the other of Stone; the Palace of the Patriarch, the Exchequer, the Magazine, Two Monasteries, 5 Churches, (among which that of St. Michael is adorn'd with the Tombs of the Grand Dukes or Czars) and several other publick and private Buildings. At the Castle Gate stands the stately Church of Jerusalem; and before the Castle is the great Market place: The great Bell, weighing 336000 pounds, hangs in a Tower in the Castle, it is 23 Foot Diameter. 2. Tzargorod encompasses the other, and is Wall'd about with Stone; herein is the Arsenal. 3. Skoradom on the North-west of the other, is chiefly Inhabited by the Woodmongers, that Sell Houses ready made. 4. Strelitza Slavoda is the Quarters of the Strelitz or Guards of the Czar, and is Fortified with Wooden Ramparts. The Houses here are generally very mean, being built only of Fir-Timber Squar'd, and Dovernail'd one into another, and the Chinks fill'd with Moss; these are ready cut out, and when a Fire happens 'tis but going to Market, and you have a new House presently: Nor is their Furniture much better; so that except the Merchandise and Lives that may be lost by a Fire, the damage is inconsiderable, which makes them never attempt to extinguish it any other way, than by pulling down the Neighbourhood, to hinder its spreading. The Streets are not Paved with Stones, but Plank'd with Fir-Timber. The Merchants have Vaults of Stone for their Magazines, to prevent the so frequent damage by Fire. In the City there are no less than 2000 Churches and Chappels, if we may believe the constant Accounts. Moscow was first Founded in the year 1334. by George Duke Wolodimer, and soon after the Great Duke Daniel Alexandrovitch taking a liking to the Place, made it his Residence, from which time it continually encreas'd, till it became the Greatest and Richest City in all the North. But the Tartars reduc'd it much, when they Took and Burnt the City, on the 24th of May, 1570. already mention'd. The Polanders also Took it in 1611. and Burnt down, as we have said, 41000 Houses.

However the Enemies were Beat off, and the City Repair'd; and tho' it may not now be so exceeding large, as formerly, it is however very considerable, being the ordinary Residence of this great Monarch, the Seat of the Patriarch, and a great Emporium, or Place of Trade.

The other most remarkable Towns are, Troytes, 30 miles North from Moscow, and Columna or Columnus, upon the River Mosca, near its confluence with the Occa, 60 miles South-east from Moscow; it is a fair City encompassed with a Wall, and Dignified with an Episcopal See.

ROSTOW or ROSTHOW lyes on the North of Muscovia, a Fruitful and plentiful Country, anciently Govern'd by its own Princes, till Ivan Vosilowick put to Death the last Prince, and annex'd it to the Crown. The chief City Rosthow stands on a Lake of the same Name, 120 miles North from Moscow. Uglitz in the same Province seated on the Wolga, 80 miles West from Rosthow is noted for its excellent Bread. A few miles below stands Chlopigrod, which was formerly a great Mart, for all the Neighbouring Nations, but is now ruined. Perislaw another chief Town of this Province stands on the Borders of Muscovy, 50 miles South from Rosthow. It is a large Town and very Populous. The Czar comes frequently hither in the Hunting-Season, to divert himself.

JAROSLAW lyes next to Rostow on the North, and is a Rich and Fruitful Country, abounding with Corn, Cattle, and Honey. It was formerly the Royalty of the younger Sons of the Czar, till Ivan Vasilowick in 1565. took it to himself. The chief City Jaroslawa is large and populous, said to contain above 40000 Inhabitants; strongly Fortified, and hath a great Trade; it stands upon the River Wolga, which passes through the middle of this Province. Roma Nova the other chief Town, stands on the other side the Wolga, 20 miles above Jaroslawa.

C H A P. III.

Of the Western Part of Muscovy, between the Wolga and the Sea.

THIS Part of the Czarish Empire, is bounded on the West by Sueden and Norway, on the North by the Muscovian Ocean, on the South by the Provinces we have mention'd, and on the East by the Duina and White Sea. Comprehending these six Provinces, viz. Pleskow, Novogorod-Weliki, Biele-Jezoro, Wologda, Cargopolia, and Muscovian Lapland.

The Duchy of PLESKOW, formerly a Powerful and Free State, but now subject to the Czar, is the most western part of his Dominions; bounded on the North with Ingria, on the West with Livonia, (part of the Suedish Dominions) on the South with Lithuania, and on the East with Novogorod. The chief City Pleskow, called by the Russes Pscow, is the See of an Archbishop, a City of very large extent, and reckon'd one of the strongest in all the North: It is divided into four Quarters, each of which hath its Wall, and is defended by a Castle built on a Rock. It was Govern'd by its own Princes, till Ivan Vasilowitz in 1509. united it to the Crown, and the Citizens who were till then famous for their Valour, Civility and Honesty in Trade, were Transported, and Muscovites put in their place. There are several other strong Places in this Province, which as they gave the Czar great trouble in Conquering, are maintain'd now for defence of this advanc'd Frontier. Below Pleskow is the Lake Peibus, the Eastern part whereof which hath many Islands, is in this, Duchy the rest in Livonia.

NOVOGOROD, call'd WELIKI, or the Great, to distinguish it from others of the same Name, is a large and fruitful Province, seated between Pleskow on the West, Ingria, Carelia and Kexholm (parts of Sueden) on the North, Rostow and Twer on the South, and Rosthow, Jaroslawa, &c. on the East. Its extent from East to West in the Southern part, is 250 miles, but Northwards it grows exceedingly narrow. The Products of the Country are Wheat, Flax, Hemp, Honey, Wax and Leather, which formerly caus'd a vast Traffick here, when Govern'd by its own Princes; but the Muscovites often Warring against 'em diminish'd their Traffick, and since it has been under their Dominion 'tis not in so Flourishing a State. In the middle of the Southern part is the Lake Imen, whence Issues the River Wolobowa, which passes into the Lake Ladoga. On this River stands the chief City Novogorod Weliki, in the Latitude of 58. 23. Longitude 35. 0. called by the Dutch Newgatten: It is a large City surrounded with a Rampart of Timber and Earth, and Guarded by one Castle in the middle of the City well Fortified, and another on the other side the River, which is join'd to the City by a large Bridge; and wherein lives the Weywood or chief Governor in Civil affairs, and the Metropolitan or Archbishop, who has the care of Ecclesiastical Matters. This City was once of vast Extent as the Ruins of its ancient Walls demonstrate, and its Power and Wealth, obtained by the mighty Traffick, was so great that it became a Proverb, VVho can hurt God and Great Novogorod? Vitold Great Duke of Lithuania, and at that time General of the Polish Army, was the first that diminish'd its Grandeur, having in the year 1427. oblig'd it to pay a Tribute to that Crown. about 50 years after John Basilowitz Grotzdyn Warring against them, obtain'd a great Victory, and forced them to submit to his Government, and not long after caus'd the City to be Pillag'd, and many of the Inhabitants to be Transported to other places, and in the Pillage 'tis said he carried off 300 Cart Loads of Gold, Silver, and Jewels, besides abundance of other rich Goods; so Wealthy was the place at that time. Afterwards in 1569. John Basilowitz came again with an Army, and destroy'd the Inhabitants most cruelly. The City and Province have since been subject to the Czar, except in the year 1611. when it was taken by the Poles, but in the following Treaty restor'd. The Town is but forrily built, the Houses being of Wood, but is adorn'd with 70 Monastries, and above 100 Churches, whose Steeples and Towers are cover'd with Copper gilt; among them that of St. Sophia is the Cathedral of this Archi-Episcopal See. In the same Province are, Stara Russa seated on the opposite shoar of the Lake Ilmen, whence issues a River that passes through the Town, and out of which Salt is made, that yields the Inhabitants a profitable Traffick. Some Authors affirm that from the Name of this Town the whole Nation were call'd Russes. Ladoga and St. Nicholas upon the River about 100 miles North from Novogorod, and near the Lake Ladoga (which in part belongs to this Province, and part to Sueden.) Mologa at the Confluence of the Nissa with the Wolga on the Confines of Biele Ozero, are the other Towns of Note in this Province.

BIELE IEZORO or OZORO a small Province of circular form lying on the East of Novogorod, takes it's Name from a Lake of about 13 L. long, call'd the White Lake, as the Name signifies, on which stands the chief Town of the same Name, 200 miles East from Novogorod, and as many North from Moscow: It is a considerable Town and strong, especially the Castle which stands in the Lake, is esteem'd Impregnable. The Province is full of Woods and Lakes, and therefore the Ways impassable but in Winter.
Geblowa Sabloda on the Wolga 60 miles above Jaroslaw is a place of Trade.

WOLOGDA lyes on the East of Novogorod, and on the North of Jaroslaw, it is a large Province, but very Woody and Mountainous: The chief City Wologda stands in a Bog on the River of the same Name (which falls into the Duina) at the distance of 120 miles from Biele Ozero to the East: It is Walled with Stone, and it's Castle is reckon'd so strong that to it and the Castle of Biele Ozero, the Emperor sends his Treasure in time of Danger. Sootska and Strelitz upon the River, 60 or 70 miles to the East, are reckon'd the next chief Towns of this Province.

CARGAPOLIA lyes, on the North of Wologda and on the West of Duina, extending to the White Sea, otherwise called the Bay of St. Nicholas. It is a large Province, but Mountainous and Barren. The People live somewhat like the Laplancers, tho' not quite so barbarous, having among them some Towns, whereof Kargapol is the chief, seated on a Lake out of which flows the River Onega, that crossing this Province falls at last into the White Sea.

Northward from hence lyes the Muscovian LAPLAND, called LEPORIE, by the Russes, and divided into three Parts, viz.

BELLAMORESKOY LEPORIE, which lyes at the bottom of the Bay called the White Sea, or Bella More, extending from the 64th. to the 68th. Degree of Latitude, and round about all the West and North-west Coast of that Bay: The Country is Barren, the Air extreme Cold, and the Inhabitants a rude uncultivated People: And in general the whole Country is like the Suedish Lapland, of which we have already given an Account. Some few Towns here are, whereof the chief are, Soma, on the Frontiers of Kargapol, and the very entrance of Lapland, seated on the White Sea, in the Latitude of 64. More North on the same Sea stands Keretti, Latitude 66. 30. Ombay on the opposite shoar of the same Bay, 20 Leagues to the North-east; and Kandalax more Northward, at the very utmost Northern Shoar of the same Bay. MOUREMANSKOY LEPORIE the most Northern part, lying between the Norwegian Lapland on the North-west, the Suedish Lapland on the West, and the Bella Moreskoy on the South. It is a Mountainous and Woody Country, and hath no Towns of any note; Kala a small Port-Town at the Mouth of a River of the same Name, which falls into the Muscovian Ocean, is the chief, it stands in the Latitude of 69 Deg. TERSKOY LEPORIE is the East part of the Muscovian Lapland, it is almost surrounded by the Sea, and is the Land that makes the Bay called the White Sea. This is also a Woody Barren Country. Warsiga is the chief Town in it, and stands on the South Coast over against Archangel. Lockena another small Port stands at the Mouth of the River of the same Name, which falls into the Ocean, in the Latitude of 68 Deg.

C H A P. IV.

Of the Eastern part of Muscovy, between the Wolga and the Sea.

THE Eastern part of Muscovy, which lyes between the Wolga and the Muscovian Sea, contains these Eight Provinces, viz. Duina, Juhorsky, Petxora, Condora, Permia, Oustiangh, and Nisi-Novogorod.

DUINA is a Province of very large extent being near 300 miles broad, in form of a Lozenge; having the Straights of the White Sea on the North-west, Cargapol on the South-west, Condora on the East, and Oustiangh on the South-east. It takes its Name from the River which runs cross it, and is called Duina q. d. Twain, because it consists of the two Rivers Subana and Jugh united, and falls into the White Sea. The Country is Barren and hath but very few Cities and great Towns: The Inhabitants live upon dry'd Fish and Venison, (the Land producing no Corn) and their chief Commodity is Salt, the Vent whereof was their only Trade, before the English came to Traffick at Archangel; but now the conveying Goods from all parts of Muscovy to that Market, doth somewhat enrich the Country. The Chief City of the Province is Archangel or St. Michael Arch-Angel, called by the Russes Archania, seated on the East Side of the River Duina, near its Mouth, in the Latitude of 65, and Longitude of 63 Degrees. It is no very large City, but Rich and Populous, of modern Structure, being not considerable till the English Ships coming there to Traffick made it reforted to. At present 'tis the See of an Arch-bishop, and its Haven so much frequented, that in the Summer Season (for in the Winter 'tis frozen up) there are often seen 3 or 4 Hundred Ships at a time from England, Holland, Sueden and Denmark: And indeed 'tis in a manner the only Port of Muscovy; for since the way to it has been discovered, the Voyages to Narva, where formerly the Russian Commodities were bought, are left off. The Custom of Merchandize in this City amounts to Twenty thousand Pound Sterling per Annum. The English were the first Discoverers of it, for Sir Hugh Willoughby in the Year, 1553. having receiv'd a Commission to discover the North-East Passage to China, Richard Chancellor, Master of one of the Ships, was separated from the Fleet, and accidentally fell into the Bay of St. Nicholas or White-Sea, where he was well receiv'd, and being sent for to Court, was kindly Entertained by the Czar Ivan Vasilowich, and a free liberty given to the English to Trade in his Dominions; inasmuch that a Company of Merchants were Incorporated at London, in 1555. and large Priviledges granted them by the Czar; upon which Encouragement a Trade to Russia was carried on, to the great Profit of both Nations, which for some Time the English enjoy'd only. The Dutch and other Nations struck in for a share of it, but could not Trade upon the same Advantages, by reason of our Priviledges, till the Civil War, and the Death of K. Charles I. provok'd the Czar so far against the English, that he took away those Priviledges; and tho' by a solemn Embaissy from K. Charles II. soon after the Restauration, they were endeavour'd to be regain'd, it could not be effected, and our Merchants have now little better Advantages than other Nations. About 20 Miles to the East of Arch-Angel stands St. Nicholas, a small Port on the White-Sea, which seems to be the more ancient Place, since it has given Name to all this Bay. Colmogorod upon the Duina 20 miles above Arch-Angel, is also reckon'd one of the chief Towns of this Province.

On the North of Duina, in the Muscovian-Sea, lies the Island Marfonowitx, divided by a narrow Straight; in the East Part of it stands the Town Candenoes, whence the Island is sometimes called Candenora, and is mention'd in some of the Northern Voyages.

ZUHORSKI, called also Zugoria, Zugria, &c. lies on the North-East of Duina, having the Sea on the North and East, and Oustiugh on the South. By its Northern Situation 'tis no Wonder that the Land is Barren, the Soil overrun with Forrests, and the People of mean Condition. Zubora, the chief Town, stands on a small Bay in the North Coast, in the Latitude of 68 Degrees. And over against it, about 20 Leagues off in the Sea, lies the Island Colgoya.

Eastward from hence lies the large Province of PETZORA, a Barren and Woody Country, surrounded with Mountains. A River of the same Name rises in the East Confines, and runs quite thro' the Province, and falls at last into the Ocean by many Mouths, on which stands the Chief Town Petzora or Puste Ozoro, about 30 Leagues from the Sea, Weliki Poyassa stands near the head of the River, and Papinowgorod about 100 miles below it.

The Montes Ryphei five Obii, commonly called Srolp, and by the Russes Weliki Kameny Poyas, i. e. the great Girdle of Rocks, begin from the Bay of the Muscovian-Sea, near the Straights of Weygats, and continue on almost quite round this Province, and a good part of Siberia.

CONDORA or CONDINSKY, lies between Duina on the West, Zuborsky on the North, Petzora and Siberia on the East, and Permia on the South. It is a large Province with the Title of a Dutchy, but not considerable, being very Woody and Mountainous: The chief Town is Wirchatora, seated in the Northern Part, in the Latitude of 66.

PERMIA or PERMSKY, lies on the South of Condora, between that, Oustiugh, Wladski and Siberia. It is a Mountainous Country, and not considerable but for the Rivers; the great River Kama hath its rise here, as also Yuga, which falls into the Wisogda and several other smaller Streams arise in these Mountains. The chief Town Permia should be large by its Name, being called Weliki or Great Permia; but it is not mention'd by Authors as considerable, and few Travellers have been this way to inform us. It stands upon a small River that falls into the Kama, Lat. 62.

OUSTIUGH a large Province, lies between Permia, Condora, Duina, Cargopola and Wologda; this also is but a Poor Country; a great part of it is cover'd with Woods, wherein are the best black Foxes, whose Furs are the chief Commodity of the Land: The River Zugh rises on the East Side of the Province, and the Suchana enters it out of Wologda on the West, and both meeting together about the middle make the great River Duina, at the Confluence whereof stands the chief Town Oustiugh, q. d. (according to Luyers) Ostium Fugæ, which is noted for the Fairs held Annually in it for the Sale of Fox Skins, &c.

The Dutchy of NISI-NOVOGOROD or Novogorod Inferior, lies on the South of Oustiugh; it is a large Province, and though a great part of it be cover'd with Woods, yet it is a pleasant and fruitful Country. The River Wolga passes thro' it, and receives the Occa here, near which Confluence on the South Side of the River stands the City of Nisi-Novogorod in the Latitude of 56.40. Longitude 75. and at the distance of 350 miles from Moscow to the East; it hath a Castle Seated on a Rock, but it is not in very good Condition; being less useful since the adjoining Provinces of Tartary have been Subject to the Czar. Wasilagorod (Built by the Czar Vasilie against the Inroads of the Tartars) on the same side the River near 100 miles to the East, and Balagna somewhat more to the West, are the other Towns of chief Note in this Province; with which we finish our Account of the Countries lying between the Wolga and the Ocean.

C H A P . V .

Of the Eastern Part of Muscovy, between the Wolga and the Lesser Tartary.

Herein are comprehended the Provinces of Wolodimer, Susdal, Rezan, Ogrina, Pole, the People or Hords of Rosdori-Donski, Vachines, Czermissi and Mordua-Tartars.

The Duchy of WOLODIMER, is a small Province, but one of the most fruitful in all Muscovy, is Seated between the Rivers Wolga and Occa; on the South-West of Nisi-Novogorod, having Susdal on the West, which divides it from Muscovia, Rezan on the South, and Tartaria Mordua on the East. The River Clesma, which rises in Muscovy, runs thro' this Province, and on it stands the chief City Wolodimer 200 miles East from Moscow, and 150 West from Nisi-Novogorod; it has its Name from Wolodimer its Founder about the Year, 928. and was for a considerable time the Residence of the Great Dukes of Muscovy, till Danielau Michaelowitx removed the Regal Seat to Moscow, since which time it declined, but the Ruins of its large Walls and Houses are undeniable Proofs of its former Grandeur. The City is still considerable, and the Country about it so Fruitful that it yields Thirty

The Duchy of SUSDAL, a much larger Province than Wolodimer, lies on the North-West of that, having Nisi-Novogorod on the East, Wologda on the North, Farostaw and Rosthow on the West, and Muscovia on the South-West. It is Water'd by the River Wolga, which runs cross the middle of it; and the Clesma in the South Part, on which stands the City Susdal an Episcopal See, Seated as we have laid on the River Clesma, 70 miles West from Wolodimer, and 130 East from Moscow; famous for a stately Monastery of Nuns, and for having been sometime the Metropolis of Russia. Castrumoisgorod, called also Castrum, on the River Wolga in the Western, and Galetx in the North Confines, 180 miles from Susdal, are the other chief Towns of this Province.

The Duchy of REZAN, a long Tract of Land, lies on the South of Muscovia, Susdal and Wolodimer, extending from East to West near 300 miles along the Banks of the River Occa; 'tis the most fruitful Soil in the World, if the Russian Accounts may be credited, who say, that one Grain produceth many Stalks, and each Stalk many Ears, and grows so thick that a Horse can hardly pass thro': The Fruits also are very good, and the Inhabitants Courageous and Civil; and so Populous is this Province that they are able to send 15000 Horse and 40000 Foot to the Wars. It was formerly Govern'd by it's own Duke, who was a very powerful Prince, but 'tis now Subject to the Czar. The great River Don or Tanaïs hath it's Source here, which, after a long angular Course, falls into the Palus Meotis at Azoph. The chief City Rezan is Seated on the River Occa, 150 miles East from Moscow, and 60 South-West from Wolodimer. It is a large City, the See of a Bishop; Populous and in good State, and especially famous on account of its notable Defence against the Tartars, in the Year, 1570. whereby the whole Empire was preserv'd. Dnkgorod 40 miles South from Rezan near the Head of the River Don and Toul in the western Confines, near the Limits of Worotin, which hath a strong Castle Built by the Czar Basilius, soon after he took it; are the Places of chiefest Note.

The Province of OGRAINA, a large Tract of Land lying on the South of Rezan, is water'd with divers Rivers, and hath a reasonable good Soil, but adjoining to the Lesser Tartary it is so subject-ed to the Insults of that Barbarous People, that it is not very Rich or Populous. Many small Towns there are, but no Cities nor any Places of considerable Note except Worotins or Veramecx seated on the River Don, and of late Years especially very considerable, on account of the great Ships of War built there by the immediate Direction and Inspection of the Czar. The River being it seems deep enough to carry them down to the Black-Sea; so which, since the taking of Asoph, the Muscovites have free Access. We must not omit taking notice of a Mistake in all the common Maps, of the Situation of this Town, and the Course of the River Don; for whereas they place it East-South-East from Moscow, and make the Course of the River (in the 70 Deg. Long.) to arise Northward as high as the 56 Deg. Lat. and pass Eastward to the 74 Deg. of Longitude; The Town in Truth stands almost directly South from Moscow, at about 200 miles distance; and the River continues running Southward from its very Fountain, without ever turning Northward at all: It also flows Eastward no farther than the 69 Deg. of Long. and then returns Westward and falls into the Black-Sea at Azoph, in the 47 Degree of Latitude, and not in the 51 Degree as they lay it. This Correction we have from Mr. Thebesing, an Ingenious Merchant in Holland, at whose House the Czar himself Lodged, and gave him an Opportunity of making a Map from the original Surveys that that Prince had caused to be made of the Course of this River, and Situation of Asoph. Again, the quick Passage of the Ships from Worotinx to Asoph confirms this Account, which is perform'd in four Days; but if the River winded about so much as the old Maps make it, 'twould take up more than double that Time.

On the West of Ograina lies POLE, and on the South of it the ROSDORI DONSKI, the former a large Bog, and the latter almost all Forest; so that tho' there be some Villages on the Banks of the Don, which River passes thro' both Provinces, and divides the latter from the Circass Tartary, yet no City or Town of Note is found here. This Country, as also the greatest part of what follows, was formerly part of Tartary, and from time to time has been Conquer'd by the Czars. The ancient Tanaïta, and the Essedones lived here. At present 'tis Inhabited by the Cossacks, who are obliged to assist the Czar in his Wars, and are in return protect'd by him, but are not immediately Govern'd Govern'd by him, or indeed by any Body, only as their Wars make 'em chuse a General, whom they obey with great Submission.

TARTARIA MORDUA, is surrounded by Pole on the South, Rezan and Wolodimer on the West, Nisi-Novogorod on the North, and Czermisse on the East. It is the Habitation of the Mordua-Tartars, who are the more Civiliz'd of those People, and have Towns, whereof the chief is Adema, 120 miles East from Wolodimer, and 60 South from Nisi-Novogrodeck. And Moruma seated on the Occa. This is but a small Country, but

The CZERMISSE on the East of it is a very large Tract of Land, extending from the 54 to the 61 degree of Latitude; it is divided by the River Volga into two Parts, the Southern whereof, which adjoyns to Mordua, is called the NAGORNOI, because Mountainous, and the Northern LOGO-

WI because a Flat Pasture Land. On the South of these live the VACHINES on the Banks of the Volga.

The Inhabitants of these Countries are a rude barbarous People, having a peculiar Language among themselves, and living in Tents and Huts. Those of the Logowitzi are notable Graziers; for their Country yeilding good Pasture, they breed abundance of Cattle; they are also very expert Archers and Hunt in the Woods. In Religion they are Pagans, believing there is one supream God, and a Devil to whom they Sacrifice to avoid harm. They also Worship the Sun and Moon, but have neither Temple nor Priest. The Women are clad in white Cloath, and all cover'd but their Face; Polygamy is frequent among 'em, and for want of Children a Wife is often put away. They are Subject to the Czar, and are oblig'd to assist him in War, but pay no certain Tribute, and only make voluntary Presents.

C H A P. VI.

Of Samoieda, Nova-Zemla and the Tartarian-Muscovy.

HAVING described all the Western and Midland part of the Muscovian Empire from North to South, we proceed next to the Eastern Part, which tho' of near as large Extent, is by no means comparable for Wealth and Cultivation; this being Inhabited by Tartars, who being in general a rude unpolished People, we must not expect to hear of fine Cities and cultivated Lands amongst them; so that tho' here be large Kingdoms, there are only a few Cities which the Russians have Built to maintain their Authority over the Natives. In passing thro' these Countries we shall begin in the North, and proceed to the South till we come to Astrachan the utmost City in Europe.

NOVA ZEMLA q. d. New Land, is separated from the Continent of Muscovy, by the Straights of VVaygats, or as the Dutch call it, the Straet van Nassau, which lyes in the Latitude of 70 Degrees North from the Equator; and this Land which makes the Straight, is a Promontory advancing Southward from the main Country; which is conceived to reach far more North; and is by some affirm'd to joyn to Tartary. But the contrary was supposed by our Navigators, who sought that way to pals to Cathay and China.

The English first discover'd this Land in the year 1556, since when it has been often visited by English and Dutch, in search of the North-east Passage. But the Coldness of the Air, and the Mountains of Snow which cover'd the Land, hinder'd 'em from giving any great Account of it. Some Dutch Men Winter'd there in the Year 1595, but the Cold was so severe that they had enough to do to keep themselves alive. However some parts of it, they say, are Inhabited by a People of low Stature, Idolaters, and Barbarous. The Grand Czar having sent to discover the Country assumes the Title of it, tho he receives no Obedience nor exercises any Authority there, the Air being too Cold for a Governor to live in it. What can more be said of it, the Reader will find in our Account of the Countries about the Pole, at the latter end of this Work.

The most Northern part of the Continent of Muscovy is Inhabited by several Nations of Barbarous People, call'd by the Russes SAMOIDES or Self-Eaters, and thence the Country SAMOIEDA: Which is divided into OBDORA (where liv'd the Vogulici and Hugriischi) seated on the West side of the River Oby; and MANAMO and LOPPA on the East side of the River. The Mountains Ryphai, that surround Perzora, is the Boundary on the South side, and the Sea on the North, but Eastward it extends to the Asiatick Tartary. The Inhabitants are of low Stature, with broad flat Faces, black Eyes, resembling much the Laplanders and Greenlanders, as well in Form, as way of Living; only they Feed more vilely, for they eat raw Fleth, and even Carrion, and to Regale a Stranger, Kill a young Child and Serve it up. Those that live near VVaygatz will not suffer the Russes to Land, but if they Catch any, Kill and eat 'em: They have no Towns nor settled Habitations, but like the Laplanders remove from Place to Place seeking the best Game for themselves, and Pasture for their Rain-Deer; which, as in Lapland, is their only Cattle of Service. They Travel in Sleds drawn by Rain-Deer, in which they will run 200 miles in a day. They Lodge in Tents made of Skins and Furs, extended upon Stricks and Poles, are very nimble, and excellent Archers, which they acquire by Hunting Wild Beasts for their Food. Their Habits are all of Fur, and made close to their Bodies: They are of a Hardy and Healthy Constitution, Strong and Active. In Religion they are Pagans, Worshipping the Sun, and Sacrificing to Idols: They are also addicted to Sorcery Sorcery, like the Lapländers: But this is much Suppressed in those Parts Subject to the Muscovite, where Christianity hath been Planted, and pretty well Received.

The means whereby they became Subjected to the Czar, may be worth Relating. In the Time of Ivan Basilowitz, that is about 150 Years ago, there lived in the Province of Oustjugh upon the River Wisfogda, a Husbandman Named Onako, who by Industry had acquired some Wealth; and having Three Sons to assist him, they fell into a Trade with the Samoieds that used to bring Furs to the Fair at Ostjugh. And finding the Furs exceeding fine, had the Curiosity to Enquire out their Country; accordingly he insinuated himself into their Acquaintance, and sent some of his Servants Home with them, with strict Orders to observe the Country, and way to it. At their Return, Commanding his Servants to be silent, he sent divers Friends, and more Servants the next Year, and with them some Commodities of small Value, which might be useful there; these passing as far as the River Oby, found those Rich Furs very Plenty, and to be purchased at easy Rates: Wherefore Lading themselves with their Purchase, brought Home a very profitable Return to their Master. Which Trade being continued by this Family, they grew exceeding Rich, so as to Build many Churches and Towns, Employ 10000 Servants, and Pay the King 20000 Rubbles a Year for Custom. But when they had sufficiently Feather'd their Nest, to prevent Destruction by Envy, they resolved to inform the Czar: Accordingly some of them Repairing to Court, with Presents to the chief Minister, informed him what they knew of these Countries, which was received very kindly; and the Czar Theodore being informed of it, Rewarded the Family of Onako's with great Privileges and Honours; and sent many Gentlemen and Soldiers under their Conduct, to make further Discovery. These being Richly Clad and Furnished with such small Presents as might be acceptable to the Natives, took a Journey to Samoieda; where behaving themselves discreetly, and bestowing their Presents freely, they gained the Affection of the People; and by extolling the Goodness and Greatness of their Monarch, prevailed upon them to submit to his Government, and pay as an Acknowledgment a pair of Sables every Year for every Head that was able to Shoot, which was but a Trifle to them, but a great Wealth to the Czar: and to satisfy the Samoieds, they took several of them with 'em to Moscow, (leaving Hostages for their Return) who were so astonished at the Pomp of that Court, the Greatness of the Armies, the Convenience of the Houses, and the like, that they immediately desired to be accepted as the Czar's Subjects, and have Persons sent to Instruct them in this Regular way of Living. Since which time the Christian Religion hath been taught among them, and the People are become more Civilized.

The Chief Towns Built by the Russes here are Olschogorod in a Peninsula near the Mouth of the Oby; but that being found too near the Sea was razed, and in its stead Zergole was built in an Island of the Oby, in the Latitude of 69 Degrees, and above that upon the Oby in the Latitude of 67. 30.

Naxenscoy, or as others wrote it, Nieuenscoy, at first a Castle only, now grown into a good City. Southward from hence on the Oby also stands Toom, in the Latitude of 66. 0. The Chief City of that part of the Country is called Loppa, and seems by the Maps to be the Chief City of all Samoieda. Several other smaller Towns have been built on the other side.

South and East from hence lies TINGOESIA, or Habitation of the Tingoesi, a Mountainous Country beyond the River Jenizaia, and properly belonging to Tartary, but is by some Geographers reckoned part of Muscovy.

The Great Province or Kingdom of SIBERIA, lies on the South of Obdora, between the River Oby on the East, and Petzora, Permia, and Wladski on the West, extending no less than Ten Degrees in Length, viz. from the 58th to the 68th. The Land is Woody and Marshy, and the Inhabitants are chiefly of the Tartarian Race. The Chief Cities Built here by the Russes are, Polem, a Castle near the Confines of Obdora, and Petzora. Tobolsca the chief City, seated upon the Rivers Irtjich, and Tobol, in the Latitude of 65. Here is a Bishop's See, a Supreme Court of Judicature for all Samoieda, and Siberia; and hither the Tribute is brought from all the Provinces beyond, and conveyed to Moscow. Calami upon the Oby, and Ostro on the other side a little above it. Tumen or Tinna, South from Tobolsca, on a River of the same Name, where is held a great Market for Furs. Zaphanim more to the North-west, Seated upon the River Toera, Built for a Stage to Travellers this way, as was also Ver-gateria, the first Town in Siberia, out of Permia, it was Built in the Year 1590. and is the Residence of a Governor and Garrison, who yearly distribute out the Corn and Provisions to the further Garrisons that live where the Ground is not Tilled. Taara in the middle of the Province, Seated on the Irlische, in the Latitude of 62. 0. Lipen, or Lopen, much farther South, viz. in the Latitude of 59.

In this Province are comprehended the People, Calami, Pega-Horda, Schibanski, Cofaski, and Nagaya-Horda.

On the East-side the Oby, over-against Siberia lie LUCOMORIA, and Grufinsky, wherein are Grufina on the Oby, in Latitude 62, and Serpenow above 200 miles from it to the East.

The Duchy of WIADSKI lies on the West of Siberia, having Permia on the North, Oustjugh on the West, and Casan on the South. It is a Barren and Marshy Country. Conquer'd from the Tartars by the Emperor Vasilie. The great River Kam passes thro' it, and falls into the Wolga at Casan, and the River Wladka gives Name to the Country. The Chief Towns are Cotelinitz, upon the Wladka, near the Confines of Casan. Slaboda, more to the North-west. Cblinoff on the Wladka, near the Confines of Permia, and Oorloff on the same River in the middle of the Province.

Southward from hence lies the Kingdom of CASAN, formerly Subject to its own Prince, who was a powerful Monarch, but Conquer'd by the Great Duke John Basilowitz. The River Kam runs thro' it from North to South; and the River Wolga washes it's South-west part. The Chief City

City Cafan is Seated on a River of the same Name near its Confluence with the Wolga: It is a large City, the See of a Metropolitan, and the Seat of the Czar's Governor of these Parts, and is well fortified. On the Wolga 70 miles more West, stands Kockebaga, and 130 miles to the North is Malmisb on the River Cafan; and on the Borders of Bulgar, Tetus Seated on the West-side the Wolga.

The Kingdom of BULGARIA, otherwise called the Region or Horde of Zavalhani, lies on the South of Cafan. The Chief Cities are Bulgaria in the North part, 70 miles South from Cafan, and Samarat, 120 miles South from Bulgar, and not far from the Wolga.

More South lies the Great Kingdom of ASTRACHAN, which reaches from the Confines of the Czermisse, and Bulgaria, as far as the Caspian Sea, and is the most Eastern Country of Europe; being divided from Asia, by the Mountains on the East, and by the Caspian Sea on the South-East; the former separates it from Great Tartary, and the latter from Persia. Its West and Southern Bounds are Rofdori Donski, and Pole, and on the North the Kingdom of Bulgar. The Land is fruitful enough; but the Tartars that Inhabit it are a People that never Cultivate; so that the Country lies in a manner Desart, and the Inhabitants only Live in Tents, which they Pitch where their Convenience or Fancy invite them. The Russians have several Towns on the Banks of the River Wolga which runs through this Kingdom, and falls into the Caspian Sea at the Chief City of it. Those of the chiefest Note are these that follow.

Soratos, Seated in the Latitude of 52 Degrees, 12 Minutes: It is a Fort with a Garrison constantly in it, to defend Travellers from the Robberies and Insults of the Tartars. Here begins the Country of the Calmic Tartars, a very Deformed, Barbarous, and Rapacious People. Tzaritzza, Czaritzza, q. d. Casaria, and in some Maps erroneously written Larissa, which lies on the West side the River Wolga, is a strong Town having a good Wall with Six Bulwarks, and a good Garrison always maintained in it. It is Seated in the Latitude of 49 Degrees, 42 Minutes.

A little below this City is the Trench that was attempted to be cut to make a Communication of the Wolga with the Don or Tanais.

Below this is seen the Ruins of Czaref-gorod, which was Demolish'd by Tamerlain. And some Leagues lower, in the Latitude of 48. Degrees, 40 Minutes, on the west side the River stands Tzornogar, call'd otherwise, Michael-Novogorod, a small City, but well Fortified, and the Station of a good Garrison; it is Environ'd with Palisades, and hath Watch-Houses at a miles distance on every side, whence they can see an Enemy. The reason of building of this place, was to defend the Passage of the River against the Cossacks who used to Rob here, and in particular defeated a Russian Convoy with great Wealth, letting the Soldiers pass first, who by reason of the rapidity of the Stream could not return to the assistance of the Merchants though they saw 'em Robb'd. Upon the Banks of the River all along grows abundance of Liqueurice, but the Country lyes all Waste and Unill'd. Three days passage more down the River lyes the Famous City Astrachan in the Latitude of 46. Degrees, 22. Minutes, and about 50 Leagues from the Caspian sea. It stands in an Island made by two Branches of the Wolga, which by many Mouths falls into the Caspian Sea. It was heretofore the Royal Seat of the Nagayan-Tartars, till taken by Assault by the Czar, Ivan Basilowitz, after his Conquest of Cafan, in the year 1554. and the Tartars being driven out, he Re-peopl'd it with Muscovites, and Encompas'd it with a Stone Wall and other Fortifications. It was at that time a small City, but becoming a place of Trade, the Czar Michael Federowiz added a large part, call'd, the Strelitzza-gorod, or Soldiers-Town, to which many private and publick Buildings have been added, which has increas'd it to a large City: The Walls are strong, and guarded with 500 Peices of Brass Canon, the Gates carefully shut up every Night, and no Tartar ever suffer'd to live in the City, neither are they permitted to build Towns, or to Fortify places. The convenient situation of this City makes it resorted to by Persian, Armenian, and other Merchants, and creates so great a Traffick that the Czar Receives for the Customs, 25000 Crowns per Annum, altho' the Duties be very low; Besides the convenience of vending all the Native Commodities of Russia, and receiving in Exchange the Silks and other valuable Commodities of Persia and India.

It is seated in a Temperate AIR, and in a Fruitful SOIL, producing all sorts of European Fruits, particularly Vines so plentiful as to make a great quantity of Wine. They have Beef, Mutton, Wild-Swine which make very good Pork, Fowl and Fish, in great Plenty. On one side the Town in a dry and barren Heath, they find abundance of Salt, which is dug out of the Hollows of Rocks, and is vendd abroad to great profit. Hereabouts is found a strange sort of Fruit, call'd Baronez, or the Lamb, being in Form Resembling that Creature, and cover'd with a Down so thick and strong, that the Skins are used in Garments; it grows upon a Stalk 2 Foot high fasten'd at its Navel, the Head always inclining to the Grass; and such is its Vegetative Heat, that it consumes all the Grass near it; which makes the People confidently aver that it eats Grass. In the year 1669. this City was taken and plunder'd by the Cossacks, under the Leading of Steno-Radzin, who upon a disgust, on account of his Brother, being punished at Moscow, Rais'd a Rebellion and ravag'd all this Country, and even pass'd over to Persia, where he Plunder'd Tercki and other Cities on the Caspian-Sea. But the year after the Czar sent an Army against him which Retook the City and totally Roured him and his Party.

Below this City towards the Caspian-Sea, in the River Wolga, they take abundance of the Fish call'd Biloege, the Rows whereof makes that which we call Cavear, whereof they make great profit.

HUNGARY,

HUNGARY, Hungaria.

HUNGARY is a part of the Ancient Pannonia, which comprehended all that is now called Carniola, Croatia, Carinthia, Stiria, a great part of Austria, almost the half of Hungary, Slavonia, Bosnia, and a part of Servia. It was divided into Pannonia Superior, or Prima Consularis, and Inferior, or Secunda Consularis. The Former lay towards the West, and comprehended Carniola, Croatia, Windorum Marchia, Carinthia, Stiria, and the greater part of Austria. The Latter lay towards the East, comprehending Bosnia, Slavonia, and as much of Hungary as lies between the Rivers above a Third Danube, Drave, and the Raab. So that not Part of that which is now called Hungary, lay within the Ancient Pannonia, the rest lying in the Countries of the Fazyges Metanastæ, and the Daci. Whether the Pannonii, who first Inhabited Pannonia, gave Name to the Country, or it to them, is mote than can be Learned, (as Reiskius observes) from the Grecian or Roman History. Julius Cesar first invaded it, C. Octavius Caf. Augustus Subdued it, and Tiberius Reduced it into a Province.

vince. From that time until the declining State of the Roman Empire, it was under the Jurisdiction of Rome; but afterwards the Goths invaded it, who were expelled by the Huns, as these were by the Lombards; whom the Huns drove out again. At last about the Year 900, in the time of the Emperor Arnolphus, there came a Warlike People out of Scythia, who overcame the Huns, and mixing with the Remnants of those that were left, made themselves Masters of all that Country, that is now called Hungary; which is bounded (according to Cluverius) with the Mountains Crappack on the North, which divide it from Poland and Russia; on the East with Transylvania, and Valachia; on the South with the Dravs; and on the West with Stiria, Austria, and Moravia. It lies between 45 and 49 Degrees Latitude, and 38 and 44 Longitude.

The Air of this Country is abundantly Temperate, but not very Healthful in many Places, where Mists and Fogs are too frequent; but the Soil is good, and yields such plenty of all things, for the Life and Delight of Man, that it hardly yields to any Country in Europe; For it brings forth all sorts of Corn, especially Wheat, in great Abundance, and produces plenty of Generous Wine. It so abounds in Cattel, that one Year with another the Number of Oxen and Cows that go from thence to Vienna, have been computed to be about Four-score thousand; which are not all consumed there, but dispersed over a great part of Germany. And there is so great Plenty of Venison and Wild-Fowl, that (Hunting and Fowling being free to every Body) Hares, Pheasants, Partridges, and other such like, which seem the property of the Great and Rich among us, are the common Food of the meanest Boars there. This Country is also mighty Rich in Mines of Gold, Silver, and other Metals of less value, which we shall give a particular Account of when we come to describe the Towns and Places near to which they are, and especially that at Crenmitz, in which they have Worked Nine hundred and Fifty Years. There are also many Excellent Hot Baths in this Country; particularly those at Buda, which are esteemed the Noblest in Europe, not only in respect of the Large and Hot Springs; but the Magnificence of their Buildings.

There is no Country in Europe better River'd than Hungary; on the East-side it is washed with that Noble and Navigable River Tibiscus, or the Teyffe, which runs into the Danube between Peter Waradin, and Belgrade. On the West-side runs the River Arabo, or Raib, which rises in Styria, and falls into the Danube near Favianum or Raab. On the South runs the Drave; which rising in the Territory of Saltzburgland, falls into the Danube near Erdoed, or Old Teuroburgium and Esseck, about Three hundred miles from its Spring. On the same side is also the River Save, which arising in Carinthia, enirtheth the Danube at Belgrade. Upon the North-side of Hungary are the Rivers Gran and Waag, which rise from the Carpathian Mountains. But above all, the great Danubius or Thonau is most considerable. It runs quite through Hungary, and begins to be Navigable at the City of Ulme in Swabianland or Suevia; and passing by Ingolstadt, Ratisbonn, Straubing, Passan, Linz, and Vienna to Presburg, and from thence through Hungary, makes a Course of above Three hundred miles before it passes by Belgrade; and having washed the Shoars of Servia, Bulgaria, Valachia, and Moldavia, at last empties at many Mouths, into the Euxine, or Black Sea, after having drank in above Sixty considerable Rivers, and performed a Course of above Fifteen hundred miles.

As this Country excels in Rivers, so has it also many Considerable and Long Bridges, as that at Vienna, which takes above Two thousand Trees to Plank it; The Long Bridge of Boats over the Danube between Sragonium and Burchan. That between Buda, and Pest, is above Half a mile long. There is also a Bridge at Caocza, very Handsome and well contrived. But the most considerable of all is that at Esseck, built partly over the Drave, partly over the Feans, which are often overflowed. It is Five miles long, and has Towers built upon it at the distance of every Quarter of a mile, and is handsomely Railed on each side, and Supported by great Trees, Erected under it, Nine or Ten in a Rank to each Arch.

There are also in this Country Two considerable Lakes, viz. the Lake Balaton, or Platsee, which lies between Vesprium and the Drave, and has some Fords upon it: And the Newfidel-See, so called from the Town Newfidel. The former of which is said to be above Forty, the other about Twenty Eight miles long. There are also in this Country several Long and Spacious Plains: Inasmuch that Dr. Brown, in his Description of it, says, he Travelled from Vienna to Begrade, about Four hundred miles, upon continued and uninterrupted Plains.

Many Roman Emperors have Honoured this Country with their Presence, Birth, Death and Achievements, For (to omit Trajan, Caracalla, Galienus, Constantius, and many more) the Emperors Aurelianus, Probus, Gratianus, Maximianus were Born at Sirmium. Claudius Gothicus Died in or near it. Julian and Valentinian were Born in Pannonia, Ingenius and Vetricio were saluted Emperors there. And at Sirmium was held a General Council. And the Roman Armies being much in this Country, is the reason why such vast Quantities of Old Medals have been found in it.

As to the Genius of the Hungarians, however Barbarous their Ancient Predecessors might be, the Modern Hungarians are a Warlike and Politick People; but are by the Generality of Writers charged with Laziness, Idleness, and Gluttony, which seems to be the Natural Effect of their Excellent and Fruitful Soil; and they are generally of a Turbulent and Rebellious Disposition. This Country having been the Seat of War so long, and the Turkish Power so much prevailing in those Parts, Learning has not been allow'd to flourish, and so we are not to expect any University beyond Vienna. Those who have a mind to be Scholars, and have Money to bestow upon their Education, do commonly Study at Vienna, Prague, or Bresslaw.

The Language of the Hungarians is proper to themselves, and different from all other: A Specimen of which we shall set down for the Curious Reader's Speculation, out of the Lord's Prayer. Mi Atyanck Ky vasy az meniegle megh Szentel Tefseck az te newed, &c. In some parts of Hungary they speak Slavonian. The great difference between the Languages of these Countries, obliges them to learn other Languages, especially the Latin, which the Gentry and Soldiers generally speak. It is very useful for a Traveller till he come to Belgrade, but below it of no use to him at all.

As to the Government of Hungary, Historians are divided about it: for some maintain, particularly Comingius, that even after the Establishment of Christianity, Hungary was no Kingdom, nor Governed by any set kind of Laws, before the 12th Century; but the Hungarian Writers say, That in the Time of Paganism, their Country was Ruled by Dukes, who Exercis'd Monarchical Power, tho' they never assum'd the Title of Kings; and that the last of these Dukes was one Geysca, or Geysa, who in his Old days resign'd the Government, and recommended his Son Stephen to the Nobility; who out of the respect they bare to the Old Man, chose his Son their King, and Crowned him during his Father's Life; from whom down to this present Time we have a Succession of 45 Kings, as the Reader may see in the following Catalogue. The Nature of the Hungarian Monarchy has been long in Dispute, some maintaining that it was Hereditary, others, that it was Elective; but the Civilians of that Nation are now generally agreed, That the present Emperor has a just Title to that Kingdom, and that Jure Hereditario. It has been also hotly disputed, Whether Hungary was an Independent and Absolute Kingdom, or a Tributary Province, under the Emperor of Germany's Protection; but Lazius proves by many Examples, That the Kings of Hungary have always done Homage to the Emperors, before their Accession to the Crown of that Nation.

The Hungarian Horsemen, whom they call Husars, are much better Soldiers than the Foot, whom they call Heyducks; which may be ascribed in a great Measure to the vast Number of Excellent Horses, which are bred in this Country. In former Ages, the Hungarians never went to the Field without their long Shields; but in the Year 1572. their General, George Count of Serin, persuaded them to lay them aside, by reason they were too great a Burthen to them. Their Naval Force which the Emperor uses for defending this Country, consists in his Ships and Gallies upon the Danube. At the Siege of Belgrade, as Doctor Brown relates, from the Turkish History, the Hungarians sent down the Stream from Buda 200 Ships and Gallies, as Mahomet the Great brought the same Number up the Stream, all well appointed: And certainly there never was such Numbers of Ships of Force, nor such Signal Engagements at such a distance from the Sea, as there have been upon the Danube.

The Revenues of this Crown arise from the Mines of Silver and other Metals, the Impost upon Cattel, and other Customs and Taxes less considerable; which in all is computed to amount to Two hundred Twenty and Four Thousand Ducats Yearly: And an Hungarian Ducat being valued at 10 Shillings English, the Emperors Revenue, as King of Hungary, is an Hundred and Twelve thousand pound Sterling.

The Established RELIGION of Hungary, since the Emperor's Conquest of it, is the Roman Catholic; tho' the Number of Protestants be very great; for the Lutheran Reform'd Religion prevailed here, but for many Years it was Persecuted, and Civil Wars ensued thereupon, the People chusing rather to be under the Turk, with whom they might enjoy Liberty of Conscience, than submit to the Emperor who was Zealous in Establishing Popery. But now, as we have said, that is the Predominant Religion, and for the Government of the Church there are Two Archbishops at Gran and Colocz, and Sixteen Suffragan Bishops, whereof Five are Subordinate to the Archbishop of Gran; Eight to the Archbishop of Colocz, and the other Three are under the Archbishop of Spalato in Dalmatia.

HUNGARY, by the Inhabitants call'd MA-GIAR, and by the Slavonians Wagierska; was sometime a Kingdom of vast Extent; for in the middle Ages these Monarchs subdued all the neighbouring Provinces, Eastward as far as the Black-Sea, and Southward to the Adriatick-Sea; so that Slavonia, Croatia, Bosnia, and Dalmatia, as well as Transylvania, Servia, Walachia, Moldavia and Besserabia, were under their Subjection till the Turks took Possession of 'em. But now as we have shewn the Drave is the Southern, and the Mountains on the Limits of Transylvania, the Eastern Boundaries.

It was divided into many Counties, the Number whereof, is not agreed on by Authors, some reckon 74. others 73. and some again Contract the Number to 60, 54, or 50. But the large and long Possession of the Turks, might well confound those Divisions: And we shall consider it as divided by the Danube into two parts. The Upper or Larger, on the North and East side of that River, and the Lower on the South side of it. These two Parts are subdivided into Governments; the Upper into Four, viz. of 1. Presburg. 2. Bergster, or the Berg Towns. 3. Newbausel. And 4. Caschau. And the Lower into Three, viz. of 1. Buda. 2. Raab. And 3. Canisfa.

PRESBURG, otherwise call'd POSON by the Inhabitants, is pleasantly seated on the North side of the Danube, 32 miles East from Vienna, 28 from Raab to the North-west, 32 from Newbausel to the West, and not above 5 miles from the Frontiers of Austria. It is a pleasant well built City, the Capital of the Upper Hungary, and of a particular County; and after the loss of Strigonium or Gran, made the Place of Convention of the States of the Realm: It is well Fortified, and has a Castle built of Stone on the top of a Hill, which has four Towers, in the strongest whereof is kept the Royal Crown of Hungary, somuch talk'd of, and by the Hungarians wonderfully esteem'd, as being believ'd to be presented by an Angel from Heaven to St. Stephen their first Christian King. Here are many Churches, among them a Fair on Built for the Lutherans, in the year 1638. and a Dome or Cathedral whereof, the Jesuits have the Use. The Archbishop hath a Palace here in the Suburbs, well adorn'd with Gardens, Walks, Fountains, &c.

Newbausel, call'd Vywar by the Hungarians, stands on the River Neytra, or Nitrach, 32 miles East from Presburg, 64 North-west from Buda, and 10 miles from the Danube; a place of small extent, but the Capital of a large County, and a Fortrefs of great Importance, being the Bulwark against the Turks on this side. It is built in a Moorish Plain, but hard at the bottom, and every where passable; its Fortifications are in form of a Star, with 6 points, each Defended by a high rais'd Bastion, encompass'd with a large wet Ditch; to which is added by the present Emperor, a Fort nam'd Leopoldstat. There are but two Gates to the Town which are defended by a Half-Moon on each. In the year 1663. it was taken by the Turks, after a great Loss, and a long Siege. But in the late War Prince Charles of Lorraine, Set down before this Town, An. 1685. and having defeated the Serafquier, who was marching to its Relief, he took it by Assault, after a Siege of 40 days, and found in it 100 Peices of Brass Cannon and a Booty of Immense Value.

Schinta, a large Fort of 4 Bastions, stands on the River Vagus, 20 miles North from Newbausel.

Neytra stands 10 miles East from Schinta, on a small River of the same Name, which 25 Miles below falls into the Danube.

Leopoldstadt, a noble, regular Fortification, of 6 Bastions; stands on the River Vagus, 20 miles from Schinta, and 40 from Newbausel to the North.

Tyrnaw, Tyrn or Dyrn, otherwise call'd Szombat, is a small Town on a River of the same Name, 20 miles South-west from Leopoldstadt, and 30 North-east, from Presburg: Chiefly noted for the Residence of the Archbishop and Chapter of Gran, whilest that City was in the Possession of the Turks.

Trenschin the Capital of a County, is a very fair Town seated on the Top of a Rock, 20 miles from Tyrnaw, and 10 from Leopoldstadt to the North, and not very far from the Confines of Silesia. It is defended by a very strong Castle, which renders it almost Impregnable, and stands so high that it is seen at a great distance. About a Mile from this Town are two Hot Baths, much frequented by Strangers. These Waters are so common hereabouts, that the People dig Pits wherein they find hot Water, and that so near the Rivers, that they can reach their Arms into the cold Water whilest the rest of their Body is Sweating in the Pit.

Chremnitz is reckon'd the first among the Berg or Mine-Towns, which Honour is paid to its Antiquity rather than Grandeur, being of small extent, but surrounded with Suburbs, and defended by a strong Castle, supposed to stand on the highest Ground in Hungary, 50 miles distant from Newbausel to the North-east, 40 miles from Leopoldstadt to the East, and 50 miles North from the Danube. It is Famous on account of its Gold-Mine, which has been wrought above 900 Years; the Entrance into the Mine is thro' one Cuniculus or Horizontal Passage, call'd the Erbstal, which is 170

Fathoms deep, and the Vein runs 9 or 10 miles in length, and some of the Passages, which have formerly been cut thro' Rocks, by being dissolved are grown up again and hardly passable, tho' undoubtedly at first they were wide enough. So Rich is this Mine that they sometimes find lumps of pure Gold, Specimens whereof are seen in the Emperors Repository at Vienna. And even the common Earth on the neighbouring Hills being washed affords Gold.

Not far from the Gold Mine there is another of Vitriol 80 Fathoms deep, the Earth whereof purified and reduc'd to a Calx is used in making Aqua Fortis. In the Town is established a Mint wherein Gold Ducats and other Pieces are Coined.

Schemnitz, the fairest of all the Seven Berg or Mine-Towns, is built on a Rocky Hill which renders the Streets uneven, 20 miles distant from Cremnitz to the South, and 30 from the Danube to the North. The Town is adorn'd with Three beautiful Churches, and defended by as many Castles. One whereof is exceeding high, and was used as a Watch-Tower, to discover the Approach. The Air of this Place is not Healthy, but the neighbouring Baths are very restorative. And the Country being Rocky, Provisions are difficultly brought hither, so that if they were not for the Rich Silver-Mines, this Town would have few Inhabitants. Of these Mines there are several, but the Two call'd the Trinity, and the Windschat, are the chief, the former is 70 Fathom deep, and mostly supported by Propp, being an Earthy Soil; the latter is much deeper, and in some Places wonderfully Hot. The Ore is Rich, and besides most of it holds some Gold; which they separate by melting the Silver, then grinding it, and afterwards dissolving it in Aqua-Fortis, made out of the Vitriol of Chremnitz, wherein the Gold subsides, and the Aqua-Fortis is drawn from the Silver by Distillation, and made to serve again. Not far from Schemnitz is a Rock where is found a red Substance which grows to the Ore called Cinnaber of Silver, and which is used for Paint, making as fine a Vermilion as the Cinnaber is self. There are also found in these Mines Crystals, Amethysts, and Vitriol naturally Crystalliz'd.

Newsol or Besricia, 10 miles North from Cremnitz, is the Third in the Number of the Berg-Towns, and stands on the River Gran at the Foot of a Hill, on which stands the Castle and the great Church cover'd with Copper. It is a good Market Town, to which is brought plenty of Provisions; but is chiefly remarkable for the Copper-Mines near it, the most considerable in Hungary; wherein the Ore is so firmly incorporated with its Stone-Bed, that the separation cannot be made without great Pains and Difficulty, the Ore being often melted 14 times before it can be made fit for use. The Inhabitants are Lutherans, and speak the German, Hungarian and Wendish Tongues. At Mismills, a Village near Newsol, are many Furnaces for melting the Mettle, and Silver is sometimes extracted out of the Copper.

Pugganz was heretofore a fair Town, and still retains a fourth Place in the Rank of the Berg-Towns, but hath been so often burnt and laid wait by the frequent Incurions of the Turks, that the Miners were forced to give over their Work till peaceable Times should come.

Konigsberg, the Fifth of the Berg-Towns, stands near the River Gran, 10 miles West from Schemnitz; it doth not much exceed Pugganz in Note and Dignity at this Day, the Miners having for the most part retired from thence to Chremnitz and Schemnitz, where they meet with much better Employment. However this Town is noted for a sort of softer Mineral Water that hath wrought many notable Cures.

Tillen another Berg-Town of great Antiquity, but of late Years fallen to decay and deserted, because of the failure of the Veins.

Libeten, 15 miles North-East from Newsol, the last of the seven Berg-Towns, was likewise formerly more noted than at present, being left for the same Reason. Altho' still some small Quantities of Copper, with a little Silver, are dug out of the Mines.

Besides these there are other Towns remarkable for Mines, tho' they are not registred among the former, viz.

Herr-Grundt, about 7 miles distant from Newsol, where lies a Copper Mine in the Rocks, the Ore whereof is extrem Rich, yielding ordinarily 20 or 30, nay sometimes 40, 50, and even to 60 Pounds of Metal in the Hundred Pound of Ore; which is either of a yellow or black Colour, the former yielding the more Mettal, but the latter containing some Silver. There are also several Sorts of Vitriol found in this Mine, viz. White, Green, Blew, and clear transparent Red, besides a green Earth or waterish Sedement call'd Berg-gun, used in Painting. Moreover here are two Springs of Vitriolate Water that in 14 Days turn Iron into Copper; these Fountains are esteem'd, because thereby the worst old Iron is made pure Copper, more Ductile and Malleable than other.

Glasbitten, 7 Miles from Schemnitz, was sometime noted for a rich Gold Mine, which has been lost ever since Bethlem Gabor, Prince of Transylvania, over-run this Country, and forced the Inhabitants away. The Place is however much resorted to on account of the Hot-Baths, whereof there are five; the Waters are very clear, the Sedement Red and Green, and the Wooden Seats under Water incrustated with a Stony Substance. And Silver is gilded by lying in the Water. Among these, the Hot Springs of that call'd the Swearing Bath Grain thro' a Hill, and fall into a Bagnio built on purpose to receive 'em. At one end whereof is erected a noble Stove, heated by the Steams of those Waters, and so contrived, that by choosing a higher or lower Seat, ones Sweating may be regulated, and any Degree of Heat obtain'd at Pleasure.

Eisenbach lies about 4 miles from Glasbitten and 5 or 6 from Schemnitz, and is Famous for its Hot-Baths, Two of which are very convenient; and much frequented; but the Third, which is made of the wa't Water of the former, is not much used, being almost continually full of Snakes, who delight in this Warmth. The Water is of a Petrifying Nature, the Sedement, which is of a red Colour, turns to Stone, and the Planks which surround the Bath are all Petrified. Silver is chang'd Yellow by lying in it.

Esperies or Eperies, is a strong Town seated on the River Turkzel, near the Frontiers of Poland, 150 miles East from Prestburg, and 60 miles North from the River Teisse. It is the Capital of the County of Sero, and Famous for its Fairs and Salt-Mines. And about half an Hour from the Town

there is a famous Salt-Mine, the Veins whereof are so large, that there are dug out Pieces of 1000 Pound Weight of pure Salt, which is of a grayish Colour, but being ground to Powder becomes exceeding White; Some Pieces are Blew, some Yellow, &c. and so hard that they Carve it into divers Figures. The Water of this Mine is so impregnated with Salt, that being Boyled up it affords a Blackish Salt which they give to their Cattel. Near this place Spring Two deadly Fountains, the Waters whereof kill the Birds and Beasts that Taſt 'em; wherefore they are always kept Cover'd and Wall-ed round to prevent any coming to them.

Leutsche, the Capital of the County of Zips, stands near the Frontiers of Poland 20 miles West from Eperies, on the Top of a High-hill, whence is a fine Prospect of the Neighbouring Country. It is a handsome Large Town, having a considerable Annual Fair, and Inhabited chiefly by Germans of the Lutheran Religion, who however Talk the Hungarian Tongue, and hold a Traffick with all the Neighbouring Places: They are Remarkable for their Courteous Behaviour and Sincerity in Dealing.

Cafchau Seated on the small River Taveza 20 miles South from Eperies, and 40 North from the Teyſſe and 100 N. East from Newbauſel. It is one of the Royal Free Towns Govern'd by the Emperor's immediate Deputy, which makes a great resort of Persons of Quality, and hath render'd the Town one of the best built in Hungary. It is very well Fortified, and hath an Arsenal the most considerable in the Kingdom. The great Church is supplied by a German and Hungarian Minister by Turns, both which Languages are ordinarily spoken here. The Air is as peitential and unhealthy as any in Hungary, which renders Strangers subject to Sickneſs. Moreover their Wine is bad, being tinged with Chalk or Lime, and breeds Lameneſs in the Joints; and yet the same Wine being carry'd abroad is very good; and the chief Trade of the Town conſiſts in the Vent of it into Poland and elsewhere. This Place being formerly poſſeſs'd by the Turks, was regain'd in the Year 1685.

Agria, called Eger by the Germans, and Erlaw by the Inhabitants, is ſeated in the middle of all Hungary on the small River Agria, which about 15 mile below falls into the Teyſſe, 60 miles from Buda to the North-East, and 120 from Preſburg to the East. It is a considerable City, being the See of a Biſhop, and a regular Fortification of great Strength. The Caſtle ſtands on the other ſide the River on a Hill, and has the reputation of being one of the ſtrongeſt Holds in the Kingdom. When Solyman II. beſieg'd this City in the year 1552. with 70000 Men, tho' it was not then guarded by ſuch Fortifications, it was defended with wonderful Courage and Reſolution, ſo that after the Turks had Batter'd it 40 days with 50 pieces of Canon, and made many Aſſaults in which they loſt 8000 Men, they were ſain to draw off and quit the Siege. But in the Year 1596, Mahomet III. took it, and put the Garriſon to the Sword. Since when the Turks held it till the late War, when it was regain'd by the Imperial Forces after they had Block'd it up for three Year, in which time 10000 Turks periſh'd in it, either through Hunger or Diſeaſes, 4000 Inhabitants march'd out with the Garriſon, 300 ſtaid and demanded Baptiſm, and many Chriſtian Slaves were ſet at Liberty. The Turks left in the place 150 pieces of Artillery, 7 Mortars, and great ſtore of Proviſions and Ammunition. And by this Conqueſt all the adjacent Country was reduc'd to the Imperial Obedience.

Filleck is a very conſiderable Fortreſs by reaſon of its advantageous Situation, on the top of a Craggy Hill; ſo inacceſſible that there is only one way up to it, and that ſo very Narrow that only one Perſon can paſs at a time. It ſtands on the Road from Preſburg to Tranſilvania, 20 miles West from Agria, and 40 North from Buda. It was Fortified with a Caſtle and Strong Walls, but taken by the Turks however in 1560, and recovered by the Imperialiſts in 1593, and again taken by the Baſſa of Waradin in 1682. But ſome Differences ariſing between him and Count Teckely's Party, he cauſed it to be Diſmantled and Deſerted. Near this Town is a Curioſity Viewed by Travellers, being a Hole or Cavern in a Rock, wherein the Water dropping from the Arch at Top, Petrifies at the bottom, and becomes a White Stone uſed by Painters.

Novigrad, a ſmall but very ſtrong Town, and the Capital of a County, is Seated 30 miles South-west from Filleck, 15 miles from the Danube, and 50 South-eaſt from Newbauſel. It is defended by a ſtrong Caſtle, Founded on a High-Rock, and Encompaſſed with a Moat cut in the Rock 34 Foot deep. It was taken by the Germans from the Turks in the Year 1594, but loſt again in 1663, and now Recover'd and Subject to the Emperor.

Peſt or Peſth, a Large Town Seated on the Danube over-againſt Buda, to which you paſs by a Fine Bridge of Boats Half a mile long. It is built of a Quadrangular Form, and by reaſon of its fair Walls and Towers of the Turkiſh Moſques, affords a delightful Proſpect at a diſtance. This place hath been often Taken and Re-taken by the Turks and Chriſtians, but was aſſured to the Emperor by the Conqueſt of Buda in 1686.

Colocz, Colocia, Coloza, & ad Stuarus Coloffas, is an Ancient City Seated on the Danube, 50 miles South-eaſt from Peſt: The Capital of the County of Bath, and the See of an Archbiſhop, but for ſome Ages over-run with Mahometaniſm, and recover'd by the Imperialiſts in the Year 1686.

Bath Monſter, which gives Name to the County ſtands near the Danube, 25 miles South-eaſt from Colocz. Bodrock which gives Name to another County ſtands alſo on the Danube 25 miles below Bath.

Segedin, or Seged, the principal Town of the County of Bodrock is Seated on the River Teyſſe, or Tibiſcus, over-againſt the Mouth of the Merſich, 55 miles from Colocz to the South-eaſt, and 60 from Belgrade to the North. It was taken by the Turks in 1552, and Recover'd by the Imperialiſts after the taking of Buda in 1686. This is the ſurtheſt Town on the Tibiſe Subject to the Emperor.

Gyula called Gywa by the Hungarians, is a ſtrong Town Seated on a Lake 30 miles North-eaſt from Segedin, and as many South from Great Waradin: It was taken by the Turks in 1566, but Recover'd by the reſt of Hungary in the late War.

Lippa ſtands on the South-ſide of the Marſch, 35 miles South-eaſt from Gyula. Being Situate in the County of Temeſwar, which was granted to the Turks by the Treaty of Carlowitz, it was by the ſame Article agreed to be diſmantled.

Cavanfes stands in the same Territory upon the River Temes, 50 miles East from Temeswar, also dismantled by the same Treaty.

The Iron-Gate mention'd in the History of the late War, stands on the Frontier of Transylvania and Walachia, 30 miles East from Cavanfes.

Temeswar being surrender'd to the Turks, we shall speak of that in our Account of their Countries.

Waradin, commonly call'd Great Waradin, is Seated on the River Kerec, in the Confines of Transylvania, to which it sometime belonged, 60 miles from Segedin to the North-east, and 50 miles from Zolnock to the East. It is the See of a Bishop, and a Place of great Strength, being Fortified with a strong Castle on the East-side, and firm Ramparts, besides Five Royal Bastions, and a Regular Ditch Supply'd by Water from the Rivers: And within is another Enclosure consisting of some Bastions, and a High Wall to serve as it were for a Citadel. In the Year 1290 K. Ladislaus III. built the Cathedral Church: And in 1642, the City was taken by the Crim Tartars, but quitted soon after: In 1662, it submitted to the Turks, but was recover'd by the Imperialists after a Memorable Siege and Blockade in 1692.

Zolnock, the Capital of a County to which it gives Name, stands at the Confluence of the River Zegwa with the Teyffe, 60 miles above Segedin to the North, and in the Midway between Great Waradin to the West, and Buda to the East about 50 miles from both. The Two Rivers almost surround it, and make it a convenient place for a Garrison, being also large enough to receive 4000 Men, and very well Fortified. Nevertheless this strong Hold was shamefully quitted by a Garrison of 850 Men in the Year 1552. when the Turks had Besieged it but Three days, notwithstanding the Governor's Courage and Resolution to Hold out to extremity; who being taken in the Castle was civilly Treated, and at his Request the Garrison was pursued, and all cut to pieces by the Turks. It continued in their Hands till the Year 1635. when it was recover'd by the Imperialists.

Debreczen stands 40 miles East from Zolnock towards Transylvania, and is notable for an Illustrious School, or small University Establish'd in it.

Zatmar, a small but well Fortified Town in the Mountains towards Poland and Transylvania, 50 miles North from Waradin, as many East from Tockay, and about 40 South-west from the Head of the River Teyffe. It is surrounded by the River Samafeh, and is a Hold of great Strength taken by Count Tockely in the Year 1680, and afterwards Regain'd by the Imperialists. It is the chief of a Territory lately made a County under the Emperor's Jurisdictions.

Montgarz, or Munkatz, stands a little beyond the River Teyffe, towards the Frontiers of Poland, 40 miles East from the Head of that River, 30 North from Zatmar, 50 South-east from Eperies. It is a Fortrefs of impregnable Strength, built on a Steep Rock, and consists of Three Castle one above another, the First commanding the Second, and the Second the Third, each encompass'd with a Trench cut in the Rock, and the whole surrounded with a Morass. The Town stands at the bottom of the Rock in the County of Pereczas. This Place was for a long time defended by the Princess Ragotsky, Wife to Count Tockely, against a very considerable Army, that were oblig'd to raise the Siege; but continuing a Blockade for some Years, she was at last forced to surrender in the Year 1683.

Ungwar, or Ungbuar, Seated on the River Ungb, near the Frontiers of that part of Poland, Nam'd Red-Russia, 20 miles North-west from Mngatz, 40 East from Eperies, and 90 North-east from Zolnock, is by some Authots affirm'd to give Name to the whole Kingdom, altho' at present it be not considerable except for its Strength, and Commodious Situation at the Foot of the Karpash Mountains. It is the chief of a County; and being in the possession of Count Tockely, he Lodged his Treasures and best Goods in it, till it was taken by the Imperialists in 1685.

Tockay, a very strong Town and Citadel, is Seated on a Marshy Plain at the Confluence of the Teyffe, and the Bodrach, 40 miles South from Ungwar, 50 North from Zolnock, and 30 East from Agria. It is the chief Town of the County denominated from Zemlin, which stands 20 miles North of it, and is Noted for its good Wine. Count Tockely seized it in 1683. but the Imperialists recover'd it in 1685. Near this place is found a sort of Earth call'd Bolis Tockaviensis much esteem'd for its Medicinal Virtue.

These are the Places of chiefest Note in Upper Hungary.

In Lower Hungary, are

BUDA, Buda aut. Aquineum, call'd Offen by the Inhabitants, and Buden by the Turks Anciently and still reckon'd the Capital of the Kingdom, took its Name probably from Buda King Atilla's Brother it's Restorer, or according to others from the Budini, a Scythian People mention'd by Herodotus. It is Seated on a Hill on the South-Bank of the River Danube over-against Pesth, 90 miles from Presburg to the South-east, 100 Miles from Esseck to the North-west. It is a large City, Rich, Populous, and very strongly Fortified; it was very much Enlarg'd, and Adorn'd with publick Edifices by Sigismund K. of Hungary, who was Crown'd in 1387. and among others he built the Castle, which is very strong, and was afterwards the Seat of the Kings, it stands on the Top of the Hill, and commands the Town, and is surrounded by a deep Ditch, divers old Towers, and some Modern Ramparts. The City lies on the Declivity of the Hill, and the Suburbs call'd Wasterland, beyond it towards the Danube, over which you pass by a very fair Bridge of Boats to Pest. The many Sumptuous Buildings that were formerly seen in this City, are all fallen to decay during the time the Turks Possess'd it: For in the Year 1526. Solyman II. took this City; but Ferdinand Archduke of Austria recover'd it the next Year. In 1529 the same Solyman took it a second time, after the Garrison had endured Eleven General Assaults. Again in 1541, it was attack'd by Ferdinand, but by Solyman again Reliev'd, and the Siege Raised. The Archduke Matthias attempted to Besiege it in 1593, and 1601. But both these Enterprizes proved ineffectual. At length the late most Valiant Prince Charles Duke of Lorraine, set down before this City in 1684, but could not then effect what he afterwards accomplish'd: For in the Year 1686, after a Memorable Siege of Ten Weeks continuance, he recover'd this important Place to Christian Obedience, being taken by Assault on the 15 June 1686. The Baths of Buda are reputed the Noblest in Europe, not only on Account of the plentiful Hot-Springs, but also for the Magnificence of their Buildings. They are Eight in Number, being appointed for Men in the Morning, and Women in the Afternoon: The chiefest of them is that of Veleby, having a strong sulphurous Smell and petrifying Juice; but it is so intensely Hot, that to make it tolerable a mixture of Cold Water is usually thrown in.

GRAN, Strigonium, stands on the South Bank of the Danube, 30 miles above Buda, 60 South-East from Presburg, over against Barchan, which stands at the Mouth of the River Gran. It is a very considerable City, formerly the Seat of the Kings, and at present the See of an Archbishop who is Primate of the Kingdom, Chancellor and President of the Royal Council: And adorn'd with many magnificent Buildings, whereof the Cathedral Church dedicated to St. Stephen, the Archbishop's Palace and the Cattle are the most considerable: Here are also two large Towers, one towards Thonesburg, and the other facing the River towards Barchan; these are joined by a Wall, fortified with divers Redoubts and a Ditch flank'd with hewn Stone, besides a Terrass, environ'd with strong Palisado's, and 4 great Points like Ravelins. The whole is divided into two Parts, the upper standing on the side of a Hill, and the lower along the Banks of the Danube, and fenced with a strong Fort built on the Hill of St. Thomas, so that an Enemy has in a manner three different Towns to take before he can be Master of Gran. But notwithstanding this Strength it was taken by Solyman II. in the Year 1543. and in vain Besieg'd by Matthias Arch-Duke of Austria with 50000 Men in 1574. Afterwards the Imperialists again set down before it in 1595. and their General Count Mansfield routed the Turkish Army; but he dying soon after, the Siege was continued by the Arch-Duke with great Vigour, and the City at last taken. In this Siege Sir Tho. Arundel of Wardour-Castle in Wiltshire signaliz'd great Valour, he storm'd the Water-Tower, and pull'd down the Turkish Banner; for which Service and his continual Bravery during the whole Siege, the Emperor Rodolphus created him a Count of the Empire, and King James I. made him a Baron of England; which Honours his Posterity still enjoy. Afterwards the Turks under Mahomet III. retook it in the Year 1606. and possess'd it till the late War, when in Year 1683. after the Defeat of the Turkish Army before Vienna, the Imperialists recover'd it, and defended it against the Turks, who again attack'd it in 1685. but were entirely defeated by the Dukes of Lorraine and Bavaria. The adjacent Country is exceeding fruitful, affording great quantities of generous Wines.

Komorra, Comorra, Komara or Komora, is a very strong and populous Town, seated on the East-corner of the Island Schut on the Bank of the Danube, 40 miles East from Presburg, and 25 West from Gran: It is almost encompass'd with the Rivers Danube and Wiaq, and surrounded with a pleasant Champaign Country, over which from its Towers may be seen many Turkish Forts. It was first Fortified by King Matthias Corvinus, and became the chiefest Bulwark of Christendom against the Turks after the loss of Gran. And therefore a good Garrison was always there maintain'd, under a trusty Governor, of whom Baroa Braun testifies his Fidelity very signally, for after the taking of Raab in 1591. Simon Bassa besieg'd Comora with 60 Ships, and a large Army of Turks and Tartars, endeavouring at the same time to Corrupt the Governor; but he instead of accepting the Bribe, beheaded four of the five Turks sent to him on the Errand, and spared the 5th only to go back to his Master with the Answer, that he scorn'd his Offers: And in the end they were fain to raise the Siege. Since that time the Town hath been enlarg'd, and better strengthened with a Fort, call'd the Tortoise, and 4 Bastions.

Raab or Javarin, a small City dignified with an Episcopal See, stands on the Southern Branch of the Danube, that makes the Island Schut, where it receives the River Raab, 20 miles South from Komorra, 40 South-east from Presburg, and 30 West from Gran. It is a strong Town, being Fortified with Seven Large Bastions, and Four Cavaliers, or High Mounds overlooking them. The Country round it is Champion, and nothing can command it but a Neighbouring Hill, which is undermined, and may be blown up at pleasure: Somewhat farther in the open Field stands a Watch-Tower; from hence an Enemy's Approach may be seen at a distance. Sinan Bassa Besieg'd this City, and at one Attack lost 12000 Men before it: But at last it fell into their Hands, by the Treachery of Count Hardeck its Governor, for which he was Beheaded at Vienna; and was surpriz'd by Stratagem in the Year 1606, by Count Swartzzenburg Governor of Comorra, and so Recover'd, and ever since Remain'd in the Emperor's Possession. The Famous General Mentecuculi was Governor of this Town, and used to Reside here when his leisure permitted.

Altenburg, Ovaria, call'd Owar by the Hungarians, is a very strong Town and Fortrefs, Seated on the Danube, where it receives the Leytha, by which Rivers it is surrounded, over-against the West-End of the Island Schut, and 20 miles South from Presburg. It is Esteem'd the best Fence the Austrians have on this side, and is a considerable Out-work to Vienna, from which it is distant 50 miles to the East.

Alba Regalis, Stuhl Weissenberg, called Stolin-Biograd, by the Sclavonians, and Ekekeis Feierwa by the Hungarians, stands in the midst of an inaccessible Marsh on the Banks of the River Zarwiza near the Lake Balaton, whence that River issues, in the middle between the Danube and the Drave, 40 miles South from Gran, as many South-west from Buda, and 80 South-east from Presburg. It is well Fortified with Three Bastions, and Two other Works on one side, the other being sufficiently cover'd with the Morass, and joyned to the firm Land by Three Causeways. It was heretofore Famous for the Coronation and Interment of the Kings of Hungary, till it was taken by the Turks 1543. From whence it was recover'd by the Duke of Mercœur in 1602. But they took it again the year following, and kept it till the year 1688. when it was Regain'd by the Imperialists.

Vesprin, or Weisburn, the Capital of a County, and the See of a Bishop, stands near the Lake Balaton, 15 miles from Alba Regalis, and 55 from Buda to the West. This City was taken by the the Turks in 1593, but afterwards Recover'd, and now Subject to the Emperor.

Canisa, or Kanischa, is one of the strongest Holds in these Parts, Seated on the River Sala, which a little below falls into the Drave about 20 miles West from the Lake Baletton, 6 South-west from Alba Regalis, and near 100 South from Presburg. It fell into the Hands of the Turks in the Year 1600. and in the following Year the Archduke of Austria endeavour'd to Regain it; but after a Siege of Two Months he was fain to quit it. In 1604. Count Serini laid Siege to it, and had carried it if timely Succours had been sent him. In the late War it was block'd up by an Army of 8000 under Count de Budiani from the 30 July 1688, till Apr. 1690. when at last it was surrender'd with this Expression from the Turkish Officer, I here resign you the strongest Fortress in the Ottoman Empire.

Sigetb, or Zygetb, is Seated in a Morass near the River Alme, which 20 miles below falls into the Drave, 44 miles from Alba Regalis, to the South, 64 from Canisa to the East, and 74 from Buda to the South-west. It is a strong Town being Fortified with a well-built Castle besides Three Walls, and as many Ditches. It was taken by the Turks in the Year 1566. after a Siege of Two Months, notwithstanding the brave Defence of Nicolas Esdrin its Governor, who perished with his Guard of 200 Men in Encountering the whole Body of Ottoman Forces: During this Siege Solyman II. died in the Camp. In the Year 1688. the Imperialists recover'd this Important Fortress, and found 85 Pieces of Cannon in it. There is another Town of this Name in Transilvania near the Spring-Head of the River Teyffe or Tibiscus.

Five Churches, or Funff-Kirken, Quinque Ecclesie, takes its Name from Five Fair Christian Churches in the Town, it stands on the River Keoritz 12 miles from the Drave, 30 miles East from Sigetb, 50 West from Esseck, and 70 South from Buda; some Authors make this the Teuroburgium of Antoninus; but others with more probability fix that Old Roman Fort at Erdwy, a Hamlet on the Mouth of the Drave. It is not a place of equal strength with those we have been mentioning. It was burnt by Count Serini in the former War, in his Return from Esseck, and in the late War in the Year 1686, it was taken by surprize by Prince Lewis of Baden. St. Stephen King of Hungary, made this City a Bishop's See.

Mobatz, a small Town Seated near the Danube, between the Rivers Zarwiza, and the Drave 30 miles South from Celocza, 25 North-west from Esseck, and 35 East from Five Churches, chiefly memorable for Two Battels fought near it: The first between Solyman the Magnificent, and Lewis or Lodowick II. King of Hungary. Wherein this Prince being in the Heat of his Youth, Adventur'd with an Army of 20000 Men to Engage the Army of 300000 Turks, by whom he was over-power'd, many of the Nobility kill'd, and himself in endeavouring to Escape, Rode into a Bog; where thro' the Weight of his Armour, he perished in the 20th Year of his Age. The Consequence of this Battel was very Fatal; for the Turks pursuing their Blow slew 200000 Hungarians, and got such Footing in the Countrey, that they could never be remov'd, till the late happy War, whereby all Hungary was regain'd. The Second Battel was almost as fortunate on the Christian side; for on the 29th of July 1687. the Prime Visier pass'd the Drave at Esseck, with design to attack the Christian Army under the Duke of Lorraine; accordingly on the 12th of August the Battel was Fought, wherein the Turks were entirely Defeated with the loss of 12000 Men, all the Tents, Baggage, Treasure, and 100 Pieces of Ordnance, 12 Mortars, with Ammunition and Provisions proportionate.

TRANSILVANIA.

TRANSILVANIA, call'd Erdely by the Hungarians, and Siebenburgen by the Germans, derives both its Latin and Hungarian Names from Woods and Forests, with which it is encompass'd, almost on all sides; but the High-Dutch Denomination hath a different Original of much later Date, taken from the 7 chief Towns in this Principality, and alluding to the manner of Living of the ancient Pannonians, who having fix'd their Tents in those Parts, for the more ready suppressing of any Insurrection that might be rais'd against them by the Natives, were wont to keep in distinct Bodies, and accordingly divided themselves into 7 Bands or Regiments, every one of which contain'd 3857 able Soldiers. Thus being encamp'd in several quarters of Transilvania, they made Entrenchments round about, and for their better Security built a Fortrefs or Castle at every Camp, which first occasion'd the alteration of the Name of this Country; Siebenburgen in the German Tongue, signifying 7 Forts or Towns. It was added to the Roman Empire under the Name of Dacia, by the Emperor Trajan, and contain'd in compass about 1000 Italian miles, according to the Report of Eutropius and Zornandes; but at present nothing more is comprehended under the Name of Transilvania than only a part of the Old Walachia, lying in form of a Rhomb or Lozenge, and being bounded on the North by Poland, on the South by Walachia proper, and part of Hungary, on the East by Moldavia, and part of the same Walachia, and on the West by Upper Hungary: It's extent from North to South, consisting of about 50 Leagues, and 68 from East to West. The AIR is altogether as temperate here as in any part of Hungary, and not so much corrupted with Infectious Vapors, altho the Waters are Unwholsom, by reason that they pass through Mines of Alum and Mercury. The Country (as the Name imports) is every where environ'd with Forests, growing for the most Part on the Sides of high Hills and Mountains. The chief of these is Mount Carpathus, nam'd Crapack by the Transilvianians, and Biescid by the Russians, which runs along the North of the whole Principality, dividing it from the Russian Empire; and indeed the Inlands are almost as Mountainous as the Limits, insomuch that one can hardly Travel from one great Town to another, but by a Road, leading through a Wood, and over some rocky Hill. The highest inland Mountain stands near Fogaras, on the River Alt, its Top being inaccessible and always cover'd with Snow: However the SOIL brings forth abundance of Corn, Pulse, and delicious Fruits; affording likewise good Grapes, Hony and Wax, together with several Mines of Gold, Silver, Lead, Quick-silver and other Minerals. The chief Mines are at Sculatti and Rimili Dominuratz, in the latter whereof the Miners have sometimes found large lumps of Virgin-Gold, and sent them to the Mint without any further Purifying. The best Silver Mines are near Offera and Radna, where they have also good store of Copper, and accidentally light on a Vein of Gold. In the Copper-Mines they usually meet with Brimstone and Icing-Glafs, as also plenty of Steel at Cyck, and of Iron at Thorosch and Huniad. Lastly, the County of Maromarus affords vast quantities of Stone-Salt, even so far as to supply the greater part of the Neighbouring Nations with that Mineral. The Pasture Grounds yield Fodder to innumerable Herds of Cattle, more especially large Oxen, with which the Transilvianians, in time of Peace, are so over stock'd, that a fat Ox may be then bought for 12 or 14 Shillings, and sold again for 50 or 60 Rix-Dollars in Austria. They have also a good Breed of stout and swift Horses, that are very much esteem'd in Foreign Countries. The Forests abound with Buffles, Elks, Stags, and a sort of wild Horses that run incredibly swift, and have large Mains hanging down to the Ground, wild Boars, Foxes, Martins and other sorts of Game. The Hares are much larger here than in the Western parts of Europe, and their Skins carry a far purer Furr. The Wolves and Bears in Altland, and other adjacent Counties, run often in Droves, viz. 30. or 40 together, and do much Michief, during the Winter, among the Horse and other Cattle. There is no Nation in the World where Wheat grows more plentifully than in Transilvania, so that even the Peasants feed on no other sort of Bread, the Blade of this Grain being here usually as thick as an ordinary Reed, and shooting up to a great height. Their Wines are reckon'd much more noble than those of Walachia, the Windisch Marquitate, Austria and Moravia, but far inferior to the Rhenish and Hungarian, having commonly a Tincture of Chalk or Sulphur; for which Reason it is reputed a mighty promoter of the Gout, and such like Distempers. The most remarkable Rivers are, the Marisk, the Alt, the Samos and the Chrysa: The 2 former of these Spring forth out of the Scythian Carpathus; the Alt falls into the Danube, but the Marisk and Samos intermix their Waters with those of the Teisse.

The Principality of Transilvania is Inhabited by three sorts of People, that have different Laws and Customs, viz. The Ciculi or Siculi, the Saxons and the Hungarians. Of these the first lay claim to the greatest Antiquity, and are still Govern'd by their old Laws and Constitutions, being really a Branch of the ancient Scythians, who were driven driven out of Pannonia, by Attila and his Huns. They divide themselves into seven Cantons, every one of which is Absolute with in it self: Tho' all of them are united with the Transilvians, and one with another for the defence of their Country against the Common Enemy. As for the Saxons (according to the Opinion of Toppeline) they are the true Relicts of the Ancient Daci; calling themselves even at this day Decen Defen, or Desfchen, which is an easie Corruption of the Daci or Deci. The German Writers, especially those of the best Repute, acknowledge the whole German Nation (and consequently their Saxons) to be the Off-spring of the ancient Transilvians. But whence soever their Original is deriv'd, they are certainly near of Kin to the Inhabitants of the Lower Saxony, and use the same Dialect, altho' the corruption of their Tongue, by a mixture with the Hungarian, renders the High-Dutch more difficult to be understood among them. Those Saxons possess the Province call'd the Seven Towns: The Siculi dwell on the Banks of the River Marisk; and the Hungarians possess the Frontiers of Walachia; the two latter are for the most part Calvinists, and the Saxons almost generally embrace the Doctrine of Luther, but none will allow any Pictures or Images to be set up in their Churches. There are also among them some Roman Catholics, Greeks, Trinitarians, Phorinians and Anabaptists, tho' their Party is not so considerable.

However, these three distinct Nations are Govern'd by one Sovereign, sited the Waywood, or Prince of Transilvania, whom the Grand Signior often caus'd to be Elected and Depos'd at his pleasure. But the Power of the Turks is now expell'd. The two Noble Families of Bathori and Ragotski, have supplied this Country with many Princes, who were oblig'd to send a certain Tribute to the Port, until Michael Abasti the 23d. Prince from John Huniades, who succeeded John Kermant, A. D. 1661. with the consent of the States of Transilvania, resign'd the whole Country to the Emperor of Germany and King of Hungary for ever, as it appears from the Act bearing Date at Hermanstadt, May 9. 1688. Whereupon Imperial Garisons were accordingly receiv'd into all the principal Places. Afterward, the said Prince dying in 1690. the States in a general Assembly, resolv'd to adhere to the Interests of the Emperor and the young Prince Son to the Deceased, who was confirm'd by his Imperial Majesty, against all the Pretentions of Count Teckely and the Ottoman Port. Thus the Principality of Transilvania remains entirely Incorporated with the Crown of Hungary, under the Imperial Protection. Its chief Revenues arise from the Sale of Salt, very great quantities whereof are made at Tarda, and convey'd from thence on the River Marisch, into Hungary. And the first Article of the Treaty of Peace between the Emperor and the Turk, at Carlowitz, declares that Transilvania shall remain entire to his Imperial Majesty, with the ancient Limits as before the War. The chief Towns here are,

Hermanstadt, Hermanopolis, or Cilinium, call'd Zeben by the Inhabitants, the Metropolis of Transilvania, and the Royal Seat of the Prince, stands in the middle of a large Plain, on the side of the Rivulet Ciben, which a little below falls into the Alt, being distant 60 miles from Culofwar or Clausenburg to the East, and 32 from Gula Feiruar, or Weissenburg, toward the Frontiers of Moldavia; as also 300 from Belgrade to the North-east. It is a large and fair City, bearing the Title of an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Colozza in Hungary, altho' at present destitute of a Bishop; neither is its Strength less considerable, the great Number of Fish-ponds and Pools of Water rendering it inaccessible, besides its firm Walls and Ramparts. The Houses within the Gates are generally well-built, and for the most part cover'd with Slate, which is esteem'd an extraordinary piece of Magnificence in the Apartments of a Transilvian Citizen. There are also many good Springs; and the River-water is convey'd by small Channels through every Street; nevertheless the Air is thought to be very Unhealthy, and to cause the Gout, the epidemical Diltemper of the Burghers, insomuch, that many of the best Houses want Inhabitants. Here are usually held the General Conventions and Courts of Judicature of the other 6 chief Towns of the Saxons, all Actions at Law being brought thither to Tryal. The principal Trade of the Place consists in Cloth and Mead, both which are here made in great quantities and sent into the Neighbouring Territories. The Princes of Transilvania were wont formerly to put themselves under the Protection of the Grand Signior; but Prince Abasti at the solicitation of the late Duke of Lorraine adher'd to the Emperor's Interest, and was prevail'd with to receive an Imperial Garison of 3000 Men into this City, A. D. 1687.

Having Travell'd about a German mile from Hermanstadt, we meet with Salzrburg, or Wizagva, that takes its Name from the Salt-pits, which (as it hath been already intimated) bring yearly a very considerable Revenue into the Prince's Exchequer. Not far from hence appears Michelberg, a strong Fortrefs erected on the top of a Hill, wherein are laid up all the Arms and Military Ammunition of the whole Territory of Hermanstadt. Two miles from this place stands Roche-Thurn, or the Red-Tower, so Nam'd from the Colour of the Free-stone with which it is built, where the Inhabitants are forc'd to keep a continual Watch and Ward, for fear of some sudden invasion by the Turks, out of whose Dominions there lies only a very narrow Road this way into Transilvania.

Cronstadt or Brassaw, Corona or Stephanopolis and Brassovia, is pleasantly situated in the midst of fair and rich Vineyards, about 65 miles from Hermanstadt, almost to the North-east, near the Confines of Moldavia and the Carpathian Mountains. It is also taken by some Authors for the Pretoria Augusta of Ptolemy. However it is a Bishop's See, and a place of some strength, as being tolerably well Fortified with Walls and Ramparts of Earth. The Houses are high and well-built, but generally cover'd with Laths instead of Slate. The Citizens are all Saxons, without the least mixture of Hungarians or Walachians; so that their peculiar Language is here spoken in its greatest Purity. A good School hath been Founded here for some time, besides a Library, that goes beyond any throughout the whole Kingdom of Hungary.

The Country round about Cronstadt, bears the Name of Burzia, or Burkland, and is the outmost boundary of the Principality of Transilvania, which gave occasion to the Hungarian Proverb, That Burzia says Amen to the High-Dutch Pater-noster: Meaning, that this Country is the last wherein the German Tongue is understood, the Sclavonian entering on the Frontiers of Walachia. Moreover, it may not be improper to observe here, that the Road from Altland and other parts of Transilvania, leads directly to Zeidenwald, a Forest extending for the space of 10 miles in length; during which unpleasant Passage, Travellers are carried over a continued Bridge or Causey of Planks, the Soil being for the most part Marly and full of Bogs.

Bistricz, Besterca, or Besteriza, Bisfrica; sometimes also call'd Nesensadt, by the Germans, is remarkable for its situation in a spacious Plain, on the Banks of a River of its own Name. It is a Town of small extent, but very near, and of so good Note, that many of the Hungarian Historiographers allow it the third place in the Catalogue of the Saxon Cities, giving it the precedence to Segeswar and Megiez. The Burghers (as it is generally reported) speak as good Dutch here or better than at Cronstadt. But the Air and Water of the adjacent Country are both reputed very Unwholsome; so that the Inhabitants, especially the meaner sort, that drink Water, are very apt to be Deaf, Dumb, and very Unactive. This Town is distant about 80 miles from Hermanstadt to the North-west, as also 20 from Burgles, and 60 from Weissenburg to the North.

Megiez or Medwesch is seated in the very heart of Transilvania, on the Banks of the same River with Segeswar, in a Country well furnish'd with Wine and other rich Merchandizes. Indeed it is not very large, yet indifferently well fortify'd with a deep Ditch and an old Wall. But its greatest Strength lies in the Church founded on the top of a Hill, according to the usual custom of the Inhabitants of those parts, who built their Churches Castle-wise, to avoid being put to a double Charge.

Schesburg, or Segeswar, (as it is Nam'd by the Hungarians) Segetbusa, extends it self along the side of a Hill and the Banks of the River Cochel, at the foot of the Carpathian Mountains, about 10 miles from Hermanstadt to the North, and 14 from Cronstadt to the West. As to its Form, it very much resembles Buda, but falls far short of that City in its largeness and number of Inhabitants. It is divided into two parts, viz. the Upper and Lower, the former being built on a Hill and a place of great Strength; but the latter is not well defended, tho' more Populously reason of the convenience of Water for the use of the Burghers for carrying on their several Manufactures; more especially that of dressing their Cloth, whereas the other part of the Town is destitute of any Brook or Spring.

Milembach, or Zaassches according to the Hungarian denomination, or Zabefus aut Sabefus, is a Town of much Antiquity, but otherwise scarcely considerable, lying on a very hollow Valley, and Westward tolerably well secur'd with Bogs and Moorish Grounds. But it may be easily attack'd on the other side, and is by no means a place of Strength.

Clausenburg, Claudiopolis, is situated on the Rivulet Samos near the foot of the Mountains towards the Borders of Hungary, at the distance of 36 miles from Weissenburg to the North, as many from Besterca or Bistricz, and 60 from Waradin to the East. It is a large Populous Town, and the principal of a County of the same Name, being Fortify'd with an old Castle and other Bulwarks, so as to be capable of enduring a smart Siege; as it did in the year 1661, when Abasi Prince of Transilvania, joyning with a Body of Turks, laid Siege to it; it being at that time Govern'd by David Retani, a valiant and faithful Souldier, who notwithstanding ing the Town was but indifferently Fortify'd, and very ill provided with Cannon and Ammunition (inso much that he was forc'd to Found Artillery out of the Town Bells) bravely Sally'd out upon the Enemy, and was very successful, till General Schedinaw who was then in Hungary, getting together about 6000 Men, came to his Relief; upon the News of which, the Turks thought fit to raise the Siege, and make the best use they could of their Heels, leaving great quantities of Victuals and Provision behind them. It is also a place of great Traffick, and well frequented by reason that all the Conventions of the States of Transilvania and Provincial Courts of Justice are held therein by the Prince. It heretofore perhaps bore the Name of Patruissa, but is at present call'd Colswar by the Hungarians. The greatest part of the Towns-men are Arians and Photinians, inso much that the other six Towns (where Lutheranism is generally profess'd) took an occasion to exclude Clausenburg out of the number of the seven States of Transilvanian-Saxons, and to admit Bros or Zasuaras into it's room. Moreover, the Hungarians may be made free of this Town, and are allow'd to bear Offices therein; a Priviledge never granted them in any other Saxon City.

There are divers other small Towns and Burghs in Transilvania entirely Inhabited by the Saxons, but all of them by some means or other, depend on the seven preceding.

The chief Towns in Transilvania Inhabited by the Hungarians, Walachians, Siculi, &c.

Weissenburg, Alba Julia, call'd by the Hungarians, Giula Fejerwar, is conveniently situated on a rising Ground, from whence, almost 2 miles round about, one may take a most delightful Prospect of a champain and fruitful Country. It is water'd with the gentle Streams of the River Marisk, and was in times past much larger than it is at present; as may still be discern'd from its old Boundaries without the Walls, containing 5 miles in compass. And it continu'd for a long time the Metropolis of Dacia, being honour'd with the Royal Palace and constant Residence of the Monarchs of that Kingdom. It was also formerly a Bishop's See under the Metropolitan of Colocza, but that Dignity was transferr'd elsewhere by Queen Isabel, the Widow of John I. King of Hungary. This City is distant 34 miles from Hermanstadt to the West, 68 from Temeswar to the North-east, 90 from Waradin to the East, and 196 from Buda. The ancient Inscriptions and Characters, upon Tombs and Tables, that are found in and about this Place, do plainly show that the Goths anciently Inhabited this Country. And the Coins and Medals that are found in it, are an evident Proof that the Roman Legions were once here: It ow's its Name of Alba Julia to Julia Augusta the Mother of Marcus Aurelius Antonianus Prius, as appears from an old Inscription upon a Marble Table in the Church of St. Michael, which is this,

I. O. M. E. Junoni.

Pro Salute Imp. M. Aur. Antonii Pii Aug. & Juliae Aug. Matris Aug. M. Ulpius. Mucianus, Mil. Leg. XIII. Gem. Horologiarum Templum a Solo de suorum voto fecit, Falcone & Claro. Cof.

Thorda

Thorda is suppos'd to stand in or near the same place with the Salin of Ptolomy, which Town took its Name from the great number of Salt-Pits in the adjacent Territory.

Deva, a Town chiefly noted for affording a sort of excellent Wine, and guarding the Passage thro' the Eysenbor, in the Turkish Dominions. It was taken after a small Resistance by Michael Abafsi late Prince of Transylvania, during the Wars maintain'd by him against his Competitor Kemeni Janos, A. D. 1662.

Enguedine, call'd Annius by the Romans, from a Causey leading towards it, which one Annius a Captain of one of their Cohorts had caus'd to be rais'd. Some Fragments of this ancient military Way are yet to be seen, besides other Monuments of Antiquity often found in and about this Town.

Newmark, Nova Marchia, or Waser-Heley according to the Hungarian denomination, is seated on the River Marisch at the foot of the Carpathian Mountains, 36 miles from Clausenber or Cotofwar to the North-East. In this Town the general Assemblies of the Siculi, are usually conven'd at certain appointed times.

Agnabat or Agnettin, is one of the chief Towns of Transylvania, though of little Strength, and water'd by the River Herbach, 25 miles from Hermanstadt almost to the North. Queen Isabel assembled a Diet there for the Preservation of her Son, but Marvinusius caus'd it to be dissolv'd, and levy'd War against his Sovereign Prince, the end of which prov'd fatal to both.

PROVINCES recover'd from the Turks, viz. SCLAVONIA, CROATIA and MORLACHIA.

The Province of SCLAVONIA lies on the South-West of Hungary between the two Rivers Drave and Save, having the Danube for its Eastern and Stiria for its Western Bounds, comprehending in extent from East to West, according to Cluverius, 50 German Leagues (or 200 English miles) and in Breadth 12 Germ. Leagues (or 48 Eng. mil.) it is part of the ancient Pannonia, and took its present Name from the Sclavi a Northern Nation, who came from Scythia about the time of the Emperor Justinian, and over-run Greece and the neighbouring Countries, as well as Poland and Moravia. And on their account in those times, all the ancient Illyricum also (which comprehended Croatia, Bosnia and Dalmatia) bore the Name of Sclavonia. Their Force was first broken by the Venetians who conquer'd this Country, and to keep the Natives under, oblig'd them to submit to the most servile Employments which their robust, strong Bodies, made them fit for; and some Etymologists pretend that the word Slave came from these People thus subjected. They were undoubtedly in former times a very considerable Nation, as is demonstrated by the Extent of their Language, which is one of the four original ones of Europe, and is spoken by the Poles, Russes, Hungarians, and many other Nations: Dr. Heylin reckons up twelve, but Gesner says no less than 60 Nations speak the Sclavonian Language. By divers Revolutions the Country became at last tributary to the Hungarians, from whom it was taken by the Turks; Solyman the Magnificent invading this Province in 1540.

and reduc'd it to his Subjection, under which it remained till the late War, when in the year 1687. after the defeat of the Ottoman Forces at Mohatz, they murinied against the Grand Visier, which oblig'd the Turks to Desert it, and so the whole Territory, except Gradsca, submitted to the Emperor; and by the late Treaty at Carlowitz the greatest part of the Province is for ever resign'd up by the Grand Seigneur to his Imperial Majesty.

The Air is temperate and the Soil fruitful, producing Corn, Cattle and Pasture. The People Robust and Warlike; those that Inhabit the Eastern Parts on the Banks of the Save as well as on this side as the Servian are called Ratzians, by which Name they are often mentioned in the History of the late War. Both the Greek and Roman Profession of Christianity is followed here, and the Papists are permitted to have Mass said in their own Language. The Division of the Province into Countries cannot exactly be set down; some divide it into seven, and others six, and others make but four. The Turkish Power has confounded that distinction, and 'tis sufficient to say these are principal Cities, viz.

POSSEGA, otherwise call'd Picentina, and Segovizza, the Metropolis of the Province and the Capital of a County to which it gives Name, lies in the middle of the Province with respect to East and West, and 15 miles North from the River Save, in the Lat. 45. 30. Long. 36. and is seated on the River Oriana, 50 miles from Five Churches to the South, and 120 from Belgrade to the West, in an exceeding fertile Country. It contains about 1000 Houses, and is surrounded with Walls and other Fortifications; and is a place of consequence on account of its Jurisdiction over 400 Villages, and its considerable Traffick. The Turks under Solyman took it in 1544. and retained it till the year 1687. when the Germans besieging it, the Turkish Governor made some shew of Resistance by firing some Canon, but soon deserted the Place, and left in it a great quantity of Ammunition and Provision, and 5 Pieces of Canon.

Walpo or Valpo, stands on a River of the same Name 35 miles North-East from Possega, and about 10 from the Drave, It was taken by the Turks in 1543. and retaken after a short Siege by General Dunewalt in 1687.

Esseck, a Place of much Antiquity, and suppos'd to be the ancient Mursa, which Conjecture is corroborated by part of an ancient Latin Inscription still to be seen on one side the Gate, wherein is read the Emperor Aelian's Name in fair Characters. It is a large and populous Town seated at the confluence of the Drave with the Danube, and is particularly remarkable on account of its famous Bridge which is five English miles long, and near 30 yards broad; the reason of its Length is because it not only lies over the River Drave which divides into Branches, but also passes over a large Morass. It consists of thick Oaken Planks supported by great Trees, nine or ten in a Rank between every Arch; It is railed on each side, and hath Watch-Towers at every quarter of a mile's distance; and is in the whole so noble a Work that it surprizes the Eye with the View of it, and the Imagination in considering whence that vast quantity of Timber could be fetch'd. By this Bridge the Turkish Forces used to march and invade the Christian Countries; wherefore in the former War, viz. A. 1664. Count Serini attacked and burnt burnt a great part of it; and in this late War, A. 1685. Count Lesly set Fire to it a second time, and took the Town, but the Castle holding out he blew up the Magazines and left it. The next year, the Turks having begun to Repair it, the Duke of Lorraine after the taking of Buda, marched this way and again destroyed what they had in many Months, by the Hands of 8000 Men, been raising. In the year 1687. the Turks deserted the Town, which the Imperialists took possession of and held it, notwithstanding the Attack made in 1690. by an Army of 15000 Turks. The Town is large and populous, well furnished with Shops and Caravanferas or Inns (as Sir P. Rycaut tells us) for accommodation of the Armies and great number of Travellers that pass through it. The Houses are of Wood, and the Streets instead of Paving, plank'd with Trees; which render'd it so liable to Fire, as to be almost entirely burnt down by accident in 1685. when Count Lesley was there. The Fortifications are not very strong notwithstanding the Cost and Pains the Turks have bestow'd on 'em. In History 'tis noted that Magnentius the Usurper and Murderer of Constantine II. was defeated by Constantius in the year 359. and Lewis II. the young King of Hungary was routed by Solyman II. near this place. Esseck is distant 80 miles from Possessa to the North-East, and 60 from Belgrade to the North-West.

Walcowar upon the River Walpo near its Mouth into the Danube, about 20 miles South from Esseck. And Iloek about 10 miles South-West from Walcowar and near the Banks of the Danube, have been both often mention'd in the History of the late War.

Peterwaradin, Acuminium aut Petro-Varadinum, seated on the Bank of the Danube 30 miles South-East from Esseck, in the Country of ancient Sirmium, hath been famous during the late War. The Turks made it a Head-Quarters after they had lost Buda, and kept a Bridge of Boats here over the Danube. It was often Taken and Retaken during the late War, and being dismantled in 1688, by the Imperialists, and afterwards burnt by the Turks, it was re-fortify'd by the Emperor in 1691. and made a place of great Strength.

Salankament stands 15 miles East from Peterwaradin, which is a Town of no great Note except for the Battle fought near it in the Year, 1691. between Prince Louis of Baden and the Grand Visier, wherein the former obtain'd a very signal Victory with the death of 25000 Turks, among which were the Grand Visier, the Seraskier, and many of the principal Officers; The Particulars whereof the Reader will find in Sir Paul Rycaut's late History of that War.

Carlowitz, famous for the late Treaty of Peace in the Year 1699. between the Emperor and his Confederates on one Part, and the Grand Seigneur on the other, stands near Salankament.

Semlyn in the Road to Belgrade, and on that account often mention'd, stands 12 miles East from Salankament, and about as far West from Belgrade.

Alt-Sirmium, Sirmium, or Sirmich, called Szwin by the Hungarians, the Capital of a County to which it gives Name, was heretofore the Metropolis of Pannonia Inferior, afterwards the Seat of the Præfectus Prætorii Illyrii, and hath been honour'd with the Personal Residence of many Emperors, and on that account the Scene of many Actions: Here Vetranio or Betanio was proclaimed Emperor by the Illyrian Soldiers at the death of Constantine the Great, but was deferred and soon obliged to submit to Constantius. In its Christian State it was the See of a Bishop, and honour'd with a Council wherein the Emperor Constantius was present, A. 356. An Arian Synod was also held here soon after; and the City was considerable till the Turks became Masters of it, who have so far alter'd its State, that modern Travellers tell us 'tis but a poor Village. It stands 25 miles South-West from Peterwaradin, 60 West from Belgrade, and not above 5 from the River Save.

From hence to Possessa, along the Banks of the Save, being subject to the Turks, no considerable Town is seen, only Bredt a small Town on the Save 15 miles South from Possessa, is remarkable for a Victory obtained over the Turks by Prince Lewis of Baden in 1688. Beyond Possessa to the West, stands Gradisca or Gradisk, seated on the Banks of the Save, about 30 miles from Possessa, a strong fortified Town, taken by the Imperialists under the Duke of Croy in the year, 1691.

Virovitiz or Wirobitiza a City guarded with a Castle, which was taken by Count Lesley in 1684. and thereby the Passage open'd to Esseck; stands near the Drave 50 miles North-West from Possessa.

Zagrab or Agram, seated near the River Save 100 miles West from Possessa, and about 12 from the Frontiers of Carniola, is the Capital of a County, and the See of a Bishop; 'tis divided by a small Rivulet into two Parts, one of which being nam'd Agram, has occasioned the whole Town to be sometime so called: It is adorn'd with a fair Cathedral; dedicated to St. Peter the first Christian King of Hungary, and strengthened with good Walls and other Fortifications, and is a populous City.

CROATIA and MORLACHIA.

This Country was part of the ancient Pannonia Superior, according to Ortelius and Cluverius, or part of Illyricum according to the late Oxford Maps. And after the declining of the Roman Empire was over-run by the Northern Barbarians, and in time became a considerable Kingdom: Which, according to Baudrand, extended from the River Drave to the Adriatick Sea, and was divided into three Parts, viz. 1. Croatia Savia or interamensis, which lay between the Drave and the Save [the present Sclavonia]. 2. Croatia propria, or the present Croatia, lying between the Save and the Mountains Rebins and Albins. The Third lay between those Mountains and the Adriatick Sea, which is the present Morlachia: And tho' that Monarchy be long since terminated, yet the Emperor of Germany still retains the Title of King of Croatia.

The present Boundaries of this Province are the River Save on the North, and Morlachia on the South, if Morlachia may be reckon'd a separate Country, and not rather a part of Croatia, as many Geographers do, and then the Adriatick Sea must be reckon'd the Southern Boundary. Bosnia lies on the East, and Carniola on the West; its utmost extent may be reckon'd about 80 miles either way. It is a fruitful Soil, producing Wine and Oyl as well as all Necessaries for Life. The People are called Croats, and by the Germans Krabaten, are valiant, hardy, and good Soldiers, especially the Horsemen, who are so noted that they are Entertained in most of the Courts in Germany as the Princes Horse-Guards. The Poor, called Ushokes, are exceeding swift, and run up the Mountains like Bucks.

The Chief Towns are,

In Croatia,	{	Carlstadt.	} In Morlachia,
		Sisseg.
		Petrinia.
		Castanovitz.
		Welay.
		Wibitz. } Turkish.
		Dubiça.
		Segna,
		Fablowitz.
		Ostrowina.
		Novigradt.

MORLACHIA, which was the ancient Liburania, lies on the South of Croatia on the Banks of the Adriatick Sea, about 90 miles in length, but not above 25 miles in breadth. The chief Towns are,

Segna or Zeng, seated on the Bay of Carnaro or Quarnaro, antiq. Planaticum, over against the Islands Vegia and Arbe, is the Metropolis of Morlachia, and an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Spalato, distant 45 miles from Carlstadt to the S. and 50 from Wibitz to the W. It is well Fortified as well as naturally strong, having vast Woods and craggy Mountains on the Land-side, and but a bad Haven on the Sea. This Place, being about the year 1539. in the possession of the Count de Frangipani, was claimed by Solyman II. as a dependence on Hungary, a great part whereof he had then subdu'd. Which made the Emperor Ferdinand take it under his Protection, and for its better Defence entertain'd the Ushokes, who practis'd Piracies upon the Coasts like our Bucaniers, sheltering themselves in the adjacent Rocks, Creeks and small Islands. These Ushokes became powerful in time, and so much annoyed the Turks, that it occasion'd a new War in 1592. between them and the Austrian Family. However, the Town continu'd still a Recepracle for those sort of People. Father Paul in his History of the Ushochi. tells us that in 1613. Segna was inhabited by three sorts of People, viz. the Casalini or Citizens, consisting in about 100 Families; the Stipenderii or listed Men being 200 under 4 Captains; and the Venturini, who were Renegado's out of Turky, Dalmatia, and Apulia; their whole number not amounting to above 2000, and yet they were wonderfully serviceable to the House of Austria; which made Arch-Duke Ferdinand take their part against the Venetians, who had been provok'd by their many Piracies, and endeavour'd to Roor them out; this occasion'd a War in 1615. wherein the Dutch taking part with the Venetians, the Arch-Duke was constrain'd the next Year to suppress this Nest of Pyrates, who were never heard of after.

Fablowitz, Ostrowina and Novigradt, ly 15, 20 and 25 miles East from Segna, but are not very considerable.

The Islands lying on the Coast of Morlachia, being subject to the Venetians, have been already spoken of in our Account of the Dominions of that State.

Carlstadt, seated on the River Marsnitza near the Frontiers of Carniola, and 20 miles South from the River Drave, the Capital of the Imperial Croatia, took its Name from Charles Arch-Duke of Austria, who first caus'd it to be Fortified, A. D. 1579. It is a strong Fortrefs, and always well furnished with a good Garrison and Stores, which is maintained by the Carniolans, to whom it is a Bulwark against the Turks.

Sisseg or Sisaken, mention'd by Pliny and Antoninus under the Name of Sisia, is seated on the Save 35 miles from Carlstadt to the East. It was famous for the stout Resistance it made against the Turks in 1593. when they besieged it and hoped to force a Passage this way into Germany; but the Inhabitants gallantly held out till some Dutch Regiments came up, and falling on the Turks totally defeated them with the Slaughter of 8000 of their Men.

Castanovitz is a strong Castle consisting of three Towers and a Wall according to the ancient manner of Fortification, near the River Wana or Unna, 34 miles from Gradisca to the West, and 40 from Carlstadt. It was taken from the Turks by Prince Lewis of Baden in 1688. Note, this River Unna is made the Boundary of the Turkish Dominion on this side, by the late Treaty of Peace. Accordingly,

Dubiça on the East-side the same River and near the Save, is subject to the Turk; as also Wibitz or Bighion, seated on the same River 40 miles S. from the Save, and near 50 South-E. from Carlstadt. It was formerly the Capital of Croatia till taken by the Turks in 1592. which was a mighty Loss; for this had been the Bulwark of Christendom for 150 years, and that Conquest open'd a Passage for the Turks to Slavonia, which they soon after over-ran.

Turkey in Europe.

THAT Part of Europe now Subject to the Turks, and by their Arbitrary Government, render'd in a great Measure depopulated, was formerly the most considerable of all this Continent, and hath been the Habitation of Nations that made the greatest Figure in Ancient History. The Valour, Wisdom, and Learning of the Ancient Grecians is known to all the World. Thrace, Messa, Dacia, Pannonia, and Illyricum, were for many Ages, the Seats of considerable Nations, and their Actions often remember'd in History. And these Parts were by much the most Cultivated and Populous of all Europe. But as Wealth begets Luxury and Pride, and those breed Effeminacy and Animosities; These People lost their Primitive Virtue, and by Wars for Superiority, were in time fo weaken'd, that they became a Prey, first to the Macedonians, and afterwards to the Romans; who made all these Countries Provinces of their Empire. But still so considerable was this Country, that Constantine the Great removed his Seat into Thrace, and the Succession of that Monarchy continued here, after it was Terminated in Italy. But as the Numerous Swarms of Goths and other Northern Nations, had over-run Spain and Italy; So the Huns, Goths, Sclavi, &c. as much infested the Eastern Empire in Europe, as the Sarazins did in Africa and Asia, insomuch that the latter Emperors had little more than the Title of that Dignity (their Dominions and Power being reduc'd to a small Compass) before the Turks attack'd them.

Mahomet, the great Prophet of the Turks, from whom the Origine of that Nation is deduc'd, came into the World soon after the Year of Christ, 600. He was by Profession a Merchant at Mecca in Arabia, Illiterate, but of a great Spirit and subtil Wit; and having acquir'd Wealth, set himself to Work to obtain Reputation, by pretending himself a Prophet; which he was at first tempted to by Fits of the Falling-sickness that he was subject to. These Fits he pretended to be Trances that he was cast into by God Almighty, and in them instructed in his Will; and by the assistance of a Sergeant Monk, he formed a Religion which consisted of Gentilism, Judaism, and Arian-Christianness blended together. For he Taught that Moses was a Prophet sent by God, whom the Gentiles having not Receiv'd, nor the Jews Obeyed, he had sent Jesus Christ the Second and Greater Prophet; but his Doctrin being not duly Receiv'd, God had now sent his Last and greatest Prophet Mahomet. By owning Moses and Jesus Christ, he gained the Jews and Arians; who being at that time profecuted by the Greek Emperors, fled in great Numbers to Arabia; and by his other Doctrins of Polygamy, and Promise of Sensual Delights after this Life, he gained all the Libertines of the Times. And that he might Erect an Earthly aswell as Spiritual Power, he enjoyed all his Votaries to propagate their Faith; and to those that lost their Life in that Service, an especial Promise of future Beatitude was made. These Doctrines pleased so well, that they spread far and near, and even in his own Lifetime Mahomet had the satisfaction to see his Religion Receiv'd, not only in Arabia, but also in Syria, Agypt, and a great part of Persia. And under the Name of Sarazens they made mighty Conquests in Asia, and elsewhere. In time they became a People distinct from the Sarazens, and under their own Princes from Tangrolipix (who began to Reign about 1050.) Conquer'd Syria, Persia, &c. but were stopp'd in their Career by the Tartars and Mammalukes, who suppress'd the Turkish Power from about the Year 1200. to near 1300. at which time Ottoman, a Man of Great Spirit and Active Parts, tho' by his Birth-right a Prince of but small Dominions, acquired a mighty Monarchy; for he succeeded in the Throne of Persia, and by his Arms Conquer'd Nice in Bithynia, and then invaded Europe, where the unhappy Divisions at that time on Foot gave him opportunity of having too much Success. In short, his Successors pursued the Work; and tho' for some time they were interrupted by the Invasion of the Tartars upon them, they never rested till Constantinople, and soon after all Greece, and the Neighbouring Provinces were subjected to them. That fatal Conquest happen'd A. D. 1453. Since which time Constantinople has always been the Seat of the Ottoman Empire. A particular Account of the Progress of their Arms would be too long to set down here, but the Reader will be able to gather it up, out of the Accounts we have given in the Description of these Countries.

The Present Boundaries of TURKEY in EUROPE, are the River Niester or Turla, and the Carpack Mountains, which divide it from Poland on the North; the Archipelago, the Gulf of Lepanto, and the Ionian Sea on the South; the Euxine or Black-Sea with the Thracian Bosphorus, and the Propontis on the East; and Transilvania, Hungaria, Sclavonia, and Croatia on the West, comprehending in the whole these Countries, viz.

GREECE, which is subdivided into Five Countries, viz. 1. Macedon, 2. Thessaly, 3. Achaia, 4. Epirus, 5. Albania.

To which must be added, (being always reckon'd part of Greece) tho' now not subject to the Turks. 6. The MOREA, or Peloponnesus.

The Provinces of ROMANIAA, BULGARIA, SERVIA, BOSNIA, and part of DALMATIA.

The Republick of RAGUSA, Tributary to the Turks.

CHAPTER II.

Of GREECE, hodie Rumelia.

GREECE is judg'd to have been the part of Europe first Inhabited, which its early flourishing State, together with its Neighbourhood to Asia, from whence we know all the Earth was Peopled, gave very good Grounds to believe. Ancient History is full of the Actions of the many Nations that Inhabited these Parts; and the Learned World is still indebted to the many Wise Philosophers of this Country, whose Writings continue to be most instructive to Mankind. To lay nothing of its Celebrated Historians, Orators and Poets; the Wisdom of its Lawgivers, the Valour of its Captains, and Morality of its Inhabitants are sufficiently known to every body that knows any thing of Antiquity: In short, Greece was anciently the most Celebrated Region of the Universe, surpassing all others in Arms, Arts and Science. It was for many Ages divided into many small Kingdoms and States, till Philip King of Macedon, and Alexander his Son reduc'd it all to his Subject: This Kingdom was afterwards pull'd down by the Romans, and Greece made a Province of the Empire, as it continued (but mangled by the Goths and Huns) till the Turks over run it these are its present Masters, and have effaced all its ancient and magnificent Monuments, as well as reduc'd the People to the most servile Slavery, and ignorant Stupidity.

The ancient Name of this Country was Hellas, which the Latins chang'd into Græcia, and the Turks now call Rumelia. But it must be remember'd that the ancient Hellas comprehended only that Province since nam'd Achaia and by the Turks is call'd Livadia; but that Name is often extended and made to mean the whole Country; which is Seated between the 36 and 43 Degree of Latitude, and between the 37 and 45 Degree of Longitude: Bounded on the North by Romania, Bulgaria and Servia whence it is divided by a Chain of Mountains, whose Eastern part was call'd Scordus by the Ancients; on the South the Morea is wash'd by the Mediterranean Sea; on the East the Archeipelago; and on the West the Adriatick Sea, or Gulph of Venice bounds it. Extending in length, from the Mountains above mention'd in the North, to Cape Caglia in the Morea, in the South, 100 German Leagues, according to Cluverius, which makes 400 English miles; and its utmost breadth he reckons to be 89 German Leagues, i. e. 356 miles.

The AIR is exceeding Temperate and Healthy; and the SOIL very Fruitful, abounding in Corn, Wine, delicious Fruits, and great Herds of Cattle, together with Foul and Venison in great plenty.

The CHRISTIAN RELIGION was plant'd in Greece, immediately after the Death of our Saviour by St. Paul and Timothy, and it flourished there for many Ages with more Purity than in the Western Church; Producing many Champions for the Faith, and venerable Fathers, whose Writings convey to us the Discipline and Doctrine of the Church in its Native Purity: Of which Religion there hath been a continu'd Succession to this time; but since the Turks have been Masters, and made the People Slaves, its State is much declin'd.

The Ancient LANGUAGE of Greece is still known to us, being preserv'd in the Writings of Aristotle, Plato, Xenophon, Herodotus, Thucydides, Plutarch, Demosthenes, Æschines, Isocrates, Hesiod, Homer, Sophocles, Aristophanes, and many other Philosophers, Historians, Orators and Poets; and has been deservedly esteem'd as well by the Romans in their most flourishing State, as by all Europe ever since; And to us Christians it is particularly Valuable, by being the Language of the Gospels and the rest of the New-Testament, whereby we receive the means of Eternal Salvation. The Greek was spoken in 5 different Dialects, viz. The Attick, the Dorick, the Æolick, the Ionick, and the Common Dialect; and was the most Manly, Haughty, Comprehensive, and yet most Sweet and Mellow, of any Language extant. But the Modern Greek is so far Chang'd by the mixture of Foreign Languages, that the Genuine Stile is very little understood among the present Inhabitants.

Because this Country is very much mention'd in ancient History, and the Classick Authors; we shall set down its ancient Division, according to Cluverius and Laurenburger, before we proceed to its present State, viz.

Ancient Greece was Divided into Five Parts, viz. HELLAS, THESSALIA, MACEDONIA, EPIRUS, and PELOPONNESUS. Which were Sub-divided thus, Hellas vel Græcia propria, ut & Achaia, was divided into these Regions.

MACEDON

Sometime called Æmathia, from Æmathius one of its Kings; and took its present Name from Macedon, the Grandson of Deucalion, as Solinus, or more particularly, Son of Jupiter and Thyie the Daughter of Deucalion, as Stephanus; but by Cluverius rather thought to be deriv'd from Mygdonia a Province of this County. Was a considerable Kingdom founded by Ceuannis, and of above 400 years standing before Philip extended its Bounds, and added Theffaly with part of Epirus and Albania to it; but his Son Alexander, firam'd the Great, raised it to the highest pitch of Grandeur; for he not only subdu'd all Greece and Thrace, but also conquer'd Asia, Egypt and Lybia, so that his Empire extended from the Danube to the River Indus, and from the Black to the Red Sea.

The ancient Bounds of Macedonia propria, were Thrace and Mount Scardus on the North, which divided it from the Upper Mæsia and Illyricum; on the West the Adriatick Sea; on the South Epirus and Theffaly. Its ancient Division we have already set down; but when Paulus Æmilius the Roman General had overcome Perseus the last Macedonian King (which happen'd A. M. 3782. U. C. 585. after the first erecting this Monarchy by Ceuannius, 645. and before Christ 168 years) and made this a Province of the Empire, it was divided into four Provinces or Regions, Teffe Livio; The first, which border'd on Thrace was subdivided into four parts, Edonis, Odomanice, Bifalvia and Sintica, seated on the River Strymon. In the second Region were nine Parts, Orbelia, Almopia, part of Pæonia, Joria, Pelagonia, Mygdonia, Amphaxitis, Chalcidicia, and Praxia. In the third were six parts, Pæria, Botricea, Æmathia, Lyncestis, part of Pæonia, and Æstræis. In the fourth and last Region, which was the Western part, and lay on the Ionian or Adriatick Sea, were twelve or rather ten parts, Albania, Taulantia, Elymiotis, Eo'detis, Dassareta, Parthyæi, Douriopus, Pelagonia, Stymphalia and Orestis. Teffe Lytus.

The present Macedon is bounded on the West by Albania, on the East by several Bays of the Archipelago, on the North by Romania and Bulgaria, on the South by Theffaly. It is Rich in divers Mines of Gold, abounds with Corn, Pasture, Cattle, Venison, and in some parts Wine and Oil. Here are many Mountains and Rivers, but none very Large or Remarkable, except Mount Athos, whereof we shall speak in its place. By the Turks, Macedon is divided into three Parts, viz. 1. Famboli, which contains the first and second Region of the Romans. 2. Comenolitari, part of the third Region. And 3. Macedon, which is the greatest part of the third Region. The chief Cities are, Theffalonica, commonly called Salonichi, heretofore the Capital of the second Region of Macedon, now the Metropolis of the whole, and the Seat of the Turkish Præfect, stands on the bottom of a Bay to which it gives Name, in the Latitude of 41. 20. Long. 43. 200 miles East from the Coast of the Adriarick Sea, 350 West from Constantinople, 180 South from the Danube, and 100 North from the Isthmus of the Morea. The City was anciently called Thermia, and the Bay Sinus Thermeus, and it was formerly adorn'd with many sumptuous publick Buildings, whereof only a Triumphal Arch remains. St. Paul preach'd the Gospel and wrote two Epistles to the People of this City; all which denote its ancient Splendor, and tho' by many Revolutions and the Turkish Government it be somewhat reduc'd, it is however still a very considerable Place, being a celebrated Emporium and a large and populous City, inhabited by Christians and Jews as well as Turks; and bears the Title of a Metropolitan See. It is encompass'd with old Walls which are reckon'd to be four Leagues in circuit, and defended by a Citadel on a Hill o' one side, and two Forts on t'other. The Christians have 30 Churches and 5 Convents; and the Jews 36 Synagogues, and two Colleges where-to their Youth resort from all Parts, to study: The Churches are stately, especially that of St. Mary, but the Turks have taken that as well as St. Demetrius the Cathedral, St. Sophia and St. Gabriel, for Mosques. There is a great Traffick here and the Haven much resorted to, for Silk, Leather, Iron, Cotton, Wax, Hony, Wool, Corn, &c. which is chiefly carried on by the Jews, who are numerous and wealthy. Salonichi was first built by Cassander and Theffalonica Daughter to King Philip and Sister to Alexander the Great: It was the Birth-place of Eustathius who wrote the Comment on Homer, of Constantius Hermenopolus, Demetrius Cydonius, and Theodoros Gaza. It always underwent the Fate of Macedon, and so was subject to the Greek Emperors, from whom it was snatch'd in 1180. by William King of Sicily, but soon recover'd by Andronicus Paleologus, and sold to the Republick of Venice in 1313. from whom Sultan Amurath II. took it, and the Turks have ever since possess'd it.

Amphipolis, Tur. Emboli, sometime the Capital of Macedon, stands upon the River Strymon, which a little below falls into a Bay of the Archipelago, and gave Name to it; 60 miles from Salonichi to the North-East. It was heretofore known by the Names of Urbs Martis, and Novem Vie, and is often mention'd in ancient History, for Aristagoras the Milesian flying from Darius, endeavour'd to settle here but was oppos'd by the Edonii; the Athenians planted a Colony here, which were cut off by the Thracians; afterwards Aginon the Son of Nicias repell'd the Edonii and planted a Colony It is an Archbishop's See and inhabited by some Christians, but it has now only its ancient Grandeur to brag on.

Siderocapsa, Sidrus, Syderos & Scydra, Ptol. a small Town notable for its neighbouring Gold-Mines, which were discover'd in King Philitip's time, and yielded him 1000 Talents every year; they are still wrought, and afford the Grand Seigneur a considerable Revenue. It is a Bishop's See, and stands on the South-East of Salonichi near Mount Athos.

Philippi or Filippo, a City at the foot of Mount Pangæus, on the Confines of Thrace, 20 or 30 miles North from Amphipolis, is famous for the Battle fought in its neighbouring Fields, where Brutus and Cassius the Murderers of Cæsar were defeated by Marc Antony and Octavius. Its ancient Splendor is testified by an Amphitheatre almost entire, and other Ruins of sumptuous Buildings. Christianity was planted there by St. Paul, and the People honour'd with an Epistle, which is part of our Canon of Scripture; 'tis still an Archbishop's See, but a place of small Habitation.

Contessa and Cavalla, seated on the Strymonian Bay (which runs between Thrace and Mount Athos) do both give Names to it, being by some call'd Golfo di Contessa, and by others de Cavalla. Strymon, which first gave Name to this Bay and the River on which it stands, is a little distant from Amphipolis. Stagyra, now Libanovia, famous for the Birth of Aristotle, stands on the West Shore of the same Bay.

Mount Athos often mention'd in Antiquity for its Height: Pomp. Mela tells us, That it rises into the Clouds, above the lower Region of the Air: And Pliny says, Its Evening Shadow reaches as far as the Island Lennos, which is 60 miles distant: It stands on a Promontory jutting into the Sea, between the Gulph of Strymonium or Contessa, and the Sinus Singiticus or Golfo di Monte Santo, about 70 miles East from Saloniki: The Isthmus being 12 Stadia broad, Xerxes dug through, and from thence Athos is sometimes call'd an Island. It is now Nam'd Monte Santo, from 24 Monastries which stand upon it, mostly of the Order of St. Basil, these are so fully stock'd with Monks of the Greek Church, and are so well esteem'd, that the Patriarch of Constantinople, Elects all his Bishops out of them.

Pella 30 miles South-west from Theſſalonica, and now call'd Zuebria, (and by others Feniza or Fanizza, tho' that be only a new Town of the Turks built near it) is judg'd to have been a Royal Seat of Philip and Alexander, which the Marbles and Royal Buildings daily dug up do Testifie.

ALBANIA hod. Arnaut,

Between Macedon and the most Eastern part of the Venetian Gulph, and near its Mouth, lies Albania, by the Turks call'd Arnaut: It is sometimes call'd Albania Proper, or Upper, to distinguish it from Epirus which is the Lower, and bounds it on the South, as the Mountains Maritis, or Argentaro, and Servia do on the North. It extends about 160 miles from North to South, and about 100 from East to West. The SOIL is Fruitful, producing Generous Wine, Flax, and Cotton, as also Wax in the Woods, and Salt dug out of the Mountains. The Inhabitants make Tapistry, which with the other Commodities they vend abroad.

This with Epirus, was the Country of the Famous Prince George Castriot, commonly call'd Scanderbeg, whose mighty Valour against the Turks is Celebrated in History: With a small Army, for many Years, he oppos'd the whole Turkish Power, and gain'd 22 Battles over them. At his Death he left his Country to the Venetians, but they were not able to maintain the Inland part of it, which was soon reduc'd by Mahomer II. whose Successors have held it for the last two Ages. The People are eminently Valiant, and their Horses exceeding Swift, so that their Cavalry are made use of by Turks. The chief Towns are Scutari, Scodra, Turc. Isodar the Metropolis, is seated on a Rock, near a Lake, whence Issues the River Boiana, 25 miles North from the Venetian Gulph, about 20 from the Frontiers of Dalmatia, and 70 from Ragusa to the East, 240 from Saloniki to the West, and about 40 from the Mountains to the South. Bandrand lays, It was the Seat of the ancient Kings of Illyrium: It is now a good large City, defended with a Castle seated on a Hill, and has been for these 200 years Subject to the Turks. But the Christians have however a Bishop here, and some Churches.

Ducagni, Ducaginum, stands on the East side of the River Drino, 25 miles from Scutari to the East.

Alessio, Lissus, stands on the same River, 30 miles below Ducagni, near its Mouth into the Adriatick Sea, and forms a Bay now call'd the Gulph of Drino, anciently the Illyric Bay. It is by some reckon'd the Capital of Albania, and is particularly famous for the Sepulchre of Scanderbeg, who died here in 1467. and even the Turks have such veneration for him, that they carry away pieces of his Tomb for Relicks, and esteem it as a Charm to animate their Courage in Battle. It is fenced with a Castle, and is the Seat of a Bishop; but Subject to the Turks.

Dolcigno, Dulcinium, Olcinium, seu Ulcinium, is a safe Port Town, with a Castle, seated on the Gulph of Venice, 30 miles South-west from Scutari, and 40 West from Alessio.

Antivari, Antibarum, another Port Town seated on a Rock, 10 miles West from Dolcigno.

Croya, Croia, or Crua, by Brietius call'd the Metropolis of Albania, is an impregnable and inaccessible Fort, seated on the River Lizane, 30 miles South from Alessio, and as many East from the Sea. By reason of its Strength it was chosen by Scanderbeg, for his place of Residence, and by him strongly defended against the frequent Attacks of the Turks; but a few after years his Death they took it.

Durazzo, Drazzi, the Dyrrhachium of the Romans, and Epidamnus more anciently. Is a noted Sea Port on the Gulph of Venice, at the Mouth of the River Argentaro, 20 miles South from the Gulph of Drino, and 40 South-west from Alessio: It is a large, and was formerly a very fair City; Memorable for the Exile of Cicero in it, and the Landing of Pompey (when he retir'd before Cæsar) from Brundisium in Italy, over against which it stands, and this was therefore the common Passage thither. In early times, viz. A. U. C. 315. this City was Besieg'd by a Company of Banditti or Corsairs, and the Citizens implor'd the assistance of the Corinthians, who were defeated by the Corsairs, and these assisted by the Athenians, which gave occasion to the Corinthian War, and became at last the Leaven as it were of the great Peloponnesian War, so famous in the Greek History. Latterly it has been Subject to the Turks, since the time of Bejazet II. who took it, but it is not much Inhabited by reason of the unwholsomeness of the Air.

Albanopoli, an Inland Town seated not far from the head of the River Drino, 70 miles East from Durazzo, and as many South East from Ducagni, was anciently the Capital of Albania, but now destroyed, and but a small Town.

Ocryda, Lychmidis, Turc. Standel, seated upon a Lake of the same Name, whence issues the River Drino, 25 miles South from Albanopoli, and 80 South-east from Durazzo; an Archbishop's See; but now Subject to the Turks.

La Valona, Aulen, Ptol. Aulon Navalis, stands on the Mouth of the Gulph of Venice, 40 miles from Durazzo, and 60 from the Gulph of Drino to the South, and 80 from Ocryda to the West. It is a very capacious Port, and was formerly a place of Strength, but the Turks took it from the Venetian, and held it till the late War, when in the year 1690. they deserted it, upon the taking of Canina, by the Venetians, and the appearance of their Army before it.

Over against Valona, about 2 Leagues to Sea, stands the Rocky Island of Safeno, a deserted place, and frequented by none but Turkish Pirates.

EPIRUS, or Canina.

On the South of Albania, along the Coast of the Ionian Sea, lies Epirus (call'd by some Albania Inferior, and by others Canina, which Name others refrain to the North-part of Epirus) having Thessaly on the North-east, and Achaia on the South-east. It is from South-East to North-west near 100 miles in Length, and about 60 in Breadth. It is divided from Albania by the Mountains Chimera, olim Montes Aroceraunii, or the Ceraunian Mountains, which by reason of their great height were often torn by Thunder; and from Thessaly by the Mountains Mezzo, olim Mons Pindus, and from Achaia by the River Achelous, now Catochi. The Soil is good, and especially on Mount Chimera the Cattel are exceedingly Fatted.

This Country was Anciently Subject to it's own Princes; then was United to the Kingdom of Macedon, afterwards Subjected to the Romans, and by them very much Ravag'd by reason of the Inhabitants often Revolted. Then again to it's own Princes, and now to the Turks, except some Places which the Venetians have Regain'd in the late War.

In the Ancient Account of Albania, this comprehended the Provinces of Chaonia, Thesprotia, Almeria, Dolopia, Amphilochia, and Acarinia. And in the middle of it in the Province of Thesprotia, stood the famous City Dadona, near which was the Temple and Grove of Jupiter, wherein were Trees that Answer'd, and Vocal Oaks, as the Poets Relate. The Chief Towns at present are, Chimera, a very strong Town, Seated in the North part of Epirus on the Mouth of the Gulph of Venice, near the Confines of Albania, 80 miles from Durazzo to the South, and 20 from the Island Corfu to the North. It is a well-built City, and a Place of Trade, the Capital of a Territory of the same Name, and the See of a Bishop, but Subject to the Turks.

from Chimera, 100 from the Mountains to the South, and 60 from Larta to the North-east. It was formerly a considerable, now but an ordinary Town inhabited chiefly by Fishermen by reason of the abundance of Fish in the Bay to which it gives Name. It is the See of a Bishop, but has been Subject to the Turks above 100 Years.

Perga, Torone, a Port-Town, with a Castle Subject to the Venetians, stands also over-against Corfu, 20 miles South from Butrinto; the Venetians gave the Inhabitants the Two Islands on the South of Corfu, call'd Pachsu, and Anti-Pachsu, wherein is very Fat Pasture.

Larta, or Ambrachia, Ambracia, and Arta. It grew up out of the Ruins of the Ancient City Ambrachia, sometime the Regal Seat of the Kings of Epirus; others make Ambrachia a different Place. It is Seated at the bottom of the Sinus Ambrochianus now Gulph of Larta, 20 miles from the Sea, 60 from Butrinto, and 140 from Durazzo to the South-east, 60 from Lepanto to the North-west, and 200 from Saloniki to the South-west.

Preveza, Seated at the Mouth of the Gulph, 20 Miles West from Larta, and 40 South-east from the Island Corfu, stands in the place of the Ancient City Nicopolis. It was a place of Strength, and possess'd by the Turks till the Year 1684. when the Venetian General Morofini took it, and by the Treaty of Carlowitz it was agreed to be demolished.

Over-against it on the Mouth of the same Bay stands Acium, now Cape Figalo, Famous for the Naval Battel between Marc Antony and Augustus; formerly an Eminent City, wherein stood a Temple of Apollo, now an Ordinary Sea-Port and Promontory.

The Island CORFU, Corcyra, ut et Phaacia, lies in the Ionian Sea, over-against the Coast of Epirus, but a few Leagues from it, and 30 Leagues from the Coast of Italy, extending from South-east to North-west about 40 miles. It was Anciently Inhabited by a sort of Corfiars, and the People are mention'd in History, particularly in the Corinthian War above-mention'd. The Island is possess'd by the Venetians, to whom it has been Subject ever since the Year 1382. and enjoys a most fertile Soil, producing Corn, Wine, Oyl, Honey, Flax, Salt, Medicinal Herbs, &c. It is divided into Four parts, and besides many Towns and Villages hath one good City.

Corfu, Seated on the Eastern Coast over-against Butrinto, and in the Latitude of 40 Degrees, it has a very Capacious Port, and is guarded by Two Castles.

THESSALY, Thessalia.

The Country next adjoining to Epirus on the East between that and the Aegean Sea, and Gulph of Salonichi, is Thessaly, anciently called Amonia, and Pyrrhea. According to Brietius, a large part of it is now called Fanna, and the other part Comenolituri, Macedon bounds it on the North, and Achaia, or Livadia on the South. From both which it is divided by Mountains, and also from Epirus by Mount Pindus, so that it is surrounded with them except on the East, where it opens to the Sea.

It enjoys a Fertile Soil, and Healthy Air, and yields all sorts of Grain and Delicious Fruits, such as Oranges, Lemons, Figs, Pomegranates, Grapes, Olives, &c. The Ancient Inhabitants were Noted for their Courtesy, but accused of Gluttony and Sorcery. In the Tradition of those Times they were accounted the first that tamed Horses, and set out Ships. Deucalion Reigned here contemporary with Cecrops the first King of Athens, in whose time happen'd the Deluge (by the overflowing of the River Peneus) known by his Name, and mention'd in History. And to his Sons are Attributed the Honour of giving Name to many parts of Greece, as Hellen to Hellas; Doris to the Dorians, near Mount Parnassus. Xuthus his Third Son was Father to Achæus Founder of the Achæans, and Ion from whom the Ionians or Inhabitants of Attica.

The Modern Thessalians are for the most part Christians, but Subject to the Turk, remarkable for their Comeliness and Warlike Disposition. The Extent of Thessaly is about 120 miles either way, and the chief Towns in it are, Larissa, Turc. Asababa, the Capital, is on the Banks of the River Peneus, about 40 miles above its Mouth into the Gulph of Saloniki, 80 from Saloniki to the South, 50 from the Island Negropont to the North-west, and 100 from Lepanto to the North-east, and very near Mount Olympus. It is one of the most flourishing Cities of Greece; and hath been sometime honoured with the Grand Seignior's Residence (especially during the War of Candia) who hath a Palace here in the upper-part of the Town. It is the See of an Archbishop, and Adorn'd with good Buildings, particularly a very fair Stone Bridge of Nine Arches over the River. This was the Birth-place of the famous Achilles. It was taken by the Bulgarians in 981. and by the Turks in the 15th Century.

Tricala stands upon the same River Peneus about 50 miles West from Larissa, and was formerly Notable for a Fine Temple Dedicated to Æsculapius.

Fanna, from which all this part of the Country is Named, is a good well-built City, Seated on a Lake of the same Name, 40 miles from Tricala, and as many North from Lepanto.

Scoufa, a small City, and the See of a Bishop, is Seated 18 miles West from Larissa. In this place there was an Oracle of Old, not inferior to that of Dodona. And near it Q. Flaminius with the Roman Army obtained a Signal Victory over Philip the Son of Demetrius.

Pharsalus, Farsa, Famous for the Batel fought in its Fields between Pompey and Cæsar, wherein the former was intirely Defeated; whence Lucan's Poem of this Batel is Entituled Pharsalia; is Seated 30 miles South from Larissa, as many North from Zeiton, and is the See of an Archbishop. But we dare not determine this to be the Ancient Pharsalus, because Cluverius places that in Efriotis, and that it ought to lie more to the Westward, and Laurenburger in his Map places it in Pelaggia, 50 miles North from Larissa, whereas Sanfen, and the Modern Maps place Farsa, as we have said in the mid-way between Larissa and Zeiton, and about 20 West from the Gulf of Armisio.

Demetriada, Demetrias, 50 miles South-east from Larissa, Seated upon the Gulf which is sometimes called by its Name, otherwise Named Sinus Pelagicus, or Pegaficus from the City

Pagasa, now Volo, on the North-side of the same

Bay, 20 miles East from Demetriada, 50 East from Larissa, and 40 North from the Island Negropont. It hath a spacious Harbour, and was a strong Fortrefs after the Ancient manner, and in the late War made use of by the Turks for a Magazine for the Provisions they gather'd in the Neighbouring Provinces, till General Morofini took it, and found there a vast quantity of Victuals, and 27 Pieces of Canon; which having carried off, he set Fire to the Magazines, Houfes, and Mosques, and demolished the Walls.

Armiro, Evetria, at the bottom of the same Bay, and gives the present Name to it, being thid'd in the Modern Maps Golfo del Armiro, stands over-against Demetriada, 20 miles South from it, and 25 North from Negropont, is an Ancient place, being mention'd by Strabo, Thucydides, Polybius, Stephanus, Livy, and others; and by some reckon'd the Port whence the Argonauts set Sail; and that it was here that Xerxes Fleet was so forely shattered by Tempest, that Greece was deliver'd from his intended Invasion.

Zeiton, or Zeitton, Thebe Pelioticæ, or Thessalica, Seated upon the Sinum Malicum, stands between into the Land of Thessaly over-against Negropont, being now called Golfo de Zeitton, it stands 30 miles from Armiro, and near 60 from the River Peneus to the South, and 30 from the Shoar of Negropont to the West.

Capo di san Georgia, Magnesia Promontorium, a Cape with a Sea-Town on the North of the Golfo del Armiro, 20 miles from it, and 30 East from Pegasa, and not far from the Mount Pelion.

Before we leave Thessaly, we must take notice of Mount Olympus so Famed in Antiquity for its height, the Top reaching above the middle Region of the Air, it stands on the North of Larissa, and is a continued Ridge for many miles.

Ossa, more to the South on the other side the River Peneus, and Pelion somewhat more to the East are Two other Notable Mountains. And between Olympus and Ossa on the Banks of the River Peneus, lie the fruitful and pleasant Valleys of Tempe.

ACHAIA; HELLAS, sive Græcia Propria, hodie LIVADIA.

This Province, tho' the last in our Description, may be reckon'd the most considerable part of Greece, as comprehending the Famous Cities of Thebes, Athens, Delphi, Pythia, &c. also the Mountain Parnassus, Helicon, and other places most Eminent in Ancient History. And it is plain that it was Anciently esteem'd the principal part, by its Name being Communicated to the Whole; and the Ancient Geographers by way of Excellence term this Græcia Propria. Its Name of Achaia seems to have been borrow'd from a small Province in Peloponesus so called. And the present, of Livadia, is most probably taken from the Town so called, of which we shall speak in its Place.

Achaia lies on the South of Thessaly, from which it is divided by Mount Octa, now Labza, having on the South, the Morea, divided from it by the Corinthian Isthmus, now Golfo di Lepanto, the Corinthian Isthmus, and the Mare Saronicum, now Golfo di Engia. On the West the Ionian Sea; on the N. W. by Epirus; and on the East the Ægean Sea and and the Euripan Strait, which separates it from Negropont, and is thence denominated Golfo de Negropont. It is a Pleasant and Fruitful Country, extending from East to West along the Sea-Coast about 220 miles, and from North and South about 50 miles.

It was divided, as we have shewn in our Table of Ancient Greece into Eight Parts: At present being Subject to the Turks who are not very polite; we cannot pretend to set down any Division; but the Principal Towns are,

THEBES, Theba, Surnam'd Baotica, being the Capital of that Province, and Ogygia, from Ogyges the King of Baotia; also Heptapylus from its Seven Gates; at present by the Inhabitants called Thiva, and by others Stiva or Stives, as it is written in the common Maps. Stands on a rising Ground near the River Asopo, 20 miles from the Gulph of Negropont to the South-west, 40 from the Isthmus of Corinth to the North-east, and 150 miles from Lepanto to the East, in the Latitude of 38 Degrees, 22 Minutes. It was Anciently a very considerable City, and with the Country about it one of the most powerful States of Greece. At present, as Sir Geo. Wheeler informs us, it is reduc'd to a small Town, and hardly Inhabited but in that place, which was the Castle of Cadmus; so that tho' the extent of it may be near 3 miles in Circuit, the Inhabitants are not reckon'd above 3 or 4000, whereof the greatest part are Christians, they having several Churches, and an Archbishop whose Cathedral is Named Panagia Chrysofhoritia, whereas the Turks have only Two Mosques. As to its Ancient State 'tis said to have been Built by Cadmus, who as the Poets Story, being sent by his Father Agener in quest of his Sister Europa carried away by Jupiter, after many fruitless Journies coming to Baotia, he was admonish'd by the Oracle to Build a City, to which he added a Fort which always after bore his Name. Many Stories are Related of Cadmus, that he Killed a Dragon, whose Teeth being Sowed in the Ground grew up Armed Men; that he was the Son of a King of Sidon, whereas in Truth he was but the Son of a Cook; that he brought Letters into Greece. Some say he had a large Posterity that Reigned after him; Others that he lived to see the end of his Family, and he with his Wife turned into Serpents: That Amphion expell'd him out of Thebes, and Built the Walls of it by the Harmony of his Lute. Thus far the Poets. Ancient History deduces the Princes of Thebes from Cadmus, and Name Amphion as the 5th Prince, who expell'd the Line of Cadmus, and Walled the City; his Son Lajus succeeded, and him Oedipus, whose Story is well known; his Sons Eteocles, and Polynices quarrelling, caused the famous Siege of Thebes. Cadmus is reckon'd to have been Cotemporary with Josuah, and the Theban Siege to have happen'd 37 years after that of Troy. King Philip of Macedon took the City, and put the Garison to the Sword; and afterwards Alexander quite destroy'd it, leaving no House standing but that of the Poet Pindar. Cassander, the Son of Antipater, and King of Macedon, Rebuilt it. Heracles, and the God Bacchus, as well as the Poet Pindar, are said to be Natives of this Place; as also the two great Captains Epaminondas and Pelopidas. But of all its ancient Grandure there now only remain some Vestigia of the Cadmean Fort, and some Inscriptions that certify its former State. In the Suburbs is seen a most clear Fountain, suppos'd to be the ancient Dirce. It must be noted that there were other Cities of the same Name, which are mention'd in History, as Thebes in Cilicia, which was Sack'd by the Greeks when they went against Troy. Thebes in Egypt, near Troy, the largest of that Name; it had 100 Gates, and gave Name to the Province Thebesis. Another in Ionia: Another in Thebessaly, &c.

Aulis, a Sea Port, over against Negropont, about 20 miles East from Thebes, was famous for its Harbour; and was the Rendezvous of the Grecian Fleet when they Sailed to the Siege of Troy. Orcomone, Orchomenus, formerly celebrated for its Horses, stands 30 miles West from Thebes, and near the Centre of the Country, a few miles North from the Lake of Thebes, anciently Copias Lacus. Here was a very rich Temple, Dedicated to the Graces, now a strong Castle.

Livadia, Libadia, Whence the Country is Nam'd, stands on the Gulph of Lepanto, about 20 miles West from the Isthmus of Corinth. Here was anciently the Altar of Trophonius, celebrated for its Oracle. It is Inhabited chiefly by Greeks and Jews, who drive a Trade in Corn, &c.

Plata, a City often mention'd in History, but especially on account of the notable Battle fought between Mardonius the Persian General, and Pausanias the Lacedemonian, wherein the vast Army of Persians were routed, and 40000 kill'd, by a handful of Greeks, which finish'd the Ruin of Xerxes. It stands between Thebes and Athens.

ATHENS, Athens, by the Turks Atbina, corruptly Saitina, Satinas and Setines, as it is written in the Modern Maps, is seated near the Sea, 40 miles from Thebes, and a little more from Negropont to the South, 40 miles East from the Isthmus of Corinth, and about the same distance West from Cape Raphai, the utmost eastern Land of Achaia. It was anciently the Metropolis of Greece, as well as the Capital of Attica, and one of the most famous and Flourishing Cities of the Universe; whether you consider its Antiquity, Power, Grandeur of its Republick, Senate and Academy; or especially that it was a long time the Seat of the Muses, and the Nursery of all Arts and Sciences, which made it Renown'd throughout all Nations. And we have Cicero's Testimony That the Athenians were perfect Masters of Politics, Philosophy, and Husbandry: That they were the first Founders of Law and Equity: And that they Transmitted these Things to the rest of Mankind. It is at present the Capital of a Duchy, which before the Turks took it, was Subject to its own Dukes, and had the good Fortune to escape the Turkish Fury, better than the other Cities of Greece, being still a good large City, well Inhabited, and place of a pretty good Trade for Wine, Oil, Fish, &c. the Town standing but 2 miles from the Sea, call'd the Gulph of Engia, which opens to the Archipelago. It is water'd with the Rivers Ciphisus, and Ilissus, whence by Aqueducts under Ground, the Water is convey'd into the City, to the publick Fountains, and private Houses. The SOIL round it is exceeding fruitful, and yields very rich Wines, incomparable Olives, as well as Corn, and Pasture in good plenty. And the AIR is so pure, that when the Plague rages all round it, Athens is Healthful. The City is encompass'd on the North side with the Mountain Parnus; on the North-east by that of Pentelicus, 6 miles off; and the Hills Coridalia now Daphni-bouni, on the North-west; and Hemattus or Teli-bouni, on the South-east; and on the Sea side stands the Citadel, a mile and a half in length, but it is not very strong. Near the Town stands a pointed Rock, now call'd from the Chapel on the Top, St. George's Mountain, which is probably the Ancheimius of Pausanias: The River Iliissus flows round it by the Hill heretofore Nam'd Museum, from the Poet Museus, whence it falls into the Ciphsus, which passes through a Wood of Olive Trees, at least 6 miles long, now the greatest Wealth and Ornament of the Athenian plain. In the Town the Houses stand very close, and the Streets are narrow. The Haven, formerly known by the Name of Portus Phalerens, was formerly a very good one, but now much choak'd up with Sand. The Inhabitants are reckon'd about 10000, whereof three parts are always Christian Greeks, and no Jews are admitted. Christianity was in pretty good State here, when the Town was under the Turks, the Archbishop having then a Revenue of 4000 Dollars per Annum, and the Christians enjoy'd no less than 200 Churches, in and about the City, besides several Convents. The Turks had 5 Mosques, whereof one is the ancient Temple of Minerva.

As to the Ancient State of Athens, we are told it was founded by Cecrops, who Nam'd the Town Cecropia, and Reign'd King there 50 years; this is suppos'd to have happen'd soon after the Deucalian Flood, 800 years before the building of Rome, and 1550 before the Birth of Christ; He Enacted many excellent Laws, Erected the Council Areopagus, afterwards so celebrated in the World, and added other Cities to his Kingdom; which daily increas'd in Wealth Grandeur and Strength. In the time of Erichonius the 4th King, the Name of the City was alter'd to Aθῆναι, Athene, in Honour of Minerva, whom the Greeks call'd by that Name, and to whom the City was Dedicated. It continued a Monarchy for near 500 years, till Codrus by his singular Magnanimity threw himself among the Enemies in Battle, that by his Death he might save his Country; the Oracle having Predicted that the Party who lost their King should be Victors: After which the Athenians would not admit of a King, that no Man might enjoy the Honour that Codrus had had, whose Memory they so much Reverenced. They were afterwards Govern'd by Magistrates, call'd Archontes, under whom they most Valiantly defended their Liberties and Territories, against all Enemies, even the Persians with their numerous Armies under Darius and Xerxes. The Lacedonians were their constant Enemies, with whom they contended for the Sovereignty of Greece. The Spartans once took the City and set 30 Tyrants over it, but they soon threw off that Yoak, and with the assistance of the Thebans under Egaminondas entirely defeated them, and thereby extended their Dominion exceedingly. But at last growing into Luxury, they were Effeminated and became a Prey to the Macedonian Monarch. Under the Romans they were Protected, and enjoy'd Liberty; except when Sylla to Revenge their siding with Mithridates, Plunder'd the City, and put the Inhabitants to the Sword. Among the Emperors, Constantine the Great was their peculiar Patron and Benefactor, Honouring their Government, with the Title of Arch-Duke: And Constantine II. gave them several Islands in the Archipelago. In the time of Arcadius, they were miserably haras'd and pillag'd by the Goths; and underwent divers Revolutions afterwards, till at last the City was taken by the Turks, in 1455, and remain'd Subject to them till the year 1687, when the Venetians, happily retook it after a short Siege. The Christian Religion was Planted here by St. Paul, as we are told in Sacred Scripture, and one of the Areopagus, with other Persons of the first Quality were his Converts.

The present Vestigia shew the ancient Splendor of its Buildings. Sir George Wheeler, gives us an ample Account of those Monuments, too large to Insert here; having only Room to Name the chief of 'em; which are, The Acropolis, a Fortress built on a Rock, on the West end of the Town, with inaccessible Precipices on every side but the North-west where you mount by a steep Ascent to the Entrance. This is suppos'd to have been the first City, round which the Buildings increas'd, and this serv'd afterwards for a Castle, as it still does, but is now separate from the Town, the Houses about it being fallon down; toward the bottom of the Hill, are seen the Remains of ancient Walls, suppos'd to be those built by Theseus, when he enlarg'd the City. The Temple of Minerva, the most Beautiful Piece of Antiquity, stands in the Citadel: The Theatre of Bacchus, on the South side of the Castle: The Magnificent Pillars, Gate, and Aqueduct of the Emperor Adrian: The Stadium where the Publick Games call'd Panathenaea were exercis'd, as also the Publick Races, Fighting of wild Beasts, &c. The Ruins of the Areopagus: The Odeum, or Musick Theatre: The Temples of Theseus, Augustus, and Jupiter Olympus: The Tower of Andronicus Cyrbastes, or Temple of the Eight Winds: The Phanari, or Lanthorn of Demosthenes: These are still to be seen, but the Academy where Plato Taught his Philosophy; The Portico where Zeno the Cynick held his Lectures; and the Lyceum, which was the College where the incomparable Aristotle taught Philosophy; are all effac'd.

Marathon, still call'd Marathona, and Marathon, seated on the Gulph of Negropont, 40 miles North-east from Athens, and 60 South-east from Thebes, is now an ordinary Village, but formerly a considerable Town; memorable for the great Victory of the Athenians under Miltiades, over the Persians; wherein 11000 of the former, beat 600000 of the latter, having kill'd no less than 100000 of them. It is also mention'd by Ovid, on account of Theseus, who drag'd a wild Bull through the Town and Sacrific'd it to Apollo at Delphos.

Megara, Lifsea vel Lissa, Anciently the Seat of a Monarch, and afterwards a Republick, who were considerably enough to maintain Wars against the Athenians and others, and Plant a Colony in Sicily; was Honour'd with the Birth of Euclid the great Mathematician, and gave Name to the Country round it; is now but a poor Village Seated about 10 miles from the Sea, 30 miles West from Athens, and 20 East from the Isthmus of Corinth. The old City stood on two little Rocks, where some of its Footsteps remain, but at present it consists of about 3 or 400 sorry Hutts rather than Houses, on one of those Rocks. The Turks had formerly a Veyvode here, but a Party of the Pirates, that frequently infested these Coasts, carried him a way, which has frighted all from thence; so that none but Christians are its Inhabitants.

Eleusis now call'd Lepina, a Sea Town 20 miles West from Athens, tho' now a poor Village was formerly a considerable City, and some time even Vied with Athens. But it has been so often pillag'd by Pirates, that it is now in a manner destitute of Inhabitants. The stately Temple of Ceres made the City much resorted to, and the ruins of it do still invite Travellers to Visit it; where are visible marks of a most superb Structure, all of a very fine white Marble adorn'd with excellent Carvings and Statues.

Delphi, Salona, now Castris, the Capital of Phocis, was anciently much Celebrated for its Temple and Oracle of Appollo, the Temple was a Magnificent Structure enrich'd with innumerable Gifts which render'd it exceeding Glorious: In it was a dark Cave where the Pieletes Nam'd Pythia, and the Cave Pythium, sitting on a Tripod, or Stool with three Legs, receiv'd the Inspiration of the God, Swelling, Foaming, and Raving like one possess'd, or Distracted; the Answers were always Ambiguous, and so Mysterious, that it was difficult to understand 'em; and yet it was plainer than others, for Hermias the Philosopher says, that those that did not understand the Answers at Dodona, came hither for an Explication. The Town of Castris which sprung out of the ruins of Delphi consists only of about 200 Houses Inhabited most by Christians who have 5 or 6 Churches, and the Turks but 1 Mosque. It is surrounded with craggy Rocks. Delphi stands in the middle of Greece, and by ancient Greeks, call'd the Navel of the Earth, the Poets telling that Jupiter let fly two Eagles, one from the East, and the other from the West, that he might discover the middle, and those Eagles met at this place. Near it stands the Famous Mountain Parnassus, Sacred to Apollo and the Muses, the high Cliffs of it appear in 2 points, which makes it to be call'd Biceps Parnassus, and between 'em the Water falls down after Rain or Snow in great abundance, and hath almost worn them assunder: And just below the Cliff rises a Spring with a very plentiful Source of Water, which is undoubtedly the ancient Castalia, wherein the Pythian Prophets and the Poets that pretended to Inspiration us'd to Bath themselves, and Drink of its Waters: It has Marble Steps at its descent, and Niches for Stames cut into the Rock: This Stream running down a steep Precipice, falls into the River Pleistos, and separates Mount Cirphis from Parnassus, whence it runs by Crissa, and falls into the Bay of Salona.

Not far from Parnassus, but more Eastward, and reckon'd in the Limits of Beotia, stands Helicon, the other Mountain Consecrated to Apollo.

Lepanto, Naupaclius aut Naupaclium, now call'd Epaclios by the Greeks, and Einebachri by the Turks, is the chief City on the Gulph whereto it hath lately communicated its Name, tho' formerly it was denominat'd of Corinth. It stands near the Straight of the Dardanelis, 40 miles from Delphi, 80 from the Corinthian Isthmus, and 120 from Athens to the West, 120 from the Island Corfu to the South-east, and not above 8 Leagues from the opposite Shoar of the Morea to the North. It is built on the side of a high Hill, rising up from the Shoar, in 4 several Stages, between every one of which is a Wall, and at the bottom lies the Port, of Oval form, whose Mouth is so narrow that a Chain may be drawn Cross it, and it is defended by a small Castle on each side, with Cannon; this Harbor is lin'd with Walls, which appear of ancient Structure; but the Port cannot admit large Ships, because the Mouth is shallow: Neither are the Christian Ships of bulk permitted to come up to the Castle, but stay at Parras on the Peloponesian Shoar. It is a place of Trade for Turky Leather, Oil, Tobacco, Rice, Barly, &c. And on each side of the Town, under the Mountain (which is probably the ancient Corax) fruitful Vallies are stretch'd out toward the Sea; that westward is planted with Olive Trees, Vineyards and Corn; and the other side is divided into Gardens of Oranges, Citrons and Lemons; it is also water'd with many fresh Streams, that issue from the Mountain, and shadow'd with Plain Trees: The Wine here is the best in Greece. This is the Account Sir George Wheeler gives us of this Place, which must needs be very Pleasant, and would undoubtedly be well Inhabited, if the Turks did not treat the Christians ill, insomuch that the Archbishop is oblig'd to live at Arta. The Emperor Manuel Paleologus, gave this City to the Venetians, in the year 1408. who Fortifi'd it, and made it so Strong, that in 1475. it was able to Resist Mahomet the Great, who Besieg'd it with an Army of 30000 Men. But Bajazet II. in 1498, partly by the Power of 150000 Men, and partly by Corrupting the Governor, took it. In the late War Anno 1697. the Venetians retook it, after a few hours Battery; having just before disheartn'd the Turks, by the taking of Petras, the Dardanelis, and other places. But by the Treaty of Carlowitz in 1699. the Venetians are oblig'd to quit Lepanto, and demolish the Castle call'd Romelia.

Not far from hence happen'd a most memorable Sea Fight between the Christians and Turks, on the 2d. of Octob. 1571. Wherein the Venetian Fleet consisting of 210 Gallies, 6 Galeasses, and 28 great Transport Ships, obtain'd a most signal Victory over the Turkish Fleet consisting of 200 Gallies, and 70 Frigats, whereof 130 Gallies were taken, many more burnt and sunk, 30000 of their Men kill'd, and near 20000 Christian Slaves set at Liberty; with the loss of only 8000 Men, on the Christian side.

A few Leagues to the West of Lepanto, and 20 Leagues East from the Island Cefalonia, is the Straight of the Gulph of Lepanto, guarded by two Castles. The two Promontories that make the Straight were anciently Nam'd Rhium and Anti-Rhium, the former on the Peloponesian side now nam'd the Castle of Morea or Parras, and the latter on the Achaian Shoar now call'd Capa Moliceo, and the Castle Romelia. These Castles are strong and well provided with Cannon; and are Nam'd the Dardanelis of Lepanto, in allusion to those of the Hellisfont.

CHAPTER III.

OF PELOPONNESUS, or the MOREA.

ON the South of Achaia, lies the Peninsula of the Morea, join'd to the Continent by the small Isthmus denominated from Corinth, because that City stands upon it; but otherwise surrounded by the Sea. On the North the Gulphs of Lepanto and Engia, flow between it and Achaia; the Gulph of Patras between it and Cefalonia, on the North-west; the Ionian Sea on the South-west; the Mer de Sapienza, and the Sea of Candia on the South; and the Aegean Sea on the East. It lies between 36 and 38 Degrees of Latitude, and between 40 and 44 Degrees of Longitude: Comprehending about 150 miles in breadth.

This Country hath been known by different Names in several Ages: It was at first call'd Argos, with the addition of Achaicum, to distinguish from Argos Pelasgicum or Theffaly. Afterwards Aegialia, from Aegialis a King of the Sicyonians: Then Apia, from Apis the third King of Argos: And at length Peloponnesus, from Pelops, the Son of Tantalus, who brought a Colony hither, out of Phrygia, and Reigned there for some time. The Modern Name of Morea, is said to have been derived from Morus, a Mulberry Tree, call'd in Greek Μορέα, either because the form of it resembles the form of that Leaf, or because those Trees grow plentifully here. Others make it deriv'd from Romea by a change of the Letters. And again, others say, the Moors gave it the Name.

This Peninsula is the most Noble of Europe, whether we consider the Courage and Virtue of its ancient Inhabitants, the Splendor of their Cities, and Power of their States; or the fertility of its SOIL, which produces plenty of Corn, Wine, Oil, most delicious Fruits, and all that can contribute to the Delight as well as Necessaries of Life. The Mountains, fill'd with Game and Medicinal Plants, were Celebrated by the ancient Poets; the most Remarkable are, Mount Cyllene in Arcadia, on which Maia brought forth Mercury. 2. Menalus, Consecrated to the God Pan, so call'd from Menalus, the Son of Lycan. 3. Minthe now Oline. 4. Nonacris, where the River Styx takes its rise. 5. Taigolus, &c.

The Principal Rivers are, 1. Carbon or Orfea, anciently call'd Alpheus, and fam'd for its Virtue in taking away Spots and Blemishes in the Skin:

The Poets attribute a miraculous Course to this River, through the Ionian Sea, till it intermixeth with the Fountain Arctusa, in Sicily, because it is often swallow'd up in the Earth, and rises again with greater Force; but it really rises in the Mountain Symphalus, runs through Arcadia and receives the Rivers Celadon and Anarintus, with 140 other Rivulets, and falls into the Gulph of Castel di Tornefe. 2. Eurotas or Valali Patamos, which rises in Arcadia, runs through Laconia, and falls into the Gulph of Pastel Rampani. 3. Planizza, formerly call'd Inachus, and Haliacmon. 4. Pamissus or Spirnazza, that falls into the Gulph of Coron, near Calamata. 5. Styx, whose Waters are deadly, through their excessive Coldness, which gave occasion to the Poets to fain it to be one of the Rivers of Hell.

The Inhabitants are esteem'd Ingenious and Warlike, imitating their Ancestors, who maintain'd a War against the Athenians for 27 years, which is the Subject of the excellent Histories of Thucydides and Xenophon. Pausanias reckons but three Nations here, viz. the Achaians, Arcadians, and Dorians: But according to Ptolomy, It was anciently divided into eight Parts, tho' Cluverius reckons but six, as we have shewn in our Table (the other two, Corinthia and Sicyonia, being by him included in Achaia propria) wherein were comprehended many Powerful States, as, the Lacedaemonians, Corinthians, Sicyonians, Argives, Arcadians, &c. whose Actions are notably Remembered in History. After many Revolutions the whole Country became subject to the Emperor Manuel Comnenus about the year 1150, who divided it at his Death among his seven Sons; these Princes were call'd Despotes, and tho appointed by, and subordinate to the Emperor, were in a manner Absolute at Home, and the Emperor seldom putting by the next of kin, it was also Hereditary. Demetrius and Thomas the Brothers of Constantine Paleologus, were the last of these, for in their time the Turkish Sultan Mahomet II. took it, and beat out the Venetians, that were then upon it, since when they always held it and maintain'd a Sangiack at Modon till in the late War, the Venetians under General Morofini Re-conquer'd it, and by the Treaty at Carlowitz, the whole Morea is entirely resign'd by the Turks, to the Venetians.

It is now usually distinguish'd into Four Parts, viz.

- I. The Duchy of Clarenza, bounded on the North by the Gulph of Lepanto, on the East by Saccania, on the West by the Gulph of Patras, and on the South by Zaconia and Belvedere. Containing the old Districts of Achaia proper, and Sicyonia. The most Remarkable Towns are

}	Patras.
}	Chiarenza.
- II. Belvedere, extended between the River Carbon or Orfea, which parts it from Chiarenza on the North, the Sea of Sapienza on the South, Zaconia on the East, and the Ionian Sea on the West. It contains the ancient Massenia and Elis. The chief Towns are

}	Modon.
}	Belvedere.
}	Coron.
}	Calamata.
}	Navarino.
}	Olympia.

III. Zachania, or Braccio di Mana, the largest of the four, comprehending the ancient Arcadia and Laconia, and is situated between Chiarenza on the North, Sacconia on the East, Belvedere on the West, and the Sea of Sapienza on the South.

Malvasia.
Mistra, or Lacedaemon.
Zanata.
Chielefa.
Megalopolis or Leontari.
Colocina.

IV. Saccania, or Romania Minor; Comprehending the ancient Argia, Sicyonia and Corinthia. It is Seated between the Gulph of Engia on the North, and that of Napoli on the South, Chiarenza on the West, and the Aegan Sea on the East.

Napoli di Romania.
Corinth.
Argos.

Patras, Patro, call'd Badra and Balubatra by the Turks, is Seated on a Hill near the Sea, at a little distance from the Mountain formerly Nam'd Cerynea, not above 10 miles from the Mouth of the Gulph of Lepanto to the South, near 20 Leagues from the Coasts of the Island Cefalonia to the East, and 90 miles from the Isthmus of Corinth to the West. It was Founded (according to Pausanias) by one Eumelus, who was instructed in the Arts of Husbandry and Architecture, by Tripolemus, and call'd the Place Arva, afterwards when the Ionians were expell'd the Peloponnesan Achaia, another Benefactor Nam'd Patreus, very much Enlarg'd it, so as to swallow up the old Arva, and gave it his Name. It is commonly written in the Maps Paleo Patra, or sometimes Patraso. It was ruin'd some time after, in the Wars between the Aetolians and the Gauls, and was in ill State, till the time of Augustus Caesar, who having made use of its Harbour for his Navy, took notice of the Town, and conferr'd many Privileges on the Inhabitants he Invited to it from the Neighbouring Towns, calling it Colonia Augusta Arva Patrensis. It is a considerable City, very Populous, especially of Jews; a place of good Trade, and the See of an Archbishop. It is defended by a strong Castle built on the Highest point of the Hills, from whence there is an easy descent every way, to a fruitful Valley, well Planted with Oranges, Lemons, and Citrons, much esteem'd for their most delicious Taste: In these Gardens, besides a great number of tall Cedars, there is a famous Cypress Tree, perhaps the oldest and biggest in the World, being 18 foot round, and the Branches shooting out 20 foot an end. In ancient times the Goddess Diana was Worship'd here, in most cruel manner, for a Beautiful young Man and Maid were Annually Sacrific'd to her; till by the Preaching of St. Andrew, Eurypilus was Converted to Christianity, and that horrid Superstition laid aside. But afterwards that Apostle suffer'd Martyrdom here, being Crucifi'd by order of Aegeus the Proconsul of the Province. The Christian Religion however was so well Planted by him, that it continu'd to Flourish, and the Archbishop in the primitive Ages, was Honour'd with the second place in the Councils; and at present hath a Thousand Churches under his Jurisdiction. In the time of the Despotes of the Morea, it enjoy'd the Title of a Duchy, and was Sold by the last of those Princes, to the State of Venice, in the year 1408. From whom the Turks took it, in 1463. The Venetians under the Famous And. Doria, Recover'd it in 1533. but lost it again the next year, and the Turks continu'd Masters of it till the late War. When in the year 1687. it was taken by the Venetian General Morsini, and is now Subject to the State.

This City gives Name to the Gulph or Sea that flows between the Coasts of the Morea, and the Island Cefalonia.

Clarenza or Chiarenza, which gives Name to the Duchy, stands upon the Gulf of Patras, 25 miles South from that City. This is Suppos'd to be the ancient Cyllena, and was sometime of great Note, the Capital of the Duchy, and under its own Princes; it was also a place of Trade, having then a Commodious Haven, but is now choak'd with Sand: And the condition of the Town is so far alter'd, that there remains hardly any Footsteps of its former Grandeur. P. Mela honours this place with the Birth of Mercury, tho' others impute it to a Hill in Arcadia call'd Cyllene, and thence is he call'd Cyllenius. The Town of Cyllene was anciently the Sea Port of the City Elis, and a Commodious Harbour for Ships, that come from Sicily. But some are of opinion that not Chiarenza, but Antrovida, stands in the place of the ancient Cyllene.

Caminitza a little Town upon the River Evenus, about 12 miles South from Patras, is thought to be the ancient Olenus, which Strabo and Ptolemy call a Town of Achaia in the Peloponnesus, built by Olenus the Son of Vulcan. It was an Episcopat See, under the Archbishop of Patras.

Modon, anciently call'd Metbone, now Maitune or Mutum by the Turks, is seated on the Southern Shoar of the Morea, near the Cape, over against the small Island of Sapienza, about 140 miles South from Patras. It hath a fair Commodious Haven, and is a Strong, Rich and Trading City. Dignified with a Bishop's See, and was the Place of Residence of the Turkish Sangiack, or Governor of the Morea. This was one of the 7 Cities which Agamemnon promis'd to Achilles, and was at that time possess'd by Menelaus King of Lacedaemon. In the Aetian War with Anthony, Agrippa at his first Landing made himself Master of this place, and took in it Bochus King of Mauritania, whom he Slew. It sustain'd much damage in the time of the Emperor Trajan, by the Inroads of the Illyrians; but that Prince to make amends Granted it many Privileges which were confirm'd by Constantine the Great. The Venetians took it in 1124. but were outed the next year by the Greek Emperor. In 1204. they got it again, but lost it for some time to the Genoese Pirates, whose Captain Leo Veteran being taken, the Town was again recover'd, and held till 1498. when Bajazer II. Besieg'd it with an Army of 150000. Men, whose Power forc'd a Surrender, tho' it was long Defended. In 1659. the Venetians took it again, but the Turks recover'd it in the end of the Candian War. And finally, in the late War, the Venetians retook it, and now enjoy it.

Coron, Corona, one of the most Important Places in the Morea, is Seated about 20 miles East from the Cape de Gallo, which is the Acritas Promontorium of Ptolemy, on the west side of a Gulph to which it now gives Name, but formerly call'd

Sinus

Sinus Messeniacus, on the Southern Shoar of the Morea, about 25 milés East from Modon. It was anciently a Colony of the Thebans, call'd Pedafus by the Poets, Epea by Pausanias, and Corona by Srrabo and Pliny, from a Brafs Coronet found in digging its Foundation. The Town lies on a Tongue of Land, advancing into the Sea, the Land side being Guarded by a large Tower, built by the Venetians in 1463. and the two Angles to the Sea surrounded with an old Wall, and flank'd with strong Towers. It hath no immediate Port, but the Gulph which bears its Name, is a safe Harbour. The Country about affords good store of Fruits, Grain, Oil and Silks, which the Inhabitants Vend abroad, to their great Advantage. This Town also was Subject to the Venetians taken by Leo Veleran, in 1204. as well as Modon, and recover'd with that soon after. And with that also was lost to Bajazet II. in 1498. The Spaniards under Andr. Doria, Charles V's Admiral took it, in 1532. but soon lost it. And it remain'd under the Turks, till General Morosini in the year 1685 reduc'd it, notwithstanding the obstinate defence of the Besieg'd, and the Succors that came to their relief.

Messeniga, 10 miles North from Coron, is the ancient Messene.

Calamata tho' an unwall'd Town, had a Castle of good Force, which was surpris'd, and burnt, by General Morosini, in 1659. And again in the late War Anno 1685. the same General retook it, and caus'd it to be entirely demolish'd. It stands on the Confluence of the River Aris, with the Camissus, not above 10 miles from the bottom of the Gulph of Coron, about 20 miles from that City to the North, and 35 from Modon to the North-east, and is a place indifferently well Inhabited.

Navarino, Navarinum, aut Pylus Messeniaca, one of the most ancient Towns in the Morea, is seated on the West side of the same Promontory of Land, that Modon and Coron stands on, 13 miles North from the former, and 28 miles West from the latter. It is divided into the Old Town and the New, the former is seated on a Rock that advances out into the Sea, which is Naturally very strong, and besides well Fortifi'd: The latter stands on the side of a Hill, and is defended by strong Walls, and a Citadel with 6 Bastions, built by the Turks, in 1572. At the Bottom whereof, lies the Haven, the best and most capacious of all the Morea, and its Entrance Commanded by the Cannon of the Old Town: and therefore it was chosen by Sultan Ibrahim, for the Rendezvous of his Fleet, design'd for Candia in 1644. The Turks were Masters of this Place, from the year 1498. till 1686. when General Morosini, with a Fleet of 200 Ships, soon forc'd the Old Town to surrender, but the New Town made a resolute Defence, in hopes of Relief, till they heard of the Defeat of the Seraphiker, by General Coningsmark, which made 'em then surrender.

Castle Tornese, call'd Clemontzi by the Turks, is a small Town near the Cape of Tornese, which shoots out into the Sea, on the West side of the Morea, between the Gulph of Arcadia, and that of Patras, and is distant 30 miles from Chiarenza to the South, 50 from Navarino to the North-west, and about 3 miles from the Sea Coasts. It was formerly Nam'd Cbelonates, and stands on an Eminence that overlooks a pleasant Country. General Morosini took this place, after the taking of Patras, in 1687.

Belvedere, the Elis of the Ancients, gave Name to this Duchy, and is a large Town, seated on the River Peneus, 15 miles from the Ionian Sea to the East, about 10 from Castle Tornese to the North, as many from Chiarenza, and 40 from Patras to the South. Formerly famous for producing excellent Horses, and had its Name Calliscepium of the Greeks, and Belvedere of the Italians, from its pleasant Situation.

Cyparissa, seu Cyparisse, now Arcadia, sometimes a City, and good Port, but now in decay; stands 20 miles North from Navarino, and gives its modern Name to a large Gulph now, as its ancient one did formerly, being then call'd Sinus Cyparissus.

Lauganico, the ancient Olympia, vel Olympia Pista is seated on the River Alpheus, not far from its mouth into the Gulph of Arcadia, 25 miles from that Town, and near 50 from Navarino to the North, and 55 from Patras to the South. It was anciently known throughout the World, for the famous Games instituted by Hercules, and Celebrated every fifth year, in its neighbouring Fields, wherein the bravest Youths of Greece, contended for the Prize, and esteem'd the obtaining it, the greatest Honour in the World. Hence came the Computation of Time by Olympiads, well known to Historians. 'Tis now but a small Town, and not at all considerable.

Mistra, or Misistra, the ancient L A C E D E M O N, or S P A R T A; or rather a City about 4 miles from the Ruins of that, as Sir George Wheeler tells us; stands in the South-east part of the Morea, on the River Eurotas, 30 miles North from its Mouth, into the Gulph Colochina, or Sinus Laconicus, 100 miles South from Corinth, 60 North-east from Coron, 40 South-west from Napoli di Romania, and 40 from Malvasia to the West. The City was first call'd Lelegia from Lelex its first King, who was Cotemporary with Cecrops the first King of Athens, afterwards Lacedemon from the Name of his Successor, and Sparta from his Daughter or Wife, so Nam'd; or according to others, from Spartus the Son of Phoroneus King of Argos, whom they make its Founder. Its Antiquity was very great, so that a true Account of its Foundation is not extant; but 'tis judg'd to have been built in the Time of the Patriarch Jacob, and near 1000 years before the Building of Rome. We are Inform'd by Polybius that it was of a round form, extending 48 Greek Stadia or Furlongs, that is to say, 6 English miles in compass. There never was any City that surpass'd it for Military Glory, as having had the greatest share in those Noble Achievements, that made the Grecian Name so Illustrious; for they contended with Athens for Mastery, and Subdu'd almost all Greece. Their Law-giver Lycurgus, was famous for Wisdom, and left them such Rules for Government, that the Lacedemonians were as eminent for Politicks, as the Athenians were for Learning. They were Govern'd for many Ages by 2 Kings, at the same time under the Inspection of the 28 Gerontes or Senators, and afterwards of Five Magistrates, call'd Ephori. The last of the Kings was Cleomenes, who destroy'd the Power of the Ephori, and was himself Conquer'd by Antigonus Dofon King of Macedon, and the City, and State, made part of that Monarchy. This happen'd about 230 years before Christ, and about 1300 years after the Foundation of the City.

City. The Ruins of this City which Testify its ancient Magnificence are still to be seen, at Mistra, which is an Episcopal City of some Magnitude, consisting of four different Parts, viz. The Town, the Castle, and the two large Suburbs, one of which is call'd Mefochorion or the Middleborough, and the other Hexochorion or the Outerborough. The Castle, City, and Mefochorion, lie on one side the River Eurotas now call'd Vaseli-potamos; and the Hexochorion on the other side of the River. The Castle or Citadel, now call'd To Castrum, advantageously seated on the top of Mount Tage-tus, is surrounded with good Walls, and by some is affirm'd to be so strong, as never to have been taken by open Force: Within it formerly stood the Temples of Diana Lipatbaia, and Minerva Panachaiada, besides the Monument of Euripylus Son of Eucemen, who was present at the taking of Troy. The Town lies at the Foot of the Castle, which Covers it towards the North; it consists of 2 spacious Streets, and several small cross ones; the old Market place, call'd Agora by the Greeks, is beautifid with a curious Fountain, and hath a Church near it, built out of the ruins of Minerva's Temple: Here are also the remains of 4 Marble Buildings, which are the most considerable Antiquities of Mistra, viz. The Persian Gallery, or Portico, built in Memory of the Victory over the Persians at Placta; The Temple of Helena; The Temple of Hercules; And the Temple of Venus Armata. In the Town stands also the Cathedral Church call'd Panagia, or All-Holy. It is a fine Building, having Marble Pillars to Support the Roof, which has 7 Domes, and the Pavement is a curious piece of Mosaick Work; The Bishop's Palace; The Monastery of the Pandaneffis, whose Church exceeds the Cathedral, for beauty tho' not so large. In the Mefochorion or Middle-suburb, is another Church call'd also Panagia, that is far more Sumptuous, than the two already Nam'd: And there also stood the Turks finest Mosque, for the Building of which they made use of the Ruins of Lacedemon, and thereby undoubtedly destroy'd many notable Antiquities. Without the Walls are still to be seen the Dromas where the Spartan Youth perform'd their Racing, Wrestling and other Sports; and the Platon or Grove of Plan Trees, the shade whereof is very refreshing and delightful. The Grecian Emperors made this City an Appenage, of one of their Sons with the Title of Despot or Lord of Sparta; in which it remain'd till it was taken by the Turkish Sultan Mahomet II. soon after the taking of Constantinople about the year 1460. Three years after the Italians form'd it, but could not Conquer the Citadel, and so rais'd the Siege. And again in 1473. the Venetians took the Town, but not the Castle, and it remain'd Subject to the Turks, till the year 1687. when General Morifini, having Conquer'd the greatest part of the Morea, oblig'd both Town and Castle to Surrender.

Malvasia or Napoli di Malvasia, heretofore known by the Name of Epidaurus, and afterwards Monambalia, is seated on a Rock in the Sea, on the Eastern Coast of the Morea near the Mouth of the Gulph of Napoli di Romania, near 60 miles from that City to the South-east, about 40 from Mistra to the East, and about 30 from the Island Cerigo to the North. It is joynd to the Continent by a fair Timber Bridge, and is a place of notable Strength, being inaccessible but on one side, and defended by a triple Wall. It has a convenient Harbour defended by the Fortrefs, which is of great advantage to the Inhabitants for their Traffick. Tho it stands on a Rock it is supply'd with good Springs of fresh Water, sufficient for the use of the Town, and Gardens about it, which are very fruitful, and produce excellent Fruits, especially the Grapes whereof the Wine we call Malmsey is made. The City, tho it be a small one, is dignifid with a Metropolitan See, and has a Suburb enclos'd with a strong Rampart besides the Citadel. 'Tis said to owe its Foundation to a Colony of Argos, and was frequented on account of the Temple of Aesculapius; but Baudrand gives away this Honour to another Town; calling this Epidaurus Limeria, in Laconia; and distinguishes it from another Epidaurus in Argia, now call'd Pigadia, according to Niger, and Esculapio, according to Pinetus; wherein stood that famous Temple which gave occasion to the Poets to call Esculapius the Epidaurian Deity. Buno in his Notes on Cluverius, says the same, and places it in Argia. Epidaurus was also the old Name of Ragus Vecchio, in Dalmatia. Tho' the Fortrefs of Malvasia seem almost impregnable, it was taken by the French and Venetians, from the Greek Emperor, and retaken by the Venetians, who held it till 1573. when they deliver'd it to Sultan Solyman, to purchase a Peace. In the Candian War, the Venetians Storm'd and Burnt it, but the Turks re-built and held it till the late War. In the year 1689. the Doge Morifini Attack'd it, but being call'd home, he left the place Block'd up, which continu'd from the 14th. of September, to the 10th of August following, when they Surrender'd, and was the last place in the Morea, that held out.

Zanata, a Fortrefs of considerable Strength, stands on the West side of Zacenia, 30 miles South-west from Mistra, and but a few miles from the Sea call'd the Gulph of Coron. It is seated on a Hill, and defended by Towers, and other Fortifications. But was however taken by the Venetians, in the year 1685. in the very fight of the Captain Bassa who durst not attempt its Relief.

Chielefa, a strong Town of a mile in Compass, seated on a Rock, at the distance of 20 miles from Zanata to the South-east, and about 15 from Cape Matapan to the North, but 2 miles from the Sea, and near the place where stood the ancient Vitulo, a Trading City of good note, which gave Name to the Port, formerly well frequented, but now neither Commodious nor Safe. Chielefa is chiefly valu'd for its Strength, being surrounded with Walls, and flank'd with Towers, and the Rock on which it stands is very steep and craggy. General Morofini took it in 1685. and the Turks endeavouring to regain it next year, were Routed, and lost all their Artillery and Baggage.

Cape Matapan is the most Southern point of Land in the Morea.

Colochina in the midway between that Cape, and Mistra, and 30 miles East from Zanata, is only notable for giving Name to a Bay, anciently Nam'd Laconicus Sinus.

Cape Malio, Malea Promont. is the most Eastern point of the Morea, and 25 miles South from Malvasia. Overagainst it on the South, lies the Island Cithera, now Cerigo.

Megalopolis, the ancient Metropolis of Arcadia, and the Birth-place of the Historian Polybius, is now a small City, but Episcopal, Nam'd Leontari; it is seated at the foot of a mountain, on the River Alpheus, 40 miles North-west from Lacedæmon, 75 from Corinth to the South; in the Center of the Morea, and in the North Limits of the Duchy of Zaconia.

Napoli di Romania, the Capital of the Duchy of Seccania or Romania minor, was anciently Nam'd Nauplia, from Nauplius the Son of Neptune, and is call'd Anaplia by the Modern Greeks; it is a strong and fair City, seated at the bottom of a Gulph of the Ægean Sea, to which it gives the Modern Name, but anciently call'd Argolicus Sinus. It stands on the top of a small Promontory or Cape, which is divided into two Parts, one side whereof shoots forth into the Sea, making a safe and spacious Harbour, and the other toward the Land, renders the passage to the Town almost Inaccessible, being only thro' a narrow stony way between the Mountain Palamida and the Sea Shoar. The Haven is Spacious enough to receive a large Fleet, but yet so straight in its Entrance, that only one Gally can pass at a time. Besides this Natural Strength, there is a strong Citadel, about 100 yards from the City, and in the whole this is one of the strongest Places in all the Morea, and longer resisted the Turks. It is the Capital City of the Morea, with respect to Government, and the See of an Archbishop. And reckon'd to contain above 60000 Greeks, besides many other Inhabitants. It is seated, as we have said, near the bottom of the Gulph, about 60 miles North from Misitra, and 30 South from Corinth. This City had been Subject to divers Masters, before it was Sold to the Venetians in the year 1383, who bravely defended it against the Attacks of Mahomet II. in 1460. and Solyman II. in 1537. but were oblig'd to resign it two years after to procure a Peace. And it was the Seat of a Turkish Sangaick, till the Venetians recover'd it again in the year 1686, when General Coningmark Besieg'd the Town, and Morisini defeated the Serafquier, on the 29th. of August, which oblig'd the Garrison to Capitulate.

Argos or Argo, aut Argos Peloponnesiacum, was heretofore the Metropolis of the Dominions of King Agamemnon, and the Country of Argia. It is seated on the River Planizxa or Inachus, now Najo, 30 miles North from Napoli di Romania, and 40 South from Corinth. It was anciently a very stately magnificent City, and the Capital of a Kingdom, for several Ages, till Perseus remov'd the Regal Seat to Mycene, afterwards it was a Commonwealth, and had a share in all the Wars of Greece. But it is now reduc'd to a very low Estate, consisting only of Paltry Houses, except the Citadel and the Bishop's Palace, for it is an Episcopal See. This City was Purchas'd by the Venetians in 1388. from whom it was taken by Mahomet II. in 1463. but recover'd by General Morofini in 1686. But we must note, that besides this, there were other Cities in Greece of the same Name, viz. Argos Amphibolchium in Epirus, Argos Pelasgicum in Thessaly, and Argos Hippium in Achaia, fam'd for its excellent Horses.

CORINTH, now commonly call'd Corintho, and Coranto, and by the Turks Gereme, was anciently call'd Ephyra. It stands about the middle of the Isthmus between the Gulph of Lepanto, and Angia, about 2 miles from the former, and 5 from the other, 85 from Patras to the East, 54 from Athens to the Southwest, 25 from Argos, and 85 from Misitra to the North. Whether Sisypus, the Son of Bolus, built it, about the year of the World 2616. or a Wrestler, call'd Aletes, or by neither is uncertain, but it was anciently the Capital City of Achaia, and the Glory and Ornament of Greece. Its Situation between the Ionian and Ægean Seas, render it Beautiful, Strong, and Rich. It was a Place of great Trade, and in Power and Command, Inferior only to Athens and Lacedæmon. The Athenians and Corcyreans were sensible of its Naval Force, and it gave title to the Peloponnesian War. Dionysius the Sicilian Tyrant, being Banish'd his own Country, came here and set up a School. Its commodious Situation between the Sea-ports of Lecheus and Cenchree, the former of which in the Sinus Corinthiacus or Gulph of Lepanto, the other in the Sinus Sarconicus, or Gulph of Angia, contributed mightily to its Richness; for Lecheus lay to the West of it, and provid a most convenient and safe Port for the Ships which came from Italy and Sicily; the other, Cenchree, lay towards the East, and receiv'd the Ships that came from Asia. But as Trade brought Wealth, so that brought in Lewdness and Luxury, Insolence and Contempt of their Neighbours; having the boldness to put Indignities even upon the Roman Ambassadors; which, with the Apprehensions which Rome had of its growing Power, was the Reason why A. Luc. Mummius, was sent to burn it; The Corinthian Brass is laid to owe its beginning to the burning of this City; being a mixture of a great many Statues and Images of Gold, Silver, and Brass, which were melted down in that Conflagration; tho' others maintain that the Corinthian Brass or Metal was well known before this happen'd. Whoredom was so much practis'd, and Whores in such esteem in this Place, that they not only put all marks of Honour and Respect upon them, but offer'd up Publick Prayers to Venus for their Preservation and Encrease. Julius Cæsar in great measure Rebuilt and Peopl'd this City a new, by sending a Colony of Veteran Soldiers to it. It is defended by a Castle, known formerly by the Name of Acro-Corinthus, standing on a very high Rock, which is a perfect Precipice all round, except on the South side, where it slopes a little more. The ancient Despotes, or Lords of it, gave it to the Venetians, who kept Possession of it till Mahomet II. took it from them, together with the adjacent Country; but they recover'd it from the Turks, in the year 1687. It is now no better than a good Country Town: Nor must we judge of the number of its Inhabitants from its Compass, the Houses not being contiguous; but standing in 10, 20, or sometimes more together, with a good space between each of these parcels, commonly so large as to be a good Cornfield.

The Isthmus of Corinth being but 6 miles over, was often attempted to be cut, viz. by Demetrius, Julius Cæsar, Caligula, Nero, and by one Herodes Atticus a private Man. There was a Wall built cross from Lecheus to Cenchree call'd Hexamilion, because it was 6 miles long; which stood till the time of the Turks, and was by them twice thrown down, the Venetians having rebuilt it. The Ionians of old Erected a Pillar here, upon the side whereof that look'd to Attica, was written Tα δὲ ἄγρια Πελοπόννησος ἀπὸ Ἰωνία: And on the side towards Corinth, Tὰ δὲ ἔσπρη ἢ Πελοπόννησος ἐκ Ἰωνίας. And in this place Plays were solemnly Celebrated every Fifth year, (which were thence denominated the Isthmian Isthmian Games) in Honour of Phalemon the Son of Arhamos King of Thebes, and his Mother Ino who leapt into the Sea with her Son in her Arms to avoid her Husband's Fury, who had in a mad Fit kill'd his other Son, and as the Poets Fable, they were receiv'd by Neptune into the Number of the Divinities of his Train. Others say they were Instituted by Thebes in Honour of Neptune, See Potter's Antiq. Greece. The Ruins of the Theatre, Stadium, Temple of Neptune, &c. are still to be seen.

Sicyon, now Basilica, or Vasilica, the Capital of Sicyonia, an ancient Kingdom, which was also call'd Ionis, and Agialia, according to Strabo; and Demerriat, by Plutarch: Stands on the River Afopus, about 20 miles South-west from Corinth, and not above 5 miles from the Sea, or Gulph of Lepanto. It is often mention'd by the Poets, being noted for the fine Oil's growing in its Neighbourhood, also for Marble, Statuary and Painting.

It was the Country of the Poet Aratus. At present tis but a Poor Town, and has only the Ruins to demonstrate its ancient Splendor, Nemea a Village with a Grove, anciently famous for the Games there Celebrated in Honour of Hercules, who slew the Lyon whose Skin he afterwards wore, in this Wood. Or, according to others, in Honour of Archemorus, slain by a Serpent. It is now call'd Trifina, and stands about 30 miles South from Corinth.

Mycene, now Nam'd Charia, or Agios Adriano, from a Castle built there by the Emperor Adrian; once the Capital of a Kingdom, remov'd from Argos by Perseus, and continu'd 200 years. This City was built by Lacedemon, the Son of Semele, and was in its time very considerable, but now tis no more than an ordinary Village, seated about 10 miles North from Argos, and 35 South from Corinth.

CHAPTER IV.

Of the ISLANDS on the Coasts of GREECE, &c.

HAVING Travell'd through the Continent of Greece, we come now to the Islands that lye round about its Coasts, whereof there are a vast Number in these Seas, but many of them are so small that they are hardly worth mentioning. Those that deserve particular notice, such as Candia, Negropont, &c. we give as ample Account as is necessary, and if we pass over the rest with only Naming 'em, and their Situation, and a general Character, we hope it will not displeas the Reader. Beginning then at the Ionian Sea, on the Coast of Epirus, we meet with Corfu, and the two Pachsu, whereof we have already spoken in our Account of Epirus. The next is

St. Maura, Leucadia, Neritia, on the Coast of Achaia, a pleasant, fruitful Place, with Vines in abundance. It was first Inhabited by a Colony of Corinthians, now subject to the Venetians. On the North-east Point stands the Town of St. Maur, which gives the Modern Name to the Island, and is not above a League distant from the Coasts of Achaia.

The Echniades, or Curzolari, are a Cluster of Islands that lye on the East of St. Maura, and at the Mouth of River Achelous. Whereof the chief is Colombo. Dulichium, near the Shoar of Achaia, subject to the Turks. The rest are very small.

Cephalogna or Cesalonia, Cephalenia quæ & Samos, an Island of good extent being 120 miles in Circuit, and a Fertile Soil, producing Wool, Wax, Hony, Silk, Wine and Oil; Seated between St. Maura on the North, and Zant on the South, and about 20 Leagues West from the Mouth of the Gulph of Lepanto. It is subject to the Venetians, and hath 2 chief Towns, viz. Cesalonia an Episcopal See; and Argostoli a very good Port on the Southern Shoar.

Zant, Zacynthus, about 4 Leagues South from Cesalonia, and above 7 or 8 West from the Coast of the Morea; is not of half the extent of Cesalonia, but is very Fruitful, affording Wine, and Oil, besides Currants in great plenty, Subject to the Venetians. The chief Town of the same name is large and populous, surrounded with a Wall, hath large Suburbs, and a very capacious Port, where the English have a Factory. There are also many other Towns, (some say 50) upon this Island.

The Strophades, or Strivali, are 2 small Islands on the South of Zant, producing Wine, and Oil: But subject to the Turks.

Sapienza, Sephagia, Oenussa, on the South of the Morea, over against Cape de Gallo; gives Name to the Sea that flows about it. But otherwise not considerable, being almost deserted by reason of the Incurfions of the Pirates.

CANDIA, olim CRETA, the largest and most Celebrated Island on the Coasts of Greece, was formerly known by divers Names, as Hecatompolis, Aeria, Curetis, Marcaros, Marcaronesos, &c. And was in times past a considerable Kingdom. It took its Name from Crete a Nymph, the Daughter of Hesperus, or as others from Cretus its King. It is seated in Latitude between 34 and 35 Degrees, being not above 60 miles in breadth, but from East to West, it extends from 42 Degrees 30 Min. to 47 Degrees, being in length from Cape Salomon in the East, to Cape Cornico in the West, (according to Cluverius, 70 German Leagues, i. e.) 280 English miles. It lyes South-east of the Morea, and is the Land that Includes the Sea call'd the Archipelago.

Its Soil is most Fruitful, producing Corn, Wine, the best Oil, Oranges, Lemons, Figs, and other delicious Fruits, Salt, Pleasant Pastures, Cypress, Laurel, Myrtle, and other curious ever-Greens greens. The AIR also is Healthy and Temperate, except the South Wind, which is sometimes too Robust. Here are no Stags, Wolves, Foxes, or other Wild Beasts; but the Spider Tarantula is very troublesome, his Sting being Mortal unless Musick be appli'd to the Patient. Nor are here any large Rivers, only Brooks that Water the Meads. The most notable Mountain is Piloriti or Mount Ida, mention'd in Antiquity for the Corybantes or Idæi-Dætyli, the Priests of Cybele, that took care to Nourish Jupiter, in his Infancy, and continually beat their Drums lest Saturn should hear the Child cry.

The INHABITANTS were always Infamous for their Vice and Piracy, but withal, The Invention of Navigation, The Use of Arrows, The Art of War; and Recording their Laws, is Attributed to them. Tesle Cluverio. They were very early Govern'd by Kings; and afterwards by Dukes, till Q. Metellus Conquer'd, and made the Island a Province of the Roman Empire, and it continu'd under the Emperors of Constantinople till about the year 823. when the Saracens surpriz'd and took it, and built the City Candia, which in time gave Name to the whole Island. The Emperor Nicephorus Phocas retook it; and Baldwin Earl of Flanders and Emperor, gave it to Boniface Marquels of Monferrat who Sold it to the Venetians for a great sum of Money. They held it for above 400 years, till Anno 1645. the Turks fell upon this Island, took Canea, and sat down before Candia, which was so well defended being assisted by divers Nations, that it held out 24 years, but was at last taken in 1669. and has since with the whole Island been subject to the Turks.

The Island was subjectly notable for its Hundred Cities, whence it was call'd Hecateopolis. Whereof the most considerable (according to Cluverius.) were, Cortyna the Capital of the Island, Cydon which the Greeks call'd the Mother of Cities, Gnosus the Regal Seat of Minos, Therapne, Dium, Lycus, Lycastus, Phastus, Manekusa, Dißyna. Under the Venetians it was divided into 4 Territories, denominated from the 4 chief Cities, viz.

The Territory of Setia, which is the most Eastern Part; where in are these chief Towns, { Setia.
Lafthi.
Boniporo.
Cinofa.
Gerapetra.

In the Territory of Candia, which lies on the West of Setia, are { Candia.
Gortina.
Spinalonga.

The Territory of Retimo, lies next to that of Candia on the West { Retimo.

The Territory of Canea is the most Western Part, and contains { Canea.
Garabusa.
Sfachia.
Fenichia.
Castle Selino.

Candia aut Matium, the Capital of the Island, is seated on the Northern Coast in the middle of the Isle, in respect to East and West. On a Plain, at the Foot of a Mountain, and hath a Commodious Harbour. It is a very large City, divided into the Old Town, and the New, and was a Metropolitan See (now the Seat of the Turkish Sangiack) Strongly Fortified by the Venetians, with a Castle and other Bulwarks, and an Arsenal well furnish'd with Military Stores, which enabl'd it to hold out that memorable Siege of 24 years continuance. For the Turks sat down before it in the year 1645. but were beaten off with great loss, yet not so but that they continu'd it Block'd up, till 1667. and then the Siege was renew'd with great Vigour, and the Town taken Sept. 27. 1669. Thus the Famous and Fruitful Isle of Candia, the Cause, and Occasion of all that Blood and Treasure that was spilt, and exhausted in 24 years War, fell at length to the Fortune and Increase of the Turkish Empire, being the most Impregnable Fortrefs of the World, strengthen'd with as much Art and Industry, as the Human Wit of this Age was capable to invent. After a strait Siege of 2 years, 3 months, the 27 days, allotted for the Surrender, being expir'd on the 27 of Sept. 1669. being Friday, the great Cross Erected on the Wall, was taken down, after Midnight; and about 9 that Morning, the Principal Citizens offer'd the Keys of the City to the Grand Visier, in a Basin of Silver, on the Breach of St. Andrea. The Turkish Army took Possession that day, and the Grand Visier, made his Entry on the 4th. of October. Four Parts of five of the City was Ruin'd and Demolish'd, during the Siege. All the Bells and Ornaments of the Churches and Houses, to the very Locks of the Doors, were carri'd away; the Arms remaining, were old and rusty, and not above 350 Pieces of Cannon left upon the Walls, and those for the most part but very small. The Inhabitants (as Sir Paul Ricour goes on) remaining were only 5. except some few decrepit Jews and Greeks, about 30 in Number, so that never could be a more sad Spectacle of Desolation, nor a more clear Mirror of the Miseries of War.

During this Siege, on the Venetians side were kill'd and wounded 30985. of the Turks 150754. The Storms which the Turks made upon the Town, were 56. The Combats under Ground 45. Sal-lies made by the Venetians 96. Mines Sprung by the Venetians 1173. By the Turks 472. Barrels of Powder spent by the Venetians 50317. Granadoes of Brals and Iron 100950. Granadoes of Glafs 84875. Canon-shot of all sorts 276743. Pounds of Lead 18044957. Pounds of March 13012500. It is not certain what quantitie of Ammunition the Turks spent, only the Brals taken up in the Streets, which came from the Enemies Bombs, was so much, that whole Ware-houses were fill'd with the Metal, and was worth many thousand Crowns. In the year 1692. the Venetians attempted to Besiege Candia; but were repuls'd with loss.
K k k with

Gortina, formerly one of the chief Cities of Crete, now a large Village, Nam'd Gurtina, stands on the River Letheus 20 miles east from Mount Ida, and near as far from the Southern Shoar. About 20 miles East of this Town, towards Gnosfius, stood the Labyrinth the Stupendous Work of Dedalus, and the Seat of the Minotaur, some Ruins whereof are still seen.

Spina longa, a Castle, on a good Port, in the Northern Shoar, 50 miles East from Candia.

Setia or Sittia, Cytecum, the least of the four Principal Cities, stands on a very good Haven, in the North Coast, 70 miles East from Candia.

Gnosfius formerly the Regal Seat of Minos, now a Village, call'd Cinofa, stands about 30 miles West from Setia.

Gerapetra or Hierapetra, Sacra Petra, a Town with a Castle, on the South Coast, 20 miles South-west from Setia, whence the Neighbouring Promontory takes its Name.

In the extrem East part of the Island are the 2 Capes Sidero and Salomon, near which was the Portus Pulcher now Boniporto.

Retimo, Rhitymna, Rethymnum, the Capital of that Territory, stands on the Northern Coast, 50 miles West from Candia. It hath a Castle on a Rock, and a reasonable good Port.

The Mountain Ida, now Pfloriti, mention'd above, stands in the Limits of this Territory.

Canea the ancient Cydon, call'd the Mother of Cities, a strong City of Quadrangular Form, with a Port, on the North Coast, 100 miles West from Candia.

Sfachia olim Leuci Montes, a Castle on the Southern Shoar over against Canea.

Castle Selino, Lissus, on the same Shoar 30 miles West from Sfachia.

Cape Crio, Criumetopon, The South-west Point of the Island, over against which, lies the Island Claudes now Goza.

On the North-west of Candia, near the Coast of Laconia, lies the Island Cythera, now Cerigo, subject to the Venetians, with a Castle on the West side, and a safe Port.

The Cyclades, or Islands of the Archipelago,

So call'd from the Circular Form they lye in, are situated between Candia on the South, and Negropont on the North. The Number of them is various. Isidorus makes 'em 50. These that follow are of chief Note, and are all subject to the Turks, but Tenos, which the Venetians have.

Millo, call'd Zephyria by Aristotle. Mimallis by Calymachus, and Melos by Strabo, about 20 Leagues North from Candia, an excellent Port, but chiefly frequented by Pirates: It is about 40 miles in Circuit, and the whole Country is Mountainous, except a Pleasant and Fertile Plain, 6 or 7 miles long, in the midst of which stands the City of Millo, con-aining (according to the Sieur du Mont's Description) about 20 narrow Streets. The Inhabitants are generally Greeks, but there are also 300 or 400 Souls of the Latin Church, who have their Bishop and Cathedral. The Venetians maintain a Pedestiar in the Island, to gather the Tribute; but there is no Garrison kept in it, so that the first well attended Corfsair that comes is King of it, so long as he pleases to reside in it. The Women are so accustomed to the Converse of the Pirats, that they are generally very liberal of their Favours, but not quite so frank as their Neighbours of Argentiere, (anciently call'd Cimolus) which is another little Island about 20 miles in Compass, containing only a little Town, and Village, both Inhabited by about 500 Women; for there is not a Man in the Island except 7 or 8 Papi's, who perform Divine Service. These Women have no Trade to maintain 'em, but live purely on the Work of Nature; so that all the Marchants and Corfsairs who come to the Island, chuse a Female Companion, either Fair or Brown, according to every Man's particular Fancy. The Children are left to the disposal of the Women; the Girls grow up, and Work to maintain their Mothers; but as soon as the Boys are 12 years old, they are put on Board the first Vessel that touches on the Island. Milo is surrounded by many smaller Islands, particularly Argentera, above mention'd so call'd from a Mine of Silver.

Siffano, olim Siphnus, a few Leagues on the North of Milo, hath a good Town of the same Name, and several Villages, it is about 40 miles in compass, (according to Baudrand) and belong'd formerly to the Family of Gozadini in Venice; but the Turks have been Masters of it ever since the year 1450. It was anciently famous for its Gold and Silver Mines. Its principal Town is Nam'd Schinusa, and stands on a high Hill. The Inhabitants are divided in matter of Religion, some following the Greek, and some the Romish way of Worship.

Paros, Parù, or Pario, a few Leagues to the East of Siffano, hath a good Town of the same Name, and a Commodious Haven; Famous for its good Wine, and excellent Marble.

Naxus now Nichia, lies on the East of Paros, divided by a Channel of 2 or 3 Leagues Broad, hath a Town of the same Name, and some Commodious Havens. It has been noted for its plenty of good Wine, and excellent Marble.

Amorgo or Morgo, on the South-east of Naxus, hath a Castle, and some Villages.

Delos, or S. Deli, or Sdilles, 10 Leagues North from Naxus, formerly noted by the Poets, for the reception of Latona, who is said to have been deliver'd there of Apollo, and Diana: Here was a Temple of Apollo richly Endow'd.

Mycone on the East side very near Delos, Populous, and Fruitful, but the Inhabitants are Pirats tho' Christians.

Tenos, now Tine or Tiste, on the West side of Delos, subject to the Venetians, is a high Rock of Marble, but in some parts Fertile. It has 2 Ports. and and a Castle with a Town of the same, seated on a high Rock on the West-side.

Rhena, now Suda, and Seladussa, on the South-west of Delos.

Andros, or Andrus, olim Cauros, of near 30 miles extent, but Mountainous. The chief Town of the same Name stands on a Rock on a Bay in the South-Coast, and in the middle of the Island. Here are also Two other good Towns; Dium on the West-Coast, and Hydrussa on another Bay in the South-Coast from Andros.

Zeæ, Cytnus, Ophiusa Dryopis, 8 or 9 Leagues South from Andros, and West from Delos, hath a Town of the same upon the Coast.

Polyægos, now Fermentia, lies next to Zeæ on the South, Mountainous and Woody.

Seriphus, Serfino, next to it, hath a Town of the same Name.

Thera, olim Caliste, now Zermia, lies a few Leagues South-west from Seriphus, and West from Siphonius; hath Salubrious Baths which are much frequented.

Islands in the Gulph of Engia, Sinu Saronico, are,

Engia, or Egina, in the Mouth of that Gulph, which, as we have said, flows between Achaia, and the Morea. The Country of the Fabulous Aacus Judge of Hell: It is a fruitful Soil, and has a Town of the same Name with a Haven.

Salamis, now Colure, lies more within the Bay on the Coast of Achaia: It is of 50 miles compass, and has Three Towns, viz. Coloumi, Mitropis, and Ambalachi, near which stood the ancient City Salamis, memorable for the Defeat of Xerxes's Fleet, by Themistocles, and the Athenians. The Birth-place of Solon, and the Regal State of Telamon the Father of Ajax.

Kera, a Rock on which Xerxes sat on a Silver Throne to behold the Battle of the Two Navies.

Islands in the Ægean Sea.

NEGROPONT, anciently Nam'd EUBOEA, and now Egripos by the Modern Greeks, is an Island lying along the Coast of that part of Achaia, formerly nam'd Bwoia, extending above 100 miles in Length, but not above 25 in Breadth. It is suppos'd to have been first joyn'd to the Continent of Greece by an Isthmus, which, either by the violence of the Tides, or as others, by an Earthquake was broken: It is divided from the Continent by the narrow Channel Euripus, whose Tide Ebbs and Flows Seven times a day, as says Pomp. Mela; nay, even sometimes much oftner, as 10, 11, 12, 13, or 14 times a day, being often very irregular; and again at other times observing the course of the Moon, and flows as regularly as the Sea. It is next to Candia, the largest Island in these Seas, and is called the Queen of the Ægean Sea, on account of its Fertility as well as Largeness: The Soil producing Corn, Wine, Fruits, and Cattle in so great abundance, that all sorts of Provisions are wonderfully Cheap. The Mountain of Caristo is famous for its excellent Marble, and the Stone Amiantos, or Asbestos, whereof his pretended incombu'tible Cloath was made was found here. After the Eastern Emperors had parted with Negropont, it fell into the hands of the Venetians, from whom it was taken by the Turks under Mubomet II about the year 1470. who with a Fleet of 300 Sail, and 120000 Men attacked it, and have ever since held it.

The chief Towns are,

Negropont, or Egripos, in a Peninsula on the South-Coast, in the middle of the Island with respect to East and West, and over-against Aulis in Achaia, to which it hath a Stone-Bridge with a Castle in the middle of the Channel built by the Venetians. It stands in the place of the Ancient Chalcis, and is a large place, the Walls of the City being Two miles in Compass, and the Suburbs much larger. In the former live the Turks and Jews, and in the latter the Christians, the whole being esteem'd 14 or 15 Thousand Inhabitants. The Turks have Four Mosques, one whereof was the Cathedral Church of St. Mark: And the Christians have several Churches and a Bishop. This is the Seat of the Captain Bassa, or Admiral of the Turkish Navy, who is Governor of this City and Island, and also of Achaia: And in the Harbour which is very safe and capacious; there constantly rides a large Fleet of Gallies, ready at all times to go out against the Corsairs or other Enemies. The City is so strong that it cost the Turks 40000 Men to take it: And when the Venetians attack'd it in the Year 1688. they were fain to leave it without Success.

Caristo, or Castelrosso, a good City with a Commodious Port on the Eastern Shore of the Island 50 miles distant from Negropont. And a few miles North from it, is the Promontory Caperus mention'd in Antiquity, on account of Nauplius the Father of Palemedes, who there drowned himself because Ulysses and Diomedes had escaped him.

On the North-east of Negropont lies the Island Scyros, by Ortelius said to be the lurking-place of Achilles: It is of Triangular, or rather Pyramidal Form, with a Ridge of Mountains cross it Two ways, and has a Town of the same Name, with a safe Haven on the Western Shore, besides some Villages.

At some distance to the North-east, and in the Mouth of the Gulph of Salonichi lie a Cluster of Islands, among which Pelagnisi, olim Alonejus, Sciurus, now Sciatta, Scopelius, now Scopulo, are the chief, but they contain nothing memorable.

LEMNOS, now Sealimene, a large Fruitful and well Cultivated Island, seated in the North of the Ægean Sea, at an equal distance almost from the Coasts of Greece: Nacolia, and Thrace, in the Latitude of 41 Degrees, the chief Town standing directly over-against Monse Santo, or Mount Athos, whose Shadow reaches to its Market-place, tho' it be 86 miles distant, as some say, tho' by the Maps it does not appear to be above 60 miles. The Form of the Island is Quadrangular, and its extent about 25 miles over. The chief Town of the same Name stands on the West-shoar: It is a small City, and hath a good Port.

Port. Opposite to it on the East-shoar stands Madra another good Town, near which is dug the Terra Lemnia, a sort of Mineral Earth reckon'd good against Poysons, Infections, &c. and is much esteem'd, being sent Abroad in small Pellets mark'd with a Publick Seal. This Island is noted in Antiquity for the fabulous Fall of Vulcan; and for the Entertainment of Jafon, and the Argonauts by Hypsipyle.

Samos, now Samandrachi, a small Island North from Stalimene, in the midst between that and Thrace, has plenty of Honey and Wild-Deer, but no convenient Port, nor frequented but by Pirates.

Lembro, Imbros, lies on the East of Stalimene, near the Mouth of the Dardanelles. It has a Castle on the Top of a Mountain, and a safe Port.

Tasso, Thassus, seu Thalassia, lies near the Coast of Thrace, about 12 Leagues North-west from Stalimene. It has a Town with a good Harbour on the North-shoar, and several Castles.

The other Islands in the Archipelago, as Tenedos, Lesbos, Scio, Samos, Icaria, Parhos, Lero, Chios, Astypalea, Carpathus, and Sporades, being situate on the Coast of Asia are described there, as well as Cyprus and Rhodes; so we shall now proceed to speak of the rest of the European Turkey.

CHAP. V.

Of the Western Part of Turkey in Europe, comprehending the Province of Bosnia, with a small Part of Slavonia, and Hungary; as also of the Republick of Ragusa, and Dalmatia.

HAVING Travell'd through Hungary, Slavonia, Croatia, and Morlachia; and begun our Account of Turkey in Europe, with Greece, because the most noble part of it: We Return now to speak of the other Provinces of that Empire; and here the Province of Dalmatia first offers it self; but that being mostly recover'd by the Venetians, the principal Cities of it have been described in our Account of the Dominions of that State; so that it is only necessary here to say, that DALMATIA is seated along the Coasts of the Adriatick Sea, between Albania on the East, and Morlachia on the West, having Bosnia and Servia on the North, and the Sea on the South, except where Ragusa intervenes: It extends very much in Length even near 200 miles, but its Breadth is not above 30, or at most 40 miles.

The Soil of it is in some parts Mountainous, but otherwise very fertile, producing Corn, Wine, Oyl, Honey, and Wax.

This Province was part of the Ancient ILLYRICUM, but that extended much farther both West and East; for Cluverius tells us, That it was join'd to Italy on the West, being parted by the River Arva, in Istria; thence by a Line drawn to that Ridge of Mountains that part Morlachia from Croatia; which Mountains divided it from Pannonia on the North, and Eastward it extended to Mount Scodrus, now Chimera, and the River Drilo, now Drin, in Albania; and so comprehended the present Morlachia, Dalmatia, and part of Albania. But its Limits were often extended and restrain'd during the time of its being a Kingdom; which was suppress'd by the Romans, and Illyricum made a Province of their Empire, a little before the Third Punick War. Afterwards the Dalmatians asserted their Liberty, and were for some time a considerable People, extending their Country on all sides; but in the end it became part of the Eastern Empire till its Declension, when the Sclavi made it part of their Kingdom. Afterwards the Huns over-run it; who committing Piracies on their Neighbours, were Attack'd and made Tributary by the Venetians. In Process of time Dalmatia became a separate Government under its own Dukes, of whom Demetrius was about the Year 1076, invest'd by the Pope with the Title of King. Upon the failure of his Line in 1210, it was claimed by the King of Hungary as part of the Kingdom of Croatia, and part of it was possess'd by him, and part by the Venetians. At present the Venetians have all the Coasts, and the Principal Cities; and the Turks the Skirt of the Upland Country on the Limits of Bosnia, and Servia.

The chief Towns Subject to the Venetians, as we have said in our Account of Italy, are,

Zara, } } Traw,
Nona, } } Cliffa,
Sebenico, } } Cattaro.

Other chief Towns not mention'd there.

Scardona, } } Budoa,
Castel-novo, } }

And the chief Towns Subject to the Turks, viz.

Trebigna, } } Antivari,
Narenza, } }

Scardona, call'd Skardin by the Sclavonians, is a place of great Antiquity; by Ptolomy, plac'd in Liburnia, by Strabo call'd Scardo, and Scardona by Porphyrogenita, formerly the Metropolis of Dalmatia, but now Ruinous; however the See of a Bishop Translated from Belgrade. It stands on the River Kerka in the Frontiers of Morlachia and Bosnia, 20 miles North from Sebenico. It was fold to the Venetians in 1411. by the Waywood of Bosnia; but being afterwards taken by the Turks, was recover'd by the Venetians in 1683.

Narenza, or Narenta, which P. Mela calls Nara, and Pliny Narona, stands on the River Naro, 70 miles miles East from Spalatro, and 40 North from Ragusa. It was anciently a very Great and Powerful City, having under its Jurisdiction (according to Varro) 89 Towns, and assum'd the Sovereignty of the Gulph of Venice, but was subdued by the Venetians in 987, and lost almost all its Ancient Splendor. It was an Episcopal See; but in 1479 the Turks took and still possess it. Near to this place there is a Plain 30 miles Long, and 2 miles Broad, which is very Fruitful, and produces plenty of Corn in Six Months of the Year; but constantly about the middle of October it is overflow'd, and continues so the other Six Months.

Trebigna stands 40 miles South-east from Narenza, and the Frontiers of Ragusa, Subject to the Turks. An Episcopal See, formerly Subject to the Ragusians.

Castel-Novo, is seated on the West-side of the Gulph of Cattaro, 3 Leagues from its Mouth, 15 miles West from that City, and near 60 East from Ragusa. It is a very strong place, being Built on a Rocky Ground, and defended on the North-side by the Castle Salimanega. This Town was taken from the Turks in 1583, by the Confederate Forces, but lost the next year. But in the year 1687, the Venetians finally took and still possess it.

Budoa, mention'd by Pliny, Ptolomy, and Stephanus, under the Names of Butua, Buluu, and Burbaer, is situated on the Sea-Coasts between the Gulph of Cattaro, and the Town of Dolcigno, about 20 miles East from the former. It is an Episcopal See, and Subject to the Venetians.

Antivari, Antibarum, stands on the Borders of Albania, of which it is sometime reckon'd part, on the Coast in the midway between Budoa and Dolcigno. It was under the Venetians an Archiepiscopal See; but has been Subject to the Turks above an Age.

The Territory of the Republick of RAGUSA, lies on the Sea-Coasts, partly Island and Peninsula, and partly on the main Land of Dalmatia, which bounds it on the East, as the Bay of Narenza, and the Island Lefina do on the North, and the Adriatick Sea on the South. The Country is about 60 miles Long, but not proportionately Broad. The Soil is not over-fruitful, but the Country is reasonably Populous, and a well-govern'd Republick, but Tributary to the Turks, and often snubb'd by the Venetians, and insulted by other Princes. But they are so fond of their imaginary Liberty, that they will not be persuaded to put themselves under any Potent Master who could protect 'em. The Government is somewhat like that of Venice, except that thro' the jealousy of the Inhabitants, the Doge is changed every Month, as also the Governor of the Castle of Ragusa. This little Republick brags of Antiquity beyond Venice, and put it self (as Sir P. Rycaur says) under the Protection of the Turks before they were Masters of any part of Europe. And by the Treaty of Carlowitz this Sovereignty is particularly conserv'd by the Turks.

The chief Towns are,

Ragusa, }
Stagno, } Sabioncello.

RAGUSA, call'd by the Slavonians Dubrounick, suppos'd to be the Ancient Epidaurus; but as others, Built by the Epidaurians after the Destruction of their own City, whereof they say Ragusii

Vecchio, 2 miles from it is the Ruins. The City is not much above a mile in Compass, but Populous, the Sec of a Metropolitan, and one of the chiefest Ports in these Parts, having a safe and commodious Harbour on the Adriatick Sea, near 100 miles South-east from Spalatro, 60 West from Cattaro, as also 120 West from Durazzo. It is well Fortified with a strong Castle, a steep craggy Rock, and good Bulwarks, and Environ'd with large Suburbs. It hath also a Garrison of 200 Men, and the Burghers keep constant Guard. The Port is named Santa Croce, and is secur'd by the small Island Lacroma, which lies about half a mile from the Town on the one side, and a Cape of Land on the other, which is Fortified. This City was miserably shatter'd by an Earthquake on the 6th of April in the Year 1667, whereby the greatest part of it was destroy'd.

Stagno, Stagnum, a small City with a Commodious Harbour, and an Episcopal See, 20 miles North from Ragusa, at the Isthmus of the Peninsula, in whose Western Part, 25 miles from it stands Sabioncello, or Sabio, another good Town, with a Haven over-against the Island Curzola.

To the Ragusians are also Subject, The Islands, Meleda and Augusta, or Aussa, both lying near the Coasts of the Peninsula; the former about 20 miles in Length with a Town of the same Name, is not above a League distant; the other lies to the West of it, and on the South of Curzola, not so large.

Curzola Corceyra niger, Sirab, an Island larger than either of these, lies also not above a League or Two from the Western Coast of Ragusa, the chief Town of the same Name, being seated on the North-shore over-against Sabioncello, formerly Subject to Ragusa, but now to the Venetians.

There are Three or Four other small Islands but not considerable.

B O S N I A.

On the North of Dalmatia lies Bosnia, call'd Woffen by the Germans, between that and the River Sava, which parts it from Scalavonia on the North, as the River does it from Servia on the East, and the Unna from Croatia on the West. It was anciently that part of Pannonia, call'd Inferior, or Secunda Consularis, and took its present Name from the River Bosna, or Possna, which runs through some part of it, and falls into the Sava. It was sometime an independent Kingdom; afterwards became Tributary to the Hungarians; and lastly, was Subjected by the Turks, who still enjoy it.

The AIR is Sharp, but the SOIL produces some Corn, and some Mines of Gold and Silver. It is divided into the Upper and Lower; the former being the Southern part toward Dalmatia; the latter on the Banks of the Sava.

The chief Towns are,
 In the Upper } Bagnaluca, } Tina.
 In the Lower } Jayczá, } Bofna-Serajo.

Bagnaluca, or Banialuck, stands on the Confines of Dalmatia, 30 miles North from Spalato. It was taken by the Turks in 1527, and is the Seat of their Governor.

Tina, is 30 miles West from Bagnaluca, near the Head of the River il Kirk, and near the Confines of Croatia and Dalmatia, 30 miles North from Sebenico.

Jayczá, Giezá, or Gaitia, thought to be the Ancient Emate, stands upon a Hill 50 miles North from Tina, 20 South from the Save, and near 40 East from from Wibicz in Croatia. It was formerly the Metropolis of Bosnia, and Seat of their King, taken by the Turks, and recover'd by the Hungarians in the 15th Century; but finally reconquer'd by the Turks in 1530, and made the Seat of their Sangiack. It has a strong Castle, and other Fortifications for its Defence.

Bofna-Seraja, or Sarajo, stands upon the River Miglařza, 75 miles East from Jayczá, 25 South from the Save, and 15 West from the Frontiers of Servia. It is now reckon'd the chief Town of Bosnia.

Of the Part of Slavonia and Hungary granted to the Turks.

By the Treaty of Carlowitz, it is agreed, That a Line drawn from the Bank of the Tibisch, opposite to Titul, and to that Angle of Land made by the Confluence of the Tibisch and Danube, thence over the Danube, and thence over part of Slavonia to the place where the Bosfus falls into the Save (which is over-against the Limits of Bosnia;) shall be the Boundary of the Two Empires: That part toward Belgrade being Subject to the Turk, and the rest of Slavonia remain to the Empire. In the Turkish part stands no considerable City; Salkanement, Semlyn, and what else was worth notice, we have already mention'd in our account of Slavonia in General.

By the same Treaty of Carlowitz, it is also stipulated, That the Province subject to the Fortrefs of Temeswar, (which is the South-east Corner of Hungary) bounded by Transylvania, and Walachia on the East and North-East, the River Merisch on the North, the River Tibisch on the West, and the River Danube on the South, shall remain under the Ottoman Dominion; and that the Imperialists shall demolish, Caransebes, Lippa, Czanad, Berſcho, Sabla, and Three or Four other places never to be Refortified. The Imperialists and Turks to enjoy in common the use of the Rivers Marosch, and Teyſſe, and the Islands which his Imperial Majesty hath therein shall remain in his possession.

Temeswar, the Capital of this Province, is a large and strong Town, seated on the River Temet, (whence it took its Name) near the Confines of Transylvania, 40 miles North-east from Belgrade, 75 from Great-Waradin to the South, and 130 from Buda to the South-east. It was taken by the Turks in 1552. after a Vigorous Defence, made by a Spaniſh Garison, then in the place, who contrary to Treaty, were all cut to pieces by the Turks. It has ever since been the Seat of a Baſſa; and is so strongly Fortified, that they call it Invincible.

CHAP. VI.

Of SERVIA and BULGARIA, olim Moesia, Superior & Inferior.

THE Ancient Moesia, containing these two large Provinces, except the most Eastern part, on the Banks of the Black Sea, which was possess'd by the Scythians, and call'd Scythia Pontica. It was divided into the Superior or Prima, which is the present Servia; and the Inferior or Secunda, now Bulgaria; the Division being at the River Ciabus. In the Upper bordering upon Macedon, liv'd the Dardani, whence the Country was Nam'd Dardania. In the Lower, which borders upon Thrace, the Triballi were the most noted Nation; these had the Honour to Vanquish Philip King of Macedon, in his Return through their Country, from an expedition into Sarmatia. Beyond them Eastward, lay the Scythians, of whom the most considerable part were the Getae, Inhabitants of both sides the Danube, in Dacia, as well as Moesia.

M. Licinius Crassus intirely Subdu'd it, to the Roman Empire; and afterwards the Upper Moesia took the Name of Servia; and the Lower, that of Bulgaria; and became in time two Independent Kingdoms; which were finally Conquer'd, by Mahomet II. and are still subject to the Turks.

SERVIA lies Eastward from Bosnia, having the Rivers Danube, and Save, on the North, Albania and Macedon, on the South, Bulgaria on the East, Dalmatia on the South-west, and Slavonia on the North-west, from which it is divided by the River Save, as the River Drina is its division from Bosnia. Its extent is above 250 miles in length, from East to West; and 130 in breadth, from North to South. Being seated in Latitude from 43 to 45 Degree. And in Longitude from 37 to 43 Degree.

The AIR is Temperate and Healthy, and the SOIL so Fruitful that Moesia was call'd by the Romans, the Granary for Corn; but by reason of the severe Government of the Turks, it is not half Cult-Cultivated. Dr. Brown tells us, 'tis a Fruitful and Pleasant Country, consisting of Plains, Woods, and Hills, which would produce Wine, Corn, and Metals, if duly Manur'd: It hath also excellent Horses; and is well Water'd with Rivers.

The INHABITANTS were always reckon'd a Barbarous Cruel sort of People, much inclin'd to Robbery and Drunkenness, and tho' professing Christianity, according to the Greek Church, are often guilty 'of Selling Children to the Turks. There are Roman Catholicks among 'em, but the Greeks and Jews (who manage the Traffick) Inhabit the Cities, and the Turks the Burghs and Fortresses.

The chief Towns in Servia are,
 Belgrade. } Nissa.
 Semendria. } Scopia.
 Widin. } Novibazar.

BELGRADE, call'd by the Germans, Griechs-Weisemburg, and Nandor Alba by the Hungarians, Alba Graeca, aut Alba Bulgaria; suppos'd to be the ancient Taurinum, seeing that is plac'd in the Peutingarian Tables, 3 miles from the Confluence of the Danube and Save, at least it grew up out of its Ruins. It is seated on a Hill in the Country of Rascia, on the South side of the Danube, and East side of the Save, at the Confluence of those 2 Rivers; in the Latitude of 45 Deg. and Longitude 38 Deg. 30 Min. It is a large City, very well Fortifi'd, and admirably seated for Trade; having besides the Danube, the convenience of the Save, Drave, Tibiscus, and other Navigable Rivers, to convey the Commodities, which the Fertility of the Country would Produce, if it were Inhabited by a Virtuous, and Industrious People; under a regular, and Favourable Government. And in effect this is the greatest Mart in all these Parts, being Traded to by the Raguzans, by the Merchants of Vienna, who have Factories in this City, and by the Armenians and Jews, who are numerous here, especially the former who have a Church. Belgrade was formerly the Bulwark of Hungary. It resisted the 2 Sieges of Amurath II. in 1439. and Mahomet II. in 1456. but was at last taken by Solyman the Magnificent in 1521. The Turks slighted it for many years, having Frontiers so much more advanc'd. But when the Imperialists had taken Buda in 1686. they thought of repairing these Fortifications, which they immediately set to work upon. But however could not make it strong enough to resist the Christian Army, who under the Duke of Bavaria far down before it, and Septemb. 6. took it. But it was a place of too much Importance to the Turks to sit down with the loss of: wherefore in 1690. they Invested it with an Army of 60000 Men, under the Command of the Grand Vicer. The Garrison consisting of 6000 Men, made a brave Defence, till the Magazine was unhappily blown up by the fall of a Bomb, the Store-houses Fired, part of the Walls blown up, and the Trenches fill'd with Rubbish, which gave the Turks so much advantage, that they enter'd with Sword in Hand, and cut all the Garrison off, except the Governor and 300 Men, who found means to escape. And it is now the Frontier of Turky on this side. The River Danube is very broad here, and its Stream so Rapid that it permits not the Waters of the Save to mix with it, but (as Dr. Brown expresses it) cuts that River off, and the Waters of the one, and the other, are very visibly distinguish'd; that of the Danube being white and thick, and the Save green and clear.

Semendria, anciently a Roman Colony, and afterwards the Capital of Servia, but now ruinous, stands near the Banks of the Danube, 20 miles East from Belgrade; near this Place Sigismund King of Hungary, was defeated by the Turks in the year 1409. and in 1427. they took the Place; which the Christians beat 'em out of, after they had taken Belgrade in 1688. but 2 years after the Turks retook it by Storm, and put all the Garrison to the Sword.

Widin or Viddin, seated on the Danube at the Mouth of the River Lom, is a Fortress of great moment, for Covering the adjacent Parts, which made Prince Lewis of Baden, after he had beaten the Turks in 1639. and soon after taken Nissa, to march with a Party of Germans in the Month of October that year, to this place, which he took by Surprize; but the Castle held out for some time, which however was forc'd to submit to the Conqueror; and they held it till the year 1690. It stands 150 miles east from Belgrade, and about 70 North from Nissa. In the Neighbourhood of this Town, has happen'd several Battles, viz. in 1443. the Memorable one of Hunniades, who set upon the Turks by Night, and kill'd 30000 of them. In 1595. the Turks lost 19000 in Battle at a little distance from this place. And at the taking of the Town above mention'd, Prince Lewis slew 2000 of those that made defence.

Nissa, seated on a River of the same Name, which falls into the Morawa, the chief River of this Country, at the distance of 140 miles South-east from Belgrade, and 60 South from the Danube. It is a Town of Strength, and great Importance, and was the most advanc'd Town that the Christian Army Possess'd in their Progress in this Province. A. 1689. Prince Lewis of Baden with an Army of 15000. fought the Turks near it, entirely defeated their Army of 80000 Men, and immediately took Possession of the Town, which was reasonably well Fortified. But in the year 1690. the Turks retook it after a Siege of 3 weeks; and soon after the Frontiers of Turky were again extended to Belgrade, tho' on this loss, the Turks were ready to accept Peace on any Terms. But it pleas'd God to Order it otherwise, and permit this Province to be still subject to these Arbitrary Masters.

Scopia or Uscopia, Scupi, Prel. a City of great Trade, and the Largest in these Parts, as Dr. Brown says, is seated in a pleasant and plentiful Country, partly Hills, and partly Plains, on the River Vandar or Axius, at the Foot of Mount Orbelus, near the Confines of Macedon. 60 miles from Nissa, and 120 from the Danube to the South, 60 from Sophia to the West, and 100 from Salonichi to the North-west. It is a populous place, adorn'd with fair Houses, many Mosques, and delightful Walks all round it. 'Tis also a place of considerable Commerce, between Bulgaria, Macedonia, and Belgrade, and has Streets of Shops cover'd over, as the manner is at Belgrade, and other Trading Cities of Turky. When Mahomet I. Conquer'd it, he plac'd here a Colony of Asiaticks, which with Jews were its chief Inhabitants. Before that it had been an Archi-Episcopal Sec. In the year 1689. the Turks abandon'd this City, and Ge-

General Picolomini took possession, but because it was not strong enough to hold, he burnt and left it.

BULGARIA, ſive Mœſia Inferior.

Eastward from Servia, along the Southern Banks of the Danube, quite to the Black Sea lies Bulgaria, bounded on the South by a Ridge of Mountains, which part it from Thrace or Romania. Its Extent is more in length than Servia, being near 300 miles from East West; but in breadth 'tis not above 60 in the Middle part, but near twice as much at each end. It hath high Mountains, fruitful Vallies, plenty of Oxen and Sheep, and in General a good Ferule Country. Formerly ſubject to its own Kings, now the Turks; and Inhabited by Greek Chriſtians, as well as Turks and Jews.

Sophia, or Sofia, otherwiſe call'd Triadiſſa, the Capital of this Province, is ſeated on the River Ichar, in a ſpacious Plain, near Mount Hemus, at an equal diſtance from the Conſines of Servia, Romania and Macedon, being 65 miles diſtant from Scopia to the Eaſt, 110 from Salonichi to the North, 90 from the Danube to the South, and 100 from Phillipoli in Romania to the Weſt. It is a large populous and well built City, on the Road from Conſtantinople to Belgrade; the Seat of the Beglerbeg of Rumeli, but however deſtitute of Walls. It was anciently Nam'd Sardica, and took its preſent Name (as is generally believ'd) from Sophia the Wife of the Emperor Juſtinian, in whoſe Honour that Prince Re-founded it. It was for ſome time the See of an Archbiſhop, and was famous for a General Council held in it, in the year 347.

Siliſtria, a large City, the ſecond of Note in Bulgaria, and by ſome reckon'd as the Capital, and the Seat of a Turkiſh Sangiack. Strands on the River Abis, or Fatrus, 70 miles North from Sophia, and 25 South from the Danube: Sanſon Places this City on the Danube, 150 miles more Eaſt, but with what reaſon, I can't tell, ſince all other Maps and Writings Place it as we have ſaid.

Nicopolis or Nigeboli, and by the Turks Sciltare, ſtands on the Danube, at the Mouth of the Fatrus, or Ichar, 25 miles North from Siliſtria. Zuyſ calls it Gemina, major & minor, quas Danubius interfluit; but as no Maps expreſs ſo much, nor other Authors mention it, we muſt leave it to the Readers further ſearch. It was built by the Emperor Trajan, after the Deſeat of King Decebalus; and as Baudrand tells us, was an Arch-Epiſcopal See, in its Chriſtian State. Near this Place Stigſmond King of Hungary, was unfortunately Deſeated, by Bajazett the Turkiſh Emperor, in the year 1396. which was owing more to the Diviſions among the Chriſtians, than the Bravery of the Turks; for as Hiſtory relates there fell 60000 of the Turks, and 20000 of the Chriſtians.

Ternova, another good City, ſtands on the River Fantra near Mount Hemus, about 20 miles from the Conſines of Romania, 30 from Siliſtria to the Eaſt, and 40 from the Danube to the South. Ferrarius calls it, Arch-Epiſcopal, and the Metro-polis of Bulgaria.

Doroſtero, Doroſtorus, Doroſtolon aut Doroſtena, formerly a conſiderable City, and a Biſhop's See, now a Village only, ſeated near the Danube, 130 miles Eaſt from Siliſtria.

Axiopoliſ ſtands alſo on the Danube, 30 mile below Doroſtero.

Towns in Bulgaria, on the Coaſts of the Black-Sea, are Tomi, Tomisware or Balla, ſeated in an Iſland made by the Mouths of the Danube, is the Place to which the Poet Ovid was Banish'd.

Proſloviſa or Chiuſtenge, olim Iſtropolis ſtands at the Mouth of the South Branch of the Danube.

Magneſlia, 20 miles more to the South, a ſmall Port.

Varna, the Dionyſopolis of Pliny, ſtands upon the River Zyra, a few miles from Sea. A few miles from it a notable Battle was fought in the year 1444. between the Turks and Chriſtians, wherein Lewis King of Hungary was kill'd. It ſtands in the Midway between Magneſlia and Meſember.

Meſember, Meſembria, ut & Menebria, Strabo, Meſambria, Herod. Stands on the Conſines of Romania, and on a ſmall Bay, which is an ancient Port, mention'd by Hiſtorians, as the People about are by the Poet Ovid. Ferrarius calls it Urbs Archi-Epiſcopaliſ, but whether it be ſo ſtill we dare not ſay.

CHAP. VII.

Of ROMANIA aut THRACIA. And of the Greek and Turkish Emperors.

THIS Country had its first Name, as tis thought, from Thrace the Son of Mars; or as others, from the sharpness of the Air, and the rough Temper of the People, quasi Τετραχέα aspera regio, a sharp or cruel Country; Thus Gluverius. The Name of Romania was given it by the Emperors, when they had establish'd their Throne here: And since the Turks Conquer'd it, tis Named Rumeli.

It is a large Country, bounded on the North by Mount Hemus, call'd by the Greeks Balkan, Sclavonians Cumonia, Italians Monte Argentaro or Costanza, a long continu'd Ridge of high Mountains, which divide this Province from Bulgaria, on the South by the Archipelago, on the East the Propontis, and Bosphorus, and the Euxine or Black Sea, and on the West by Macedon and Bulgaria. Its utmost extent from East to West, is near 300 miles, that is from the City of Constantinople, to the Confines of Macedon: And its breadth is about 150 miles. The Air is Cold, but the Soil however produces plenty of good Corn and Pasture, and some, but very little, Wine. In the Mountains are Mines of Silver, Lead and Alom. It was anciently divided among many Nations or People, even no less than 50 according to Pliny. Afterwards made Tributary to the Macedonians; then Conquer'd by the Romans, under Caius Scribonius Curius Proconful; long possess'd by the Eastern Emperors; and lastly Conquer'd by the Turks, who have Govern'd it for near 250 years past. The chief River is the Meriza, olim Habrus, which takes its rise at the foot of Mount Rhodope, near the Confines of Macedon, passes by Philippipoli and Adrianople, and falls at last into the Archipelago; in this River 'tis said Gold Sand is sometimes found.

The Christian Religion, according to the Greek Church, is generally Profess'd, notwithstanding that the Government is all Mahometan: there are also many Jews, and some Papists.

The chief Cities are,

Janicoli or Nonocolo, stands on the River Meriza, on the Road between Sophia and Philippipoli, 60 miles East from the former, and 40 West from the latter.

Philippipoli, or Philiba, olim Trimontium, a large City, but without Walls, seated also on the Meriza, near 60 miles East from the Confines of Bulgaria, and as many North from the Archipelago. It is an Archiepiscopal See, and was taken by the Turks in the Year 1360, who have ever since held it.

Nicopoli stands near the Confines of Macedon, 20 miles from the Archipelago, and 40 South from Philippipoli.

Adrianople, or Adrinopolis, call'd Endrem & Drenale, took its Name from the Emperor Adrian, by whom it was Repair'd in the Year 122, and is Seated on the River Meriza in the middle of the Province, 130 miles from the Confines of Bulgaria to the East, 150 from Constantinople to the West, 70 from the Archipelago to the North, and 60 from Mount Hemus to the South. It is a large well-built City in a wholesome Air, esteem'd the Second of Romania; and before the taking of Constantinople was the Seat of the Turkish Emperor, after the year 1362, in which they took it: And it is still very frequently honoured with his Presence, especially during the late War, and at any time when the Plague rages at Constantinople.

Trajanople, so named from the Emperor Trajan, being before call'd Zermis, stands on the Meriza, 50 miles South from Adrianople; it was formerly a considerable City, and the See of an Archbishop, but is now dwindled into a small Town.

Abdera or Asperosa, Seated on the Coast of the Archipelago, 70 miles South-west from Adrianople, and 50 West from the Mouth of the River Meriza, and about 15 from the Bistonian Lake. It is more notable for Antiquity than its present State. It was Built by Abderus the Son of Diomedes, or Abdera the Sister of Diomedes, according to Solinus and others. Again it is by others imputed to Abderus one of the Companions of Hercules, torn to pieces by Diomedes Horses; and was once in so good Estate as to be proverbially call'd Abdera the Beautiful. It was the Birth-place of Democrius the Philosopher, who put out his Eyes that he might the better Contemplate, as also of Protagoras the Philosopher. The Inhabitants were addicted to Frenzy and Lunacy, which occasion'd the Proverb Abderetica mens to denote a Lunatick.

Gallipoli, a large City with a Castle, Magazine and Fortification, and a good Port in the Mouth of the Dardanells and Propontis, stands in the Mouth of the Dardanellus or Peninsula over-against Lampscaco in Asia, at the Mouth of the Strait call'd the Dardanells or Hellepont toward the Propontis or Sea of Mamora, 110 miles S. W. from Constantinople, and 130 S. E. from Adrianople. This place was heretofore much more considerable than at present; for tho' it be 5 or 6 miles in compass, it is not proportionately populous: The Inhabitants are reckon'd about 20000, whereof two Thirds are Turks, and the rest Christians and Jews. It hath two Bays convenient for Gallies, whereof that on the South-side is capable of Ships of Burden. And on the Shoar are some dry Stations for Ships. The Town appears more advantageously from without than within side; for the high Steeples of the Mosques, and the Cupolas of the Bezeftans, or places of Trade Trade like Exchanges, both here and in all the chief Cities in Turky, make a fine Show at a distance; whereas within the Towns the Houses being low, Built of Wood and Earth; the Streets narrow and cover'd, make but an ordinary appearance. This is the Seat of the Beglerbeg of the Islands the Prefect of these Seas.

Sestos the Ancient Town and Castle, the Ruins whereof still appear 25 miles South from Gallipoli, over-against Abydos on the Asian Shoar call'd the Dardanells, famous for Xerxes-Bridge here over the Hellepont; and for the Story of Hero and Leander. These two Castles serve to command the passage of this narrow Straight, and secure Constantinople on this side, as do those on the Thracian Bosphorus on the other side of the Propontis.

Rudisto, or Rodeso, a City of good Trade, having a Commodious Haven on the Propontis 20 Leagues North from Gallipoli.

Selivera, another Port and large Trading City on the Propontis 12 Leagues North-east from Rudisto, and as many West from Constantinople.

The Propontis on which these Towns as well as Constantinople are Seated, otherwise called the Sea of Mimora, flows between the Archipelago, and the Euxine or Black Sea, to both which it communicates only by Two narrow Straights; that on the South is the Hellepont, of which we have been speaking; the other on the North is the Bosphorus of Thrace, which leads to the Black Sea, both these Straights are very narrow, especially the latter; so that the Propontis seems but a Lake, the Asian Land, and the Cape on which Constantinople stands surrounding it, except where these two Channels have broke through. It's 140 miles from East to West, and 60 from North to South.

CONSTANTINOPLE is Seated in Europe, very near the Shoar of Asia, on a Point or Tongue of Land that juts out into the Sea of Marmora, in a Triangular Figure, Six miles Long, and Fourteen in Compass, Two of its sides being washed by the Sea. At the distance of about Twenty miles it affords a Prospect of the finest Landskip in the World, to the Wonder and Admiration of all those who look upon it; for it lies along the Shoar for above Six miles, and so situated sloping towards the Sea, that you perceive at once an infinite Number of Mosques, adorned with high Domes covered with Lead, and high Turrets, but especially with a lovely Prospect of the Castle of the Seven Towers, and of the Seraglio, which are particularly remarkable, both for their Largeness, and the vast number of gilt Globes and Spires resembling little Steeples. But it appears much more Glorious and Delightful without than it does within; for the Houses are generally of Wood, and the Streets so narrow, that in the greatest part of 'em Two loaded Horses cannot go a-breast; and their Houses jut out so far near the Top, that in several places one may step from one Window to another; which exposes it to the fatal Inconveniences of Fire, which breaks out frequently, and proceeds irresistibly till it meets with some Garden or empty place, where there are no Houses to be burnt: And besides, this sort of Architecture is very offensive to the Eye; for the Streets are extremely disfigured by this Irregularity: Nor have their Houses any External Ornament; for they are made for the most part of rough unpland Wood, daub'd over with nasty Red Paint, and look very ugly.

This City was founded by Pausanias King of Sparta, about 660 years before the Birth of Christ, and was called Byzantium; which Name it retained till Constantine the Great, resolving to make it the Metropolis of the World, ordered it to be Rebuilt with all imaginable Magnificence, and called it Constantinople, or Constantine's Town; but the Turks call it Stamboul. The French in Conjunction with the Venetians, took it in the year 1203, and Fifty years after 'twas re-taken by the Greeks, who remained Masters of it till the year 1453, when it fell into the hands of Mahomet II. and at present it is the Capital City of the Ottoman Empire. The Air is so extremely pure here, that the Inhabitants are never Subject to any Reigning Disease except the Plague, which once every year sweeps off vast Numbers of 'em. The Walls which surround this City at present are the same that were built by Constantine the Great, except in some places where they have been repaired. They are double on one side next the Land, with Battlements after the Oriental Fashion, and Towers from place to place; and besides they are defended with a lin'd but shallow Ditch. These, with the Castle of the Seven Towers, are also the strength of Constantinople; for the Inhabitants, not being accustomed to War, would only serve to hasten a Famine; and Bombs would make terrible Work, considering the Manner and Materials of their Houses.

The Places and Things most worth seeing are, 1. The Besestien, which is a distinct Canton of the City, enclosed with Walls and Gates, where all the Merchants keep Shops. This is the finest and most regular place in Constantinople: It is divided into Streets, and covered above with Planks, joynd together with Rafters, which form a kind of Roof sufficient to secure them against all the Inconveniences of bad Weather. The Merchants in these Shops keep only a Pattern of what they have in their Warehouses. In one part of it there are Goldsmiths, in another Drapers, in another Mercers, and so all other Shopkeepers. And this is the only place in Constantinople where there are Shops; for the rest of the City consists of little narrow Streets so desolate, that one may see more Streets than Persons as he passes along. The Second place remarkable, is the Hippodrome, which was Built by the Emperor Constantine for Exercises on Horseback, and is still called the Place of Horses. It is an Oblong Square 400 Paces Long, and about 200 Broad: In the End of which that is opposite to the Seraglio, there are Two Obelisks, one of 'em consisting of one Stone, is 70 Foot high. The Third thing remarkable is, the Church of Santa Sophia, which questionless hath lost much of its Magnificence, and is now the principal Mosque of the City. It is at present 120 Paces Long, and 80 Broad. The Walls are square, but the Vault or Roof is round, and so Artificially contrived, that so large a Structure is supported without any Columns; for those Rows of Columns that form the Two lower Porticos, serve only for Ornament, and are so placed, that they cannot be supposed to carry any other weight than that of Two Galleries, and even the greatest part of these Columns are so old, that they are forced to bind them about with great Iron Hoops to prevent their falling. At the Four Corners of the Building where the Vault begins to be round, the Four Beasts mentioned in the Apocalyps are painted in Mosaic; but the Turks have disfigured these, as they have done the Image of our Saviour, which is over the principal Door. This Temple is paved with very fine Marble, Covered with Mats by reason of the Coldness of the Marble, which might incommode these who come to pay their Devotion, who always put off their Shoes before they enter. This Mosque is the only Ancient Structure of that Nature in Constantinople; for all the rest were built in this and the last Age, by the Sultans or Sultaneſſes, whose Names they bear, the finest of which is that Built by the Sultans Valide, Mother of Sultan Mahomet IV. The Grand Signior's Arsenal is at the end of the Port beyond Cassum-pacha and Galata, and contains a considerable Extent of Ground. The Gallies are laid up under 120 Arches; and 'tis said there are Arms in it for 60000 Men; but no Christian is allowed to see them. The Seraglio, so much admired and talk'd of by those who never saw it, is Built on a Point of Land that juts out into the Sea, and is surrounded with high Walls, with a Parapet at the Top, and Battlements like those of the City. It is almost Four miles in compass, the greatest part of which is taken up with Gardens. The Structure is irregular, and is nothing but a vast heap of Buildings, not unlike to some old Castles in Christendom. The principal Entry is near Sancta Sophia, and exactly resembles the Gate of an old patry Town without Architecture or Ornament. On the Right-hand of the first Court, there are Apartments for the Sick, who are lodged as poorly as if it were in an Hospital. On the other hand are Magazines for 1000 Men, in case the Grand Signior had occasion at any time to arm his Domestick Servants for the Security of his person. In the next Court are the Grand Signior's Kitchens on one side, and Stables on the other for 100 Horses. Very near this Seraglio, and within the same Inclosure, stands the Old Seraglio, where the Wives of the Sultan's Predecessors are kept, and in a Third Seraglio the present Sultan's Wives are Lodged, joyn'd close to that of the Grand Signior. But a longer account of this famous place is not easy to be given, since few are allowed to survey it all, and besides by this time 'tis like the Reader has enough on't.

But above all those things that are to be seen about this City, the Harbour, which is called the Port by way of Excellency, is the most agreeably surprizing. 'Tis Three miles Long, and almost One Broad, clean and deep throughout, even to the Shoar, the largest Ship coming up to the Land. At the Entry into it there is a high square Tower, commonly called the Tower of Leander, from a person of that Name; who, as the Story goes, used to swim thither every Night to his Mistress, who was Imprisoned in the Tower.

It would be too tedious, and would swell the Description of this City, beyond what the Nature of this Work will allow, if we should relate all the various Accidents and Revolutions that have happened in it, from the time that Constantine the Great removed thither from Rome, till Mahomet II. Emperor of the Turks made himself absolute Master of it, on the 27th of May 1453, after having slain Constantine XV. and last of the Grecian Emperors.

Constantinople stands in the Latitude of 41 Degrees, and 30 Minutes, and Longitude of 49 Degrees, and 30 Minutes: On the Propontis on one side, and the Thracian Bosphorus on the other, by which it is separated from Asia, but at so little distance, that common Boats pass over; and Scutari on the Asian side is reckon'd a Suburbs to it, as is also

Galata adjoining to Constantinople on the North-side the Port: It stands on the South-side of a steep Hill, which jets out a Promontory into the Bosphorus. It is a City of its self, being surrounded with Walls and large Suburbs, exceeding Populous, and chiefly inhabited by Christians and Jews. It is a place of great Trade, and hath a Caravanſera, or Publick Store-houſe wherein the Merchants Lodge their Goods: It is handsomely Built and well Adorn'd with Cupula's, &c. On the Top of the Hill stands a round Tower adorn'd with Spires, and might be intended for a Fortress. On the North-side of Galata lies the Suburb

Pera, by which Name is sometime understood all Galata. It consists of one large Street running Northward, with divers cross ones, and is honoured with the Residence of the Christian Ambassadors.

Scutari, or Scudaret, is Seated on the Asian Shoar over-against the Port between the Two Promontories of the Seraglio and Galata. It is a large Town, suppos'd to be the Chryſopolis, and Diana's Forum of the Ancients, although there be now no Remains of Antiquity. It is Adorn'd with a Royal Mosque, Built and Endowed by the Sultans's Mother: As also a Palace or Houſe of Pleasure of the Grand Seignior's. Not far from hence on the Brow of a Hill may be seen one of the most beautiful Prospects in the World; for the City of Constantinople, Galata, and Pera, the Bosphorus, and the Propontis, with the Country about on both Shoars may be seen at once.

Constantinople thus increas'd with Scutari, Pera, Galata, as also Cassum Pachaz, and Tophana, which all lie contiguous, may be reckon'd one of the largest Cities in the World, being thought to be near twice as big as London.

Of the Government and Customs of the Turks.

This Empire was Founded by Ottoman or Osman, the First, about the Year of our Lord 1300. and its Seat was at first Establish'd at Prusa, a City of Bybinia in Asia Minor, which they took in the Year 1325, afterwards it was Translated to Adrianople in Thrace, and at last fix'd at Constantinople; where generally their Emperor, whom we commonly call the Grand Signior, keeps his Court, and from whence he issues out his Absolute and Uncontrollable Commands over all those vast Dominions that are under his Jurisdiction in Europe, Africa, and Asia. For according to the Primitive and Fundamental Constitution of the Government, the Turkish Empire is absolutely and intirely Despotic; that is, the Supreme and Arbitrary Power is lodg'd in the person of the Emperor, whose Will is the only Law by which he Rules, and who acknowledges no other Maxim of Government than sic volo, sic jubeo. He is not curb'd by any Written Law or Custom, and those whom he oppresses have not so much as a Right to complain. He may take away any Man's Estate, and either keep it, or give it to another. Sometimes he passes by the most Ancient Bassa's, and in one day advances a simple Chiaux, or even a Cook to the Dignity of Grand Visier. He can and does fend for the Heads of those he has a mind to be rid of, who are murder'd without any Tryal or Form of Justice, and even without knowing the reason of his Displeasure, which sometimes is more than he knows himself. In a word, his pleasure is the Supreme and Uncontrollable Law. This unlimited Power of the Sultan is Founded on the Mahometan Religion, which enjoys a blind Obedience to all his Commands under the pain of Damnation.

The Grand Visier is the chief Minister of State, and is called King by the Turks, to shew how much their Sultans slight and undervalue that Title, in imitation of the old Roman Emperors who bestow'd Kingdoms on their Favourites. The Grand Visier is intrusted with the whole Management of Affairs, and his power is almost equal to the Sultan's. He is in a great Measure the Arbitrer of Peace and War, and creates the Fortune of all the great Officers in the Empire. 'Tis true, he ought to do nothing without the Advice of a Council compos'd of Seven Bassa's, call'd the Visiers of the Bench; but they have only the Shadow of Authority, which scarce deserves to be mention'd.

The next to the Vizier Azem, or first Visier, are the several Beglerbegs (which as Sir Paul Rycaut observes, may not unaptly be compar'd to Archdukes in some parts of Christendom) having under their Jurisdiction many Sangiacks or Provinces, Beyes, Agas, and others; to every one of these the Grand Signior in Honour gives Three Staves trimm'd with the Tail of a Horle, to distinguish them from Bassa's, who have only two.

The next in order are the Bassa's, who are a sort of Vice-Roys in the Provinces. Their Office is to Administer Justice exactly, and to keep the People in Subjection to the Government. But they often abuse their Authority, and exercise more Arbitrary Power and Tyranny over the People than the Grand Signior himself. Every Bassa maintains a certain Number of standing Forces at his own Charge, who are always at his Command upon all Occasions, being well paid, which the Emperor's Army sometimes is not for want of Money. This is the fatal source of all those Seditions that have so often shaken, and will at last overturn the Empire. A Prince that would secure the Loyalty of his Forces must take care of 'em himself, visit 'em often, give out all Orders, prefer Men of Knowledge, keep both the Officers and Soldiers under an exact Discipline, and pay 'em punctually. The Grand Seignior observes not one of these, and therefore he may blame himself for the unruliness of his Army. The fate of Monarchs depends on their Armies, and without these neither Alexander, Cesar, nor Lewis XIV. could have made such Conquests; or the Confederates in the late War been able to put a stop to his growing and formidable Power.

There are Two sorts of Beglerbegs, says Sir Paul Rycaut; the first is call'd Has ste Beglerbeglik, which have a certain Rent assign'd them out of the Cities, Countries, and Signories allotted to the Principality; the second is call'd Saliane Beglerbeglick, who have a certain Salary Collected by the Grand Signior's Officers, with the Treasure of the whole Government, out of which also are paid the Sangiack Beglers, that is the Lords of the several Counties, Towns, and Cities, and the Militia of the Country. Of the first sort he reckons up 22. and of the other 6. for a particular account of both which, we must refer the Reader to the fore-said Author's Present State of the Ottoman Empire; where he may also find an account of all the other inferior Officers belonging to that Government.

As to the Manners and Customs of the Turks, they are opposite to us almost in every thing. We content our selves with one Wife, they marry several Wives; Our Habit is short, theirs long. We wear our Hair long, and our Beards shav'd, they shave their Hair, and suffer their Beards to grow: We write in a strait Line from Left to Right, and they in a crooked from Right to Left. And it were easy to add several other Instances of the same Nature, since the Opposition reaches even to the meanest Actions, such as the easing of Nature; for they crouch down to piss, like Women; and when they have done rub their Privities on a Wall which they think pacifies 'em. They obstinately adhere to their Ancient Customs, and accuse the Franks of Fickleness and Inconstancy, and boast of their strength of Mind, that fixes on solid Enjoyments, and take no notice of Trifles; but one that seriously considers the Genius of this Nation will easily find, That what they call Strength of Mind, Constancy, and Solidity, is at the bottom (as the Sieur du Mont observes) nothing else but a pure Insensibility, and a Weakness that is altogether inexcusable in any reasonable Creature. They are so far from endeavouring to improve their understanding, that one would think they affected Ignorance, and are so little acquainted with the Transactions of the World, that many of 'em scarce know the Name of the Reigning Sultan. They never publish any Books, Journals, Gazetts, or the least account of Publick Affairs. They are much addicted to the Study of Magical Divination, and of the Philosophers Stone. They are surprizingly negligent of the Publick Interest, and in that respect, run exactly Counter to the Maxims that are observ'd in all Well-govern'd States. If we consider this incurable Flaw in their Government, we may venture to conclude, that Posterity will not find many objects of admiration in the future Monuments of their Power and Glory. If the Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans, had not been Inspir'd with a nobler Ardour, we should not now see so many Curious and Inquisitive Persons, undertake such long and troubleome Voyages, to Visit the Ruins of their Ancient Grandeur, or discover the Medals that give Light to their History. The Turks are so extremely careless of the management of Publick Affairs, that their S are not so much as Pav'd: And if there were Legacies left for such useful Works, I am apt to believe, there would not be a Fountain in their Towns, or Bridge on their Rivers. They have no Incorporated Societies, Town-Houses, Sheriffs or Burgo Masters. There are no fixt Posts or Couriers, so that when a Man has occasion to write to any remote place, except Constantinople, Aleppo, or Cairo, he must sometimes wait a whole year for an opportunity: And even between Smyrna and Constantinople, there are only Arabs, who go on Foot, and frequently stay a Month before they set out.

As to their Administration of Justice, they have no written Laws, but what are contain'd in the Alcoran, which they hold to be the Rule of Faith, and the Standard of Justice, and every thing that it forbids is esteem'd unlawful, and Punishable. Nevertheless the Cadis and Bassas judge as they please, for the Book is very short, and besides, a great deal fuller of Dreams and Absurdities, than of Laws or Moral Precepts; and those few it contains are so ambiguously express'd, and deliver'd in so loose a manner, that these greedy Officers cannot desire a more favourable opportunity to satisfy their Avarice. Besides, they judge without Appeal, and cause the Sentence to be executed upon the Spot. 'Tis true, some highly injur'd Persons have recourse to the Grand Signior's Divan; but that is seldom done, by reason it is Expensive and Troubleome; and besides, the Injustice done them must be very plain, or 'tis in vain to expect Satisfaction. All Civil affairs are Judg'd by the Cadis, according to the Deposition of Witnesses, without any regard to Writings. And if you can but bring two Persons to swear that they saw you pay 1000 Piasters to your Creditor, which you ow'd him upon your Note or Bond, he loses his Money; and (as Du Mont says) there's always plenty of Knights of the Post, to be had for a small matter: And besides, the Cadi, whose Office lasts but for a year, and who grows Rich in a few months, thinks it not beneath the Dignity of his Office, to take a little Money, and give Sentence as you would have it.

The Judgment of Criminal affairs belongs to the Bassa, who proceeds much after the same manner; for Money clears the most Barbarous Malefactor, and without that, Justice degenerates to Crucity. 'Tis true the Grand Signior sends Superior Bassas from time to time, attended with some Companies of Soldiers, to search after unpunish'd Malefactors; but these Great Inquisitors have not power enough to rescit the Charms of money. There are several sorts of Punishments inflict'd on the Malefactors in this Country; such as Beheading, Drowning, Hanging, Strangling, Burning, Impaling, and the Strapado. The two last for Turks that renounce the Mahometan Faith. Robbers and Murderers are Hang'd. Women are drown'd. The Rebellious and Seditious are beheaded. Christians who Blaspheme Mahomet or the Alcoran, or lye with Turkish Women, are Burnt.

The Government of the Cities is manag'd by five kind of Officers, the Bassa, Sub-Bassa, Vaivod, Cadi, and the Receiver of the Customs. The Bassa is properly the Governor, and judges Criminal Causes; and the Sub-Bassa is as it were his Deputy. The Vaivod examines the Measures and Weights, punishes Drunken Persons, and all Disorders in the City. The Cadi is the Judge in all Civil Suits, and the Receiver of the Customs is empower'd to take Cognizance of all Fraudulent Practices relating to Pecuniary Duties, in all which Cases he is both Judge and Party.

As for the Religion of the Turks, they say, God has lent four Prophets to Reveal his Will to Mankind, viz. Enoch, Moses, JESUS CHRIST, and Mahomet. They call Jesus Christ the Breath of God: They own his Miraculous Conception, and the Virgins perpetual Virginity, but say that Judas was Crucifix'd and not his Master, which they say, serves better to display the Glory of Christ, than the Christian Doctrine; but for all they affirm that Christ was a Holy Man, and a chosen Vessel. They will not be perswaded to believe a Trinity. They differ from us in their Opinions concerning the Divine Attributes, only they have such a peculiar Fondness for Predestination, that they extend it even to the most indifferent Actions. They believe that there is an infinite Number of Angels, some good, some bad; the first they call White, the other Black Angels or Devils, and that every Man has one of each sort. They think that the Souls of the Wicked remain in their Graves, where they are Tormented by the Black Angels till the last day, when they shall be sent to Hell, together with their Bodies, and be Punish'd there for a certain time, according to their Crimes, and then go to Paradise; for they think the Doctrine of Eternal Punishment absurd. They believe that at the Day of Judgment the Beasts will rise and give Account before Christ, of all the Kindnesses and Injuries they have receiv'd from Men. They are very Nice and Ceremonious about their Washings, and Bathings after Pollutions. They Pray five times a day, in the Morning at Break of Day, at Noon, at 3 of the Clock in the Afternoon, at 6 in the Evening, and an hour after the Close of the Evening. Friday is their Festival-day as Sunday is ours. Their Lent lasts but 30 days, but is very strictly kept; for they neither Eat, Drink, nor Smoak Tobacco, while the day lasts; which is very hard upon them, when it happens in Summer. They neither Eat Hogs Flesh, nor Drink Wine, nor can they endure Images. They think Deeds of Charity very Meritorious, and therefore leave many Legacies. There are several other things which a Turk must believe, and do, but it would be too tedious, and not fit for a work of this Nature, to give the Reader a particular Account of them.

The whole Turkish Militia, (as Sir Paul Rycaut observes) is of two sorts, one that receives Maintenance from certain Lands or Farms, bestow'd on them by the Grand Signior; others that receive their constant Pay in ready Mony. The great Nerve or Sinew of the Turkish Empire, is that of the first Rank, which are of two sorts, viz. Zaims, which are like Barons in some Countries, and Timariots, who may be compar'd to the Decumani among the Romans. Those of the second sort, paid out of the Grand Signior's Treasury, are Spah's, Fanizaries, Gebegi or Armourers, Topzi or Gunners, Sea Soldiers call'd Levens, who have no Pay for Life, or are Enroll'd amongst the Military Orders; but only make an Agreement for five or six Thousand Aspers for their Voyage; which being ended, they are Disband'd.

The Zaims, in all Expeditions of War, are oblig'd to Serve with their Tents, which are to be furnish'd with Kitchens, Stables, and other things suitable to their State and Quality; and for every 5000 Aspers of Rent receiv'd from the Grand Signior, they are to bring a Horseman into the Field, which is call'd Gebelu. The Timariots are oblig'd to Serve with lesser Tents, and to bring 3 or 4 Baskets for every Man that attends them, for carrying of Earth and Stones, for making Batteries and Trenches, while the Janizaries are in the Skirmish with the Enemy. And for every 3000 Aspers Rent, the Timariots are Sefs'd in a Man and a Horse. Both Saims and Timariots are dispos'd into Regiments, under Command of Colonels, call'd Alai-Begler, these again under the Command of the Bassa, and he under the Beglerbeg, which Force being united in one Body, repair to their Rendezvous appointed by the Serasker or General, who is either the Grand Signior, the Visier Azem, or some Eminent Person. No excuse is allow'd in the time of the Grand Signior's Wars; if Sick they are carried in Horse-Litters or Beds; if Infants, in Hampers or Baskets, and in the very Cradles, Accustom'd to the hardship, hazard and discipline of War. These Zaims and Timariots, may (as Sir Paul Rycaut computes) be said to amount to in all above 83380, besides the Militia of Cairo, and other Orders of Soldiers. The standing Militia of the Kingdom of Egypt is 20000 Horie, besides which there is about 80000 Timariots. The Tatars of Crim are to send 100000 Men to the Grand Signior's Wars. The Princes of Moldavia, Valachia, and Transylvania, six or seven Thousand Men apiece. The Spah's are generally well Educated, Courteous and Refin'd Men, and serve on Horseback, to the Number of 12000. Besides whom, there are, according to the aforesaid Author, four other sorts of Spah's, who are rais'd according to the Necessity and occasions of War. The Janizaries, who serve on Foot, were at first not above 6 or 7000, but are now above 20000; but were there a List taken of all who assume this Title, to be freed from Duties and Taxes, the Number would amount to above one hundred Thousand. In former times this Militia consisted only of the Sons of Christians, but that Politick is now diffus'd.

As to the Naval Forces of the Turks, tho they have much plenty of all things, fit for making a great Fleet, particularly Ports, Harbours and Docks, as at Constantinople, where no less than 130 Ships may be upon the Stocks at the same time, at Sinopolis, Midia and Anchiale, Cities on the Black-Sea; and abundance of Men to be employ'd in the Sea Service, yet for several years, especially since the War in Candia, they have not been able to equip a Fleet much above 100 Sail of Gallies. The Pirates of Barbary, the Towns of Tripoli, Tunis, and Algier, used to be their Auxiliaries at Sea, but that is now in disuse. The Beyes of the Archipelago are bound, for certain Islands which are assign'd them in that Sea, to maintain 14 Gallies. The chief Admiral is call'd the Captain Pascha, his Lieutenant General Tershana Kiabias, and the next Officer Terfane Emimi, or Steward of the Arsenal. But for a more particular account of these Matters, the Reader may, if he pleases, have recourse to such as have writ fully on the Subject, particularly the forecited Author.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the North part of TURKEY in EUROPE, being the Provinces of WALACHIA and MOLDAVIA, Tributary to the Turks. Together with BESSERABIA, and the OCZAKOW-TARTARY, Subject to the Turks.

HAVING taken a View of all the South side of the Danube, and Travell'd thro' Transylvania, in our passage from Hungary, we now come to the Countries on the North side of that River; which was the Ancient Dacia, that Comprehended these two Provinces with Transylvania, and so far of Hungary as to the River Theysse, and was divided into three parts, viz. Ripensis, containing part of Hungary and Walachia, on the Banks of the Danube; Alpestris part of Walachia and Moldavia; and Mediteranea, which was also Nam'd Gepida, the present Transylvania. The Inhabitants were of Scythian extract, fierce and barbarous, and were call'd Getae, before the Romans gave 'em the Name of Daci. They had Kings of their own, till Trajan Conquer'd the Country, and made it a Province of the Empire. Afterwards the Sarmatians, Saxons, Goths and Huns, at several times over-run these Countries. These Provinces now distinguish'd by two Names, were in the middle Ages, both Comprehended under the Name of Walachia, or Woloska Zemla in the Sarmatian Tongue, and the People Wolochy. Divided into Major and Minor, whereof the former afterwards took the Name of Moldavia. The other which in order as Situated, we are first to speak of, retain'd the Name of

WALACHIA,

Which is extended in a Triangular Form, between the Danube on the South, Hungary on the West, Transylvania on the North-west, and Moldavia, on the East, about 130 miles broad, but in its greatest extent near 200 miles long. The Air is Temperate, and the Soil Fruitful, producing Corn and Wine, Fruits, Wood, Pature, Oxen, Sheep, and other Cattle, but especially Horses, for which this Country is Famous. The Earth also yields Mines of divers sorts of Metals. And the Forests Venison. The chief Rivers are the Aluta or Olt, the Telsch, the Falonizza, and the Missorio; which rise in the upper part of the Province, and all run Parallel, and fall into the Danube.

The Country is Govern'd by a Waywood, Elected or approv'd by the Grand Signior; he is stil'd Hospodar, that is, chief General of the Militia, and Pays a Tribute to the Turks of 70000 Ducats per Annum, and yet is at all expence in the Government, and Defence of his Country.

The Christian Religion according to the Greek Church, is profess'd in Walachia, and the Patriarch of Constantinople is their Metropolitan.

The Inhabitants Fancy themselves to be the true Offspring of the Romans, and their Assertion seems to be confirm'd by the Idiom of their Language, which in many Words and Phrases, comes nearer the Ancient Latin, than the Modern Italians do's, altho' now it is so corrupted with Russian, Sclavonian, and Turkish, that it hardly deserves any of that Character.

In the Government, the Waywood always Exercis'd a Sovereign Authority, and as long as the Kingdom of Hungary stood, was wont to put himself under the Protection of that Monarch. In the year 1391. the Turks Invaded this Province, and in 1415. compell'd the People, that had gallantly defended themselves in several Rencontres, to submit to the Ottoman Yoke, which the Waywood attempted to throw off 10 years after; but being soon reduc'd to extremity, was again oblig'd to Swear Allegiance to the Grand Signior, and promise to assist the Turkish Forces in all their Expeditions against the Christians. And tho' in 1595. Sigismund Bazar Prince of Transylvania, was able to secure this, as well as his own Principality, from the accustomed Bondage, yet the Inhabitants were not able long to maintain their Liberty, but have since contentedly Paid their Tribute without attempting another Revolt.

 Tergowisch. }
 Bucharest. } Rebnick.
 Braschow. } Alautb.
 } Pedt.

Tergowisch, Terwisch or Tarvis, the Capital City of Walachia, wherein the Waywood keeps his Court, is seated on the River Launiza, in a Marshy Ground, 60 miles North from the Danube, and as many East from the Confines of Transylvania.

Bucharest, the second chief City, stands on the River Dombrowicen, 25 miles South from Tergowisch, and 35 North from the Danube.

Braschow, Braslow or Brasgow is seated in the North part near the Confines of Moldavia and Transylvania, 50 miles from Tergowisch. It is a considerable City, and the See of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Metropolis of Colocza.

Rebnick stands upon the River Alauta, near the Confines of Transilvania, 40 miles East from Targowisch.

Alauth stands on the same River 30 miles below Rebnick.

Pede is seated on the Danube on the very Limits of this Province towards Hungary 130 miles West from Buchoreff, and 90 West from Belgrade.

its former State; and accordingly it is still Tributary to the Turks.

The chief Towns are,
Jassy, } Moldadania,
Soczow, } Vasloue, Targorod, } Romani-Wivar, Chotzyn, } Braila.

Jassy, or Fazy, a considerable City, and formerly the Seat of the Prince, is seated on the River Pruth, in the North-part of the Province about 30 miles from the Confines of Poland, in the Latitude of 47. 30. Longit. 46 Deg. Baudrand says it was, probably, the ancient Augusta of Dacia.

Chotzyn on the River Neister near Poland, 90 miles North-west from Jassy, and 25 South-east from Caminiec, is a strong Town, and the chief Magazine of the Country, famous for a great Victory there obtain'd over the Turks by John Sobiesky late King of Poland.

Zockzow, Soczow, or Czukah, is a large and strong City, stiled the Capital of the Province, because the Prince usually resides there. It is seated on the River Sereth, 50 miles West from Jassy, 70 South from Caminiec, and 30 East from the Confines of Transilvania, and guarded with a Castle.

Targorod, or Trescott, stands on the Confluence of the Rivers Molda and Sereth, 50 miles from Soczow.

Moldadania, on the River Molda, is about 20 miles distant from Soczow to the South.

Vasloue stands on the River Bardalack 60 miles East from Targorod.

Romani Wivar stands on the River Sereth, on the Confines of Walachia, and not far from the Danube.

Braila stands at the Mouth of the same River into the Danube 35 miles South-east from Romani Wivar.

Lies on the North-east of Walachia, bounded on the North by the River Neister, or Turla, which divides it from the Ukrain, on the South with Walachia and the Danube, on the East with Bessenabia, and on the West by Transilvania; It's extent is much greater than Walachia, being 240 miles from North to South, and 150 from East to West. The AIR is very Healthy, and the Soil Fruitful, producing all Necessaries; as Corn, Cattle, and excellent Horses. The Land is diversified into Mountains and Plains, and water'd with divers Rivers, the chief whereof are the Moldavo (whence the Country has its Modern Name) the Pruth, the Sereth, the Bardalack, &c.

Moldavia, says Sir Paul Rycaut in his present State of the Ottoman Empire, was first made Tributary to the Turks by Mabomet the Great, but under the small Tribute of 2000 Crowns per Annum, afterwards Bogdanas Waywood thereof, A. 1585. fearing to become absolute Vassal to the Turk, being assisted by Poland, took up Arms against Solymus II. by whom being drawn out of his Country, John a Moldavian Born, but one who had embraced the Mabometan Religion, was preferred by Selymus to that Principality; but as soon as he was in it, he return'd to his former Religion, which made the Turk set upon him too, and John losing his Life in the Quarrel, the Province fell to the power of the Turks in the Year 1574. who appoint the Waywood, and impose an Annual Tribute, which at that time amounted to 80000 Dollars; but now (that is, when he wrote, his Book) it is reduc'd to 66000 Dollars in Money, near 40000 pounds of Wax, as much Honey, and a vast quantity of Tallow for the Arsenal. But besides the Annual Tribute, this Author says, That there were so many accidental Expences, Pretensions, and Arts of the Turks to squeeze Money out of this oppress'd People, as did sometimes double the charge of their yearly Tribute. To which may be added, the price paid to the Grand Seignor and others for the Principality which amounts to 100000 Dollars. In the Year 1636. the Polanders over-run this Country, took the chief Cities, and oblig'd the Inhabitants to put themselves under the Protection of the Empire. But at the Treaty of Carlowitz, it was agreed, that the Poles should retire, and leave this Principality in

By some reckon'd part of Moldavia, but more properly a separate Province, lies on the East of Moldavia between that and on the Black Sea, and between the Rivers Danube on the South, and Niefter on the North. It is partly Mountainous, and partly a Marshy Country; Inhabited by the Budziack-Tartars. The extent of it is about 150 miles from East to West, and 60 or more in the West part, from North to South.

The chief Towns are,
Tekin, } Kilia-Nova,
Bialogorod, } Kilia Vecchia

Tekin, Tegina, or Beuder, is a large City, the Capital of the Province, seated on the River Neister, near the Confines of Moldavia 100 miles from the Black Sea to the West, 60 from the Danube to the North, and 100 miles from Jassy to the East. It is is guarded with a Castle, and reckon'd a strong Frontier.

Bialograd, otherwise called Akjerman, is a strong Fortrefs seated near the Black Sea, at the Mouth of the Niefter. Some take this to be the ancient Tyras, which Protolomy places at the Mouth of the Niefter, and which Herberstein and others call Moncastra: But it is suppos'd the old Tyras being quite destroy'd, this Town sprung up near it.

Kilia Nova, is a strong Town seated on the Northern Branch of the Danube near its Mouth into the Black-Sea, over-againſt Kilia Vecbia, or Vetus, which stands in the Island, made by Two Branches of the Danube, to which it gives Name.

River Bog, which rising in Poland, here discharges its self into the Sea, other Rivers water it, and the Ingulet or Mali is its Eastern boundary.

The chief Towns are,
Oczakow, } } Koczubi.
Bilchowise, }

Oczakow, or Ocziakow, otherwise called Dziarkrimenda, is seated at the Mouth of the River Borissbenes, or Neister into the Black Sea, 60 miles North-East from Bialograd, and near the Mouth of the River Bog. It is a strong Town with a Castle, founded by Vitolaus Duke of Lithuania, and first Peopled by his Subjects, afterwards possess'd by the Tartars who had a Denomination from this place, and were powerful Enemies of Poland. But the Polcs gave them a notable Overthrow in the Year 1644. at present it is Garrison'd by the Turks, though the Inhabitants be Tartars.

Bilchowise is seated on the Borissbenes where the River Ingulet or Mali falls into it, on the extreme East part of this Province towards the Crim-Tartary, 20 miles North-east from Oczakow.

Koczubi is seated on the Black Sea, 30 miles West from Oczakow.

The OCZAKOW-TARTARY

Lies on the North-east of Besserabia on the other side the Niefter, surrounded by Podolia, or the Ukraine, except on the East where it is bounded by the Black-Sea, and the Mouth of the Borissbenes; and on the South where the Niefter parts it from Besserabia. Its extent is not above 80 miles, and is divided by the

CHAP. IX.

Of TARTARY-MINOR, or the CRIM-TARTARY, Allies to the Turks.

THE Tartars were always a Roving People that Usurp'd upon their Neighbours on every side. Of their Conquests in Muscovy we have spoken, and shall have occasion to shew that China and Indoston are at this day Subject to Princes of that Race. Persia, and a great part of the Turkish Empire in Asia, was for a long time their Prey: And these Provinces of Europe last mention'd, as well as Hungary, were at several times over-run by them. But upon the Change of Fate in War, they were as often beaten back. At last about 300 Years ago they settled themselves in the Peninsula between the Black-Sea, and the Palus Meotis, formerly named Taurica Chersonesus, wherein at that time the Genoueses had Footing; and the adjacent Country Northward to the Frontiers of Muscovy, which from them has been since named Tartaria Minor. And tho' at first they owned a Subjection to the Grand Cham; yet having strengthened themselves sufficiently, they threw off that Obedience, and acknowledg'd for their Prince one of their Great Men; who being descended from the Royal Family, took upon himself the Royal Authority with the Title of Han, which in their Language signifies King. This Honour is Elective, but always conferr'd on one of the Family if not the Son of the Predecessor, and is confirm'd by the Grand Seignor, with whom they are always in Alliance, and so far in Subjection to, that the Sultan assumes the Power of Deposing the Father, and setting up the Son, upon default of the usual Assistance or Duty. By ancient Compact between the Turk and the Tartar, it is agreed, That whenever the Grand Seignor goes in Person to the Wars, the Han is to accompany him with an Army of 100000 Men; but if the Visier or some other Officer Command the Turks Army, he only sends his Son, or some principal Officer with an Army of 50000 Men. The Turk hath been used to hold the Son of the Han as Hostage for performance of this agreement; and as Sir Paul Rycaut tells us, the present Han Mahomet Ghirei was detained during his Fathers Life; first at Famboli, and then at Rhodes; and before he mounted the Throne Swore Fealty to the Grand Seignor at Constantinople: But the Treatment he mer with there sour'd him, that he has refused that part of the Subjection as being dishonourable to so powerful a People: But has nevertheless assist'd the Turk in the Wars according to his Treaty. The Tartarian Army have no Pay, but are allowed the Plunder they take, take, which consists chiefly in Slaves, whereof they carry away great Numbers, and sell to great profit. In the Year 1663. they so pillag'd and wafted Hungary, Moravia, and Silesia, that Sir Paul Rycaut tells us they carried away in one Year 160000 miserable Creatures into Captivity. Such of the Slaves as are Wounded, or Sick and unable to Travel they kill, the rest they carry home, and sell to the Turks, especially the Young Boys and Girls, which is the best Traffick the Tartars pretend to.

By Contract on the Turkish side, it is agreed, That in case of failure of the Ottoman Line, that Empire is to devolve to these Tartars, which is the great knot of this Confederacy. The Han receives a sort of Pay from the Grand Seignior, and is oblig'd not only to assist him in War, but also not to engage in any War, except against the Muscovite, without his consent.

The Kingdom consists of Two Parts, TARTARIA-MINOR, and the TAURICA CHERSONESUS, or Crim-Tartary.

In the Crim-Tartary there are Towns Inhabited, and Palaces wherein the Han Resides; but in Tartaria-Minor, tho' it be a Fertile Rich Soil, and was anciently well Cultivated by several Colonies of Greeks, there is now no such thing as a City or Town, the Inhabitants being a fierce wild People that live in the open Air in Tents which they set up and remove as their Fancies or Occasions invite them. In February they are invited by the Cham to Till the Ground which some do, but the greatest part Neglect, esteeming it beneath them. Their Ordinary Food is Raw Flesh laid for some time between their Saddle and Horse's back, which they Eat (tho' Dead of Sickness or Putrified) without Bread or Salt; so that the greatest part of the Country, especially that toward Muscovy lies Waste, and is thereby nothing but Woods, Lakes, and unpassable Marshes. The Han with his chief Officers and Courtiers live in the Crim-Tartary in Palaces and Towns, and have Lands, Herds, and Wealth, as other People. The Han has large Revenues arising by Tributes and Aids Paid by his Subjects, and is able to bring into the Field a very large Army, even 300000 Horse, but no Foot; for Horses here are so exceeding plenty, that not only every Man is Mounted, but has also one or two spare Horses.

TARTARIA-MINOR, otherwise called Nabaisky, or the Nagayan Tartary, is a very large Tract lying on the South of Muscovy, between the Frontiers of that Empire, and the Black Sea. The Mouth of the River Don or Tanais being its Eastern Boundary, and the River Nieper or Boristhenes the Western. So that its Length may be reckon'd 300 miles from East to West, but the Breadth not proportionate. This Country is, as we have said, a kind of Wild Desert, the People roving about in Hords or Multitudes with their Tents, Cattle, Wives, and Children, and never fix in any certain place. The only Towns mention'd by Geographers being Sirelnicza, at the Mouth of the Boristhenes and Kasikermen a little above it, on the Western Coast; and Azoph on the Eastern, at the Mouth of the Don.

The Taurica-Chersonesus, now call'd the CRIM-TARTARY, from the City Crim; and also PRÆECOPI-TARTARY from another Town; is as we have said a Peninsula between the Black-Sea, and the Palus Meotus; of about 80 Leagues in length, from East to West; and about 40 Leagues broad, from North to South; it is join'd to the Land by a very narrow Isthmus, in the North part, not above a mile over, thro' which also the Tartars have cut a Ditch.

The Country towards the South is Mountainous, and well Water'd with Rivers; the rest is Champaign, but wants fresh Water. Except the deep Wells which are dug.

The Taurica Chersonesus was Conquer'd by the Romans; and upon the declining of that Empire, the best part of it became Subject to the Genoese, who maintain'd a considerable Traffick there, before the Tartars Invaded it. The Turks have also at several times Attack'd it, and still possess some of its Towns: So that between one and the other, the Genoese have been expell'd these 200 years.

The chief Towns are

Præecop.	}	Crim.
Sachingeri.		Sidagoy.
Ingermen.	}	Cassia.
Sarigermen.		Kerky.
Balaclaw.	}	Pontico.
Mangu.		Kiderleri.
Cercissgermen.	}	Tamcn.
Baccassaray.		Karasu.
Almasaray.	}	Arabet.

Præecop, call'd Or by the Tartars, Antiq, Taphros & Taphrae, is seated upon the Dike, in the narrowest part of the Isthmus. It hath a Castle wherin Resides a Palatine of the Hans, who Commands the Guards on the Boristhenes and Tanais, and the Tartars in the Plains: And examines all Strangers that pass.

Sachingeri not far from it, on the Black-Sea, is a Town of 2000 Houses, and a place of good Traffick.

Balaclaw or Balacley, stands on the South-west Coast, sometime Possess'd by the Genoese, and then call'd Jamboli, from the store of Fish in the Neighbouring Sea. It is a small Town, Possess'd by the Turks, who here build their Ships and Gallies.

Topetarkan or Sarigermen, anciently call'd Chersonesus and Corfunia, and was the noblest City of all the Peninsula. Whereof the Ruins are still extant on the West Coast; but the place is hardly Inhabited.

Ingermen on the South-west Cape, anciently a great Town, whereof many Ruins and Greek Inscriptions remain; but it is now only a small Town with a Castle Possess'd by the Turks.

Mangu or Mancus, an inland Town, once a Magnificent City, now only a Tower and a kind of Castle, with some few Houses, Inhabited by the Turks and Greeks.

Cercissgermen, a Fort of the Turkey, not far from Mangu.

Cassia or Theodosia, the Chief City of the Peninsula, stands on the South Coast, over against the Isthmus. It has 5 or 6000 Houses Inhabited mostly by Christians, who have many Churches; some Turks and a few Tartars, under the Government of a Turkish Sangiack. It is a place of great Traffick, begun by the Genoese, from whom the Turks took it, in 1574. and is about two days Sail distant from Constantinople.

Kerkey, Cimmerium, is a little Town of the Tartars, seated on the East Coast, on the Strait denominat'd from it, and anciently call'd Bosphorus Cimmerius.

Pontico, olim Panticapæum, was formerly the chief City of all this Country, it stands on the Mouth of the same Strait.

Kiderleri is also on that Strait.

Baccasaray, which may be esteem'd the chief City, being the Seat of the Hans, stands 20 miles South from the Isthmus, and about 15 from the Western Sea Coast: It is a Town of 2000 Houses, besides the Magnificent Palace of the Hans, surrounded with a Pleasant Country for Hunting, and is nobly adorn'd with Gardens, Orchards, Baths, &c. Here is also a Mosque wherein are many stately Sepulchres of the Hans.

Almasaray is another Palace of the Hans with a small Town.

Crim, whence the Country, and People are Denominat'd, is a strong Castle, wherein is kept the Mint. It hath a small Town to it, which is chiefly Inhabited by Turks.

Sidagoy or Sudacum, was a very Noble and Strong City, seated in the Mountains, famous for the Wines growing near it, formerly Possess'd by the Genoese, from whom it was taken after a long Siege, by the Turks.

Karasu, 20 miles West from Cassa, is a Town of 1000 Houses, belonging to the Cham.

Arabet or Orbotec, stands near the Palus Meotis, 20 miles North from Kerky, it hath two Castles for its Defence, and is the Place where the Han keeps his Stud of Horses, which are reckon'd to be about seventy Thousand in Number.

In the very East part of the Continent of Tauria Minor, on the Banks of the Don or Tanaïs, between its Mouth, and the Mouth of the Donic stand several Towns, among which is

A Z O P H, Azow or Azek, a strong Fortrefs seated on the Mouth of the Don or Tanaïs, into the Palus Meotis, in the Latitude of 47 Deg. Longitude 59 Deg. Taken from the Tartars by Mahomet II. and Possess'd by the Turks till the late War, when in the year 1694. it was Taken by the present Czar of Muscovy, and still held by him: Being a Post of that Importance, that he absolutely refus'd Peace with the Turks, unless he might keep it. And indeed it is a Place of great Moment, to a Muscovite Prince so active as his present Czarist Majesty, for by the Shipping he may build there, he may Command the Palus Meotis, and not only force his Passage into, but even dispute the Command of the Black-Sea it self, with the Turks: Wherefore, 'tis no wonder they so earnestly Insisted upon the Restoring it; and nothing could make the Turks sit down with the Loss, but the very low Estate the War had brought 'em to.

Kasikermat at the Mouth of the River Nieper, is another Fortrefs of great Importance, taken by the same Prince, and still held by him. It stands in Latitude 46. Longitude 58 Deg.

30 Min. and gives Passage into the Black-Sea.

The Situation of both these Places is seen in our Map of Muscovy.

With which we should Finish our Account of Europe, and proceed to that of Asia. But that it is necessary to speak a little of the Palus Meotis.

The PALUS MÆOTIS or the Sea of Zabache, is call'd Limen More by the Russians; Gnilen Morze by the Poles, and Mare del Tana by the Italians. It was anciently call'd by divers Names, viz. Palus Sarmaticæ, Cimmeriæ Paludes, Scythicæ Stagna, and Pontici Euxini Mater, Teste Buno. The modern Name of Zabache is deriv'd from a certain Fish taken there, at certain times of the Year. It is a large Sea, lying from South-west to North-east 130 Leagues in length, according to the Maps: But Dionysius makes its extent from the Taurica Chersonesus, to the Mouth of the Tanaïs, 300 miles. It is bounded on the North and West by the Lesser Tartary; on the South-west by the Tauric-Chersonesus; and on the East and South-east by Sarmatia Asiatica, now Circass Tartary. The River Don or Tanaïs, which is the Boundary of Europe, falls into its Eastern Bay. And the Lake Sura Morzi, on the West issues from it and makes the Precep-Isthmus so narrow. On the South it has Communication with the Black-Sea, thro' the Straight of Kerky or Cassa, which was the ancient Bosphorus Cimmerius.

We have now Survey'd all the Provinces of the Turkish Empire in Europe, and shall next take a View of the Countries of Asia, Subject to this Monarch, which are

Many Islands lying near its Coasts:

Natolia or Asia Minor.

Turcomania: part of Georgia Tributary to the Turk.

Assyria or Diarbeck, Comprehending part of the ancient Assyria, with Mesopotamia, and Chaldea.

Syria at large, containing Syria Proper, Phœnicia and Judea.

And a great part of Arabia.

A large part of Africa is also under the Turkish Dominion, viz.

The Kingdoms of Egypt, and Barca, on the Mediterranean. And

The Coasts of Abex on the Red-Sea, with part of The Upper Ethiopia on the same Sea.

Also the Kingdoms of Tripoli, Tunis, and Algiers, are Tributary.

All which vast Empire is Subject to the Absolute Dominion of the Ottoman Emperor, usually stil'd by us Europeans the Grand Signior, and is Govern'd by a great Number of Vice-roys, call'd Beglerbegs, with Subordinate Governors, nam'd Sangiacks. And a lesser Order, stil'd Bassas. Accordingly the Empire is divided into large Provinces call'd Beglerbegships, and those sub-divided into Sangiates. The particular Number whereof, is unnecessary to be set down here, but will be observ'd in our Description of these Countries, which will be the Subject of the Second Part of this Work.

EUROPE being the Part of the World, that we our selves Inhabite, and the Nations of it our Neighbours, their Affairs are more immediately the Matter of our Enquiry, than are those of the other Quarters. Wherefore, after having given so particular Accounts of all the Cities and remarkable Places in all the Nations of Europe, we may be excus'd if we are shorter in the Description of Asia, Africa, and America. So that tho' the same Exactness shall be observ'd in setting down the Provinces and chief Cities, yet in passing over the less notable ones with a general Character only, we hope we shall rather Please than Disgust the Reader; since to be as particular here, as we have been in Europe, would be both Tedious and Unprofitable.

But in those Parts where England, and other Europeans have any Concerns, we have Enlarg'd our Accounts, as will be seen in the Descriptions of the East and West Indies.

To have given Historical Relations also of these Nations, as we have done in Europe, would have too much swell'd out our Work, which indeed does already exceed its intended Bulk. We have therefore been oblig'd to omit them, except in India, China, and Persia; which Countries, our frequent Trade thither, makes us Curious in the Enquiry after.

The particular Description here given of the Holy Land, will we hope be acceptable, since it serves very much to Illustrate the History of the Bible.

Nor will the Ancient Geography, whereby is shewn the Provinces and Cities of the Romans, Grecians, Assyrians, Persians, &c. be less agreeable, the ancient Historians being thereby Illustrated.

And lastly, we hope our Maps will meet a kind Reception, as being not only fairly Engraven, but also laid down according to the modern Corrections. In the Dutch Maps, and those of Sanson, the East Indies, and China, were plac'd at least 10 Degrees more Eastward, than really they are, as was discover'd by exact Observations, taken by divers Eminent Astronomers and Travellers. The Coasts of Africa, and America, were also very Erroniously set down, till the Industry of this Age had Corrected it; this made the old Maps so confus'd and untrue, that a new Sett is absolutely Necessary for the right knowledge of the Situation of these Countries. The supplying in some measure this defect, is what we have attempted; but with what Success, we must leave to the Learned World to Judge.

ASIA.

CHAP. I. OF ASIA in general.

I.
Asia.

HITHERTO we have been treating of Europe, let us now proceed to Asia, the second Part of the ancient World, and heretofore reputed the chief of all; in which Paradise was situated, the first Men led their Lives, all sorts of Arts, Sciences, Languages, and the first Monarchies deriv'd their Original: Where also the Christian Religion was first planted; for the great Author of it himself, being born in those Parts, perform'd all the Offices of his sacred Function, and almost the whole History of the Old and New Testament was there transacted.

Part 2

Asia

Asia is bounded on the North by the Scythian or Tartarian Ocean; on the East, by the Sea of Jesso, or of the Kaimachites, and that of China; on the South, by the Indian Sea, properly so call'd, the Arabian and the Strait of Babelmandel; and on the West, by the Arabian Gulph, or the red Sea, and the Isthmus, or narrow Neck of Land, that lies between this and the Mediterranean, and by which it is parted from Africa: As also, by the Eastern Part of the Mediterranean, or Levantine Sea, the Aegean, or Archipelago; the Hellepont, or Strait of Gallipoli; the Propontis, or Sea of Marmora; the Thracian Bosphorus, or Strait of Constantinople; the Euxine, or Black Sea; the Cimmerician Bosphorus, or Strait of Cassa; the Palus Maotis, or Sea of Zabacha; the lower Part of the River Tanais, or Don; a Line drawn from that River to the Mouth of the Volga, and thence to the Oby; and lastly, the lower Course of the same River, by which Asia is separated from Europe.

ii. The Continent of Asia is extended from West to East from the Archipelago, or Aegean Sea to that of Jesso; or from the 50th to the 182d Degree of Longitude; and from South to North, from Ihor, or Ibor, the most Southern Town of Aurea Chersonesus, or the Peninsula of India, beyond the River Ganges, to the utmost Bounds of Tartary; or from the first to the 72. or according to others, the 74. Degree of North-Latitude: But the Islands that lie in the Indian Sea, over against China and India, reach to the 11th Degree of South-Latitude. So that the greater number of those Islands, and some Parts of the Continent, are situated within the Torrid Zone; the greatest Part of the Continent within the Northern Temperate Zone; and the least Parts in the Northern Frigid Zone: And the Extent of Asia does not only exceed that of Europe, but of Africa also.

iii. As for the Figure of this Continent, some compare it to the Duke of Venice's Cap, to a Horse-cloth, or to Pegasus, the fabulous Winged Horse; and others, cutting off the Peninsula from the Southern Bounds, fancy it to resemble the shape of an Egg. The Soil in its vast extent, may well be expected to be various; but it is in general very fruitful, bringing forth, even in the Torrid Zone, most exquisite and choice Fruits, which are not to be found elsewhere; the Earth also yielding Precious Stones, and the best sort of Metals. Nor are Mountains and Rivers wanting, or indeed any thing that can contribute to the Necessaries, or even Pleasure of Life. The Inhabitants are generally effeminate, and of a dissingenuous Temper, yet capable of the most curious Arts and Sciences, and great Lovers of Monarchical Government; which made Tacitus say, Suetus Regibus Oriens; as indeed they are so far, as to be sincer Slaves to their Arbitrary Princes.

iv. All Authors are not agreed as to the particular Way of dividing Asia; for some distinguish it into the Continent and Islands: The latter lie in the Mediterranean Sea, or the Archipelago, over against the lesser Asia, or Natalia; or else in the Indian Ocean, opposite to China and India; and the Continent extends it self North and South. In the Northern Part of it is a Region of Asa, situated between the Black and Caspian Seas (the particular Provinces of which are Georgia, Turcomania and Circassia) and the Great Tartary, on the Sea of the same Name. In the Southern Part, in passing from East to West, we meet with China, India, Persia and Arabia, bordering on the Indian Ocean; and Turkey in Asia on the Mediterranean, Aegean, or Archipelago and Black Seas. Others divide Asia into five vast Empires, viz. the Turkish, Tartarian, Indian, Persian and Chinese. Some Geographers (reckoning the Islands of the Indian Ocean over against China and India for one Part) divide Asia into six, seven or eight Parts, accordingly as they think fit to enlarge or straighten the Bounds of Turkey in Asia: For some make Georgia and Arabia Parts of the Turkish Dominions, and consequently allow six Parts, or general Divisions of Asia: Others only separate Arabia from Turkey in Asia, but not Georgia, by that means admitting seven Parts of Asia. Lastly, others cut off both Arabia and Georgia from Turkey in Asia, and constitute eight Parts of Asia. Which last method we have follow'd, and consider'd it in eight Parts; that is to say, 1. Turkey in Asia, 2. The Country lying between the Black and Caspian Seas, 3. Tartary, 4. China, 5. The Islands over against China and India, 6. India, 7. Persia, and 8. Arabia: All which shall be methodically treated of in their Order.

CHAP. II.

A Description of Turkey in Asia, Natolia, and the Islands situated over against it.

I. AMONG the Parts of Asia, that subject to the Turk first offers it self to our View, as lying next to Turkey in Europe last described; and in regard that this Region constitutes the chiefest Part of the Ottoman Empire, even upon that account it ought not to be separated. The Bounds of Turkey in Asia on the North, are the Euxine, or Black Sea and Georgia; Persia on the East; Arabia on the South; and on the West Egypt, the Eastern Part of the Mediterranean Sea, the Archipelago, the Straight of Gallipoli, the Propontis, and the Straight of Constantinople. These Dominions thus bounded are situated between the 30th and the 43d Degr. of Northern Latitude, and the Soil produces every thing that is necessary for Humane Life; more especially Corn, Fruits, the best sort of Grapes, Saffron, Cotton, Silver, Copper, Iron, Crytal and Allum; but through the Severity of the Turkish Government it is not half Cultivated. The Division of the Countreys, with the chief Cities, is seen in the following Table.

General and Particular Tables of TURKEY in ASIA, among which are two extraordinary ones relating to Ancient Judæa, of which we shall hereafter give a large Description, useful in the Illustration of Sacred History.

II. TURKEY in ASIA is not improperly divided into the Western and Eastern Parts; the former lying between the River Euphrates, and the Mediterranean and Aegean Sea, or Archipelago, and the latter between the same River and Persia: The former comprehending Natolia and Syria, and the latter, Diarbeck and Turcomania. Of these Natolia with the Islands over against that Continent and Syria, appear first in our Journey from Europe. Natolia, otherwise call'd Anatolia and Anatole, as also Nadolu by the Turks, i. e. the East, derives its Name from its Situation; for it bears Eastward, with respect to Italy, and Turkey in Europe: Upon the same account the Name of Levante, or the Levant, is given by the Italians, to these Parts and the Islands adjacent. This Country was anciently the Seat of many considerable Nations and Kings, and bore the general Name of Asia, but with the addition of Minor or the lesser, to distinguish it from the whole Continent, by which Name this one of the three Parts of the ancient World was always known. Among all the Parts of Asia this extends it self most toward the West and nearest to Europe, in form of a Peninsula; (whose Isthmus is 300 miles broad) bounded on the South, by the Eastern Part of the Mediterranean, or Levantine Sea; on the West, by the Archipelago, the Strait of Gallipoli, the Propontis or Sea of Marmora and the Strait of Constantinople, by which it is separated from Europe; on the North, by the Euxine, or Black Sea; and on the East, by Armenia, or Turcomania, (where for the most part, the upper course of the River Euphrates serves for its bounds) Syria and Mount Amanus, call'd Montagna Neros, i. e. the Watery Mountain by the Inhabitants, from the great plenty of Springs and Rivulets, with which it is water'd; but by others Monte di Scanderona, from the little Town of Scanderon, or Alexandreta, that stands on the Foot of it.

III. Natolia is at present divided into four Parts, viz. Natolia, strictly taken, Caramania, Aladulia and Amasia; the first of which is situated toward the West and the rest toward the East. Natolia properly so call'd, lying next to Europe, takes up about one half of the ancient Asia Minor; extending it self from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean: It borders on the East upon Caramania and Amasia, and on the West, upon the Archipelago, the Strait of Gallipoli, the Propontis, and the Strait of Constantinople; and is subdivided into fourteen Sangiackships, or lesser Governments. And anciently it comprehended these following Countries, viz. Galatia, Paphlagonia, Pontus and Bithynia, as also Asia Minor properly so call'd; the last of which lies toward the South, and the others toward the North.

Galatia deriv'd its Name from the Gauls, who came out of Italy and settled in these Parts; it was also styl'd Gallogræcia, from the Gauls and Greeks, by whom it was promiscuously inhabited: 'Tis now known by the Name of Chiangare, and borders on the East upon the Province of Natolia, which bears the Name of Amasia. The most remarkable Towns of Galatia, were Pessinus, or Pessinus; Therma, or Germa and Ancyra, or Angonari, which last was formerly the Metropolis of the Tectosagi, famous for the Victory of Pompey over Mithridates, and for that of Tamerlan over Bajazet; and is as yet a Place of good Note.

Paphlagonia, now call'd Roni, according to Paphlagonia taken at large, situated between Galatia properly so term'd, and the Euxine Sea; the chief Towns of which were Pompeopolis in the inland Country, and on the Coasts of the Black Sea, Amisus or Anisus, now call'd Simiso by the Greeks and Amid, or Hemid by the Turks; as also Sinope, Sinopi, a large Town, with a Harbour on the Bay of Simiso, the See of a Bishop, and noted for giving Birth to Diogenes the Cynick Philosopher. Near it are found Brass-Mines, a rarity in Asia.

In the Province of Pontus, or Genach, which border'd upon Paphlagonia on the West, and the Black Sea on the North; on the Coasts, stood Amastris, now Samsiro, which some include within the jurisdiction of Paphlagonia and Heraclea Ponti, now Penderacki a little Town; also Claudiopolis, otherwise call'd Bithynium and Calvromena by Callidus, on the River Elatas, in the inland Country.

In Bithynia, or Beesangil, which lay in the middle, between the said Province of Pontus, and the Propontis, having its Coasts also wash'd by the Black Sea; the principal Towns were Chalcedon, now Scutari, on the Thracian Bosphorus, or Strait of Constantinople, over against that Imperial City, famous for the fourth general Council held there: Nicomedia, or Comidia on the innermost Coast of the Bay of the same Name, formerly remarkable for the Baptism and Death of the Emperor Constantine the Great, but now almost bury'd in its own Ruins: Nicea, or Nice, whose modern Names are Ismich and Niebor, or Nieba, lying near the Ascanca Palus, or Lake of Acla, toward the East, and noted for the first General Council conven'd there, against the Heretick Arius: Lybissa, now call'd Lebussa, and Gebise by others, heretofore made famous by the Death and Sepulchre of Hannibal, but at present only a small Village: And Prussa, or Prusias ad Olympum, at the Foot of which Bursa was built in a fruitful and well water'd Plain; where the Ottoman Emperors usually kept their Court, before they had got footing in Europe; and it is still reputed one of the chief Towns of these Parts, and fortified with a Castle on a Hill. We are inform'd by Cluverius, That Bithynia and Pontus which we have separately describ'd, though they were at first two distinct Provinces, were afterwards united, and esteem'd but one Province.

The remaining Part of proper Natolia, that lies toward the South, was formerly taken up by Asia Minor strictly so call'd, being Part of Asia Minor, before specify'd Sect. II. in which were the seven Churches mention'd in the Revelation of St. John: The particular Provinces of it were Mysia, Phrygia, Lydia, Aeolis, Ionia, and Caria, of which Doris constituted a Part. Mysia now known by the Name of Natolia, was twofold, that is to say, the lesser and the greater.

Mysia Minor. The lesser Mysia extended it self more towards the North, and its Coasts were wash'd by the Sea of Marmora, and the Hellepont, or Strait of Gallipoli; being otherwise call'd Mysia Hellepontica and Olympica. The chief Towns of this Province, on the Sea-coasts were Cyzicus, Chizico, by others termed Spiga, Spinga and Palorni, built 70 years after the City of Rome, on an Island, at a small distance from the Continent, and abounding with Marble. Beyond this Town, toward the West, appears the Island of Præconessus in the Propontis, or Sea of Marmora, and on the Coasts of the lesser Mysia, at present call'd Marmora, from the great quantity of Marble there digg'd out of the Quarries; being about 20 Miles in compass, well cultivated and adorned with a considerable Town: Parium: Lampsacus on the Strait of Gallipoli and the Mouth of the River Granicus, over against Gallipoli which is situated in the Peninsula of Thrace or Romania: Abydus, Avido, opposite to Sestos, Sesto, in the same Peninsula; out of the Ruins of which was built one of the Castles call'd the Dardanelles, somewhat towards the South, on the Hellepont, or Strait of Gallipoli, and at the Mouth of the Propontis, or Sea of Marmora: And Dardanus, or Dardanium, on the Coast of the same Strait of Gallipoli; from whence (as some conjecture) the two Forts of the Dardanelles erected for the defence of it, took their Names.

Mysia Major. In the greater Mysia, the Situation of which was more Southerly and more Eastern than that of the other, the Principal Towns on the Sea-coasts were Antandros, or St. Dimitri: Adramyttium, call'd Endromit by the Turks, Andræmitti by the Europeans, and Landimiri by M. Sanson, with a Harbour on the Bay of the same Name: And Pergamus, Pergamo, now Maiti situated on the foot of a Hill and the Bank of the River Cocyus, in a pleasant fruitful and well water'd Plain; inhabited at present by the Turks, and some few Christian Families, that get a livelihood by Husbandry: This Place was heretofore noted for giving birth to Galen, an excellent Physician, and for a famous Christian Church, which was the third among those of Asia.

Phrygia Minor. Phrygia was in like manner anciently divided into the Lesser and Greater. Under the former, being Part of a Province now call'd Sarchan, M. Sanson will have the greater and lesser Mysia comprehended; making Troas and the Strait of Gallipoli Parts of the latter: Other Geographers reckon Troas a Part of the lesser Phrygia, excluding it from both the Mysia's; and some take the lesser Phrygia and Troas for the same Province, which was at first call'd Troas, and afterwards the lesser Phrygia, when possess'd by the Phryges. The most remarkable Towns of the lesser Phrygia, were Troy, otherwise nam'd Ilium, situated between Mount Ida and the Sea-Coast; heretofore the most flourishing City of the whole Continent of Asia, besieged ten years, and at last burn'd and razed by the Greeks; the exploits of which Siege, are celebrated by the Poets Homer and Virgil: But now scarce any Remains of it are to be seen, that testi-fic its ancient Grandeur, and its most famous Harbour is almost stop'd up with Sand: And Troas Alexandri, or Alexandria Troadis, on the shore of the Ægean Sea, or Archipelago, built by Alexander the Great, at the distance of a few Miles towards the South; the Ruins of this Town are now call'd Eski Samboul by the Turks.

The greater Phrygia, at present known by Phrygia the Name of Germian, was much larger than Major the former, lying in the inland Country, between the lesser Phrygia on the West, and Galatia on the East; abounding (according to the report of Q. Curtius) more with Villages than Towns, the chief of which were Cotiaum, or Cotyæum, Chintæia, the Metropolis of Natalia properly so call'd, and the Seat of the Beglerbeg or Turkish Governour of these Parts: It was sometime the Seat of the Grand Seignor, before Constantinople was taken; it is still a considerable City and seated on the River Ayala, 30 leagues South from Bursa: Midaum, or Milæum, Midello: Gordium on the River Sangarius, Sangari, or Zagari; where Midas the rich King of Phrygia kept his Court, and Alexander the Great not being able to untie the Gordian Knot, cut it afunder with his Sword, to elude the purport of the Oracle: Synada, the Marble of which place was highly esteem'd, and it still retains its ancient Name, although almost entirely reduc'd to Ruins: Apamia, otherwise call'd Cibotus and Celæna, now Apamiæ, on the River Mæander, near its confluence with the Marsyas, daily falling to decay: Hierapolis, which (according to Ricaut) the Turks call Bambouck-Kale: Colosse, call'd Chonos by the Modern Greeks, on the River Lycus, or Licho, famous for St. Paul's Epistle: And Laodicea, water'd by the same River, which falls into the Mæander a little below, where the seventh Church of Asia was planted: 'Tis now call'd by the Turks, Eski Hislar, i. e. the Old Castle, and not Laodichia, as we are inform'd by M. Spon and others; but is altogether laid wast; nothing being left but a Mill and four Marble-Theaters, which are the chiefest Monuments of its Antiquity.

Lydia, which also anciently bore the Name Lydia. of Meonia (altho' only one Part of Lydia is term'd Meonia by Cluverius) and at present is known by that of Carastis, was situated between the greater Phrygia and Ionis, and dignified with the Title of a Kingdom, whose King Croesus was famous for his vast Wealth: Its principal Towns were Piladelpchia, on the foot of Mount Tmolus, or Tomalitæe, where the sixth Christian Church of Asia was planted: The Greeks still retain the same Name of this Town, but the Turks commonly call it Allachseir, i. e. the City of God: It is still well built and inhabited, containing four Churches, with no small number of Christians, and was the last of the Towns of Asia Minor, that were forc'd to submit to the Turkish Yoke: Sardes, or Sardis, Sardo, on the River Pactolus, famous for its golden Sands, and on the foot of Mount Tmolus; heretofore the chief City of Lydia, the Royal Seat of Croesus, the richest Prince of his time, and the Episcopall

See of the fifth Church of Asia; but now a poor ferry Village, inhabited only by a few Shepherds and Plow-men: And Thyatira, call'd Akhisar by the Turks, i. e. the white Castle, situated near Mount Hermus in a very spacious and delightful Plain, only inhabited by Turks; where the fourth Christian Church of Asia was settled: In this Town is great store of Corn, and Cotton, with many footsteps of Antiquity; it is also of a large extent, but the Buildings are very mean, consisting for the most part only of green Turf, dried in the Sun.

Between Lydia and the Aegean Sea, or Archipelago, Aeolis, or Aolia extended it self, a small Province so call'd from the Aeoles a People of Greece, who leaving their native Country, pass'd over thither, and having built twelve Towns (according to the report of Herodotus) settled themselves in those Parts. At present it constitutes Part of the Province call'd Sarchan, and its chief Towns on the Sea-coasts were Elea the birth-place of Zeno the Philosopher. Myrina, Mariani. Cuma, that gave a Name to the Cumane Sybil. Phocæa nova, Fochia nova, a neat Town, with a Harbour and Cattle: and Phocæa on the Frontiers of Ionis, now a Village of small note, known by the Name of Fochia, or Foja Vecchia, and seated on the Aegean Sea.

Next to Aeolis, on the South Ionis took place; being at present a Part of the Province call'd Sarcum, or Sarchan, the Inhabitants of which were call'd Jones, as deriving their Original from the People of Greece that bore the same Name; who possess'd several Cities in this Continent, the most remarkable of which, were Smyrne, or Smyr according to the Turkish Dialect, situated on the Isthmus, or narrow Neck of the Ionian Peninsula, near the Gulph of the same Name, and the River Meles, partly on a Hill and partly in the Plain, in a healthful temperate Air and a fruitful Soil: This is reputed to have been the Birth-place of Homer, (altho' Rhodes, Colophon, Salamis, Argos and Athens likewise lay claim to that Honour) and is also famous for the second Church of Asia there planted. It has been often shaken with Earth-quakes, yet still continues to be a most renowned Mart-Town, inhabited by a great number of Turks, as also by Greeks, Armenians, Jews, and the Consuls of several European Nations, particularly England, whereof here are several Merchants. Clazomene, or Clazomena, which gave Birth to Anaxagoras the noble Philosopher, and is now call'd Urla, or Vourla. The following Towns were also situated on the Coasts of the Aegean Sea, viz. Erythrae; Teos; Lebedus; Colophon and Ephesus, call'd Efeso by the Italians, and Ajalonock by the Turks; where heretofore stood the most stately Temple of Diana, burnt by Herostatus, and the first Christian Church of Asia; also where the third general Council was held: However it is now reduc'd to a Village and the Skeleton of a City, the largeness of whose Ruins, are the only proof of its former Magnificence. To the former Towns may be added Priene the native Country of Bias the Philosopher; and Miletus or Palaschia a Village almost fallen to ruin in the Confines of Caria, which was formerly one of the greatest Cities of Ionis, seated on the Archipelago, at the Mouth of the Meander and near the Frontiers of Caria.

The remaining Part of Natolia strictly taken, was heretofore call'd Caria, now Athineli, lying between Ionis and the Sea of Rhodes; part of which was Doris situated between the same Sea and the Sinus Ceramicus, or Gulph of St. Peter. The Dorii, were descended from a People of Greece of the same Name, and the Towns of Doris were Gnidus, or Cnidus, Gnido, on the utmost Coast of the Peninsula, to the West; in former times reputed the chief of these Parts, having two Harbours, but now lying in Ruins; near which was a Promontory of the same Name, known at this day, by that of Cape Cro. Ceramus on the same Gulph, and Halicarnassus, some time the Royal Seat of the Kings of Caria, where Queen Artemisia built a most stately Tomb for her deceased Husband Mausolus, call'd Mausoleum, and esteem'd one of the seven Wonders of the World: This Town was also famous for giving birth to the two renowned Historians Herodotus and Dionysius; but now it is so absolutely raz'd, that the true Situation it is disputed; some placing its Ruins over against the Island of Cos, or Lango. Beyond Doris in Caria, appears Myndus, a Sea-port Town, the chief of that Province, and the Seat of the Turkish Governor. Mylasa, or Mylassa, Melasso. Magnesia on the River Meander, or Madre, commonly call'd Mangresia, where Themistocles the Athenian General died in Exile. Aniuchia, or Tacbiadi, on the same River. Aphrodisia, or Aphrodisia, now Apodisia. Stratonica; and Cannus or La Rossa a Sea-port Town on the Sinus Glaucus or Gulph of Macre in the Frontiers of Lycia.

Having thus given a particular Account of Natolia strictly taken, let us now proceed to the like Description of the three other Parts of this Continent, which have their Situation towards the East. The chief of these is CARAMANIA, so call'd by the Italians, and Caramanili by the Turks; bounded on the West by proper Natolia; on the North by Amasia; on the East, by Alatulia; and on the South, by Part of the Mediterranean Sea, which lies between the Islands of Rhodes and Cyprus: That Part which borders upon the Sea, is known by the Name of Caramania propria. This considerable tract of Land, before it was subdu'd by the Turks, was for a long time govern'd by Princes of great Renown, and the present Government of it is divided into seven lesser Lieutenances, or Jurisdiccions call'd Songiacques. Here also were formerly situated the particular Provinces of Lycia, Pamphylia, Pysilia, Lyconia, and part of Cilicia.

In Lycia, or Montefli, which was wash'd by the Lycian Sea, part of the Mediterranean, and extended it self in the middle, between Caria and Pamphylia; the most remarkable Towns were Telmessus or Telmessus, ena noted Bay.

Bay. Xanthus, now Santo, or Sirbi, on a River of the same Name, not far from its Mouth. Patara, Paera, a little Town on a Hill heretofore famous for the Temple and Oracle of Apollo, where Answers were given, during the Winter half year. Andriace, or Gorante. Myra, or Myrra. Sirumita, a large Town on a Hill, near the River Limyrus. Limyra now call'd Mari, or Maira by several Authors, on the same River Limyrus. And Olympus on the Sea-shore; as also, Phaselis, Fionda a small Village in the Frontiers of Pamphylia.

Pamphylia. Next to Lycia on the East, Pamphylia took place, which was wash'd on the South, by part of the Mediterranean Sea that deriv'd its Name from thence, and at present constitutes the Western Part of Caramania: The principal Towns of Pamphylia were Attalia, call'd Satalia by the Italians, and Sadyah by the Turks, on the Sims Attalicus or Gulph of Satalia, of dangerous passage to Mariners, by reason of the frequent Storms and Shipwrecks: However its Harbour and Castle are reckon'd among the chiefest of this Country. Sida, Syda, Candalor, a Sea-port Town on the Frontiers of Cilicia. Selga, more remote from the Sea. Termessus, Termes, a Village. Aspendus, or Aspendum. And Perga, or Perge, Pirgi, formerly adorn'd with a Temple dedicated to Diana.

Pisidia. On the Northern Confines of Pamphylia, Pisidia was situated, now known by the Name of Verfacgeli, which several Geographers will have compris'd under Pamphylia; but others think fit to separate it from that Province, whose Opinion we shall follow: The most noted Towns of these Parts, were Selencia and Antiochia, to which was added, for distinction sake, the Sirname of Pisidia.

Lycania. Lycania, Cogni, extended it self more towards the North and East, which by some is reckon'd as a Part of Cappadocia, but others make it a distinct Province: The chief Towns of it, were Lysira, Isaura, Savva. Ikonium, or Cogni formerly the Metropolis of Lycania, and at present of the whole Jurisdiction of Caramania, large and well built, where the Turkish Governor usually resides. And Derbe, or Dervasia.

Cilicia. Lastly, Caramania includes Part of Cilicia, which lying between Pamphylia and Syria reach'd to the Cilician Sea, part of the Mediterranean, being of a much larger extent, from West to East, than from South to North; and was twofold, viz. Cilicia Trachiotis, i. e. the rugged, or mountainous, and Campestris i. e. the Champain, or proper Cilicia; the former of which was situated towards the West, and the other towards the East. Now Caramania comprehends within its Bounds, the mountainous Country, and the Western Part of the Champain: The most remarkable Towns in this Part of Cilicia, were Selenus, Ilenas, on the Sea-shore. Antiochia ad Tragum, Antiochetta, Artemurium, Anemora, or Stalemurra, according to others: Selencia aspera, Selsechia. Corycus, Churco, with a strong Castle, and a spacious Harbour. Pompeipolis, which was otherwise call'd Soli, or Soloe, also Trajanopolis, and at present Palefoli, reduc'd to a small Village. And Tarjis the Metropolis of Cilicia, on the River Cydusus, or Carajus, not far from its Mouth; formerly a Roman Colony, made free of the City; and more especially famous for giving Birth to St. Paul the great Apottle of the Gentiles: At this day, it is call'd Terafo by the Inhabitants, Terjis by the Turks, and Tarfo by the Italians.

The next Province after Caramania is ALADULIA, or Aladuli, which is bounded on the West, by Caramania, on the North by Amasia; On the East, by the River Euphrates and Mount Amanus; and on the South, by that Part of the Mediterranean Sea, which lies between Syria and Cyprus. That which is now the Southern Part of Aladulia, on the Sea-coasts, was formerly the Eastern Part of Cilicia; and in the Northern Part of the same, was situated the Southern Part of the lesser Armenia. In this Part of Cilicia, stood Malulus, Mallo, on the Mouth of the River Pyramus, now a Village. Iffus, Lajazzo, or La Jazzo, in the Frontiers of Syria, or Diarbeck, near Mount Amanus and on the Gulph of Lajazzo; where Alexander the Great gain'd a signal Victory over Darius King of Persia: It is still a neat Town, with a safe Harbour. And Adane, Adena on the River Pyramus.

In that Part of the lesser Armenia, which is now comprehended under Aladulia, and commonly call'd Bozack, were Merita, Maraz, or Marasch, a large and well built Town, the Capital of the Beglerbegick of the same Name, on which depend four Sangiackates or lesser Governments. And Meliene, Malatiah, situated a little higher, formerly the chief Town of Meliene a little Province in Asia Minor.

It remains only to give an account of the last Part of Navolia, call'd AMASIA, which has for its Boundaries, Turcomania on the East; the Euxine, or Black Sea on the North; Navolia properly so call'd, on the West; and Caramania with Aladulia, on the South. A considerable Part of Cappadocia was here included, which consisted in the Northern Territories of the lesser Armenia, and those that border'd upon the Euxine Sea, particularly, on the Coasts of the Cappadocian, Polemoniack and Galatick Seas. The Towns of chiefest Note, were Sebastopolis, Sivas, which is large and fair, being the Seat of the Turkish Beglerbeg, under whose Jurisdiction are six lesser Governments, or Sangiackates. Neocasarea, the Modern Names of which are Tochato, Tocat and Tocato, of a large extent and well-built on the Foot of a Hill, with a Castle on a Rock, from whence the neighbouring Country is commonly call'd Tocat. Casarea heretofore known by the Name of Mazaca and at present by those of Caisar, and Tisaria on the River Mela, near Mount Argenus, which sometime had St. Basil the great for its Bishop. Amasia, or Amnasan, according to the Turkish Dialect, seated amidst the Mountains on the River Iris, or Caselmach, the Birth-place of Strabo the Geographer; a large Town and the Capital of the adjacent Territories, where the Beglerbeg of Tocat usually makes his Residence.

And

And Trapezus, call'd Tarabofan by the Inhabitants and Turks, and Trebifonda by the Italians, on the Foot of a Hill, and the Coasts of the Euxine, or Black Sea, with a capacious Harbour. It was heretofore the Metropolis of Cappadocia, as also the Royal Seat of certain Greek Emperors, or Princes of the Family of Lascara, for the space of 200 years, and is still the Capital Town of the Beglerbegick of the same Name.

VIII. Mountains. Having taken a view of all the Parts of Natolia, it may not be improper, here to give a short Account of its most remarkable Mountains and Rivers. There is a great number of Mountains in this Country, and several have been already mention'd in the particular Description of the adjacent Towns. But

Taurus. Mount Taurus very much exceeds all the rest in greatness, taking its rise on the Sea-coast of Caramania, and the ancient Frontiers of Lycia and Pamphylia: Afterwards it extends itself somewhat towards the North, and then towards the East, through those Parts of Caramania and Aladulia, that lye nearest the Mediterranean Sea; as also throughout the whole Continent of Asia, even to the Eastern Ocean. However, that part of the Mountain is properly call'd Taurus, in general, which is contain'd within the Bounds of Natolia, and the particular Names of which are different, according to the diversity of Places. Mount Amanus. Amanus, nam'd Montagna Neros by the Inhabitants, which serves for a Boundary between Natolia and Syria, is a Branch of Taurus, and has been above specify'd. Another much greater Branch of the Taurus, separates Caramania from Aladulia, as also the latter from Amasia, and heretofore divided the lesser Armenia into two Parts; this Mountain was well known by the Name of Antitaurus and the Inhabitants, at this day, retain that of Roban Thaura.

IX. Rivers. There are several Rivers which water Natolia discharging themselves some into the Black Sea, others into the Mediterranean, and others into the Aegean, or Archipelago: The chief of these are

Iris fluvius. Iris, Halis and Sangarius. Iris, or Casalmach, formerly a River of Cappadocia and now of Amasia, rises in the Confines of the lesser Armenia, by Sebastia, or Savfia: Thence it runs through Cappadocia, and having water'd Amasia, or Amanian, among other Towns, falls into the Euxine, or Black Sea, near the utmost limits of Natolia strictly so call'd.

Halis fluvius. Halis, Ormagiuth, or Aly, springing from Mount Antitaurus, ran through Cappadocia, Galatia and Paphlagonia into the Sinus Amicus, or Bay of Sinifo; but in the modern Mapps, this River is comprehended within the Bounds of proper Natolia.

Sangarius fluvius. Sangarius, Sangari or Zagari, taking its rise in the greater Phrygia, out of Mount Dindymus directed its course through Bithynia into the Euxine Sea, but at present only waters Natolia properly so call'd, being the greatest of the Rivers that flow through that Province into the Black Sea. Among the Rivers that run through Natolia into the Mediterranean Sea, Cydus and Xanthus were of no small note. The former, was a swift and wholsome River of Cilicia, but so notably Cold, that it had like to have been fatal to Alexander the Great; and in effect it was the Death of the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, who Bathed in it. At present it is call'd Carsafa, from its black Waters, and passes through Aladulia and Caramania; where after leaving water'd Tarsus, it rolls into the Sea. Xanthus, Xanthus or Sirbis, Sirbi, formerly a River of Lycia and fluxus now of Caramania, took its rise from Mount Calmus, and water'd a Town of the same Name, below which it empues it self into the Sea.

Lastly, among the Rivers that run through Natolia into the Archipelago, the most remarkable are Maander, Caystrus, Hermus, Cicus and Scamander, which in passing from South to North, follow in the same order, and water the Southern Part of Natolia strictly so call'd. Maander, or Maandrus, Malve, flows Maander from the greater Phrygia through Caria and fluxus. Ionia, with a great many turnings and windings, and discharges it self into the Sea, on the North of Miletus, or Palaucia. Granicus now Granicus Lazzara according to Niger, or still Granicus fluxus. according to Sanson and others; rises in Mount Ida, and falls into the Propontis between Cyzicus and Lampsacus. This River is famous for the first Battel that Alexander fought against Darius on its Banks, wherein with 400 Macedonians he kill'd 22500 Persians, as Plutarch tells us. Caystrus, or Cayster, at present call'd Carafus, i. e. Black-water, has its Spring-head likewise in the greater Phrygia, passes through Lydia, where it waters Philadelphia, and falls into the Sea in Ionia, between Ephesus and Colophon. Hermus, or Sarabat, taking its rise also in the Hermus greater Phrygia, runs through Lydia, where it fluxus. is enrich'd by the River Pactolus famous for Pactolus its golden Sands, and afterwards passing fluxus. through the Confines of Aolis and Ionia, rolls into the Bay of Smyrna. Cicus, now call'd Cicus Girmasti, or Castri, according to Niger, taking fluxus. its Source in the greater Mysia between its Frontiers and those of Lydia and Aolis, waters Pergamus and enters the Sea between Pitane and Elaea. Scamander, Scamandro, Piter - Scamander wife call'd Xanthus by Homer, a little River, fluxus. but the most noted of the lesser Phrygia, flows down from Mount Ida, and falls into the Sea, below Troy, not far from the Promontory Sigeum, or Cape Fannizari.

X. Leaving the Continent of Natolia, let us proceed to the principal Ilands, which are Ionis. separated from its Western Coasts by the Aegean Sea or Archipelago, and from the Southern, by the Mediterranean Sea; being all subject to the Dominion of the Turks. In the Archipelago are Tenedos, Tenedo, a little Tenedos. Island over against Troas, with a Village and Citadel. Lesbos, now Aetelino, of a much Lesbos. larger extent, over against the greater Mysia; where Myslene, Metelino, the chief Town which now gives Name to the whole Island, is situated on the Eastern Part of it. Chios, Chios, or Chios, Seio, a mountainous Island over against Ionia, affording great store of Maltesey Wine, Honey and excellent Fruits, and famous for the Sepulchre of Homer. In it stands the Town of Seio, with a capacious Harbour, and a strong Castle: This Island was sometime possess'd by the Genoueses, from whom it was taken by the Turks A. D. 1565, and in the late War recover'd by the Venetians in the year 1694, but lost again the year following. Samos, Samos, and Samo still retaining the Name of Samos, one of the largest and most remarkable Islands in the Archipelago, lies al- to near Ionia, over against Ephesus; whence it was usually styl'd Samos Ionica; the chief Town of the same Name is small, besides which there are 2 or 3 others on the Island.

It was once a Kingdom and was the Birth- place of Pythagoras. Icaria, Nicaria, on the West of Samos, from whence the Sea that sur- rounds it is call'd the Icarian. Pakhmos, Pal- mos, or Patina, a fruitful place but Subject to Pyrates, appears more towards the South; where St. John the Divine being banish'd and inspir'd by the Holy Ghost, wrote his Revela- tion; it has a Town and Cattle in the middle of the Island, and a Port call'd Scala, on the West-Coast, the best in all the Archipela- go. Leros, Lero, with a Town and two conven- ient Harbours. Cos, or Cos, commonly call'd Lango, or Isola longa, i. e. the Long Island by the Italians, Sinco by the Greeks, and Sanclio by the Turks and Mariners, well cultivated and fruitful; being more especi- ally famous for giving Birth to Hippocrates the Physician and Apelles the Painter, and containing the forty'd Town of Cos, or Lango with several Villages. Alypala, Stam- patia, a somewhat long Island extending it self more towards the South-West, with a Town in the Southern Part of it, and two Harbours. Carpachus, Scarpanto, lying in the middle between Crete, or Candy and Rhodes; from whence the Carpathian Sea, and the Town of Carpachus, or Scarpanto, took their Names. Among the above-mention'd Islands, Icaria, Pakhmos, Leros and Alypala, were the chief of those that were anciently styl'd Sporades; because they do not lye together, as it were in a Circle, as the Cyclades, but are dispers'd thro' the Archipelago, but Authors are not agreed as to their Number.

XI. In the Mediterranean Sea over against the Southern Coasts of Natolia, lie the Islands of Rhodes and Cyprus, which still retain their ancient Names. Rhodes, or Rhodes, is situated over against Caria, and enjoys a very healthful Air: here stood the Clossus, or huge brazen Statue dedicated to the Sun, 70 Cubits high, which by reason of its vast Bulk, was reckon'd among the seven Wonders of the World, till it was overthrown and broken in pieces by an Earth-quake. This Island was sometime possess'd by the Knights of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, under the Name of Knights of Rhodes, who being expell'd by the Ottoman Emperor Slyman II. A. D. 1522, after a Siege of six Months, obtain'd the Island of Malta, by a special Grant, from Charles the V. Emperor of Germany, whence they are now commonly styl'd Knights of Malta. The Island of Rhodes abounds in Pastures and produces good store of Fruits; communicating its Name to the Rhodian Sea, with which it is encom- pass'd: The principal Towns of it were Cami- ras, Ferachio; Linos, Lindo, and Rhodus, or Rhodes, seated in the Eastern Part of the Island: This last was heretofore famous for the Study of Philosophy, and is still a noted and well fortyfy'd Murr-Town, with a commodious Harbour, and the usual Place of residence of a Turkish Beleglerbeg.

The Island of Cyprus, or Kubros, according Cyprus. to the Turkish Dialect, lies over against Cilicia, at a greater Distance from the Continent, being one of the four largest Islands that are contain'd in the Mediterranean Sea: Some reckon it to be about 130 Miles in compass, and its Extent is greater from West to East, than from South to North. The quality of the Air and Soil is so highly extoll'd by the Ancients, that among the several Names, by which this Island was distinguish'd, it was also call'd Macaria, or the Happy: Al- though the Air, does not now deserve to great Commendation, yet the Soil is fruitful in Corn, Grapes, Oil, Sugar, Saffron, Rhubarb, Cotton, Oranges, Lemmons and Copper; but it is much infested with Locusts. It has also some Mines of Gold and Silver. This Island which was sometime divided into nine Kingdoms, afterwards subject to the Romans, and after the fall of the Empire, it came under the Dominion of Guy de Lusignan, from whose Posterity it was taken by Richard I. King of England, in his expedition to the Holy Land, and at present the Duke of Saxony by virtue of the Right he claims to it, assumes the Title of King of Cyprus, and upon that account, he is plac'd in the Pa- pal Chapel among the Crowned Heads, immediately after the Venetians: It is by Pro- lowry divided into four Parts, according to the Quarters of the World, viz. Paphos, si- tuated towards the West; Amathusia, or A- matumtia, towards the South, Lapithia towards the North; and Salamina, or Salaminia to- wards the East; the Name of every Part being deriv'd from that of the chief Sea-port Town standing in it. Cyprus is at present distinguish'd into seven Sangiackates, and its most considerable Towns are Paphos, Baffo, on the Western Coasts. Amathus, now Li- misso, on the Southern Coasts, the chief Port in the Island, where Salt and other Com- modities brought from Larricko is Laden. Leu- cofia, or Nicosia, an inland well fortified and large City; being the Capital of the Island, the Seat of the last Kings, and at this day, of the Turkish Governor, situated in a Moorish Plain: Ceraunia, Cerines on the Northern Coasts, with a capacious Harbour. Famagusta, other- wise call'd Fama Augusti and Hamacostos, as al- so Famagosta by the Italians, a strong Town on the Eastern Coasts, with an excellent Harbour, built out of the Ruins of Salamis by King Koffa. Salamis, which was not far distant from Fama- gosta, on the North, gave Name to the Eastern Part of the Island, and afterwards obtain'd that of Constantia; it was demolish'd by the Saracens, and its Ruins are call'd Il Porto Con- stanco. Tho' this Island be subject to the Turks, it is chiefly inhabited by Christian Greeks, who have an Archbishop at Nicosia, and three Bishops at Famagosta, Paphos and Amathus.

CHAP. III.

Modern SYRIA.

I. AFTER having taken a View of Natolia, and the Islands that lie over against it, we come to the third and last Part of Turkey in Asia, situated towards the West; and known by the Names of Syria, Sourie and Sourifan, (call'd also Affyria and Aram, or Charan by the Hebrews, from Ar the Son of Sibem;) was heretofore of a very large Extent, comprehending Palastina, Phœnicia, Syria strictly taken, Mesopotamia and Babylonia, and in that Extent constituted that Monarchy, which was the first of the four Great Ancient Monarchie of the Earth. Begun by Nimrod the Son of Cush (who built the Tower of Babel) according to Diodorus Siculus; or by Ninus according to Herodotus; which continued in a Succession of 1300 years. After which in the year of the World 3148 Sardanapalus being conquer'd, the Monarchy was divided into the Babylonian and the Medean, till Belshazzar being overcome by Cyaxeres or Darius the Mede, it became again united; and at his Death Cyrus his Nephew, succeeding him, added Persia that had defended to him from his Father, whereby began the Second or Persian Monarchy. This lasted 200 years and was overthrown by Alexander the Great; after whose Death, his Captains dividing his Conquests, Seleucus Nicator became King of Syria, and was succeeded by his Posterity for about 250 years, after which it was made a Roman Province by Pompey. And at the fall of the Roman Empire it was over-run by the Saracens, and is now subject to the Turks. Babylonia, Affyria and Mesopotamia, being separated from it; only proper Syria, Phœnicia and Palastina, retains that general Name which they still bear. This Continent of Syria, call'd Soria by the Italians and Spaniards, Sourie by the French, and Sourifan by the Inhabitants, has for its Northern Bounds Mount Amanus, by which in former times it was parted from Cappadocia, or the lesser Armenia, and at this day, from Aladulia a Part of Natolia: For its Eastern Limits the River Euphrates, as far as the Town of Thapsacus seated on the same River, and afterwards Arabia Deserta, which separate it from Mesopotamia or Diarbeck. For its Southern Bounds Arabia Persea; and for the Western, the same Arabia, and the Syrian, or Lezantine Sea, being the most Eastern Part of the Mediterranean.

II. Syria thus Bounded, within the concurrent Limits of Mount Amanus and the River Euphrates, and that Part of Arabia Petraea, which lies next to the Arabian Gulph, or Red Sea, is computed by Cuverius to take up 140 Leagues or 560 Miles in length. Its breadth is different in several Places, being even where it is greatest, but a third Part of its Length; it is narrowest in the Northern Parts; and widest between the Syrian Sea and Arabia Deserta. The Air is healthful and very temperate, and the Soil is deep, level and pleasant, affording Pasture to numerous Herds of Cattel: It is also fruitful, (except in that Part which borders upon Arabia) and produces good store of Corn; Grapes, Figs, Oranges, Lemmons, Melons, Canes that yield a kind of Honey, Dates, Spices and medicinal Herbs. But where the Country lies wast, that is not to be imputed to much to the defect of the Soil, as to the frequent Wars, the continual Incurfions of the Arabians, the Revolt of the Inhabitants, and the Tyranny of the Turks, who to render their Dominion more firm, usually suffer those Countries that are possess'd by them to fall to decay, for want of Tillage.

The Turks have divided Syria into three general Governments, or Beglerbeglicks; viz. those of Aleppo, Tripoli and Damascus: The first of these, takes up the most Northern Part of Syria, comprehending nine Sangiackates, or lesser Governments; and the Capital Town of the whole Government is Aleppo the Seat of the Turkish Beglerbeg. The Beglerbeglick of Tripoli lies next to that of Aleppo, on the South, and derives its Name from Tripoli the chief Town of it, where the Ottoman Governor keeps his Court; having under his Jurisdiction four Sangiacks, or inferior Governors. The remaining Part of Syria, which lies most towards the South and West, is subject to the Beglerbeglick of Scham, or Damascus: This last takes its Name from the Town of Damascus, where the Beglerbeg usually resides, and ten Sangiackates depend upon it; among which some are hereditary, and may be more justly reputed distinct Principalities.

This Country is also divided at present, into Syria strictly taken, Phœnicia and Judea. Syria properly so call'd, being the largest Part extends it chiefly towards the North and East, and is bounded by the River Euphrates, Arabia Deserta, Phœnicia, the Syrian Sea and Natolia. The principal Towns in this Part of Syria, are Samosata once a considerable City seated towards the North, on the River Euphrates, in the Frontiers of Diarbeck and Natolia, the Native Country of Lucian and Parvus Samosatensis; but it is now decay'd and the Place call'd Scempfat. Aleppo, Aleppo, so call'd by the Italians and English, and Alen by the French, the ancient Beritæa, Beroa, or Beroe, according to the opinion of many Authors; although some will have it to be Hierapolis, and others Chalybon: However it is at present the Metropolis of all Syria, having three Suburbs and a very commodious Situation, between the River Euphrates and the Syrian Sea; which convenient Situation has made it the most famous Mart in these Parts. For by the Gulph of Ormus and the Euphrates, the Persians, Arabians, Armenians and other Eastern People, bring their Silks, Drugs, Jewels and other other Merchandises; and on the other Side the English, French, Dutch, Venetians, Genoveses, &c. by the Mediterranean Sea, convey the fine Cloath, wrought Silks, Lead, Furrs and many other European Commodities, which are hence vend'd all over the East. So that this City is frequented by Merchants both from the Eastern and Western Parts, and many Europeans, especially English, constantly reside, importing and exporting all sorts of Commodities, at Alexandria, Alexandriola, or the lesser Alexandria, call'd Scanderona by the Turks, and Alexandretta by the Italians, seated on the Foot of Mount Amanus and on the Assicus Sinus, or Gulph of Lajazzo in the Frontiers of Natolia, the Port to Aleppo and formerly a noted Mart-Town, of which now only remains a Stone-house belonging to the Captain of the Fanzaries, who exacts Custom for Merchandises, with a few Cottages, for the benefit of Merchants, that frequently travel from hence to Aleppo, or otherwise: The Air of this Place is so unhealthy, that if it were not for the convenience of Traffick, it would not be at all inhabited; but all European Ships that bring Goods to Aleppo arriving here, the Temptation of Profit obliges some Factors to reside here, who give advice to Aleppo of the Arrival of Ships by the means of Pigeons, that being bred up to that purpose, carry Letters with great expedition backwards and forwards.

V. The following Towns are situated more towards the South, viz. Antiochia, or Antioch, which for distinction sake was styl'd the Great, and Epitaphne from Daphne its Suburb, and now Antackia by the Turks, as also Anthakia by the Arabians; formerly the Metropolis of Syria, seated near the Mouth of the River Orontes, or Almeinas, partly on a Hill, and partly in a Plain; where the Disciples were first call'd Christians in the year 41. But now this famous Town has only a few Inhabitants, and part of it lies in ruins; yet the Walls are left almost entire to testify its ancient Grandeur. Laodicea, Laudichia and Laudicea, a little Town on the Sea-coasts falling to decay by degrees, yet still enjoying a capacious Harbour, and the Vestigia of four Marble Theatres. Apamia and Apamea Hamma situated on the River Orontes in a fruitful and pleasant Country. Farther in the inland Parts stands Emisa, or Emessa, now Hemiz. Palmyra, now call'd Fayd, Tamos, or Tadmor, noted for that learned and valiant Queen Zenobia, who was well vers'd in the Egyptian, Greek and Latin Tongues, and who after many Wars, was at last taken Captive by Aurelian the Roman Emperor: this place was visited a few years since by the Chaplain of the English Factory at Aleppo and some curious Merchants, who found the ruins of most magnificent Buildings; a particular account whereof is given in a Letter from the Chaplain to Dr. Wallis, extant in the Philosophical Transactions. And Laodicea Scabiosa, Laudifesa, near the Spring-head of the River Orontes.

VI Between Syria properly so call'd, on the North, and Judaea on the South, lies Phœnicia, a Maritim Country, in like manner, but of Phœnicia lesser Extent than Syria, now describ'd. The most remarkable Towns in the Inland Country are Raalbec and Damascus. The latter still call'd Damasco by the Italians, and Scham by the Inhabitants, is seated at the foot of Mount Libanus, in a Plain encompass'd with Hills, and water'd with a River antiently call'd Chrysorrhœas: 'Twas heretofore of great repute, and is at this day, the Capital of Phœnicia, affording a Place of Residence to the Turkish Beglerbeg, and to a Greek Patriarch, whose See was translated hither from Antioch: However its Inhabitants are few in number, but its Wines, Prunes, Wool and Silks both raw and wrought, still deserve much Commendation, and bring a considerable Trade to the City, which is chiefly manag'd by Jews. There is a fine Castle in the middle, which has been often demolish'd and rebuilt: Several Sects of Christians inhabit here and have Churches, and the Roman Catholics have two or three Colleges. On the Coasts of the Syrian Sea, stand Tripolis: Syria, or Tripoli of Syria, that adjunct serving to distinguish it from another Tripoli in Barbary; a large well-built Town, fortified with Walls, Towers and a Citadel on a Hill, where the Turkish Governor of that Province usually resides, enjoying also a convenient Harbour on the Mediterranean Sea. Berytus call'd Byrus by the Inhabitants, and Borus by the Italians. Sidon, Sayd, at present a very little Town, situated on the foot of a Hill, with an old Castle on a Rock, and a capacious but not very safe Harbour; yet lately dignified by the Pope, with the title of a Metropolitan See. Tyrus, or Tyre, call'd Sor by the Inhabitants and Italians, and Sour by the French; a very Celebrated City and mighty Emporium in ancient times, but now fallen so far to decay, that only an old Castle and about fifteen Houses are said to be left therein. And Ptolemais, formerly known by the Name of Acco, or Acon according to the Hebrew Dialect; at present call'd Acri by the Italians, and Acere by the French, as also sometimes St. Jean d'Acere, from the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, who resided here for a considerable time, and valiantly defended the Town against the Saracens. This City is mention'd in our English Annals, on account of the Valour of K. Richard I. at the Siege of it in the Year 1191, and K. Edward I. at a second Siege in 1270, but it is now almost buried in its own Ruins, and inhabited by a few Families.

Judaea, now commonly call'd The Holy Land constitutes the third and last Part of Syria, lying in the middle between Phœnicia on the North, and Arabia Petraea on the South, and extending it self along the Coasts of the Syrian Sea. It is divided by some modern Geographers into eleven Provinces, eight of which are situated between the Syrian Sea, and the River Jordan, and the three others beyond that River, which are inhabited by the Arabians: Others only make four Cantons, or particular Districts between Jordan and the Sea, and fix in that Part of Judaea, which which is extended from the same River towards the East.

The principal Towns of Judaea, which at present are of little Note, and have their Situation at a greater or lesser distance from the Syrian Sea, may be reckon'd up in the following Order, viz. Nazareth, or Nazra, a ruinous Village, seated on a Hill near the Brook Kison, but more especially famous for the Residence of our Blessed Lord Jesus Christ the Saviour of the World, and still reputed the Capital Town of the Nazarene Territory; in which are contain'd 25 small Villages. Tiberias or Genesareth, still call'd Tabaryab by the Inhabitants who are few in number, by reason of the Incursions of the Arabians; a very little Town on the Western Coasts of the Sea of Tiberias, or Galilee, and for the most part ruin'd, but formerly a considerable City, to which Herod gave that Name in Honour of the Emperor Tiberius. Bethsan, or Bethsean now reduc'd to a Castle, known by the Name of Elbetsan on the Western Bank of the River Jordan, a little below the said Sea: Neapolis, call'd Naplosa by the Italians, and Naplosse by the French, a Town situated in a Valley between two Hills, which rose up out of the Ruins of Samaria; being the Seat of a Turkish Sangiack, and the Capital of a Territory of the same Name, comprehending 100 Villages under its Jurisdiction. Hierosolyma, JERUSALEM, by the Turks call'd Cudssembarich and Cudsseberis, as also Elkods, i. e. the Holy City, according to the Report of Michael Nau; the Metropolis of the Holy Land, and of the Territory of the Holy City, in which are contain'd 100 Villages. 'Tis at present of a small Compass, but fenced with Walls against the Inroads of the Arabians, scarce including ten Thousand Inhabitants, and daily falling to Decay: However, it is the Seat of a Sangiack, or Turkish Governor, and one of the four Towns, to which the Roman-Catholicks usually make their Pilgrimages, and a place to which all Christians resort to visit the Sepulchre of our Lord; which has a Church, wherein both the Greeks and Roman Christians continually officiate. The Pilgrimages hither is the chief Subsistence of the Town, and the Liberty of Possessing the Sepulchre costs the Christians an Annual Tribute to the Grand Seignior and the Sangiack of the Town. The Fate and Revolutions of this once so famous City is well known to all that read the Scriptures: The Sassans having got possession of it in the VIII. Century, the Christian Princes by a general Crusade assembled to regain it; and in effect it was recover'd, and Godfrey Crowned King in the Year 1099, his Posterity succeeded in that Honour for about 100 Years; but at last lost it again to the Turks, who have ever since enjoy'd it. See more of this City in our account of ancient Judaea. Hebron, now call'd Elkhalil, or Elkhalil by the Inhabitants, a neat Town, without Walls, seated partly on a Hill and partly in a Plain, the Capital of a District of the same Name, otherwise call'd the Territory of the Friend of God, in which are compris'd, about fifteen Villages.

On the Coasts of the Syrian Sea, or not far distant, are Cesarea Palaestina, Caisar, lying in Ruins. Joppa, Jafa, otherwise call'd Jaffa and Giaffo, part of which Town next the Harbour is now well inhabited, and furnished with several convenient Inns, for the Entertainment of Merchants and Strangers, that travel from Europe to Jerusalem. Azotus Alzete, almost quite ruin'd: Ascalon, Scalona, having few Inhabitants: And Gaza, or Gazzara, a little Town, not much frequented; nevertheless it is govern'd by its own Prince commonly call'd the Emir, or Bassa of Gaza, under the Dominion of the Turks, and is the Capital of a Territory of the same Name; 300 Villages belonging to its Jurisdiction.

Ancient JUDÆA in general, and particularly that Part beyond the River Jordan.

I. HAVING thus describ'd the three Parts of modern Syria, viz. Syria strictly taken, Phœnicia and Judæa, it would also be worth the while, to give a particular Account of their ancient State, more especially of Judæa, in regard that it is so often mention'd in the Sacred Writings: Therefore we shall begin from thence in a retrograde Order, and afterwards proceed to Phœnicia and proper Syria. This Country was at first call'd the Land of Chanaan, from its ancient Possessor Chanaan, the Grandson of Noab, by his Son Cham, or Ham, who heretofore inhabited it, with his eleven Sons, as also did their Posterity for many Ages: It was styl'd The Land of Promise, ever since God promis'd it to Abraham and his Off-spring; and the Land of the Hebrews, or Israelites, when the Posterity of Abraham had taken Possession of the greatest Part of it, and divided it among the twelve Tribes: It was call'd Judæa, or the Land of Judah from that most potent and illustrious Tribe, and Palesina; which latter Name is us'd by Ptolemy, as also by the Greek and Latin Writers; deriving it without doubt, from the most renowned and valiant Nation of the Palesini, or Philistins, who settled themselves in the maritim Parts of Judæa, from the Frontiers of Egypt, to Cæsarea Stratonis, or Dor, which were very well known to the foreign Nations: Lastly, after the Death of our Lord and Saviour JESUS CHRIST, it was commonly call'd the Holy Land by the Christians, and still retains that Name, chiefly because the Prince of Peace being there conceiv'd, born and educated, promulgated the Doctrine of the Gospel, confirm'd it by Miracles, died, was buried, gloriously rose again, and triumphantly ascended thence into Heaven.

II. The ancient Bounds of Judæa, on the South, were a certain Stream, or Rivulet of Egypt call'd Sichor, on the Mouth of which stood the Town of Rhinocorwa or Rhinocorera, that heretofore belong'd to Egypt and afterwards to the Jews, taking its Name from the Inhabitants, who had their Noses maimed, or cut off: As also, the Desert of Bersabee or Beer-sheba and the mountainous Regions of Seir, or Sehir, which were extended from the Spring-head of the River of Egypt, towards the East, to the hilly Country of the Moabites: And separated Judæa from the Desert of Pharan, which was the Seat of Hagar and Ishmael, from that of Kadesh-Barnea, from Idumæa, and from Arabia Petraea. It was bounded on the East, by the Country of the Moabites and Ammonites, or the Stony and Desert Arabia, also by the more Southern Part of Calofyria: On the North, by Phœnicia Damascena, Mount Antilibanus, and the Country of the Sidonians: And on the West, by the Mediterranean, otherwise call'd the Western and great Sea, to distinguish it from the lesser Seas, or Lakes that were included within the Continent of Judæa. These were the primitive Bounds of Judæa, but under the Reigns of David and Solomon, they were extended even to the River Euphrates, thro' Palmirene, which was the most Eastern and Southern Part of Syria, call'd Aram Tzoba, or Soba by the Hebrews: Thus King Solomon is said to have enlarged his Empire, from the Town of Thapsacus, where there was a Passage over Euphrates, as far as Gaza.

Judæa was situated, with respect to the former Bounds, within the 31 and 33, or according to others, the 34th Degrees of Northern Latitude: For there is some little Difference in the judgment of Authors; some of them placing the Southern Bounds of Judæa nearer to the Equinoctial Line, and others removing it farther off: But they agree in this Particular, That the Latitude of Judæa consists of about three Degrees; and Geographers affirm, That it is situated in the Heart, or Middle of the World, which is not altogether without good grounds, when the Plannisphere of the World, as it was known to the Ancients is understood. Its Longitude, or Length, according to the Scripture-Phrase, is extended either from the entrance into Emath, a Town of Nyptali seated on the Foot of Mount Antilibanus, the most received Northern Boundary of Judæa, to the City of Beer-sheba, in the Tribe of Simcon, and the Desert of the same Name, which are its well known Bounds, on the South: This last space, according to the Opinion of Adrickomius, includes about 67 French Leagues, every one of which makes almost three Italian, or English Miles, and may be measur'd by an Hour's Journey. Some Writers will have the utmost Extent of Judæa, from the Mediterranean Sea, to the Course of the River Jordan, where it runs most towards the East, to comprehend seventeen, or eighteen Leagues; but that it was spread beyond that River, appears from the Boundaries even now described.

Judæa was admirably fortify'd by Nature; for the Mediterranean Sea serv'd for its Bulwark on the West, on the Coasts of which were several very convenient Harbours, that afforded the fairest opportunity of promoting Navigation on all sides: Its other Boundaries were surrounded with noted Mountains; that is to say, it was fenc'd on the North, as it has been already hinted, by Antilibanus and Libanus, whose Names are often confounded; on the South, by the mountainous Territories of Seir, or Idumæa; and on the East, by the hilly Countries of the Moabites, as also by the Mountains of Arnon, Gilead and Hermon. The Inland Country was extremely pleasant, diversify'd with the finest Hills, Valleys, Fields, Groves, Springs, Rivers, Lakes and Seas: The Air was very temperate and healthful, and the Soil most fruitful; abounding every where, even beyond imagination, with numerous herds of Cattel, flocks of Birds, swarms of Bees, shoals of Fish, and great store of Corn, Wine, Oil, Sugar, Balsam, or Balm, Spice, Palm-trees, Dates, Figs, Pomegranates, Flowers and all sorts of Delights. To these may be added the incredible multitude of the Inhabitants, and great number of Towns, Villages and Castles, which was no where exceeded throughout the whole World, within so small a space of Land. When the Israelites enter'd the Land of Promise, it contain'd 52 Kingdoms, five maritime Governments of the Philistines, and seven considerable Nations, viz. the Amorites, Gergesites, Hivites, Perizzites, Jebusites, Hebitites and Chananeites, descended from the Posterity of Canaan and destroy'd by Josbua, whose particular Seats shall be hereafter observ'd by the Way, in their proper Places.

V. When the Israelites had taken possession of the most Part of Judæa by the Divine Appointment and Assistance, it was divided according to the Number of their Tribes, into twelve Parts, of which two and a half were settled beyond Jordan, and the rest had their Seats on the hither side of that River; the Tribe of Levi being dispers'd among all the others. Thus the Tribes of Reuben and Gad, with half the Tribe of Manasseh took up their abode beyond Jordan; but the Tribes of Naphtali, Asher, Zabulon, Issachar, the other half Tribe of Manasseh, Ephraim, Benjamin, Judah, Dan and Simoon, possess'd the Territories on the hither side of the same River. All these Tribes at first constituted one Kingdom, but in the time of Rehoboam, were divided into two, that is to say, those of Judah and Israel; the Names being distinguish'd by the Schism, which before, were promiscuously us'd. In the Kingdom of Judah, only were compris'd the Tribes of Simoon, Judah and part of Benjamin, and the rest were united to the Kingdom of Israel: The Royal Court of the former was kept at Jerusalem, and that of the latter, for the most part at Samarita.

VI. We shall first describe the Country of Judæa beyond Jordan, which was bounded on the West, by that River; on the East, by Arabia and Syria; on the North, by Mount Hernon; and on the South, by the lowest Part of the River Arnon. This Part of Judæa, was distributed without casting Lots, (as it has been already intimated) to the Tribes of Reuben and Gad and the half Tribe of Manasseh, before call'd Amorrhites, and inhabited by the Amorrhai, Emorrhai, or Amorites, who after having march'd with their victorious Army beyond Jordan, expell'd the Moabites and Ammonites out of those Territories.

VII. The Tribe of Reuben, took possession of the most Southern Part of Judæa beyond Jordan, which had for its Bounds on the South and East the River Arnon, and Arabia Petraea; on the North, the Tribe of Gad; and on the West, the lowest Territory of Jordan; by which it was separated from the Tribe of Benjamin and the dead Sea. Here the Moabites settled themselves, on the hither side and beyond the River Arnon; the People of Israel enter'd Canaan on the hither side of Jordan through this Country; and the Prophet Elijah was translated thence into Heaven. Within its Jurisdiction were compris'd divers well cultivated Plains, with most pleasant Hills and Valleys, and a great number of Cities, about the Situation of which, as well as with respect to that of the other Towns, throughout all the Territories of Judæa, there is often a very considerable Disagreement in several Maps, which ought to be now observ'd and for the future.

Among the chief Towns belonging to the Tribe of Reuben, were Lasah afterwards call'd Callirhoe, from the Course of several fine Springs, with which it was water'd: Kademoth, or Kedemoth; and Jeshon a City of the Levites. As was Mephaah, or Mephaa, which Judas Maccabeus destroy'd with Fire, after having put the Men to the edge of the Sword. Baal-meon formerly a noted City. Medabah sometime the Capital of the Ammonites. Heshbon or Esbon, a Town which was afterwards given to the Levites, seated on a Hill in the Confines of Reuben and Gad, which some attribute to the latter; the Royal Seat of Sihon King of the Amorites. Eleale abounding in Vineyards. Jahasah, or Jasa a City of the Levites, with a Defart of the same Name. Kirjath-thaim. Bamoth-Baal, i. e. high Baal, a Town and Hill of the same Denomination, where Baal was worshipp'd. Bethphogor, i. e. the House of a Gap, or Breach, noted for the adoration of a certain Moabite Idol: Phogor a very high Mountain, from the top of which, Balaam the Sorcerer, by the impulse of God bless'd the People of Israel, although he had ascended it, with Balaak King of the Moabites, on purpose to curse them. Ashdoth-Pisgab: Phalgah, or Pisgab, a Mountain of an extreme height, from the top of which, Moses by the special Order of God, took a View of the whole Land of Promise, which he was not permitted to enter. Nebo, a neighbouring Mountain; both which and more especially the former (according to Adrichomius) were the highest tops of the Mountains of Abarim, which taking their first rise in the Country of the Moabites, were extended along the Course of the River Jordan, to the hilly Country of Gilead. Macharus, a well fortified Town, built upon a steep Rock, with a dangerous Precipice on all sides, not far from the Northern Coasts of the Dead Sea, to which St. John the Baptist was sent bound by Herod, and afterwards beheaded there. Livias, or Libias, near the Mouth of the River Jordan, founded by Herod in honour of Livia the Mother of Tiberius. Bosor, or Bezer, a City of Refuge given to the Levites, in the midst between Macharus and Mount Nebo. Sethim, or Sirim, according to the Hebrew Dialect, where the Israelites committed Fornication with the Daughters of Midian and Moab. Bethabara on Jordan, famous for St. John's Baptizing: It denotes, The House of Passage, either because here was a Ferry over the River, or in regard that the People of Israel pass'd over its Chanel on Foot, near the same Place. Abilab, a Town in the Plain-Country of Moab, the Soil of which brought forth great store of Palm-trees. Bethjesimoth, the Northern Boundary of the same Plains of Moab. Sarahabzar. And Helon.

The Territories of the Tribe of Gad were VIII situated in the Province beyond Jordan, between the River on the West, by which it Gad was separated from those of the Tribe of Ephraim, Ephraim, and of the half Tribe of Manasseh, the Brook Jabbok, on the North: the Country of the Ammonites and the mountainous Tracts of Gilead and Arabia, on the East: And the Seat of the Tribe of Reuben, on the South. It was a very pleasant and fruitful Country, comprehending the best Part of the Land of Gilead, which deriv'd its Name from the adjacent Mount Gilead; as also the Land of Thob, or Tob, formerly under the Dominion of the Ammonites, where Jephtha escap'd by flight and took up his Habitation.

The most remarkable Cities and Towns of this Country were Dibon, a large and well fortified Place. Aroer, call'd also Ar, Arnon and Rabbah Moab, i. e. great Moab, a noted City on the River Arnon and the Capital of the Moabites. Nabaha: Mennith, or Minnith; a Town of the Ammonites, whom Jephtha overcame in Battle, and pursu'd as far as that Place. Fazer, or Fezer, a City of the Levites, seated in a rich Soil, and on a Lake of the same Name. Arnon a Town and Mountain so call'd. Mageth heretofore of a large extent. Rogelim, the Town of Bärzilai the Gileadite, who entertain'd King David in his Flight. Maspha, Masphat, or Mizpeth, a City of the Levites, where Jephtha usually resided. Rabba, or Rabbah on the Brook Jabbok, heretofore a Royal Seat and the Metropolis of the Ammonites, who dwelt in the middle Way between the Moabites on the South, and the Syrians on the North; but they were first driven beyond the hilly Country by the Amorites, and afterwards by the Israelites: Here was King Ogg's Iron-bed nine Cubits long and four broad, and Uriah the Hittite was kill'd in the storming of this Place: But when the City and adjacent Country was subdued by Ptolomey Philadelphus King of Egypt, he impos'd on both (as they say) the Name of Philadelphia. Ramoth-Gilead, a City of Refuge, belonging to the Levites, where Jehus was anointed King. Carbon. The Forest or Champain of Ephraim, behind which was a Wood, where Abshaion was kill'd. Thesba, or Thesbe, the Birth-place of the Prophet Elijah. Dabir, a Town near the River Jordan. Betharan somewhat higher. Also Succoth, render'd Scena in Greek, i. e. the Tabernacles, or Tents, where the Patriarch Jacob, was reconcil'd with his Brother, and Gideon chaftis'd the Elders of Succoth with Thorns and Briars. Phanuel, or Penuel, where the same Patriarch wrestled with the Lord, and Gideon demolish'd the Tower of a Town, of the same Name, situated near the Brook Jabbok. Mahanaim, i. e. The Camps, a City of the Levites beyond the said Brook, in the Borders of Manasseh, on the farther side of Jordan, where the Angels of God appeared to Jacob in a Vision.

IX.
The half Tribe of Manassich.

The remaining Part of Judæa beyond Jordan was possess'd by the half Tribe of Manasseh: Its Bounds on the West, were the Sea of Galilee and the River Jordan, by which it was parted from the Territories of the Tribes of Zabulon and Naphthali: On the North, Syria, Damascena and Mount Hermon: On the East, the same Mountain and that of Gilead:

Part 2

And, on the South the Possessions of the Tribe of Gad. The Mountains of Hermon and Libanus, with the adjacent Parts, were heretofore inhabited by the People call'd Hevei, or Hirvies. The inheritance of this half Tribe comprehended, the middle Part of the Territory of Gilead, and all the Dominions of Og King of Basan. Basanitis; or the Country of Basan, is extended in length, (according to Adrichomius) from the Town of Mahanaim, or the Brook Jabbok, to the Frontiers of Damascus, and the Country of Gessuri and Machati; as also in breadth; from the inountainous Tracts of Gilead and Hermon, to the Sea of Galilee and the River Jordan. In these Parts were verdant Pastures full of very fat Cattel, and numerous Groves that produc'd admirable Oaks; and they were inhabited by very strong Giants; whence the Country was also call'd the Land of Raphaim, or Giants, of the remainder of whom was Og, the last Monarch of the whole Kingdom of Basan, who was kill'd by the Israelites: Here were a great number of Distinct Territories, viz. those of the Gergesites, Gamaliica, Gaulonitis and Batanea, which last reach'd beyond the fruitful Soil of Basan towards the East, as far as the Desarts of Syria and Arabia; as also, those of Trachonitis, Argob, Gessuri, Machati and Amranitis.

This half Tribe had many famous, large and well fortify'd Cities and Towns, among which were Ephron, or Hepbron, surrounded with Hills, not far from the Mouth of the Brook Jabbok. Hippas, or Hippus; on the Coasts of the Sea of Galilee. Gadara seated on a Hill, from whence the adjacent Country was call'd The Gadarene, inhabited chiefly by the Genites. Jabesh-Gilead, the Capital Town of the Territory of Galaaditis, the Siege of which carry'd on by Naash was rais'd by King Saul. Pella, to which Pella a Town of Macedonia is suppos'd to have communicated its Name. Gilead built on a Hill so call'd; from which both the Town and neighbouring Territory took their Denominations; the native Country of Jephtha, one of the most valiant Judges, or Captains of the Israelites. Casphor: Kamon. Kedar, a neat Town mention'd in the Song of Solomon. Jair. Etrai; the Royal Seat of Og King of Basan. Gamala; built on a Rock that is steep on all sides; from whence the Province Gamaliica took its Name. Gerasa, heretofore Gergesa, inhabited by the Gergesites; from whence the Territory lying round about, was call'd the Country of the Gergesenes and Gergesenes; but so far-much as Gergesa was near to Gadara, it is probable, that the same Territory was so nam'd from both Cities. Magdala, or Magdala, not far from Gerasa. Dalmanucha, within the Borders of Magdala, so that 'tis no Wonder, that the Names of Dalmanucha and Magdala are promiscuously taken. Julias on the maritim Coasts of Galilee not far from the Influx of the River Jordan into that Sea; formerly call'd Bethsaida, as we are inform'd by Josephus; but if we may give credit to Adrichomius, it was then only a Village; on the other side of the Sea, under the Jurisdiction of

of Bethsaida. Corozaim, in Greek Chorazin, on the very Mouth of Jordan, over against Capernaum or Capernaum, which Town our Saviour honour'd with many Miracles and Sermons; although they prov'd ineffectual. Sueta, Sueta, or Suites, a noted Town, seated somewhat higher, in a very fertile Country: The Tents of Kedar were set up between this last Town of Sueta, and that of Kedar, mention'd a little above, in very fruitful and pleasant Fields, during the Fair, that was kept here at a certain Time: Gaulon otherwise call'd Gaulan, Golan and Galon, a fair City of Refuge, belonging to the Levites in the Province of Batanaa, from whence the adjacent Country is nam'd Gaulonitis, or Gaulanitis; as the Town of Adrach communicates its Name to the neighbouring Territory of Adrach. Astarab, a large Levitical Town of Batanaa, and sometime one of the Royal Seats of King Og. Themam. Bozra a fortify'd Town allotted to the Levites, which as well as Themam ought to be distinguish'd from the Towns of the same Name in Idumæa. The Pharanæ, or Valley of Antiochus. Sogane built in a very strong Place: Argob, a Town and Territory so call'd. Naamath, which in Hebrew signifies Fair, a Town made (as some are of opinion) by modern Authors, and plac'd at a little distance from Themam and Sueta, as it were the Seat of Zophar the Naamathite, one of Job's three Friends. Selcha, or Salcha, the Boundary of the Kingdom of Balcan on the North. Gessur, a Royal City, the Capital of Gessuri a bordering Country, where Abalom fled, after he had deslour'd his Sister Thamar. Selucia a Town of a pleasant Situation on the Waters of Meron, abounding in Springs. Aram. Gerfon, a Town of Foreigners in Basaniis. Machati, a fortify'd Place. Abela. Mara. And Auran, from whence the Territory of Auranitis derives its Name.

CHAPTER V.

Judæa on the hither side of the River Jordan.

I.
Judæa on the hither side of Jordan.

AFTER having view'd the Country of Judæa beyond Jordan, we pass to that which lies on the hither side of that River, and which was bounded on the East, by the former, or by the Course of the said River Jordan flowing between both: On the South, by the lilly Country of Seir and the Rivulet Sichor: On the West, by the Great, or Mediterranean Sea: And on the North, by the Country of the Sidonians and Mount Anti-Libanus. This Part of Judæa very much exceeds the former in largeness, and therefore was distributed by Lot, among the Nine Tribes and half, which were; (as we said before in the fifth Section of the preceding Chapter) those of Naphthali, Asber, Zabulon, Issachar, the half Tribe of Manasseh, Ephraim, Benjamin, Judub, Dan and Simcon, whose possessions shall be describ'd in the same Order.

II.
The Tribe of
side of Jordan, towards the North, the Territories of the Tribe of Naphthali, or Nephtalim, offer themselves to our View;
being bounded on the East, by those of the half Tribe of Manasseh beyond Jordan, or by the River itself, from its Spring-head to the Sea of Galilee; on the South, by the same Sea and the Possessions of the Tribe of Zabulon; on the West, by those of Asber; and on the North, by Mount Antilibanus.
This Country extends itself, for the most part, between the said Mountain and the Sea of Galilee; but its Breadth is different, and it is least of all, in the Northern Parts: The Soil was very fruitful and pleasant, more especially towards the Sea-coasts; and Traffick might be easily maintain'd, with the rest of the Tribes, as also with the Phœnicians, Syrians; and Damascens.
The Provinces of Emath, Paneas, Berim, and Arbellis were under the Jurisdiction of this Tribe; but we shall hasten to give a particular Account of the most considerable Cities and Towns.

Within the Borders of Naphthali (taking no notice of the magnificent Temple of Augustus, which the elder Herod caus'd to be built of white Marble, within the Springs of Jordan, and dedicated it to that Emperor, in his lifetime) stood Lais, Laisa, or Leshem, on the Foot of Mount Libanus, near the confluence of the Springs Jor and Dan, in a very fruitful Country afterwards call'd Dan, as being a Colony of the Danites: The same Town was also known by the Names of Paneas, or Cæsarea Philippi; and was the utmost Boundary of Judæa, on the North, from whence the adjoining Territory was nam'd Paneas. Besides this Town, there were Heleph, or Heleb. Reccah, a strong place. Abela and Abel-beth-Maacha, whither Sheba the Traytor fled for refuge. Reblatha, or Rebla, a noted City, water'd by the Rivulet Daphnis: Aroseth or Haroseth of the Gentiles, the Town of Sisara, seated on the Waters of Meron, where the River Jordan passes out of them, and inhabited by several Nations.

Somewhat lower were Adami. Febnael. Lecum. And Capernaum, or Capernaum, according to the Greek Dialect; heretofore, a most wealthy and flourishing Mart-Town, situated on the Northern Coasts of the Sea of Galilee, and the banks of the River Jordan, at its influx into it; in a fruitful and pleasant Country, famous for the Residence, Sermons and Miracles of our Lord and Saviour JESUS CHRIST. This Town communicated its Name to the neighbouring Desert and Mountain, which is also call'd Christ's Mount, and was much frequented by him. Kadesb-Nephtalim, a City of refuge, belonging to the Levites, on the top of an Hill. Arbellis, from whence the Country lying round about, took its Name. Magdalen, a fortified Town. Carthai, under the Jurisdiction of the Levites. Sepher, on a very high and delightful Hill. Nephtalim, a noted Town. Nazbon situated in a Valley. Bethshemeish, or Bethshemes, a fortified Town. Afor, or Hajor, the Royal Seat of the most potent King Jabin; and Kirjathaim a City of the Levites. As also, Amotidor, or Chamotidor, seated in the middle, between Panæada and Emath. Emath otherwise call'd Amath and Hamath, a very strong Town, by the Spring-head of the River Eleutherus, or Valania, and Mount Libanus, which was also one of the Boundaries of Judæa, on the North, and from whence the adjacent Territory of Emathæa or Amathites deriv'd its Name: And Affedim, a Place of considerable strength.

III. As the Territories of the Tribe of Naphthali, The Tribe of so those of the Tribe of Asber, Aser, or Affer, Asber. extend themselves farthest towards the North of all the Parts of Judæa, on the hither side of Jordan: These Territories are bounded on the East, by those of Naphthali; on the South, by those of Zabulon; on the West, by the Mediterranean Sea, and the Countries of the Tyrrians and Sidonians; (which, although they were comprehended within the Lot of Asber, could never be brought in subjection to that Tribe) and on the North, by Mount Antilibanus, or Syro-Pheenicia. Here, in the Northern Tract, was situated the Land of Maspha, and that of Chabul, or Cabul, by the Tyrian Mountains, where twenty Cities were given to King Solomon, by Hiram King of Tyre; as also, in the Southern Parts, the Valley of Asber, or the Fat Valley, abounding in Oil, Wine and excellent Wheat, which is now call'd the Valley of St. George, from a Castle of the same Name built therein: Nor was this Valley alone exceeding fruitful, but all the rest of the Territories were so also.

The principal Towns were Elkath, otherwise call'd Helkath and Chelkad belonging to the Levites, and situated towards the North. Cana the greater, so call'd to distinguish it from the other Cana of lesser extent, and seated in the middle of the Country, near the River Eleutherus. Roob, Robob, or Rechob. a Town of good note, granted to the Levites. Gabala; Cabul. And Abdon likewise in the possession of the Levites. Behemeth, or Bethemee, built on a Valley, in the Confinnes of Zabulon; as also were Bethadagon and Labanath. To these Towns may be added Sibor. Acon afterwards call'd Ptolemæis, by the King of Egypt; a noted Town, with a capacious Harbour, on the Sea-coasts and in the Borders of the Land of Israel, although its ancient Inhabitants could not be expell'd by the Tribe of Asber. And Messal, or Missal, seated likewise on the Seashore in the Frontiers of Zabulon, and possess'd by the Levites.

IV. The Territories of the Tribe of Zabulon or The Tribe of Zabulon. were bounded on the North, by those of Asber and Naphthali; on the East, by the Sea of Galilee; on the South, by the Possessions of the Tribe of Issachar, or the Brook Kison, that runs between both; and on the West, by the Mediterranean Sea: So that they lay between two Seas, but their Extent was larger towards the former, than the latter, and the Soil was fruitful.

The most considerable Towns of these Parts, were Zabulon, of great Strength, not far distant from the Mediterranean Sea. Cana of Galilee, or the lesser, which some Geographers do not place in the Confinnes of Asber, but in the Territories of Naphthali, a small Village, according to Josephus, where our Lord and Saviour JESUS CHRIST began his Miracles, by turning Water into Wine. Amathion, or Honathon. Kebron. Bersabe. Semeron, a potent and Royal City. Damna under the Jurisdiction of the Levites, and Nia. Dothaim, or Dothan, a Town abounding with Figs, Vineyards and Olives, where the Patriarch Joseph met with his Brothers. Bethulia, a Town noted for its Springs, and situated on a high Hill: Bethlehem of Zabulon, so call'd to distinguish it from Bethlehem-Judah, which M. Sanjon will have to be Bethulia it self, although the most part of Geographers make them different Towns. Amaha, a neat Town. Remmon possess'd by the Levites, and by Sanjon made the same Place with Damna, mention'd a little before: And Bethsaida a famous City of Galilee, on the Frontiers of Naphthali, where our Saviour perform'd many Miracles. The Village and Desert beyond the said Sea, were under the Jurisdiction of Bethsaida, according to Adrichomius.

Here were also situated the Land of Genezar, Genezareth in Greek, a very fine fruitful Country, of a most admirable Temperature: The Castle of Magdalum, fortified with Towers and Bulwarks, on the same Sea. Jocapata a very strong hold, founded on a rock, to which there was a Passage, only on one side; remarkable for the Siege sustain'd by Josephus. Tiberias, a large noble City, famous for its hot Baths and Academy; seated on the South-West Coasts of the Sea of Galilee, which was sometime denominated from this City; it was built by Herod the Tetrarch, in honour of Tiberius Cæsar. Faplie. Cartha belonging to the Levites. Legio. Chesleib-tabor, a Town in a Campaign-Country, on the Foot of Tabor, or Thabor, call'd Iabryin, by Josephus, a high round Mountain, beset with Olive-trees, Vines and other Fruit-trees of several sorts, and famous, for the Transfiguration of JESUS CHRIST. Tabor, a Town granted to the Levites. Saffa, or Saffra. Sephoris, a wealthy, large and well fortified Town. Buria, seated in a fruitful Soil: Nazareth, a neat Town, where our Lord and Saviour was conceiv'd and educated, and thence was call'd a Nazarene. Nasbol granted to the Levites. Sarid. Gaba; a Place of good note. And Sticaminum, otherwise call'd Epha and Elpha a Sea-port Town, which in some Maps, is comprehended within the Bounds of the next Tribe.

V. The Territories of the Tribe of Issachar, or Issachar border on the North, upon those of The Tribe of Zabulon, from which they are separated by Issachar. Zabulon, from which they are separated by Issachar. Kison, on the East, upon the Sea of Galilee, and the River Jordan, just at its Passage from thence; on the South, upon the Possessions Possessions of the half Tribe of Manasseh; and on the West, upon the great Sea, though according to the opinion of some Geographers, it did not extend quite to the Sea, because Mount Carmel, and the Land of Naid interven'd. It was a very excellent and delightful Country; wherein were the Mountains of Carmel and Gilboa: The former, that ought to be distinguish'd from the other Mount Carmel of Judab, took up the Western Parts of this Tribe, (according to the common delineation of the Maps, although some comprehend it within the Bounds of the Tribe of Zabulon) and lies out into the Mediterranean Sea, in form of a Pronontory: It is an high Mountain full of Groves; cover'd with Olive-trees, Vines, several sorts of Fruit-trees, and fragrant Herbs; well inhabited; and famous for the History of the Prophet Elijah, as also for the Order of Carmelite Monks, who deriv'd their Name and Original from thence. Mount Gilboa is a long continued Ridge extending from the Town of Jezerael to the River Jordan, through the Confines of the half Tribe of Manasseh; and upon this Mountain King Sul and his Son Jonaban were kill'd by the Philistins. Within the Boundaries of this Tribe were also the Valley of Jezerael remarkable for several Battels: The Great Field, or Champaign, otherwise nam'd, The Field of Maggedo, or of Esdrelon, and The Plain of Galilee, which reach'd as far as the Territories of Manasseh, abounding with Corn, Wine and Oil, and is at present call'd, The Plain of Saba, from a Castle of the same Name: And the Land of Nail, on the Foot of Mount Carmel.

The chief Towns of the Tribe of Issachar were Beth-Ishemesh, on the very edge of Mount Carmel, which ought to be distinguish'd from Beth-Ishemesh of Naphthali and Judab, and several other Towns of the same Name. Aphraim; Nain, or Nain, on the Brook Kison, at the Gate of which, our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ restor'd the Widow's Son to Life. Seon-Endor, where King Sul consulted the Witch: Anaarith. Rabboth, in the Valley of Jezerael. Dabereth, or Dabrath, a City of Refuge belonging to the Levites, water'd by the Rivulet Kison. Cesion, likewise possess'd by the Levites. Issacher, a Town of the same Name with the Tribe, situated in the middle, between the Sea of Galilee, and the River Jordan. Abez. Ramoith, and Engannim, Cities under the Jurisdiction of the Levites. Ehadda. Beth-pebes. Cedes; a Town of the Levites, which M. Sanson supposes to be the same with Cesion mention'd a little before. Jezerael, the Royal Seat of King Ahab, seated on the Foot of Mount Gilboa, to the West, and in the Frontiers of the half Tribe of Manasseh; and reckon'd by Andrichomius among the Possessions of that Tribe: Naboth's Vineyard was situated near this City of Jezerael, which is sometimes us'd by the Prophets for the Term of Israel. Jaranoth a Town allotted to the Levites. Suna, Sula, or Shunem, the Birth-place of Abisbag, the young Virgin, who administer'd to King David, in his old Age; but especially the place where the Prophet Elisha sometime sojourn'd, and in gratitude for the kind entertainment he had receiv'd, wrought a Miracle, and restor'd the Shunemite's Son to Life. Apbek, a Royal City where the Philistins encamp'd, at several times. Esdrelon, a Town situated in a spacious Plain, which took its Name from thence; and Casaloth:

The Territories of the half Tribe of Manasseh, on the hither side of Jordan, distinguish'd from those of the other half Tribe, beyond that River, had for their Boundaries, on the North, the Possessions of the Tribe of Issachar; those of the Tribe of Ephraim, on the South; the River Jordan on the East; and the Mediterranean Sea, on the West. The Pheresal, or Perezites, a rude sort of People dwell in the Woods and Mountains, in the Western and maritim Territories of this half Tribe; although their Seat is plac'd by other Geographers in the more Southern Parts. The Country was very pleasant to the sight, by reason of the admirable variety of the Plains, Mountains, Hills, Valleys and Springs, besides the fruitfulness of the Soil, and the great number of Inhabitants, and stately Cities. In the same Western Tract was situated the Northern Part of the Plains of Saronia, which were extended from Cesarea Palestina to Lydda, or Joppe, fenced with Mountains, on the East and West, and abounding with Corn, Orchards and Pastures, that afforded Fodder to the King's Cattel.

The principal Cities and Places of this Tribe were Nopbeh, a well fortified Royal Seat, on the Sea-coasts. The King of which was kill'd by Joshua, The Tower of Sraton afterwards call'd Cesarea Palestina, a magnificent, strong, large and rich City; bordering on the East, upon a deep Marsh of fresh Water, and on the West, upon the Mediterranean Sea. Capharnaum likewise a Sea-port Town. Maggedo, a noble City, whose King was put to death by Joshua, and near which King Josiah was wounded by the Archers; seated in a spacious Plain, which took its Name from thence, as it has been already observ'd in the Tribe of Issachar. Febnaan, a strong hold. Adadremmon in the same Plain of Maggedo. Gaber. Geth-remmon, a City of the Levites. Tanac, Thanach, or Thenach, a large and potent City, in the Frontiers of Issachar, belonging likewise to the Levites, where Deborah fought valiantly against Sisara. Acrabata, that communicated its Name to the adjacent Mannour. Aner, under the Jurisdiction of the Levites. Bethsan afterwards call'd Scythopolis, a large Town rebuilt and inhabited by the Scythians, between the Mountains of Gilboa and the River Jordan. Salem, or Salim suppos'd to have been the Royal Seat of Melchisedec. Ennon, or AEnnon, where St. John baptiz'd the People, by reason of the plenty of Waters. Bezek, a Royal City. Bethbera. Ephra, where Gideon dwellt and was bury'd, and near which was an Altar and Grove dedicated to Baal. The Castle Alexandrinum. Abelmaula, a noted Town: Tberisa, Tharsa, or Thirsa, a Royal City on a Hill, where the Kings of Israel kept their Court, till Samaris was built. Thebes, a Town of good note, in a very fruitful Country, where King Abimelech melech was knock'd on the Head with a Mill-stone, as he was besieging the Tower. Nais. Machmata, otherwise call'd Machmech and Asor-Machmah, in the Confines of Ephraim. Narbaba. The Castle of Manath. Endor. Galgai the Royal Seat of a Prince, who was slain by Joshua. And Capharsalama, afterwards call'd Antiparis by Herod, from his Father Antipater; a Sea-port Town, lying between two Rivulets on the Frontiers of Ephraim, and encompass'd with a very fine Grove, in an admirable Champain-Country.

VII. The Possessions of the Tribe of Ephraim The Tribe of were bounded on the North, by those of the half Tribe of Manasseh, on the hither side of Jordan; on the East, by the same River; on the South, by the Territories of the Tribes of Benjamin and Dan, or as others will have it, only by those of Benjamin; although it is otherwise express'd in the Maps; and on the West, by the great Sea, which is its least Extent. This Country was extremely mountainous, but the Soil was very fat, and every where luxuriant: That Part of it which extended itself, from the mountainous Tracts of Ephraim, particularly so call'd, comprehended the Southern and most fruitful Part of the Plains of Saron, which were describ'd a little before, under Manasseh.

By reason of the excellency of this Tribe, the Kingdom of Israel, was also call'd that of Ephraim, and the Places of chiefest Note therein, were Saron, a Royal City heretofore subdued by Joshua, and seated on a Hill of the same Name, the Plains about which have been already mention'd, upon several Occasions. Gophna, from whence the Gophnitick Territory derives its Name. The upper Beberon situated on the top of a Hill, and possess'd by the Levites. Hycaniam, or Hycania, a very strong Castle. Adarja. Addus. Phanuel. Pharaton, upon Mount Amalek. Samarina, built by Omri King of Israel, on the top of Mount Semeran in the Borders of the Tribe of Manasseh, a very stately, pleasant and well fortified City, which from its first Rise, became the Royal Seat of the Kings of Israel, and succeeded Thersa, before describ'd in the half Tribe of Manasseh, that border'd upon this Tribe: Afterwards Samarina was call'd Sebaste, i. e. the August City by King Herod, in honour of the Emperor Augustus Cæsar, and Sabastopolis, by St. Jerom. Bethel. Sichem, a City of Refuge belonging to the Levites, built on a Hill, or (as others will have it) in a pleasant Valley surrounded on all sides, with Hills, call'd Sichar, in our Saviour's time, and after its Restauration, Neapolis, or the New City; still retaining that of Naplosa or Napolitana, near which, were Jacob's Well, Joseph's Sepulchre, Mount Hibal, or Ebal, and opposite thereto, Mount Garizim, or Gerizim, both famous for the promulgation of the Mosaic Law. This City is as yet one of the chief of the whole Continent of the Holy Land, and the Seat of a Turkish Sangiac.

Besides these noble Cities, there were Luzza. Benith, or Banith. Emon. Thamath. Isa. Jeshmaan, under the Jurisdiction of the Le- vites. Bethaven. Taphua, a Royal City: taken by Joshua, after he had kill'd the King of it. Asaroth-Aldar. Javoc. Atarab. Narababa. Ephrem, or Ephraim, in the Confines of the Tribe of Benjamin. Archisaroth. Doeb call'd Dagon by Josephus, a Fortrets on a steep Hill, with a very delightful Prospect. Mello, the Inhabitants of which chose Abimelech for their King, with the Sichemites. Gab-rimmon, a City of the Levites. Nayoth, where King Saul prophesy'd. Ephron. Machmas, of a large extent. Silo a Town, on a very high Hill of the same Name, bordering on the Tribe of Benjamin: Where the Tabernacle of the Covenant was erected, and the Ark of God was kept, for a long time. Rama, or Aruma, the Seat of Abimelech. Jephleii. Thamathara, Thamata, or Thamma, from whence the Thamnatick, or Thamnitick Territory took its Name; a very large Town seated in a hilly Country, which Joshua possess'd by Right of Inheritance, where he was also bury'd. Gazer, or Gazara, under the Jurisdiction of the Levites. Lidda, or Lydda, afterwards call'd Diopolis, i. e. the City of Jupiter, where St. Peter cur'd Aeneas of the Pally. Ramatha, otherwise call'd Ramathaim, Arimathas, and Ramathaim-Sophim, because it was built on Sophim a Mountain of Ephraim; a City of the Levites in the Confines of the Tribes of Ephraim, Dan, Judah and Benjamin; the Birth-place of the Prophet Samuel, which together with Lydda is attributed by the learned Spanhemius to the Tribe of Benjamin; although others are of opinion, that Ramath belong'd to the three bordering Tribes.

The Territories of the Tribe of Benjamin, VIII. The Tribe of border'd on the North, upon those of Ephraim; on the East, upon the River Jordan; on the South, upon the Inheritance of the Tribe of Judah; and on the West, upon that of Dan: But Spanhemius maintains, that it extended itself, as it were in a Corner, as far as the Great Sea; including within its Limits the Sea-port Town of Joppe, or Jaffa, besides Ramath and Lydda; but now mention'd. The Territories of this Tribe, with respect to the extent of Land and the number of Towns contain'd therein, may be reckon'd among the least. Towards the West, it was very narrow, lying out in a sharp Point, but encroaching broader towards the East; but as to the fruitfulness of the Soil, it was not inferior to any of the Countries, belonging to the other Tribes. The Plains of Jericho were more especially famous for their admirable Fertility, abounding with all sorts of Fruits and Delights, and particularly with that most precious Juice of the Balm-tree.

The chief Cities of this Tribe, were Nebes. Helam. Maspha, otherwise call'd Maspha and Mespha, a Town in the Borders of Benjamin and Judah, which St. Jerom attributes to the latter, the Judgment-Seat of Samuel. Nobe, or Nob, a Town belonging to the Priests, where King David took Goliath's Sword, and eat the Shew-bread. Amofa. The lower Beberon. Gabzon or Gibeon, heretofore a Royal and Large City, the Inhabitants of which circumvented Joshua, to save their Lives, afterwards consign'd to the Levites. Gabaah, or Gibeah of Saul, a City of the Levites, famous for the Birth of that King. Rama. Anaboth in the Possession of the Priests, the Birth-place of the Prophet Jeremiah. Gabaath. Sen and Bose: two Rocks, the tops of which stand opposite one to another. Beroth. Bebeth, before call'd Luza, a Town on an high Hill, remarkable for the Dream of the Patriarch Jacob. Hai, or Hi, heretofore a Royal City, burnt by Joshua. Bethaven, with the adjacent Defart. Galgala, or Gilgal, a noted Place, where the Israelites pitch'd their Tents, after having march'd out of the River Jordan. Lod-Hadid. Samaraim. Almon, a Town granted to the Sons of Aaron. Bethabara. Jericho a Large, Populous and Royal City, abounding, with Palm-tree Groves; whence it was also call'd the City of Palmtrees, the Walls of which fell down at the found of the Trumpets that were blown in the Camp of the Israelites; situated in a very fruitful Champaign Country that took its Name from thence; as it has been already hinted. Ophora, Ophera, or Ophra: Sela. Heleph, or Eleph. Ophni. Jawephel. Baburim, on a Hill. Reccem. Bethera, a very strong

Jerusalem. Town. And JERUSALEM, otherwise call'd Salem, Hierosolyma, Solyma, or Febus, as it was first call'd by the Hebrews, who inhabited the mountainous Countries of Palestine, and were Masters of this City before David conquer'd it; after which it became the Metropolis of all Judæa, and even of the whole Continent of the Levant, seated near the Rivulet Kedron almost in the Heart of that Country, nay (as some Authors affirm) in the middle of the terraqueous Globe (which ought to be understood of the Planisphere of the World, as it was known to the Ancients.) It stands on three Mountains, viz. Sion, Acra and Morish, every one of which had its particular Valley, in the Confines of Benjamin; so that one part of the City stood in Judab though the more considerable Part of it, where the Temple was afterwards built, was included within the Bounds of that Tribe: This most famous City, being taken by King David, A. M. 2986, became his Royal Seat, and that of all the succeeding Kings of Judab: His Son Solomon beautify'd it with many stately Buildings, and more especially with a most magnificent Temple. But Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon having made himself Master of it, A. M. 3446, caus'd it to be burnt, and utterly laid waste, demolish'd the Temple, and carry'd away the Inhabitants into Captivity. About 70 years after, in 3516, the Jews obtain'd a Permission from King Cyrus to return to their native Country, where they rebuilt the City and Temple; which flourish'd, till Titus, General of the Roman Forces and afterwards Emperor, besieg'd, took, burnt and destroyed both. In the year of our Lord 132, the Emperor Eliaus Adrianus began to rebuild the City, and impos'd on it the Name of Elia, or Elia Capitolina: The Emperor Constantine the Great, having restor'd the Worship of the true God, made farther improvements, and adorn'd it with many noble Edifices, the chief of which was the Church of the Sepulchre of our Lord Jesus Christ, that formerly stood without the City; which was invaded by Chosroes II. King of Persia, in the time of the Emperor Heraclius, A. C. 614. In the seventh and eighth Centuries it became a Prey to the Saracens, with the rest of the Holy Land; till the Christian Princes, and among others Richard I. King of England undertook the Conquest of this Country: So that they took the City by storm on Friday the 15th day of July, A. D. 1099, which gave rise to the Kingdom of Jerusalem, of which Godfrey of Bouillon was the first King, and had several Successours, for the space of: almost 100 Years. Afterwards Saladin King of Syria and Egypt defeated the Christians in several Engagements, and at last drove them out of Jerusalem. About the year 1187, this Country fell into the Possession of the Cailiffs, or Sultans of Egypt, till they were subdu'd by the Turks under the Emperor Selim, who took this City in 1517. It is commonly call'd the Holy City by the Christians, and Elkodi by the Turks, which signifies the same Thing, according to Michael Nau: It was sometime dignified with the Title of a Metropolitan See, and afterwards erected into a Patriarchal, by the means of the Emperor Justinian; five Arch-bishopsricks being subject to its Jurisdiction, viz. those of Tyre, Casarea, Nazareth, Bosra and Petra: But it now sinks under the Yoke of the Turkish Tyranny, and daily falls to decay; so that its extent is small; scarce containing above ten thousand Inhabitants, among whom are many Monks, who are employ'd in serving the Holy Places to Travellers; the Turks have fence'd it with a Wall, to serve as a Bulwark against the Incurfions of the Arabians. The Streets are narrow, and the Houses very plain, without any Ornaments. The Tomb of Godfrey of Bouillon is still to be seen, with that of his Brother Baldwin cut out of a Rock. The City of Jerusalem is distant 25 Miles from Joppe, or Jaffa, and the Coasts of the Syrian Sea, on the East, and 30 from the Dead Sea; lying almost in the midst between Damascus, on the North, and Grand Cairo, in Egypt, on the South-East.

There were many fine Gardens without the Walls of Jerusalem, and among others those that belong'd to the Royal Court, on the East: Mount Olivet situated likewise towards the Eastern Part of the City and Temple, from which it was separated by a deep Valley, and the Brook Kedron. This Mountain took its Name from the great number of Olive-trees growing upon it, although it also abounded with Myrtles, Pines, Palm and several sorts of Fruit-trees; and is more especially remarkable for our Saviour's Ascension thence into Heaven. To the West of Jerusalem stood Mount Calvary, or Golgotha, the usual Place of Execution of Malefactors, which the Emperor Adrian afterwards caus'd to be enclosed within the City-walls. Also Mount Gion, or Gibon full of Stones, of a somewhat long Figure, and of a considerable height, parted in like manner from the City, by a deep Valley; upon which Mountain Salomon was anointed King.

The Hebrews.

The spacious Valley of Raphaim, or of Giants, that produc'd great store of Oil, Wine, Wheat, and all sorts of Fruits, extended it self likewise on the West of Jerusalem; but the Valley of Jebosphaphat, otherwise call'd the Valley of Kedron, and that of the Mountains, lay out towards the East, between the City and Mount Olivet, being water'd and made fruitful by the Rivulet Kedron: It was heretofore the common Burial-place of the whole City, and is set apart even at this Day, for that of the Jews, not without Superstition: The Valley of the Sons of Hinnom, call'd also Tophet, and the Valley of Slaughter, was situated to the South-East of Jerusalem, on the Foot of the Mount of Offence, which was water'd as well as the others, by the Brook Kedron, and was full of green Plots, Gardens and Groves. Moreover, to the East of Jerusalem, were Geithemane, a Village on the Foot of Mount Olivet, affording plenty of Olives: Bethphage a Village, or (according to the opinion of others) a Tract of Land situated likewise on the Foot of the same Mountain: And Bethany, a Village, seated in a Territory of the same Name, on a Hill and in the Road that leads to Jericho; where our Saviour rais'd Lazarus out of his Grave. Lastly, to the West of Jerusalem stood Emass a very pleasant Village on the top of a Hill, which shall be describ'd anon in the Tribe of Judab, to which it is refer'd by most Geographers, except M. Sanfon, who places it within the Bounds of this Tribe.

IX. The large Possessions of the Tribe of Judab the most Southern, and much the largest of the whole Country, were bounded on the North, by Benjamin; on the East by the Mouth of the River Jordan, which here falls into the Dead Sea, as also by that Sea it self; on the South, by the farthest Bay of the same Sea call'd the Tongue, and the mountainous Country of Seir; and on the West, by the Territories of Simoon and Dan and the Mediterranean Sea; a narrow Tract of it running up between those two Provinces and the Sea, almost as high as Toppa. For the five maritum Lordships, or Governments of the Philistines, delineated in the Maps, under those Tribes, are appropriated in Holy Writ, and by Josephus, to that of Judab, within the Bounds of which Sachrona was likewise included. Thus the Territories of the Tribe of Judab exceeded all the rest, in the largeness of Extent; in the number of Cities, Towns and Villages; and in the multitude and valour of the Inhabitants: So that 'tis no wonder that the whole Country, took its Name from the principal Tribe, and its Bulwark, on the South and West, against the most potent Enemies. And indeed, these Territories were beautify'd with an admirable variety of Hills, Valleys, Plains, Rivulets, and Seas, and abounded with Pastures and Vineyards; nevertheless towards the mountainous Tracts of Seir and the Dead Sea there were many Defarts, but not altogether desolate, or inaccessible, as being beset with Towns at a small distance one from another. The Canaanites strictly so call'd dwelt in these Parts, enlarging their Borders, from the Country of the Philistines, to that of the Amorites.

The most remarkable Cities and Places of the Tribe of Judab, were Socho, or Sochor, a Town seated in a Champain Country, and on the Frontiers of Benjamin, between which and Azech, the Philistines encamp'd against Saul; and where David overthrew the Giant Goliath, with a stone cast out of a Sling. Emass, a Village distant sixty Furlongs, or seven Italian Miles and a half, from Jerusalem to the West, afterwards call'd Nicopolis. Bethsur, or Bethsora, a Town with a very strong Cattle. Maroth. Beithanath. Eglon a Royal City. Esban, or Esham. Bezek the Royal Seat of King Adonibezek. Beitlehem, firnam'd of Judab, to distinguish it from Beitlehem of Zabulon, otherwise call'd Ephraim, built by the Jebusites; the Birth-place of King David, whence it was also term'd, The City of David. This Town which was distant 5 Miles from Jerusalem to the South, is also more especially famous for the Nativity of our Lord and Saviour JESUS CHRIST, and was made an Episcopal See, by Pope Paschal II. under the Patriarch of Jerusalem; but it is now quite ruin'd. Thecoa on a Hill, abounding with excellent Pastures, the Native Country of the Prophet Amos. Debera. Nicophazi. Segor otherwise call'd Zoar and Tzohar, situated 15 Miles South of Jericho, near Mount Engaddi, not far from the Dead Sea, or on the Northern Coast of it according to Adrichomius and Sanfon: This little Town or Village, which still retains the Name of Seor, being one of the Cities of Penzapolis, or of the Country of five Cities, was preserv'd upon the entreaty of Lot: For the rest, viz. Adama, Seboim, Sodom and Gomorrab, were utterly destroy'd by Fire from Heaven, of which Strabo, Tacitus and Solinus have made mention, and stood in that most delightful Plain, where the Dead Sea is now extended. Engaddi, before call'd Asajombamar. i. e. the City of Palm-trees, built upon high and steep Rocks, in a Country heretofore noted, for its most fragrant Smell, by reason of the great quantity of sweet-scented Shrubs and more especially the Balm-trees, that grew therein; near this place was the Cave where Lot and his Daughters retired. The City of Salt. The Hill of Achillus, a strong Hold. The Valley of the Salt-pits: The Defart of Judab: Cabseeh, near the Southern Tongue, or Bay of the Dead Sea. The Scorpion-ascnt, in Hebrew Acraabim, a Hill so call'd from the abundance of Scorpions, that were bred there, and situated near the same Sea, in the mountainous Parts of Seir: The Towns of Eder. Jagur. Gna. Cedes. Charmel on the fruitful Mount Carmel, where Nabal dwelt, and which ought to be distinguish'd from a Mountain of the same Name, already describ'd, in the Tribe of Issachar. Maon, a Town seated in a Champain Country, and by a Defart of the same Name, full of Groves, Dens and Caves, which afforded a Place of Refuge to David, when he fled from King Saul. Ziph, a Town on an Hill, whose Inhabitants were treacherous to the former, and which gave Name to the spacious Defart of Ziph, where David in like manner often lay hid.

To the above-mention'd Towns, are to be added, Fota, or Juto. Nebfan. Gaba. Accan. Zano. Jucadan. Hebrew formerly call'd Sirra and Kirjath-arba, the most ancient City of the Land of Canaan, on Mount Heben, the Territories of which were given to Caleb: This City being'd to the Priells and was a Place of Refuge; near which was the Oak of Manasse, and the

thites.

Place call'd Herb. The Hebites, a fierce sort of People, being the same with the Anakims, inhabited the Southern Parts of Palestine of whom Abraham bought two Caves. The same City of Hebron afterwards afforded a Royal Seat to King David, for seven Years, and is very often mention'd in the Holy Scriptures. Jerusalem, the Birth-place of Amiasab, the General of Abisalom's Forces. Gilo, or Gelo, noted for the Nativity of Abisubel. Holon, or Olon, a City of the Levites. Gofjen, or Gofben from whence the adjacent Territory took its Name. Anim. Hefron, otherwise call'd Efron and Afor. Ador. Asemona. Afnoba, or New Afor, to distinguish it from the old. Samur. Fetber belonging to the Levites. Ferimoth, or Farmuth, a Royal City laid waste by Joshua, after he had kill'd the King of it. Keila, or Kehila, the Siege of which was carry'd on by the Philistins, and rais'd by David. Odollam, or Adullam, a Royal City, whose King was likewise kill'd by Joshua; near which was a Rock and Cave of the same Name, that sometime serv'd as a Place of Refuge to David. Leemas. Naama. Bethdagon. Kirjath-jearim, call'd also Kirjath-baal, a Town on a Hill, in the Borders of Benjamin, where the Ark of God, continued for a long time. Aasur. Azecha, a well fortify'd Town, where a great Shower of Stones rain'd down upon the Amorites. Lebna, or Libnah, a Royal City, of considerable strength, afterwards granted to the Levites. Maceda, or Makkedab, likewise a Royal City, where five Kings of the Amorites lay hid in a Cave. Chesten, placed in this Tribe, by St. Jerom. Lachish, a very strong Royal City. Bethshebess, or Bethsames, a Town possess'd by the Priests, to which, the Ark of the Lord return'd from Accaron. And Sachron, or Sicbron, a Sea-port Town; although this last, and the three immediately preceding it, are erroneously appropriated in the Maps, to the Tribe of Dan.

Lastly, the five maritim Provinces or Lordships of the Philistins, subdu'd by Judab, constituted Part of their Possessions, viz. Gaza, a large, populous and noted City, near the Torrent Bezor, at a little distance from the Sea, the Gates of which Samson carry'd to a neighbouring Mountain. Ascalon, a Town most strongly fortify'd, that had thirty of its Inhabitants kill'd and stript of their Clothes, by the same Samson. Azotus, or Ashdod, a very strong Town, where Dagon, the great Idol of the Philistins was usually kept. Accaron, or Hecron, a famous City, where the Idol Baalzebub was worshipp'd. And Gath, or Geib, a noble City likewise, the Birth-place of the Giant Goliath, with their adjacent Territories. The two first of these five Cities, are unadvisedly express'd in many Maps in the Tribe of Simeon, and the three latter in that of Dan.

The Territories of the Tribe of Dan were bounded on the North, by those of Ephraim and of Dan. Judab; on the East, by those of Judab and Benjamin; on the South, by those of Simeon separated by the Brook Sorek: and on the West by Part of the Inheritance of Judab and the Great Sea: These Territories were very narrow, and less than was sufficient for the Danites, who afterwards extended their Borders to the Parts of Naphthali and Asher; as also, on the Frontiers of the Sidonians, and took the Town of Latisb by force of Arms, from the Tribe of Naphthali, feated on the Foot of Mount Libanus, near the Confluence of Jor and Dan; giving their Name to that Town as we have already said in treating of the Tribe of Naphthali.

Among the Towns of this Tribe, Joppa, Jaffa, or Jassa is commonly plac'd in the Maps; a very ancient Sea-port Town, built on a high Rock, with a famous Harbour, to which the Timber and Stones design'd for the building of the Temple, were brought from Mount Libanus, and where the Prophet Jonas took shipping, when he fled from the presence of the Lord: But Spanhemius is of Opinion, That the Boundaries of the Tribe of Dan extended only to the Suburbs of Joppa, and he places the Town it self, within the Limits of Benjamin, as it has been already observ'd, in describing the Possessions of that Tribe. However leaving Joppa, we meet with, in the Jurisdiction of the Danites, Jammia, or Jabnia, a Sea-port Town feated in a Champain Country, in the middle between Joppa and Sachrona. Casbin, a Town near a Pool fortify'd with Bridges and Walls.
Mejajarcum, or the Waters of Fercon, a Town, situated near a collection of Waters. Arechon.
Geib-remmon, or Gab-rimmon, a City of the Levites. Bane. Thanna, otherwise call'd Tannata and Thenna, where Judab shored his Sheep, and Samson kill'd a Lion. Baalath. Helon, or Elon.
Ajalon possess'd by the Levites, and feated in the Confines of Judab and Benjamin. Jud. Adjada.
And Modin, on a Hill, the Native Country of the Princes of the Maccabees, where their Tombs of white polish'd Marble are still to be seen. Ethece, otherwise call'd Etheek and Ethecon, under the Jurisdiction of the Levites. Gedor, or Gador, in a fruitful and Champain Country. Nebel-Eshool, i. e. The Torrent and Valley of the Cluster; where the Israelitish Spies cut off a Bunch of Grapes of a prodigious Bigness, and gathered Pomegranates and Figs; in M. Sanjon's Maps, this Place is ex-press'd in the Limits of the Tribe of Judab. Saraa, or Zora, a neat Town in a Plain, remarkable for the Nativity of Samson. Heisfemes, otherwise call'd, The City of the Sun. Fethela; Gab-batson, or Gibbetson, belonging to the Levites:
And Eshool, in a Champain Country between which Town and Zora, Samson was bury'd.

Of all the Parts of Judæa, it remains only to give an Account of the Possessions of the Tribe of TheTri Simeon, that lay encircled by that of Judab, whose of Sim Lot having given them a larger Portion than was onneedful, they bestow'd Part upon Simeon, which Tribe was the least in Number; and so their Territories were of smallest extent: They were bounded on the North, by the Rivulet Sorek, which divided it from Dan; on the East, upon the Frontiers of Judab; on the South, upon Part of Ihumaa and the River of Egypt; and on the West, upon the Mediterranean Sea.

The Capital Towns of this Tribe were Bethlebaath. Sesenna. Siceleg, or Ziklag, a Town formerly possess'd by the Philistins, which Abisib gave to David. Medemena. Selim. Aen, Ain, or Hain, a City belonging to the Priests. Remmon.
Harma, or Horma, a Royal City, subdu'd by Joshua. Bethul, or Bathuel. Bethverai. Aseraal, or Haserjudal. Asemon. Asergadda. Molada. Da-bir, or Debir, at first call'd Kirjath-sephir, i. e. the City of Learning, or the Academy of Palestine,

which was taken by Orbnel, and afterwards granted to the Priests. Gerara, a Royal City, heretofore the Boundary of the Canaanites, on the South, and the Birth-place of the Patriarch Isaac, from whence the adjacent Country was call'd Geraritis, or the Gerarick Territory, in which was the Brook and Valley of Gerara, call'd The Straights by Josephus, where Isaac had his Habitation. Bersabee, or BeerSheba, a Town very often mention'd in the Sacred Writings, and inhabited for a long time, by Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, being the farthest Boundary of Judæa on the South; and bordering upon a vast Desert of the same Name; where Hagar wander'd up and down, with her Son Ishmael, and where the Prophet Elijah retir'd, to provide for his safety. This Desert usually termed The Sandy Sea, by Modern Writers, is altogether barren, torrid, destitute of Water, and cover'd with a light and soft sort of Sand, which the Wind easily rolls about; insomuch that Travellers are suddenly expos'd to imminent Danger. Majuma, Majoma, or Majonia, a Town near Gaza, on the Sea-coasts; from whence, Whether the Festivals or Sports of Majuma, among the ancient Romans took their rise is a Question not yet decided. Antbedon, another Sea-port Town. Raphia, of a large Extent. And Rhinocorura, or Rhinocolura, seated in the Confinnes of Palestine and Egypt, on the River Sichor and the Coasts of the Egyptian Sea; of which mention has been made before, in treating of the Boundaries of Judæa.

C H A P. VI.

JUDÆA, as divided by the Romans.

I. Another division of Judæa

THUS we have taken a Survey of the several Territories and Districts of the Twelve Tribes, into which the Continent of Judæa, was divided, while the Israelites had possession of it: But when the Romans made themselves Masters of Palestine, they reduced it to six Parts, or Provinces, viz. Judæa, Samarita, Galilee, Trachonitis, Peræa and Idumæa; the two first of which, and the greatest Part of the third, were situated between the Mediterranean, or great Sea, on the West, and the River Jordan, on the East; the two next in Judæa beyond Jordan; and the sixth, or last, on the South of Judæa towards Egypt.

II. Judæa strictly taken.

Judæa strictly so call'd, was bounded on the East, by the lowest Part of the River Jordan, and the Dead Sea; on the South, by Idumæa; on the West, by the great Sea; and on the North, by the Land of Ephraim, or Samarita; comprehending the Tribe of Benjamin, Judah and Simcon, as also, the most Part of that of Dan: This Province was subdivided into the maritim Tract, containing many Noble Cities and divers convenient Harbours, already describ'd, in treating of the respective Tribes; into the mountainous Country, in which were the hilly Tracts of Hebron, and several Desarts; into the Champain, or Eastern Country, including the most excellent Plains of Fericho, as it has been hinted in the Tribe of Benjamin; and lastly, into the Northern Tract, of a lofty Situation, in which is Ferusalem, the Capital City of the whole Continent of Palestine, with several other Towns, above specify'd, in the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin.

III. Samaria

The Country of Samarita, or Samaritis, to which Samaria, the Metropolis and Royal Seat of the Kings of Israel, communicated its Name, border'd on the South, upon Judæa; being also bounded on the East, by the River Jordan; on the North by the Territories of the Tribe of Issachar, or Galilee; and on the West, by the Great Sea: So that it contain'd that Part of the Land of Canaan, which was heretofore the Lot of the Tribe of Ephraim, and of the half Tribe of Manasseh, on the hither side of Jordan; very much resembling Judæa in the variety and richness of the Soil: But the Jews when they divide their Country into its Provinces, do not reckon Samarita, because they hated the Inhabitants, with their Sacred Rites, and our Saviour himself prohibited his Apostles to enter the Samaritan Towns.

The Province of Galilee had for its Southern Bounds the half Tribe of Manasseh, on the hither side of Jordan, or Samarita; on the West, Mount Carmel, and the City of Ptolemais, with the adjacent Territory; on the North, Tyre, and the Country of the Tyrians; and on the East, it extended itself beyond Jordan and the Sea of Galilee; comprehending Gadonitis, Gadara and Ithypus; which was the Land of the Tribes of Issachar, Zabulon, Alber, Naphtali and partly of Dan, in the Northern Tracts of it: The Air of Galilee was very temperate, and the Soil most delightful, producing the greatest store imaginable of Corn, Wine, Oil, and several sorts of Fruits. The Cities and Villages were very numerous, and the multitude of People was so great, that according to Josephus, the least Village contain'd above fifteen thousand Valiant Husband-men: The Inhabitants of Galilee consist'd partly, of the remainder of the Ten Tribes, and partly, of foreign Nations intermix among them, viz. Tyrians, Sidonians, Syrians, Arabians, &c. They spoke the Syriack Tongue, as well as the Jews, but more corruptly; they also admitted several barbarous Words, and us'd a peculiar Dialect: But it is more especially remarkable, That our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ being conceiv'd and educated in this Country, resid'd in it for the most part, and dispens'd the first Seeds of the Gospel; insomuch that he was call'd a Galilean; as also, That the greater part of the Apostles were here born and bred.

The whole Province was divided into the Lower and upper; the former being Part of Southern Galilee, where were the Tribes of Issachar, Zabulon and Part of Naphtali, that lay near the Sea of Galilee: Here also were Cana of Galilee, or the lesser; (although some doubt, to which of these Divisions it ought to be attributed) being perhaps situated at a lesser distance from the Sea of Galilee, than is generally suppos'd; the Towns of Nazareth and Capernaum, and the Country of Tiberias.

The upper Galilee extended it self farther towards the North, lying next Syro-Poenicia; and is call'd Galilee of the Gentiles, in Holy Writ; as well because it was the uttermost Part of Judæa, bordering upon the foreign Nations, as in regard, that it was inhabited by the Israelites, in common with those Nations; as it has been hinted a little before: It comprehended almost the whole Tribe of Naphthali, Asher.

V. Decapolis. Decapolis, i. e. The Country of Ten Cities frequently mention'd in the Evangelical History, took its Denomination from the Ten Capital Cities, which it contain'd, among many others, and is commonly reputed to be that Part of Galilee, on the hither side of Jordan, that lay on the Coasts of the Sea of Galilee, though some affirm, That the whole Country of Decapolis, excepting perhaps Scythopolis, lay out beyond the said River; and again others especially Adrichomius place it, partly on the hither side, and partly beyond Jordan: Making Decapolis bounded on the North, by the City of Damascus, and Mount Libanus; on the West, by Sidon; and on the South, by Scythopolis; extending it self on the East, thirty Miles in length, and somewhat less in breadth, beyond Jordan and the Sea of Galilee, to Hippus, Gadara and Pella, or (as others will have it) only as far as Pella: But the Ten Cities that gave Name to the Country of Decapolis according to the same Adrichomius, are Scythopolis, or Bethshan, Tiberias, Jotapata, Bethsaida, Capernaum, Corazaim, Kadesb-Nephtalim, Sebeth, Afor and Casarea Philippi.

VI Trachonitis. Having thus given an Account of Judæa strictly so call'd, Samaria and Galilee, Part of Judæa, on the hither side of Jordan; we proceed to the Description of the other Part, situated beyond that River, that is to say, Trachonitis and Peraa. Trachonitis, or Trachon, the most Northern Country of Judæa, on the farther side of Jordan; was bounded on the North, by Mount Libanus, and the Territory of Damascus; on the East, by Part of Mount Hermion, and the Hill Tracones, so call'd by Strabo, that separated the Desert of Arabia; from this Country which border'd likewise on the South upon the Village Arphus and the Town of Julias; and on the West, upon the River Jordan and Galilee: So that Trachonitis which had its Name, from its rugged and uneven Situation, comprehended the Northern Part of the half Tribe of Manassah, beyond Jordan, being altogether stony, spacious and full of Dens, yet not unpleasant; and was inhabited by the Jews and Syrians: But Geographers do not agree in their Opinion, Whether Iuræa were Part of Trachonitis, or otherwise: For some affirm, That the former reach'd from the River Jordan, near the Foot of Mount Libanus, Westward, to the hilly Countries of the Tyrrians and Sidnians, and as far as the Northern Tracts of Mount Libanus: Others maintain, That Iuræa and Peraa strictly taken, are only two different Names of the same Country: Others make Iuræa the Northern Part of Trachonitis, situated by Mount Hermion; supposing it to be the same Country with that which was heretofore call'd Gessuræa: Lastly, several Persons will have Iuræa and the mountainous Tracts of Seir, included within the Bounds of Trachonitis; which nevertheless, we judge to be more properly plac'd to the South of Judæa; neither do we admit of a twofold Iuræa, viz. one Eastern and the other Southern, or that the hilly Country of Seir was extended both towards the Territory of Damascus, and to the South of Judæa: However we shall hereafter Treat more at large of Idumæa and Mount Seir: Many Geographers have likewise thought fit to place the Land of Uz, the native Country of Job, in Trachonitis, as also the Seats of his three Friends; but they rely on an Hypothesis, which was never yet prov'd; viz. That the Land of Uz, was the same with Idumæa, and that it constituted Part of Trachonitis.

The other Part of Judæa, beyond Jordan, was VII. call'd Peraa, and lay more towards the South; If Peraa, respect were had to the meaning of the Term Peraa, the whole Country lying on the farther side of the River Jordan, may be understood by it: But in a stricter Sense, it is taken for the Southern Part of Judæa, beyond Jordan, heretofore distributed to the Tribes of Gal and Reuben; which was bounded on the North, by Pella; on the East, by Philadelphia, anciently known by the Name of Rabba, or Rabbath, and belonging to the Children of Ammon; on the South, by Macherus, a very strong Town with a Castle, on the Coasts of the Dead Sea; and on the West, by the River Jordan: But the Extent of this Country was larger between Pella and Macherus, than between Philadelphia, or Arabia and Jordan; abounding with Hills, Springs, Rivulets, Plains, and several forts of Trees, more especially, Palm-tree Groves, Olive-yards and Vineyards.

It only remains, to give some Account of Idumæa VIII. the sixth and last Part of Judæa lying out most Idumæa. of all, to the South; otherwise call'd the Land of Edom, Seir, Theman and sometimes Esaus, who impos'd his Name on this Country, which he himself inhabited and his Posterity, who were nam'd Edomai, or Idumai, from his Son Edom: Idumæa was situated to the South of Judæa strictly taken, so that it was sometimes express'd by the Term South, and contain'd the mountainous Tracts of Seir, in Hebrew Sebir, which were extended from East to West, from the hilly Country of the Moabites, to the Spring-heads of the River Nile in Egypt, and the Great, or Western Sea; whence Edom is taken for the West, among the Talmudists. This Mountain Seir, i. e. Rough, or Hairy, was so call'd, ever since Rough-haired Esau, after having defeated the Horai, or Horrai, and driven them from thence, took possession of it; as also did his Posterity, among whom were the Amalekites, who endeavour'd to hinder the Passage of the Israelites into the Land of Promise.

Moreover, Idumæa border'd likewise upon Egypt and Arabia Petraea; part of which it also constituted: Nay, the Borders of Idumæa were sometimes extended to the upper Coasts of the Red, or Erythrean Sea, which seems to derive its Name from Edom call'd Erythras, or Erythrus, by the ancient Grecians, and even as far as the Frontiers of Arabia Deserta: Where Theman, the most Eastern City of Idumæa stood in a Territory of the same Name; the native Country of Eliphaz the Themanite, who is reckon'd the first in Order among Job's Friends, and came first to discourse with him. The Town of Bozra was seated near Theman, on the Confines of the Land of Moab, and therefore they are often join'd together; but they are as distinct from Theman and Bozra two Towns of the the half Tribe of Manasseh beyond Jordan, or of Trachonitis; as Idumæa it self and the mountainous Tracts of Seir, are distant from Trachonitis; the Countries of the Ammonites, Amorites and Mobabites lying between each of them: See Sect. 6. of this Chapter.

After the Captivity of the Jews, Idumæa comprehended a great Part of Southern Judæa; enlarging its Borders as far as the Coasts of the Medierranean Sea, by Gaza, Ascalon, Azotus, and even to Jerusalem: But the Seals were turn'd, when Johannes Hyrcanus, having taken the Idu-mæan Towns, brought the whole Country under Subjection to Judæa, and commanded the Inhabitants to be circumcis'd and to observe the rest of the Jewish Rites. Many Geographers, as well ancient, as modern, comprehend the Land of Idæa, where Job liv'd, within the Limits of Idumæa; which nevertheless, we think fit to place, with greater Reason, in that Part of Arabia Deserta, which lies towards the River Euphrates and Mesopotamia; and therefore shall treat farther of it, hereafter in the Description of Desert Arabia.

C H A P. VII.

Ancient PHOENICIA and SYRIA properly so call'd, with the principal Lakes and Rivers of Syria.

AFTER having given a particular Description of ancient Judæa, the Series of our Method naturally leads us to the two remaining Parts of ancient Syria, viz. Phœnicia and Syria properly so call'd; of which we shall here give a brief Account. Phœnicia then, was bound on the South, by Judæa; on the East by Syria, strictly taken; on the North, by the same Country; and on the West, by the Great Sea, that walhes its Coasts from the River Eleutherus, or Valania, to that of Chorfeus, Cheuseus, or Mocata: This Country was otherwise call'd Phœnice and Phœnix, and (according to some Authors) Syro-phœnicia; at least, the Term Syro-phœnix is us'd by Juvenal, and Lucian for Phœnix: But they will have the Inhabitants nam'd Syro-phœnicians, to distinguish them from the African Phœnicians, or Peni; some take the Syro-phœnicians, and Celosyrians to be the same Nation: Others make Syro-phœnicia Part of Celosyria, lying round about Damascus; so that according to their Opinion, the Syro-phœnicians dwelt in the middle, between the maritim Phœnicians and the Syrians; and were so call'd from the Situation of their Country; as also in regard, that they were next Neighbours to the Syrians, and almost intermixt with them: Neither are the Sentiments of these last, much different from those of some other Writers, who place Syro-phœnicia on the North of the Upper Galilee, and of the Tribe of Asher, along the Banks of the River Adonis, or Adonius: However Phœnicia, although enclōs'd within narrow Bounds, was one of the most noble Countries of ancient Syria, and is very often mention'd both in Sacred and Profane History. The Phœnicians (Says Pliny) are renowned for the invention of Letters, as also, for their Skill in Astronomy, the Art of War and maritime Affairs. They not only fet out Ships to the Euxine Sea, or Strait of Constantinople, but also navigated the Grecian and Barbarian Seas, with the Ocean, beyond Hercules's Pillars, or the Straights of Gibraltar, and our Antiquities tells us they traded in Great Britain; sending Colonies, almost throughout the whole World, as is express'd at large by Bochartus: The Language of the Phœnicians was near of kin to the Hebrew, which was every where spread abroad, with their Colonies, where there are perpetual Footsteps of Hebraicisms.

This Country was heretofore divided into Phœnicia simply so call'd and Phœnicia Libani. Phœnicia of Libanus, or of Damascus, call'd also The Inner Phœnicia, and Aram-Damascensk, in the Sacred Writings, was properly situated between the Mountains Antilibanus and Libanus, which (according to Srabo's Description) being almost every where equidistant one from another, take their Rise, a little above the Sea, viz. the former near the Sidonian Sea, and the latter near Tripolis; and at the Mountains of Arabia, that lie beyond Damascus; and leave a hollow Plain in the middle.

The principal Towns of Libanitic Phœnicia, were Damascus its Metropolis, to which run the Rivers Amara, or Abana and Pharphar, both springing out of Hermon-Hills: Abila, or Abela Lyfania, a fine Town, from whence the Territory Abilene deriv'd its Name, of which Lyfania was Tetrarch, or chief Governor: And Heliopolis, or Balbe, a City surrounded on all sides with very high Hills; which was sometime a Bishop's See, and was afterwards created into a Metropolitan, under the Patriarchate of Antioch. In process of Time, Libanitic Phœnicia not continuing any longer within the Limits here specify'd, extended it self through Palmirena, and had Arabia Petraea and Palestine for its Southern Boundaries.

The other Part, call'd Proper, or Maritim Phœnicia, was situated towards the West, on the Coasts of the Syrian Sea; and its chief Towns, on the Phœnic Sea-shore were Ptolemæus, or Acri sometime an Episcopal See; under the Metropolitan of Tyre, and the Seat of the Kings of Jerusalem, after the loss of that City, with a Harbour in a little Bay, at the Foot of the Mountains; which is still much frequented by the Europeans: Tyrus, in Hebrew, Tzor, or Tzur, corruptly call'd Sor, from whence the Name of Syria deriv'd its Original; formerly an Island, and afterwards join'd to the Continent, by vast heaps of Earth; being the Metropolis of this Part of Phœnicia, the See of an Archbishop under the Patriarch of Antioch, and a very rich Mart-Town. Sarepta, call'd Zerephath, or Sarphath by the Hebrews, seated in the middle between Tyre and Sidon, on the Road, not far from the Sea-shore; and abounding with excellent Wine, where the Prophet Elishah was entertained by a certain Widow, whose Son he restor'd to Life. Sidon, or Sayd, a very ancient and famous Mart-Town situated on the Seacoasts; as likewise are Berytus, or Beirut, a Metropolitan See, under the Patriarchate of Antioch; where Baldwin III. King of Jerusalem died A. D. 1162. Byblus, formerly seated on an Eminence at the Mouth of the River Adonis, but now bury'd in its ruins: Botrys, or Bozeron: Tripolis, a large and neat Town containing about two thousand Houses, with a capacious Harbour: And Orthosia, or Toriosa, an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Tyre.

iv. Proper Syria. The third and last Part of ancient Syria, is Syria properly so call'd, comprehending twelve Parts, according to Ptolemy and Sanfon, viz. Celestria, Laodicea, Batanea, Palmyrene, Chalybonitis, Cyrestica, Chalcidica, Apanena, Cassotis, Selencis, Pieria and Comagena; but Cluverius only reckons up three, that is to say, Celestria, Antiochene and Comagene.

v. Celestria. Celestria, call'd Syria Cava by the Latines, is properly that Country, which is bounded by the Mountains Antilibanus and Libanus, extending it self (according to Strabo) two hundred Furlongs in Breadth, and one, or two more in Length: Which in regard that it is a deep Valley lying between the Mountains, may well be term'd Celestria, i. e. The Hollow Syria: But it is sometimes taken in a larger Sense, and upon that account, Strabo says, The whole Country lying out beyond Seleucia as far as Egypt and Arabia, is call'd Celestria. Cluverius will have the Borders of this Country to reach from Arabia Petraea to the River Euphrates, and under its Jurisdiction are contain'd the above named Territories of Laodicea, Batanea, Palmyrene, Chalybonitis, Cyrestica and Chalcidice.

As for the Towns of Celestria, some of them have been already describ'd, in treating of the half Tribe of Manasseh, beyond Jordan, the chief of the rest were, Laodicea Scabiosa, or Laodicea ad Libanum, from whence the Tract Laodicea took its Name: Palmyra, the Capital Town of Palmyrene, which border'd upon Mount Libanus, on the East, and was formerly a very magnificent City, as appears by its ruins lately discover'd, and describ'd in our Philosophical Transactions. Chalybon, or Calybon, that gave Name to the Territory of Chalybonitis. Zengma, on the River Euphrates. Hierapolis, a neat City, formerly dignified with a Bishop's See, but now almost ruin'd, and reduc'd to a poor Village. Berrea, or Aleppo, a note Mart-Town of which we have already spoken. Cyrrhus, or Cyrrus, on the River Marsyas, which communicated its Name to the Province Cyrestica, and was erected from an Episcopal to a Metropolitan See, under the Patriarch of Antioch: And Chalcis, a Bishop's See the Metropolitan of the Territory of Chalcidice.

vi. Antiochene. Antiochene, otherwise call'd Selencis and Selencia, was situated between Celestria, Comagena, the Syrian Sea and Phœnicia: The particular Provinces of this Country (according to Cluverius) were Apanena, Cassotis, Selencis and Pieria; and the most remarkable Towns were Emisa, or Hemza, on the River Orontes. Apania seated somewhat lower, which gave its Name to the Apanene Tract. Antaradus, or Toriosa. Aradus, a Town in an Island of the same Name. Laodicea, or Ludikia. Antiochia, or Antioch, on the River Orontes, the Capital City of Antiochene, and of the Roman Towns, in the Levant, already mention'd. Selencia firmam'd Pieria. Rhossus; and the lesser Alexandria, or Alexandria. The Country of Tetrapolis likewise constituted Part of Antiochene, in which the four abovemention'd Cities were compris'd; viz. Selencia, Antioch, Laodicea and Apania. Within the Bounds of this Country stood Cassus, or Cassus, a very high Mountain; from whence the Territory of Cassotis had its Denomination; and Mount Pieria, or Pierius, which reach'd to the Sticus Sinus, or Gulph of Lajazzo, and likewise impos'd its Name on the adjacent Province.

vii. Comagene. Comagene was the most Northern Part of Syria, and lay between Cilicia, Cappadocia, Euphrates, Celestria and Antiochene. The chief Towns of this Country were Samofata, or Sempfar the Metropolitan, seated on the River Euphrates, and the Frontiers of Mesopotamia. Germanicia on Mount Amanus, sometime an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Hierapolis: And Singa.

viii. The Lakes of Syria. Lastly, it is requisite to give an Account of the Lakes and Rivers of Syria. This Country contains three remarkable Lakes, viz. Samochonitis, Gennesaritis and Asphaltitis situated within the Bounds of Judæa. The Lake Samochonitis, Se-mechonitis, or Sibichæus, otherwise call'd The Waters of Meron, or Merom, and at present of Maron, The Lake being the least and most Northern, lies in the middle between the Territories of the Tribe of Naphthali, and those of the half Tribe of Manasseh beyond Jordan; and is separated almost at the same Distance from the Town of Dian, and the Lake of Gennesareth. It is sixty Furlongs long, and thirty broad (according to Adrichomies) and the River Jordan runs through its whole Length: During the Summer-season, its Waters are shallow, but it abounds, when the great quantities of Snow on Mount Antilibanus are dissolv'd, and fall into it: This Lake is famous in Holy Writ, for the signal Victory, obtain'd there by Joshua, who overthrew Jabin King of Hazor, and the rest of the Kings, that came to his assistance, with a sudden Slaughter.

ix. The Lake of Gennesareth. The second Lake is situated between the other two, although a great deal nearer to the former, than the latter, and is very often mention'd in the New Testament: It is call'd Gennesaritis by Ptolemy and Strabo; otherwise, Gennesarites, Gennesar, The Pool or Sea of Gennesareth, The Sea of Galilee, Cenereth and Tiberias; being surrounded with the Territories of Naphthali, Zabulon, Issachar, and the half Tribe of Manasseh, beyond Jordan; as also, with a great number of most pleasant and noble Cities. But the Opinions of Authors are different, with respect to its Dimensions: Jesephus says the Length, was an hundred Furlongs, and the Breadth forty; others larger, and Niger makes its Compass to take up the space of twenty Miles: The River Jordan runs through the whole Length of it.

x. The third and last Lake, which lies out most towards the South, and was heretofore a most fruitful Valley, full of all manner of Delights, Asphalt-water'd by the River Jordan, is Asphaltites, or Asphaltis, so nam'd by all the Greek and Latin Writers from the Bitumen in Greek Asphaltos, a kind of Brimstone or unctuous clammy Substance like Pitch, which bubbling up from the bottom, is harden'd by the Wind, and gather'd on the Shore:

Shore: This Lake is commonly call'd, The Dead Sea, by reason of its standing, thick and stinking Waters, that are altogether destitute of Fish; as also, The Sea of Sodom, from that famous City, which with three others of this Plain, were destroy'd by Fire from Heaven. The Sea of Salt, The most Salt Sea, and The Sea of the Desert and Solitude. Among the Inhabitants of those Parts it is now known by the Name of Bahar Melach, i. e. The Salt Sea, and (according to Michael Nau) by that of Babberet Louth, or Loi's Sea: It was bounded on the West, by the Territories of the Tribe of Judab, and on the East, by the Country of the Moabites: It is encompass'd, almost on all sides with high Mountains, extending it self (as we are inform'd by Josephus) in Length, from North to South, for the Space of five hundred and eighty Furlongs, and an hundred and fifty in Breadth, from West to East: Its Figure may well be suppos'd to resemble the shape of a Tongue, so that its most Southern Part is usually call'd by that Name, as is also (according to Sanjon) that Northern Part, which receives the River Jordan: This Lake (says Pliny) does not admit of the Bodies of living Creatures; for those of Oxen and Camels float on the top of it: Whence it is reported, that nothing can sink in it: And indeed, if the extreme Saltness of its Waters be duly consider'd, this Matter of Fact will not seem miraculous.

Samaria, and the Northern Part of Judea, on the West: At length this noble River having divided Judea into the Parts on the hither, and farther sides of it, enters as it were by constraint (to use Pliny's Words) the Lake Asphaltites, which is of a deadly nature; where it is soon swallow'd up, and loses its most excellent Waters, by intermixing them with those of that Pestilential Gulph: There are no grounds in the least to believe this to have been the River of Paradise; since the Circumstances mention'd in the Holy Scriptures relating to that River, do not agree with Jordan.

Arnon, now call'd Atramelech by the Inhabitants, a River or Brook of Judea beyond Jordan, flows springs out of a Hill of the same Name, and having water'd the Territories of the Tribes of Gal and Reuben, empties it self into the Dead Sea. Kedron is a Rivulet on the East of Jerusalem, between that City and Mount Oliver, which being encreas'd with Rain-water falling from the Mountains, as also, by some Springs, passes through the middle of the Valley of Jehoshaphat, and the Plains of the Desert, and runs towards the West into the Dead Sea.

The principal Rivers of Syria that run into the Mediterranean Sea, are Kison, Adonis, Eleutherus and Orontes. Kison, a Rivulet, or Brook of Judea, on the hither side of Jordan (as some Geographers affirm) flows out of the Sea of Galilee between the Territories of the Tribes of Issachar and Zabulon, and falls into the Mediterranean Sea, near the Foot of Mount Carmel: But this Brook (according to Adrichomius) rises out of Mount Tabor, and is soon after divided into two Streams, the lesser of which runs to the Sea of Galilee, and the greater to the Mediterranean. Adonis, now call'd Hahar Ascalb, i. e. The Dog-river, a River of Phoenicia, has its Spring-head in Mount Libanus, and falls into the Mediterranean Sea, between Berytus and Byblus. Eleutherus, or Valania issues in like manner out of Mount Libanus, and according to several Authors rolls into the Mediterranean Sea, between Tyre and Sarepta; or (as others will have it) near the Town of Balanea, or Valania, which now imposes its Name on this River, and is situated much more towards the North, than the two former Towns. Lastly, Orontes, or Almeimas a great River of Syria, taking its Rise from Mount Libanus, descends its Course towards the North, and among other Towns waters Emesa, Apania and Antioch, below which it discharges it self in into the Sea, near Selenia Picria.

XI. The Rivers of Syria partly discharge themselves into the Dead Sea, and partly into the Mediterranean: The chief of the former, are the River Jordan, and the Rivulets Arnon and Kedron. Jordan, in Latin Jordanis, or Jordanes, now call'd Scheriab by the Inhabitants, i. e. The Law, as also Jourdain by the French, and Il Giordano by the Italians, the most pleasant, largest and almost only River of Judea, so often mention'd, takes its Rise, with a double Stream, in Galilee, on the Foot of Mount Anilibanus, four Miles above Cæsarea Philippi, out of two Springs nam'd Jor and Dan, at a little Distance one from another, the latter lying towards the West: These two Streams being united at Cæsarea Philippi constitute the River Jordan, which is at first call'd The lesser, and probably impose this Name upon it: Hence flowing down to the South, and dividing the Upper Galilee from Trachonitis, it passes through the Lake Samochemites, or the Waters of Meron: Then it runs into the Sea of Galilee, by the Towns of Capername and Chorazin, and at the end of that Lake, on the left side, receives the Rivulet, or Brook Jabbok: Afterwards being call'd The Greater Jordan, it flows between Peraz, on the East, and

DIARBECK and ancient ASSYRIA

I. Diarbeck taken at large. HAVING thus run through the Western Part of Turkey in Asia which lies between the Archipelago and the Mediterranean Sea, as also between the River Euphrates and that Sea: We pass on next to its Eastern Part, situated between the same River and Persia, where Diarbeck and Turcomania offer themselves to our View. Diarbeckia, Diarbeck, or Diar-Beskir, i. e. The Duke's Country, is bounded on the West, by Syria properly so call'd, and Arabia Deserta; the River Euphrates, for the most Part, supplying the place of a Boundary; on the South, by the same Arabia and the innermost Reeds of the Persian Gulph, or Gulph of Bassora; on the East, by the Country of Persia; and on the North by Turcomania.

II.
The Division of Diarbeck.

This Country is usually divided into three Parts, or Provinces, viz. Diarbeck, Yerack and Curdistan; the first of which extends itself towards the West, the second to the South, and the last to the East. Diarbeckia, Diarbeck, or Diar-beckir strictly so call'd, being the greatest Part of Diarbeck taken at large, has the River Euphrates for its Western Bounds, by which it is separated from proper Syria and Arabia Deserta; as also Yerack, on the South; Curdistan, on the East; and Turcomania, on the North. It is commonly call'd by the Arabians Al Gezira, i. e. The Island, or rather The Peninsula, as being water'd on the West and South, by the River Euphrates, and on the East, by Tigris; and is at present subdivided into four particular Districts, viz. proper Diarbeck, Diar-mozzar, Diar-rabaa and Diar-algezira.

The most remarkable Towns of Diarbeck, are Orfa, or Omsfa, in a fruitful, well cultivated and pleasant Country, by some reputed the Capital of Diarbeck; where the best yellow Leather is made. Bir, or Berygeon, a large Town, on the Foot of a Mountain, abounding with excellent Corn, Wine, Fish, and several sorts of Fruits; with an old Castle, on the River Euphrates, over which there is a Ferry in this Place. Raga, or Rika, the Capital of the Beglerbeglick of Rika, in which there are seven lesser Governments, or Sangiackates. Kavkije. Harran. Diar-beckir. Kar-Emir, or Kar-Emu, the chief City of the Beglerbeglick of Diar-beckir, on which depend nineteen Sangiackates, and (as some say) of the whole Country; is seated on an Hill, on the right-side Bank of the River Tigris, and fortified with a double Wall and 72 Towers: It is a large and populous Town, yielding good store of Corn, Wine, excellent Cattel, and the best sort of red Leather. Afanchif, or Afanchinf, taken by most Geographers for the Metropolis of Diarbeck, with several Suburbs, containing a vast multitude of Inhabitants: The Order of the Maps is different, as to the Situation of this Place, most of them including it in the Frontiers of Curdistan, and others within that Province it self; but M. Sanson, in his Map of the State of the Turkish Empire, places it on the Western Bank of Tigris. Mardin, a little Town on an Hill, fenced with Walls and a Castle, out of which an admirable Spring issues forth: Some will have this Town to stand not far from the Tygris, a little lower than it is usually set. Gezire, another little Town in the Island of Tigris. Nisbin, otherwise call'd Nesbin, or Nasbin, which now only deserves the Name of a large Village. Teckrita, or Teckrit; and Mauslum, Mosul, or Moussul, a great Town, of a fair Aspect on the outside, enclosed with high Stone-walls, but almost quite laid waste within: However it is a considerable Mart-Town (to which a great Number of Merchants resort, more especially Arabians and Curds) and the Capital of the Beglerbeglick of the same Name, under which are five Sangiackates: It is seated on the Western Bank of the Tigris, and adorn'd with a little Castle.

III. The Second Part of Diarbeck taken at large, Yerack, and situated towards the South, is Braca, or Yerack, otherwise call'd Yerack and Yrachs, as also, Hierak-arabi by M. Tavernier: It is bounded on the West, by Arabia Deserta; on the South, by the same Arabia and the Persian Gulph; on the East, by Persia; and on the North, by Curdistan and Diarbeck. This Province, in which the Rivers Euphrates and Tigris are united, is very well water'd, and has many rich Pastures, affording Fodder to numerous Herds of Cattel, more especially Buffles, or Wild Oxen, with great store of Milk and Butter.

The chief Towns of Yerack are Zab; Feloggia; Cufa; Balsora, otherwise call'd Balsera, Balsora, Bassora, Basra and Bofra, a large Town half a Mile distant from the Confluence of Euphrates and Tigris, to which it has a deep Ditch; and seated on the Frontiers of Arabia Deserta, within the Limits whereof it is included by M. Thevenot and others. It is the Head of a Principality of the same Name, govern'd by its own Prince, who is nevertheless an Homager to the Grand Seigneur, and a most famous Mart-Town, whither the English and Hollanders bring Commodities up the Persian Gulph, to sell to the Merchants that resort thither from Constantinople, Smyrna, Damascus, and Grand Cairo in Egypt: It is also observable, that the modern Name of the Persian Gulph, derives its Original from this Town of Balsora, which is defended with a strong Cattel and a capacious Harbour. Gorno or Qorno, a considerable Fortrefs, on the Confluence of Tigris and Euphrates. Vafet, Wafet or Wafsh; as to the Situation of which, the Opinions of Authors are different. And Bagdad, or Bagdet, the Metropolis of this Province, and of the Beglerbeglick of the same Name, which comprehends ten Sangiackates under its Jurisdiction. It is seated on the Eastern Bank of the River Tigris, over which there is a Bridge of Boats, extending it self about three Italian Miles in Compass; and is well fortified with Ramparts, Towers and Trenches. This Town, which rose out of the Ruins of Selencia, as that did out of the Ruins of Babylon, was built by Almansor Abugafar the 22. Cailliff of the Saracenes, and call'd Bagdad, i. e. the Garden of Dad, from a certain Persian, who had a large Garden therein: It was often taken and regain'd by the Turks and Persians, and has continued in the Possession of the former, ever since A. D. 1628. It is fenced with large Suburbs, on the other side of the River, and is at present much frequented, both upon the account of Religion and Merchandise; it stands 110 Miles from Ninive, to the South, and scarce 200 from the Mouth of Tigris to the North: And about a days Journey from it, are still to be seen the Ruins of Babylon, so much celebrated in ancient History, of which more anon.

The third Part of Diarbeck largely taken, lies IV. towards the East, and is call'd Curdistan, ac-Curdi-cording to M. Tavernier, and several other Au-thors, and by others Arzeron, or Assyria. The same Tavernier extends it from the Lake Van, its Northern Boundary (which is situated beyond Assyria, in the Eastern Tract of the greater Armenia) along the Eastern Banks of the River Tigris, as far as the Territory of Bagdad; and it is for the most part subject to the Dominion of the Turks.

The most remarkable Towns and Places of Curdistan are Ninus, or Ninive, on the East-Bank of the Tigris, now a meer heap of Ruins, which are spread abroad by the River side, for the space of a Mile. At the distance of half a Mile from hence is an Hill, with a famous Mosque, where the the Monument of the Prophet Jonah is shewn, a Place, for which the Turks have a very great Veneration; so that no Christian, can come near it but by Stealth. Cherazoul, Schekreful, or Sciabratur, a Town built on a cut Rock, with a fine Stone-bridge, in the Confines of Persia; the Capital of the Beglerbeglick of the same Name, under which are ten Sangiacates. Amadia, Bilis, or Belis, a Town seated in the middle between two high Mountains, with a Castle on a very steep Rock, under its own potent Prince, who is neither subject to the Grand Signior, nor to the King of Persia. Salmajtra, or Salmastre. Van, or Wan, a spacious Town, with a strong Castle on an Hill, the Capital of the Beglerbeglick of Van, including nine Sangiacates; although M. Tavernier refers it to Turcomania: It is inhabited by a great number of Armenians, and stands on a Lake of the same Name, which is reckon'd among the largest of the whole Continent of Asia, and extends it self almost fifty Miles in Compaſs: This Lake contains great store of Fish, but (as it is related by Travellers) only of one and the same sort, with two considerable Islands. And Taduan a Village on the same Lake, with a capacious and safe Harbour.

V. The Country of Diarbeck, with its three Provinces just now describ'd in particular, was anciently the Eastern Part of Syria or Assyria taken also at large, which afterwards was only call'd Assyria, and its Parts were Mesopotamia, Babylonia and proper Assyria: See Chap. III. Sect. I.

VI. Mesopotamia, i. e. a Country lying between the Rivers, being the same with Diarbeck strictly taken, obtain'd its Name from its Situation; for it is water'd on the West and South, by Euphrates, and on the East by Tigris. On the North, were the Niphatick Hills, which separated it from the greater Armenia. Upon the same account, it is call'd by the Hebrews Arani-naharaim, i. e. Syria of the Rivers; in the Dual Number, as the Term Naharaim denotes; as also, Padan-aram, which was the Habitation of Laban, where Jacob fled for Refuge; by which nevertheless, Bochari does not understand (as is commonly done) the whole Country of Mesopotamia, but only its Northern Part, from the Mountains of Armenia, to the River Chaboras, which was cultivated and fruitful, the remaining Part being untill'd, rugged and barren; but he seems to remove the Seat of Laban too far towards the North. The particular Provinces of Mesopotamia, were Anibemusta Chalcitis, Gauzanitis, Acabene, call'd Acabene, by Sanson, Engine, or Tingine, and Ancobariites, or Ancobariitis.

The principal Towns of this Country, were Selencia, on the River Euphrates, at its Confluence with the Tigris, out of whose Ruins Monsful afterwards rose up: Labbana Nisibis which several Authors take to be the same with Nisbin or Nesbin: Edeſſa, call'd Ediſſain Antoninus's Itinerary, noted for the Death of the Emperor Antoninus Caracalla, now generally suppos'd to be Orpha, although others are of the contrary Opinion; at least neither Orpha, nor Edeſſa is the same with Charan next to be mention'd: Cartha, famous for the overthrow of Crassus and the Roman Forces under his Command, taken by several Authors to be Charan, or Charran cited in the Holy Scriptures, as well as Nabor the Seat of Terah and Nabor, from whence Abraham departing by the Divine Appointment, set forward to Sichem; and which likewise bore the Name of Aran, Haran, or Harran, and was seated on the River Chaboras, or in some Part of Mesopotamia, that was water'd by it, not far from the Euphrates, towards Syria, Palmyrena and Arabia Deserta, on the Road, which leads from Chaldea to the Land of Canaan. Nacephurium. And Chabora, a Town on the River Chaboras, near its Confluence with Euphrates, which Isaac Poſſini supposes to be the same with Ur of the Chaldees.

The second Part of Assyria, was Babylonia, bounded on the North, by Mesopotamia and Assyria; on the East, by Syſiana; and on the South, by the Perſian Gulph and Arabia Deserta; which was also its Boundary, on the West. It was also call'd Chaldea, which others will have to be the Southern Part of Babylonia, towards the Desert of Terach, nevertheless that Part of it is to be understood, which lies towards the East, beyond the River Tigris. The remarkable Provinces of Babylonia, were Anchanitis, or rather, Auranitis, Mardocan, or Amordocaa and Chaldea.

The Capital City of thote Parts was Babylon, into which the Chaldeans translated the two Tribes of Israel, seated in a Champain Country anciently call'd Sennabar, Sinbar, or Sinear, on the River Euphrates, which divided it almost into two equal Parts: It was built by Nimrod, or Belus the Grandſon of Ham; or as others say, by Semiramis, and became the Royal Seat of the Kings of Assyria.

BABYLON, was once a City of that mighty extent and magnificence, that as it then was reckon'd among the Wonders of the World, so it still deserves some remembrance, and therefore we cannot pass by without giving the Reader a short account of it, as we find it set down by Diod. Siculus. Semiramis the Widow of Ninus, the famous Heroine, and the fourth of the Assyrian Monarchs, resolving to outdo her Husband who had built Ninive, founded or at least re-edified the City of Babylon, wherein, says my Author, she employ'd two Millions of Men, who in a years time built the Walls that were as many Furlongs round as the year had days, viz. 365, the height of them 50 Orgys's or Fathom, that is, 100 Yards, and the breadth large enough for six Chariots to go a-breast; or as others say only 50 Cubits high, and breadth for two Chariots: The Wall was adorn'd and guarded with 250 large Turrets, and the City in some parts surrounded with deep and most dangerous Morasses: The River Euphrates ran through the middle of the City, and on each side of it was a magnificent Palace, which were made communicable by a Passage under the River; as well as by a most stately Bridge over it: The Walls of the Palace on the West side the River, which was much the finer of the two, was 60 Furlongs, or 7 Miles and half, in Circuit, within which was another Wall 40 Furlongs round, 300 bricks thick, and 100 yards high, upon which were Turrets raised yet much higher, whence she took a View of the whole City: And within that, was a third Wall exceeding the other in height; but proportionably less in Circuit, being 30 Furlongs; this contain'd the Royal Palace, and was adorn'd with Bassos, Relievs and other Decorations: The Palace its self self was magnificent in its furniture fitably to its Structure, and must needs have exceeded any thing that ever was; unless Persepolis must take place of it: She also built a Temple to Jupiter, or Belus, of mighty height, as may be judg'd by the magnitude of the Statues, placed at top, which weigh'd 1000 Talents each, and were 40 foot high. But the Hanging Garden in Babylon was most admir'd; this was a work of later date, and wonderful structure; being a very curious Garden of 400 foot square, rais'd by Arches one above another to a vast height: But all this Glory is long since pass'd away, and even Diodorus speaks of it as a ruin'd place in his Time: The extent of this City was so great, that 'tis reported, That Babylon being subdu'd by the Enemies on a certain Time, the News of its surrender did not come to the Ears of those who inhabited the farthest Part of the City till the third Day: And indeed, it was often taken, particularly by Cyrus, Darius, Alexander the Great, who died there, Seleucus and others. Lastly the Country of Babylonia and the first Monarchy of the World, call'd also the Chaldaean, took their Denomination from this famous Metropolis, which was distant 100 Miles from Teredon to the North, 140 from Nineve, to the South, 320 from Susa, to the West, about 500 from Damascus. It is apparent from the above-mention'd Situation of Babylon, that it did not stand on the same Ground with Bazdal a Town of Terack, on the Eastern Bank of the Tigris already mention'd, although the latter grew up out of its Ruins; or in the place of Ctesiphon, a large Village, on the same side of the said River; or in that of Seleucia, a Town near Ctesiphon and over against it; much less in the room of Susa, a City of Susiana, on the River Eulaus, near Felonia, where the Tigris is divided into two Streams; but this Situation of Babylon agrees little with the fore-going: And according to the Opinion of others, that great City stood on the same Territory, with a Place now call'd Ellar, or le, where many Ruins are to be seen, and a Tower, which at this Day, bears the Name of Nimrod's Tower.

The other remarkable Towns of this Country, besides Babylon, were Volgesia; Borsippa, on the Marthes, call'd Borsia by Ptolemy; And Urchoa, or Orchoe, generally taken for Ur of the Chaldees, the Birth-place of Abraham; although others will have Ur to be the Ura of Pliny, which was situated in Assyria, a Province of Babylonia, that is to say, in the Place, where the River Euphrates turns towards the East; or the Uria of Eusebius, who wrote of the Jewish Affairs, a Town likewise of Babylonia, and perhaps the same with Pliny's Ura: Isaac Vossius is of Opinion, that Chabara was ancient Ur, as we have already hinted in Mesopotamia, but Bochart is rather inclin'd to place it in the Northern Part of Mesopotamia, towards the Confines of Assyria, and the Armenian Mountains, between Nisibis and the River Tigris: Upon the whole, we think fit to follow the Sentiments of those who fix Ur within the Bounds of Chaldea, but it is difficult to determine, to which of the Ura's it ought to be appropriated. Lastly, between the Mouths of Tigris stood Teredon, a large Town, now judg'd by most Geographers, to be the same with Balsara, but unadvisedly; in regard that the Ruins of the former (according to the Account given by Travellers) are distant two Miles from the latter; nevertheless it cannot be denied, That Balsara ow'd its Growth and Improvement to Teredon.

Having thus given a particular Description VIII of Mesopotamia and Babylonia, we cannot pass by The Situation of Eden and Paradise. in silence, the Situation of Eden, or Heden, and Paradise, concerning which there are various Opinions: To omit frivolous and fabulous Relations, there are some learned Men, who maintain, That the Terrestrial Paradise was seated within the Bounds of the Land of Canaan in the Valley of Jericho, along the Banks of the River Jordan, which (as they say) water'd the Garden of Eden; or else in the Territories of Damascus, not far from Mount Libanus; against which Opinion, Spanheim raises many Objections, in his Introduction to sacred Geography, p. 5, 6, 7. Others are apt to believe, That Paradise was situated in the greater Armenia; because (according to their Judgment) the Rivers mention'd in Holy Writ have their Spring-heads in that Country; that is to say, not only Tigris and Euphrates, but also Pison, in process of time call'd Phasis, its Name being a little chang'd, and Gihon afterwards known by that of Araxes, of the same signification with the former; for the Term Gihon in the Language of the Chaldeans denotes a River, as well as that of Araxes in the Persian; But neither does this sense sufficiently agree with the Sacred History, which shews, That Eden was situated Eastward, either with respect to Arabia, where Moses liv'd, or to the Land of Canaan: For according to the usual manner of Expression, among the Hebrews, the Term East, denoted all that Region, which extended it self from Palestine, towards the East, including Arabia Deserta, Chaldea, the Southern Part of Mesopotamia, Assyria, Susiana and Persia: And indeed, the Country of Eden was situated in that Part of the East, where the Rivers Euphrates and Tigris meet, and are thence parted into several Streams, among which were Gihon and Pison, although their Course by the passing of so many Ages, is now rendred somewhat obscure, the former watering the Land of Cush, and the latter that of Havilah; which Countries are plac'd by many Authors in Arabia Felix, not far from the Persian Gulph, into which, Tigris, Euphrates, and the aforesaid Streams discharge themselves: Therefore we have good grounds to believe with Huetius, Bochart, Bishop Patrick, Spanhemius and others, That the Seat of the most pleasant Garden of Paradise, which God himself planted in the Country of Eden, was in the Southern Tract of Babylonia, or Mesopotamia, amidst the Rivers Tigris and Euphrates, and the neighbouring Rivulets. P. Dan. Huetius, Bishop of Avranches, in his Tract de situ Paradise, as also Bishop Patrick in his Commentary on Genesis, fix the Situation of Eden between the place where the two Rivers Euphrates and Tigris unite into one Stream, and the place where these again divide into two Branches, that is, between the 34th. and the 32d. Degrees of North Latitude; and the Garden it self upon the East side of that Stream just above the division; the two Branches (that afterwards fall into the Persian Gulph) being, the Western the Phison of Moses, and the Eastern the Gebon.

IX. The third and last Part of Assyria, was simply call'd Assyria, and for distinction sake Proper Assyria; but at present is known by the Name of Cordistan and Arzerun: It was bounded on the West, by the River Tigris, which separated it from Babylonia and Mesopotamia; on the North, by the greater Armenia and Media; on the East, by Media; and on the South, by Susiana: It is otherwise call'd the Land of Assur, in Hebrew, as well as Assyria, in Greek, and Lain, from Assur the Son of Sem, from whom the first Monarchy was also styl'd, The Assyrian. Bochart affirms, that Noah's Ark was built in Assyria, and driven into Armenia, by the force of the Southern Winds, and of the Ocean violently rolling on from that Quarter; which Opinion is confirm'd by the most ancient Chaldean Writers: The ten Tribes of Israel were heretofore carry'd captive into this Country by Salmanassar, and dwelt partly in Assyria, and partly in Media: The different People that inhabited Assyria, were the Apolloniares, Sambata and Garamai, or Garamai, and the most remarkable Provinces, were Arbelitis, Arrapachitis, Calatine, Adiabene, and Sutacene, to which others add Chalonitis and Artacene. Calatine, or Calachena, one of the Countries but now mention'd call'd Chalach, or Halah, by Bochart; and Choras, more rightly term'd Chaboras, or Chabor (according to the same Author) a Mountain between Assyria and Media, were more especially inhabited by the Captive Israelites.

The Towns and Places of chief Note were Cresiphon, a large Village of Assyria on the Eastern side of the River Tigris, built by the Parthians, over against Seleucia, by reason of the great aversion they had to that Town: It was also the Royal Seat of the Kings of Parthia, and in process of time became a flourishing City. Ninus, call'd Nineve in the Sacred Writings, which took its Name (according to almost all profane Authors) from King Ninus its Founder, and was a most magnificent Royal City of Assyria, built on the Eastern side of the Tigris: Its Walls are said to have been an hundred Foot high, and of so great a Breadth, that three Carts might pass together in a row, on the top of them: These Walls were also fortify'd with one thousand and five hundred Towers set in order round about, every one of them being two hundred Foot high; and took up in compass, the space of four hundred and eighty Furlongs, or fifteen German Leagues; as we are inform'd by Diodorus Siculus: This famous City is now call'd Moussul by many Geographers, and Writers of Travels, but erroneously; since the latter stands on the Western Bank of Tigris, and Nineve was seated on the opposite side of that River. Among the other Capital Towns of Assyria, were Gangamela; and Arbela, near the former, on the River Caprus, from whence the adjacent Territory was call'd Arbelitis, where Alexander the Great defeated the Army of Darius Codomannus, King of Persia, with a very great Slaughter; for it is recorded in History, that the Persians lost nine hundred thousand Men in that Battel. As also Gomara, otherwise call'd Gamara and Garama, from whence the Garamai a particular People deriv'd their Name. And Marde, or Mardin, seated on the River Tigris in the Frontiers of Mesopotamia.

C H A P. IX.

TURCOMANIA and the Greater ARMENIA with the Rivers Euphrates, Tigris, &c.

I. AFTER the Description of Diarbeck, which as we have said was the ancient Assyria, it remains only to give an Account of the other Eastern Part of Turkey in Asia, commonly call'd Turcomania: It has for its Boundary on the West Natolia; on the North, Georgia; on the West, Persia, to which Kingdom its Eastern part is subject; and on the South Diarbeck. M. Tavernier complains, That this Country is very improperly called Turcomania, in the Maps, and avouches, therefore much better grounds to name it Armenia, or Ermenick; because it is almost entirely inhabited by the Armenians. M. Baudrand distinguishes the Turcomans into 32 Tribes, and says, they are dispers'd very far throughout Asia, more especially towards the River Euphrates, and the confines of Persia.

The chief Towns and Places of Turcomania are Maniscent, Majasarikin, Sumisbach, Erzerum, or Erzerom, a noted Town, with a Castle and Suburbs, situate near the Head of the River Euphrates, the Capital of Turcomania, as also of the Beglerbeglick of the same Name, which comprehends eleven Sangiacates, and the Key of the Turkish Empire, situated at the end of a spacious Plain, and surrounded with high Mountains; where the Air is somewhat sharp, but the Soil brings forth good store of Wheat and Barley, that soon come to Maturity. Nockivan, i. e. The Station of a Ship, or Ark, a considerable Town, so call'd by the Armenians, who avouch it to be the most ancient of the whole World, and the first Seat of its Founder Noah, after the Flood; where he is also suppos'd to be buried: It has been laid waste by the Turks and Persians at several times, and is at present under the Dominion of the latter; as well as Karabag; and Erivan or Irvan, a Town in a Country reputed one of the most pleasant and rich of Persia, call'd Iran by the Inhabitants, and frequently Karabag: This Town is built on a Rock, near a rapid River, that bears the Name of Sangiacates with a fine Stone-bridge, on the Confines of Turkey and Persia, and has been often subdu'd by the Turks and Persians. And Kars on the Confines of Georgia, the Capital of a Beglerbeglick of the same Name; six Sangiacates depending on its Jurisdiction; a very large Town, abounding with all Things necessary for the support of Humane Life; yet not very populous, and almost destitute of regular Streets: Infomuch that although the Grand Scignior has endeavour'd at several times, to remedy that Defect; nevertheless his Attempts have been always frustrated by the Persians.

II.
greater Armenia.

The same Country now call'd Turcomania, was Part of the ancient Armenia Major: For that was bounded on the West, by the River Euphrates, which serv'd to distinguish it from the lesser Armenia; on the North, by the Moschick Mountains, that parted it from Colechia and Iberia; as the River Cyrus, or Kor, was the Boundary between it and Albania; on the East by the Caspian Sea, and a Mountain of the same Name, that separated it from Media; and on the South, by the Mountains of Niphates and Taurus; the former of which divided the greater Armenia from Affyria, and the other parted it from Mesopotamia. The different People of the Greater Armenia, were the Mardi, or Gordai; and the particular Provinces were Gordene, otherwise call'd Gordiene and Gordiena. Tshpitiis. Corinea. Anziene. Bagravadene, or Bagravadene. Cortea. Arsea. Aspamiitis, or Aspamiitis. Acilifine. Sophene. Bassififene. Hobordene. Bocche. Cotacene. Tofarene. Totene. Colibene. Soducene. Sacapene, Sacafene, or Sapacene. And Syracena.

The most remarkable Mountains of this Country, were Mount Pariedrus, otherwise nam'd Paryadris, and Paryades, but at present Chielder, or Tchilder; from whence several Rivers take their rise, viz. Araxes, Araxus, or Aras, flowing towards the East. Phafis, now call'd Riole by the Inhabitants, and Fazzo by the Italians, towards the North. And Euphrates, or Eufrate, towards the West. The Mountains Gordyiei, which (according to Bocharius) are also call'd Cordyiei, Cordai, Gordi, Curdi and Carluchi, where Ptolemy places the Spring-head of the River Tigris. The common Opinion is, That Noah's Ark, upon the Decreate of the Waters of the universal Deluge, rested on the Mountains of Ararat, that is to say, on the Mountains of the Greater Armenia, and on the highest of the Gordyiei: Others affirm, That the Ark settled indeed in the Greater Armenia, but on one of the highest Parts of Mount Taurus, or else on the Caspian Mountains, near Media, between the Lake Arfissa, which takes its modern Name from the adjacent Town of Van, on the South; and the Towns of Artaxata, or Naxuana, water'd by the River Araxes, on the North: However it is related by M. Tavernier, That the beginning of Mount Ararat, where Noah's Ark rested, is distant five Miles from the Town of Erican, to the South-East; as also, about three Miles from Nackivan, which is said to have deriv'd its Name, from the Station of the said Ark, and has been describ'd a little above: The same Author farther adds, That Mount Ararat very much surpasses in Height, the rest of the Mountains of Armenia, which constitute a vast continued Ridge of Hills; that it is, as it were, separated from them; that in clear and fair Weather, it may be seen, at the distance of five days Journey; that it is often cover'd with Clouds, from the middle to the top, for the space of three or four Months together; and that it is call'd Mese- sonsar, i. e. The Mountain of the Ark, by the Armenians, who as soon as it appears in sight, fall down prostrate, and kiss the Earth; then lifting up their Eyes to Heaven, they make the sign of the Cross, and say a few Prayers: The Armenians also generally affirm, That the Remainers of the Ark are still to be seen, and that it hath acquir'd almost a stony Hardness; but we leave them to justify the Truth of their Assertion.

The Capital Towns of the Greater Armenia, were Tshopia, seated on the Lake Tshopires. Tigranocerta, call'd Tigranopetra, by Appian, on the River Nymphæus. As also on the Araxes, were Armania, between the Spring-head of Euphrates and the Lake Lichmites. Artaxata, Artaxia, or Araxiajata in the Frontiers of Media. And Naxuana, near the Foot of Mount Ararat.

It remains only to give an Account of the Rivers that Water the Eastern Part of Turkey in Euphrates Asia above specify'd; and they are chiefly two, being the most noble of the whole Levantine Continent, and highly celebrated in Sacred and Profane Histories; that is to say, Euphrates and Tigris, which have been often mention'd in the preceding Descriptions: They both take their rise in the same Country, and at last are united in a common Channel. The River Euphrates, which is greater than Tigris, and runs farther towards the West, call'd Perah by the Hebrews, and at present Frat by the Arabians, according to Nicollans; Eufrate, by the Italians and Eufrate, by the French, rises in the greater Armenia, or Turcomania, out of Mount Pariedrus, or Paryades; or as others will have it, out of the Moschick Mountains: Thence it flows through that Country, towards the West, as far as the Frontiers of the lesser Armenia, or Naolia; where turning its Course to the South, it separates the greater Armenia, or Turcomania, from the lesser Armenia, or Naolia, receiving the River Melas, on the right Mela side, not far from the Town of Meliene: Thence fluvius. it parts Affyria, or Diabec, from Syria and Arabia Deserta, and in like manner, receives the River Singar, from Syria; as also Chaboras and Singor, from Mesopotamia, or proper Diabec: fluvius. Afterwards, in the Country of Babylonia or Yerack, (according to the Arabian Geographer, from whom the Greek and Latin Writers do not much differ) it is divided into five Streams, one of which, after having water'd Selencia (as we are inform'd by the Ancients) runs into the Tigris, over against Bardad; but the four others lose themselves in several Lakes: One of these Streams call'd The Royal River by Ptolemy, and The Royal Trench by Polybius, is taken by several Authors for Ezekiel's Chobar, which was cut by the order of the Governor of Chobar, and deriv'd its Name from thence: At last, this noble River intermixes its Waters with those of Tigris, at the Fortrefs of Gorno, a little above Balsara, and through the common Channel, call'd Scetel-areb, or Schaat el Arab, i. e. The River of the Arabians, discharges it self below the same Town into the Persian Gulph, otherwise call'd the Bay of Balsara, Balsara, or Balsora.

The other great River of the Eastern Part of Turkey in Asia, is Tigris, so call'd from its rapid course; (the Word, in the Language of the Armenians and Medes signifying an Arrow) as also Hidsekell.

IV.

Hiddekel, by the Hebrews and Diglah, by Jesephus: It springs in the Greater Armenia out of the Mountains Gorlyei, above the Lake Arcthsa, which (as Pliny says) beats all manner of Weights, without sinking, and does not admit of any River-Fish: The Tigris not far from its Source enters this Lake, and having run through it; without mingling its Waters, is said to hide it self for a while in certain subterraneous Passages, which nevertheless are not set down in the modern Maps: Then passing through the Lake Thospites, as also some other Caverns under-ground, it flows between Mesopotamia, on the West; and Affrya, on the East, and receives from Affrya the Rivulets Lycus, Caprus and Gorgon: After Lycus, wards, it waters Mosul and Bagdad, and below Caprus the latter (as M. Tavernier tells us) it is divided and goes into two Branches, one of which runs towards Mesopotamia, and the other to ancient Coldasa: The Confluence of these Rivers make a large Island; which is also water'd with a great number of Trenches: Lastly, the Tigris, continuing its Course to the Fortrefs of Gorn, is united to Euphrates; and passing through the common Channel, empties it self likewise into the same Bay of the Persian Gulf.

Georgia, Mengrelia, Circassia and Comania.

I. AFTER having taken a View of Turkey in Asia, we proceed in due Order to that part of Asia, that lies between the Euxine, or black Sea and the Caspian; containing the Provinces of Georgia, Mengrelia, Circassia and Comania; the two first of which are situated more towards the South, and the two latter to the North. And are thus divided.

M. Tavernier and others: This Country otherwise call'd Gurgien, as also Gurgien by the Inhabitants and Atiaticks, is at present under the Dominion of the King of Persia: The Georgians are generally reputed to be robust, valiant; very expert Archers, trusty and loyal; so that upon account of these Qualities, they are highly esteem'd both by the King of Persia and the Great Mogul: They are also excessive Lovers of Wine, whereof there is great Plenty in these Parts; affable and comely, more especially the Female Sex; insomuch that the most beautiful Saltanesses in the Grand Seignior's Seraglio, as well as in that of the King of Persia, are Georgian Women. The chiefest Part of these People profess the Christian Religion, although they have very little Knowledge of its Principles, and the rest follow Mahometism: The King of Persia favours the latter, and scarce suffers any Governor of Georgia, but a Mahometan.

This Country is usually divided into two Provinces, viz. Gagueta and Carduelia; and the Shahi of Persia appoints Governors for both, out of the Noble-men of Georgia; dignifying them with the Title of Kings. The Kingdom of Gagueta, Gagueti, or Kacheti, call'd Zacheti by M. Sufon, lies in the middle between Scirvania a Province of Persia, on the East, and Carduelia, the other Part of Georgia, on the West: It is situated in the Mountainous Tracts, and water'd by the River Cyrus, or Kur; having Zagan, or Zagan, on the same River for its chief Town. Carduelia, Carduel, Cartuel, or Cartele, according to M. Tavernier, the other Kingdom of Georgia, is of a larger Extent than the former, and borders upon Gagueta, on the West, as we have but now observ'd: The Metropolis of this Province, as also of the whole Country, is Tephlis, or Teflis, a large, neat Town, seated on the River Cyrus, in a pleasant Territory, and driving a great Trade in Silks.

Where proper Georgia is now, heretofore was Iberia, encompass'd with Mountains, and lying between Albania, on the East; Atiatick Scythia, on the North; Colchis on the West, and the greater Armenia on the South: The chief Towns of this Province were; Armalicia, Armotica, or Hanaissa, and Artanissa water'd by the River Cyrus.

From hence we pass to Mengrelia the last Part of Mengrelia.

II. Georgia is either taken at large, or strictly: In the former Acceptation, it is bounded on the South by Scirvania, a Province of Persia, the Greater Armenia, and the Beglerbeglick of Trebisond, a Part of Cappadocia, or Anafia; on the West, by the Black Sea; on the North by Daghestan and Comania; and on the East, by Daghestan; comprehending also in this sense the Country of Mengrelia: Its extent was sometime larger, and it was subject to the Dominion of a Monarch, who kept his Court at Cotatis, which is now the Capital Town of the Kingdom of Inercia.

III. Georgia strictly taken, or proper Georgia borders upon the Caspian Sea, on the East; and on the West, upon the Mountains, that separate it from Mengrelia; in which sense it is taken by

of Georgia taken at large, which is bounded on the East, by proper Georgia; on the South, by the Greater Armenia and the Beglerbeglick of Trabesond; on the West, by the Black Sea; and on North, by Circassia: This Country produces so great a quantity of Iron and Steel, that it is almost capable of supplying the whole Continent of Turkey, with that sort of Mineral: In this Country it is very common for Parents, when reduc'd to want, to sell their Children, or exchange them for Things of little Value: So that the Priests themselves do not forbear following this Custom, nay they look upon it as their just Right, and therefore often expose to sale their beautiful Boys and Girls to the highest Bidders among the Turks and Persians: The Female Sex frequently perform the Sacerdotal Functions here, as well as in Georgia; being for the most part, more experienced in Sacred Rites, than the Men: The Kings of Mengrelia profess the Christian Religion, and the whole Country is at present divided into three Provinces, every one of which is dignified with the Title of a Kingdom, viz. Imeretia, Guria and Mengrelia.

Imeretia, Imereti, or Imerete, otherwise call'd Bassafouch, and Bassachionck, by M. Tavernier, is a large Province of Mengrelia, lying in the middle, between Carduelia, a Province of Georgia already mention'd, on the East, and Guria on the West. Here the River Phasis, nam'd Rione by the Inhabitants, and Fazo by the Italians, flowing with a very slow Course, and often stagnating, takes its Rise, and waters the whole Province; which is govern'd by its own Monarch, formerly a very potent one, when Guria and Mengrelia were likewise under his Dominions. The Metropolis of this Kingdom, is Coratis, a little Town seated on the Phasis, and the Foot of a Mountain, with a Castle built on a Rock.

Guria, Ghuria, or Guriel, the second Province of Mengrelia is situated between Imeretia and the Black Sea, and subject to its own King, who is oblig'd to do homage to the Grand Signior: It has no Cities of any considerable Note; although M. Sanson makes mention of Varthi, a Town on the Black Sealand; M. Robbe produces Azach, and Bassachionck.

Mengrelia, the third Province, which communicates its Name to the whole Country, common call'd Odisei by the Inhabitants, and Meghreli by the Georgians, lies next to Guria, on the North, and to the Black Sea on the West: It is fruitful and well water'd; affording Royal Demeans to a Prince, who pays Tribute to the Grand Signior, and lives under his Protection. The chief Towns of this Kingdom, are Phasis, or Fasso on the Mouth of the River of the same Name. And Sebastopolis or Savatopoli, a famous Mart on the innermost Bay of the Black Sea: This Part of Mengrelia is united by some Geographers to the Province of Avogasia, which borders upon it, on the North, and is somewhat extended on the Black Sea, towards the West; having St. Sophia for its capital Town: Others do not place Avogasia in those Parts, but the Province of Abascia, or Abassa, and others make that part, two Provinces bearing those two names.

VI. This Part of Georgia which now bears the name of Mengrelia, was the ancient Colchis, which lay between Iberia, the Greater Armenia, the Euxine Sea, and Asiatick Sarmatia: Jason sail'd hither in the first Ship Argo, together with the Argonauts, the Flower of the Grecian Youth, and having with Medea's assistance taken away the Golden Fleece, carried it into Greece: The particular People of Colchis, were the Manrali, Zala and Zani, and the chief Towns were Phasis, heretofore the utmost Boundary of Navigation; and Diocuris, afterwards call'd Sebastopolis, already mention'd in treating of Mengrelia.

It remains only to give an Account of two other Provinces of this Country of Asia, situated between the Black and Caspian Seas, that is to say, Circassia and Comania, which are parted from Mengrelia and Georgia, by Caucasus, the highest of all the great Mountains of Asia, being continually cover'd with Snow, and lying in the middle, between the Black Sea, on the West, and the Caspian, on the East: The Eastern Part of it is call'd Corax, and different Names are at present attributed to the whole Mountain by several Authors, viz. those of Cocas, Cochias, Albsor, Adazar, Salato and Elbours: M. Tavernier places Circassia, or Grassie to the North of Mengrelia and to the West of Comania; the mountainous Tracts separating it from the latter; and Northwards extending it self as far as the Rivers Tanaïs and Volga, which divide it from Moscovy: This Country (as we are inform'd by the same Tavernier) abounds with Hills, Valleys, Plains, Springs, Woods, several sorts of Flowers and Herds of Cattel, among which the Horses, Goats and Weather-Sheep, more especially deserve Commendation: But there are no Towns, or Fortresses, only certain Villages of a circular Figure, with a large space of Ground in the middle of them.

The Circassians, or Cherken, live by Robberies and Rapine, and not only lay waste the neighbouring Territories, but also those of their own Country-men; who are wont, in like manner, to make IncurSIONS into theirs: The Men and Women are cloath'd alike, without any difference of Habit, and the former do not let their Beards grow, till they have attain'd to the sixtieth year of their Age: They have no Wine, neither do they make use of Coffee, or Tobacco, but drink a kind of Liquor made of Barley, that is very strong, and full of Spirits: Lastly, the Religion of the Circassians is different both from the Christian and Mahometan; and their Noblemen, exercise an arbitrary Power over the rest of the People.

All Authors are not agreed, with respect to the Limits of Comania, or Komanie; for (according to M. Sanson) it is bounded on the West, by the Euxine, or Black Sea, the Strait of Cassa, and the Palus Maotis or the Sea of Zabacha; on the North, by the River Tanaïs and Moscovy; on the East, by the Caspian Sea, and on the South, by Mount Caucasus, or Georgia; neither it it distinguish'd from Circassia, taken at large: Others will have the lesser Tartary to be also a Part of Comania, and M. Tavernier fixes the Bounds of Comania, between Circassia, on the West; Moscovy on the North; the Caspian Sea on the East; and Proper Georgia, on the South: Its Eastern Part is a Champaign Country, abounding with a very rich Soil and well water'd: The Comanians or Komouchs, for the most part, inhabit at the Foot of the Mountains, from whence very plentiful Springs issue forth, and when there is any cause to fear the Inroads of those People whom they have robb'd, they retire to the Mountains with their Booty and Cattel: They wear the same sort of Cloaths, as the Inhabitants of the Lesser Tartary, and are furnished with Linnen and Silk, out of Persia; their Manners, being very like those of the Circassians: They live under the Protection of the King of Persia, and are as it were a Bulwark to his Kingdom on that side.

Daghestania, Daghestan, or Daghestan, is also esteem'd a Part of Comania, and borders upon Proper Georgia, Scirvania a Province of Persia and the Caspian Sea: This Country is inhabited by the Tartars, and govern'd by its own Princes, and its principal Place is Tarku, on the Coasts of the same Sea, near which appears Terki in Comania, towards the North:

About the Province now call'd Daghestan, and the adjacent Territories, Albania was situated in the middle, between the Caspian Sea, the Greater Armenia, Iberia and Asiatick Sarmatia. The most remarkable Places were two Sea-port Towns, viz. Getara and Albana.

In those Parts; where Tavernier places Circassia and Comania, was Asiatick Sarmatia, bounded on the North (according to Cluverius) by the Rivers Volga and Tanaïs, although others extend its Limits through Moscovitiick Tartary: But the same Cluverius will have that Country to be Part of Asiatick Scythia, whereof we shall speak in the next Chapter. Among the People of Sarmatia, that were very numerous, the most noted, were the Turce the Founders of the Turkish Empire, who are generally plac'd by Authors, between the Sea of Zabichia, Mount Caucasus and the Caspian Sea: As also the Amazons, a Warlike sort of Women, of great Renown, who dwelt at first near the River Tanaïs, and were wont to burn the right Breast of their Infant Children, to the end, that they might be ready to take up Arms, and to encounter their Enemies, with greater Courage; From Tanaïs, they march'd into Caspadocia and settled their Abode, on the Banks of the River Thermodon, which flow'd out of the Amazonian Mountain: During the Siege of Troy they took part with the Trojans against the Grecians; and Ephesus, a noble City of Ionia is said to have been built by them:

CHAP. XI.
TARTARY.

The first Table of Tartary:

The second Table of Tartary.

i. Tartary in general.

THE Country of Tartary call'd Great Tartary, to distinguish it from the Lesser, in Europe, has for its Boundaries, on the West, the Caspian Sea, and Moscovitick Tartary; on the North, the Scythian, or Tartarian Sea; on the East, the Sea of the Kaimachites, and the Straight of Jesso; and on the South, China, India, or the Dominions of the great Mogul and Persia: So that it is apparently the largest Region of the whole Continent of Asia, extending it self farthest, both towards the North and East: In the modern Maps, it is plac'd within the 70th and 170th Degree of Longitude, excluding Muscovitick Tartary; as also between the 40 and 72 Degree of Northern Latitude.

The

The Air of Tartary is different, according to the diversity of its Situation: The Weather, for the most part is cold, and sometimes excessive hot, accompanied with Thunder, Lightning, and most violent Storms of Wind, beating down Men and overturning Walls and Trees; it seldom rains in those Parts, but the drifts of Snow are very frequent: The Country abounds with high Mountains, spacious Deserts, great Woods and Lakes; but it produces good store of Rice, Rhubarb, Ginger, Cinnamon, Cloves, Musk, Silk and Wool; neither is it destitute of Gold and Silver-mines, Pearls and Coral: It also affords Pasture to numerous Herds of Cattel, more especially Horses; which are of a small size, but very swift, strong and fit to endure Labour: The Tartars are said to be of short Stature; in their Temper cruel, treacherous, covetous, filthy and lustful, beyond all the bounds of Right and Modesty; but they are reputed excellent Horse-men, most expert Archers; able to bear all manner of Penury, Fatigues and Inconveniencies, and altogether ignorant of the more refined Delights of Humane Life: They have no mind to be shut up in Houses, but live under Tents in the open Air, eating Milk, especially that of Mares, and Rice; and whenever they happen to wander out of the Way, they observe the Course of the Polar, or North-Star: This vast Empire is govern'd by several Kings or Princes that do Homage, or pay Tribute to the Great Cham, who exercises an absolute authority over all his Subjects: When a new Emperor takes possession of the Throne he often changes the former Names of the Country and Towns, which is no small impediment to the study of Geography,

III. The whole Continent is commonly divided into five Parts, viz. Desert Tartary, Real Tartary, Usbeck, Turchestan and Cathay; the two first of which are extended towards the North, and the rest to the South.

IV. Tartaria Deserta, Part of which is Moscovitic Tartary already describ'd, borders on the West, upon the same Moscovitic Tartary; on the East, upon Real Tartary; and on the South, upon Usbeck and the Caspian Sea. The most remarkable Places of this Country, are Rifan, or Rian, on the Coasts of the Caspian Sea and the Mouth of the River Faic; Olgaria; Nabian; Giagian; Hian; Rudhan; Daranda; Marsan; Dademi, or Dadeni; Schadrug, or Sabadrug, on the River Oby and the Lake Izejora: Daubaba, or Dambaba; Loghman; Charman; and Charcan.

V. Real Tartary, otherwise call'd Ancient and Proper Tartary, is enclos'd within the following Boundaries, viz. Desert Tartary, on the West; the Tartarian Sea, on the North; that of the Kaimachites, on the East; and the Territories of Cathay and Turchestan, on the South: This is apparently the largest of all the Parts of Tartary, and the Places of chief Note, within its Jurisdiction, are Giarda; Mongul, seated (according to some Geographers) on the Lake Coras; through which the River Tartar runs, not far from the Fortifications of the ancient Kings of Tartary; although others remove it farther towards the East: Tartar, or Tatar, near the Spring-head of the River of the same Name: Chakan, or Kaimach, on the Southern Bank of the River Ghammas: Sifan and Afar, somewhat higher on the same River: Caraniid, on the side of a very large Lake, of the same Name, in the Frontiers of Turchestan, which is call'd Kuhay by other Authors, and from whence (as some say) the River Oby takes its Rise; but there are many who hold a different Opinion.

VI. Having thus given some Account of the Northern Parts of Tartary, we proceed to the three Southern ones, beginning at the West; and here we come first to Usbeckia, Usbeck, or Tusbeck, otherwise nam'd Zagathay, Mamawalnaber and Trans-Oxiana: This Province is bounded on the North, by Desert Tartary; on the West, by the Caspian Sea; on the South, by Persia; and on the East, by the Dominions of the Great Mogul and Turchestan: This is generally reputed the principal and best cultivated Part of the whole Continent of Tartary, and the Inhabitants maintain a very considerable Traffick with those of the neighbouring Kingdom of Persia. The chief Places and Towns of Usbeck, are Achs; Kashgar, the Capital Town of a Country of the same Name; Baghara, Bachara, Bochara, or Bockera, noted for giving Birth to Avicenna the Physician and Philosopher; Maracanda, or Sumaracanda, Samarcand, the Metropolis of these Parts, situated in a most pleasant Valley, with a Cattle; heretofore the Royal Court of Tamerlan, the most renowned Emperor of the Tartars; famous for an University that he founded there, and which is still in Repute, among the Mahometans; Keib, or Calb a Town in the Neighbourhood of Sumaracand, which Bandrard supposes to be the Birth-place of Tamerlan, although many Authors make him a Native of Samarcand itself: Balch, or Belch: Badafcan; and Barighir.

VII. Turchestan, or Turchestan, borders on the West, upon Usbeck; on the North, upon Real Tartary; Turche on the East, upon Cathay; and on the South, upon the Empire of the great Mogul. The chief Towns of this Province, are Tibet otherwise call'd Tobto, or Tobai, the Capital of a Country of the same Name, plac'd by several Authors in the room of Turchestan, which they take to be altogether fictitious: Bernan on a Lake that bears the same Name: And Ug, near the Frontiers of Cathay.

VIII. The fifth and last Province of Tartary, is Cathaia, or Cathay; bounded on the West, by Turchestan; on the North by Real Tartary; on the East, by the Sea of the Kaimachites and the Strait of Jesso; and on the South, by China: Some modern Writers make this Province, the Northern Part of the Dominions of the Chinese; so that according to their Account, there are only four Parts, or Divisions of Tartary. The most considerable Places and Towns of Cathay, are Xamo, or Cannul, near the Desert of Xamo, which is extended very far through this Country, as also through Part of Turchestan: Tanju, or Tangut, the Capital Town of a Territory of the same Name: Serra; Muonchu, formerly call'd Cambalu, (as some say, although others take Cambalu for Peking, or Xuntien, the Metropolis of Cheua) the Capital Town of Cathay, and even of the whole Continent of Tartary (according to M. Robbe) seated on the River Caranora, and extending it self eight Miles in Compaiss, over against the Town of Chakan or Kaimach, on the River Ghammas, mention'd before in the Description of Real Tartary: However, M. Sanfon, in his Map of Asia does not set down Cambala, or Muonchen, among the Towns of Tartary.

IX.
Another Division of Tar-
tary.

The Arabians depart very far from the above-specify'd Division of Tartary, dividing it (according to their Method) into many Parts, of which we shall here give a short Account, although their Names are scarce known to the Europeans. These Parts are chiefly, nine, ten, or eleven in Number, according to the diversity of their Conjunction, or Separation, and they shall be recited in the same Order that was before observ'd in treating of the Parts of the former Division; that is to say, The Kingdom of Buchar; The Countries of Karacabay; Mongal; and Kaimach: The Kingdom of Kasgar; The Province of Mameralnabra: The Kingdoms of Thibet, Tangut, and Niuiche, and the Country of Jupi: Others make the Kingdom of Niuiche, with the Territories of Jupi and Niulhan Part of the Country of Kim: Again, some leave out Kim and add Niulhan to the Countries but now mention'd: The two first of these Parts, viz. the Kingdom of Buchar, in which were the Calmuhi, or Kalmouks, a particular People and the Country of Karacabay, or Chaulach, where the Chaulachites inhabited, take up that Part of Tartary which has been already describ'd under the Name of Tartaria Deserta. The Country of Mongal, Moal, or Muzog, possesses the Northern Part of Real Tartary, and is subdivided into four Parts, of which the Western is nam'd Mecrit; the Northern, Su-Moal, or Tartar; the Eastern, Mercat; and the Southern, Feka-Moal, alias Jagog and Gog. The Country of Kaimach or Naimana, the People of which are call'd Kaimachites, or Naimans, is situated in the Southern Part of Real Tartary, on the hither side, beyond and above the River Ghammas. The Kingdom of Kasgar, alias Chalzag, and the Country of Mameralnabra, are set out within the Bounds of Usbeck above specify'd. The Kingdom of Thibet, or Thobbat is put in the room of Turchestan. Lastly, the Kingdom of Tangut, otherwise call'd Tanju and Thokive; the Kingdom of Niuiche and the Country of Jupi are plac'd within the Limits of Cathay.

X.
Serica.

The whole Continent, which now bears the Name of Tartary, in ancient times was partly call'd Serica, and partly Scythia: The former, inhabited by the Seres, a renowned Nation, was situated in that Part of Tartary which is term'd Cathay, or the Kingdoms or Tangut and Niuiche.

XI.
Scythia.

The rest of Tartary was taken up by Scythia, which Mount Imaus divided into the hither and farther: The Northern Part of this Mountain is at present call'd Althai; the Southern, Bengiar; and that which borders on the Dominions of the Great Mogul, Dalanguer. The hither Scythia extending it self towards the West, was usually sty'd Scythia within Imaus, and its most noted People were the Jaxarte, Massagete and Saca: The farther Scythia lay out towards the East, and was nam'd Scythia beyond Imaus. Several Authors are of Opinion, That the Land of Gog, or Magog, was situated in the Northern Part of Real Tartary; others place it between the Empire of the Great Mogul and China; but many will have it to be that Part of Scythia, which lies about Mount Caucasus and the Caspian Sea.

The Rivers that water Tartary are discharg'd into the Caspian, or Tartarian Seas, or into that of the Kaimachites, viz. Oxus, whose modern Name is Gihon, Gehun, or Jihun: Jaxartus, five Jaxartes, now call'd Seibun, Abshah and Ardok, which runs through Usbeck as well as the former: Rudha and Jaic, which pass through Tartaria Deserta: Tartar, or Tatar, a River of Real Tartary, that empties it self into the Tartarian Sea: And Tartar. Ghammasius, or Ghammas, the principal River of Gham-Tartary, which takes its Rise in the mountainous mas. Tracts of Bengiar, and having water'd the middle of Kaimach or the Southern Part of Real Tartary from West to East, for the space of about six hundred Miles, at last rolls into the Sea of the Kaimachites.

XIII.

Thus I have given a short Account of the vast Continent of Tartary, as it is express'd in the Maps that have been hitherto publish'd; and perhaps, a larger than is requisite, in regard, that the Relations which are deliver'd concerning it, must needs be uncertain and doubtful: For this Country is not only situated at the farthest Distance from Europe, but the Passages are also very much obstructed both by Sea and Land, and it is inhabited altogether by a barbarous Nation: So that it is scarce possible for the Europeans to maintain Traffic, or correspondence with the Tartars, and consequently very difficult to get any faithful Narratives, or authentick Records relating to the Nature and Constitution of those Parts: And indeed, my Opinion was very much confirm'd, when the Honourable Paul Voet van Witsen Secretary to the States of the Province of Utrecht, (according to his singular Courtesie, and earnest Desire to promote Learning) did lately vouchsafe to bestow on me, the Copy of a large Map, wherein the Eastern Part of Europe, and the Northern of Asia, lying between Nova Zembla and the Empire of China, are most elegantly and accurately describ'd: This Map was compos'd by M. Nicholas Witsen, (who was sometime Burghermaster of Amsterdam, and at several times perform'd the Office of an Ambassadour from the States of Holland.) out of most faithful Relations that he had collected with admirable Diligence during the space of above twenty Years, and having digested them into Order, caus'd them to be engrav'd for his own Use about five Years agoe. For all the Maps of Tartary that have been hitherto publish'd, do not agree with it, almost in any one Particular, and scarce retain any Thing, but the meer Names of Places.

CHAP. XII.

The Empire of CHINA, and the Land of Jesso.

i. BEFORE we proceed to the Description of the Land of Jesso, it will not be improper to premise somewhat concerning the Land of Jesso and some others that lye near it. The Land of Jesso, Jese, Ejo, or Yesso, is situated over against the Eastern Part of Tartary, and separated from it, by a considerable Strait of the same Name: The Sea-coasts of this Country were discover'd on the West, East, and more especially on the South, by the Hollanders and Portugueses; but it does not sufficiently appear, Whether it be an Island, or a Continent; Some Authors are inclin'd to believe, That it extends it self almost to America; and that it is only divided from that Continent by the Strait of Anian: But this Opinion is not follow'd in the Dutch Maps;

since a vast space is left therein; between the Land of Jesso and America: Others suppose this Land to be join'd by a small Isthmus, to Japan, on the North; or else to be parted from that Island; by the Strait of Sangaw, or Zungaw, about ten Miles wide: But it is otherwise express'd in the Dutch Maps, according to which, a Strait of almost two Degrees lies between the Northern Part of Japan, and the Southern of the Land of Jesso: However, M. Tavernier assures us, That it is subject to the Jurisdiction of the Japoneses, who are supply'd from thence with Furs of a great Value: And inhabited by a Rude and Savage People who are clothed with Skins of Wild-Beats, and can give no account of the Country.

States-Island and the Company's Land.

Not far from the Land of Jesso, on the East, appears Staten Eylant, or the Staten-Island, and a little beyond that, more Eastward, the Company's Land; the Straight de Uries, lying between both: These Coasts were discover'd by the Hollanders, but it is not as yet known how far the latter reaches towards the East.

II.
China.

Having pass'd through Tartary we enter China, the most Eastern Region of Asia: A Country that was little known to us Europeans before the last Age; for Tartary on the one side, India and the Mogul's Empire on the other, so shut it up, that till Trade invited the Portugueses and others to navigate the Eastern Ocean, and returning gave account of a most Flourishing and Polite Nation, we knew little of it. But the first Travellers thither were either very unskillful in making Observations, or else so affected to tell strange Stories, that their Relations were more like Romances than real Histories: So that till the Zeal of the Romish Church stirr'd up its Missionaries to Preach the Christian Faith there; we were still ignorant of the true State of that Empire.

Among the great Number of Jesuits and other Priests that since the Year 1580 have travell'd thither, some have publish'd their Observations; whereof Father Martini's Atlas Sincensis, is the most compleat, and Father Magaillans's and le Comptes the Latest. These therefore we have chosen to follow in the following Description: And from Magaillans especially (who corrects Martini in some particulars) we shall give a summary Account of the State of China, and the Genius and Manners of the People: Father Magaillans was resident in China no less than 37 years, viz. from 1640 to 1677; and being a Man of Judgment and Curiosity, inform'd himself of all particulars worthy notice; which he put in writing, and undoubtedly intended to publish if it had pleas'd God to permit his Return; but though he died there, his Papers were brought to Rome by Father Complet, and by command of Cardinal D'Esrees, Translated from Portuguese into French, by a very ingenious Gentleman, who has added many pertinent Annotations, and render'd the whole a very accurate and judicious Account of that Country. As for le Comptes's Observations, they serve to corroborate the former Relations, and inform us of many minute Matters not mention'd by others.

Name.

CHINA has at several times born several Names, for when a Prince of a New Family ascends the Throne, he alters the Name of the Country; and there having been 22 Families of these Princes, 'tis probable so often it has chang'd its Name: Those Names were all Characteristick, being the word Kingdom with some pompous adjunct; as for Example, under the late Family 'twas call'd Tai nim que, i. e. a Kingdom of Great Brightness; and under this Family Tai cim que, a Kingdom of Purity; or otherwise Xam que, High and Sovereign Kingdom; and again Chum que, Kingdom of the Centre; for they believe it seated in the middle of the Earth. The Indians call it Chin from a Family that once Govern'd; from whom the Portuguese receiv'd that Name, and adding an a convey'd it to the rest of Europe.

This Empire is seated in the Eastern Part of Siberia Asia, having Tartary on the North and N. West; on the West the Mogul's Empire and India extra Gangem on the West: Tunquin and the Indian Sea which flows between the Chinese Coast and the Philippine Islands on the South: And the Chinese Sea that runs between it and Japan on the East: It is a very large Country extending from the 21 Deg. of Northern Latitude to the 41 Degree: But if the Island Haynaa which lies on the South of the Province of Quantum be included, 3 Degrees more must be added, and so according to Magaillans it must be reckon'd from the 18th. to the 41. Deg. and as he tells us from the Chinese Books the length is 5750 Chinese Furlongs, which makes 1280 Miles. Le Comptes reckons it but 450 French Leagues, excluding Haynaa: But agrees with the Maps in the Situation of Quamchen and Pekin, from which he takes his calculation, and so the difference is not much: But in its Breadth he is mistaken, for he supposes the Kingdom to be of a circular Form, and so gives it near the same extent that way; whereas it is rather oval, and according to Magaillans but 1020 Miles Broad, from Nimpo in the East to the utmost Frontier of Sachsen in the West.

The old Maps were guilty of a gross mistake in the Situation of China; for Father le Comptes assures us, that by exact Observation 'tis found to be 500 Leagues nearer to Europe than they plac'd it: Another Correction he gives which is considerable, viz. that the Province of Leotum is without the Wall, and not included, as the former Maps us'd to make it.

The Climate of China by reason of its extent must needs be different in several Parts, but in general it is Temperate; for though the Southern Part lye under the Tropick, yet the cold Winds that blow over the large Continent of Tartary render the Winters very cold; and le Comptes tells us in the Account of his Journey from Nimpo to Pekin, that the Frost was very severe in January and February, so as to oblige him to lie by till the Ice could be broken for his Passage: And Martini says, the Winters are severely cold for three or four Months.

The SOIL produces plenty of Rice, Wheat, Oats, and other Grain, Pasture, Cotton, Wax of a peculiar sort proceeding from a Tree, whereof Father Magaillans gives a particular account, p. 140. and Tallow of the same kind, which le Comptes describes p. 99. and says the kernel of a Fruit has all the properties of Tallow: Here are also Mines of Gold and Silver, but never wrought: Plenty of Cattle, Fish, Fowl, Fruit; of most of the kinds seen in Europe, besides many others not found here: For Game they have Bears, Wild-Boars, Deer, and many others, whose Furr is a good Commodity: They have Silk also in vast quantity, so as to afford a great exportation, besides Cloathing of all kinds, to the Natives: And the Earth whereof Porcelane or China-Ware is made, affords them a notable Manufacture.

The Land is so admirably cultivated that not only the Valleys are made as Level as a Bowling-Green, but even the Mountains are cut into large Steps, and artificial Plains cut out of the sides of Hills, which are like Terrasses one above another, and made as Fertile as the Vallies: In other ther Parts as Xenfi, Honai, Quantium and Fokien; where the Mould is not so deep, the Mountains bear large Forests of tall Strait Trees, which by means of the Rivers they convey in vast Floats all over the Empire: Some of their Mountains appear in odd shapes, as one represents they say their Idol Foe, another a Dragon, another a Cock, &c. and to some of these Mountains they make Religious Pilgrimages.

The RIVERS and artificial Canals of China are very many, and very commodious, both for watering the Land and carriage of Goods: the most considerable whereof are the Kiam or the Blew-River, and the Hoambo or Yellow-River; the Kiam rises in the Province of Tunnan near the Frontiers of the Mogul, and runs quite cross the Empire from West to East, passing through Sachsen, Huquam and Nankim, and falls into the Sea 30 Leagues below Kiammin, and over against the Island Cummin, having made a Course of above 1000 Miles: This River is very deep, even so as not to be fathom'd, and very broad; but its passage somewhat dangerous, and its Course very Rapid. The Hoambo or Yellow River hath its Rise in the Mountains on the West side of the Province of Sachsen, runs along the Frontiers of Tartary Northward, flows along by the great Wall, and then enters China, and runs Southward between the Provinces of Xenfi and Xanfi; then turns Eastward, and passes through Honai, part of Xantum, and through Nankim; and after a Course of 600 Leagues falls into the Sea about 30 Leagues North from the Mouth of Kiam: The Grand Canal may deserve the Name of a considerable River, for le Compte tells us it runs quite the length of the Empire, from Pekin to Canton: And Magailant says 'tis 3500 Chinese Furlongs (which answers to 840 Miles of 60 to a Degree) in length, and furnished with 72 Locks or Sluces to retain the Water: This was a Work of vast Expence, Art and Labour, and perform'd by one of the Emperors about 400 Years ago. A multitude of other Rivers and Canals are found here, with Causeys and Bridges suited to the utmost convenience and facility of Travelling. Also a number of Lakes and Hot Fountains, whose Waters have many peculiar Virtues, set down by le Compte, but too long for us to repeat.

The INHABITANTS are wonderfully Ingenious and Industrious, as appears by the curious wrought Silks, Cabinets, Porcelain, and other Manufactures, daily brought to Europe; by the admirable cultivation of their Land; and by the many publick Works of vast Labour; as the Grand Canal above mentioned, the Great Wall (whereof more hereafter) the stately Bridges, vast Sluces in the Canal, the convenient Causeys on its Banks, the many publick Inns, &c. And although they had no Converse with Europe or other parts of the World, yet they have for many Ages had the use of the Mariner's Compass, Gunpowder and Printing; are Masters of all Sciences (though not to the Perfection that we are) and profess the most exact Morality; which was taught by the Philosopher Confucius above 300 Years before Christ, and his Precepts are still in the highest Esteem: But on the other hand it must be said, that they are exceeding Proud, esteeming themselves the peculiar People of the World for Wisdom and Vertue; they are withal (notwithstanding their Professions of Morality) very much addicted to Cheating; and exceeding Corrupt.

The LANGUAGE of China is peculiar to that Nation, as being different from all others in every respect: The Radical Words are but 333 in number, every one of which is diversified in its Signification five several Ways by Accent, and as these are all Monosyllables, they are not only variously joined and made Compounds innumerable, but by the Pronunciation also varied so largely, that this is reputed the most copious Language in the World: In their Writing they begin at the top of the Paper and go to the bottom in Columns, and make not use of an Alphabet of 24 Letters as we do, but use a vast number of Hieroglyphical Characters, even 54429, says Magailant, which makes the writing their Language extream difficult to learn; and the nicety of Pronunciation makes it as difficult to Strangers to speak, for with a wrong Accent a Word signifies directly contrary to what you intend: But though Reading and Writing be difficult, it is universally learnt, and the meanest People among them teach it to their Children.

The RELIGION of China is Gross Idolatry; their God Fobe, and a multitude of other Idols, are daily Sacrificed and Prayed to, and abundance of foolish Legends are part of their Religion: Christianity begins of late to have some Footing, but the Jesuits have been too complaisant to the Chinese that it is made too much like their own Religion.

The GOVERNMENT is the most regular in the World; for though the Emperor be absolute; Tribunals and Magistrates are established in most exact and regular manner for performance of all the Offices of Government. At Pekin the King with his Grand Council of State, compose the Supream Tribunal of the Empire: Under that are six other Superior Tribunals for Civil, and five for Military Affairs held in the same City: The particular Businets of each Tribunal is thus; The first have the Care of furnishing the Empire with Persons of Merit and Capacity fit for Government, to which purpose they examine those that are to be made Mandarins, inform the King of the Vertues and Defects of every one before he be prefer'd to any Post in the Government; take Cognizance of the Conduct and Behaviour of the Mandarins that are employ'd; enquire into the Merits of the Petty-Kings, Dukes, Princes of the Blood and other Great Lords: This Tribunal also Seals all judicial Acts. The second Superior Tribunal has the Care of the Finance, supervising the Treasure, Receipts, Expences, Revenues and Tributes of the King, and pay the Annual Pensions to the Petty-Kings, &c. This Tribunal also keeps the Roll which is made every Year, of all the Families, Men, Measure of Land, and Duties payable to the King. The third Superior Tribunal has the oversight of Rites and Ceremonies, Arts and Sciences. The fourth has the ordering of War and Military Affairs, give out Commissions in the Army and Fleet, order the Levys, replenish the Magazines, and keep the Gardions in repair. The fifth Superior Tribunal is the Court for trying all Criminal Causes brought hither by Appeals from subordinate Courts. And the sixth has the Care of the publick Works, such as building and repairing the Kings Palaces, the Temples, Sepulchres, the Palaces of the Inferior Tribunals all over the Empire, the Towers, Bridges, Sluces, Dams, High-ways, &c. Every one of these Tribunals is compos'd of a large Number of Mandarins, and divided into several Chambers or Committees for the better dispatch of Business. The five Military Tribunals govern the Army: The first the Rere-Guard, the second the Left Wing, the third the Right Wing, the fourth the main Battle, and the fifth the Vanguard.

Subordinate to these Tribunals, there are Vice-roys in Provinces, Governors and Judges in Cities, and smaller Officers in Towns; for dispensing Justice to the People, and maintaining the publick Peace: And so very well contriv'd is the Government of China, that if the Mandarins and Courtiers were not the most Covetous in the World, whereby Offices and Justice are constantly bought and sold; the People of this Country would be the happiest on the Earth.

The Emperor appears in the greatest magnificence that can be imagined, his Palace at Pekim is six Miles in circumference; 'tis true it comprehends the Courts for the Tribunals, but the Royal Apartment alone, is not less than a Mile and half long, and three quarters of a Mile broad; wherein are many noble Halls and Chambers magnificently adorn'd; and Gardens, Canals, Parks, &c. And at the times that the King makes his appearance, which is four times a Month, he is attended by four or five thousand Petty-Kings, Noblemen and Mandarins to make their Court: And when he goes abroad, his Attendants are so numerous that they would compose a good Army; Magallans sets down the Order of the Emperor's Procession when he goes out of the Palace to offer Sacrifice, or perform any publick Duty, wherein the Attendants amount to at least 8000 Men, 4 Elephants and several Hundreds of Horse; when he goes abroad, which is usually to the Province of Leautum or Tartary, a Hunting, a vast Army always attends him.

The HISTORY of China is very Ancient, the Fabulous Legends make it many thousand Years before the Creation; but those Histories that may be credited, begin within two or three hundred Years after the Flood, and shew a Succession of Monarchs to this time; but the Family of the Kings have been often chang'd, viz. 22 times; and when a Prince of a New Family ascends the Throne (which has happen'd either through Conquest, Misgovernment, or the like) he cuts off all the Nobility and Creatures of his Predecessor, by which means there is no very ancient Family in China, except that of Confucius, whose Merits have made his Posterity be Reverenc'd for above 2000 Years. In our Age has happen'd such a Change, for in the Year 1645, the Eastern Tartars by the help of some rebellious Chinese, invaded China with such expeditious Success that they surpriz'd the Emperor Zunchin in his very Palace; who, poor Prince, being deserted by all, retired into his Garden, and made away with himself and Children, which gave way to Xunchi the Tartar to mount the Throne: This must necessarily have caus'd some alteration in the Government; but the methods of it were so regular and well established, that the Tartar permitted it to remain, and made so little change, that except that Pekim is possess'd by Tartars, and that Nation guards the Fortresses, China is just as it was under the former Princes.

For the better shewing the Strength and Populoufness of this Kingdom, we will set down the number of Cities, Fortresses, &c. as we find them in Father Magallans's History of China, which he took out of a Book compos'd by a Learned Mandarin for the use of the Government. But first of the Great Wall, which is indeed a most stupendous Work. It is many Yards thick, and exceeding high; built of Brick cemented by so good Mortar, that though it be 1800 Years old it is not at all decayed: It was built by the Emperor Chibohami against the Incurfions of the Tartars; and begins at Canchen in Xensi in the West, and is carryed on over Mountains as well as Valleys, to the Cang-Sea, between the two Provinces Pekim and Leautum in the East; 405 Portuguese Leagues in length, without accounting for Turnings, says Magallans; or 500 Leagues, allowing for the Windings, says le Compte; it is all along fortified with strong Towers at reasonable distance, to the number of 3000, and in the time of the Chinese Monarchs, a Million of Soldiers were maintained for its Guard. The number of Wall'd Towns in China are 4402, divided into the Orders of Civil and Military: The Civil are 2045, whereof of the first Rank 175, of the second Rank 270, of the third Rank 1600. The Military Cities are 2350, whereof Fortresses of the first Rank 629, of the second 560, of the third 311, of the fourth 300, of the fifth 150, of the sixth 100, and of the seventh Degree 300; these last are small Forts in the Fields near the Frontiers of Tartary, and on the Mountains, against Thieves and Robbers, in Xansi and Xensi especially, where the very Soldiers are apt to Pillage: Le Compte says there are 1000 Fortresses of the first Rank, but that the rest are not considerable; the fortified Towns (except on the Frontiers of Tartary) being stronger than others only in Situation and Garrison. Note, in this Account many Cities are included that pay no Tribute to the Emperor, but are Governed by their own Lords, or Petty-Kings, whereof here are 32 that are independent of the Court, except in Homage, &c. The number of Families in the Kingdom (excluding Soldiers, Women, Children, and all that don't pay Taxes) is reckon'd 11502872, and including the Army and others the Number of Males is 59788364. The Army consists of 922054 to guard the Frontiers, with 959167 Horfes always ready for auxiliary Forces; and 767970 Men in Garrisons, but the greater part of these have other Occupations, and though listed as Soldiers, exercise their respective Trades: Other Horfes maintain'd by the King for his Troops, or for Posts and Messengers on publick Occasions, 564900; publick Inns or Places of Entertainment for the Mandarins and others that Travel on the King's account, conveniently seated all over the Empire 1145; large Barks constantly employ'd in bringing Provisions, Silks and Necessaries from the Southern Provinces to the Court at Pekim 9999; they will not add another because this makes a greater found than ten thousand would.

There are 331 famous Bridges over the Rivers; not much inferior to that I have spoken of, says my Author, and that he tells us is built of White Marble 300 Geometrical Paces long and 8 broad, supported by 13 Arches, exceeding well wrought with 140 Marble Pillars upon it, whose interstices are fill'd with Tables of Marble and serve as a Rail; several other Ornaments to it of Marble Carvings he describes, too long here to mention; not far from this Bridge there is another of 25 Arches, of admirable Structure also: Both these are in the Province of Pekim, and the former of them which had stood 2000 Years, was broke down in the Year 1668 by an Inundation. The same Author tells us there are 272 publick Libraries; a vast number of Doctors and Men of Learning; 350000 Bonzi's or Priests; and 3036 Men and 208 Women remember'd in their Calendar as Heros or Saints.

And lastly, to give our Reader a full Idea of the Opulency of China, we will set down a short Description of its Metropolis, the City of PEKIM; a Place of that Extent and Populoufness that the French Missionaries acknowledge it much exceeds Paris: It is the most regular built that can be imagined, being an exact Square; and the Streets in exact Parallel Lines from South to North, and so cross ways; the Emperor's Court stands in the middle, and is an oblong Square of two Miles Long and above a Mile Broad: The whole City besides the Suburbs and the Chinese City, is a League Square or twelve Miles about, surrounded with very thick and high Walls, beset with Towers at small distances, and entrench'd with a very broad and deep dry Ditch: The Gates are nine in number, three on the South, and two on each of the other sides; and are very large, high and magnificent Structures, appearing like Castles: At each Gate there is a Suburb, and on the South side another large City of a Mile and half Square: This last is the Chinese Town, and the other the Tartar: For since those Monarchs have posses'd the Throne, the Chinese have been forced to quit the City to the Tartars: The Chinese City joins in a manner, on the North side to the Tartar City, and on the other sides, especially on the West, it has large Suburbs: It is surrounded with Walls and has seven Gates: The Streets here also lie in Parallel Lines quite cross the City both ways: So that upon the whole, comprehending the two Cities and many Suburbs, Pekim may be reckon'd at least 25 Miles in Compass: The Houses in both Cities are low, but well built of Brick, and cover'd with glaz'd Tiles, which glitter with the Sun: and though the furniture be ordinary, they are generally neat enough: The Streets are fill'd with Shops, and all Necessaries are every where to be bought; the only Inconvenience is, that they are not pav'd, which makes them very dirty in the Winter, and dusty in the Summer: The Crowd of People continually passing to and fro is so great that the Mandarins and Great Men have ordinarily a Servant riding before to make way: Father le Compte judges the number of Inhabitants are two Millions. This is not at all incredible if we consider that this being the Seat of the Court and Supream Tribunals which Govern this vast Empire, it must needs be continually fill'd with Officers and other Attendants on the Courts, Affairs of State, Law or other Business. But that which is more surprizing is that Nankim, Hanchen and many other Cities are very near as large and populous as this: And that, as Father le Compte expresses it, one is hardly out of a City which one would think the largest in the Kingdom, but you are immediately in another as large; so numerous and populous are the Cities of China.

But enough in general, let us proceed to the particular Description of China, which is divided into fifteen Provinces, viz. Xanfi, Honan, Xenfi, Sachsen, Junnan or Yunnan, Queicheu, Quamsi or Quamsi, Huyuang or Huyuan, Kiangsi or Kiangsi, Quantung or Quantun, Fokien, Chekiang, Nanking or Nankim, Xanwang or Xantun and Peking; to which are added Leatung and the Peninsula of Corea, which are indeed compris'd within the Dominions of China; but not reckon'd among its Provinces: These fifteen large Provinces are usually divided into the Northern and Southern; but we shall distinguish them, together with Leatung and Corea into the Inland and Maritum, of which the first nine shall be immediately describ'd, and afterwards the other eight, in their Order.

The principal Rivers of China, that run into the Gulph of Nanking Hoang, or the Saffron-colour'd River.

Kiang, or the Blew River.

Towns are Hoaking; Honan; Caisung, the Capital City; Changio; Queite; Guiboei; Juning; and Nanyang; a hundred more principal Cities stand in this Province.

The Frontiers of Honan reach on the West, Xenfi: to the Province of Xenfi, which is separated from Xanfi by the River Hoang, and contains the most Western and Southern Parts of the Wall of China; bordering on the West, upon the Tartarian Kingdom of Tibet, and abounding with Rivers, among which some are impregnated with Gold: Nevertheless it is often destitute of Rain, and much infested with Locusts; but otherwise the Country is very fruitful. The Metropolis of this Province is Sigan, a City of three Leagues Circumference, surrounded with Walls, Ditches and Bulwarks; and guarded by a large Garison whereof the greater Part are Tartars: The other noted Towns are Fungcian; Cuncheu; Linyano; and Hanchung: Pingleang: Kingyang: And Sengan: These are Capitals of particular Divisions of the Province; which contains 170 other Cities.

Among the other six Inland Provinces, situated near or about the River Kiang, the first in Order, is Suchuen, near the Spring-head of the same River; where nothing is wanting that is requisite either for the support of Human Life, or for extraordinary Delights. The Country is partly Mountainous and partly Champain, producing good store of Silk, China roots and Rhubarb: It is divided into eight Parts denominated from these Cities Paoning; Queicheu; Xunking; Chunking; Chingtu the Metropolis; Kunchoa; Mabu; and Sieuchen: 140 other Cities are in this Province. On the South of this Province appears that of Junnang or Yunnan, divided into twelve Parts, whose chief Cities are, Yunnan the Capital of the whole Province; Lingau; Chinchi; Quisag; Quansi; Juenkiam; Chinyuen; Xunnim; Munboa; Tali; Chimien; Jummim: This Province is one of the richest, being stored with the best Metals, precious Stones, Musk and Silk; and hath seventy five other Cities.

On the East of Yunnan, lies Queicheu, at a little distance Eastward from the River Kiang; a hilly Country, with verdant Valleys, abounding with Quick-Silver, and affording Pasture to numerous Herds of Cattel, more especially Horses: It is divided into eight Parts, whose chief Cities are Queiyang, the Capital of the Province; Tucho; Sintien; Chinyuen; Xecien; Sinan; Tunging and Liping: And has 70 other Cities.

On the South of Queicheu, lies Quangsi, or Quangfi. Quangsi; one of the least Provinces, and most remote from the River Kiang, containing eleven Parts denominated from these Cities, viz. Tiencheu; Chingan; Taipim; Nanning; Cinchen; Guchen; Pimlo; Lieuchen; Quelin, the Capital Town of the whole Province; Kimiyuen: And Sunim: Eighty seven other Cities of Note are in this Province; whose Southern Part borders upon Tonquin and is subject to that King.

Huayang, or Huyuan far exceeds the two last Provinces in largeness, and is situated between Quangsi, on the South, and Honan, on the North: The River Kiang runs from West to East, through this Province, which is also water'd by several other Rivulets that are here receiv'd into that Channel: So that the whole Country every where abounds with Fish, and brings forth such great quantities

V. The three first of the Inland Provinces, viz. Xanfi, Honan, and Xenfi, lie out towards the North, near the River Hoambo, Hoang, or the Yellow River; and the other six, towards the South, near, or about the River Kiang, or the Blew River.

Xanfi. The Province of Xanfi is situated near the Wall of China, in the middle, between Xenfi, on the West; and Peking, on the East; was the first inhabited by the Chinese, and is mountainous and of a small Extent: But the Air is healthful, and the Soil very rich, bringing forth abundance of the best sort of Grapes. The chief Towns of this Province are Taiung; Taiyeren, the Metropolis; Fuencheu; Pingyang; and Lugan: which five Cities are the Capitals of so many Parts this Province is divided into, besides which there are 80 other principal Cities in its Limits.

Honan. The Province of Honan lies on both sides the River Hoang, and (according to the Opinion of the Inhabitants) in the Centre of the Terrestrial Globe; abounding with Rivulets and all manner of Delights, the Air being very Temperate, and the Soil exceeding fruitful: Inasmuch that it is reputed a kind of Paradise by the Chinese, and upon that Account it was heretofore chosen at several times, for the Seat of the Imperial Court: It is divided into nine Parts, whose chief quantities of Rice, and other sorts of Grain, as might be sufficient to supply the whole Empire of China: It is divided into fifteen Parts, the Capital Cities whereof are Fuchen: Honchen: Pakim: Chanoca: Xinchen: Chumpe on the Lake Tuning: Tochen: Fuchan on the River Kiam the Metropolis of the Province: Hanyan on the same River: as is also Kimchen: Chimien: Hoanchen: Tegam: Siamyam and Chunnam: Besides which there are 85 other considerable Cities in this Province.

On the South East of Huquang lies the Province of Kiangsi, or Kiangfi, the sixth or last of the Inland Provinces, which take place, on or near the River Kiang: This Country is mountainous, towards the South, and the Inhabitants of the Valleys are very much inclin'd to Robberies and Rapine: In the Mountains, are many rich Mines of the best sort of Metals, viz. Gold, Silver, Lead, Iron and Tin. The other Parts of the Province are well cultivated, fertile and pleasant, and the Women are more especially famous for their Fruitfulness. Moreover the finest Porcelain in the whole Empire of China, is made in a Village of this Province, call'd Sincheu-fino, which is attributed to a peculiar Quality of the Waters thereabouts. The Cities which give name to its thirteen Parts are Nanchan the Capital of the whole Province, seated on the West side the Lake Peion, and near the Grand Canal: Faochen over against it on the East side the same Lake, famous for the great quantities of Porcelain made there: Nankam: And Kieskiam North of the same Lake, between it and the River Kiam: Xuichen: Lankiam: Quansim: Vuchen: Kinoucham: Fuenchen: Kiegan: Canchen: And Nangan: Fifty two principal Cities stand in this Province.

Having thus pass'd through the nine Inland-Provinces of this famous Empire, we come to View the other six, together with Leautung and Corea, all situated on the Sea-coasts: Three of these Provinces, viz. Quantung, Fokien and Chekiang, appear on the South, and their Coasts are wash'd by the Sea of China.

Quantung, or Quantum extends it self more towards the South and West, between the Kingdom of Tonquin on the West, the Province of Quansim on the North-West, and the Province of Fokien on the East, being on the Land side almost surrounded by high Mountains, which part it from Kiangsi, Huquang and Quangsi: The Situation of this Province on the Sea-coasts renders it convenient for Navigation; so that it is enrich'd by Traffick: The Air even in the midst of Winter, is very temperate and mild: The Country, which is partly Champaign and partly hilly, brings forth plentiful Crops of Corn, with several sorts of Fruits, more especially, Grapes, Pears, Nuts, Chestnuts, Pomegranates and Oranges; neither is there any want of precious Stones, Metals, Saltpeter and Silk. The Cities that give name to its ten Parts are Xaochen: Chaokim: Lienchen: Canton, or Quanchen the Metropolis, on the Mouth of the River Lancang, which makes a very good Haven, and renders the City a place of considerable Trade; Hsiechen and Caochen: Nankim: Chaokim: Luchen: and Liewchen: Seventy other eminent Cities are in this Province, and on the Southern Coast, in the Bay of Quantum lies the small Island on which stands Macao formerly a notable Portuguese Factory, before the Dutch disturb'd their Trade; they have still a Fortrefs, in it with a small Garrison; but the Place is not strong, and only considerable for being a good Road for Ships.

Fokien, is surrounded with the Provinces of Fokien, Quantung, Kiangsi and Chekiang, except on the South-East, where it opens to the Sea: This Province abounds with Mountains, Hills beset with Trees, Springs, most clear Rivulets and Rice: It is also very fit for Navigation, and the chief Towns of the eight Parts it consists of are Tingchen: Xaowu: Yenping: Cienchen: Temchen: Himbo: Kienam: Chancheu and Fochent the Capital; and 52 others. On the South-East Coast, off of the Bay of Canchen, lies the Island Quenoy, or as le Compe names it Emou, which makes a very good Haven for Shipping.

Chekiang, or Chekiam, lies next to Fokien on the Cheki-North, and enjoys a temperate Air; being chiefly eminent for its most delightful Plains, Hills, Valleys, Springs, Brooks, Woods and so many Mulberry-trees, that there is the greatest Plenty imaginable of Silk-worms, and the best sort of Silk. The Province consists of eleven Parts, whose chief Cities are Cuenchen, or Venchen: Chuchen: Kinchen: Nienchen: Kuckin: Hanchen, the Capital, a City of four Leagues Circumference, one of the richest, largest and most populous in the Empire; it stands upon a River, which 20 Leagues below falls into the Sea, and has many commodious Canals in the Streets: This Place enjoys a great Trade, and is as full of People as the best of our European Cities: Hichen: Faichen: Kinkoa: Xachim: and Nimpo, a Port Town with a very good Trade.

The Northern maritim Provinces of China offer themselves next to our View, viz. Nanking, Xantung and Peking, with Leautung and Corea; the spacious Gulph of Nanking, otherwise call'd The Gulph of Gang, lying between them. At the Mouth, and on the Western Coasts of this Gulph, appears Nanking, or Nankim, or as it is otherwise call'd by the Tartars Kiamnin, one of the principal Provinces of these Dominions; the Southern Borders of which is mountainous, but the other Parts contain a most fruitful Champaign Country, abounding with Silk, and flourishing by the means of Traffick and Navigation: It is water'd with the two chief Rivers of China, viz. those of Kiang and Hoang, and its most remarkable Towns are, Hoeichen having under its Jurisdiction the mountainous Tracts, where that kind of chalky Clay which is proper for the Porcellane, or China-ware, is digg'd in vast quantities, and transported into the neighbouring Province of Kiangsi, for the fine Dishes, Cups and other Vessels there made as already mention'd. Gouking, on the River Kiang, Chichen, or Thichen; on the same River: Nankim: Taipim: Nanking, or otherwise call'd Nankim and Kiamnin, the Metropolis of this Province, where the Emperors heretofore kept their Court; is seated in a fruitful Plain on the South Bank of the River Kiam in the Latitude of 33 D. it was in its ancient State the largest City in China, being 16 Leagues in Circumference: And though it was laid wast by the Tartars, is a most flourishing populous and wealthy City, near as large as Pekin; with with many publick Buildings, as the Temple of Gratitude, The China Tower, The Royal Observatory, &c. The Haven which is the Mouth of the River Kiam is not now frequented; but the City however enjoys a great Trade, the Shops being abundantly furnished with valuable Commodities. The other Cities that give name to its fourteen Parts are Yanchen: Luchen: Fanyan: Hoaigan: Taichen: Chenkiam: Chanchen: and Siechen: a hundred other Cities and considerable large Towns are found in this Province.

tung. The Province of Xantung, or Xantum, lies next to that of Nanking, and its Sea-coasts are wash'd on the East and North, by the Gulph of Nanking: The Air here is somewhat sharp, and the Country is sometimes infested with Locusts; Rain is also often wanting; nevertheless it affords good store of Pulse, Cattel, Fish, Silk, and all sorts of Fruit. In this Province stands 114 Cities, the chief whereof, as giving Name to its six Parts, are Twichang: Cinan, the Capital of the whole Province: Yenchen: Cinchen: Laichen: and Temchen.

Peking. Peking, Pekin, or Pecheli, the chief Province of the Empire at present, in regard of its being the Seat of the Monarch: It is the most North Part of China within the Wall, lying at the Bottom of the Gulph or Bay of Nanking, otherwise call'd the Cang-Sea: Bounded on the West with Xanfi, on the South-East with Xantung, and on the South with Honan; the Country is Champaign, but somewhat barren; by reason of the great number of Gravel-Pits, and Sandy Plains: The Air is very healthful, and excessive cold, in Winter: This Province is divided into eight Parts, whose chief Cities are Taming: Quampin: Xante: Chinting: Paoing: Hokien: Jumping: and PEKIM i. e. The Northern Royal Palace, otherwise call'd Xuntien, i. e. A Town Obedient to Heaven, the most famous Metropolis not only of this Province, but also of the whole Empire of China; the Imperial Seat being translated thither from Nanking, by the Emperor Taisungus A. D. 1404. It is seated in a Plain, near the Foot of the Mountains, in the Latitude 40 Degr. at the distance of 100 Miles to the South from the so much celebrated Wall of China, and only 70 from the Gulph of Nanking: It is encompass'd with two high and strong Walls, of so great a Breadth, that twelve Horses may run a-breast, on the top of them: These Walls are built of Brick, upon a Foundation of huge Stones, and they are said to exceed in height those of the most considerable Places in Europe; a vast Garrison is constantly maintain'd for their Defence; and the Guards as strictly kept in time of Peace as War. There are nine Gates, through which the Chinese continually pass from all Parts. All the Magistrates, Governors, learned Men, and such as are desirous to be advanced to Dignities, or Offices in the State, daily resort to Pekin in Crouds, and all manner of Rarities, Merchandises, and Treasures of the Ladies are transported thither; so that every Thing is cheap, notwithstanding the vast multitude of the Inhabitants. Several thousands of Royal Ships besides those of private Persons are continually employ'd in furnishing this Court with all sorts of Provisions necessary for the support of Human Life, or for Pleasure: And the whole Work is perform'd with a great deal of ease, by the means of certain Rivers and Channels, which the Chinese have every where made navigable; but not without vast Expences and incredible Toils: In-fomuch, that although this City stands in a barren and desert Country; yet it may well be styl'd The Cornucopia of China; which undoubtedly gave rise to an usual Proverb among them, That as nothing grows in Pekim, so neither is any thing wanting. We have already in our general Account of China, spoken of Pekin particularly; to which we refer the Reader: There are 120 more Cities of Note in this Province.

Having thus describ'd the fifteen Provinces of China, both Inland and Maritim, it is requisite to give an Account of Leaotum and Corea, which likewise depend on the same Empire. Leaotum is a very large, populous, and fruitful Province, situated on the North side of the innermost recesses of the Gulph of Nanking, beyond the Wall of China, and in the middle between the Province of Peking, on the West; and Corea, on the East; with Mountains on the North which divide it from Tartary. The chief Places and Towns are Ningyuen; and Leowang the Capital; and Kinchen, on the Sea-coasts.

The Kingdom of Corea call'd Tiocenouk by the Inhabitants, is a Peninsula, or as the new Maps shew us an Island, bounded on the West, by the Province of Leaotum and the Gulph of Nanking; on the East and South, by the Sea of China; and on the North, by Ninche, a Kingdom of Tartary: It is a very fruitful Country, where the Mountains produce Gold and Silver, the Marshes Rice, and the Sea Pearls: The Inhabitants are govern'd by their own Prince, under the Protection of the Empire, and trade only with the Chinese and Japanese. The most remarkable Towns of Corea, are Pingan; Kimki, the Metropolis of the Kingdom; Hienking; Kingzan, on the Eastern Coast; and Civenlo in the South. The Island of Fumma, call'd Sobusere by the Natives is likewise subject to the Dominion of the King of Corea, being distant twelve Leagues from thence to the South; its Capital Town is Moggan, or Moczo, the Seat of the Governor.

Lastly, it ought to be observ'd, That the Islands of Formosa, Macao and Hsyan, describ'd in the next Chapter, are likewise under the Jurisdiction of the Chinese, and that the Kingdoms of Tongyin and Cochinchina, Parts of India beyond the River Ganges, are Tributary to them; nay, it is affirm'd by some Authors, That the whole Continent of India was sometime subject to that Dominion.

The Islands of the Eastern Ocean over against China.

I. The Islands of the Indian Ocean, near China, are

WE are now come to the fifth Part of Asia, that is to say, the Islands of the Eastern and Indian Ocean, situated over against China and India, which are innumerable; so that it is only requisite to describe the chief of them. The Islands that lie over against China, are either near that Continent, or very remote from it: Among the former sort, are the Islands of Japan, and those of Formosa, Macao and Haynan, under the Protection of the Chinese; and the Philippine under the Spaniard; but the Isles of Thieves and those of Molucca are seated at a great Distance. The Names of the principal Islands with their chief Towns are seen in this Table.

The Islands of Japan lie between the 31st and 40th Degrees of Northern Latitude, about 100 Leagues East from China; are bounded on the West, by the Sea of China, separating them from China and Corea; on the North, by the Eastern Ocean, and the Strait of Sangar, by which they are cut off from the Land of Jesso; and on the East and South, in like manner, by the Levantine Ocean: They are beset every where with with Mountains; nevertheless produce all Things that are necessary for the support of Human Life, and more particularly the whitest sort of Rice: There is also good store of Gold, Silver, and other kinds of Metals, besides precious Stones, Pearls of the largest Size, and Coral. The Towns of these Islands are destitute of Walls, and the Buildings are generally made of Timber; so that great Fires frequently happen among them. The Japonese are reckon'd ingenious in Handicraft, just in Dealing, temperate, valiant and trusty, but at the same time addicted to Diffimulation and Cruelty, and are apt to lay violent Hands upon themselves; they are gross Idolaters, worshipping especially the Sun: In Writing they make use of the Chinese Characters, and are thought to be originally transplanted from that Nation: These Islands are subject to one Emperor, whose Power is most absolute, and among all the Nations of Christendom, the Hollanders only have liberty to trade in his Dominions; the Portugese that resided there having been utterly destroy'd by the Inhabitants, about fourscore Years ago, when they attempted to introduce Christianity: But the Dutch by despising the Pictures and Images of the Virgin Mary, and other Fopperies of the Portugese; and as some say, delivering up their very Bibles to the Flames, persuaded the Inhabitants, they were not Christians; and prevail'd upon them to permit them to Traffick there.

III. Amongst the Islands of Japan, which are very numerous, three are more especially remarkable for their largeness, viz. Nippon, Xicoco and Ximo. Nippon, otherwise call'd Proper Japan; is by much the largest, being four times as big as Xicoco and Ximo taken together, and extends it self above two hundred Miles from South-West to North-East; its greatest Breadth contains above seventy Miles, its least Breadth about thirty, and its Compass takes up almost six hundred: The Coasts are full of Bays and Harbours all round. And in the Island is to be seen a Volcano like Mount Atna, and three Rivulets of Sulphur. The Island of Japan is at present divided into five Parts, which in passing from West to East, appear in the following Order, and bear these Names, (according to M. Tavernier) viz. Famafsit or Famastero, Fetsen or Fetsengo, Fetsegen, Quano and Ochio: These Parts are again subdivided into 54 or 55 distinct Kingdoms, or Provinces. The Metropolis of Nippon is Jedo, a very populous City, three Miles long, and two broad, having been for some Years, the Royal Seat of the Emperor of Japan. It is more especially famous for the most stately imperial Palace cover'd on all sides with Gold, and for the magnificent Apartments of the Nobility; but the Timber-Houses of the Citizens are not at all considerable: This City was burnt down in the Year 1657. The other Towns of Note besides Jedo, are Surunga affording a Place of Residence to the Emperor's Son, from the fiftenth Year of his Age, till he takes Possession of the Throne. Meaco, formerly the Capital of Nippon, and of the whole Empire, but at present the Seat of the High-Priest of the Japonese call'd Dayo, or Datry, to whom the People, and even the Emperor himself, shew an extreme Veneration: It is a very large and well frequented Mart-Town, adorn'd with a fine Imperial Palace, a most strong Castle and a most beautiful Imperial Garden; this City is so large that 'tis reported to contain 90000 Houses, but 'tis not to be suppos'd they are like ours, being here and all over the Indies low Hutts of one Story only. Saccai, on the South Coast, a stately City with a strong Castle. Ojacca, the Imperial City not far from it. Sajoja, extoll'd in the Dutch Embassy, as a most delightful Place. Piongo: Amanguchi: Omvari: And Quano are other Cities of Note in this Island.

The second Island of Japan of good Note, but the least in Extent is Xicoco, otherwise call'd Xicok, Tonsa and Tokoely, situated to the South of the Western Part of Nippon, and to the East of Ximo, at no great Distance from both; its Length taking up 45 Miles, its Breadth 15, and its Compass 120: It comprehends four Kingdoms, or Provinces, and its chief Towns are Samichi or Samugui; Ava or Ana; Tusa or Tonsa; and Ico or Hyo.

The third principal Island of Japan, but the Ximo second in Largeness, is Ximo, call'd also Bungo, Ise. Saykok and Cikoko; lying out farther towards the West and South for the space of 60 Miles in Length, almost thirty in Breadth, and 160 in Compass. Nine Kingdoms are attributed to this Island, and its most remarkable Towns are Bungo, Bugen, Nangasaki built by the Portugese, but now possess'd by the Dutch, and is their chief Factory for the Japan Trade. Congoxuma the place where the Portugese first Landed.

After the Islands of Japan, follow those of IV. Formosa, Macao and Hainan, which lie nearer China, and are subject to that Empire. The Island of Formosa is divided by the Tropick of Cancer, and situated over against the Province of China nam'd Fokien; part of which it sometime constituted, at the distance of about 34 Leagues from the Continent: It is suppos'd in its largest Extent to take up 260 Miles in Length from North to South, but in Breadth not proportionate: The Air of this Island is healthful, and the Country is partly hilly and partly Champain, abounding with all sorts of Necessaries for Life, choice Fruits, Rice, Venison and Fish; as also Sugar, Cinamon, Ginger and Coco-Nuts. And from its delightful State, the Name of Formosa, or Beautiful, was impos'd on it by the Spaniards, who were the first of the Europeans that discover'd it: The Spaniards were expell'd by the English, who gave Place to the Hollanders, and these last were dispossest, not without a great Slaughter, by Koxenga a Chinese Pirate: It is now inhabited by a great number of Chinese, and its most considerable Places are, Kilang, or Kelang, a Fort erected by the Spaniards, on a Hill near the Northern Coasts: And Tayovan a well fortified Town, built by the English, on the Western Coasts, over against a little Island, lying very near it, of the same Name, in which the Hollanders founded the Castle of Zeland.

Macao is a small Island in the Bay of Quar-Macao Yung, a Province of China, at a little distance from Ise. it; in which is a Town bearing the same Name, heretofore the most famous and wealthy Mart of the Portugese, and granted to them by the Chinese; but its Reputation is now a great deal less: The Emperor of China (as we are inform'd by M. Baudran) took this Town by Storm, A. D. 1668, and still retains it in his Possession: It is observable. That the Sunday with the Portugueses of this Town is the Saturday with the Spaniards living in the Philippine Islands, and the Sunday of the latter, is the Monday of the former, and so forward throughout all the Days of the Week; although there is scarce any difference in the Longitude of those Places: But these Portuguese coming from Europe, and passing on Eastward; and the other passing from America Westward; between them both they had encompass'd the Globe, in doing which, as we have said in our Introduction; a Day will be lost in Computation.

Haynan Haynan, otherwise call'd Aynan and Ainan, is a large Island, lying in like manner over against Quantonig, and farther towards the South-West than Macao: Its Capital Towns are, Kimchen, Chen, Cangan and Tai.

V. The Philippine Islands took their Name from Philip II. King of Spain, under whose Reign they were taken Possession of by the Spaniards A. D. 1541, and 1546; although they were discover'd before in 1520, by the famous Ferdinand Magailans, who was kill'd in one of them nam'd Cebu: They are otherwise call'd, The Manilla's and the Islands of Lucon, from the largest and principal Island; being seated in the Archipelago of St. Lazarus, in the middle between China on the North, and the Molucca Isles on the South, between the fifth and nineteenth Degrees of Northern Latitude: The heat of the Air is here moderated by the length of the Nights, and the frequent Breezes of Wind: The Soil is very rich, producing good store of Corn, Rice, excellent Grapes, Saffron, Sugar, Honey, Wax, Ginger, Pepper, Cinnamon, and other sorts of Spice, besides Gold, Iron and Steel; and affording Pasture to numerous Herds of wild Beasts and tame Cattel: The Sea likewise yields abundance of Fish and Pearls: The Inhabitants drive a great Trade with those of China and New Spain, and were all formerly subject to the Spaniards, from whom Paragoia, Mindanao, and other adjacent lesser Isles revolted a few Years ago: However they still retain under their Dominion, Luconia, Tandaya, Cebu, Mindora, and many others of lesser Note, to the number of about forty.

VI. The Philippine Islands are almost innumerable, and of so vast a number, that 1000 may be reckon'd up of some Note; But it is sufficient only to give a particular Description of such as are chiefly remarkable: Among these, the first that presents it self to our View, is Lusonia, or Luconia, call'd Lucon, or Manille by the French; the largest, most Northern, and principal Island of the Philippines; the noted Towns of which are, La Nueva Segovia or Cagayan, in the Northern Tract: Lusonia or Lucon, generally plac'd in the Maps on the Western Shore; which some Geographers take to be the same with Manilha, and others suspend their Judgments as to that matter, because no mention is made of it, in the modern Relations of Voyages: Manilla, Manilla or Manilha, the Metropolis of Manilla, or Lusonia, and of all the other Philippine Islands, that are subject to the Dominion of the Spaniards, seated in the middle of the Island, on the innermost recess of the Bay of the same Name, or La Babia de cavita, and on the Mouth of the River Arund; a considerable Mart Town built by the Spaniards, affording a Seat to the Governor and Council of State, as also to the Arch-bishop; and fence'd with a Cattle, and a commodious Haven at Cavite, two Leagues distant from the City: The Bay on which Manilha stands is 40 Leagues in Compass, has a convenience for building Gallions, and is of difficult Entrance; all which has made this City a famous Mart and Magazine for the richest Commodities, but it is at present somewhat declin'd. And Caceres, or Ciceres de Camarinha situated more towards the South-West, than any of the Towns but now mention'd.

The lesser Philippine Islands are, Banton; Masbat or Masbate; Philippina, discover'd first of all the rest by the Spaniards, and otherwise call'd Tandaya, being separated from the Southern Coasts of Manilha, by the Strait of the same Name, and reputed one of the most fruitful Islands of these Parts; in which are, the Town of Achan, or Acham, and Il Cabo del Spirito Santo, i. e. The Promontory of the Holy Ghost, on the Northern Shore: The Island St. Juan or of St. John, between which and Tandaya, is The Passage of St. Clara: Abuyo: St. Matan: Cebu, otherwise call'd Sebu and Los Pintados, where that noble Portuguese and most famous Navigator Ferdinand Magellan dy'd a violent Death, after having discover'd and pass'd through the Straights in the Southern Sea, which bear his Name; and where the Town of Nombre de Jesus, i. e. The Name of Jesus, or Cebu, is situated on the Eastern Coast, with a fine Harbour. The Isle of Negros, Negoas, or Negoa; Parayotto; Mindora, on the South of Manilha, from which it is separated by a Strait of the same Name, Il Sirecho de Mindora, 30 Italian Miles broad; with a Town likewise nam'd Mindora, on the Northern Coast, over against Manilha, having the Advantage of a spacious Harbour. Capul: Paragoia, otherwise call'd Paragon, Paraloam, and Calamianes, the most Western of the Philippine Islands, extending it self in the middle between Capul and Borneo, for a considerable Length, but its Breadth is a great deal less; It is somewhat barren, and not well supply'd with Inhabitants. Mindanao, the most Southern of these Islands, the Towns of which are, Canolanao, Caldero, Dapuyo, Lomatan and Mindanao, or Tabouc (according to some Authors) the Capital; a large and well fortify'd Place. Among these Philippine Islands, the first and the two last exceed the rest in largeness, and encompass the rest of that great number of smaller Islands.

Having thus taken a View of the Islands of the Indian Ocean near China, we proceed to The Isles of Thieves, and the Molucca's, situated at a great Distance from that Continent. The former are call'd by the Spaniards Las Islas de los Ladrones, i. e. The Isles of Robbers, from the disposition of the Inhabitants; as also frequently Las Islas de las Velas, which Name was impos'd on it by Magellan, and was taken from the Vails that were in use among them; sometimes Las Islas de la Sapan; and of late Las Islas de Maria Anna, in honour of Mary Ann of Austria Queen of Spain. These Islands lying in the Archipelago of St. Lazarus, where the Indian Sea is intermix'd with the Pacifick, extend themselves from North to South, between the 7th and 22d Degrees of Northern Northward Latitude, and about 20 Degr. Westward from the Philippines; as they were discover'd in the last Age by the Spaniards, as they sail'd to the Philippine Isles, who immediately began to inhabit them under the Protection of the said Queen, and united some of them to their Dominions.

The Isles of Thieves.

The largest and most considerable of these Islands, are Deserta, Malabrigo, or Mado Abrigo, La Inglesa, Mano, Cherosba, Guana, Pagan, Ariomagan and Ginga; all situated towards the North, as the following Iye on the South, viz. Cerigoa, Sapan, Guaban, Matan, Volia, or Volid, Bataba and Bacim; to which some add Pulo Vilon, Las Iilas dos Matelotes, i. e. The Mariners Islands; and Las Iilas dos Arcifes, i. e. The Islands of Rocks; which being nearer the Philippine, are distinguish'd by others from the Isles of Thieves.

VIII. The Islands of Robbers, or Thieves, we pass to those of Molucca, or Moluca, call'd Molouck by the Natives, i. e. The Head of a Matter of great Importance; which if taken at large, have their Situation in the Archipelago that bears their Name, between the Philippine Islands, on the North; those of Sunda, on the West; the vast Continent of New Holland, on the South, the Sea-coasts of which were only view'd by the Hollanders, who were ignorant how far it might extend; and New Guinea, on the East, according to M. Sanfon, between the third Degree of Northern Latitude, and the eleventh of Southern. These Islands are said to be less fruitful than the Philippine, and the Air is more intensely hot: They are very numerous, but for the most Part of a small Extent and Compass. Gilolo is one of the largest. And Amboyna has been most known to us, on account of the Cruelties the Dutch practis'd there upon the English, when they dispossest'd them of it.

IX. Among those that Iye out furthest towards the East, a very large Country first appears, commonly call'd by the Spaniards Tierra dos Papous, i. e. The Land of Negros, on the South of the Equinoctial Line, from which its most Northern Part is not far distant: M. Sanfon takes it for an Island, separated by a Straight from the Eastern Part of New Guinea; but in the Dutch Maps, the Land of Papous and New Guinea is the same Country, on which the latter Name was impos'd by James Le Maire; bordering on the South, upon Carpentaria, or Carpenter-Land, which lies between it and New Holland: The Sea-coasts of this Country were discover'd by the Hollanders, but the Inland Parts are as yet unknown.

Aru Isle. Over against the Southern Coasts of New Guinea, we meet with the Island of Aru, and further towards the West, those of Banda, of a small Compass, but abounding with Nutmegs and Mace; all under the Jurisdiction of the Hollanders. The largest and most fruitful of these Islands is Banda, which is fenc'd with several Forts built by the Hollanders, and surrounded with the lesser Islands, viz. those of Galigien, Gumanapi, Nera, Pulorin, Pulovay, &c. somewhat farther towards the West, lies the little Island of Amboyna, or Ambon, which is likewise subject to the Hollanders, and brings forth good store of Cloves, Oranges, Lemmons, and other sorts of Fruits peculiar to the Climate of India, with a Town of the same Name; and the Castle of Victory, where the English were most inhumanly treated, which Fort has lately suffer'd much damage by the Inundation of the Sea. Not far from Amboyna, is Ceram, a large and somewhat long Island, abounding with Spice, and govern'd by a King, who is an Ally to the Hollanders; in which is the Town of Cumbello. The Island of Gilolo is situated under the Equinoctial Line; the lesser Part of it extending it self from thence towards the South, and the greater towards the North: This Island is full of Bays, and destitute of Spice; but there is good store of Rice, and the Air is excessive hot; The chief Places are Cuma and Gilolo the Capital Town, seated on the Western Shore. Over against the Northern Coasts of Gilolo, towards the East, lies the Island of Morotay, or Morotay, and over against the Western, appear the real or small Molucca Isles, viz.

under the Dominion of the Hollanders, renowned for the Product of Spice, more especially Cloves, whole Woods of which have been cut down by the Dutch to prevent an over-growth. Here are to be seen the Manucodiata's, or Mamucodiata's, i. e. Gods Birds, commonly call'd Birds of Paradise, and falsely suppos'd to want Feet; in regard that the Natives take them away, with the Entrails, to keep their Wings and Feathers from stinking, with which they make themselves very fine. These Islands being five in number, are all near the Equinoctial Line, and in passing from North to South, they present themselves to our View, in the following Order, viz. Ternata, in which are the Towns of Gammalam, Ternata, ma and Malayo, the Royal Seat of the King of Ternata, to whom a considerable Part of Gilolo is likewise subject, with Movir and Machian, and whose Dominions were sometime of a much larger Extent. Tidor, noted for the Fort of Marieco. Motir, or Montir, which others call Timor, with the Motir Citadel of Nassaw. Machian, fenc'd with the Machian Castles of Tassaw and Tabillota. And Bachian, with a Town of the same Name.

X. After having view'd the Molucca Islands that are situated towards the East, we come to the more Western, the chief of which are, Ouby, Xulla: Xulla: Bilawo. Bowro. Terra-ata, or Teralta. Ombou: Timor, of a larger extent than the former. Bourto: Solor, or Solar, with the Town of Alonare. Flores, Ombou: in which are those of Lusatavia, or La Sataia (according to the French Dialect) and Bauliar: Solor: Bouton, or Baton. Solayo, or Solayer, separated from the Island of Celebes by the Strait of Macasser. Celebes often call'd Macasser, by the Europeans, the largest of the Molucca Isles, next to Celebes. Tierra dos Papous, and the most Western, lying in the middle, between the lesser Molucca's, or Gilolo and Ceram, on the East, and Borneo, on the West, in the Archipelago of Celebes; the Equinoctial Line passing through its Northern Part: The Soil is extremely fruitful, and affording great plenty of Spice, and much Rice: The Inhabitants, who are not of so tawny a Complexion as the rest of the Islanders, were heretofore Cannibals, or Man-eaters, and go naked, only covering their privy Parts: Six Kingdoms are contain'd (according to several Authors) in this Island, although others only take notice of the two principal, viz. Celebes and Macasser: The most remarkable Towns are, Macasser, the Capital, seated in the Southern Part of the Island, to which, as also to the neighbouring Strait; it gives Name, and is a famous Mart, with a fine Harbour, much frequented by the English and Hollanders: Other Towns are Bantachia;

Tello; Gion, Giom, or Ciaom; and Celebes, or Celebus, by others, taken for the Metropolis of this Island, and situated on the Western Coast just under the Line.

The Islands of the Indian Ocean over against Siam, and the Indian Coasts.

AFTER having describ'd the principal Islands of the Indian Ocean, over against China, both the nearer and those that are more remote; we proceed to give an Account of the rest of the Isles of the same Ocean, situated over against the Continent of India; and may be conveniently divided into two Ranks; in regard that they lye, either over against the Peninsula of India, beyond Ganges, or opposite to the other Peninsula, on the hither side of that River: The Names and chief Towns whereof are seen in this Table.

The Islands of the Peninsula of India, beyond Ganges, are more Eastern, and commonly call'd Sunda. The Isles of Sonda, or Sunda; deriving their Name from the Strait of Sunda, or from the Harbour of Bantam, so term'd. The most eminent of these Islands, are Borneo, Java and Sumatra, to which several others are added of lesser Note: They are situated partly under the Equinoctial Line, and partly extend themselves beyond it, either towards the North or South.

The Island of Borneo lies in the middle; between that of Celebes, on the East; Java, on the South; Sumatra and Malacca, on the West; and Paragoia, one of the Philippines, on the North; reaching from 7 and half Degree of Northern Latitude, to the fourth of Southern: Its Figure is almost round, and its Compts very wide; although the Opinions of Authors are different as to the latter: However the least Comps that is attributed to it consists of 250 Leagues, and it is generally reputed the largest of all the Islands of Asia: It produces most admirable Diamonds, Bezoar-Stones, the best Camphire of all that is found throughout the whole Continent of India, Rice, and Pepper with other sorts of Spice, Cotton, Honey and Wax; and is beset with Woods and fine Rivers; more especially, towards the West and South, the chief of which is Succadano, abounding with Diamonds: So that it may well be reckon'd, among the most fruitful Islands of the Indian Ocean; but the Air is not very healthful, by reason of the marshy Grounds. The Sea-coasts are possess'd by the Hollanders, and the Metropolis bears the same Name of Borneo, seated in the Fens and on the shore of a little Bay, towards the Northern Part of the Island; being a large, neat and famous Mart-Town and a Royal Seat, with an excellent Harbour: The other considerable Towns which stand on the Western and Southern Coasts (for the Eastern, and more especially the Inland Tracts of this Island are almost unknown to the Europeans) are Malano, Puchavaraon, Sambas, Hormata, Landa, near which are Diamonds of the highest value; Succadano, Lave, and Bendamassin, not far from the Mouth of the River Succadano.

From Borneo, we pass to Sumatra, the Situation of which is more Western, likewise under the Equinoctial Line, in the middle, between Malacca, on the East, and Java, on the South; being separated from the former, by the Strait of Malacca, and from the latter, by that of Sunda: It lies very near, within the sixth Degree, both of Northern and Southern Latitude; but its Extent from West to East is a great deal less: It yields great store of Spice, as also, the best sort of Pepper, Rice, Honey, Wax, Silk, Cotton, Oranges, Lemmons, Pomegranates and Figs; and abounds with Mountains, excellent Metals, Springs, Rivers and Woods; affording Pasture to numerous Herds of Stags, Elephants, Rhinoceros, Tigers, Leopards and Lions. In the middle of the Island is a Burning Mountain, which sometimes throws out Stones; the Air is also extremely hot and does not prove healthful to the Europeans: However, the Hollanders possess the Sea-coasts and some Mines of good Metal. Sumatra, was heretofore divided into many Kingdoms; so that some Authors reckon seven of the principal, and others only only five, viz. those of Achem, or Achin, Menacabo, Camper, Jambe and Palimban. The most remarkable Towns of this Island, are Achem, the Metropolis of a Kingdom of the same Name, and of the whole Island, a large and renowned Mart-Town with a very convenient Harbour, where the English have a Factory: It is seated on the Northern Coasts, as also are Pedir and Pacem, the Capital Towns of two Kingdoms that bear the same Name, and which (according to M. Sanson) are now under the Dominion of the King of Achem. On the Strait of Malacca appear Goro, or Gore; Aru; Bancalis; and Camper, or Camfer. On the Western Coasts, are Soufon; Baras, or Baros; Priaman; Menacabo; Judapera, or Inda-pouva; Sallebor, or Sillebar. On the Strait of Sonda, Dampin. And on the North-East Coasts, Jambe, affording great plenty of Pepper. Baros and Palimban, or Palimban.

V. After having taken a View of Borneo and Sumatra, the Islands of Sunda under the Equinoctial Line, we proceed to the rest that lye at a distance from it, towards the South. Among these are Banca, with a Town of the same Name, over against Palimban in Sumatra. Madura, on the North of the Eastern Part of Java, in which are the Towns of Arasbay and Madura. On the East of the same Java, we meet with Cumbava, otherwise call'd The lesser Java by Buno, containing the Towns of Genapi, or Ginapa; and Cumbava. Lomboc. And Baly.

The Island of Java, or the greater Java, far surpasses these in every respect, and is situated between the sixth and ninth Degrees of Southern Latitude, in the middle, between the Strait of Balambuan, on the East, and that of Sunda, on the West; so that the latter separates it from Sumatra, and the other from Baly: its Longitude between these two Straights, amounting almost to eleven Degrees. The Air of this Island is prejudicial to Strangers upon their first Arrival, and it is infested with venomous Gnats, that are very troublesome, as also with huge and most pestilent Snakes: But there are Oysters of an incredible size, even sometimes to the Weight of three hundred Pounds, Diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds of the highest value, and Mountains enrich'd with Gold, Silver and Copper: Besides an admirable variety of Springs, Rivers, Woods, Valleys, Champain Fields, and most verdant Pastures for Cattel, with all sorts of Fruits, Sugar, excellent Pepper, and Rice, which the Natives generally eat instead of Bread. Java, part of which is under the Dominion of the States of Holland, is divided by M. Sanson, into nine Kingdoms, although others only make mention of the two principal, viz. Materan and Bantam.

The chief Towns of Java, are Balambuan, Balambuan, or Palambuan, on the Eastern shore, which communicates its Name to the adjacent Strait: On the Southern Coasts, Materan, or Mataran, a large Town, which some will have to be the Capital, not only of the Kingdom of Mataran, but also of the whole Island, which was heretofore subject to its King, who is even at this Day, styl'd The Emperor of Java. On the Northern Coasts, Jortan; Sidayo; Tuban; Japara; Saraboy; Charabon; and Jacatra; where the Hollanders after having seiz'd and demolish'd it, built Batavia, on the same spot of Ground; but it is still frequently call'd Jacatra, by the Javans and Foreigners; and is a most flourishing Colony of the States of the United Provinces, founded A. D. 1619. It is a large, neat, populous and well fortify'd City, more especially famous for its admirable Cattle, nam'd Jacatra, and flank'd with several Bulwarks that take their Names from precious Stones: This renowned Mart-Town, is the Seat of the Governor of the Dutch East India Company; who keeps a most magnificent and almost Royal Court, as also of the Indian Senate: It was twice in vain besieg'd by the King of Mataran, and afterwards by the King of Bantam in 1659: and is distant 18 Leagues from Bantam to the East, and about 60 from Materan to the North-West.

The other remarkable Places of this Island, are Bantam, the Metropolis of a Kingdom of the same Name (seated on the Foot of a Hill, and on the Strait of Sunda) where the King keeps his Court; being a most noble Mart-Town with a fine Harbour call'd Sunda, to which Merchants resort from all the Parts of India, as also from England, Portugal and Holland; Sora, on the same Strait of Sunda: And Palimban, or Palimban, on the Western Coasts. Besides the above mention'd Islands, some others of a much lesser Compass are likewise reckon'd among those of Sunda, particularly, The Isle of Nassaw; Good Fortunes; Nassaw Eyland, i. e. The Isle of good Fortune; La Itha des Isles; Porcos, i. e. The Isle of Hogs; in Dutch Verkenen; The Isle Eyland, and Cocos Eylanden, i. e. The Isle of Cocos, of good situated to the North of the Equinoctial Line, with some others of less Note.

From the Islands in the Indian Ocean, over against the Peninsula of India beyond Ganges, we pass over to those that are opposite to the other Peninsula of India on the hither side of the same River; being the most Western of all. Among these, the most remarkable are Ceylon and the Mal-India dives, the former lying out towards the East from Cape Comori, the most Southern Promontory of this Peninsula, and the others towards the West.

The Island of Ceylon, so call'd by the English and Hollanders, as also Ceylon by the French, and Tenariffin, by the Indians, i. e. The Land of Delights, suppos'd to be the Taprobana of the Ancients, is separated from the Coasts of Pelipponia and Coromandel, by the Strait of Chilao, or Manar, lying between the sixth and tenth Degree of Northern Latitude: Its Extent from West to East is less, and its Figure resembles that of a Pearl or Pear, being sharp-pointed in the Northern Part. This Island abounds with Rice and the best Cinnamon, the most fragrant innell of which is perceiv'd at Sea, by those that come near the Coasts; neither is there any want of Pepper, Ginger, Cardamum, Sugar and Tobacco: The Soil likewise brings forth all sorts of Fruits, particularly, Figs, Grapes, Pomegranates, Oranges, Lemmons and Citrons; and there are good store of Birds, with numerous Herds of Cattel and wild Beasts; among which the Elephants are more especially remarkable, as being the most generous and docible of all throughout the whole Continent of Asia; insomuch that (if credit may be given to the Report) they are wont to do obedience, at first sight, to the Inhabitants of Cochin, Pegu, China, and others, by bowing down their Trunks. The Strait of Manar and the Rivers yield abundance of Pearls and precious Stones; and it is said to be the only Place, besides the Kingdom of Pegu, among the Levantine Countries, that produces colour'd Gems. Serpents of a prodigious Size, are also bred both in the Sea and on the Land.

VIII.

Almost all the maritim Tracts are in the possession of the Hollanders, and the most considerable Places and Towns, On the East, are Batticaloa or Baticalo, and Trinquemale, otherwise call'd Trinquemale and Trenkimaley: On the North, Jafanapatam or Jafanapatan: On the West Chilao, which imposes its Name on the neighbouring Straight, and stands on a River likewise of the same Name; Negombo or Colombo, the chief Town of all the Sea-coasts, and the Seat of the Supreme Governor: Lastly, on the South, Gale, Galo or Punto Gallo, a noted Town, with an excellent Harbour, near which is the Promontory, or Cape of Punio Gallo.

IX.

The Inland Parts of Ceylon are almost unknown to the Europeans, nay, even to the Hollanders themselves, who inhabit the Coasts: Neither is it any Wonder, in regard that the whole Island is every where beset with very steep, barren and dreadful Mountains, that cannot be pass'd but where the Paths are beaten, which indeed are many in number, but so narrow, that only one Person at a time can go on them; and certain Officers, appointed by publick Authority, always keep Watch on the Borders of these Passages, who suffer none to enter, or go forth, without leave: However, there is extant a large Historical Description of this Country, written by Robert Knox, an English Sea-Captain sometime in the Service of the East-India Company, who lived there a Captive for twenty one Years and a half; yet so as during the last Years, he had an Opportunity of viewing all the Provinces, and of taking a particular Account of every Thing remarkable in those Parts; till at last, he found means to make his Escape, after a wonderful manner, on the 18th. of October 1679. According to his Information, the Inland Country abounds with Hills, Springs and Rivers full of Fish; but such as are rocky and unfit for Navigation: The most eminent of these is Mavelagonga, which taking its Rise from Adam's Mountain, flows towards the North, and having water'd a very large Tract of Ceylon, discharges it self into the Ocean, near the Town of Trinquemale: There are also vast Woods, which serve both for the Boundaries and Ramparts of the several Provinces: The Valleys are for the most part fenny, and enrich'd with abundance of Springs of an admirable Clearness.

The innermost Tracts of this Island are very populous, and those that lie near the Sea-coasts are much less inhabited: In the former, to the East of the Town of Colombo, stands the highest Mountain of Ceylon, and even (as some affirm) of the whole Continent of India, call'd Hummelle, by the Inhabitants, and Pico de Adam, or Adam's Mountain, by the Portugueses and the rest of the Europeans: It is extremely steep and of a Conick Figure, having on the top, a plain smooth Stone, on which is imprinted a large Mark of an Humane Foot; The Natives believe this to be the Footstep of the first Parent, who was taken up from thence into Heaven, and upon that account they adore it, with a wonderful Superstition; and to that purpose, in the beginning of the Year, the Men, Women, Boys and Girls, notwithstanding so difficult a passage, climb up to the top of it, out of a Principle of Religion. The Air of the inner Tracts is different, so that the Northern Part, by reason of the Corruption and Scarcity of the Waters, is less healthful and fertile; but the rest are otherwise dispos'd by their natural Temperature: When the West-winds blow, it rains in the Western Part of the Island, and the Seeds are committed to the Ground; whilst at the same time, the middle Part, towards the East, enjoys most serene and hot Weather, and the Inhabitants are employ'd in looking after their Harvest: It happens contrariwise in both Quarters, when the East-winds blow in the Eastern Part: This Island was sometime divided into four Kingdoms, but the best Part of it is now under the Dominion of Conde Uda, a Prince whose Government is arbitrary, and to whom his Subjects generally give Divine Honours.

The inner Country of Ceylon is divided into the greater and lesser Parts, the former of which Captain Knox calls Provinces, and the others Counties; because they resemble the Counties, or Shires of England, but are not like them with respect to the Largeness of their Extent: He informs us, That the Province of Novre Calava is situated towards the North, and includes five Counties; as also the Province of Hotcorry, comprehending seven Counties: On the East, he places the Province of Mautaly, subdivided into three Counties: Towards the same Quarter, appear Tammangood, Bintana, Vellas, and Pannoa, all distinct Counties, with the Province of Onvab, to which he attributes three Counties: In the middle, are the Counties of Wallapona, Poncipot, Goddapona, Hervoibatay, Cotemul, Horsepot, and Tumponahoy; as also, Ondanoor and Tartanoor the chief of all the Counties of the Inland Country of Ceylon: On the West lye Ondipollat, Dolmsbang and Hotteracorry, in which four Counties are compris'd; with Portaloon and Tincorry, that comprehends three Counties, and Part of which is subject to the Jurisdiction of the Hollanders: All these Provinces and Counties, (except these six, viz. Novre Calava, Hotcorry, Tammangood, Vellas, Pannoa and Hotteracorry) lye upon fruitful and well water'd Hills, and are express'd by the common Name of Conde Uda, i. e. On the tops of the Mountains; which is also the Royal Title.

The same Author reckons up five Capital Towns, besides a great number that are ruin'd, and several Villages, within the Boundaries of the inner Ceylon, viz. Cande or Candy, the Metropolis of the whole Island, built in the Heart of it, on the River Mavelagonga; formerly the Royal Seat of the King of Cande, after whose departure it fell much to decay: Nellemby-neur, a Town situated more towards the South, to which that Prince translated the Royal Court from Cande: Allou-neur, seated a great way below Cande and divided into two Parts, by the River Mavelagonga: Badoula, seated at the farthest distance from Cande, to the East, and at a much less from Digligy-neur, a Town not very remote from the said River, which was chosen for the Royal Seat after Nellemby-neur.

Over against the Western Coasts of Ceylon, appears the little Island of Manar or Manaar, ten Miles off.

X.

XI.

Miles long, and four broad; being in the Possession of the Hollanders: It has impos'd its Name on the Strait, and is famous for the rich Pearl-fishing on its Southern Shore. The Island of Calpaitin lies more towards the South, and is of a larger Extent.

XIII. The Maldive Islands are situated on the West of the Peninsula of India within Ganges, in the Archipelago, that takes its Name from thence; almost in a straight Line, within the eighth Degree of Northern Latitude, and the third of Southern, but they do not extend themselves from East to West so much as for the space of one Degree; they are all of a small Compass, but very numerous, amounting to about 1000 or 1100, and abound with Indian Nuts call'd Coco's: Neither are the best sorts of Fruits wanting, particularly, Oranges, Lemmons, and Pomegranates, besides, the finest Tortoise-shell and black Coral. These Islands are divided into thirteen or fourteen Parts call'd Atollens, and are all subject to the Dominion of one King: Every one of them is surrounded with a Bed of Sand, and separated from the next by a narrow Strait.

The particular Names of the Maldives, beginning to reckon them from the South; are Addou and Pose Molucque, both which are commonly taken for one Part; otherwise, if they are distinguish'd, the whole Number of Parts must be fourteen in stead of thirteen: Sonadou; Adoumatis; Callomadoux; Nillandoux; Molucque; Poulidou; Male-Atollon, comprehending the Island of Male, the chief of all, and famous for the Royal Court; from which also, the general Name of Maldives, i. e. The Isles of Male deriv'd its Original: Ariatollon; Malor Madou; Padyola, Miladoue Madou; and Tillad, Matis or Matos, call'd by the Portugueses, Cabeca das Ilhas, i. e. The Head of the Islands. Of the above-specify'd Parts, the two first lye to the South of the Equator; the third under the same Line; and the other ten at a greater or lesser Distance from it, towards the North.

XIV.

C H A P. XV.

Of the EAST-INDIES in General.

I. SOME Geographers have extended the East-Indies as far as the Eastern Ocean, comprehending China and Japon under that General Name: But according to the Opinion of the best Writers, and according to the common Acceptation, by the word East-Indies, is understood only, I. The Empire of the Great Mogul. II. The Peninsula of India within the River Ganges. III. The Peninsula of India beyond the River Ganges. And IV. The Islands in the Indian Ocean. Of the Islands we have given an Account in the last Chapter: And now proceed to the Continent.

The vast Tract of Land generally known by the Name of the East-Indies, is situate between China, on the East; Persia, on the West; Tartary, on the North, and the Indian Sea on the South. The most Southern Part (being the Peninsula of Malacca) shoots out to the first Degree of North Latitude, but the Bay of Bengall which flows between the two Peninsulas of India; ascends to the height of 22 Degrees, so that only those Countries lye within the Torrid Zone. The Mogul's Empire lying almost all of it within the Tropic of Cancer, and extends Northward to the 41 Degree of Latitude. As for the Longitude there have been great Mistakes, the Dutch Maps make Surra lye in the 106 Degree, and Sanson places it in the 109: Whereas our Mariners by their Observations make it about 78 Degrees from the Lizard, that is, 87 from Teneriff, and about 90 from the Island Faro, which does not much disagree from the Observations of the best Astronomers in the World, viz. M. Hevelius, M. Halley, and M. Gallet; as we find by the Account (publish'd in the Philos. Transact. Feb. 1682) of the Meridional Distance between London and Ballafore, a place in the Bay of Bengall in the Latit. of 22, which was found to be 86 Degr. 24 min. to which adding 17 D. 10 Min.

the distance from Teneriff to London, it amounts to 103 D. 54 Min. but Ballafore stands 12 Degrees Eastward from Surra, so, that being deducted, there rests 91 Degrees or thereabouts for the Longitude of Surra from Il Pico in Teneriff. Having fix'd this we may venture to say with our Map, that India extends in Longitude from the eighty second to the 130th. Degree.

Whether the Name India was deriv'd from the River Indus, or from the Hindons who were the ancient Inhabitants, and from whom came the word Indostan, that signifies the Country of the Hindons, and is now the Indian Name of the Mogul's Empire, is not easy to determine: But it is called East to distinguish it from America, which bears the Name of the West-Indies.

The Air is exceeding hot, especially in the Southern Parts, which would be utterly uninhabitable if it were not for the set Seasons of Rain and Wind, wherewith the Countrys lying in the Torrid Zone are cool'd and refresh'd. These Regular-Winds, which are call'd Monsoons, are observ'd to blow constantly from one Corner for four or five Months every Year, namely, from the North or rather North-East (according to Dampier) from October to March; and the contrary from April to September: both which refresh the Land, one with Coolness and the other with Rain.

The Soil of these Countries is generally good, producing not only plenty of Corn, Fruits, Fish, Fowl, Pasture and Cattel, but yields also the most valuable Spices and Druggs; Silk, Indico and Cotton; Mines of Diamonds, Gold, Silver, Iron, Copper, and other Metals: The Seas yield Pearl and Coral; and the Forests are full of Lyons, Tygers, Elephants, Rhinoceros, and many other Wild-Beasts; But the Country is much infested with hideous Serpents and most noxious Vermin.

V. The chief Rivers of India in General are 1. the Rivers. Indus, which washes its Western Bounds. 2. The Ganges, which rises in the Mountains that divide Tartary and India, runs through the middle of the Country, and falls into the Bay of Bengall. 3. The Caor. 4. Casmin. and 5. Pegu, issue from the Lake Chiamay on the Frontier of Tartary and China, and fall into the Gulph of Bengall. 6. The Amenan issuing from the same Lake, falls into the Gulph of Siam. The Padder and Gemeni in Guzarat and Cambaia; the Gwenga in Golconda; the Nagundi in Bisnagar, and other smaller Rivers will be spoken of in their proper places. Suffice it at present to say that India is in general very plentifully water'd with large and commodious Rivers.

Mountains. The Mountains of India are many. A great Ridge call'd by the Ancients Caucasus, Taurus and Imaus, runs along on the West side between Persia and Indostan; as doth another Ridge, on the North between the same Country and Tartary: In the Peninsula of India within Ganges the Mountains de Gate or Ballagate continue all the length of the Country from Narsinga to Cape Comorin.

VI. Religion. The Religion of India, except where Christianity has prevail'd, is either Paganism or Mahometism; the latter having been brought hither out of Persia, and the former was the Religion of the Hidors or Aborigine Inhabitants of this Country, and taught by the ancient Brachmans: They acknowledge one Supream Eternal Omnipotent Being, Creator of all things; from whom they say proceeded three Cares, viz. Burma or Brama, the Care of making all things: Vishnum or Bisna, the Care of preserving all things: And Mahadeeb or Izora, the Care of destroying all things: Of these three Gods they tell a World of ridiculous Fables, too long for us to insert. They have other smaller Deitys and Saints to whom they pay Religious Worship, in their Pagods or Temples, whereof they had one in every Town and Village; and those in Cities or large Towns were built of Stone with great Magnificence and rich Adornments: But Mahometism has prevail'd so much as to destroy a great many of them. The Bramines or Priests pretend to be the Offspring of the Brains of their God Brama, and are exceedingly reverenc'd: They wear no Garments except a Cloath about their middles, and now and then a loose Gown over their Shoulders; they feed on Herbs, Fruit, and the like, religiously abstaining from all things that have Life, and will on no Account kill, though it be a Vermin: They have some Learning, and are generally esteem'd the wisest Men of the Nation: They use a peculiar Character and Language, which like our Latin, is the Learned Language; and must first be studied by the Pupils that come to them for Instruction. Tavernier gives us an account of many severe Penances perform'd by these Bramines, and ridiculous Ceremonies in the Gentile Religion; but the most barbarous is that of burying the Wife with her Husband, which is universally practis'd in the Indies; begun either on a Religious Account, (great Rewards of Blessing being promis'd to the Wife that does it) or on a Political Account as some imagine, to prevent the Women's poisoning their Husbans, as they say, they us'd to do; however it began, it is religiously Perform'd, and the Wife that Survives her Husband is detested by every body, even her nearest Relations.

The Christian Religion was undoubtedly plant- ed very early in India. St. Thomas is generally believ'd to have preach'd the Gospel and suffer'd Martyrdom there, in the City Meliapur, now St. Thomas, on the Coast of Cromandel. That Apostle had Converted many, and Baptiz'd the King and most of his Nobles, before the Bramines murder'd him: And Christianity flourish'd considerably, till some Pagan Princes making Incurfions, sack'd Meliapur, and forced the Christians to fly to the Mountains, whence they descended into Malabar, and in process of time had Bishops and Priests sent to them by the Patriarch of Muzal in Syria; a Succession whereof continued to the time that the Portuguese came into these Parts: But these Teachers brought with them the Heresy of Nestorius, with which the Portuguese found them much infected; but otherwise very good Christians, having the Bible or at least the New Testament among them in the Syriack Language, receiving the Sacrament, using Prayers to, and professing Faith in God and the Blessed Trinity; and observing the same Calendar, Feasts and Fasts with us: And though Christianity was in as low estate as ever it had been, when the Portuguese arrived they found fifteen or sixteen thousand Families in and about Cranganor, who sent to Vasco de Gama in the Year 1502, desiring to be receiv'd under the Protection of the King of Portugal. Emanuel that then reign'd, having receiv'd Encouragement from the Pope, sent over several Priests and Fryars, who preached the Gospel (but with the Corruptions of the Romish Church) very Zealously, and with good Success: John III. who succeeded him, spared no Cost or Pains to propagate Christianity in India, and to that purpose sent over Father Francis Xavier, who with great Pains and Piety instructed the People, and by Strictness of Life and Vertuous Disposition, so wrought upon them, that as the Portuguese brag vast Numbers were converted. The English and Dutch Nations also have contributed their Parts to the propagating Christianity in India, so that though the Inland Country be still Heathens and Mahometans, the more civiliz'd People on the Coasts are pretty well reconcil'd to our Faith.

The People of India may be reduc'd under four VII. Degrees or Classes according to their own Distinctions in conformity to their Religious Le- Inhabitants. gends, that is to say, I. The Bramines or Priests already mention'd. II. The Cutneys, or as they call themselves Rasbootes, i. e. Sons of Kings; of which Race the Rajas and Kings, as also the Men of Arms, are reckon'd. III. The Banians or Merchants. And IV. The Sods or Wyfes, which are the Mechanicks. Of these, the Merchants and Mechanicks must be allowed to be excellent in their way; but the Soldiers cannot claim any great Character: For indeed, the Nature of the Climate, doth much more encline the People to Cunning and Ingenuity, than to Courage and Heroick Vertue.

The remote Distance of India from Europe, VIII. may make it worth our Enquiry by what steps we obtain'd so intimate a Knowledge of it; for considering how vast a Tract of Land lies be- Discovery. tween tween it and the Mediterranean Sea on one side, and how large an Ocean floweth between it and us on the other side; it would be extremely wonderful that we should ever have procured the Commodities of those Countries in so plentiful a manner, if we were not acquainted with the Wit and Industry of these latter Ages wherein Men adventure to pry into every Corner of the habitable World. The first Knowledge of India seems to be owing to Alexander's Expedition; for after he had conquer'd Persia, we are told by Curtius and others, his Ambition led him into India, where many Nations submitted without bloodshed; and Porus who is thought to have possess'd the best part of what is now the Mogul's Empire, resisting him, was vanquish'd and made Captive. Some Authors are apt to believe he penetrated as far as the River Ganges, but 'tis more probable he went but a little way beyond the Indus, and returning, follow'd the Course of that River down to the Ocean; and that it was near where Diu now stands that he erected the mighty Altars in imitation of Hercules's Pillars, and left those vast Beds, Armour, Bitts, &c. to amuse future Ages. Ptolemy and the ancient Geographers speak of 5000 considerable Cities, and as many Nations in India: Whereof the Brachmans or Indian Philosophers were most celebrated, and honoured with the Title of Gymnosophists by the Greeks. But the Knowledge of India proceeding chiefly from the Trade thither, we were to be sure very little acquainted with it before the Europeans found the way by Sea: For before that time all the Traffick into India was carried on by the Persians, Arabians and Sarazens, who brought the Jewels, Spices, Silks, and other valuable commodities of these Countries, partly over Land, and partly by the Red Sea, to Alexandria and other Ports in the Mediterranean; whence the Vanicians, Genoueses and Florentines brought them to Europe: and thereby the Princes of Syria, Arabia, and Egypt, as well as the Merchants of those Countries and Italy were exceedingly enrich'd: Till by the Assistance of the Mariner's Compass, the Astrolabe, and other useful assistances to Navigation then newly invented, the Portuguese were enabled to launch out into the Atlantick Ocean, coast the whole Continent of Africa, double the Cape of Good Hope, and find the way by Sea to the East-Indies, much about the same time that the Spaniards discover'd the West-Indies or America. Of which Navigation and the Settlements of Europeans in India, we shall set down as particular an Account as the brevity of our Work will admit; imagining it may be an agreeable Entertainment to our Reader.

Of the first Voyages from EUROPE to the EAST-INDIES.

THE Discoverie of the Coasts of Africa in order to a Voyage to the East-Indies, was first attempted in the Year 1410, by Don Henry Son to John I. King of Portugal; who gave all possible Encouragement thereto: But in 53 Years time that he lived, they had got no farther than the Coasts of Guinea; and after his Death there was little Progress made in it, till the time of K. John II.

who refusing this Matter with great Zeal and Courage, first sent out Bartholomew Diaz, who doubled the Cape of Africa, to which K. John gave the Name of Good Hope: and afterwards sent Pedro Covillan by Land, who travell'd as far as Cananor, Calecut, and the neighbouring Places; whence crossing the Indian Sea, he pass'd over to the Coasts of Zanguabar in Africa, and by the information he receiv'd there concluded that the same Coast continued from the Cape of Good Hope; so returning through Ethiopia, came back safe to Lisbon, and gave the King so much Encouragement that he made all necessary preparations to set out a large Fleet for that Expedition; but dyed in the Year 1495 before it set out. Emanuel his Successor prosecuted the design, and in the Year 1497 Vasco de Gama with four Ships and 160 Men, set sail from Lisbon, and sailing along the Coast of Africa he doubled the Cape, and came to Mozambique on the East Coast of Africa, in the 15th. Degr. of South Latitude, where being kindly entertain'd he staid some time, receiving instructions for the prosecuting his Voyage, and as some relate, he found there that most useful Instrument the Mariner's Compass. but with more probability it may be said, that it was not then unknown, to the Spaniards at least, for 'twas 5 Years before this that Columbus set out on his discovery of America, wherein we may reasonably conclude he had the use of the Compass; and if the Spaniards had it, undoubtedly the Portuguese, who were the chief Navigators at that time, would not be without it. But to proceed, de Gama parting from hence prosecuted his Voyage, and in two Months more discover'd the Coast of Malabar; where Anchoring near Calecut on the 20th of May 1498 He sent some Men ashore for discovery; who by good Fortune met with a Moor that understood Portuguese, and acquainted them with the State of the Country; and by his means the Zamorin or Emperor of Calecut was inform'd of their Arrival. This Prince receiv'd them very kindly, and was ready to have entred into a League with the King of Portugal, when the Arabians and Sarazens, who were the Men that carryed on the Indian Trade to Europe hitherto, being alarm'd at the Arrival of the Portuguese, and foreseeing the loss of their Trade, if these Men were admitted; applyed themselves to the King, and laying before him the Advantages he and his Country had receiv'd by their Traffick, which the Portuguese would ruine, and oblige them to depart to his great loss, &c. They so wrought upon the Zamorin, that the Portuguese were no more favour'd but insulted; so that finding himself not safe, and having in a great measure perform'd what he came for, viz. discover'd the East-Indies, de Gama returned home, and arriv'd safe at Lisbon in September 1499. And now the discovery being made, the next business was to establish a Trade there; to which purpose the next Year, Pedro Alvarez de Cabrale was sent out with a Fleet of 13 Ships and 1500 Men, to oblige by fair or foul means the King of Calecut to permit them to settle there: Of these Ships but six perform'd the Voyage, the rest either foundring at Sea, and so sent back, or were cast away. Arriving at Calecut he was entertain'd with unexpected kindness by the Zamorin, a House given the King of Portugal, and liberty granted to lade their Ships before any others; but their old Enemies the Moors soon made a difference, for the Goods were so bought up by them, that notwithstanding the Zamorin's Order, the Portuguese could not have none; which made them set upon the Moors Ships and take the Goods thence; to revenge which the Sarazens assaulted the Portuguese Houfe, and kill'd many of the Men; for which Alvarez receiving no redress, he set upon ten Arabian Ships in the Port, killed the Men, unladed the Ships, and batter'd the Town with his Cannon; and then leaving Calcut he sail'd to Cochin, where he was very kindly receiv'd, furnish'd with the Commodities he wanted, courted by that King and those of Coslam and Canonor, and thence return'd home with a very rich Cargo, and arriv'd at Lisbon in August 1502. In the mean time John de Novo was sent out with another Fleet to recruit de Gama, but missing him he laded his Ships at Cochin and Canonor, and came safe to Lisbon.

King

And now the King of Portugal assumed to himself the pompous Titles of Lord of the Navigation, Conquest and Commerce of Ethiopia, Arabia, Persia and India; and to maintain that Title sent out Vasco de Gama a second time with the Title of Admiral, and a larger Fleet than ever; with which he sail'd directly to Cochin, whose King Trimumpara was a sincere Friend and generous Assistant to the Portuguese against their Enemy the Zamorin of Calcut: Having laded his Ships and dispatched his Affairs at Cochin he sail'd towards Canonor, but was met by 20 stout Ships from Calcut, which he quickly defeated, took two of them and returned back to Portugal, leaving Vincent de Scodra with six Ships to cruise on the Coast, and hinder the Commerce of the Arabians and Sarazens. As soon as de Gama was gone, the Zamorin fell upon Trimumpara and drove him out of his Kingdom, because he would not quit the Interest of the Portuguese. But Francis and Alphonso d' Albuquerque arriving the next Year at Cochin, they soon drove out the Zamorin, and reinstated Trimumpara; and by his permission built a Castle for the Security of the Portuguese, which after was encreas'd to a Town and may be call'd New-Cochin: having done this, laded their Ships and settled a Factory at Coslam, they return'd to Portugal, leaving Pacico a valiant Commander with 300 Men and three Ships to oppose the Zamorin: With this small force the Portuguese did Wonders, repelling the Calcutians in all their Attacks upon Cochin, and supported Trimumpara in his Kingdom; the next Year they were reinforced by a considerable Armada from Portugal under Lopez Suarez, and acquir'd a mighty Reputation in India.

The Portuguese having thus in some measure establish'd themselves in India, King Emanuel sent Don Francisco d' Almeida in the Year 1505, to reside there with the Title of Vice-Roy: This Prince maintain'd the War with great Courage and Hazard, during the five Years that he govern'd. And Alphonso d' Albuquerque that succeeded him took the Island and City of Goa, which was then made, and has ever since continued, the Seat of the Government of the Portuguese Asia: from hence they sent out Armies and Fleets, and extended their Conquests far and near, establishing Factories, not only all along that Coast of Malabar and the other of Coromandel, but also all along the Bay, and the Coasts of Pegu, Syam, Malacca, and on most of the Islands, possessing for a long time the whole Trade of the Indies; till the English and Dutch Nations put in for a share with them. Since that time the Portuguese Trade daily declin'd; and in the War with the Dutch in 1662, &c. they were almost expell'd these Parts, having at present besides Goa few Places of any Importance there. So much for the Portuguese.

The Discovery of the East-Indies happen'd in the Reign of our King Henry VII. who was a Prince that lov'd his Money too much to send it abroad in such hazardous Adventures; and as he refus'd Columbus Assistance in the Discovery of America, so he neglected the Trade of the East-Indies. His Son Henry VIII. was otherwise employ'd all his Reign, as were his two Successors. But Queen Elizabeth having prosperously settled Affairs at home, applied her Thoughts to Foreign Trade: and first setting out Sir Francis Drake, Tho. Candish (both famous for encompassing the whole Globe of the Earth) and others with Commissions, to infect the Spaniards on the Indian Coasts, and make free prize of their Ships. At length in the Year 1600, the East India Company was erected and endowed with many Privileges; and a Fond was soon rais'd for carrying on the Trade. Their first Fleet was commanded by Sir James Lancaster, with the Queen's Commission of Martial-Law, and arriv'd at Sumatra, a large Island on the South of the Coast of Syam, on the 5th. of June 1602; where having been kindly receiv'd by the King, and laded two of his Ships, which he sent home; he proceeded to Bantam on the Island of Java, where he laded his other two Ships, and settled Factories. In the Year 1608, a Factory was settled at Surra in the Dominions of the Great Mogul, and great Privileges granted to it by the Negotiation of Capt. Hawkins, who resided many Years in that Court as Ambassador from the King of Great Britain, and was succeeded in that Employment by Sir Thomas Roe. Soon after Madraspatan on the Coast of Coromandel was obtained of the King of Golconda, with liberty to build a Noble Fort call'd St. George, which is the Seat of our English Sovereignty on that side, and general Factory for all the Company's Affairs beyond Cape Comorin, as Surra is the chief resort for all Affairs on this side that Cape. Our Nation hath also the Sovereignty of the Island Bombay on the Coast of Cambala. The Island Angelica, near Goa. Fort St. David's near Negapatam on the Coast of Coromandel. And Factories at Onegly or Hugley, Cassumbezar, Patana, Dacca and Ballasore in Bengal; at Agra the chief City of Mogul, at Amadabat, Cambaya, Brodra, Baroche, Dabul, Petrapoli and Masulipatan, in the Dominions of that Prince; as also in Syam, Cambodia, Tonquin and the Island Formosa. At Achin, Prianim, Ticon and Jambe on the Island Sumatra. Likewise in the Islands, Borneo, at Succadano and Bandermassin; and Celebes at Macasser.

The English might easily have made themselves Masters of many other Places as the Portuguese and Dutch have done, but that they always chose rather to carry on a peaceable and quiet quiet Commerce with the Inhabitants than by violating the Laws of Nations, to Enslave and Rob them at the same time both of their Wealth and Liberty, on which account they have been every where kindly entertain'd, and prefer'd an unsupported Reputation.

Dutch in India. The States of Holland, as soon as that Republick was in a condition to spare her Men and Ships from the defence of the little Country they had got possession of, had their Eye on the East-India Trade, which they wisely foresaw would exceedingly enrich themselves, and weaken their Enemy the Spaniard; to which purpose they at first endeavour'd to find out a new and nearer Passage thither by the North, along the Coasts of Norway, Lapland, Nova Zembla and Tartary; but their Attempts at several times proving unsuccessful; in the Year 1595. they fitted out Four Ships, under the Command of Cornelius Houman, who having been before employ'd in the Service of the Portugueses, not only learnt the Method of Sailing to those Coasts, but was also well vers'd in the manner of Trafficking. Thus he set Sail the common way to the Cape of Good Hope, continuing his Course to Madagascar, Santa Maria, and Amongil, and came to Sumatra on the 12th of June 1596. Afterward he pass'd to Bantam and Tuba in Java Major; as also to the Islands of Madura and Bally; and looting from thence, after a tedious and difficult Voyage, arriv'd in Holland in the Month of August 1597. without making a Return of Profit answerable to the Expectation of the Merchants. However, they were not at all discourag'd from the like Adventures, but rather animated by a Prospect of Gain; inasmuch that the next Year, 1598. no less than 80 Ships sail'd out of the Ports of Holland and Zealand, either for the East or West-Indies, of which Five were sent out by the Authority of the States General, under the Conduct of Balthasar Masseron. Divers considerable Voyages were likewise made by Oliver Nordt, George Spilberg, and James Van Nee, besides other of lesser note, undertaken at the Expences of private Persons, or petty Companies of Merchants of Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Zeeland, Brabant, &c. until the States thought fit to unite all the Adventurers into one Society, to Trade upon a common Stock; freely permitting any Persons to come in at first, but prohibiting all others to Traffick, or repair to any Harbour from the Cape of Good-Hope to the Coast of China for 21 Years, to commence from the 20th of March, 1602. Whereupon, within a little while was rais'd a Fond of 700000 Pounds Sterling, which in Six Years time was augmented to near five times as much, i. e. 3500000, besides a yearly Dividend of 30 or 40, and seldom so low as 20 per Cent. Thus the Hollanders, having in process of time settled themselves in the most remarkable Places of the East-Indies, and engros'd almost the whole Spice-Trade, began to found a Commonwealth in those parts, govern'd by a Stadt-Holder, as potent as the other in the Netherlands; although his Office, which was formerly for Life, now continues only during three Years; nevertheless in State and Grandeur he exceeds not only the Stadt Holder of the United Provinces, but even most Princes in Europe. Indeed, the Strength and Greatness of the Hollanders are at present come to so high a pitch, as to dare to contend with the most powerful Monarchs of the Levant, being able to put to Sea a Fleet of 40 or 50 Men of War, and at the same time to maintain an Army of 30000 Men on Land. For in the Province of Malabar they possess Onor, Barcelor, Manglor, Cinanor, Granganor, Cochin, Coslam: In that about Coromandel, Turicoru, Negapatam, Karkatte and Palleacate, which they commonly call Guedria. In the Peninsula, Malacca. In the Island of Ceylon, Negumbo, Columbo, Galla, Basicala Tringulimala, and Jaffripatam. A Fortres in the Isle of Manar. In Java, Batavia, anciently known by the Name of Jaccara. In Borneo, Celebes, and divers other places, besides the entire Islands of Bima, Ambonya and Banda, several Forts of the Moluccas, &c. They likewise keep Factories in almost all the Trading Towns throughout the whole Continent of India, endeavouring, if it were possible to get into their Hands the Monopoly of all manner of Commodities.

The Danes and French, in emulation to other European Kingdoms, have likewise sought for a Share in the Traffick in the East-Indies. The former indeed have establish'd a considerable Trade in the Bay of Bengala, and on the Coasts of Pegu; as also in some little Islands toward the South, being Masters only of two Places where-to they repair, both lying on the Coast of Coromandel, viz. Krankebar and Dansborg. The French in the Year 1664. erected a Company for the Commerce of the East-Indies, which having fixt their chief Residence and Factory in the Isle of Madagascar, on the Coast of Africa, should from thence Traffick into Persia, India, China, Japon, &c. But they have not been as yet able to carry on their Design with Success, according to their Expectations, although they still continue earnestly to prosecute it, and have lately got some Interest in the Court of the King of Siam.

*P*Tolomy, Strabo, and the other ancient Geographers, divided India into Two Parts only, that is, with respect to the River Ganges; the Western being stiled India and the Eastern Extra Gangem. But in regard that Indostan or the Empire of the great Mogul, lyes on both sides that River, and is all Subject to one Prince, that must now be allowed to be one Part. And the Two Peninsulæ or large Promontories that launch out into the Indian Ocean on each side of the Bay of Bengall, are reckon'd Two other Parts: So that at present, India at large is divided into Three Parts, viz.

- I. INDOSTAN or the Empire of the Great Mogul.
- II. The PENINSULA of INDIA within, or on the West side the River GANGES:
- III. The PENINSULA of INDIA beyond, or on the East side the GANGES.

Each of these contains many Kingdoms, viz.

In Indoffan are comprehended forty Kingdoms, namely

- Kandiana Udeffa Patna Jefual
- Mevat Bengal Orixa Berar
- Candis Guzarat Chitor Malva
- Ranas Bando Hendows Pop.
- Jenupar Delly Agra Gualeor
- Narvar Marouchia Sambal
- Bacar Jamba Pengal Naugracut
- Siba Pitan Gor Kakares
- Bankiffh Caffimere Attock
- Cabul Multan Haiacan Buckar
- Jeffelmere Soret Tatta

In the Peninsula of India within Ganges, are the Countrys of

- Malabar
- Decan
- Golconda
- Bifnagar & Coromandel
- The Fifhing Coaft and three Principalities

In the Peninsula beyond Ganges are thefe three Empires, which comprehend many fmall Kingdoms

- The Empire of Syam
- The Kingdom of Anna
- The Empire of Ava

The Subdivifions and chief Towns of thefe Parts of India, will be feen in the Tables before the particular Defcriptions of each; to which we now proceed, beginning with the Peninsula within Ganges; that lying next to the Ifland Ceylon from whence we laft came.

C H A P. XVI.

Of the Peninsula of India within the Ganges.

For a Map confult that of the Mogal's Empire, to which this is annexed.

I. Situati-on.

THE Peninsula of India within, or on the higher fide of the River Ganges, is feated between the 90th and the 100 Degr. of Longitude; and between the 8th and the 20th Degr. of North Latitude, being contiguous on the North with Indoffan, but otherwife furrounded by the Sea; that is, the Indian Sea on the Weft and South, and the Bay of Bengal on the Eaft: It is divided from Ceylon by the Straights of Manar, on the South-Eaft, and is diftanced from Malacca and the Peninsula beyond Ganges, near 400 Leagues, by the Intervention of that Great Bay or Sea, to which, in general, is given the Name of Bengal, though the inner Part of it only, may properly bear that Appellation. The Breadth of this Land in the North Part is near 600 Miles, but decreafes Southward, growing narrower by Degrees, till it end in a Point at Cape Comorin.

II. Air and Soil.

The Air is exceffive Hot, being feated under the firft, fecond, and part of the third Climates of the Torrid Zone: So that the Inhabitants for the moft part go naked: Neverthelefs the Soil produces plenty of all Neceffaries, as Rice, divers forts of Fruits, Cattle, Pepper, and fome other Spices, Cotton and Silk; but epecially this Land yields Diamonds, and other precious Stones, and its Sea affords Pearls. A great Ridge of Mountains runs along the middle of this Country, from Bifnagar to Cape Comorin; they are call'd the Mountains de Gate or Ballagate; and it is very remarkable that at the fame Time that the Weather is fultry Hot on one fide of thefe Mountains, it is feverely Cold on the other fide, though in the fame Degree of Latitude. A great Number of the Towns and Castles on the Coafts of this Peninsula are in the Poffeffion of the Portuguefe, Englifh and Hollanders.

III. Division.

The Country contains a great Number of Kingdoms, but thofe for the moft Part are very fmall, and the Rajas or Kings Tributarys, or Homagers at leaft, to a more powerful Monarch; wherefore it will not be neceffary to divide it according to its Kingdoms, but we fhall rather confider it in five large Parts, viz.

- The Coafts and Country of Malabar.
- Decan*, with Cuncan, Balaguata and Canara.
- The Kingdom of Golconda or Orixa.
- The Kingdom of Bifnagar with the Coafts of Coromandel.
- The Principalities of Gingi, Tanjonar and Madura, with the Fifhing Coaft.

The Subdivifions and chief Cities whereof are feen in this Table.

IV. MALABAR lies on the West-side of the Mountains Ballagat; but Geographers are not agreed of it's extent with respect to the Northern Boundary; some carrying it as high as Cape Daramé, or Cabo des Rames, and the River Aliga near Goa; and so include Canara in that general Name; but Sansou and others cut off that Country, and so Malabar is to be reckon'd no farther Northward than the River Cangerecora, a little beyond Conanor; between which and Cape Comorin in the South may be reckon'd about 350 Miles, but its breadth is at most 100 Miles, and in the Southern Part not half so much. It is divided from Coromandel on the East by the Ridge of Mountains, and on the West and South it is washed by the Indian Sea. The Coasts have many commodious Bays and Harbours, which invite Merchants from all Parts: but it is mostly frequented by Mahometan Pirates, except where the European Establishments hinder them. The Contry is water'd with many Rivulets, and the Soil is fruitful in Pepper, Ginger, and other Spices, Rhubarb, Sugar, Cotton, Coco-nuts, &c. and was formerly all subject to one Monarch, but at present many Kings Reign there, over whom he of Calicut pretends a Superiority, and call'd himself Zamorin or Emperor, but his Glory is pass'd away, and his Country is at present a kind of Aristocracy; however, we shall consider the Country as it was formerly govern'd; for the Revolutions are so various and frequent that it is impossible to trace 'em.

The chief Kingdoms of Malabar are those of Calicut, Canonor, Cranganor, Cochin, and Coulam, Malabar besides which there are many others. As Travancour, adjoining to Coulam, Porcha, and Calecou-lam, the former adjoining to Cochin, and the latter to it; the English trade to Porcha, and the Dutch have a Factory there. Mueria, Maria, and Batymena, three other small Kingdoms, adjoining all to Cochin; and divers small Principalities subject to the Zamorin. There are also eleven small Kingdoms in the Mountains, viz. Mangae, and Paru; the Kingdom of Pepper; Turnbale; Changanate; Changanor; Trivular; Panapely; Angamale; the Kingdom of the Tecanmes; and the People of the Mountains of Panda; and lastly, at the top of the Mountains live the People call'd Mallians, whose chief Town is Prise. The Cities of chiefest Note in all these Kingdoms, are these.

Entering this Continent from the Islands, we first meet Cape Comorin, heretofore call'd Cory Comaria, and Comaria Extrema: Situate in the 7th Degree, 30. Minutes of Northern Latitude, 60 Leagues West from the Coast of Ceylon; in passing thence Northward, is seen Cotae, the Capital of the Kingdom of Travancor, a place Travan of great Traffick, and adorn'd with a Christian Church built in the Year 1600. Travancor, which gives name to the Kingdom, suppos'd to be the Cottara of Ptolemy: and Madavallur, a large City in the same Kingdom. Coulam, the Capital of Coulam, the Kingdom thence denominated, is a large City seated in a most fertile Soil and healthy Air, in the 9th Degree of North Latitude; it has the advantage of a very commodious Haven at the Mouth of a River, and was taken by the Portuguese in 1505, who built a new Town, and strengthened it with good Walls, and a Fortrefs, but were however beaten out by the Dutch in 1661. Calecoulam, the Capital of another Kingdom, was formerly a good City, Jam, but being destroyed by the Portuguese in 1523, it hath ever since continued in low Estate; however, for the sake of the Spice Trade the Dutch have a Factory there. Porca the Capital of a Porca small Kingdom of about 50 Miles extent, where the English have a Factory for Pepper, which grows plentifully there. Cattipely is the name of the chief Town of Batymena Kingdom, as Podiagabo, otherwise Maveleycare, is of Maria; and Mueria of the small Principality of the same Name.

Cochin, the Capital of a powerful Kingdom, Cochin, whose Prince is the only one in Malabar that dares dispute with the Zamorin of Calicut; is a large City, or rather two Cities a Mile and half asunder, but however almost united by Suburbs: The upper or ancient Cochin stands about 4 Miles up the River from the Sea; and is the Seat of the King, whose Palace is a fine Building after the European manner; the Streets are large and the Town populous: The lower or new Town stands two Miles lower on the same River, which makes a commodious Haven; it was built by the Portuguese, and hath many Christian Churches, whereof that of the Jesuits is the finest, having a stately Tower and a Ring of Bells. 'Tis a place of great Traffick, and was possess'd by the Portuguese

tuguese from the Year 1504 till 1663, when the Dutch beat them out, and have ever since possess'd it, It is seated on the Coast of the Indian Sea, in the 9th Degr. 40 Min. of Northern Latitude. Vaipin, a small Island in the River, which was formerly a notable Sanctuary, is now possess'd by the Dutch, who have built a Fort in it call'd New Orange. Cranganor, the Capital of the Kingdom of that Name, stands upon the River Chatna, 20 Miles North from Cochin, and not far from the Sea: The Portuguese built a Fort near it and took the City, but were beaten out of both by the Dutch in 1662.

Cranganor.

Calicut.

From Cranganor Northward lies the Kingdom of Calicut, whose King, as we have said, was call'd Zamorin or Emperor, and was a powerful Monarch, able to bring into the Field an Army of 100000 or more. He had a vast Revenue arising by Tributes, Customs, and the Monopoly of Pepper. The City Calicut stands upon the Sea-shore in the 11th Degr. of North Latitude; a large Place, being as some relate eleven Miles in Compass, but the Buildings very ordinary; it was a City of great Trade, and was notable 200 Years ago, especially for the Portuguese Wars against it, but now a poor and obscure Place; the Palace stands about a Mile from the Town; it is large and surrounded with a low Wall, but the Apartments are proper and well adorn'd. Panane about 50 Miles from Calicut, a Place of Trade also, having an excellent Haven: 'Twas here the Portuguese first arriv'd, when they discover'd the East-Indies; and by the Zamorin were at first well entertain'd, but had afterwards long and grievous Wars with him, wherein the two Castles that guarded this Haven were demolished. Palur, where the Zamorin sometimes resided. Chale not far from Calicut, where the Portuguese once had a Fort: and Parangale a Town of considerable Traffick; are the other chief Cities of this Kingdom. Which being the most considerable, the whole Country of Malabar is sometimes call'd Calicut: Several small Principalities are subject to the Zamorin: As Tanor, a petty Kingdom, whose Capital of the same Name is a Sea-port between Cochin and Calicut; Cavira between Panane and Cranganor; Pannur; Coigan; Bipur; Cucuram; and Auriola; Inland Countries: and Chombays, Badara and Mouningue, three Ports lying Northward from Calicut: But it must be own'd however that his Dominions are not very large; for from Cochin, which as we have said, is the Capital of a considerable Kingdom, it is not much above

Tanor.

Canonor.

100 Miles to Canonor, the chief Town of another Kingdom, being the most Northern Part of Malabar, a Country of fertile Soil, whose Capital of the same Name is seated about 12 Miles from the Sea, upon the River Balipatanam, which makes an excellent Haven, and the City a place of great Trade. The Portuguese built a Fort here in 1505, which encreas'd into a Town, and was call'd new Canonor; but it was taken from them in 1664 by the Dutch, who still hold it, and drive a good Trade there for Pepper.

VI.
Decan in general.

From Malabar, Northward to the Confines of the Empire of the Mogul, lies the large Country which bears the general Name of Decan or Decan, though that Kingdom be but a small Part of it: It is bounded on the North, by the Kingdom of Guzerat; on the South, by Malabar; on the East, by the Kingdoms of Golconda and Bisnagar; and on the West, by the Ocean. It comprehends the three Kingdoms of Decan, Cuncan, and Balagnata, the Island of Goa, the Island Salsdeva, and some other smaller Islands; and the Countrys of Canara and Salsete. The Country in general is very fertile, producing many excellent Fruits, and much Cotton, whereof the Inhabitants make very fine Cloath; the Land also yields Diamonds, and other precious Stones; and affords excellent Pasture to divers sorts of Cattle bred here, and sold to Goa and other Places.

To proceed in our travelling Method, the Province of Canara is first in our way, call'd by some Tulimar, and by others the Kingdom of the Chattins; it is divided from Canonor in Malabar on the South, by the River Cangercora; and from Cuncan on the North, by the River Aliga; having the Ocean on the West; and the Kingdom of Bisnagar on the East. It is divided into many petty Kingdoms, but is all subject to the King of Bisnagar: Of these Kingdoms the chief are Baticala, Onor and Garzopa. Baticala the chief City of that Kingdom, stands in the 13th Degr. of Latitude, on a small River, about a Mile from the Sea, but is no Port; the Country round it is very fruitful, and the City is (says my Author) a beautiful well built Place; this Kingdom extends pretty far within Land, and is the more powerful of the three. Next to it Northward lies Onor, whose Capital of the same Name stands on the River Merceu in the 14th Degr. Lat. where the Portuguese had a strong Fort and good Trade, and the English have now a Factory; the Pepper of this Place being heavier and more esteem'd than any other. Thirty Miles South from hence stands Barcelor, another Fort and Town of good Trade, built by the Portuguese, but now subject to the Dutch. Garzopa that gave Name to that Kingdom, stood on the same River Onor, but was ruin'd by the Portuguese; who about 5 Miles from it built a large Fortres call'd Gavarada Noghbar. Ikkeri, Ahindi and Sagher are the chief Indian Cities of Garzopa. On the Coast of Canara lies the Island Anchediva, about 25 Miles in Compass, where is a very good Haven, and therefore taken by the Portuguese at their first arrival in these Parts, and by them well fortified: But their chief, and at present almost only Factory in India is

Goa, a City of a League and half Extent, Goa situate in a small Island call'd Tilsoar, made by two Mouths of the River Mondova, says Bastrand; the Maps call it Gazim, and 'tis often denominated from the City, and call'd the River of Goa; which falls into the Ocean a few Leagues below the Town, making a commodious Haven. This City is the Seat of the Vice-Roy, the See of an Arch-Bishop, and the Supreme Court of Judicature for all the Portuguese Asia, as well as its Staple of Trade: It is adorn'd with many sumptuous Buildings, fair Streets, abundance of Churches and Convents; and though its Walls be slight, the Island is so well guarded by Forts, that the Place is reckon'd the strongest in India. It was taken by Alphonso d'Albuquerque, the Portuguese Vice-Roy in the Year 1511, and stands in the 15th Degr. of Northern Latitude. The Portuguese do also possess the neighbouring Country of Salsete, where they have two Forts; and the Country

Country of Barles (mention'd below) and are reckon'd to have 100000 Subjects in Goa, Salfette and Bardes.

From hence Northward lies the Kingdom of Cuncan, 120 Miles from North to South, and 200 Miles from East to West, having Decan, on the North; Canara and Goa, on the South; the Ocean, on the West, and Ballagate, on the East. Linschoten calls it Idalcan, from the Title of its King; it is also by some named the Kingdom of Visapor, from its chief City of that Name. Tavernier tells us of a notable Revolt in his time, of one Sevagi a Raja and Captain of this King's Guards, whose Son seized and plunder'd many of the chief Cities of this Kingdom; and afterwards plunder'd Suarat, attack'd our English Ships, and very much disturb'd the Portuguese: The great Mogul sent an Army against him, but he skulk'd in the Mountains and never could be reduced; so that he or his Successors do still continue to infest this Country. The King Idalcan was a most formidable Enemy to the Portuguese, and attack'd Goa with 70000 Men. Visapor, the chief City of this Kingdom, stands a great way within Land, upon the River Mondova or Dogazim, and is of very large Extent, even 20 Miles in Circumference, but then the Houses are scatter'd wide; 'tis however surrounded with Walls and 1000 pieces of Cannon, besides five strong Forts; a mighty piece of Ordinance in this Place is much talk'd of, being able to carry a Bullet of 800 weight: In the middle of the City stands the King's Palace, which is a Castle strongly fortified, and guarded by 2000 Men. On the same River somewhat lower, stand Solapour and Paranda. On the Coasts stand Wingera or Mingrela, a Dutch Factory near Goa. Bardes, the capital of a small Country thence denominated; and Fort de Aguada nearer Goa, belonging to the Portuguese. Carapatan more Northward; Centapour; and Dabal in the Latitude of 17. 45. a Place of good Trade for Pepper and Salt, but somewhat diminish'd by the neighbourhood of Goa and Suarat, in the middle between which it stands.

Northward from hence between Cuncan and the Mogul's Frontiers, lies the Kingdom of Decan strictly so call'd, small of its self, though it gives the general Name to all these Countries, for its Breadth is not above 60 Miles, and its Length from East to West about twice as much. Golconda is its Eastern Boundary, and on the West a narrow Tract of it extends to the Sea; the chief Towns are, Chaul on the Sea-coasts in the 19 Degr. Lat. at the Mouth of a River which makes a large Haven, taken by the Portuguese and very well fortified, having a Castle that is esteem'd impregnable; the Trade of this Place is diminished through the neighbourhood of the English and Dutch; but the Portuguese retain it, and are at great expence in maintaining a Garrison in it. Danda and Sefardon are two other Ports in this Kingdom: and within Land are, Andanagar seated on the River Guenga towards the Confines of Golconda, sometime the residence of the King: and Bider, by some reckon'd the Metropolis of the Kingdom; but Sanjon names Kerky so: and the ancient Travellers speak of the City Decan as the chief, and make it a strong and well built City with a noble Palace; though 'tis probable they mean Andanagar, which is sometimes call'd Dra- nagar, and by Strangers might be corrupted into Decan, with the Name of the Kingdom.

Ballagate is a small Kingdom seated among the Ballamontains of Gate, whence it is denominated; ^{gate:} between Decan, on the North; Cuncan, on the West; Golconda, on the East; and Bisnagar, on South. The chief City is Dolrabad a Place of Traffick; and according to Sanjon, Bider above mention'd belongs to this Kingdom. Ballagate is Tributary if not subject to the King of Cuncan.

Having given an Account of the Western Part of this Peninsula, we proceed now to the Eastern; from the Frontiers of the Mogul's Empire to Cape Comorin, on the East side the Mountains of Gate, where we meet with many Names of Countries, as Narsinga, Golconda, Delli, Bisnagar, Coromandel, &c. but the whole seems properly to be divided but into two Kingdoms, viz. Golconda and Bisnagar, and three Principalities, viz. of Tanjourar, Ginggi, and Malwra; Coromandel and the Fishing-Coast, being general Names of parts of these particular Countries.

Golconda is the North-East Part of this Peninsula; and situate between the Mogul's Countries, on the North and North-East; the Bay of Bengall, on the East; Decan and Ballagate, on the West; and Bisnagar and Coromandel, on the South. The famous River Guenga divides it from the Mogul's Dominions on the North, and the Mountains of Gate are its Boundary on the West. This Kingdom was formerly call'd Orixa, from a Province on the East towards Bengall, which was sometime part of it, but has been conquer'd by the Mogul and intirely cut off; and by that means the Extent of the Kingdom is much restrain'd, being, instead of 330 Miles in Length, as F. de Barros represents it, now not above 200 Miles. The Name of Golconda is taken from a strong Fortrefs to which the King retired when in danger from the Mogul; and has ever since made it his Residence. The Country is very fruitful, yielding Rice, Fruits, Indigo, Cassia the best in India, says Tavernier, Pasture and Cattle in great plenty: But that which chiefly recommends this Country is the Mines of Diamonds, the richest in the World. These were discover'd about a hundred Years ago by accident (a Country fellow finding one at Plough) and were immediately seized on by the King, who farms them out for a vast yearly Rent, even 300 thousand pound Sterling, says my Author, and yet retains to himself all the large ones that are above ten Carats in weight. This renders the King very powerful, but he is often attack'd by the Great Mogul, who envies him this Possession. He is call'd Cocub-lia, which is a Pompous Epithet, and is an absolute Prince, Heir to all his Subjects, and Master of their Lives; but all this has not been able to protect him, for the Great Mogul by continual Warring upon him, has at length got the Victory; and for some Years last pass he has been confin'd in an honourable Imprisonment, the Mogul possessing his Country. The People are of an Ingenious and Vertuous Disposition, except where Trade debauches them, and therein they sometimes recede from the Morality they are generally noted for: They are reckon'd exquisite in the Painting of Callicoes. The Air is extreme Hot, but the Land is well well water'd with Rivers and Lakes, and besides they contrive large Receptacles for Water in the rainy Monsoon, which they let out at pleasure to water the Fields in the most sultry Season. The chief Cities and Places, are Bagnagar the Metropolis, seated in the 16 Deg. 58 Min. of North Latitude, and in the 97 Deg. of Longitude. The City is fair and well built, and the King's Palace very magnificent, cover'd with Terraces whereon are beautiful Gardens, and Trees of that Magnitude that it is to be admired the Arches can support them: This may seem incredible, but my Author quotes a very worthy Gentleman (Mr. Daniel Sheldon) who resided long in these Countries. The City is inhabited by none but Nobility and Gentry, the Tradesmen and Merchants living in the Suburbs call'd Erengabal, which is said to be near three Miles long. Five or six Miles from hence stands Golconda, a Fortrefs of mighty Strength, and always defended by a large Garrison: This is the Seat of the Royal Treasure, and of late Years the Place of the King's usual Residence, whose Palace is the most Magnificent and Sumptuous of any in the Indies, the very Bars of the Windows being of massy Gold: it is 12 Miles in Circumference, and all built of Stone; the Situation of this Place, with respect to the Water, Soil and Climate, as well as the Strength of it has particularly recommended it to the King's approbation, and caus'd the whole Kingdom to be denominat'd from it. Condapoly an impregnable Fortrefs of large Extent, comprehending great Fields of Rice, and Orchards of Fruit Trees, but so surrounded with Rocks as to be inaccessible. Condavera another strong Fortrefs; as is also Bellumconda, and sixty three others conveniently seated on the Frontiers all round the Kingdom, and mostly built on Rocks; but the most noted Place of all is Gani or Coulour, for the sake of the Diamond Mines in its neighbourhood; the Country about is craggy and mountainous, and formerly so thinly inhabited that this was but a very poor Village, though now a very large Trading Town, which it must needs be since there are (says Tavernier) 60000 People employ'd in the Mines: This Town is 160 Miles distant from Golconda to the East, and 108 North from Matsulipatan, a Port on the Bay of Bengall, at the Mouth of the River Nagundi the Southern Limit of the Kingdom; which is the chief Place for Foreign Traffick in all this Kingdom. Guadavari gives Name to the Cape, on the East of Matsulipatan. Bimilipatan a small Port with a Dutch Factory, and Manchepatan more Northward on the same Bay.

Bay of Bengall on the East. The Soil is fruitful, being well water'd with Rivers, the Pastures cover'd with Cattle, and the Forests fill'd with Lions, Tygers, Elephants, Boars and Staggs. The Air is extreme Hot at all times, but in the Winter (which is distinguish'd only by great Rains for three Months together) the Nights are severely Cold; and as we observ'd before, the Seasons here are directly contrary to what they are in Malabar, though that be in the same Latitude. The Inhabitants are well shaped, Tawny Complexion'd, of Effeminate Lazy Tempers, but the Manufacturers are ingenious in making and painting Calicoes, which is the chief Trade of the Country. The King assumed mighty Titles, and was in effect a powerful Prince. J. du Barros and other Authors tell us he brought an Army of near eight hundred thousand (whereof 3000 Horfe) besides 600 Elephants, against Malcan: And Barbosa says there are 900 Elephants and 100 thousand Men constantly maintained for the Guard of the Kingdom; to furnish which Expence he has the fortune to have some Diamond Mines in his Dominions, but his grandeur is diminished.

The whole Kingdom (excluding Canara) may be divided into two Parts, viz. Bisnagar properly so called, and Coromandel. The former being the Inland Country, and the latter the Sea-Coasts. The chief Cities of Bisnagar are the Capital of the same Name, or otherwise call'd Chandegry, thought to be the Madura of Ptolomy: it is a very large City, seated on a Hill near the Banks of the River Nagundi, in the Heart of his Dominions, and therefore the usual Seat of the King; it is guarded by a strong Citadel and three Walls. Narsinga seated also on the Nagundi, below Chandegry, is also a large City, and so considerable that the whole Kingdom is frequently denominat'd from it, and was sometime the Regal Seat. Vellour another large City whence the Kingdom is sometimes named. Chaivero is the Seat of a Prince of this Country. Crangapatam Southward from Chandegry. Pelagoniga a very large City near Bisnagar. and Tripity on account of its famous Indian Temple ought not to be omitted; it stands on a high Mountain, and is resorted to from all parts of the Kingdom: Great droves of Monkeys are kept in it as sacred and highly revered; and even the King preserves a Tooth of one of those Animals as a precious Relick.

Coromandel is extended along the Coasts of the Coro-Bay of Bengall, from the Limits of Golconda to those of mandel. of Madura, that is from the 10th to the 15th Degr. of Northern Latitude; some extend it much farther both North and South, but this seems to be its truest Bounds. 'Tis so fruitful in Rice that Texeira says it took its Name from that; yet at some times for want of usual Rains the People perish through Famine, and sell themselves into Slavery for Food. The Inhabitants make fine Calicoes and Muslings, with which they purchase the Commodities of other Nations, or rather by selling them to the English and other Europeans are enrich'd so as to be able to purchase all Foreign Necessaries. The Coast has many commodious Havens, which makes it a Place of great Traffick; but the Ports are mostly in the Hands of Europeans, the English especially have Madraspatan and the Fort of St. George, whereof more

Bisnagar lies on the South of Golconda, beginning at Matsulipatan and the River Nagundi, and runs Southward as far as Cape Comorin six hundred Miles in Length; but it is now contracted; for Gingy, Madura and Tanjowar, that were formerly Provinces govern'd by this King's Officers, are at present separate Principalities under Homage only to him: Westward 'tis stretch'd out over the Mountains, as far as the Indian Sea, and comprehends Canara already describ'd next to Malabar: So that at present we shall confine our selves to the Kingdom of Bisnagar on the East side the Mountains, which (excluding the Principalities) is about 250 Miles from North to South, bounded by the Mountains on the West, and the more in its place. The chief Towns proceeding from North to South are these. Masulipatan or Masulapatan, although already mention'd in our accounts of Bisnagar, because seated on the North side of the River Nagundi, which parts that Kingdom from this, is yet by Geographers reckon'd in the Limits of Coromandel: But it is however in the Hands of the King of Golconda, and is his Mart for Diamonds, being indeed the chiefest for that Commodity in all the Indies; and therefore the place is much resorted to, and the English and Dutch have constant Factories in it. 'Tis a large well built and beautiful City, but the Houses stand stragling at distance from each other: here is a Governor annually deputed by the King of Golconda, who lives in great State and Splendor; the Customs of this Port are reckon'd to amount to 160000 l. sterling per ann. And the Town is seated, as we have said, at the mouth of the River Nagundi, on the Bay of Bengall, in the Latitude of 16 D. 30 M. Pentapoli or Petty-Pole, about 20 Miles more Southward, stands on a Promontory washed by a large River, which winding about makes it a Peninsula, and falls into the Bay of Bengall; it is a Port of somewhat difficult access, and a Place of Trade for Cloths, Pindata's, Betteleas's, &c. The Inhabitants are of different Nations, and the Town is tributary to the King of Golconda: The English have a Factory here, as have also the Dutch. Carceiro, Caletour and Penna, smaller Towns, are noted for a Plant used in Dying. Fort Gueldria, a Fort and Factory of the Dutch, stands about 20 Miles up the Country; 'tis strongly Fortified, secur'd by a good Garrison, and is the Seat of their Governor, and chief Factory for these Parts. Palicate stands on the Coast at the mouth of a River or Channel which furrounds it: this place is not above 20 Miles from Gueldria, and also possess'd by the Dutch, but the Haven is not a very good one. Meliapur famous in Ecclesiastical History for the Martyrdom of St. Thomas the Apostle, who Planted Christianity in these Parts; was formerly the chief City of Coromandel: but being ruined, the Portuguese, in the Year 1523. began to Rebuild it, and in the Ruins of an ancient Church, they found (at least they affirm so) the Bones of the Apostle, which were immediately enshrined, and the new City named St. Thomas, which is a place of considerable Trade for Callicoes and such Linnens of a finer Colour than any other. The French seized this place about 30 Years ago, and held it for some time, but were at last beaten out by the Moors.

Madraspatam, seated on the same Coast a few Miles Northward from St. Thomas, in the 14th. Deg. of Lat. is a Town possess'd by the English, and more known by the name of the Fort denominated from our Champion St. George, in which resides the Governor, and General Factory for all the concerns of the East-India Company, beyond Cape Comorin, upon the Continent of Golconda, Bengal and Pegu. The English Town is surrounded with a strong Wall, the Sea washes the East side of it, a broad Ditch the South and West, and on the North side lies the Indian Town; in the middle stands the Fort, which as well as the Town, is of Quadrangular form, with four Bastions raised very high; and in the middle of it, stands the Governor's House, a noble Structure of Stone and well adorn'd: the Bastions of both the Town and Fort are well mounted with Cannon, and the Place is very strong: The Governor lives in very great State, and in compliance with the Custom of those Countries, never goes abroad without a great attendance of Factors and Merchants, Servants and Guard, Drums and Trumpets, and several Palankeens or Sedans of Ladies; he has a constant Guard of 300 or 400 Moors, and raises 1500 Men at Summons; besides the Garrison, which consists of 700 Soldiers in constant pay. This Place has been possess'd by the English near 100 Years, under an annual Tribute to the King of Golconda: The Indian Town as we have said, lies on the North side of the Fort, and is sometimes call'd Maderasaj; it consists of divers Streets of neat but low Houses inhabited by the Moors. Since the Portuguese have been beaten out of St. Thomas, they have been enterrain'd at Fort St. George, and a Chapel appointed for their Worship. Tirepplier in the Latit. 11. 45. is a Fort and Factory of the Dutch, being near Carcal, where they have a House. Negapatam, which in the Indian Language signifies the Town of Snakes, because of the number of those Reptiles found here; is the most Southern Port of Coromandel, seated upon the Sea Coast in the 10. D. 45. M. of Lat. and washed by a large River, but however no good Harbour; the Portuguese did possess it till 1653, that the Dutch took it from them, and notwithstanding the Attacks of the Naique of Tanjouardo still retain it. Not far from them the Danes have a Fort named Tranquebar; and the English have a Fort named St. David, seated on the Coast not far South from Negapatam. Tavernier in his Journey through this Country, gives us the names of many Inland Towns of Coromandel, but those being not frequented by Europeans nor in themselves considerable we shall omit, and only say that at every 20 or 30 Miles distance there are Towns, Villages, or Pagods i. e. Heathenish Temples, all over the Country.

The three Principalities or Naiques of Gingi, Tanjouwar and Madura, take up the rest of this Peninsula, extending from the Frontiers of Bisnagar and Coromandel to Cape Comorin. They were heretofore, as we have said, part of the Kingdom of Bisnagar, but the Governors have now thrown off the Obedience and are absolute Princes. The most Northern of 'em is Gingi, a small Country on the West of Coromandel towards the Mountains of Gate, and adjoining to Bisnagar. The chief City of the same name, stands in the Latitude of 11. 30. and about 80 Miles from the Sea: a large and populous City, the Seat of the Naique, who is a rich Prince, and his Country a fruitful Land; the Inhabitants make fine Callicoes, and receive in exchange for 'em all the foreign Commodities they want. Cidambaran is another principal City of this Country, and notable for the many magnificent Pagods and Gentile Devotions paid there. Tanjouwar lies on the South and East of Gingi, taking it's name from the City where the Naique resides, situate near Negapatam, in the middle of his Dominions, which are not much larger than those of Gingi. Negapatam, possess'd by the Dutch; and Tranquebar by the Danes, and Fort St. David, already mention'd, are by some reckon'd to stand in the Limits of this Princes Dominions. The Naique or Principality of Madura lies more to the South, extending from the Confines of Gingi to the Coast.

of Tanjour to Cape Comorin, and comprehending the Coast commonly call'd the Fishing-Coast from the Fishing for Pearl, which is the chief employment of the Inhabitants; who dive into the Water and bring up the Oysters, which being open'd yield many Pearls: but these are a small fort, and the Employment is not very profitable, only the Country is Barren, and they have no better Livelihood. The chief Cities are Madura, thought to be the Madura of Pyolomy, a large Place and the usual Residence of the Naique, seated at the foot of the Mountains, in the Latitude of 9. 45. Tintecory, seated in the middle of this Coast, a handsome well built Town, subject to the Dutch since the Year 1658. Cailpatam, a famous Market for Pearls. Manonor; Trichandur; Manapar; and Jacancury, are all Port Towns on the Straight of Manor.

Thus have we travell'd round this Peninsula, and view'd all it's Countries and chief Cities, wherein we have made use of the best Lights that are given us by Travellers and Geographers. But must own, The Revolutions that have happen'd here by the Wars of one Prince upon another, but chiefly the Conquests of the Mogul; have made great alterations in the limits of Kingdoms, Power of the Princes, and condition of Cities and Towns; thus Calecut which was formerly so eminent a City, is now an inconsiderable Town; and the Kings of Golconda and Bisnagar, that were lately such Potent Monarchs, are now reduc'd to a low Estate, and the former is even a Prisoner to the Mogul. But these Revolutions having not been particularly related by Travellers, and our Merchants frequenting only the Coasts, we have not been able to obtain a better account than is here given, which we hope is not very much different from the present State of the Country.

We shall next proceed to the other Peninsula, seated on the East of the Bay of Bengall, and stiled the Peninsula of India beyond the River Ganges.

India beyond the River Ganges.

Bounds.

THE Peninsula without or beyond the River Ganges, is Bounded on the West by the Bay of Bengall, and the Dominions of the Great Mogul; on the East by the Indian Ocean and China; on the North by Tartary; and on the South by the Indian Sea, the Bays of Cochinchina and Siam, and the Straight of Malacca. It is extended far from South to North, viz. from the second to the thirty fourth Degree of North Latitude, but is not proportionably Broad.

Though this Country be vulgarly call'd a Peninsula, it is only Malacca, the Southern part, that deserves that name; for though Cochinchina and Cambodia, be three parts surrounded by the Sea, Pegu, Aracam, Ava, Tonquin, and the other Countries comprehended in the extent above mention'd are seated on the main Land of India; and therefore the French very wisely divide it into, I. The Peninsula, and II. India beyond Ganges. Which are both divided in three large Parts, viz.

Many other Kingdoms, almost as many as Towns, are nam'd by Travellers; but these Countries (except the Coasts) are so little known to us Europeans, that we cannot pretend to mention them all: what we have nam'd will serve to lead us through the whole Country; and according to the best Informations to be had, we shall set down what is most remarkable.

Malacca, formerly esteem'd so wealthy as to have had the Name of Aurea Chersonesus, is the most Southern Part of India, beginning from the first Degree of Latitude, and extending in a narrow Tract (surrounded by the Sea, except on the North) to the 11th. Degree of Latitude; or, according to others, but to the 9th. Deg. It is divided into many small Kingdoms denominated from the chief Towns, but the Kings are Vassals to the King of Siam, who is supreme Lord of the whole, except the Southern Coast, where the Dutch have got Possession. [Malacca is seen in the Map of the Islands] the chief Cities of it are on the Western Coast: Queda, Torano, Sambilaon, Solongor and Malacca or Malays, the Metropolis, whence the whole Country and the neighbouring Strait take their Name; a rich and populous City and famous Mart, having a capacious Harbour, which is frequented by Ships from all parts of India. The Language of it's Inhabitants, commonly call'd the Malateck, is the finest and most pure of any in the East-Indies, and is generally understood by Merchants and Learned Men all over India. The City is guarded by a strong Castle, but was however taken by the Portuguese in the Year 1511. from the King of Ihor who was then Master of it, and kept by them till 1640, when the Dutch turn'd 'em out, and have ever since possessed it. South from Malacca stands Sincapura, seated (says Buno) on a Promontory, and gives Name to the neighbouring Strait, and Ihor a considerable Town with a good Haven. On the Eastern Coasts are Pahang, Potingeram or Potingaroon, Redoor, Patana a noted Mart Town, in a fruitful Soil; and Singora.

Tract

IV. The Kingdom of Siam, or Siam, borders on the South upon Malacca, and is bounded, on the North, by the Kingdom of Pegu; as also, on the South, by the Bay of Siam; on the East, by the Defarts of Cambodia, and the Kingdoms of Jangoma and Tango; and on the West, by the Kingdom of Mariaban and the Bay of Bengall; extending from the 9th. to the 15th. Degree of North Latitude, the Southern part, being the Isthmus of the Peninsula of Malacca, is narrow; but Northward it is of much larger extent. This Country yields for exportation, Cotton-Linens, Niper-Wine, Lacca, Palo d'aquila, Calamba, Sapon-wood, Camphora, Nutmegs and other Spices, Gold, Diamonds, Bezoar Stones, Silk, Musk, Sandal-wood and Ivory. In the mountainous Parts, a great number of Elephants are bred, and among others, some of a pure white Colour, which are particularly esteemed by the King, even so much as to take a Title from it, and calls himself King of the white Elephant.

This Kingdom, or Empire, comprehends several petty Kingdoms, deriving their Names from the Towns, which it will be sufficient only to recite in their Order: Near the Eastern Limits, are Bordelong, Ligor, Patanon, and Berdio, and on the other side are Juncalan, or Juncaloon, Tanasserim, a Sea-port Town and eminent Mart, affording good store of Wine, that is not unlike our Burnt Wine; Lugor, and Moro, Liam is seated on the innermost recess of the Bay of Siam, and near the Frontiers of Cambodia. In passing somewhat farther towards the North, we come to Bankock, near the Mouth of the River Menan, or Manan, and Odia, or Odiao, otherwise call'd India, and Siam, a large, well fortify'd and magnificent City, seated in a spacious Plain, and on an Island made by the Menan: It is the Metropolis of the whole Empire of Siam, the Royal Seat, and a noble Mart, where is found abundance of Gold, Silk, and other precious Merchandizes; seated on the mouth of the River Menan, being distant about 30 Leagues from the Sea-coasts, to the North, and 130 from the Town of Pegu, to the East, in the Latitude 12. 30. and Longit. 119. Lastly, above Odia, Sacoutay has an advantageous situation on the same River.

The Kingdom of Mariaban borders upon those of Siam and Pegu. It is a narrow Tract of Land lying along the Sea-Coast or Bay of Pegu, and abounds with Metals, medicinal Herbs, Corn, Oil and Fruits, Sealing Wax, and cartien Vessels. The Capital Town is likewise call'd Mariaban, and stands on a Bay of the same Name; where great quantities of Porcellane, or China-ware, are frequently made and transported to other Parts. Farther towards the North, are Marareo; Tugala, otherwise call'd Togalla or Tagalla; and Macon, or Alachem.

The Kingdom of Camboja, Cambodia, or Cambodia lies on the East of Siam, having Cochinchina on the North-East; and otherwise surrounded with the Sea, whereof that on the West is called the Bay of Siam, and the Eastern, of Cochinchina and Chiampa. It is water'd by the River Mecon, and its Towns on the Bay of Siam, are Tarvana, Langor, and Carol. The other Towns more remote from the Bay, are Lauweck, or Leuweck, otherwise called Rebecca on the River Macon, taken for the Capital, by M. Baudrand, but that honour is by others given to Camboja, or Cambodia, a noted Mart Town, seated also on the River Mecon 100 Miles more Southward, and not above 20 Leagues from the Sea.

After having given a Description of the principal parts of the Empire of Siam, the order of the matter leads us to the Kingdom of Anna, (in Latin, Regnum Annamiticum, sive Annamum) i. e. The Western, so call'd, because it was sometime the Western Part of China: Its situation is between the Kingdom of Siam, the Empire of Ava, China and the Bay of Tonquin, and M. Baudrand divides it into the Kingdoms of Cochinchina and Tonquin.

Cochinchina is the Southern part of the Annamitic Kingdom, so call'd (as some will have it) by the Portuguese, as it were, The Chinese: Cochin; by reason of the resemblance it bears with the Kingdom of Cochin in Malabar, and because of its neighbourhood to China. It is bounded on the West, by Cambodia; on the North, by the Kingdom of Tonquin; and on the East and South, by the Gulph of Cochinchina. The Soil is extremely rich, and brings forth abundance of Rice, with several sorts of Fruits; neither is there any want of Cinnamon, Pepper, Silk, the best kind of Metal, Rhinoceros's, Elephants of a large size: and convenient Harbours. This Country is govern'd by its own King, who is Tributary to the Emperor of China, and divided into Proper Cochinchina and Chiampa. Chiampa, otherwise termed, Ciam-Chiampa, Chiapaa, and Tjampa, which some Authors unite to Cambodia, takes up the Southern Part of Cochinchina, and is dignify'd with the Title of a Kingdom, under the Dominion of the King of that Country; its Capital Town being Pulocacem, or Pulocacim. Cochinchina, strictly taken, is of a much larger Extent than Chiampa, and the Western Part of it is inhabited by the Kemi, a particuare at this day situated in the Northern Part of lar People. The most remarkable Towns (according to M. Tavernier) are Bonten, with an excellent Harbour; Dinphoan; Tachan, Cavelea, Hai-so, a well fortify'd Place; Caccian, or Cacciam, which some make a Royal seat, where the Chineſes and Japoneſes carry on a great Traffick, although M. Tavernier takes no notice of this Town: And Sanſo, formerly a large and eminent Mart-Town which has fallen much to decay, ever ſince its Harbour was choak'd up with Sand.

IX. The other Part of the Annamitick Kingdom, is Tonquin that of Tonquin; bounded on the South, by Cochinchina, and the Bay of Cochinchina, or of Tonquin; on the Eaſt and North, by China; and on the Weſt, by the Kingdom of Brama, and a certain People nam'd Laji. The Air is temperate, and the Country which is for the moſt part Champain, is deſtitute of Corn and Wine; but abounds with Rice, Silk, Sugar, Oranges, Rhinoceros's, Elephants, Horſes and Tortoiſes. In this Kingdom are ſeveral Provinces, and many Cities, Towns and Villages; but the Europeans have little knowledge of them: Thoſe of chief note (as M. Tavernier informs us) are Cuaſay, Cuaſag, Kec-cio or Checho, near the Mouth of a River, which divides the Town into two Parts, being the Capital of the Kingdom, where the King uſually keeps his Court: And Bodego, ſeated a little higher. The King of Tonquin is very powerful, both by Sea and Land, and ſeveral Princes do him Homage for their reſpective Tenures; nevertheleſs, he himſelf is oblig'd to pay Tribute to the Emperor of China.

X. It remains only to account for the third and laſt Part of India beyond the River Ganges; that is to ſay, the Empire of Ava, the Bounds of which on the South, are the Empire of Siam; on the Weſt, the Bay of Bengall, and the Empire of the Great Mogul; on the North, Tartary; and on the Eaſt, China, and the Kingdom of Tonquin: A great number of Territories are compris'd within the Limits of this Empire, and in its Eaſtern Tract, towards the confines of China, ſeveral ſorts of People are to be met with; particularly, the Gweyes, thoſe of Ciocangna and the Layes, who are Vaſſals, or Tributary to the King of Ava. This Empire is likewiſe divided into many Kingdoms, the chief of which are thoſe of Pegu, Arracan, and Ava.

XI. The Kingdom of Pegu, heretofore the largeſt and moſt potent, is now almoſt ruin'd by the neighbouring Kings of Ava and Siam, and takes up the moſt Southern Part of the Avan Empire; It borders upon the Kingdoms of Siam, and Martaban, and upon the Bay of the ſame Name, and is alſo waſh'd by that of Bengall: Its Figure reſembles that of a half-moon, and it is enrich'd with colour'd Gems, which are ſaid to be found no where elſe, throughout the whole Eaſtern Continent, but here and in the Iſland of Ceylon, viz. Rubies, Topazes, Amethyſts, Jacinths, Sapphires, &c. This Country likewiſe abounds with ſeveral ſorts of Metal, Muſk, Fruits, and Elephants, and (as they ſay) depends on the Ju-riſdiction of the Kingdom of Ava. The moſt eminent Towns of theſe Parts are Fancoma, or Fangoma, Manar, Tangu, Marſin and Pegu, a famous Mart on a River of the ſame Name, generally reputed the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom, and the Royal Seat, with a moſt ſtately Palace, which nevertheleſs is call'd Siren, by M. Tavernier. Over againſt the Mouth of the River Pegu, in the Bay of Pegu, appears the Iſland of Siriaon, with a Town that takes its Name from it, and whichever term Siriaon; beſides thoſe of Cofmi and Ledo.

The Kingdom of Arracan, or Aracan, is ſituated in the middle between that of Pegu on the South, and the Territories of Bengall on the Weſt, and is waſh'd on the South by the Bay of Bengall. The chief Towns are, Aracan, near the Mouth of the River Cofmin, not far from the ſaid Bay, the Capital of this Kingdom; being diſtant ſix Miles from the Sea-coaſts, and 140 from the City of Pegu: Sira and Caloſaſcan.

The remaining Part of the Avan Empire is known by the Name of the Kingdom of Ava, although it contains ſeveral Kingdoms, deriving their Denominations from particular Towns, of which the moſt remarkable, are Chacomar, Tiporra, or Tipra, Caffubi, Bollia, Mandranella, Canarana, Brama, or Brema, Tranſana, Ava, the Metropolis of the Kingdom, and of the whole Empire, ſeated on the River Caypumo or Pegu, where the King keeps his Court, and a great Trade is manag'd with Jewels and Muſk: Prom, Totay, Lar-garay, and Tolema.

The whole Country of India beyond the Ganges is water'd with ſeveral great Rivers, and the moſt Eaſtern of them is Mecan, or Mecon: which flowing through the Territories of the Layes, as alſo along the Confines of the Kingdoms of Tonquin and Cambodia falls into the Indian Sea, near the Bay of Siam. Four other Rivers, which ſurpaſs the reſt, in many reſpects, take their Riſe out of the Lake of Chiamay, in the moſt Northern Tract of this part of India, extending itſelf 180 Leagues in Compas, and are call'd Menan, Caypumo, Cofmin and Caor; the firſt of which runs into the Bay of Siam, and the three others into that of Bengall.

The River Menan, being the largeſt and moſt Eaſtern, directs its courſe through the Kingdoms of Avan, Pegu and Siam, and diſcharges itſelf (as we have ſaid) into the Bay of Siam. The Caypumo, otherwiſe call'd Pegu, flows through the Kingdoms of Ava and Pegu, after having water'd both the Cities that bear thoſe Names, falls below the latter, into the Bay of Pegu, which is part of the Gulph of Bengall. The Cofmin waters the Kingdom of Ava and Aracan, and diſcharges itſelf into the Gulph of the ſame Name. Laſtly, the Caor, after having likewiſe paſſ'd through the Kingdom of Ava and Bengall, falls into the Eaſtern Mouth of the Ganges, and through that into the Gulph of Bengall. Theſe five Rivers, after the ſame manner as the Nile in Egypt, overflow the Lands lying round about, and render them extremely fruitful.

XV. Before we proceed to the Empire of the Great Mogul, we cannot but take ſome notice of King Solomon's Ophir; concerning the ſituation of which there are different Opinions among the Learned; ſome take it to be Hiſpaniola, an American Iſland in the Northern Ocean; and others will have it to be Pery, the Weſtern part of Southern America, on the Pacifick Sea. Again, ſome look for Ophir in the Eaſtern and Maritime part of Africa, where the Kingdom and City of Zela, or Zela, Caffaria;

Coffaria; or where Mosambic, a Sea-port Town stands, in the Southern Tract of Zanzibar. Several Authors place it in divers Territories of the East-Indies; many supposing it to be the Taprobana of the Ancients, and some make it the same with the Kingdom of Pegu. According to the Sentiments of Mercator, Julius Scaliger, Rhamusius, Orosius, Senkius and Linschoten, it is the Island of Sumatra; but Bochart, (who also makes mention of another Ophir in Arabia, near the Country of the Sabeans) and others, fix it in the Isle of Ceylon: Neither are there wanting some Persons who avouch it to be the Aurea Chersonesus, now call'd Malacca; unless that former Term (as some maintain) be not a Proper Name, but common to the Gold-bearing Countries; by which consequently may be understood Ceylon, Pegu, Malacca, Sumatra, and all the Coasts of India, that afforded those Things, which are mention'd in the Sacred History. Athanasius Kircher is of opinion, That Ophir is an Egyptian Word, and signify'd among those People, a great part of India, viz. Malabar, Ceylon, Malacca, Sumatra, Java, the Malacca-Isles, and other Provinces, that yield good store of Gold. To conclude, I am apt to believe that the Sacred Text with all the Difficulties, may be very well explain'd, if Ophir were fix'd in the East-Indies, not in any one particular Place, but in all the Sea-coast, from the Gulph of Bengall Eastward, where those Merchandizes were produc'd, which King Solomon's Fleet convey'd from thence, after a Voyage of three Years; not excluding China and the Islands of Japan.

As the Opinion of several Writers relating to the situation of Ophir, are very different, so their Sentiments are no less various with respect to King Solomon's Tarsis or Tharsis; which some will have to be the Mediterranean Sea, others the Indian Sea, and others, the Ocean. Some take Tarsis for Tarsus, a City of Cilicia, or the Country of Glicia itself; and others suppose it to be Tunis, Carthage, or Africa. Bochart produces two distinct Places under the Term of Tharsis, viz. one in Spain, about the Mouth of the River Baetis, or Guadaluver, near Cadiz, or Gibraltar at the beginning of the Straight of the same Name; and the other, to which the Ships sail'd from Eziongeber, in the Indian Ocean; lying next to Ophir; and perhaps on the Promontory of Cory, which somewhat resembles the Spanish Gibraltar, and is now call'd Cape Comorin. There are also some Persons, who having compar'd the several Places of Scripture, concerning Tarsis and Ophir, are induc'd to believe, not without good ground, (in my Opinion) that they were the same, or at least neighbouring Countries, or that Tarsis was a Town of the Country of Ophir, from which the Ships, because they were us'd to resort thither, took their Name, as at this Day the Smyrna Fleet derives theirs, from that noted Port: But it is difficult to determine where Tarsis was really situated.

1. Name.

HAVING pass'd through the Islands and the two Peninsulæ, we come now to the main Land of India, being the Empire of this great Monarch; formerly named Indostan or Hindoo's-Stan, i. e. the Country of the Hindoo's, who (as we have elsewhere said) were the People that originally inhabited this Land. But the Tartars about 300 Years ago having settled themselves here, and the latter Monarchs being of that Race, the Indians have given them the Name of Moguls, which in their Language signifies White, because these are not Yellow and Tawny like the ancient Hindoo's, but White and Red.

The

sands. The Bounds of Indoflan are Great Tartary, on the North; the Peninsula within Ganges, or the Kingdoms of Decan and Golconda, and the Bay of Bengall, on the South; India extra Gangem and the Kingdom of Thiber, which is part of Tartary, on the East; and Persia, on the West. The form of the Country being almost square, and extending 1500 Miles from East to West; and 1200 Miles from North to South: That is to say, from the twentieth to the fortieth Degree of North Latitude, and from the eighty second to the hundred and twelfth (or if you reckon to the Eastern Bounds of Candwana, it will be found to extend to the 115th.) Degree of Longitude.

Climate. The Air and Soil of so large a Country must needs be very different: For the South Part lying within the Tropick, and from the middle of the third Climate, is excessive Hot; but as the Northern Part lies under the middle of the sixth Climate, it is there much more Temperate, and Mr. Berneir tells us that in the Kingdom of Cassimeer the Air is as Temperate as in Europe.

Soil. The Land in general is very well water'd by Rivers, and during the hottel Months, the rainy Monsoons (which we spoke of in the Account of India in general) cool the Air, and water the parched Earth, so as to render it in the main very Fertile; producing Rice, and other Corn in great Plenty, most delicious Fruits of divers kinds, as Oranges, Lemmons, and most of the other sorts found in Europe, besides divers proper to themselves, as Mangos, Cayans, Jambos, Ananas, Brindoins, Tamarinds or Indian-Dates, Ficus-Indica, Myrobalans, &c. with many Plants that are very beneficial, and afford considerable Traffick to the Inhabitants, viz. Cotton, Indigo, Opium, Bettelec, Aloes, Spikenard, Saffron, &c. The Earth also yields them divers sorts of precious Stones, as Hyacinths, Granates, Jasper, Chrysolites, Amethysts, &c. also Diamonds and Rubies, but not so fine as those of Golconda and Pegu; and Minerals, as Salt-Petre, Sal-Armoniac, Borax, &c. also the Bezoar Stone found in the Stomach of a Wild Goat; and the Serpentine Stone, found in the Head of a Serpent, and esteem'd of great Virtue against Poison; with Rhubarb, Musk, Civet, Lacca, Camphor, Sandal-Wood, and other Druggs, Sugar, Ginger and Long Pepper. All which together with the Manufactures, as Calicoes and Mullings of all the finest sorts, raw and wrought Silks of many kinds; Skreens, Cabinets, Scritores, and other very curious Wood-Works, and many pretty Toys; are Commodities that please the World so well, Europe especially of late Years, that they fetch vast sums of Mony as well as all the Commodities of other Countries, and exceedingly enrich this Emperor and his Subjects.

II. Of the Prince. The Country therefore is exceeding Populous, and the King wonderfully rich and powerful, being absolute Lord and arbitrary Disposer of all his Subjects Persons and Estates; which makes that a great Part of the Land lies uncultivated: for Estates not descending to Children, and the Lands always at the Emperor's Command, the People have no inclination to grow rich in a visible manner, because that would cause their Destruction; and therefore their Wealth is commonly buried in the Earth, partly to conceal it, and chiefly to serve them in the other World, according to their foolish Superstition. For the same reason their Buildings are generally poor and mean; none but the Emperor's Favorites daring to build a fine House: lest he be turn'd out of it immediately.

But this mighty Monarchy is not of very ancient Date, for besides the Hindons already mention'd, we read in all Accounts of the ancient State of this Country, of the Potans a numerous People that possess'd Bengall and all the Provinces of this Empire, Eastward of the Ganges: and most of the other Provinces had particular Kings till the time of Eckbar, who was the Son of Homyayon, whose Father Mirzab Babor descended from one of the Sons of the Great Tamerlane, was the first of the Tartar-Race which at present sits on this Throne.

The Story in short is thus. At the Death of Tamerlan which happen'd soon after the Year 1400, Tartary was divided among his Sons, in which Division Mawarahnabara otherwise call'd Zagatha, the Province that lies on the North of Cabal and Cassimeer (two Provinces of India) fell to the Lot of Pir Mahomed, Son to the eldest Son of Tamerlan, from whom descended, as we have said, Mirzab Babor; who being expell'd his own Babor Country by the Usbegs his Neighbours, made himself Master of a great part of Indoflan, and dying in the Year 1532, left it to his Son Homyayon. He had Wars with his younger Brother that conspir'd against him, but was assisted by the Emperor of Persia, whose Daughter he married, and reigned till 1552, when dying he left his Kingdom to his Son

Eckbar, a Prince of great Valour, Wisdom and Fortune, to whom may more properly be imputed the Foundation of the present Monarchy; for it was he that extend'd it to the Grandeur we now see it, by the Conquest of Tatta, Cambaya, Bengall, Chitor, Cassimeer, and many other considerable Kingdoms. He died of a Poyson prepar'd for an Enemy, and by mistake taken by himself A. D. 1604, in the 53d. Year of his Reign: and left one Son named Sha Selim, who for rebelling against his Father had been imprison'd for some Years; and now at his Death some of the great ones endeavour'd to put him by, and advance his Son Cassiroo to the Throne; however, Sha Selim obtain'd the Crown, and took upon himself the Name of Jehan-Guire, or as it is corruptly writ Jehan-Fangheer: But as he had been an unnatural and ungrateful Rebel to his Father, he was now paid in his kind, and his Reign was full of Disturbances. His eldest Son Cassiroo began his Conspiracies with his Father's Reign, and in a little time appear'd at the Head of an Army against him, but was defeated and imprison'd the rest of his Life. After that his third Son Curroone, having had Success in the Conquest of Decan, and by that means obtain'd an Esteem in the Army, his Ambition prompt'd him to stir up for himself; accordingly he declar'd War, and fought a long and hazardous Battle with the Emperor's Army, but was at last defeated and forc'd to fly. Soon after a Civil Dissention happen'd on Account of Nourmabel, one of the Emperor's Wives, whom he was exceeding fond of, and permitted to govern him and the Empire just as she pleas'd; which gave great Dissult to the Ministers of State, and made them raise an Army to separate the King from this arbitrary Woman. And in Effect they seiz'd both him and her, but at the Emperor's Promise of Amendment released her, and soon after he made escape; so that the Lords for their safety joyn'd themselves with Curroone, by whom Casseroo in Prison had been kill'd, and Pervis the second Brother was dead, so that Curroone was now the eldest of Jehan-Guire's Sons. These Misfortunes broke his Heart, and Jehan-Guire died in the Year 1627; naming Sultan Bullochi the Son of Casseroo for his Successor. But he was oppos'd, first by the ambitious Nourmabel, who resolv'd to set up the fourth Brother Sultan Sherjar, to whom she had married her Daughter; but she was soon defeated by Bullochi, and Sherjar committed to close Imprisonment, and his Eyes put out: and next by Curroone, who during the absence of Bullochi in his Expedition against Sherjar got Possession of Agra, and caus'd himself to be proclaimed Emperor by the Name of Sha-Jehan; and soon after confirm'd himself on the Throne by the Deaths of Bullochi, Sherjar, the Sons of Pervis, and all the other Princes of the Blood, whom by the Assistance and Contrivance of Asaph-Chan, the Instrument of all the Male admittion in the late Reign, he caus'd to be murder'd by Villains in the Castle of Labor. But as he ascended the Throne by these bloody Steps, he was fain to be very cautious in his Government, and endeavour by mild and gentle treatment to sweeten the Minds of his Subjects and keep them firm to him. He was kept the more in awe by a counterfeit Bullochi, who was cherish'd and entertain'd by the Emperor of Persia as the true one, and ready to be made use of if Occasion offer'd. So that upon the whole, the Reign of Sha-Jehan was very peaceable and happy to the People, till the latter end of it; when through the Ambition of his Sons there were bloody Wars for four or five Years. Sha-Jehan had four Sons, Dara-Sha, Sultan Sijah, Awreng-Zebe, and Morad-Backbe: Who when they grew up manifest'd the same Ambition their Father had been guilty of; wherefore to prevent Mischief he separated them, by appointing them Governors of Provinces at distant Parts of the Empire, the eldest only being allow'd to tarry at Court. But in the Year 1655, the Emperor falling into a Sickness that oblig'd him to deny access to his Person, occasion'd a Suspicion that he was dead; which coming to the Princes Ears, they immediately each set forward to oppose their Elder Brother, and push for the Crown: Sultan Sijah arriv'd first, and was first defeated, but escap'd with Life and Liberty. Awreng-Zebe pretended no Ambition, but contenting himself with a private Life, joyn'd with his younger Brother Morad-Backbe, who both together march'd against Dara the eldest, defeated his Army, and seiz'd the Castle of Agra, and the Person of the Emperor. But as soon as he had

Awreng-Zebe done his Business, Awreng-Zebe threw off the Mask and seiz'd Morad-Backbe, whom he had only made a property of, that he might the easier defeat Dara, who fled to Guzerat, and endeavour'd to make Head again, but by the Subtilty of Awreng-Zebe he was defeated in all his Designs, and hunted about from place to place, till at last he fell into the Toil, and was deliver'd to him; who having expos'd him to view all over Agra, sent him Prisoner to Gualenr, where Morad-Backbe was also confin'd; and soon after, even Mamood the eldest Son of Awreng-Zebe was committed to the same place by his Father, though he had defeated his Uncle Sultan Sijah, the only remaining Brother; who escaping with Life, and flying to Aracam, was there killed: But this and the seizing the Castle of Agra, were Services too great to be given to a jealous Prince; for instead of creating a Love for his Son, it caus'd him to suspect that he might possibly make use of the Reputation and Interest he had obtain'd in the Army to an ill purpose, as he express'd in a Letter that fell into the Hands of Mamood; which so startled him that he fled to his Uncle Sijah and offer'd him Assistance, but was afterwards prevail'd upon to return to his Father upon Promise of Pardon; which notwithstanding he was committed close Prisoner. The Son of Dara had also been secur'd, and finally, as we have said, Sultan Sijah kill'd in Aracam; which left Awreng-Zebe the sole Possession of the Empire: accordingly in the Year 1660 he caus'd himself to be crown'd, though his Father was then living, and continued living till the Year 1666. Thus Awreng-Zebe ascended the Throne, which he still enjoys this present Year 1700, if not dead very lately.

The Wealth and Extent of this Prince's Dominions, together with the absolute Power he exercises, must necessarily render him one of the greatest and most puissant Emperors of the East; and according to the Vanity of the Princes of that part of the World, he assumes most pompous Titles, expressing himself the greatest Monarch of the World. His Revenues arise, 1. By Tributes of the Provinces, which we are told has amounted to 30 Millions Sterling per Annum. 2. The Emperor is general Heir to all his Subjects. 3. Presents are made to him upon every Access to his Person, besides many annual Presents. 4. By Duties on Goods exported and imported. And 5. By Merchandizing himself. And his mighty Wealth appears by the Magnificence of his Court, wherein he has seven Thrones, one whereof is of Massy Gold, and so beset with Diamonds and other pretious Stones, as to have cost, they say, above twelve Millions of Pounds Sterling; this is call'd Tamerlan's Throne, and was finish'd by Sha-Jehan; the rest also are exceeding rich. His Armies are vastly large, 40000 Elephants, and 250000 Horses are constantly maintain'd, and an infinite number of Men in constant pay.

These Princes of the Tartar Race were all of the Mahometan Religion, wherein Sha-Jehan especially was very zealous; and Awreng-Zebe made his Sanctity a great Pretence for opposing his Brothers, the one having no Religion and the other that of Haly; and in prosecution of that Zeal, after he came to the Crown he persecut'd the Indians, and hath in a manner expell'd their Religion; so that Mahometanism is at present the ruling Religion in Indostan.

What ought more to be said of Indostan, such as the wild Beasts, Mountains, ancient Religion, and Inhabitants, Discovery and first European Voyages thither: We have already spoken of in our account of India in general. As also of the Rivers, but of these however the Reader will find a more particular account at the end of the description of the Country; the division whereof is the next thing to be mentioned.

III. Indofan is by the Inhabitants divided into twenty general Governments called Sonbah, which are subdivided into many lesser Governments under the name of Serkars, i. e. Queftorships. But Foreigners usually confider this Empire as Compounded of feveral Kingdoms, or large Provinces; which according to the different Computation of Authors are reckon'd 35, 38, 39, or 40 in Number. We fhall choofe to follow this manner of Divifion, as being the only one exprefs'd in our Maps. And then we find feven Kingdoms or Provinces on the East, Five on the South, Thirteen in the middle, Seven on the North, And Seven on the West. The names whereof with the chief Cities in each are fhewn in this Table.

On the East lye these Seven Kingdoms.

Two Provinces sometimes attributed to Persia, and sometimes to Indofian, viz.

Cabul	Cabul
Candahara	Candahar
The chief Rivers of the Great Mogul's Empire, falling into	{ The Bay of Bengal { Ganges, receiving { Canda, Persely, Gement or Semena. Guenga
	{ The Bay of Indus { Padder Indus, receiving { Chenab Behat Nilab Ravee Caul.

IV. The particular description of each Province and City is as follows.

In entering the Mogul's Empire from India beyond Ganges, last described, we meet with these four Kingdoms viz. Kandwana, Udeffa, Jessual, and Mevat: which make the Eastern Frontier of this Empire; and lye from North to South in the mention'd order, between the River Perfely and the Empire of Avva. Kandwana the most Northern is seated between the 33d. and the 36. Degr. of Latitude on the Northwest of the Lake Chiamay, and near the Head of the River Perfely. It is a Country seated so far out of the way of Trade that we know little of it, only that the chief City is Karakantaka, seated on a small River that falls into the Perfely. The Kingdom of Udeffa lies next to it on the South, and is a large Province whose chief City Jekamat stands in it's Southern Limits. Besides which Neebal is represented by Travellers as a very considerable City, consisting of stately Buildings of Brick and Stone like ours. The Country enjoys a temperate Air and good Soil; inhabited by Hindows of civil Nature; and govern'd by a Raja or Prince, who owns no Subjection to the Mogul. Jessual, a Province of smaller extent but more frequented, lies Southward from Udeffa, on both sides the River Gumtrunk which falls into the Perfely: the chief City is Rajapore, seated on the River Gumtrunk, in the Lat. 31. 10. Longit. 112. Saizee or Johabad, seated also on the same River, is sometimes visited by our English Merchants; and more Northward stand Brinkalatre and Masfee, other Cities of this Kingdom. Mevat lies on the South of Jessual, and the North of Bengall: a small Province, whose Capital City is Narwal, seated in the Latitude of 39 D. Several other Towns of note are in this Province, whereof Hosipore and Navagar have the advantage of English Factories establish'd in them.

Adjoining to these Kingdoms, on the West, between the Rivers Perfely and Ganges, lye the three Kingdoms or Provinces of Panna, Pitav, and Gor. Gor the most Northward lies on the Borders of Tartary and China, having Kadwana on the South-East; the chief City of the same Name is seated on the River Perfely, near its Fountain, in the Latitude 30. 37. Pitav adjoyns to it on the South-West; a large Country govern'd by two Raja's tributary to the Mogul; the Northern part is subject to Raja-Rodorow whose chief Seat is Camow; and the South part is commanded by Raja-Mungo. The Capital City of the whole is Pitav, seated on the East side of the River Canda, which rising in the neighbouring Mountains falls into the Ganges in the Latitude of 36. Panna another very large Province lies on the South of Pitav, between the two Rivers Perfely and Ganges, whose confluence is it's Southern bounds; the chief City of the same name stands on the Perfely, in the Latitude of 35. and is said to have receiv'd its name from the Potans, a People once very considerable.

V. BENGALL the largest and most famous Kingdom of the Mogul's Empire, lies on the South and West of the Countries we have mention'd, along the Coast of the inner recess of the Sinns Gangeticus, otherwise call'd the Bay of Bengall, and the Banks of the River Ganges; which here falls into the same Bay: extending from the frontiers of the Kingdom of Arracan, and the River Caw on the East; to the boundaries of *Orix*a and the mouth of the River Guenga on the West; which is reckon'd 220 Leagues: and from the Sea Coast in the South, it extends Northward, to the borders of Sambal a little beyond the River Gemini; in the Latitude of 30. D. which makes about 120. Leagues. The Air of this Country is temperate and healthy as any in Indostan except Cassmere; and the Soil is rich and fruitful, being water'd with the River Ganges, that runs through the middle of it from North to South, and divides itself into two large branches, which are again subdivided into many smaller, before they fall into the Bay; the same River receives also divers smaller ones: and Rice, other Grains and Fruits are so plentifully produc'd here, that Bengall is sometimes sh'd the Storehouse of Asia; abounding also with Oxen, Sheep Hogs, Venison, Fowl and Fish: abundance of Elephants are found in the Woods, and made tame and very useful to the Inhabitants; here are also Rhinocerotes, Tygers and many other wild Beasts. For exportation they have these useful Commodities, viz. Ginger, Long-Pepper, Cotton, Silk, Sugar, Aloes, Civit, Walking-Canes, &c. but especially Manufactur'd Cotten-Linnen, as Muzlings, Calicoes, &c. of the finest sorts; Silks and Herba Stuffs, as Bengals, Elache's, &c. and Raw Silk of the finest sort next the Persian. The Inhabitants are employ'd either in manufacturing their Silk, Cotten and Herba, (which by the way, is the Rind of a Plant that being pill'd off yields a fine thread, which is woven into those pretty Stuffs, known to us by the name of this Country) or in Merchandizing, whereby they are enrich'd, and Civiliz'd so far as from vicious Pirats to become of a very courteous and affable disposition. This Kingdom had formerly a Prince of its own, who was a Potent Monarch; but overcome by the great Mogul in 1582, and the Country made a Province of his Empire. Afterwards the Governors he had appointed in it, set up for themselves; so that Sha-Jehan, the Father of Aureng-Zebe, was put to the trouble of conquering it a second time; since when it has been undisputedly subject to that Emperor: and is divided into four Parts, viz. 1. Bengall proper, otherwise nam'd the Government of Jagannet, being the Maritime part. 2. Patana the Eastern Part. 3. Elabus, or Heliobass, the most Northern; and 4. Prurop, Midland. Before we proceed to the account of the Cities 'tis necessary to Correct an Error very common in the Maps, which set down Bengall as the chief City, whereas indeed there is either no such Town, or at most but a very obscure one; our Merchants and Sea-men that have been there so often, know no such place, and according to the accounts of the situation of the City Bengall, it should seem they mean Chaitigan, a place of considerable Traffick, call'd Porto Majore by the Portuguese, seated at the mouth of the Eastern Branch of the Ganges, over against the supposed Bengall. The chief Cities of this Kingdom being Heliobass or Praya, suppos'd to be the Palibothra of Strabo and Ptolomy, which was the Metropolis of the Gangarides; it stands in the Northern Confines, at the Confluence of the Gemene with the Ganges, and is a very strong Fortification, built about a hundred Years ago, being a Stone Castle with a stately Palace, the Seat of the Governor of this part of the Kingdom; surrounded with three Walls

Walls and a deep Moat. The Indians pretend to shew here the Sepulchre of Adam and Eve, in an ancient Subterranean Cave. Bannares, on the East side the Ganges, is noted for an Indian University, as is also Nudnea. Cannowre on the West side the Ganger. Saferon near the great Pool Banraea, a spacious City of high Houses, built of a Fossil dug in the neighbouring Quarries and burnt to the hardness of Stone. Rotas, somewhat distant from the River to the South-West, is a Fortret's seated on an inaccessible Hill, and surrounded with three Moats full of Fish, and the Walls of that extent; as to inclose large Fields; all which render the place impregnable. Sommelpoore, notable for the fine Diamonds found in its River, supposed to be wash'd down from the neighbouring Mountains. Patana, seated on the West side of the Ganges, and not on the East as some Maps place it; is for Largeness and Richness not exceeded by any in the Kingdom; but its buildings are not answerable, being but low and mean; 'tis two Miles in length and very populous. This is the Residence of a Governor of the neighbouring Country, and the Seat of an English and a Dutch Factory; and especially notable for Salt Petre. A little below Patana lie the Ruins of Gorra, once the largest City in the World, being a hundred Miles in compass: It was the Seat of twenty six Kings of Bengall, every one whereof disdaining to live in the House of his Predecessor, built a sumptuous Palace, which chiefly contributed to the mighty extent of the Place: thus far Mr. Martin, an English Traveller in those parts. But Farber Tof with more probability tells us, the Walls are nine Miles in compass, and enclose the Ruins of many noble Palaces; at present the place is almost depopulated. Malda, a little distant from the River, is a large Town with a good Trade, and the Seat of an English Factory. Cassimbazar, seated at the Efflux of the Eastern Arm of the Ganges, in the Latitude of 26 D. is a City of very great Traffick, especially for Silk, whereof 'tis computed 20 thousand Bales are annually exported. Rojmahol, on the East side of the Ganges at a little distance from it, and on a small River that falls into it, and made a commodious Haven, which brought a considerable Traffick to the Town; which is well built, and was sometime the Seat of the Governor of Bengall. But Tavernier says the Haven is choak'd up, and the Trade remov'd to Dacca, somewhat more to the East, and seated on the little branch that runs cross the Island, made by the two Arms of the Ganges in Lat. 24. 30. and extends in Length, along the Banks of the River, 5 or 6 Miles. It is the Seat of the Viceroi or Governor of Bengall proper, and a place of very great Trade; resorted to by Merchants from China and divers parts of India, and is adorn'd with many good Buildings, especially the Houses wherein the English and Dutch Factories reside. 'Tis exceeding populous, very rich, and abounds with all Necessaries. Satigan stands near the same Latitude as Dacca, on the Eastern branch of the Ganges, a little below where the River Caor falls into this Stream; and was a place of considerable Trade, but declin'd since Huguely is grown up. Chatigan stands on the same branch of the Ganges near it's mouth, and is a place of considerable Traffick, and by way of Eminence call'd Porto majore by the Portuguese: Over against it on the same River, the common Maps place Bengall, whereof we have already spoken. Huguely or Oueguelly stands on the Western or main Stream of the Ganger, on a small Island in the middle of the River, about 30 Leagues from its mouth, in the Latitude 24. 10. Longitude 106. 30. of whose Original we are told, that the Portuguese about 100 Years ago came hither, and built little Huts to vend the Commodities they had brought from divers neighbouring Parts, and were so far encourag'd by Eckbar, the Mogul then Reigning, that they built a City, and had the entire possession of it, till turning Pirates the Mogul expel'd them; but the City however increas'd, and is become a large, populous and wealthy place, the chief in all these Parts for European Trade, at least for the English, who have a very considerable Factory here: as have also the Dutch. Further to the South-West on the Bay of Bengall, and at the Mouth of the River Guengza, in the Lat. 22. Longit. 103. stands Ballasore, formerly nam'd Balapur, a reasonable good Haven and a Town of great Trade, where also the English have a Factory. But this and Huguely have both the misfortune to stand in a bad Air, which makes them at sometimes of the Year subject to unhealthiness. Arsjpoore stands on the same Coast, somewhat more to the South: which, as also Piepely, Bangia and Angelim, are Towns of Trade. Many other considerable Towns are in this Kingdom, but these are the chief that are known to us Europeans, and as many as the brevity of this work will let us enumerate: and therefore shall pass on to Orixa, a Province formerly part of the Kingdom of Galconda, but now entirely cut off, and made part of the Mogul's Empire; it lies between the River Guengza, on the North, and Galconda, on the South; that is from the 20th. to the 23d. Degree of Latitude. The chief Town which gives Name to the Province, stands in the middle of it on a Hill, 100 Miles from the Sea. Besides which Ramana, seated on the River Guengza; Carapara, Manicapatan and Palkor on the Coast, are reckon'd principal Towns of this Province: whose South part bears the Title of Talengand, and is the ninth of the twenty general Governments of the upper India. From hence crossing the River Guengza, we enter the Kingdom of Berar, a small Province seated on the West of Bengall, on the North of Orixa; and between them two Malvay and Chandis. The chief City is Schapor, not very considerable, nor are there other Towns of any great note mention'd by Travellers in this Country. Chandis or Kandish that lies next to it is a Kingdom of larger Extent; bounded on the South, by Orixa and Deccan; on the North, by Malvay and Chitor; on the East, by Bengall, and on the West, by Guzarati. It has the advantage of a good Soil, being water'd with the Guengza, and the River Tapre which rises in its Mountains and passing Westward falls into the Bay of Cambaya at Suru. Upon this River stands the Capital City Brampoore, whence sometimes the whole Kingdom is denominated, a large place, but the Buildings low, and the Air unhealthy; it is fortified with a strong Castle and reckon'd a good Frontier, where the Governor resides, who is commonly a Son or some near Relation to the Emperor: The Town is noted for the manufacture of fine Callicoes interwoven with Gold, which they vend abroad to divers vers Countrys: A few Miles North from Bram-pore stands Hassera, a Fortrefs of impregnable Strength, being seated on a craggy Mountain, and furnished with 600 peices of Ordinance. Tawnere, seated on the River Tapte or Swally, is a considerable City, as is also Moudoue, on the Frontiers of Chitor. Canon, a City from which the Country is by some named the Government of Canon; in whose neighbourhood stand Saddise, Caddor, and Savbon. The South part of this Kingdom is inhabited by Baneans, who were for some time govern'd by a King of their own: Their chief Towns are Dayaote (whereof the King was allow'd to keep his Title after the Mogul had conquer'd him) Netherbery and Sayote: And on the Mountains in the South-West is the Country formerly possess'd by a certain Raja nam'd Par-tajpha.

The Kingdom of GUZARAT, or as the Portuguese term it CAMBATA, lies next to Chandis, on the West; being bounded by Chandis and Chitor, on the East; the Indian Ocean, on the West and part of the South; the Kingdom of Decan bounding the other part on the South; and Jessmere, on the North. It extends from the 19th. to the 25th. Degr. of North Latitude, that is, about 360 Miles from North to South; and from the 83d. to the 92d. Degr. of Longitude, which makes about 450 Miles, from East to West: The two Bays of Cambata, on the West, and Indus, on the East, make the greatest part of it a kind of Peninsula: and the whole Country lying either on the Sea or on the navigable Rivers of Tapta, the Gemini, and the Padder; all which run through it, and fall into the two Bays above mention'd; render this Land of great Traffick; the Soil also producing not only all Necessaries for Life, but likewise great plenty of Cotton, Indigo, Opium, Aloes, and many other Drugs; Chrystal, Cornelians, Rubies, Supphirs, Agates, Topazes, Jasper, and other precious Stones. The Inhabitants also make fine Cotton-Linens, Silks, Cabinets, &c. The exportation of these Commodities enrich the Inhabitants, and the Customs yield the Mogul a vast Revenue, insomuch, that Guzarat is look'd upon as one of the best Jewels in his Crown. The Tropic of Cancer passes through the vertical Point of Amadabat, so that the greatest part of this Kingdom lies in the Torrid Zone, and renders the Air so scorching, that if the rainy Season should fail (as it did in the Year 1630) a Famine would ensue. This Kingdom was formerly govern'd by its own Prince; but is now a Province of the Mogul's Empire, and govern'd by his Deputy, stiled Sultan, who resides in Amadabat. But the Western Part is inhabited by Rafbootes, who are notorious Robbers and Outlaws.

Before we proceed to the Cities of this Kingdom, we will speak of the Jurisdiction of Basaim, which is the Coast on the South of it towards Decan, and comprehends the Island of Bombay, with two or three other small Islands, and the City of Basaim, formerly subject to the King of Guzarat, but conquer'd by the Portuguese. The City Basaim stands on the Continent, in the Latitude of 19. 30. of magnificent Structure and good Strength, being surrounded with high Walls, wherein are eleven Bastions, and the Town inhabited by about 300 Families of Portuguese Gentry and Nobility; govern'd by a Captain with twelve Assistants, whose Power extends over a great many neighbouring Villages and Islands. Bombay that was formerly one of them, was surrender'd to the English in the Year 1663, according to the Articles of Marriage between King Charles II. and Donna Catherina. This Island is therefore possess'd by the English Nation, and though a small one, being but 20 Miles round, is considerable on Account of its commodious Haven (whence they say the Island was nam'd Bon-bay) and Situation for suppressing the Malabar Pirates who used to infest these Coasts: It is situate over against Chaul in Decan, in the Latitude of 18 D. The chief Town is about a Mile long, and pretty well fortified, having been considerably improv'd since the English have had it. The Island was for a few Years govern'd by the King's Deputy, but at the Request of the East-India Company, it was granted to them under Homage, and has been ever since under the Jurisdiction of the President of Surat, who appoints a Deputy Governor here. The Land has Woods of Coco-Trees, which with Salt is the chief Product of the Island.

On the North of Bombay lies the Island Canorein, denominat'd from the City, once famous, but now ruin'd: the chief Place now being Tanaw. This Island is a fertile Land of about 70 Miles Circumference, and possess'd by the Portuguese. The Islands Carania and Elephantino, possess'd also by the Portuguese, lye near Bombay, and are comprehend'd among those called the Salfete Islands. From whence we shall now pass to the Continent.

The chief Cities of Guzarat are, Surat seated at the Mouth of the River Tapte or Swalley, in the Lat. 21. D. Longit. 91. D. a place formerly inconsiderable, but in these last hundred Years, by means of the English and Dutch Trade, it is increased to a large, populous, and rich City, surrounded with a good Wall, and guarded by an old Castle said to be founded by Tamerlain; the Houses in general are low and mean, but the English Company's House is a noble Building of squared Stone; as is also those of the Dutch and French; and some of the Baneans and Moorish Merchants have fine high Houses with Terraces at top. The City is guarded by 1500 Soldiers, besides the Garison and Governor in the Castle, and 30 or 40 peices of Ordinance: The Haven has a Barr of Sand cross it, so that the Ships of greater Burthen are fain to lye without, at Swally-hole about 4 Leagues from the Town. But notwithstanding this Strength the famous Raja Sevagy (of whom we have spoken in our Account of Decan) entred the City in the Year 1663, burnt and pillaged it, carrying away a mighty Booty; at which time the English President Sir George Oxendine so well defended himself and the Merchants, that not only the Company gave him a Medal, but the Emperor presented him with a Robe of Honour, and gave our Nation an abatement of 2 and half per Cent. in the Customs; but this has been since revok'd. Surat is seated in a fertile, pleasant Country, and is a place of vast Traffick for all sorts of Indian Commodities, which being begun and carried on chiefly by the English, our Nation hath peculiar Privileges above others. The Company's Affairs are manag'd here by a President and Council, who direct and govern the Factories at Amadabat, Agria, and and other inland Places; also the Trade to Persia; and in general, all the Factories Westward of Cape Comorin. The President lives in great State; being always honourably attended, and hath a Salary of 500 lib. per Annum. Daman, possess'd by the Portuguese, stands about 50 Miles South from Surat, and is a Place of good Strength and Trade. Baroche, about as far North from Surat, stands on the River Gemene, which 20 Miles below falls into the Bay of Cambaya: It is pleasantly seated on a Hill, adorn'd with handsome Buildings, and enrich'd by a very good Trade in Cotton-Linens, which are made here, and better whiten'd than elsewhere, and for that reason the English have a House there. Cambaya, whence, as we have said, the Kingdom is sometime denominated, is seated on the inmost recess of the Bay to which it gives name, in the Latitude of 22 D. Longitude 90 D. It is describ'd by Authors as a place of much better Structure than the Cities of Indostan commonly are, and was a Place of very great Traffick, so as to be call'd the Cairo of India: But the Sea is fallen away, so as to leave the Haven quite dry at low water; and that perhaps may be the reason that the Trade also has left it. The ebbing and flowing of the Tide here is very remarkable, for it rolls in with such impetuosity, that an Arrow out of a Bow cannot keep pace with it, and falls away as fast. Goga, a City of good Trade with a safe Harbour, stands on the West-side of the same Bay, about 20 Leagues from Cambaya; it was burnt by the Portuguese at the time of the Siege of Dio. As was also Antote, once a considerable City on the same Bay. In the middle of the South Coast of the Peninsula of Cambaya, lies the Island and City of Dio, in the 20 D. 40. M. of North Latitude, and the 87 D. of Longit. It is a small peice of Land, of about a League in Length, and half so much in Breadth, which is cut off from the main Land by a small Branch of the Sea that flows between. The Portuguese got footing there in the Year 1535, and built a Fort; which was soon after attacked by Bair King of Guzerat, but so well defended, that he was forc'd to raise his Siege; afterwards in the Year 1546, his Son Mamood besieged it again with an Army of 40000 Men, who for several Months attack'd it with great Vigor, but were so valiantly oppos'd by the Portuguese, that in the end they were beaten off, and have never since return'd. The City was formerly very considerable, on Account of the Trade maintain'd by its Inhabitants to Persia and India: But it is now declin'd, and neither the City nor Fort much noted at present. Pate, seated on the same Bay, a few Leagues West from Dio, is a large City, and was formerly considerable for its fair Buildings and great Trade; but the Rasbootes have often plunder'd it and spoil'd both. Mangero, still more Westward, is a Place of good Trade for Cotton-Linnen, &c. and has an English Factory. Faquette, on the Western point of this Peninsula is a fair Town with a famous Pagod or Indian Temple, which sometimes gives Name to the Country. Lastly, Amalabat, a very large City, seated within Land, about 18 Leagues North from Cambaya, being the Seat of the Viceroy, may properly be reckon'd the Metropolis of the Kingdom: It is a Place of great Trade for Calicoes and other Cotton-Linens, Indigo, Opium, precious Stones, and other valuable Goods; and therefore an English Factory resides in it.

Thus have we travell'd through the Eastern and Southern Provinces of this Empire of Indostan; proceed we now to the midland Parts, and view the Kingdoms of Chitor, Malwa, Ranas, Narwar, Agria, Gualcor, Bando, Delly, Jenupar, Sambal, Bacar, Jamba, and Pengab, or Lahor.

Chitor, lies next to Guzerat, being bounded by that Kingdom, on the West; Malwa, on the East; Chandis, on the South, and Raja Ranas, on the North: Its Extent is about 120 Miles from North to South, and about half as much from East to West. The chief City Chitor for Magnificence and Antiquity did formerly outvie all the Cities in India; its Name signifying Mirror of the World, and its ancient Name was Taxilla, suppos'd to be the Place whence Porus issued against Alexander: The Castle of this Place was so strong that Eckber esteem'd the taking of it, one of his most important Conquests: but its Glory is pass'd away, and 'tis now but an ordinary Place. Chetipore, or Chitipur, being more noted at present on Account of its considerable Trade in Calicoes call'd Chites, whence they say the Town had its Name. Bilmal; Mudre; and Rudrepore; have been Places of Grandeur and Note anciently, but now obscure. The Kingdom of Malwa adjoins to Chitor, having that on the West; Bengal, on the East; and Bezuar, on the South. The chief Towns are Ugen by some call'd Ongel, seated on the West-side of the River Gemini, by some reckon'd the Capital of the Province; but by others, that Honour is given to Rantipore, seated on the East-side of the same River more Northward, and famous for a strong Castle, which serves for a Prison to Noblemen that fall under the Mogul's Displeasure. Calceda, the ancient Regal Seat of the King of Mandoa, whose Dominions extended far. Sarampora. Syranga or Seronga, a large Town where fine painted Calicoes are made. And Nader, another Town of large Extent, seated on the top of a steep Hill. On the North of Chitor and the West of Malwa lye the Territories of Raja Ranas, a Prince of ancient Extract, even descended from Porus, they say; and was the last of the Rasboote Race that became Tributary to the Great Mogul. The Castle of Gurchitto, seated on a Rocky Mountain, and famous for its impregnable Strength, is his Place of Residence; as is also sometimes Candera, the other chief Town in this Jurisdiction. Northward from Raja Ranas lies the Kingdom of Bando, a pretty large Country but Mountainous and Barren. The City which gives Name to the Kingdom, stands in the 29 Degree of Latitude, about 150 Miles West from Agria; it is an ancient Place, but not very considerable. Almere or Asmere, the Capital of a Government of the same Name, stands more Southward near the River Padder; the Tomb of a Mahumetan Saint buried here, is richly adorn'd, and visited from all Parts with great Devotion. The City is large, but of ordinary Structure; wall'd and moated round, and defended by a very strong Castle at the top of a Hill. Godty, formerly a considerable City, seated in the most fertile part of the Kingdom. Felowe, a Castle of good Strength. On the East of Bando lies the Province of Gualcor, a narrow Tract of Land between Agria on the North, and Malwa on the South; whose chief Town Gualcor or Gualera, is seated on a craggy Mountain, in the Latit. 27 D. and very well fortified, having a most advantageous Situation among inaccessible Rocks, and improv'd by many artificial Fortifications: Inomuch that the Castle is made the repository of a great part of the Mogul's Treasure; and a Prison for many Princes whose Birth gives Jealousy, or Misdemeanors Offence, to the Emperor: and 'tis here the present Emperor Aurang-Zebe confined his Brothers, Nephews, and his two eldest Sons. More Eastward is the Province of Narvar, bounded on the North, by the River Semena which parts it from Sambal; on the South, by Mountains that divide it from Bengall; on the East, with the Province of Elabafs; and on the West, with the Kingdom of Agra. The chief Cities of this Country are Gebud and Ouden; the former seated on the River Eugenes, which flowing through Narvar and part of Elabafs, falls into the Ganges; whereof nothing considerable is mention'd by Authors. The latter stands more Northward, and is a very ancient and formerly notable Place, as the ruins of its Castle declare; 'tis a Place of some Trade, especially for Rhinocerot's Horns, which are much used and valued in India: Not far from this Town is seen the Vestigia of an old Castle nam'd Radichand, a Place of Devotion mention'd by Purchas. On the North of this Province and on the other side of the River Semena, M. de la Robbe places a Country which he calls Maroucha; omitted in other Maps, who make the Kingdom of Sambal extend quite to the River. However, he mentions these Towns as seated in its Bounds; viz. Gianabad, Aurengabad and Menepora. The Kingdom of Sambal lies on the North of the Semena and the West of the Ganges; having Agra for its Western Bounds, and Bacar for the Northern. This chief City from which the Country is denominated, stands on the River Ganges, in the 31 Deg. of Latitude, and has the advantage of a pretty good Trade. A day or two's Journey from thence to the West stands Sanjaran a populous and trading City; where is seen a most magnificent Sepulchre of an ancient Heathen King.

Northward from hence lies the Kingdom or Province of Bacar, between the River Ganges and the Province of Delly; whose chief City Bicanor stands on a small River that falls into the Ganges.

And farther Northward is the Province of Jamba, a mountainous Country possess'd by certain Rajas who are Tributary to the Mogul; of these Raja-Decampergas hath a large Tract of Land in the North-West part, whereof the chief Town is Caltery: and Raja-Mansa, who is reported a Prince of vast Wealth, possesses the North-East part towards the Ganges, whereof Serenager is the chief Town. But Jamba which is reckon'd the Capital is subject to the Mogul, and seated more Southward on a small River that falls into the Ganges.

AGRA, which some call Indostan by way of Excellence, as being the principal Kingdom of the Empire, is seated between the 27th. and the 30th. Deg. of Latitude, and between the 97th. and the 101. Deg. of Longitude; bounded on the North, by Delly; on the South, by Gualcor and Malvay; on the East, by Sambal and Narvar; and on the West, by Bando: It is water'd by the large River Semena, which runs cross the Kingdom, receiving in its way the Tchembel, a River (though much smaller than that) reckon'd as large as the Thames at London. These two Streams water the Land, and make the Soil Fertile in Oranges, Lemmons, and many other Fruits excellent in their kind; great plenty of Rice, and especially Cotton and Indigo, which are the chief Commodities they send abroad. Agra, the Metropolis of the Kingdom and of the whole Empire, seated on the River Semena, about 60 Miles above its Confluence with the Tchembel, in the 29th. Deg. Latit. is now reckon'd the largest and most populous City in India, being nine Miles in Length, built in form of a Half-Moon, along the Banks of the River: Authors speak of its Antiquity, and make it founded by Bacchus, and call'd Dyonisia, afterwards Negara; or, as others, Cyrus built it, and gave it the Name of Agradamus; but according to Hackluyt, the Name of Agra was given it by the Tartars, and so the Structure is much more modern: at least thus much is certain, that it was but a small inconsiderable Place before the Year 1566, when the Emperor Eckbar chose it for his place of Residence, and built a Palace of Stone so very noble, that Father Töfi thinks it deserves to be rank'd with the Wonders of the World; it is four Miles in Compass, and contains the Courts of Judicature, &c. We have not room to describe the Magnificence of this Palace, but must refer the Reader to Herbert, Tavernier and Berneir, for more particular Accounts of it. The Nobility also have stately Houses of Brick or Stone (whereof there are large Quarries of a very beautiful sort, not far from Agra) but the common Buildings are mean, and the Streets narrow and dirty: The City is not wall'd, and only moated round, but has a strong Castle seated on a Hill for its defence. This is a Place of great Traffick, being resorted to by Merchants from China, Persia, all parts of India, and by the English and Dutch: Our Nation were us'd to maintain a Factory there, but the long distance from Surat (being above 600 Miles) and the Hazards and Difficulties they underwent in passing through the Countries of many Rajas and Rasbootes has made them withdraw that, though they still maintain a Trade thither. Over against Agra on the other side the River stands Secandra, a stately Town, or rather Suburbs to the City, adorn'd with many fine Buildings, curious Gardens, and especially the magnificent Tombs of Eckbar, and the Queen of a succeeding Emperor. Not far from Agra stands Fettipore, which the same Eckbar founded, and built many stately Structures, intending to have made it outvie all others, but the Water proved unwholsom, and forced him to leave it. Samonger, a Village on the South of Agra, is famous for the Battle between Dara and Aurang-Zebe. Doulpere, on the Tchembel, is a Place of incredible Strength. Byana, formerly a large and fair City, now ruin'd, but still gives Name to a Country of 50 Miles Circumference. Scanderbad, not far from it, is suppos'd to have been founded by Alexander. Itay, seated on the Semena, 100 Miles East from Agra, was formerly the Seat of the Potan Kings, but now in a ruin'd state, except the Castle which stands on a high precipitous Mountain, and is fortified with a double Wall.

On the North-West of Agra lies the Province of DELLY, denominated from its chief City, which standing in a purer Air, tempted the Emperor Sha-Jehan Father to the present Mogul, about 50 Years ago to build a stately Palace and new City there, which from him is denominated Jehan-abad, i. e. the City of Jehan, seated on the River Semena, about 120 Miles above Agra; and is one of the Places where the Great Mogul resides. The Palace is about two Miles in Compass, being a Semicircle deriv'd from the River, divided into two very large Courts of Magnificent Buildings, at the end whereof stands the great Hall of Audience (whose Roof is supported by thirty two stately Pillars of Stone four foot square, whereof some are inlaid with precious Stones) and therein the rich Throne of the Great Mogul, which as M. Tavernier, who saw it, assures us, is of massy Gold set with Diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, &c. and judg'd to be worth near five Millions of Pounds Sterling; but it is said to have cost above 12 Millions. The Scraglio, the Fortress and the Mosque are proportionably Grand, but we have not room to particularize; the Reader may consult Tavernier and Berneir. The new City is about eight Miles in Compass, and surrounded with Brick-Walls; to which may be added a large Suburb, and the old Delly on the other side the River, but join'd by a Bridge; and then the Place will be found four Miles long. The Country about it is pleasant and fruitful, and the Air more cool and wholesome than that of Agra, which being seated in a sandy Soil is scorching Hot. The old City was formerly a very Magnificent one, where the Potan Kings used to be inaugurated; it had 50 Gates and nine Castles, but is now ruined. There is another Delly, where lies inter'd in a most magnificent Monument the Father of Eckbar. The Government of this Province is reckon'd the first in the Empire. From Delly passing on Northward you enter the Province of Jenupar or Jenapar, where are the Pits of Sal Armoniac. The chief City Jenupar stands in the 33 Deg. of Latitude, at the Confluence of two small Rivers which compose the Dawindee, that flows through this Country and that of the Hindowns, and falls into the Indus; 'tis a handsome Town, but not very eminent. Syrina, on the same River, more to the West, famous for the fine Garden, Summer-House, and Scraglio of the Moguls. Tanaseri, in the South-part, is noted for the Baths esteem'd Holy and much resorted to. In the Mountains which part this Province from Delly, the River Semena, otherwise call'd Gemene hath its Source, which after a Course of 400 Miles falls into the Ganges at Holobasi. Lastly, the Kingdom of Pengab, otherwise call'd Labor, is seated more Northward, between Jenupar, on the South; Cassimere and Bankish, on the North; Jamba, on the East; and Multan and Attock, on the West. This is the third Government of the Empire, being often honour'd with the Emperor's Presence in his Palace at Labor, once the Metropolis of the Empire, and the Staple of Trade for Indigo, and in those days a magnificent and wealthy City; but since these Emperors have extended their Dominions so far Southward, Agra and Delly are more conveniently seated for their Residence, so that this City is declin'd: The Streets are regular and well pav'd, the Houses all of Wood, but more high than is usual in these Parts: The Castle or Palace is magnificent and stately; the Courts large, the Buildings high and uniform, mostly of Brick, adorn'd with fine carv'd Works, and the Gardens large, pleasant and fill'd with excellent Fruit: The Extent of this City I dare not name, for when an Author tells me the Streets are 15 Miles long, and the City threecore Miles in Circumference, I cannot expect to be believ'd in transcribing him. Fettipore or Fettyabat; a pleasant Town, with a Cattle, seated on the South of Labor. Jemmer, to the East of Labor, is the Seat of the Raja of Bosson, who pays Tribute to the Emperor. And Emenbad, on the North of Labor: These are the Cities most noted; in any others are in this Province that were formerly famous, but they with the whole Province are now declin'd. And thus having pass'd through the third Division of this Empire, viz. the Eastern, the Southern and the Midland Provinces; we shall now proceed to

The Northern Kingdoms, viz. Naugrauc, Siba, Kakere, Bankish, Cassimere, Attock, and Cabil.

Naugrauc is a very large Country, extending VII. from the Borders of Labor in 32 Degr. to the Naugrauc 40 Degree of North Latitude, where it is bounded by Kakere, having Jamba and Sibi on the East; and Labor and Bankish on the West. The Land is very Barren and Mountainous, and a great part of it subject to the Raja Talluck-cha. The chief City Naugrauc stands near the head of the River Ravee in the Lat. of 34. and Long. 99. and is a place of good Trade for Druggs and other Commodities brought from Tartary. Callamacha or Fallamaka, more Eastward, is seated among craggy Rocks, out of which issue Fountains that seem to cast out Flames; and on that account worshipped by the Idolatrous People. The Province of Siba lies on the North-East of Naugrauc, divided into two parts by the River Ganges, and surrounded by Mountains: Its chief City Haridwar stands in the 40th. Deg. of Latitude, on a Lake through which the River Ganges passes, and near a Rock which the People fancy to be like a Cow's Head; and that Animal being sacred among them, the Rock and the River Ganges that falls upon it in a kind of Cataract, is worshipped as Holy. The City enjoys a pretty good Trade, and the Country is reasonably fertile. Next to Siba lies the Kingdom of Kakere, the most Northern of all the Mogul's Dominions, as bordering upon Tartary, whereof it was part till the Year 1609. 'Tis a Country of very large extent, being 600 Miles in length, but not proportionably broad. It is a very Mountainous and Barren Land, but enjoys the Benefit of a good Trade from Tartary and China. The chief Cities are Dankalen in the Western part; and Parbola more East, and near the Ganges; which River hath its Source in the Mountains Cascafus, which part this Country from Tartary. Gor, which lies on the East of this Country, we have spoken of among the Eastern Provinces of the Empire; and therefore now return South-West over the Dalanger Mountains into Bankish, which is seated between Siba on the East, Cassimere on the West; Kakere on the North, and Labor on the South. 'Tis a Country not large nor remarkable: The chief City is nam'd Beisbur, but not considerable or known to us.

Cassimere. The Kingdom of Cassimere lies next to it on the West, between the Mountain Caucasus which divides it from Tartary on the North, the Kingdom of Pengab on the South, and Attock on the West. It lies between the 36 and the 40 Degrees of Latitude, and enjoys a clear and healthy Air, as temperate as in Europe; and a fruitful well cultivated Soil, abounding with all the necessaries of Life; and so far exceeding all the neighbouring Provinces (where a scorching Heat parches the Ground) that Cassimere is stiled the Paradise of India. The Northern parts are Mountainous, rising by Degrees one above another; the lower cover'd with Cattel, and all kinds of innocent Game, without Lyons, Tigers, Bears, Serpents or any sort of noxious Creatures; and the higher cover'd with Snow; which melting, makes those many Rivulets that water the Country, and make it so fruitful, that it looks like a large Garden of Rice, Corn, Saffron, Hemp, Apricocks, Peaches, Apples, Pears, Plums, Vines, &c. which as Mr Bernier tells us, astonished him to see himself of a sudden, out of the stifling Heat of the Torrid Zone, into the temperate Freshness and Fertility of Europe. The People also are of fair Complexion and European Beauty, Ingenious, Witty and Industrious. The City, which gives name to the Country, is about two Miles long, and a Mile and half broad, seated on a Lake of fresh Water, and a little River issuing from it; over which are two Bridges: The Houses are built of Wood, two or three Stories high, and many of them adorn'd with pretty Gardens: The City is not walled; but is surrounded with Houses of Pleasure and Gardens; among which the King's is especially delightful, being furnished with curious Fountains, Chanals, Bowers, &c. Svenakar is the next considerable City, being three Miles in circumference, and by some reckon'd the Capital of the Kingdom; 'tis seated in the Southern Confines towards Pengab. Achiavel, notable for an admirable House of Pleasure of the Mogul's; and Sand-Brary for an Heathenish Temple, and wonderful Spring, which draws Votaries to it, are the other places of chiefest note in this Kingdom. Sanson places the Country of a certain Raja nam'd Tibbon in its Northern part.

Attock. On the South-West of Cassimere lies the large Province of Attock, between Cabul on the North, and Multan on the South, inhabited by a peculiar People call'd Putans, of low Stature, but courageous Temper, not subjected to the Mogul before the Year 1592. The City whence the Province is denominat'd stands at the Confluence of the two Rivers Chanab and Sind, and is one of the best and strongest Garrisons in all the Empire, which no Foreigner is permitted to enter without a Pass from the King. The other chief Towns are Candabara, said to be a handsome City, and a place of great Trade. Puckow, Daddos, Ducha, Langora, Vageffon, and Hassanabdal. On the North of Attock lies the Province of Cabul, the Boundary of the Mogul's Empire on the North-West, having Tartary for it's Northern, and Persia for its Eastern Bounds. It is a Barren unpleasant Country, but by means of its convenient situation enjoys a good Trade: its chief City Cabul, being reported as large as Grand Cairo, and resorted to by Merchants from Persia, China and Tartary, for buying of Cattel, especially Horses, whereof vast numbers are hence exported: The City is fortified by two strong Castles, and accommodated with many large Inns for the reception of Strangers. The other chief Towns are Ghidal, Parna, Chere-cu'loz, and Gorehand, with which we finish our account of the Northern Provinces.

The Provinces of the Western Part, or last Division of this Empire, on or near the Frontiers of Persia, are Multan, Haican, Buckor, The Country of the Hindowns, Jesselmee, Sorett, and Tatta. VIII.

The Province of Multan is seated between Attock on the North, the River Ravee on the South, Pengab on the East, and Haican on the West, extending about 100 Miles either way. The River Indus runs through from North to South, and other smaller Streams contribute to water the Land, which is very fertile, in Sugar and Opium, and affords a mighty Traffick to the Inhabitants; who besides make great Quantities of Callico's, &c. which they vend to Agra, Tatta and elsewhere: So that this Country, especially it's chief City, is inhabited by wealthy Banians. The chief City Multan is seated on the River Indus, in the Latitude of 34 D. and is a considerable place on account of the Manufactures of Calicoes and other Linens, and the number of rich Trading Banians that live in it: but was formerly more populous, being heretofore the Thorowfare between Persia and Labor; but the Road lies now through Cabul. The People of this Town are notable Dancers, if it be worth while to mention such a Qualification; but since that recommends 'em to the Courts of Indostan and Persia, we should do 'em wrong to omit it. Over against Multan, on the West side the Indus, stands Alican, and more Southward Seerpoore. Haikan, otherwise call'd Hangikan, a Province seated beyond the Indus, among the Mountains on the Frontiers of Persia, is a sort of rude Country inhabited by the Bulloches, a stout and warlike People, who are Idolaters, and by some Authors represented as wild Robbers; but others say they are of a Conversible Temper. Two Towns in this Country are mention'd in the Maps, viz. Chatzan on the East side the Mountains, and Uche on the Frontiers of Persia. The Province of Buckor lies next to Haican on the South, between Persia on the West, and the Hindowns Country on the East. The River Indus runs through and divides it into two Parts, waters the Land, and renders the Soil Rich and Fertile. The Inhabitants are a strong, robust People, like their Neighbours the Bulloches, uneasy under the Mogul's Yoke, and not kept under but by a strong Guard, perpetually kept upon 'em in the chief City nam'd Buckor; seated on an Island in the River Indus, Lat. 30. D. 22. M. Other Towns of Note here, are Suckor, somewhat higher on the East side the River, a place considerable for Trade, as also for Agriculture, much practis'd by its Inhabitants; and Rawree on the same River, more Southward, and near the Mouth of the Damiadee, a place also of good Trade, sending Barks down the River, which Trade even as far as Mozambique, and other parts of Africa. The Country of the Hindowns lies between Haican and Multan on the West, Pengab on the North, Jesselmee on the East, Jesselmee and Bando on the South, enjoying a fertile Soil in Corn, Cattel and Cotton; which last is made up into Cloths, and exported exported to other Parts. The Inhabitants are a distinct People, and according to their Name should be the Descendants of the Aborigine Inhabitants of all India. The chief City Hendown stands upon the River Darniadee (which runs through the Province from East to West) in the 31. D. 20. M. Lat. a large and rich Town enjoying a good Trade in Cotton and Calico. Aleara seated more to the South, is a great City, and considerable Mart for the same Commodities.

The Province of Jesselmeer lies on the South of the Hindowns; having Guzarate for its Southern Bounds, Bando on the East, and Buckor on the West. The North and East parts are Mountainous, but the South is water'd by the River Padder; and the greatest part of the Country is very fertile in Corn and Cattel, especially Sheep. Its extent is from the 25th. to the 25th. Deg. of Latitude. Jesselmeer otherwise call'd Gissemeer, the chief Town, is seated in the North part within Land, but is however a place of very good Trade for Indigo, Cotton, and wollen Clothes, and remarkable for its pleasant situation: 'Tis also Fortified with a very good Castle, and thirty pieces of Ordnance. Anmer, a Castle in this Country, is notable for being the Birth-place of the great Eckbar. Ralimpore, seated on the River Padder, is the next considerable Town in this Province, near its Southern Limits, and all that I find mention'd by Authors. The small Kingdom of Srett lies next to Jesselmeer, having that for its Eastern Bounds, the Mouth of the River Padder for its Southern, the River Indus on the East, and Tatta on the North. 'Tis a rich Fertile Land, furnished with all things necessary for Life; and the chief City Fanagar is populous and rich, being commodiously seated near the River Padder, which a little below falls into the Gulph of Indus, and renders the Town a place of good Trade. Pacho, seated on an Island made by the Branches of the River Padder, in falling into the Sea is reckon'd in the Limits of this Kingdom.

Lastly, the Kingdom of Tatta, otherwise nam'd Sindi, and by the Inhabitants Abind, also sometimes by Europeans call'd the Kingdom of Diul, from the Port Town of that name. This Province is the South-West Limits of the Mogul's Empire, having Persia on the East, Buckor on the North, Jesselmeer and Srett on the West, and the Gulph of Indus, which parts it from Guzarate, on the South. The Kingdom is about 200 Miles in length from North to South, and is divided in the middle by the River Indus; which waters the Land, and renders the Soil very prolifick in Wheat, Rice, Pasture, &c. The Country also being so conveniently seated, is much enrich'd by Trade, but not so much as it us'd to be, before Suarate had drawn it away. The chief Cities are, Tatta the Metropolis, seated on the East side the River Indus, in the 27th. D. Latitude, a large City, and celebrated for Trade. Sindi in the Heart of the Country, the place of the Governor's Residence. Loarebader on the West side the Indus, 40 Leagues below Tatta, and near the Mouth of the River, a noted Port: but Diul or Diu (not Dio) is the most commodious and most celebrated Haven of this Kingdom, seated on the Mouth of the Bay of Indus, and a small River which takes its name from the Town: This place is usually touch'd at by the Ships sailing from India to Ormus.

Thus have we Travell'd all over this mighty Empire, and taken as exact a survey of it as we were able to obtain out of Authors of Reputation; and mention'd as many particulars as the Brevity of our Work will admit. We should now proceed to Persia, but that it is requisite first to take notice that the Provinces of Baleh and Candahara, seated on the Frontiers of Persia, Northward from Haican, and on the West of Mulden and Atuck, are by some Geographers made part of the Mogul's Empire, and by others attributed to Persia; the Reason whereof seems to be, that it is a disputed Country, and on that account has more than once changed its Master. As far as I can learn, Baleh is subject to the Persian, and so describ'd there: But Candahara is a Province of the Mogul's Empire, except the chief City Candahar, suppos'd to be the Cavra or Prolexy, seated in the 23. D. Lat. which is subject to the Persian; a place of great strength, and being on the Roll out of India into Persia, it's much resorted to. The Country is Mountainous, and so not over fruitful; but here are Rocks of Salt, which yield a Traffick to the Inhabitants, as also Mines found in the Bowels of the Earth.

It remains only to give an Account of the principal Rivers, with which this vast continent is water'd, being four in number, viz. the Ganges, the Gyenga, the Padder, and the Indus: Of these the two former discharge themselves into the Bay of Bengall, and the two latter, into that of Indus. The Ganges, call'd Ganga by the Natives, and erroneously taken by some Authors for the Pison mention'd in Holy Writ, is the most famous River of India: By which the whole Country was anciently divided (as it has been already hinted) into the farther, or India beyond the Ganges, and the hither, or India within the same River. The Ganges takes its Rise not from Paradise, but in Mount Imus, or Emodus, now call'd Moghabli (according to some Authors) and Dakoner by others, on the Confines of Great Tartary, and in the Kingdom of Kakares: After having water'd those Parts, it directs its Course Southward through the Province of Siba, and there receives the Kanlah, or Canda, on the East: Then passing through the Confines of Famba, Bacar, Sambal, Ganda and Patna, it joins the Perjely, likewise on the East, and a little lower near the Town of Hlobas, on the West, is increas'd with the Gomera, otherwise nam'd Gemma and Semena: Lastly, having parted the Kingdom of Bengall, by its winding Course it is there divided into divers streams, and empites itself through several Meuts (anciently five or six in number) into the Gangetick Gulph, which takes its Name from thence, and is now commonly call'd The Bay of Bengall. This River was heretofore esteem'd as Sacred, and the Indians have still the same Veneration for it, in so much that a great many are us'd to go thither in Pilgrimage, on purpose to wash away their Sins. It's Breadth and Depth is much celebrated among the Ancients, and even by several Modern Writers, but M. Tavernier is of a different Opinion: For he denies, that the lower Part of the Ganges is wider than the Channel of the River Seine, at Paris: and affirms, That from the Mouth of March, to June or July, before the rainy Season begins, it is so shallow that the Vessels cannot set out to Sea. The Waters of the Ganges afford a most

The other River that runs into the Bay of Bengall, is Guenga, call'd Ganga by the Portugueses, which rising from the Mountains of Gata in the Kingdom of Decan, passes through the whole Country; as also through Golconda, and along the Confines of the Kingdoms of Orixa and Bengall, and at last falls into the said Bay.

Padder
Fluv.

We come now to the two principal Rivers that flow into the Gulph of Indus, that is to say the Padder and the Indus. The Padder, which is of a great deal less Note than the latter, springs in the Kingdom of Bando, and traverses Jesselmeer, or (as others will have it) only the Confines of that Province, and the Kingdom of Sorett, where it runs through two Mouths into the Indian Gulph.

Indus
Fluv.

The Indus, now call'd Sind, or Sinde by the Inhabitants, being the most noble River of India, has its Source in the Kingdom of Cassimere, or near its Frontiers, springing from the highest Part of Mount Caucasus, or Mount Paropamisus, on the Borders of Tartary, and flows down thence Southward through the Kingdom of Attock; where, by a Town of the same Name, (according to several Maps) it receives the Chanab or Chenab, on its Eastern side: Then it passes through the Province of Multan, where the Rivers Bebat and Nilab fall into its Channel on the Western side; as also through the Kingdom of Bucoar; where, on the East, it is united to the Ravey, or Rowey, taken by many ancient Authors for Hydaspes, or Hidaspis, which put a stop to the March of Alexander the Great, and takes in the Hypafus, before it intermixes its Waters with the Indus. A little below the Ravey, in the same Kingdom, and on the same side, the Caul, or Coul runs into the latter; although (according to M. la Robbe) the Rivers Caul and Ravey, are not joyn'd with the Indus, in the Kingdom of Buckor, but higher, where he places the Territories of the Hindowns. Afterwards the River Indus, continues its Course through the Kingdom of Tatta, and from thence through four, five, or six Mouths, that heretofore were seven in Number, into the Gulph, or Bay, on which it has impos'd its Name.

CHAP. XIX.

PERSIA Modern and Ancient.

I. PERSIA so call'd, say the Claffick Authors, from Perſeus the Son of Andromeda, is nam'd Farſitan, or Pharſitan by the Natives: and was call'd Elam by the Hebrews. Formerly the Miſtris of almoſt all Aſia, its Empire extending as far as the Helleſpont. But though it be ſtill a large Kingdom, its Bounds are at preſent much narrower; Aſſyria, Mefopotamia Babylonia, &c. being cut off and ſubject to the Turks: So that at preſent its Boundaries are

On the Eaſt the Empire of the Great Mogul, Bounds, whence the River Indus divides it, on the Weſt Turkey; from which the Rivers Euphrates and Tigris part it; on the North, the Hyrcanian, or Caspian Sea; on the North-Eaſt, the River Oxus, or Fibon ſeparates it from Tartary; and on the South, the Gulph of Persia, otherwiſe nam'd the Gulph of Baſſora; and the Arabian Sea divides it from Arabia: And in its preſent Extent the Empire of Persia comprehends about 24 Degrees

Degrees of Longitude, which makes about 1180 Miles from East to West; and about 15 Degrees of Latitude, which make 900 Miles from North to South.

on.* It is feated under the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh Climates, and enjoys a more healthy, temperate Air than the other Parts of Asia; except on the Southern Borders, which lying under the 25th Degree of Latitude, is in the Summer Season excellent Hot.

Soil. The Soil cannot be much praised for Fertility; a great part of the Land consisting of Mountains, and other Parts of sandy Desarts: And withal here are but very few Rivers: So that they have only Rain (and of that but little) and the dissolv'd Snow, which falling in small Rivulets from the Mountains, water the Land, and make the Valleys fruitful; bringing forth Corn in such plenty that Dr. Fryer tells us they have frequently a threefold Crop. Cotton also; and Mulberry Trees for the Silk Worm in great plenty, Wine of a delicious kind, and Fruits of the most pleasing Tasts, together with delightful Flowers. Most of the Species of both seen in Europe being produc'd here, besides many other kinds; as also Asia Fetida, and divers estimable Drugs. For Cattle they have excellent Horses; Kine though small well fed; Sheep so exceeding fat that the Fleth is hardly to be found, and have Tails of 30 Pound Weight; Camels and Arabian Asses very servicable Goats, whose Skins yield a Manufactory and Merchandise very beneficial to the Kingdom; and Kids that are delicate Food: The Wild-Goats yielding also the Bezoar Stone: Stags, Antilopes; Fowl of all sorts are also plentifully found in the Woods: and in some Parts are seen Wolves, Tygres, Foxes, and other Wild-Beasts, but of these not many nor dangerous.

The Mountains are high, craggy and barren, but however, contain in their Bowels Mines of Copper, Lead, Iron, Steel, and other Metals, Brimstone, and Rock-Salt: and the Sea yields Pearls truly Oriental, and the most valuable of any in the World. The Earth in some parts is fit for Porcelance, whereof exceeding fine is made here. Here are also large Quarries of Marble; and several precious Stones, as the Lapis Lazuli, Turquoise, &c. are found in the Earth. Many Baths, Mineral-Waters, but especially a Spring of Naphtha, are likewise seen in Persia. Silk is exceeding plenty, and yields a vast Manufacture and Traffick to the People; which with fine Carpets, Pearls, Bezoar Stones, Lapis Lazuli, and some other Commodities they transport to other Countries: but have not enough of these to balance Trade; being forc'd to give Money to the Dutch and English for a great part of the Goods they want from India and Europe.

II. People. The Persians are a People of good Address and sufficient Understanding; but addic'd to Dissimulation, and exceedingly Luxurious in their Diet and Cloaths; very guilty of Venery; and though Wine be forbid, they will secretly be Drunk, and take Opium, Tobacco and Coffee in excess. They are very fond of Astrological Predictions; and too Lazy and Luxurious to be very Learned. They were originally of a tawny Complexion, but by their Marriages with the fair Georgian Women, or chiefly by the many Tartars settled there in these latter Ages, they are become of a fairer Skin. The Houses of the common People are mean, being built of Mud, whereof they not only make the Walls, but even arch them over very artificially. The Nobility and Courtiers have however stately Palaces built of Stone, adorn'd with Marble Pillars, and in the middle a Circle of Columns supporting a Cupola of great height and breadth, which is the room of Entertainment, and has round it a foot pace cover'd with fine Carpets, to sit on cross leg'd like Taylors; and in the middle fine Fountains, Flower-Pots, and the like. This is their general Manner of Building, and is indeed exceeding Noble and Magnificent.

The ruling Religion of Persia is the Mahomedan, of the Sect of Haly. Besides which here are many of the ancient Gawrians, also Armenians; and some Jews remaining of the Babylonian Captivity.

The Emperor, or SOPHI of Persia is a most absolute and arbitrary Monarch, exceeding Wealthy, and maintains an Army of 60000 Horse and 120000 Foot in constant Pay. The eldest Son succeeds the Father in the Throne, and according to the Cruelty and Jealousy of those Parts of the World, commonly puts out the Eyes of his younger Brethren.

The ancient State and Grandeur of Persia, when it constituted the Monarchy that succeeded the Assyrian, and was the second of the four that by way of Excellence are stiled the Empires of the World, and the dowfall of that Monarchy by the Conquest of Alexander the Macedonian; its division among his Captains after his Death, and the Conquests of it afterwards by the Parthians, are sufficiently known to all that converse with History. And the Story being too large to set down here; we shall pass on and say only, That the Parthians having had the Possession of it for near 500 Years, Artaxerxes restor'd the Persian Government about 230 Years after the Birth of Christ; and was succeeded by 28 Kings of the same Race: But the Sarazens growing powerful in the Year 605, the Caliph of Bagdad beat out the Persian; and his Successors posses'd the Throne for 650 Years. About the Year 1257, the Tartars expell'd the Sarazens, and a Race of Princes of that Nation govern'd Persia till the Year 1472; when the Turcomanni enter'd and supplanted them: These govern'd but till 1500, at which time Shah Ismael Sophy, by the Death of Alama, and Accession to the Throne put an end to that Race, and is reckon'd to have restor'd the ancient Persian Line, whose Posterity still enjoy the Empire.

Proceed we next to the Geographical Account of Persia, which, as we have said, was anciently of far greater Extent than at present; for besides Babylonia, Assyria, and the other Countries Westward; Cluverius includes Caspmeer and Guzerat Eastward; and makes those two Provinces to be comprehended in the ancient Gedrosia: But our Author J. Luyis contradicts him in it, and says that Sinda only, and Makeran were included in Gedrosia; and if so, the River Indus was always, as it still is, the Western Boundary.

But in setting out the Provinces, I find great Differences among Geographers; some dividing the whole Empire into fifteen; others fourteen, others thirteen; and others will allow but twelve Provinces.

Provinces. Again, M. Tavernier reckons up seventeen, but then Usbeck, Turcomania, Diarbeck, Curdistan and Iran are five of them. But these do not properly deserve place here, for Usbeck is part of Tartary; and the other four do for the most part belong to the Turks, and are describ'd in our Accounts of those Countrys. Baustrand names these Provinces. viz.

This is set down to shew the Difference between Authors, and the difficulty of ascertaining the true Division of this Empire, which being done, we shall follow our Author *Joan. IV. The first Province that offers itself to our View, according to the aforesaid Order, is Sinda, or Send, plac'd in M. Sanfon's large Map of Asia, and others, on the Coasts of the Indian Sea; and on the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Tatta, or Sinda, which was last describ'd in the Great Mogul's Empire. That Geographer attributes several Places to this Province, particularly Sarusan and Candayl, in the Inland Tracts. And Debil, on the Sea-Coasts. Others take no notice at all of this Province, neither do they acknowledge any other Sinda besides the Kingdom of Tatta. M. Tavernier, makes mention of a Part of Persia, that Borders upon the said Kingdom, but does not express its Name, nor those of its Towns, of which he declares himself ignorant: We have a just Deference for this ingenious Author's account of Persia; in regard that in the Forty years time he spent in Travelling, he pass'd six times through this Empire, taking different Roads, and diligently observing all things remarkable, especially the Names, Situation and Number of the Provinces, with the capital Towns, which (as he complains) are for the most part, either feign'd, or corrupted by Modern Geographers; and have accordingly very much follow'd his Foot-steps in the following Description.

V. The maritime Province of Makran, Mackerran, or Makeran, borders upon Send, on the West, and is plac'd in its room, by those that omit the latter, near the Kingdom of Tatta, or the Empire of the Great Mogul. The Towns hereabouts are Gnadel, a Sea-port; [others place Gnadel in Kherman] Titz. Makran the Capital, from which the whole Province derives its Name. Firbk, and Chalak.

VI. The Province of Sigefstan, sometimes call'd Sigifstan and Suzistan, is extended on the North of the former, and contains these Places of good Note, viz. Ferdan, Keis, Camiltan, Suzistan or Sistan, the chief Town; Majorejan, Majub, and Haba.

VII. The Province of Sablestan, or Sablustan, lies next to Sigefstan, on the North, and includes the following Towns, viz. Bekjabat, Bust, Sarenez, Sarvan, Asba, Memend, and Rabel-Esnir. M. Tavernier places Kandahar within its Bounds, which is taken by others for a distinct Province, and was sometime govern'd by its own Prince, who, when the King of Persia and the great Mogul continually strove to make themselves Masters of it, at last chose rather to submit to the former, upon condition, that as long as any Prince of his Race was left, he should be entrusted with the Administration of the Government.

The Metropolis of the whole Country, is Candahar, the principal Bulwark of Persia, in the middle of which stands a Rock with a Castle on the top: It is a famous Mart beset with large Suburbs, and abounding with all manner of Provisions, through which the Companies of Merchants that travel from Persia to India, and those that return from thence, are wont to pass. Alimerdankan, Governor of Kandahar, deliver'd up this Town to the Great Mogul; but it was recover'd by Chalabs II. King of Persia. Afterwards the Mogul made three several attempts to retake it with a numerous Army, but was as often repuls'd: However Kandahar is reputed the sixth in order among the general Governments of the Indian Empire; by reason that several of its Towns and Villages are at this Day subject to the Mogul and pay him Tribute. Cashecanna, Greefa and Curvan, are also reckon'd among the Towns of Kandahar: M. Tavernier also attributes to Sablestan, the Towns of Duka and Aluncan, seated within the Borders of the Great Mogul's Empire.

The Province of Korassan, or Chorassan, lies out farther towards the North, and is usually extend'd in the Maps to the River Oxus or Jihun, call'd Rubkkhane-kurkan, by M. Tavernier, who does not follow those Draughts, some of which make it to reach as far as the Caspian Sea. The most remarkable Towns of this Province, are Balbachi: The City of Rofes, otherwise call'd Herat, or Erat; and Serberi the Capital; Thun; Meched, nam'd also Mesched, Mescheeb, Mexat, and Mesat, where is to be seen the Sepulchre of the Prophet Iman-Riza plac'd under a golden Arch, for which the Persians have a great Veneration; And Nisaber, or Nichabour.

The Province of Estarabad, or Estarabah, generally omitted in the Maps, is plac'd by M. Tavernier, between Chorussan on the South, and the River Jihun on the North, where Margiana was anciently situated; but others set out its Bounds farther towards the West. The chief Towns are Estarabad, the Capital of the Province, Damkam, and Annul. This Province is the Khoemus of the common Maps.

Having taken a View of the first six Provinces of Persia, lying out towards the East, we come to the four next, viz. Mazanderan, Chirvan, Edzerbaian and Hierak-Agemi, that appear on the North. M. Tavernier describes a Province in which Mazanderan and Kylan are both comprehended, for the latter is a Part of the former; but others make them distinct Territories. The Province of Mazanderan, or Mezanderan, call'd Tabrifstan, or Tabareltan, by M. Sanfon, being strictly taken, is a Part of Eastern Mazanderan, according to the Maps, and its Northern Tract is wash'd by the Caspian Sea. The Country is marshy and annoy'd with innumerable swarms of Insects, which extremely infect the Air, as well as the Vapours that rise up out of the Fens; but they dye assoon as the Pools are dried up by the heat of the Summer, and there are many very fruitful Tracts of Land. The chief City nam'd Tabaristan is mention'd by Dr. Fryar as a considerable place for weaving and transporting Silks and Velvets. The Province of Kylan or Gilan likewise borders upon the Caspian Sea, and abounds with Silk; but the Air is not more healthful than in the former. The Towns and Villages of Mazanderan taken at large are (according to M. Tavernier) Firzkuh; Sukarabad; Mionikiella, seated near the Mountains; Girn, Talarapski, and Sarn, in the Champaign Country; and Ferbabad; Ciarman; and Eskiref, on the Coast of the Caspian Sea, a Town of modern Structure.

From Mazanderan we pass to Schirvan and Edzerbayan, which are commonly taken for separate Provinces, but they are united by M. Tavernier. Chirvan, Sirvan, Schirvan, or Servan, is the most Northern Part of Persia, and extends itself on the Western Coasts of the Caspian Sea. The most eminent Town of these Parts is Derbent, i. e. A straight Gate, in the Persian Language, or Demir-capi, i. e. An Iron Gate, according to the Turkish Turkish Dialect; and hereabouts were the Caspia Pyle of the Ancients, call'd Caspia Claustra by Tacitus. This Town stands in the Frontiers of Dagesthan, on the Foot of a Mountain, between its Straights and the Caspian Sea, and is so well fortify'd (as we are inform'd by M. Baudrand) that it may easily hold out against any hostile Attack whatsoever; inasmuch that 'tis no wonder, the Turks have impos'd on it the Name of the Iron-gate. It is also remarkable for its fine Castle, capacious Harbour, and the usual Passage from Persia into Muscovy; nevertheless its Inhabitants are not numerous, and it daily falls to decay. The other noted Towns of Chiroan, are Baku, or Baknye, on the same Sea-coast, and Chamaki, or Schamachia in the inland Country.

The Province of Edzerbayan, otherwise nam'd Aderbejan, Adherbeizan and Adirbeizan, is situated more Southward, and enjoys a healthful, though somewhat cold Air. Its most considerable Places and Towns are Ardebil, or Ardevil, one of the principal Cities of the whole Persian Empire, and a renowned Mart especially for Silk; of large Extent, and pleasant Situation; where is to be seen the Monument of Cha-Sefi the first of that Name, King of Persia, to which the Persians resort, from all the Provinces, out of a Principle of Devotion; as also, the Tombs of some other Princes of the same Race: Tebris, or Taberkez, so call'd by the Inhabitants, but known among Foreigners by the Name of Tauris, and generally suppos'd to be the Eckbatana of the Ancients, a large, populous and noted Mart-Town, where the King formerly kept his Court, and is at present the Seat of the chief Patriarch, abounding more especially with Silk, for which it is a great Empory; seated in a Champain Country that brings forth great store of Corn and Pulse, and surrounded with Hills almost on all sides; the Houses being built with Bricks dried in the Sun: And Soltania, or Soltania, a Town which in many Maps is plac'd in the neighbouring Provinces of Hierak-Agemi, remarkable for its Situation in a fruitful Territory, and the various temperature of the Air, which is excessive Hot in the Day, and no less cold in the Morning, Evening and at Night. This Town was often taken and recover'd by the Turks and Persians, and at present continues in the Possession of the latter.

XIII. The Province of Hierak-Agemi, Ierak-Agemi, Eirack-Atzem, or Eirak, borders upon Edzerbayan, Gilan and Tabaristan, on the South, and contains the following Towns of chief Note, viz. Kabin, or Casvin, sometime the Royal Seat of the Kings of Persia, after the taking of Tebris, but now destitute of Walls; and inhabited for the most part by Mahometans: The Houses of this Town are very mean, and above one half of it is taken up with Gardens, among which are those that belong to the King's Court: 'Tis sicker than Isfahan, though it exceed it in plenty of all things, says Dr. Fryar. Sava, a neat Town in a fruitful Plain: Kom, one of the largest Towns of Persia, in a Champain Country that brings forth good store of Rice, with several sorts of Fruit, and particularly most excellent Pomegranates; here are also certain stately Monuments that are highly esteem'd by the Natives: Kachan, or Kasban, a large and populous Town, affording plenty of Fruit and Wine; where a great number of Jews have their Habitations, and where the richest Sorts of Silk-Manufactures are usually made. Hanadan, a Place that abounds with Cattel, Butter, Cheese, Hides and Tobacco, and through which the Persians are us'd to pass in their Journey to Mecca. Isfahan, or Hispahan, otherwise call'd Asfahan and Hafszehan, as also Sfaban, Spaban and Sfan, according to the Persian Dialect, the present Metropolis of the whole Kingdom and the Royal Seat, built in a very fruitful and spacious Plain, with three large Suburbs: So that it takes up sixteen Miles in Compass, and is almost equal in Largeness to the City of Paris in France, but a great deal less populous; by reason of the great number of Gardens and void Places. The private Buildings here are mean, but the Sophy's Palace, together with some Noblemen's Houses, the Buzars or Exchanges, the Caravanfara's or publick Inns, the Hummuns or Baths, and the Temples, are magnificent Structures. This City was anciently call'd Hecatomplos from its hundred Gates; and was the greatest Mart in Asia, before the Europeans found the way to India by Sea, having been the Staple for the Commodities of those Countries.

The other noted Places of this Province, are Zulfa, Julfa, or Gulfa, formerly a Colony of the Armenians, and a considerable Town, neater than Isfahan, and situated farther towards the South: It is also taken by several Authors for a Suburb to that City; the most pleasant Walk of the whole Kingdom, lying between both, which may be pass'd over, within the space of half an Hour: And Yezd, a large but ruinous Town in the sandy Desert, where great quantities of Silk-clothes are work'd. There are also Women of an admirable Beauty, and a sort of Wine that is very grateful to the Palate.

It remains only to give a Description of the three last Provinces of Persia, viz. those of Chusistan, Chuti-Faristan and Kerman, which are extended farther than towards the South, and are wash'd by the Persian Gulph. The most Western of these is Kusistan, or Chusistan, situated on the innermost Bay of the Gulph of Balfora, and on the lowest Part of that common Receptacle of the Rivers Euphrates and Tigris. However, Authors are not agreed, as to the Extent of this Province, the best Towns of which (according to M. Tavernier) are Suter, Schuster, or Sus anciently Sisa, the Capital; Ardgan; Ram-hormous; Ahanis; and Skabar; as also, two little Sea-port Towns, on the Gulph of Balfora, nam'd Bunder-Rik and Bandr-Rakel.

XV. The Province of Faristan, or Fars, lies next to Chusistan, on the East; and its most eminent Towns are Kazeron, the Territory about which yields a abundance of Citrons and Lemmons; neither is there any want of fine Cypress-Trees. Atakar, where stood the ancient Persopolis, so celebrated for its magnificent Structure and immense Wealth. It had been for many Ages the Metropolis of this Empire, and the Seat of its Monarch before Alexander the Great destroyed it. That Prince having seized the publick Treasure, which Diad. Siculus tells us amounted to 120000 Talents, gave the Pillage of the City to his Soldiers, and afterwards in a drunken Frolick (being excited by Thais the Curtezan) set fire to the Palace, and utterly terly destroyed the most glorious Structure in the World. Mr Herbert has given us a very good Account of its Ruins, to which we must refer our Reader, not having room to transcribe him; and can only say that the Height, Beauty and Solidity of its Columns appear by what remains, the Sight whereof ravishes the beholder, and demonstrates that nothing in Antiquity could exceed the Magnificence of this Place. It must be mention'd that some Authors make Schiras the ancient Persepolis; as others, Chulminare, q. d. forty Towers; but modern Travellers assure us that though Schiras grew up out of its Ruins, yet it is two days distant from it. Schiras, or Chirus, the Metropolis of the Province, seated in a Plain, encompass'd with rocky Mountains; by tradition said to have arisen out of the Ruins of Persepolis, but by others affirm'd to have been built by Cyrus. This City may be reckon'd the second best in all the Empire; being the Seat of a very considerable Traffick, and adorn'd with many stately Buzzars, magnificent Palaces, and pleasant Gardens, Walks, Colleges and Temples. This being esteem'd a Holy-Place is also adorn'd with publick Schools and Convents well endow'd, and may be stiled the University of Persia. But the common Houses are made of Earth daub'd over with Mud, and may easily be wash'd away by the Rain, which very seldom falls in those Parts. The adjacent Country affords the purest Wine of all Persia. Benarou. Firus-abad, a little Town in a Territory that abounds with Dates and Dates, so that the Inhabitants extract from the latter an Oil of a pleasant smell. Darab-Gier, or Daragiard, where is Salt of all manner of Colours, and great store of Apples, with which a kind of Cyder is made, as also Oranges and Lemmons. Moreover the Kingdom of Lar which now constitutes a part of Parthia, was heretofore govern'd by its own Princes: But it is at present subject to the King of Persia, and reaches as far as the Persian Gulph. The Air hereabouts is excessive Hot, and the Metropolis of this Kingdom is likewise nam'd Lar or Lbor, a Town of no small Extent, built on a Rock, amidst high Mountains, and fence'd with a Cattle: It is stiled by Dr. Fryar the Granary of these Parts, being a Place of considerable Trade, adorn'd with an Exchange and many good Buildings, especially the Cann's or Governor's Palace, which is very stately and magnificent. The neighbouring Territory is fruitful, and affords great plenty of Oranges. On the Gulph, we may observe Bander-Kongo, a very considerable Sea-port Town, where the Air is healthful and the Water excellent. As also Gombroon, or Bander-Abessin as 'tis nam'd by the Natives; a Town of great Trade, extended a Mile in Length along the Banks of the Gulph: and especially notable to us on Account of the English Factory there, to whom the Moiety of the Customs of Right belong; being granted to them for the Service the English perform'd at the taking of Ormuz from the Portuguese. The Air here is exceeding Hot, and the Water not very good. This is the chief Port of Persia for European and Indian Trade, and is much frequented by the English and Dutch. 'Tis seated at the Mouth of the Gulph of Bassora in the 27th. Deg. of Latitude, and 74th. of Longitude.

Over against Gombroon in the narrow Straight of Mossandan lyes the small Island Ormuz, or Or-Ormuz, a Place of Barren Soil and very scorching Air; but being seated in the middle of this Straight, it is the Key to the Persian Gulph; and its chief Town of the same Name was once the Capital of a Kingdom which extended its self far, on both the Persian and Arabian Shores. In the Year 1517 the Town and Island were taken by the Portuguese, under whom it was a most flourishing and wealthy Place. But in 1622 the English assisting the Persian (who had long attack'd it in vain) took the Town by Stratagem, and the Portuguese were immediately expell'd; since when the Town being slighted, the magnificent Portuguese Buildings are fallen to ruine; and except in the Castle (which is well garison'd) there are few Inhabitants on the Island: The rise of Gombroon proceeded from the decay of this Place, and all the Trade of it is remov'd thither.

We are now come to the Province of Kerman, ^{XVI.} Kherman, Kheirman, or Kirman, which is the last ^{man-} of all, and extends it self on the Coasts of the Gulph of Ormuz. The most remarkable Places and Towns, are Bermazir, or Bermasir. Kerman, or Cherman, the Capital City of a large Compaſs, but now ruinous, where a sort of earthen Ware is made, scarce inferior to the China Porcellane: Macheſhan; Jaskes, or Fasques, a Sea-port Town on the Gulph of Ormuz, with an adjacent Promontory of the same Name: And Kubefek, another Port on the same Gulph.

Hitherto we have been treating of Modern ^{XVII.} Persia, but the ancient Persian Monarchy far exceed- ^{The} ed those Bounds: For it extended it self East ^{Bounds o} and West, from India within the River Ganges; ^{the anci} part of which was also comprehended therein; ^{ent King} as far as the Helleſpont, or Straight of Gallipoli; ^{dom of} in passing of which Darius the Son of Hystaspes, and ^{Persia.} more especially his Son Xerxes, receiv'd a great Overthrow, notwithstanding their numerous Armies: And from North to South, it extended from Scythia, against which the same Darius undertook a fruitless Expedition; as also, from the Caspian Sea, Mount Caucasus, and the River Tanais, beyond which Darius was not able to extend his Dominions; to the Mouth of the Arabian Gulph, and the Confines of Ethiopia: For Cambyses, who united Egypt to the Persian Empire, had an ill Success, in leading an Army against the Ethiopians.

But to omit the ancient Limits, we shall set ^{XVIII.} down what Provinces were anciently contain'd ^{The Pro} in the Kingdom of Persia in its present Extent. ^{vinces of} Some Authors reckon up seventeen of these Pro- ^{ancient} vinces; and others sixteen, or fourteen: Others ^{Persia.} again (whose Opinion we shall here follow) reduce all to five Articles, and they are Aria, Bactriana, Parthia, Media, and Persis; which were subdivided into divers Parts, viz. The Parts of Aria were five in number, viz. Gedrosia, Arachosia, Drangiana, Aria proper, and Paropanisus. Those of Bactriana were two, viz. Sogdiana and Proper Bactriana. Those of Parthia were three, viz. Margiana, Hyrcania and Parthia. Those of Media were as many, viz. Choromikhrena, Tropatena and Antropatia. Lastly, the Parts of Persis were likewise three, viz. Susiana, Proper Persis and Carmunia.

XIX. These ancient Provinces agree thus with the modern. Gedrosia seems not to have been, where Guzarat now takes place; but in the room of Sindia, or (as others will have it) of Makeran; for it was situated on the West of the River Indus. Arachosia comprehended the Kingdom of Haiacan, now part of the Great Mogul's Empire, and the Province of Candahar in modern Persia. Drangiana, at present bears the Name of Sigeftan, and Sableftan supplies the place of the Eastern Parts of Aria and Paropamisus, otherwise call'd Paropamisus and Paropamisus. Sogdiana and Bactriana were extended on the Territories of Usbeck, or the Country beyond the River Oxus, or Jihun, being part of Great Tartary. Margiana was in the room of Chorasfan, Part of which Province (according to some Authors) was taken up by Bactriana, Aria, and Parthia; but M. Tavernier places Margiana in those Parts, where he has set out the Bounds of Elfarabad. Hyrcania, which impos'd its Name on the Hyrcanian or Caspian Sea, was included within the Limits of Mazanderan, or Tabaristan. Parthia took up the Western Part of Chorasfan, with the Eastern Tracts of Hierak-Agemi, and its Capital City sometime the largest of the whole Continent of Persia, and the Metropolis of the Kingdom was Hecatampylus, or Hecatampylon, which took its Name from its hundred Gates, and is now suppos'd to be either Ispahan, or Tesd. The Parthians who were before a slothful People, and of no repute; after the Death of Alexander the Great, extended their Conquests far and near; and in the time of the Roman Grandeur, they not only possess'd the whole Persian Empire, but also Affyria, Mesopotamia and Babylonia.

Media. The Country of Media took up the Provinces now named, Kylan, Schirvan, Edzerbayan and the Western Part of Hierak-Agemi; but Media, Cheromikrene, or Choronikrene took up the Part of Media, towards the South-East, and next to that (according to Ptolemy's Map) lay Media Tropatena, bordering on the Hyrcanian Sea: Lastly, Media Antropatia, otherwise call'd Atropatia and Atropatene, extended it self farthest towards the North-West, and was inhabited by the Caspia, a particular People, from whom the neighbouring Sea deriv'd its Name. This noted Province heretofore constituted Part of the second Universal Monarchy, which at first comprehended two distinct Governments, and its Metropolis was Ecbatana, which many Authors take to be the same with the present Tauris; where the Kings of Persia (as it is observ'd by Athenæus) usually kept their Court, during the Summer-Season.

Part of the ten Tribes of Israel, that were carry'd away captive into Affyria, by Salmanasser, dwelt in Media, and even (according to Bochart's Opinion, which is follow'd by several learned Men) in Media Anyropatena; where between the two Streams of the River Cyrus, almost in the middle, between Mount Choratra, or Chaboras (as the same Bochart terms it) and the Caspian Sea, the Town of Ganzania was seated, which (says he) might probably communicate its Name to the neighbouring Country and River: but when the Persians obtain'd the Sovereignty of those Parts, the Name of the said River was chang'd in honour of King Cyrus; as another River of Media near the Cyrus, was dignify'd with that of Cambyses. Others are apt to believe, that the Town of Ganzania had its Denomination from the River Gozan. But the Posterity of the Israelites did not always abide in Media; being in process of time convey'd to Hyrcania, Parthia, Persia, Carmania, and the most remote Parts of the East, even to India and China; as also, (as the learned Spanhemius observes out of Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus) to Armenia, Iberia and Colechia. The same Author adds, That a great number of the Israelites afterwards return'd to Palestine, and had Places of Habitation in common with the other two Tribes: Moreover that they grew so numerous as to fill Egypt and the adjacent Countries: And upon the Dispersion of the Greeks, they settled themselves in Acha Minor, Greece and Alacedonia; and at last came to possess some Countries of Persia, the remaining part of Persia.

The Country of Susiana was situated within the Susiana Bounds of Chusistan, and its Metropolis was Susaj now call'd Suster, or Schouster, enjoying a very gentle and pleasant Air, where (according to Athenæus) the Persian Monarchs resided during the Winter-quarter. The Province of Persia took place in Ferishtan, and its capital City was Persopolis, which some Authors suppose to be Schiras, but others place it in the Neighbourhood of that Town on the North, where, or near which are to be seen the Ruins of Chilminar, or Tebelminar (as M. Tavernier expresses it) that is to say, several ancient Columns, and Statues of no Repute, with certain square and obscure Arches; all which relicks, the same M. Tavernier, who actually view'd them, affirms to be undeservedly so much cryed up by other Writers. Persopolis (as we are inform'd by Athenæus) formerly afford'd a Place of Residence to the Kings of Persia, during the Autumnal Season, before it was burnt and laid wast by Alexander the Great, in a drunken Fit, at the instigation of the Harlot Thais. Lastly, the Country of Carmania, which was divided into two Parts, viz. the Desert bordering upon Parthia, and Carmania properly so call'd; that lay next to Persia, on the South, and along the Sea-coasts in the room of Modern Carmania, or Kherman.

Modern and ancient Arabia.

For a Map, consult that of Turkey in Asia.

I. Arabia.

THE eighth and last Part of Asia, commonly call'd Arabia, or Arabistan, according to the Dialect of the Asiatics, is bounded on the East, by the Gulph of Ormus, the Strait of Mosander and the Gulph of Balsora, which separate it from Persia: On the North, by Terack and the River Euphrates, that part its Frontiers, from those of Diarbeck strictly taken; as also, by Syria: On the West, by the Isthmus of Arabia, otherwise termed the Isthmus of Egypt, or of Suez; the Red-Sea, and the Strait of Babelmandel, by which it is divided from Africa: And on the South, by the Arabian Sea. It is situated under the Tropick of Cancer, between the 14 and 33 Degree of Northern Latitude, and extends itself in Longitude from West to East, that is to say, from the Isthmus of Suez to Cape Rez Algate for the space of 30 Degrees.

II.

The Air of this Country is often excessive hot, and the Soil in many Places is so very rough, sandy, dry and barren, that though a little matter softens Nature, yet the Earth produces not sufficient for its support: The Rivers are but few in number, and those but shallow and small; and Rain is seldom seen there, so that they have nothing but the Dew, which falls in abundance, to water the Land, and mitigate the extreme heat of the Weather. However, the Sea-Coasts, and the Tracts that lie near Rivers are more fruitful, producing good store of Frankincense, Myrrhe, Aloes, Cassia, Spikenard, Cardamum, Cinnamon, Pepper, Dates, Oranges, Lemmons, several sorts of Apples, Honey and Wax: The Inland parts yield Pastures for Horses, Camels and Sheep that deserve much commendation; and the Sea is no less remarkable for affording plenty of Fish, as also Pearls and Coral.

Some of the Arabians living in Towns, exercise Mechanical Trades, follow Merchandizing, and apply themselves to the study of the liberal Arts and Sciences, being well vers'd in Physick, Philosophy, and more especially the Mathematics; insomuch that they are said to have invented the Arithmetical Characters, which are now generally in Use. Others live in the Woods and Mountains, under Tents made of Hair-cloth, after the manner of the Tartars: Upon which account, they were heretofore called Scenite, as also Nomades and Vaggi, or Wanderers; because they often remove their Tents to better Pastures, and drive their Cattel along with them for Forage. These wild Arabs, who are excellent Horse-men and most expert Archers, rove up and down in Troops, to rob Strangers, and frequently lye in wait for the Caravans that travel to Mecca.

Arabia is partly subject to the Turks and partly to the Persians, but the most considerable Part is govern'd by its own Princes and States, who being secur'd by the Mountains valiantly maintain their Liberty against the Assaults of their Enemies: They are generally addicted to the Mahometan Religion, and speak a Language, which in former times did not exceed the Bounds of their Country: but when the Saracens began to enlarge their Dominions it was spread abroad far and wide, and is known at this Day, in Mesopotamia, Syria, Palestine, the Coasts of Africa on the Red Sea, Egypt, and along all the Coasts of the Mediterranean, even to the Strait of Gibraltar, although its Dialects are different in several Places: Moreover it is the Language of the Learned, wherefoever the Mahometan Superstition prevails; for it is forbidden to the Alchoran in any other Tongue but the Arabick.

The whole Continent is usually divided in Arabia Felix, Deserta and Petraa, which are again subdivided into several parts, as is seen in the following Table.

ARABIA divided into three Parts, viz.

Arabia

ARABIA FELIX, i. e. the happy or fruitful Arabia, call'd Iemen by the Inhabitants and Turks, as also Hyaman or Hiemen, and sometimes proper Arabia, is extended farthest towards the South and West; being three or four times larger than Arabia Deserta and Petraea. It is surrounded by Water except on the North, for the Gulfs of Bassora and Ormus, are on the East, the Red Sea on the West, and the Arabian Sea on the South; so that it is a kind of Peninsula; whose Isthmus, being a continued Ridge of Mountains is above 500 Miles over. This Country is the most populous, best cultivated and most fruitful of all Arabia, and its Productions are such as have been particularly mention'd in the beginning of this Chapter; so that it is deservedly dignify'd with the Title of the Happy or Fortunate.

IV. Many Kingdoms and Provinces are comprehended within the Bounds of Arabia Felix; and Golius tells us, that the Arabians themselves divide it into six Countries, to which they reduce all the rest. In M. Sanson's large Map of Asia, it is distinguished into seven principal Parts, the Names of which are these, viz. Oman, Seger, Hadramut, Tehema, Hagiaz, lamama, and Bahrain. Others leave out Segar, and add Ormus to the six other Provinces, which (according to M. Sanson) constitutes a part of Oman.

V. Oman, being the most Eastern Province of this Part of Arabia is wash'd by the Arabian Sea, as also by the Gulphs of Ormus and Bassora: Its most remarkable Towns on the Gulph of Ormus are Calajata; Mascata a noted Mart, (which in some Maps is plac'd under the Tropick of Cancer, and in others farther towards the North) having a convenient Harbour and a strong Castle. This Town was formerly possess'd by the Portugueses, but is now subject to its own Prince, who took it from them not long ago. Sobar, Orsacan, or Orsacan, and Corlean on the Promontory of Mosandan, which lies out over against the Island of Ormus, and communicates its Name to the adjacent Straight. On the Gulph of Bassora, appear Iquir, or Iquir, Nuban and Tabla. In the Inland Country, are Femena, the Capital of a Kingdom of the same Name; Mascalat; Sochar; Masfa; Mirabat; Syr, otherwise call'd Sur and Tjur; Calbat or Quelbat; and Amanzirifdin, or Aman-Zirifdin, the Metropolis of a Kingdom so nam'd, which is otherwise termed Oman by M. Baudrand.

VI. The Province of Seger lies next to Oman, on the South-West, and Part of it on the Coasts of the Arabian Sea. The chief Towns hereabouts, are Alibinali, the Capital of a Kingdom that bears the same Name, which is also call'd, the Kingdom of Seger; Guebelhaman, and Pecher, on the Sea-Coasts.

VII. The Country of Hadramut borders upon Seger, on the West, and extends itself on the Arabian Sea, Straight and Gulph. Its noted Places and Towns, are Dulsar, Fariach, which others call Hadramut; the chief City of the Kingdom; Almacharan; Lagbi; Aden, a very strong Town in the Arabian Sea, and the Capital of the Kingdom of Aden, with a capacious Harbour; formerly subject to the Turks, and at present to the King of Mocha: Mocha, a large well-built Town and a considerable Mart; with a convenient Harbour; on the same Arabian Sea, continuing under the Government of its own Prince, and abounding with Coffee, red Coral, &c. Zibit, a Town likewise of a large Extent, seated on a River of the same Name, the Capital of the Kingdom of Zibit, which is also termed that of Siba, sometime belonging to the Dominions of the Turks, but now govern'd by its own King, who subdu'd it by force of Arms.

On the North of Hadramut appears Tehama, in like manner on the Arabian Gulph, and its Towns of note are Dhafar; Sanaa, which in some Maps is set down within the Territories of Segar; Saada; on the Frontiers; Hans; and Jafab.

The Province of Hagiaz, Hegiaz, or Higiaz, extends itself between Tehama and Arabia Petraea, on the Coasts of the Red Sea, or Arabian Gulph: Some make this Country part of Arabia Petraea, others include it in Arabia Felix; and others again separate it from both. 'Tis a large Country and divided into two Parts, viz. those of Mecca and Medina. The most eminent Places and Towns are Ziden, otherwise nam'd Giadila, on the Coasts of the Red Sea; Mecca the Metropolis of this Part of Arabia, seated at a little distance from the River Chaibar, in a dry, and barren Valley, surrounded on all sides with Mountains; being more especially renowned for the Birth of the false Prophet Mabomet, and frequented by the Turks from all the Corners of the Ottoman Empire, as also by the Mabometans of the other Parts of the World, who go thither in Pilgrimage, to perform their Devotions. This City has impos'd its Name on the neighbouring Gulph, and is the chief of the Principality of Mecca, govern'd by its own Prince, commonly call'd the Cherif, Scheck, or Sultan, one of the most Potent of Arabia, who deriving his Original from Mabomet is highly reverenc'd, and loaded with Presents, by the Turks, Persians, and all the other Tribes of superstitious Votaries; to the end that he may drive the Beduins (a very powerful People of Arabia Felix, who are us'd to set upon the Caravans in their Journey to Mecca) out of his Dominions, or at least hinder them from committing Robberies and Devastations, after their usual manner. M. Bernier, who had an opportunity to view this Country, places Mecca in Arabia Petraea, although in the greatest part of the Maps it is appropriated to Arabia Felix.

The other remarkable Towns of this Province, are Baifat, Tafef, Giadila, Chaibar, on a River of the same Name; and Medina, Medina-Talnabi, or Medina-Tbolnabi, i. e. The Prophet's City, which M. Baudrand sets within the Bounds of Arabia Petraea, situated in a Plain near the River Laakic, and being of a narrower compass than Mecca, but no less famous for the Pilgrimages of the Mabometans, who go thither to visit the celebrated Tomb of their great Prophet, which is rais'd on high and supported with slender Pillars, but not at all Pendulous, nor is there any Iron, Steel, or Load-stone to be seen about it. Moreover, some Writers affirm against the common Opinion, that Mahomet was born there; but it is certain, that when he was forc'd to leave Mecca, by reason that the Inhabitants disapprov'd his Doctrine, he fled to Medina; where being honourably entertain'd, he not only had free liberty to propagate his Religion, but also took up Arms with his Followers, and established the Seat of his Empire; so that it is no wonder that it obtain'd the Name of the Prophet's City. From this Flight of Mahomet the Hegira, or Arabian Accounts of the Day took its Rise, which is refer'd to the 15th. Day of July, A. C. 622. and is still in use among the Mahometans. Between Mecca and Medina lies the Desert, commonly call'd the Sandy-Sea, through which it is not safe to pass without a Mariners-compass and a Guide, by reason of the light Sands that are easily blown up by the Winds, and threaten sudden Destruction to Travellers. Lastly, the Towns of Taref and Ban-Nackel are situated farther in the Inland Country towards the East and North.

Writers

X. On the East of Hagiaz lies the Country of Jamama, whose chief Towns are Salamia, Jamama, the Capital on the River Afsan; Tima, and Hadrana, or Hadruma. In this Province (as it is express'd in the Maps) are the Territories of the Bengebres, a very powerful People, who wander up and down, and infest the Roads with Robberies.

XI. The seventh and last Part of Arabia Felix is Babrain, or Babrein, lying in the middle, between Lamama, on the West, and the innermost Bay of the Persian Gulph, on the East: It is (as they say) almost entirely subject to the Dominion of the Turks, and contains the following considerable Towns, viz. Chetta, and Lassach, otherwise call'd Lacach and Labsa, plac'd by some Geographers in the Province of Oman; being the Capital of the Turkish Government call'd the Beglerbeglick of Labsa, which comprehended Babrain. On the Gulph appear Bisfaia, El-catif, a famous Seaport Town possess'd by the Turks, from which the adjacent Land, at this Day, derives its Name: Babrein, Babrain, or Bahr, over against which lies an Island of the same Name, not far from the Shore, very much noted for the Pearl-fishing that is manag'd thereabouts: Abfa, or Abfo, and Hadanija, which stands farther towards the North.

XII. It is determin'd among the Learned, that the Lands of Cush and Havilah, watered by the Rivers Gihon and Pison, were situated in a Tract of Arabia Felix, abounding with Gold, precious Stones and Spice, and bordering upon the Persian Gulph, into which those Rivers discharge themselves, with the Euphrates and Tigris. This Country was anciently inhabited by the Sabeans, and their Name is sometimes communicated to the whole continent of Spice-bearing Arabia; so that it is not at all to be admir'd, that Arabia Felix was otherwise call'd Sabea: But the Sabeans properly so nam'd, whose Progenitor was Seba, or Saba, the Son of Jochan, were settled on the Coasts of the Arabian Gulph, near the Minai; and their Country produc'd great store of Gold, Gems and Spice; the Metropolis of which was Saba, or Sheba, termed Sabe by Ptolemy, where (according to the determination of many Authors, and particularly Bochart) the Queen of the South Reign'd, who took a Journey to Jerusalem to visit King Solomon. Josephus is induc'd to believe, that the Queen of Sheba was the same with Herodorus's Nicaule, who Reign'd both in Egypt and Ethiopia, and receiv'd her Title from the Metropolis of the latter, which was Saba, before Cambyfes gave it the Name of Maroe, from that of his Sister: But this Opinion of Josephus is expressly confuted by Bochart. The same Bochart besides Solomon's Ophir above-speak'd, Chap. 17. Sect. 15. admits of another Ophir, (as also does M. Sanson) in Arabia Felix, near the Territories of the Sabeans, and in those of the Cassaniti, mention'd by Ptolemy and Stephanus, which yielded great plenty of the finest Gold.

The Saracenes, a People so nam'd from their inclination to Robbery and Rapine, likewise dwelt in Arabia Felix, and (according to Ptolemy) on the Confines of Arabia Petraea, whose Capital City was Jatrippa, or Jatribon, now call'd Medina and Jatrib by the Arabians. These People began first to be in good Repute, when the false Prophet Mahomet having escap'd by flight from Mecca to Jatrippa, was kindly entertain'd, and with the help of the Inhabitants subdu'd the neighbouring Nations: Then the Saracenes in a short time, made themselves Masters of Arabia, Egypt, the greatest Part of Africa, Spain, Corfica, Sardinia, Candia, and a very large Part of Asia, inso-much that afterwards the Ottoman or Turkish Empire, the Kingdom of Persia and many others, took their Rise from that Stock; but now the Name of the Saracenes, through long Disuse, is become obsolete and quite laid aside.

Having thus taken a view of the largest Part of Arabia, situated towards the South, we come next to the Northren, comprehending the Countries of Arabia Deserta and Petraea. ARABIA DESERTA call'd Berii-Arabistan by the Asiatics, as also Arden and Beriana, is bounded on the East, by Yerack; on the North, by Diarbeck, or the River Euphrates, which likewise serves for a Boundary; on the West, by Syria and Arabia Petraea; and on the South, by the Mountains, which separate it from Arabia Felix. This Country is less Mountainous than the two other Parts of Arabia, abounding rather with Sands and vast Deserts; but that Part which lies near the Euphrates is more fruitful and better cultivated. It was partly under the Jurisdiction of the Turks, and is now govern'd by several Princes, one of whom is dignify'd with the Title of a King; and that part of the Holy Land which lies on the East side the River Jordan, is also comprehended within his Dominions: The Barrenness of the Country is a protection to the Princes of it; for the Grand Seignor, sets no great value upon these Deserts, and the Towns are few in number; The most considerable, are Anna, on the River Afsan, and Tangia seated farther towards the West. M. Thevenot and others reckon Balsora among the Towns of Arabia Deserta, but we have already given a Description of it, in the Province of Yerack. The other Places of note on the North, are Tjamma, Sukana, Anna or Anab, an ancient Town, and the Capital of this Part of Arabia; formerly a famous Mart, but now not much frequented; yet remarkable for its situation on the Euphrates, and on the Frontiers of Diarbeck, upon which account it is erroneously attributed to that Country, by

XIII.
Arabia

some Authors Dalia; Rahabat, on the same River; and Sumiscabac, nearer the Borders of Arabia Petraea.

XIV. The Land of Uz, the Seat of the Patriarch Job, is plac'd by Spanhemius in Defart Arabia; yet not towards the Persian Gulph, nor on the Confines of Arabia Felix, nor in the Southern, or Inland Parts of the former; but in its Northern Tract, near the River Euphrates and Mesopotamia. To prove this, he confutes many different Opinions, in the third Chapter of his Treatise call'd The History of Job; and at last in Chap. 4. confirms his own, with a great deal of Learning and Perspicuity: Among other Allegations he asserts, That that part of Arabia Deserta lay nearest of all to the Territories of the Chaldeans, whose Invasion is mention'd in the very beginning of the Book of Job: That the Sabeans a neighbouring People, who fell upon his Cattel and Servants, were not the Sabeans of Arabia Felix, but deriv'd their Original from Seba, the Grand-Son of Abraham, by Keurah, who settled his Abode towards the East, or in Arabia Deserta: That by this means the Sacred Text may be very easily explain'd, wherein it is express'd, that Job was the greatest of all the Men of the East: And that the Habitations of his Friends, and their Design in visiting him agree admirably well with the above-mention'd Seat of this Patriarch. It were needless to produce his other Arguments, but refer the Reader to the Book it self.

Medians. The same Author asserts, That the Madianites, Medaneans, Dedaneans, &c. descended of Keurah, inhabited a Tract of Land, either bordering upon that of Job, or at least, not very far distant from it. Thus he at first assigns to the Madianites, the Eastern Part of Arabia Deserta, who afterwards settled themselves farther towards the South and West, as far as the Coasts of the Arabian Gulph, where it washes Arabia Petraea. He makes the Medaneans next neighbours to the Madianites, who are also confounded with them; and in like manner places the Dedaneans in Arabia Deserta, on the Confines of Syria Palmyrena, at a little distance from the most remote Habitations of the Ilumians: See the sixth Chapter of his above-cited History. Some Authors are also of Opinion, That the Magi, or Wise-Men, who took a Journey from the East to Jerusalem upon our Saviour's Nativity, came from Arabia Deserta; with greater probability, I think, than those who believe that the Country was Arabia Felix: Again, others affirm, that they came from Perfis, Media, or Mesopotamia.

XV. ARABIA PETRÆA, commonly call'd Arabistan by the Natives, and Dase-lik Arabistan by the Turks, otherwise Barraab and Baraba, has for its Bounds on the East, Arabia Deserta; on the South, Arabia Felix; on the West, the Arabian Gulph and Isthmus; and on the North, the Territories of Syria. Goliis and Bernier, as also, M. Bawdrand, who follows their Steps, extend its Borders a great deal farther towards the South, than is usually express'd in the Maps, so that they reckon Medina and Mecca among the Towns of Arabia Petraea; as has been already mention'd. This Country is mountainous, rocky and ill cultivated; subject to the Dominion of the Turks; and its most remarkable inland Towns, are Buseferet; and Herac, or Herat the Capital, formerly call'd Petra and Petra Deserta, which communicated its Name to this Part of Arabia, and was sometime the Royal Seat of the Kings of Moab. On or near the Arabian Gulph, appear, Madian; El-Tor; Eilan, or Hlan; and Faran.

A considerable Part of the Ishmaelites, who XVI. were divided into twelve Tribes, inhabited Arabia ^{Ilumians} Petraea; for their Territories reach'd from the Deserts of Paran and Zur, or from the Red-Sea to the Land of Havilah; that is to say, through Arabia Petraea, Deserta and Felix, as far as the River Euphrates and the Persian Gulph: insomuch that they were intermix'd with the Madianites, as the Chusai, or Cushites, were with both, who all in process of time became one Nation of the Saracens.

Moreover the Israelites in their passage from E-Ifrægypt under the Conduct of Moses, arriv'd in this Part of Arabia, after having pass'd through the innermost Bay of the Red-Sea, and (as some Authors say) near the above-mention'd Town of El-Tor: Afterwards they wander'd through its Deserts nam'd Zin, Sinai, Zur and Paran, for the space of forty Years; making many Stations therein, as is shewn by the common Bible-Maps. Some Foot-steps of their Travels (they say) are still extant in the Defart of Zin, where are to be seen several Inscriptions cut in the Rocks, and reputed to be of the most ancient Assyrian Characters. In the Confines of Arabia Petraea and Egypt, near the Lake Serbonis, or Sirbonis, now call'd Baranguerlis by the Inhabitants; and the Mediterranean Sea (as we are inform'd by Ptolemy, Strabo, Mela and Stephanus) stood Mount Casius, ^{Mount} Casius, which ought to be distinguish'd from another Mount Casius of Antioch, or Proper Syria: This Mountain was heretofore famous for the Temple of Jupiter Casius, and the Tomb of Pompey the Great was erected in its Neighbourhood. The Mountains of Horeb and Sinai often mention'd in Horeb the Sacred Writings, lye very near one another, and Sinai are situated farther towards the South-East: The latter is call'd Gibel Monsa, i. e. Moses's Mount, by the Turks; and the Europeans often term it the Mountain of St. Catharine, whose Body it suppos'd to have been buried there: Both these Mountains are said to be inhabited at this day, by certain Monks depending on the Greek Church, who courteously shew Travellers the Sacred Relicks, and Foot-steps of those things that were heretofore transacted in these Parts. Lastly, Aphon-gaber, or Ezion-geber, was also seated on the Ezion-Coast of Arabia Petraea, being at first one of the geber. Mansions of the Israelites, and afterwards a Seaport Town, belonging to their Jurisdiction, from which King Solomon's Fleet set sail for Ophir.

AFRICA in general.

I. W E are now come to the third and last Part of the Continent of the ancient World, which extends itself farthest towards the South, and is commonly call'd Africa, as also Iphricia by the Inhabitants, as we are inform'd by Leo Africanus; taking its Name (as it is suppos'd) from Afer, the Son, or Companion of the Libyan Hercules, or according to Josephus, from Opher; the Grand-Son of Abraham: Some derive this Name from Ifricus, a certain King of the Country; others from the Arabick Verb Farek, i. e. he divided, because it is separated from Europe by the Mediterranean Sea; and from Asia, by the Red-Sea; and others from the Hebrew Word Aphar, which signifies Dust; but it were needless to insist any longer on the Opinions of the Etymologists, which are very different and altogether uncertain. This Country is also call'd Libya, by the Grecians, from the Daughter of Epaphus and Castiopia, of the same Name, or from the Term Libis denoting the South-West Wind. Africa is bounded on the East, by the Arabian Shimus, Gulph, Straight and Sea; these separate it from Arabia Petraea and Felix; as also by the Ethiopick Ocean: On the South, by the same Ocean; which likewise washes it on the West, together with the Seas of Guinea, Cape Verd and the Canaries, Parts of the Northern Ocean: And on the North, by the Straight of Gibraltar, that divides it from Spain; and the entire Southern Part of the Mediterranean Sea, by which it is cut off from the Southern Tracts of Europe and Anatolia.

II. This vast Continent, with respect to the manner of its Situation is a Peninsula, and indeed the largest of all that are comprehended within the Compass of the old and new Worlds; reaching from North to South, from about the 35th Degree of Northern Latitude, to the same Degree of Southern Latitude: So that the middle of Africa is under the Equator; a very great Part of it in the Torrid Zone; a considerable Part in the Northern Temperate Zone; and the least in the Southern Temperate Zone. It is also extended from West to East, from the 4th. to the 84th. Degree of Longitude: It is very much sharp-pointed, on the South, as also partly on the North, and the middle is most spacious. Lastly, its Figure is compar'd by several Authors to that of a Triangle, and others will have it to resemble an Helmet, an Heart, or a Pyramid.

III. The Air of Africa is excessive Hot, even in those Parts that lye under the Tropicks; and the Heat is very much augmented by the Sands, which reflecting the Rays of the Sun, render these Parts inhabitable, barren and destitute of Water. The Country abounds with huge Mountains of a prodigious Height, with sandy, dry, and most spacious Deserts; with all sorts of noxious Wild-Beasts; particularly Lions, Leopards, Tigers, Panthers, Elephants, Rhinoceros, Unicorn, Camels, Dromedaries, Horses, Wild-Asses, Buffalo's, Sea-Horses, Mermaids, Crocodiles, Apes, Serpents of an extraordinary size, &c. and with dreadful Monsters; nevertheless it affords several Mines of Gold, Silver and Salt: In other Places it is sufficiently fertile, more especially towards the Sea-coasts, producing good store of medicinal Herbs, and some that are noxious, such as Alat, one Drachm of the Juice of which Plant is sufficient to kill a Man in an Hour's time; besides Corn, Spice, Silk, Wine and Oil, with several sorts of Fruit and Cattel, that are extremely Fat and their Flesh very delicate, more especially Mutton, Pork and Beef: There is also great variety of Birds and Fish. The Inhabitants being a mixture of natural Africans and Arabians are numerous, and for the most part Negroes; inasmuch that some are of Opinion, That the natural Colour of the Africans is only Black, and that those among them, whose Complexion is White, are originally Asiaticks, or Europeans. These People are generally robust, of a perverse, subtil and altogether servile Disposition; neither were they ever able either to found, or maintain any considerable Empires. Many of them, who live in Tents, are most expert Archers, and wander up and down from one place to another; being barbarous, cruel, and addicted to Idolatry. A great number of others, who reside in Towns, and are more civiliz'd, profess the Mahometan Religion, as also Christianity and Judaism.

IV. M. Sanson in his French Map, divides modern Africa into twelve Parts, which are, Egypt, Nubia, Abyssinia, Zanguebar, Monomotapa, Cassaria, Congo, Guinea, Nigritia, Sarra, Biledulgerid, and Barbary; to which he adds the Islands that are situated over against Africa, more especially, in the Ethiopick and Atlantick Oceans. However, we shall content our selves only with seven principal Parts, viz. Egypt, Ethiopia, Guinea, Nigritia, Zarra, Biledulgerid and Barbary. The first and second of the above-mention'd Parts, which take up above one half of Africa, extend themselves on the East, and the five others towards the West; Therefore, we shall first describe the former, and then the latter, in the same Order as they have been but now recited; taking a more accurate View of, and insisting longer on the Maritim Countries than the Inland, which are partly unknown to the Europeans; although they are more fortunate than many of the Ancients, who never sail'd round about the Coasts of Africa, as the Portuguese first have done, whom the English and Hollanders afterwards follow'd; the like Navigation being very often perform'd even at this day: Neither did they take any cognizance of that Part which lyes beyond the Mountains of the Moon, and the Spring-head of the River Nile: Neither had they an exact Account of the rest of the Parts of the inner Ethiopia, or of the Provinces of Ethiopia below Egypt, or of the farther Libya: So that they only had a certain Knowledge of the hither Libya, or that Part of Africa which borders upon the Mediterranean Sea.

ther Part on the West, within those of Africa: Afterwards the whole Country was attributed to Africa, and is still reputed to belong to the same Continent. The Soil of Egypt is different, according to the Situation of its several Parts: In those Tracts that are next to the River Nile, it is so over-rich and luxuriant, that the Inhabitants are oblig'd to temper it with Sand. Thus it produces Wheat, Rice, Sugar, Cassa, Dates, and other sorts of Grain and Fruit in such abundance, that great quantities of them are transported into foreign Countries: Infomuch that Egypt, with very good reason, was heretofore styl'd, The publick Granary of the World. The Sheep bring forth Young twice a Year, and the Women are commonly deliver'd of two Children at a Birth; which extraordinary Fruitfulness is occasion'd (as many are of Opinion) by drinking the Nile-Waters: Moreover, the Fruits are almost continually hanging on the Trees. The inland Country lies waste for the most part, and abounds with Sand, which is so Hot during the Summer and moveable by reason of its dryness, that it resembles as it were burning Water, and shines like Glass melted in a Furnace; upon which Account, it is sometimes call'd The fiery Sea. There are very few Springs in Egypt, and no Rivers besides the Nile. It scarce rains but in the Months of December, January and February, yet some Rain has been observ'd to fall beyond that Season, at Alexandria and Rofetto, occasion'd by the nearness of the Sea. Mists are frequent in those Parts, and more especially Dew; without which the Plants and Animals could no longer subsist; but Thunder and Lightning seldom happen. There are also to be seen Mummies and Pyramids, which were devis'd by the Kings, to keep the common People employ'd, or to hinder them from leaving any considerable Estates to their Posterity: These Pyramids (to use Silvius's Expression) were rais'd with a sharp Point at top, beyond all Height that can possibly be carry'd on with Hands; and serv'd as Monuments for the Kings, who were usually bury'd under them. Meltonius assures us, that he saw one that was six hundred Foot high.

THE Country of Egypt first presents itself to our View, which was anciently call'd Aeria, by the Phenicians, and Mitzraim, or Misraim in the Sacred Writings; as also Chania, or Chemis, i.e. the Land of Cham: It is likewise termed even at this day, Masfir by the Turks, and Masfir, or Chemi by the Cophites, who are its native Inhabitants, and most constantly retain the ancient Names of Places. Its Bounds on the East, are the Red-Sea, Arabia Petraea, and the holy Land; on the North, the Mouths of the River Nile, and the Egyptian Sea; on the West, the Kingdom of Barca, being the most Eastern Part of Barbery, and the sandy Desert of the same Name; and on the South, Nubia, and the Coast of Abex. It is situated within the 22d. and 32d. Degrees of Northern Latitude, and extends it self from West to East, in the Southern Part, where it is broadest, for the space of seven Degrees; so that its shape may be said to resemble the Figure of a long Square.

II. Some of the Ancients look'd upon Egypt as the fourth Part of the old World, distinguish'd from Europe, Asia, and Africa: Others enclos'd that Part of it which lies out from the Nile towards the East, within the Bounds of Asia, and the o-

The Egyptians are said to be umorous, faint-hearted, slothful, stupid, ignorant of all manner of good Literature, and of a haughty, yet servile Disposition: The common People are much addicted to Lying, Robbery and Rapine, extremely covetous of Money, and treacherous: They take great delight in drinking Coffee and smoking Tobacco; and during the Months of December, January, February and March, are employ'd in the hatching of Chickens in Ovens, after the Eggs have been first made warm with Straw. The Cophi, Cophites, or Kopten likewise live in Egypt, a particular Sect, whose Number is now a great deal less than in ancient times: They begin the Year from the eighth day of September, which consists of twelve Months, allowing thirty days to every Month; and when that Term is expir'd, they add five days, before the beginning of a new Year. Their

Their Kalendar is in use among the Turks; besides whom, there are also in Egypt, Arabians, whose Language is there very common, with Aboors, Greeks and Jews.

IV. The whole Country is at present subject to the Dominion of the Turks, who among their 25 General Governments, reckon the Beglerbeglick of Cairo, or Missir, under which are four Sangiacates; allotting at the same time twelve Cassilifs, or lesser Governments, in the Kingdom of Burca and Egypt: But we shall divide the latter into four principal Parts, viz. the lower, middle and upper Egypt, and the Coast of the Red-Sea

The lower Egypt, now call'd Errif by the Inhabitants, and Babni by Meltonius, takes up the Northern Tracts that are situated towards the Arms and Mouths of the River Nile. M. Sanfon and others reckon up four Cassilifs, or Provinces, within its Jurisdiction, viz. Manfoura, Garbia, Menoufia and Calionbeck, with the Territory of Alexandria: The first of these extends it self on the East, beyond the Arms of the Nile; and the rest lye between them, taking place among the principal Cassilifs, more especially Garbia, which produces great store of Sugar, Rice, Oil, Flax, Grains, and Fruits.

The Towns of this Part of Egypt, as well as of the others were formerly very numerous; but Time that consumes all things, has now almost bury'd them in their own Ruins. The most considerable of these seated on the East, being generally destitute of Walls, Trenches and Ramparts, and only fence'd with a Castle on a Hill, are Miganmir, a large and neat Town, on the Eastern Bank of the Nile, in the middle, between Cairo and Damiata: Manfoura, a very fair and spacious Town, on the same side of the River: Damiata, in Arabick Damiat, or Dimjat, stands likewise on the Eastern Bank of the Nile, in the form of an Half-Moon, at the distance of eight Italian Miles from its Mouth; being after Cairo the largest, neatest, richest, and most populous City of the whole Country of Egypt, and a renowned Mart, to which the Merchants resort in great numbers, from all the Parts of Turkey: This Town is taken by several Authors for ancient Pelusium, but others affirm, that it only grew up out of the Ruins of that City, and was built on the other side of the River. Tanis call'd Tzohan by the Hebrews, not far from the Tanatick Mouth of the Nile, where King Pharaoh heretofore kept his Court, and Moses perform'd many Miracles: It is now quite ruin'd, but the Place still retains the Name of Tanes. Semennut, a large Town, in form of a Triangle, plac'd by Meltonius, on the West of the Nile. Elmalas, and Bowler, on the Sea-coasts.

The most remarkable Places of this Part situated towards the West, are Rosetta, a little but populous Town, where the heat of the Air is more moderate, distant about an hour's Journey from the Mouth of the Nile, and fortify'd with two Castles. Bochir: And Alexandria, or Alessandria, according to the Italian Dialect; founded by Alexander the Great, in the 12th Olympiad, and now call'd Scanderik, by the Turks; anciently the Metropolis of Egypt, most renowned for the study of Philosophy, a famous Library, and Men of extraordinary Learning; and of so great Eminency, that it far surpass'd all the Cities of the Roman Empire, except Rome, in Dignity,

Largeness, Wealth, the number of Inhabitants, State-holds of Building, Store of Corn, and Plenty of all manner of Provisions: This City is now much fallen from its ancient Grandeur, nevertheless it is a noble Mart, and its Harbour very convenient, where the Indian Spices were formerly brought to be transported thence throughout the whole Continent of Europe. We are inform'd by Meltonius, that the House where the seventy Interpreters translated the Bible into Greek, that is to say, the Version commonly call'd the Septuagint, is still to be seen at Alexandria, and the same Author makes mention of the following Towns of good Note, seated on the Nile, between Rosetta and Cairo, viz. Tfeni; Motabis; Teirut; Sindian; and Fruva, a very ancient, large and fair Town, in a most pleasant Champaign Country, the Fruits of which are highly esteem'd throughout all the Territories of Egypt.

Between the lower Egypt, on the North, and VI. the upper, on the South, lyes middle Egypt, now call'd Beckria, as also Demefor by some Writers, Egypt. and Vofani by Meltonius; to which M. Sanfon and others attribute three Cassilifs, viz. those of Giza and Fium, on the left side of the Nile; and Cairo, on the right. The capital Towns of this Country on the West of the Nile, are, or were Memphis, nam'd Moph, or Noph in Sacred Writ, seated on the Western Bank, of the Nile, a little above the place where that divides it self into several Branches, or Arms; heretofore the Royal Seat of the Egyptian Kings, consecrated to the God Apis, who was worshipp'd under the shape of an Ox: And (as the Arabians give it out) the Habitation of Joseph; near which the Pyramids were built, and Joseph's Pillars, that serve to measure the increase and decrease of the Nile; being (according to Meltonius) the first of all that were erected on that River: But the City of Memphis now lies waste, altogether destitute of Inhabitants, and its Ruins are call'd Menchis, by M. Baudrand. Giza anciently Arfinoe, noted for its Labyrinth; formerly an eminent Town, but now reduc'd to a meer heap of Rubbish, rais'd up of it as were to a Mountain, and nam'd Medinet Fares, by the Inhabitants: And Fium, a large and most populous Town, which rose up out of the Ruins of Arfinoe, and is water'd by the River Nile, in a very fruitful and most pleasant Country, abounding with Vines, which are to be found no where else in Egypt, as also with Figs, Pears, Oranges, Lemmons and Peaches.

On the East of the Nile appear the following Places and Towns of good Note, viz. Bulak, a large Village or Town (as others will have it) on the River-side, which is the Harbour of Cairo: Old Cairo termed Massy by the Arabians, lying in the middle, between the Nile and new Cairo, over against the place where Memphis was heretofore situated; formerly a spacious and magnificent City, but now almost reduc'd to Ruins: being the same (according to Peter della Valle) with old Babylon, so call'd by the Chaldeans; but Meltonius is of Opinion, that the latter stood a little farther, towards the South, and says that besides the vast heaps of Rubbish, there are only left three Churches belonging to the Coptites: And new Cairo, otherwile call'd Grani Cairo and Al-cairo, seated in a most pleasant Champaign Country, on the foot of a sandy Hill, having a Castle on its top, which is the chief Bulwark of the Town, and the Seat of the Turkish Governour: It is a most wealthy, populous and spacious City; and not only the Metropolis of Egypt, but also of all Africa; the largeness of which is every where highly celebrated; but several modern Authors assure us, That retrenching old Cairo, and Bulak, which others include under the same Denomination, it does not exceed in Compass the City of Paris in France: However, it is the only City among those of the whole Levantine Continent, that is dignify'd with the Title of The Great, and was formerly the Royal Seat of the Califs. Some part of its Suburbs was first built by one Gienhar, and call'd Alcabira, i. e. The Victorious, whence the whole Extent of the old and new Town was afterwards known among the Italians, and the rest of the European Nations, by the Name of Alcairo. It was taken by the Turks, with the whole Country, A. D. 1517, and ever since that time has abounded with Turkish Mosques: There are also fix old Churches of the Greeks, and several others belonging to the Cophites. This famous City is only distant two Miles from the right-side Bank of the Nile, a Rivulet proceeding from which runs through the middle of it, at high Tide; as also 80 Miles from the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea, to the South, and 120 from Alexandria, to the South-East. About three Furlongs below Grand-Cairo, the Nile is divided into its two largest Arms, and forms the Country of Delta. At the distance of 60 Miles from Cairo, on the South, Emelofena, a considerable Town stands likewise near the Eastern side of the same River.

VII.
Upper Egypt.

The upper Egypt, or Sayd, borders on the North, upon middle Egypt, and on the South upon Nubia and the Coast of Abex. M. Sanson and others place five Cassilis within its Bounds, viz. Ebeneisief, Manflost and Girgio, on the Western Bank of the Nile; and Minio and Cherkeffi, on the Eastern. These Parts of this large Province which lie out farthest on both sides of the Nile, are beset with a continued Ridge of prodigious Mountains of Sand, that are altogether barren and untill'd.

The chief Towns of the upper Egypt, on the West of the Nile, are Benisnaif, otherwise call'd Benisuef and Ebensuef; Minia; Manefeloni; Said; Girgio; Barbanda; and Asna, anciently Syene, seated next to the Tropick of Cancer, not far from the Confines of Ethiopia; heretofore the utmost Boundary of the Roman Empire, and now of the Turkish. On the East of the Nile, appear Asuan; Chana; and Minio, taken (by some Authors) for the ancient Egyptian Thebes, through the middle whereof the Nile runs, and on which Homer conferr'd the Epithet of ἑκαθύμυρον, i. e. having an hundred Gates: Others will have these Gates to be so many Courts of Princes, or Porches of Temples, or Stables built near the River: The whole Country of Egypt was sometime call'd Thebe from this City, which was of a vast Extent, even beyond all belief; most populous, and transcendently magnificent for its Temples, Offerings, Colossus's, Obelisks, numerous Sepulchres of Kings, and hanging Garden, but was afterward razed to the very Ground. However, M. Baudrand takes the Town of Girge, or Georga, and Bano Theves, for that of Thebes, from which the adjacent Territory deriv'd the Name of Thebaïs. In passing farther towards the North we meet with Ichmin and Almona, two Towns of good Note.

The fourth and last part of Egypt, or the Coast of the Red-Sea, lies in the middle, between the upper and middle Egypt, on the West, and the Red-Sea, or Arabian Gulph, on the East. The capital Towns of this Part, is Suez, or Sues, seated on the innermost Bay of the said Sea, and communicating its Name to the Arabian Isthmus, which is scarce two Degres broad; although some will have it extended for the space of forty German Miles. The Sultans of Egypt endeavour'd at several times to cut a Channel through this Isthmus, and by that means to make a communication between the Red-Sea and the Mediterranean, so as Ships might sail directly out of one into the other; but the Work could never as yet be brought to Perfection. The other Northern Towns of this Coast are Elmena; Grondol, or Grodol; and Azirna: The rest are situated towards the South, viz. Fabelezait; Hibelezait; Suguan; Dacati; Cosfir; San; Zibith; and Buga.

Hitherto we have been treating of the modern Division of Egypt, which was anciently at first divided into Aegyptus superior & inferior, i. e. the upper and lower: The latter extended it self on the North, and its Royal Seat was Tanis, above-Specify'd: But the former situated on the South, had Memphis for its Metropolis, of which likewise a particular Account has been already given: Afterwards the whole Country of Egypt was divided into three Parts, viz. the lower, middle and upper.

Aegyptus inferior, or lower Egypt was otherwise simply call'd Egypt, and Delta by the Grecians, by reason of its triangular Figure, and the Resemblance it bears with that Letter of the Greek Alphabet. According to Pliny and other Authors, it is properly but a Part of the lower Egypt, comprehended within the most remote Arms of the River Nile; that is to say, the Canopick, on the West; and the Pelusian, on the East; bordering also on the North, upon the Mediterranean Sea; and on the South, upon the Nile, in that Place where it spreads out its several Branches, or Arms. In the lower Egypt, sometimes two Provinces were reckon'd and sometimes four, viz. Aegyptus prima, Aegyptus secunda, Angustannica prima, and Angustannica secunda. The Land of Goslen, which the Israelites inhabited, was in clos'd within the Bounds of the lower Egypt, on the East of the Nile, towards Arabia Petrae and Palestine, being a Champain Country, abounding with Grass, and affording admirable Pasturage. The Land of Ramefes constituted a Part of it, in which (as some say) was a Town of the same Name. The Israelites set forward from Ramefes in their March to Succoth, a Town so call'd from the Tents of the Arabians; and the most ancient Kings of Egypt took their Name from that Province.

Aegyptus media, or middle Egypt, so term'd from its Situation, which it obtain'd between the lower, on the North, and the upper, on the South, was also call'd Heptanomis; because it comprehended seven Nomi, or particular Governments. M. Sanson attributes but one Province to this Part under the Denomination of Arcadia, whence middle Egypt was also sometimes express'd by that Name.

XII. Egyptus superior, or the upper Egypt, otherwise nam'd Thebais, took up the most Southern Tracts, more especially the Eastern Part of the Province of Said; lying between the Red-Sea, or Arabian Gulph, on the East; and the River Nile on the West. It was likewise sometimes divided into two Provinces, viz. Thebais prima and Thebais secunda.

XIII. Lastly, it ought to be observ'd, That these three Divisions of Egypt contain'd several Nomi, which is a Term deriv'd either from the Greek, or Egyptian Language, and signifies (according to Pliny's Interpretation) certain particular Governments: For Nomus (as Beckman explains the Word) is a Place proper for pleading, or determining Law-Suits. Some Authors assure us, that these peculiar Governments were sometimes thirty in number: Sesoftris makes thirty six, attributing ten of them to the Province of Delta, as many to Thebais, and the other sixteen to the Countries that lye between those Parts: Others reckon up forty two, and others again, a great many more. It is also observable, That the Government of every one of these Nomi was committed to certain Magistrates styl'd Nomarche, who rul'd in their respective Territories, as so many petty Kings; and had the management of the Royal Treasury and Publick Revenues.

AFTER having pass'd through Egypt, we come next to Ethiopia, which is bounded on the North, by the same Egypt and Biledulgerid; on the West, by the Desert of Zaara, Negroe-Land, the Kingdom of Guinea, and the Seas of Congo and Caffaria; on the South, by the Casserian Sea; as also on the East, by the same Sea, and that of Zanguebar, with the Arabian Sea, Straight and Gulph. So that this Country is, beyond compare, the largest of all the other Parts of Africa: For it extends itself from the Tropic of Cancer, or from the 23d Degree of Northern Latitude, to the 35th of Southern; and from West to East, from the 34th to the 54th Degree of Longitude.

Ethiopia is usually divided into the upper and lower, but all Authors are not agreed with respect to the extent of the former, which is otherwise call'd, the inner Ethiopia. For some only have Abissinia comprehended under that Denomination, and others Abissinia and Nubia, to which others add the whole Country of Zanguebar. According to the last Account, the upper Ethiopia has for its Bounds on the North, Egypt and the Desert of Barca; on the West, the Desert of Zaara, with the Kingdoms of Biafara and Congo;

i. Ethiopia.

ii. Upper Ethiopia.

on the South the Kingdom of Monocromgi and the Territories of the Caffers; and on the East, the Sea of Zanguebar, that of Arabia, the Strait of Babelmandel, and the Red Sea. Among the Parts of the upper Ethiopia, Nubia and Abissinia are situated on the West, and water'd by the River Nile; but the Country of Zanguebar being altogether maritime, lies out, on the Eastern Sea-coasts.

III.
Nubia.

We shall first take a View of the Western Part and particularly of Nubia, call'd Nenba, by the Africans, which is dignify'd with the Title of a Kingdom, and is of a much lesser extent than Abissinia. It borders on the North, upon Egypt and the Defart of Barca; on the West, upon the Defart of Zaara and the Kingdom of Biafara; on the South, upon part of Abissinia and Mojacoland; and on the East, upon the same Abissinia and the Coast of Abex. The whole Country is surrounded with Mountains, almost on all sides except the Eastern, and its shape resembles the Figure of a long Square. It is water'd by the Rivers Nubia and Nile, and was anciently inhabited by a certain People, whom Strabo calls Nobe, Ptolemy Nubi, and Pliny Nabei; and who were the most eminent of old Ethiopia. The Air is excessive hot, and the Soil is of a different Nature in several Parts; for those which lie next to the Nile are render'd very fruitful by the overflowing of that River: But several other Parts are barren, and so extremely dry, that Men often perish for Thirst, in regard that there are some vast Tracts of Land, in which not so much as one Spring or River is to be seen throughout their whole extent. The Wood and Defart of Zeu are generally express'd in the Maps, on the South of the River Nubia. The Country of Nubia abounds with Elephants, Civet-cats, Gold, Sanders and Ivory: The Natives are said to be courageous subtil, of a strong Constitution, and of a very black Colour. They profess the Religion of the Abissines, are for the most part addicted to Trafficking, or to the art of Husbandry, and build their Houses with Chalk. Many are of Opinion, that the strolling Crew of Fortune-tellers commonly call'd Gyppies, derive their Original from this Country.

IV.

The King of Nubia is a very potent Prince, the chief Towns of whose Dominions are seated near or upon the Nile and the Nubia, or between those Rivers; and there are also (according to M. Sanson) several Territories which bear the same Names. The Towns, on or near the Nile, are Falac in an Island made by that River; Risa; Sila, or Sala; Angimi and Zaghaira, at a greater distance; Nubia, the Metropolis of Nubia, according to the opinion of modern Authors, seated on the Western side of the Nile, Dancala, or Dangala, taken for the Capital Town of the whole Kingdom, by Leo Africanus, Sanubus, Baudrand and others; Cusa, and Gorham. On the Eastern side of the Nubia, at a greater or lesser distance from it are Sabaha, Mathan, Omot, and Coala: Tagua is remarkable for its situation in the Confines of the Defart of Barca, not far from the Western side of the Nubia; but Samma and Tamalma stand on the Bank of the same River: The other Towns between the Nubia and the Nile, are Salom, or Salent, Zaghara, Denba, Dargan, Dagra, Damoela, Fadia, and Zigida, or Sigida.

V.

The second Part of the upper Ethiopia is extended in like manner on the West, and known by the Names of Abissinia, Abessia, Habassia, Ha- Abissinia.

Abessina, proper Ethiopia, and the Kingdom or Empire of the Abissines. In the sacred Writings, this Country is call'd Lud, and the Inhabitants Ludeans; as also El-Habasci, Ethabascobi, or Abassi, and the Dominions of the great Negus, by the Arabians: Moreover it is falsely termed the Empire of Prester John, or Precious John, so that it will not be improper here to give a short account of the original of that Error. About five hundred Years ago, (others reduce the Term to a later Date) a certain Christian Prince establish'd his Kingdom, far and wide in the most remote Borders of Asia, who was imbued with Nestorius's Principles, and nam'd Fubanna; as also Ung-Chan, Um-Can, and in the Persian Language, Padesha Prestigiani or Prestegiani, i. e. an Apostolical, Orthodox, or Catholic King; which Title was conferr'd on him by the Armenians, or his own Nestorian Subjects. He was not an Ethiopian, or an Abissine by Nation, neither did he ever fly for refuge into Ethiopia; yet many are of Opinion, that the Name of Prester John, which afterwards became most famous throughout Europe, deriv'd its Original from the aforesaid Royal Title of Prestigiani, peculiar to that Monarch. For a Report was spread abroad, that this Emperor Prester was very potent, and a Christian by Profession, but it was not known where he Reign'd: In the mean while, Peter Covillanum, Ambassador from John II. King of Portugal to Prester John, having receiv'd information in Asiatick India, that there was a very powerful Christian Prince in Ethiopia, below Egypt, he went to him and resided for some time in his Court; insomuch that perceiving that many Things, which were reported concerning Prester were suitable to his Character, and that the same Prince was styl'd in the Persian Tongue by the Levantine Merchants, Prester-Chan, i. e. a King or Prince of the Slaves; as also, among his own Subjects Gian, or Belul-Gian, i. e. A precious Jewel, and Gyam, or a potent King, he was fully persuaded, that this Prince was certainly the Prester John so much talk'd of, to find out whom he had undertaken that Journey, by the special command of his own King. Thus this Ambassador first impos'd the Name of Prester John on the Emperor of the Abissines, and the Portugueses call'd him by the same Name, particularly Damianus à Goes, Francis Alvarez, and several other Authors; by which means the erroneous Notion was convey'd throughout the whole European Continent, and is not as yet quite rooted out.

Abissinia is usually bounded, in the Maps, by Nubia, on the North, and a small Part of the Coast of Abex on the East, on the same Coast of Abex; Ajan and Zanguebar; by the South by the Empire of Monocromgi; and on the West, by part of the Kingdom of Nubia, with those of Congo and Biafara. This Empire was heretofore extended to the Arabian Gulph, but is now altogether destitute of Harbours, neither is there any Passage into it from the Sea-coasts, but through the Territories of other Princes: The Kingdom of Congo was also Tributary to it, nevertheless the Gale, a certain People hereafter more particularly mention'd, found means to subdue a great Part of Abissinia, and still retain it it in their possession. The Air of this Country, although situated entirely under the Torrid Zone, is said to be moderately hot, where it is Hilly or Plain, but the Valleys are scorcht'd with the Sun-beams. In some Tracts it is rocky, full of Caverns, rough and altogether barren; but the Champion Parts and those that lye near the Rivers, are otherwise dispos'd, abounding with Fruits, Pulse and several sorts of Plants, which are often miserably devour'd by innumerable Swarms of Locusts: They also produce Sugar, Honey, Wax, Ginger, Vines, Flax, Cotton, all kinds of Metal and Sulphur, and afford Pasture to many Herds of wild and tame Beasts.

VII. The Abissinians are very numerous, of a black Complexion, more especially those that live nearest to the Equinoctial Line, of a towards disposition, and capable of attaining to the knowledge of Arts and Sciences; yet somewhat lazy, imprudent and unskillful in the Art of Physick. The most wealthy among them usually wear silken Garments, and the meaner sort, those that are made of Cotton. They build their Houses with Straw and Lime, or Chalk, and take delight in eating raw, or parboild Meat; causing three particular Dishes to be serv'd up to Table, at the same time, viz. one of Peas cut in form of a Cross, another of Fire, and a third of Ashes: So that the first of these Dishes represents a Symbol of the Redemption of Mankind, the second of Hell and the last of Death. Besides their common Language, they also use another, which comes near the Chaldeick, and is appropriated to Divine Service, and the writing of Histories. These People at first embrac'd the Jewish Religion, which (as it is said to be recorded in their Publick Annals) King Melech, the Son of Solomon, by Maqueda Queen of Sheba introduc'd into their Country: Afterwards they imbibed the Principles of Christianity, nay they reckon themselves among the first Professors of it; in regard that the Gospel was first preach'd in Abissinia, either by the Apostle St. Philip, or the Eunuch of Queen Candace, which (as Pliny says) was a common Name to their Queens. They also encounter'd the Mahometans several times in defence of the Christian Religion, with a great deal of Valour and good Success: They have a Patriarch at this Day, termed Abuna, who is usually confirm'd by the Patriarch of Alexandria, and constantly adhere to their ancient Rites and Ceremonies; rejecting those of the Roman Catholics, which the Jesuits have endeavoured with indefatigable labour to propagate in those Parts, but were not able to compass their Design.

II. The King of Abissinia is commonly styl'd Negus, or Neguz, by his Subjects, which Term denotes an Emperor, or King; but the Arabians call him Atichabassi, or Elhabeschi from whence the Abissines, or Abassians take their Name. He is also call'd the Great Negus by several Authors, and by some Paep, or Profer John, but falsely or at least improperly, as it has been already observ'd: He is a very rich and potent Prince, deriving his Original (according to the receiv'd Traditions of his Family) from King Solomon, of whose Son Melech, or David, he supposes himself to be descended in a right Line. He has no settled Court, but removes it from one Place to another, within the space of a few Days; being attended by numerous Guards, and furnished with a vast number of Tents, Camels, Mules, Horses, Asses, Oxen, and all sorts of Household-stuff, Provisions and Treasures.

Abissinia is divided into many Kingdoms or Provinces, according to the modern Maps, in the following of which it may not be improper to reduce them to three Articles: For they either extend themselves on the West, or through the middle of the Country, or towards the East. The first of these, is the Island of Meroe, with the Merce Provinces of Ximench, Ambiancanova, Dambee, Ile, Vangua and Dannu. Meroe a very large Island which the Nile heretofore made on the West, and the Astaboras, on the East, is mention'd by Josephus under the Name of Saba; but it is now commonly call'd Gaegaer, and Nesbe by the Inhabitants (according to M. Marmol) being separated in the Maps from Nabia only by the River Nile. The Ancient Authors assure us, That it abounded with the best sort of Metals, Gems Ebony, Palm-trees, most delicious Wine, Elephants and Inhabitants, whose Number is extremely multiply'd by Pliny. Some are of opinion, that the Queen of Sheba came out of Meroe to visit King Solomon; but we are rather induc'd to place her Dominions in Arabia Felix. The chief Towns of this Island are said to be Elera; in the Eastern Part, and Saraboes, in the Western. However Hieronymus Lobus, a Portuguese, affirms in his Ethiopick History, that the Nile does not form any Island in that Country, and therefore he takes no notice of Meroe, which is also omitted by many other Writers of good Note.

The Province of Ximench is plac'd in the Maps, Ximench on the South of Nabia, and on the West of the cha. Nile, and its Towns are Amasen, on the Northern side of the Lake; and Syra, on the Southern. The Province of Ambiancanova borders upon Ambianmencha, on the South, and has a Town of the same name. Dambee, is extended on the West Dambee. and East of the Nile, containing the Town of Dambee, which some take for the Capital of Abissinia, and Chedassan, on the Western Bank of the River. Vangua, lies in the middle, between Vangua. Dambee, on the East, and the Lake Niger, on the West, and its Towns are said to be Maitagazi and Vangua. Dannu, is situated under the Dannu Equator, and comprehends the Towns of Guga, Colla and Dannu. Some Authors likewise reckon Malemba, a Territory lying between the Kingdom of Angola, on the West, and the Lake of Zambre, on the East, among the Western Provinces of Abissinia; but others make it a Part of Cassaria, or a particular Province belonging to the Kingdom of Monoemgi.

The Kingdoms, or Provinces that take up the middle of Abissinia, are many in number, and the chief of them follow in their order, viz. Nareca. Nareca, on the Frontiers of Monoemgi and the Lake Zambra: Zer, with a Town of the same Name, Zer. on the said Lake: Cufates, with a Town so named on the Lake of Zara: Goyama: Agas, a Province and Town; Bagamibri, or Begamebri, a Kingdom of a very large Extent, beset with Mountains; the Towns of which, are Azura; Theraa; Ambadara; Sera, or Sosa; Baza; Ermisa; and Machada: The Province of Beleguanza, has a Town of the same Name, and that of Amara, Amara. or Amabara is usually plac'd next to the Equinoctial noctial Line on the North, where is to be seen Amara a prodigious high and steep Mountain, of a very difficult Passage, having a spacious Plain on the top of it, on which is built a Town, or Castle, where the Royal Progeny are educated, who never appear among the retinue of the Great Negus, lest they should be burthensome to the Subjects, or give any occasion of raising Seditions. The other Provinces on the South of the Equator, are Amhian; Nova; Quara; Fungi; on the Lake Zoflan; Gavi; Gazabela; Turu; on the Confines of Monoemgi and Zanguebar; Gorga, more towards the North; Zaflan; and Gemen. Moreover, every one of these Provinces are said to have a Town of the same Name.

X. The Provinces of Abissinia, that lye furthest towards the East, are Gora, on the North of Zanguebar, next to the Equinoctial Line; Oxia; Xoa; Fatigar, or Fategar; and the Land of Dobas, with a Town of the same Name: Angota, is of a larger Extent than the former, and its Situation is more Western: The most remarkable Places of this Province, are Anguina; Olabi; Fugabella; Bagana; Angota; and Bermaria. Tigre-mabon, or Tigreca, borders upon Angota, on the North, and contains the following noted Towns, viz. Mandela; Corcora; Bellea; Agro; Sabaina; and Chaxumo, the Capital of the Province, heretofore (according to the Opinion of several Authors) the Royal Seat of the Queen of Sheba, who visited King Solemon, and of whom we have already made mention, in treating of Arabia Felix. Others are induc'd to believe, that some marks of the Name of Sheba, or Saba, are still left in the Town of Sabaina, just before specify'd. Lastly, the Kingdom of Barnagasso presents it self to our View, being the most Northern of all the Provinces of Abissinia. It is taken by some Authors for a Part of Tigre-mabon, and its Towns are Zama; Barua, or Debrava the Capital; and Emacen.

Earna-gasso.

XI. Thus we have given a particular Account of Abissinia, as it is commonly set down in the modern Maps; but the Relations of several Travellers, who have had an Opportunity to view this Kingdom, do not at all agree with those Descriptions. They do not make Abissinia to reach beyond the Equator, nor even so far as that Line: For (according to their Computation) it is only situated between the 8th. and the 17th. Degree of Northern Latitude; so that it does not extend it self, on the East, as far as the Kingdom of Congo, nor even beyond the River Nile: Therefore they determine the Extent of Abissinia not to be equal to that of Spain; and that those Parts of the Kingdom, which are at present under the Dominion of the Emperor of the Abissines, are so inconsiderable, that he scarce seems to deserve the Character of a potent Monarch: Besides, that there is no small Difference, with respect to the Names, Situation, and Number of the Provinces: Those that are left in the Possession of this Prince, take up the Northern Part of the Country, and are divided into the greater and lesser.

The largest of these Provinces may be reckon'd up according to the following Order, viz. Tigreca, Bagamdiri, Dambea, Goyama, Nareca, Xoa, part of which is only included by others within the Dominions of the Great Negus, and Amara: The most remarkable among them is the Kingdom of Tigreca, the Vice-Roy of which is known by the Name of Tigre-mabon; whence the Province is also call'd Tigreca and Tigre-mabon: The Kingdom of Barnagasso, or Babar-nagae, (according to the common Dialect) i. e. The Governour of the Sea, is a Part of Tigreca, that lies next to the Arabian Gulph. The lesser Provinces now subject to the Emperor of the Abissines, are Magaza, Seguede, or Sagued, Olcait, or Holcait, Sacabal, Semen, Salai, Salao, Dobas and Oleca. The Southern Part of Abissinia was invaded A. D. 1537, by the Galle, or Galle, a warlike People, who came out of Guinea, and in process of time settled themselves in Ethiopia; being induc'd to undertake that Expedition, upon account of the Richness of the Soil, and the natural Disposition of the Abissines, who are inclin'd to perform Acts of Devotion, rather than military Exploits: And indeed, those People would have long ago depriv'd the Emperor of all his Dominions, had they not been divided into opposite Parties, destroying one another, with mutual Slaughters. Hicronymus Lobus, a Portuguese Author above-cited, makes mention of ten Provinces that were subdu'd, and are at present possess'd by the Galle, viz. Angotina, or Angota, Oifat, Doar, Ballia, or Balia, Fatigar, or Fategar, Ogga, or Oga, Manza, Cambatae, Damur, and Bizam, of which the six first are situated on the East, and the four last towards the West. Others increase the number of these Provinces.

Having thus taken two several Views of Abissinia, it remains only to give a short Account of the principal Lakes, with which it is water'd; but neither are all Authors agreed with respect to their Number. The most remarkable of those commonly express'd in the modern Maps, in the Western and Southern Parts of this Country, are Niger, Zambre and Zaflan. The Lake Niger being the least and the most Northern lyes between Congo and Abissinia, and extends it self in Length (according to M. Robbe) from North to South, for the space of 70 Leagues; as also 30 in Breadth, where it is widest, and about 160 in Compass. The Lake Zambra, Zambre, Zambra, or Zambeza, Zambra is situated on the South of the Equinoctial Line, and reaches to the Kingdom of Monoemgi, taking up (as we are inform'd by the same M. Robbe) 100 Leagues in Length from North to South, 80 in its utmost Breadth, and above 350 in Compass; and having a very large Island in the middle. Many are of Opinion, that the Lake of Zaire, or Zara, is the same with Zambra; yet those Zara Authors who have given us an accurate Description of this part of Abissinia, take no notice of the former: In the Maps, the Northern Part of the same Lake is commonly call'd Zara, and the Southern Zambra, taking both Names from two Towns of the same Denomination; the former seated on the West of it, and the other on the South. The Lake Zaflan lying out farther towards the East, is 140 Leagues long from South to North, and 60 broad, and takes up above 300 in Compass.

Zaflan Lake.

They that place Abissinia on the North of the Equinoctial Line without enlarging its Bounds so far on the West, do not reckon the above-specify'd Lakes within those Territories; but only make mention of one considerable Lake, which is generally omitted in the modern Maps: It is call'd, The Lake of Dambea, and Bar-Dambea, Damb Lake.

the Kingdom of Dambee, where it is situated in the North-Western Part of Abissinia: It is surrounded on all sides with Mountains, from which a great number of Rivers and Brooks issue forth, and contains many Islands; the chief of which, are Galila, Mecarat, Deca and Debra-Mariam.

This Lake is broader in its Northern Part, than in the Southern, and extends it self farthest from North to South; the Length of 25 French Leagues being usually attributed to it, and the Breadth of 15 of the same Leagues.

C H A P. IV. ZANGUEBAR.

I. FROM the Western Part of the upper Ethiopia, we pass to the other, which is situated towards the East, and commonly call'd Zanguebar, or Zanzibar, by the Arabians, as it were the Country of Negroes. Indeed, all the Sea-coasts of the upper Ethiopia are comprehended under this Name, by M. Sanson; in whose Maps they are bounded on the North, by the upper Egypt; on the West, by Nubia, Abissinia and the Kingdom of Monomugi; on the South, by Cassaria, or the Territories of the Cassers; and on the East, by the Sea of Zanguebar, with the Arabian Sea, Straight and Gulph. Others will have this Country only to consist of the Southern Part of Zanguebar, as we have but now set out its Bounds, lying between the Coast of Ajan and Cassaria. But M. Sanson divides these Coasts taken at large, into three Parts, viz. those of Abex, Ajan and Proper Zanguebar.

II. The Coast of Abex has for its Boundaries on the North, the upper Egypt, from which it is separated by the Mountains; on the West, Nubia and Abissinia; on the South, part of Abissinia and the Coast of Ajan; and on the East, the Arabian Straight and Gulph: It extends itself for a great space from South to North; but very little, in many Places, from East to West. The Air is excessive hot and unhealthful; the Country is destitute of Water, sandy, barren and desert for the most part, more especially towards the North, and the Inhabitants are generally addicted to the Mahometan Religion.

III. This Coast is divided by some Authors into the Northern and Southern Parts; the former being subject to the Turkish Dominion, and call'd The Beglerbeglick of Habesh, or Hystrebit. The capital Town of this Country, is Suaquem, or Suaquem, seated on the Arabian Gulph, in the middle, between its innermost Bay, and the Straight of Babelmandel; where the Turkish Governour keeps his Court, and from whence Ships often Sail to Sida, the Port of Mecca, in Arabia Felix. Over against this Town, somewhat Westward, appears an Island of the same Name, in the Gulph not far from the Shore, where Coral-fishing is manag'd with good Success. Farther towards the South, the Town of Ercoo, Erquico, or Arquica, is situated on the same Gulph, and over against it, the Island of Mazua, or Maczua, abounding with Pastures and several sorts of Cattel: A spacious Wood is also said to be extended between Suaquem and Erquico. The Southern Part of the Coast of Abex comprehends the Kingdom of Dangali, or Dancala, which some attribute to the Coast of Ajan: The Country hereabouts being more pleasant and fruitful than that of the Northern Tract, is under the Jurisdiction of the Moors: Its chief Towns on the Western Shore of the Arabian Gulph, are Degibeldara, Degibelcora and Vella.

The second or middle Part of Zanguebar taken at large, is the Coast of Ajan, so call'd by the Arabians, as also Habaza, or Habex; which borders on the North, upon the Kingdom of Dancala, the Straight of Babelmandel and the Red-Sea; on the East, upon the Sea of Zanguebar, or the most Eastern Part of the Ethiopick Ocean; on the South, upon Proper Zanguebar; and on the West, upon Abissinia: Its greatest Extent appears on the Northern Tract, but in the Southern, next to the Equinoctial Line, it is very much contracted. The Country abounds with Corn, Fruit, Pastures, Cattel, Honey, Wax and Ivory, by reason of the great number of Elephants that are there bred: It also affords Gold, and is water'd with several Rivers, the chiefest of which run through its Southern Tract. The Inhabitants are partly of a white and partly of a black Complexion. There is also to be found the Sect of Beduins, who are originally Arabians, and have no living but by Robberies and Rapine. Some Authors divide the Coast of Ajan into four Parts, viz. the Kingdoms of Adel, Adea, and Magadoxo, and the Commonwealth of Brava; but others will have Magadoxo and Brava comprehended under the Kingdom of Adea.

The Kingdom of Adel takes up the Northern Part of Ajan, and is govern'd by its own Prince, who is a great stickler for the Mahometan Superstitions, and a most inveterate Enemy to the Christians; so that his Subjects readily follow his Example. He often makes War with the Emperor of the Abissines, who is said to have subdu'd a considerable part of the Kingdom. The most eminent Towns of Adel, are Zeila; Barbora; and Meta; the two last being Ports, near or on the Arabian Sea, which (as they say) are subject to the Turks; and under the Tutition of a Governour; who likewise presides over the Northern Part of the Coast of Abex. Farther towards the East, appear the Towns of Salira and Dardura, and the Promontory of Aromata, now known by the Name of Il Cabo di Guardasuni, or Cape de Guardasuni, according to the French Dialect; over against which on the East, lies the Island of Dioscorides, at present call'd Zocotora by the Portuguese, extending it self about 80 Miles in Length and 26 in Breadth: This Island is under the Government of its own Prince, and produces great store of the best sort of Aloes. The following Towns are seated on or near the Coasts of the Sea of Zanguebar, viz. Tallara; Azuma; Carfar; Ajum; Cancara, or Ca- mura; and Vella: Lastly, the most remarkable Places in the inland Country, are Novocara; Comizara: Adel on a Rivulet of the same Name; the Metropolis of the Kingdom and the Royal Seat; Ara; and Mawra.

VI. The Kingdom of Alea borders on the South, upon Adel, and is govern'd by its own Prince, who is tributary to the Emperor of the Abissines, and professes the Mahometan Religion, as well as his Subjects. The noted Towns of this Kingdom, are Zabet; Orgabra; Burraoba, where (according to the Opinion of several Authors) the King usually keeps his Court; Quilmanca, on the Mouth of a River of the same Denomination; Hugar; and Bandel, a Sea-port Town; but the Monks Lake and Island are situated farther towards the North, and at a greater Distance from the Sea. Next follows Magalaxo, a large Town, formerly storm'd and ruin'd by the Portugueses; the Capital of the Kingdom of the same Name; and (as some will have it) of the whole Kingdom of Alea, although they make them distinct Dominions: It affords a Royal Seat to its King, and has the advantage of a capacious Harbour, with a Castle, on the Mouth of the River Magalaxo: It is also a considerable Mart, to which Clothes and Spice are imported out of India, and usually exchange'd for Gold and Ivory: The Inhabitants are Mahometans, and derive their Original from the Arabians: And Brava, a famous Mart and Sea-port Town, between Magalaxo and Burraoba; the Capital of a Common-wealth that bears the same Name, and pays Tribute to the Portugueses, as we are inform'd by M. Sanson and M. La Robbe.

VII. The third and last part of Zanguebar taken at large, or the Coast of Zanguebar properly to call'd, is bound on the North, by that of Ajan; on the West, (for so it is commonly express'd in the Maps, and according to several Authors) by Abissinia; which Country, as we have before observ'd, some do not extend on the South of the Equator; as also by the Kingdom of Moonemugi: On the South, by Cassaria; and on the West, by the Sea of Zanguebar. The least Part of this Country is situated on the North of the Equinoctial Line, some Part under it, and the greatest Part beyond it, on the South: Its shape comes near the Figure of a Square, the sides of which are above four times longer from North to South, than from West to East; and its Sea-coasts are very full of Bays and winding Shores. The Air of these Parts is not commendable; neither is the Soil over-rich, as being low and marshy, so that it scarce brings forth such things as are necessary for the support of humane Life: However, it is water'd with several Rivers, and affords Pasture to Sheep which are extremely fat, and have Tails of a prodigious Weight, almost beyond all belief. There are also most numerous Herds of Elephants, and consequently good store of Ivory, with some Gold and Silver. The Natives, the Colour of whose Skin is black, are either Idolaters, or Mahometans; nevertheless, by the means of their Commerce with the Europeans, they are render'd more tractable than the Cassers: Their Food and chief Sustainance consists of Venison, Milk, wild Fruits and Pulse. The Portugueses possess several Castles and Towns along the Coast of Zanguebar, as well as in the neighbouring Territories of Cassaria; upon which account the King of Portugal, among the rest of his Titles, is styl'd King of the farther side of the African Ocean.

The Kingdoms of Zanguebar are different; among which several of lesser Note take their Names from particular Towns. In passing from North to South, we come to the Kingdom of Chelicia, on or near the Sea-coast, and not far from the Equinoctial Line, on the South; with those of Pata, Kingd. ta and Lamon. Oya; a Sea-port, and Gazza in Lamon Kingd. the inland Country, are reckon'd among the Towns of the Kingdom of Melinda, the Metropolis of which is likewise call'd Melinda, a large, magnificent and most renowned Sea-port Town, adorn'd with the Royal Court; where the Portugueses have built a fine Castle with several Churches; and are us'd to traffick with the Subjects of that Prince. Under the Kingdom of Monbaza, are Butuapa; Oynga; and Monbaza, or Monbar Kingd. Monbaza the chief City of the Kingdom, built on a Hill in a little Island, at a small Distance from the Continent, where the Portugueses have likewise erected a Fort, but the Air is unhealthful. From thence, a Passage lyes open to the Kingdom of Quiloo, or Quilloa, the inland Towns of which, Quiloo Kingd. are Simis; Camu; and Sabia: Quiloo, the Capital stands on the Sea-coasts, and is divided by M. Baudrand into two distinct Parts, viz. the old Town, now in the Possession of the Portugueses, with a strong Castle; and the other seated in a little Island of the same Name, which is pleasant and fruitful, although the Air is very unwholsom: However, it is a famous Mart, and the Royal Seat of a King, who is oblig'd to pay Tribute to the Portugueses. The Town of Xango appears next on the same Coast, but farther towards the South.

The Kingdom of Mosambicha, or Mosambique, Mosam- bique Kingd. contains the following noted Towns, near the Sea-shore, viz. Querimba; Serincapa; Pinda; and Mosambique, the Metropolis, built in a little Island that is barren and destitute of fresh Water; the Air being also unpleasant and very hot: However, it is well inhabited by reason of its convenience for Traffick, and the Town stands on the Mouth of a River of the same Name, and enjoys the benefit of an excellent Harbour, on which the Portugueses (who are Masters both of the Island and Town) have erected a Castle, wherein is the Governour's Apartment, who depends on the Vice-Roy of Goa, and presides over this Kingdom and Zefala; but his Authority continues only for the space of three Years: It is also observable, That the Portugese Ships bound for the Indies are usually refitted here, and that some Authors take Mosambique for King Solomon's Ophir. Lastly, the Kingdom of Mongal presents Mongal Kingd. itself to our View, comprehending these Towns under its Jurisdiction, viz. Angos, or Agofsi; and Dud in the inland Tracts, as also on the Sea-coasts, Monia; Quilooana and Mongal, the chief City, on the Frontiers of Cassaria, which nevertheless is omitted in some Maps.

C H A P. V.

I. A Great number of Islands appear over against Zanguebar, some of them lying very near the Continent, and others at a greater Distance. Among the former are the Isles of Penda; Zanzibar, that communicates its Name to the Coast of Zanguebar; St. Koch; and Monfia; which bring forth several sorts of Grain and Fruit, and are situated over against the Kingdoms of Monbaza and Quiloa. The Islands call'd Comeres, or Comorres, are more remote from the Coast of Zanguebar, or the Kingdom of Mosambique, and comprehend within the 11th. and 13th. Degree of Southern Latitude: They produce good store of Rice, and variety of Fruits; neither are they destitute of Cattel: Their particular Names, are Gafisa; Aliola; Angovan, otherwise term'd Angwani and Loua; Mayotta, or St. Christopher; St. John's; and Spirito Santo, or Cenbracus.

None of the above specif'd Islands is so far distant from the Continent of Zanguebar, as Madagascar, i. e. The Island of the Moon, otherwise call'd St. Lawrence, or La Ilha de San Lorenzo by the Portuguese, because they first discover'd it under the Conduct of one Captain Lorenzo, on St. Lawrence's Festival A. D. 1506. It is likewise term'd Dauphin's Isle, by the French, and was known to Pliny, under the Name of Cerne, as also to Ptolemy, under that of Menuthias, according to the Sentiments of many Learned Men: But Possinus, who takes Zanzibar mention'd a little above, for Manuthias, opposes that opinion, and affirms, that the Island of Madagascar was altogether unknown to the ancient Grecians and Romans. It is situated between the 11th and 26th Degrees of Southern Latitude; as also, between the 72 and the 81 Degree of Longitude; being somewhat sharp-pointed towards the North. Its extent (as they say) surpasses that of Italy, or Great Britain, and it is reputed the largest of all the Islands not only of Africa, but also of Asia, Europe and America.

II. The Europeans find the Air very prejudicial to their Health, but the Country affords every Thing that is requisite for Sullenance; more especially producing Rice, Sugar, Ginger, Cloves, Oranges, Pomecitrons, Lemmons, Melons, Saffron, several sorts of Pulse, Honey, Wax and Cotton. The middle Part is beset with Woods and Mountains, the former yielding Brassil-wood, Ebony, and Sanders, of a white, yellow and red Colour; and the latter being well stor'd with the best kind of Metals, Springs and Rivers that run through the whole Island in great abundance. There are also numerous Herds of Elephants, Camels, Stags, fallow Deer, Oxen, Buffaloes with huge bunches of Fat on their Backs, and Sheep with the largest Tails; besides Lions and Leopards. The Inhabitants of the inland Parts are savage and ungovernable, much like the Caffers, and live under very low Tents; but they that dwell at a little distance from the Sea-coasts are civiliz'd by the means of their Conversation with the Europeans. The Colour of the Natives is generally black, although there are some of a tawny and white Complexion; and their shape is neater than that of the Ethiopians: They often make a kind of Drink with Honey and Rice, and are easily intoxicated with it: To conclude, these People are partly Mahometans and partly Idolaters, and have been frequently induc'd to exchange Sheep, Oxen, and other Commodities, for Toys of little or no Value.

Five or six Kingdoms are said to be comprehend'd within the Island of Madagascar; and in the modern Maps, it is divided into severall Provinces and Territories of particular People, that are for the most part plac'd on the Sea-coasts, and of which as yet we have no certain Knowledge. Those that appear on the East, as we pass from South to North, are Amboula; Mananboulâ; Matatana; Antavares, or Antanares; Zaffa, or Zefa; Hibrabim; Manzahbery, or Mananghbery; and Vohemaro. On the West, in returning from North to South, we meet with those of Adowoucha, or Adowoucha; Ancianates, or Ansanach; Hazonringhets, or Hazonziringhets; Vohitz; Angombes; Eringdranes; and Labefoni, or Labefoni. On the South, are Machicores, Mahafalles, or Manhafalles; Caremboula; Ampares; and Carcanoffi.

This Island is very full of Harbours, the chief of which on the South, are Fanshera; Fort Dauphin, a Colony of the French, who establish'd others in several parts of the Sea-coasts, in hopes of obtaining a more wholesome Air, but have of late almost entirely deserted them; and the Port of Tonobaja. On the West, appear the Bay and Port of St. Agnyline; St. James' Port; the Port and Bay of St. Vincent; St. Andrew's Port; and the Round Port, or Vingagora: The principal Bays and Havens on the East, are the Bays of Vohemaro; and Arongil, with the Harbours of Cacambont; Manajawa and Manapan.

Several Islands are to be seen over against the Eastern Coast of Madagascar, the nearest of which is Santa Maria, or Nossi Hibrabim, of an oblong Figure. Those that lye at a greater distance, are Nazara, St. Maurice's Isle, and that of Bombon: The last, call'd Mafcaregua by the Portuguese, is fruitful, well water'd, and in the middle beset on all sides with Mountains, among which one casts forth Flames, as well as some part of the Land. This Island was cultivated and fortify'd by the Hollanders, within these few years, but the French made themselves Masters of it not long ago, and still retain it in their possession. Its most considerable Harbours bear the Names of St. Paul, St. Denis, and the Assumption.

Between Madagascar, on the East, and the Coast of Zanguebar, on the West, Syres Judaica, or Syres Jewish Shelves, appear, which are commonly call'd Baxos, Baxios, or Baxos de Judea, by the Portuguese: They lye out very far from South to North, and are infamous for Shipwracks; consisting partly of coralline Rocks, that are clear, sharp, and of divers colours; inasmuch that it is no wonder, that Coral is frequently thrown up on the Coasts of Madagascar. About the same Shelves are Crab-fish of a prodigious size, and of so great Strength, that in struggling with Men, they often lay hold of them with their Claws, and drag them into the Gulph.

The Empires of Monoemugi and Monomotapa, with Caffaria.

I.
Lower
pia.

IT is now requisite to return to the Continent of Africa, where having already observ'd all the Parts of the upper Ethiopia, we may in like manner, take a View of the lower, otherwise call'd the outward Ethiopia, to which all Authors do not assign the same Bounds: For some make Zanguebar taken at large a Part of it, which (as others will have it) is comprehended within the Limits of the upper Ethiopia; but we have thought fit to follow the latter Opinion. The lower Ethiopia then, (according to this sense) is bounded on the East, by the Sea of the Cassers, Zanguebar, Abissinia, and Nubia; on the North, by the Desert of Zaara, and Negro-land; on the West, by Guinea, the Sea of Congo, and part of the Cassaria; and on the South, by the same Sea of the Cassers.

II. M. Sanfon only takes notice of three spacious Provinces, viz. Monomotapa, Cassaria, and the Kingdom of Congo; but we shall divide the whole Continent into five principal Parts, that is to say, the Empires of Monoemugi and Monomotapa, the Coasts of the Cassers, and the Kingdoms of Congo and Biafara. The two first of these Parts are situated in the inland Country, and the others on the Coasts, which are wash'd by the Ethiopian Sea.

III.
Monoe-mugi
Emp.

The Empire of Monoemugi, or Mono-Emugi, otherwise call'd the Kingdom of Monoemugi and Nimeamaja, is compris'd by M. Sanfon, under the Jurisdiction of Monomotapa. It has for its Bounds (as they are commonly set out in the Maps,) on the North, the Empire of the Abissines and the Lake Zambra; on the West the Kingdom of Malembe and part of Monomotapa; on the South, Monomotapa and the North-Eastern Part of Cassaria; and on the East, the Kingdom of Mongal, which is the Southern Part of proper Zanguebar. Others removing this Empire farther towards the North, affirm that it borders on the East, upon the Kingdoms of Mosambique, Quilba and Monbaza, and that it does not extend itself very far Southward from the Equinoctial Line.

IV. The Country is extremely beset with Mountains, and comprehends part of those of the Moon, abounding with the purest sort of Gold-metal, with which nevertheless the Inhabitants do not coin Money, but instead of it (as some say) they use certain round Pieces somewhat like Glass, and of a red Colour: There are also considerable quantities of Silver and Ivory: This Empire is water'd by the River Cuama, and by that means has a communication with the Kingdom of Zesala, or Sofala. The Natives being Negroes, are said to be of a savage Disposition, Idolaters, and the Subjects of a Monarch to whom several petty Kings are oblig'd to do Homage. It is express'd in the last Relations of Travels into those Parts, that the Province or Kingdom of Malembe, lying between the Lake Zambra and the Kingdom of Angola, of which we have before made mention, Chap. 3. Sect. 8. is likewise included within the Dominions of Monoemugi; as also part of the People, known by the name of Gala, or Gille, that are commonly plac'd next to the Inhabitants of the Kingdom of Congo call'd Giagna's, or Giagnas, and on the North of Malembe; and of whom we shall take special notice hereafter, in treating of the Kingdom of Congo. Indeed the Province and Towns of this Empire are but little known to the Europeans, and those Particulars that are related by the Writers of Travels, do not at all agree with the Maps, which are likewise very different one from another.

Some Authors make a Distinction, between the Empire of Monoemugi strictly taken, and the Kingdom of Malembe. The Towns of this Empire (to say nothing of the Provinces, or Kingdoms into which it is divided by others) as we find 'em set down in several Maps, are Gamba on the River Cuama; Astagoa; Agag; Camu; and Beisa, all situated towards the East. In the Western Tract, are Bagamedro, and Zambria, or Zambeza, on or near the Southern Bank of the Lake of the same Name. In the Kingdom of Malembe, Debsan and Meti, stand on the Western side of the same Lake.

The other inland Part of the lower Ethiopia, is the Empire of Monomotapa, or Mono-Motapa, otherwise termed Beno-Motapa, and Beno-Motapaxia; the Bounds of which on the North, are the Kingdom of Malembe, and the Empire of Monoemugi, from which it is separated by the Mountains of the Moon: It is also bounded on the East, South and West, by the Coasts of the Cassers.

The whole Empire is divided into two Parts by the Tropic of Cancer: The Air is temperate, and the Country is fruitful and pleasant; affording admirable Pasturage, with great store of Rice, Sugar, Ivory and Gold, which is taken not only from Mines in the Mountains and Rocks, but also out of the Rivulets. However it is destitute of Horses, and Wood is likewise very scarce; inso much that Fires are usually made of Rice-twigs and the Dung of Beasts. The Natives are of a black Complexion, having bristly Hair, and go almost stark naked: They are a warlike, nimble People, but at the same time, restless, seditious and given to change. A considerable Part of them were heretofore converted to the Christian Religion and baptiz'd, more especially the Emperor himself; nevertheless not long after, they return'd to their natural Disposition, and put the Christians to Death, with the Jesuits, who had endeavoured to propagate the Principles of Christianity in those Parts. The Government is Monarchical, and its Dominions are call'd by Foreigners, Benematapa, or Monomotapa, i. e. an Emperor; so that this Empire here takes its Name from the Emperor, contrary to the usual Custom, practis'd in other Countries. This Monarch is said to be saluted with the Title of The Great Tabach or Tabaque, and is very potent, in regard that a very considerable number of petty Kings are Tributary to him: He is well attended by a Life-guard of armed Amazons, which kind of Effeminacy has been already already observ'd in treating of Asia: He is also extremely rever'd and belov'd by his Subjects, and causes Justice to be executed with so great severity, that there is no need of any Prisons throughout his Dominions.

VIII. Butua
K. M. Sanfon divides this Empire into the Kingdoms of Monomotapa and Butua; the former lying on the North, and the other on the South. The Kingdom of Butua is noted for its admirable Gold-Mines, and its Northern Towns, are Carma, Galilaa, on the Northern side of the Lake Zachaf; Zet on its Eastern Bank, Dobdal, or Dobdel, near the left side of the River Cuamo, just at its passage out of that Lake; Armeta; Maitagafis; Bera, or Boro; Gebagha, or Gebaghel; Butua, the capital City of the Kingdom, adorn'd with a stately, spacious and ancient Palace call'd Zimbaee, of a square figure, built with huge Stones; which others do not place in the Town of Butua, but elsewhere in the Kingdom: And Amara. The following Towns appear on the South, viz. Hagala, Quiricui, or Quitecui; Bafar; Tialfo, Tango and Zimbra, next to the Topick of Capricorn.

XI. Monomotapa
K. The most considerable Places and Towns of the Kingdom of Monomotapa, on the West, are Garma or Gorma; Adia, Mofaa, or Muffata Mofata and Camiffa. On the East appear Valonta; Belegura; Jowes, or Jowos; Zedaya, or Zedata, on the River of Elspiritu Santo; and somewhat lower on the same River Monomotapa, or Benomotapa, the Metropolis of the whole Empire, and famous for the Imperial Court; Pwagi, or Quage, somewhat higher, on the opposite side; Muggir; and Agra-Sala.

X. Cassaria Having thus given an account of the inland Part of the lower Ethiopia, we proceed to the Maritime; where we first enter the Territories of Cassaria, otherwise call'd Calvaria, Cafreia and the Coasts of the Cassers, or Cafes: Its outward Boundary is the Sea of the Cassers, being Part of the Ethiopian, which washes it, on the East, South and West. But it has for its inner Limits the Kingdoms of Angola and Malemba, by which it is partly bounded on the North-West, and chiefly the Empire of Monomotapa, that serves in like manner for its Boundary on the East, North and West; a very high continued Ridge of Mountains ranging along in the middle, between Cassaria and Monomotapa, more especially on the East and West; part of which lying nearest to the Cape of Good Hope is call'd Picos fragozos, i. e. Sharp Rocks, by the Portuguese: Lastly the Coasts of the Cassers are also bounded on the North-West by the Empire of Monomengi, and the Coast of Zanguebar.

XI. The Western Coast of Cassaria, reaches from the 14th to the 35th Degree of Southern Latitude; but that Part of the Eastern Coast, which lies nearest to the Equinoctial Line, takes up about 18 Degrees in Latitude: So that the whole Continent extends itself farthest on the Sea-coasts, and a great deal less, between the Sea and the Empires of Monomengi and Monomotapa; neither is the intervening Space every where alike, its shape almost resembling that of an Horse-Shoe. The Air is said to be temperate, and sometimes very cold in those Tracts that lye near the high Mountains, more especially towards, the Cape of Good Hope, by reason of the Snow that covers their Tops, and the Winds that rush out of them, with great Impetuosity. The Soil is for the most part, bar-ren; yet the Valleys abound with Grass and Flowers, and the Hills afford the finest Gold: Neither is there any want of Cattel of several sorts, besides wild Beasts, particularly, Elephants Stags, Bears and Lions.

The Cassers are of a black Colour, Savage, cruel, and partly Man-eaters, living like Brutes in Woods, Caves and Mountains: The meaner sort of them go almost naked, and the more wealthy are cloath'd with the Skins of wild Beasts: They feed upon Fish, Rice, raw Flesh, and the loathsome Entrails of Animals; from the eating of which (according to Becmannus) they have obtain'd the Name of Hottentots, among Foreigners: But M. Baudrand says, that the Natives of Cassaria call themselves Hottentots, and that they are termed Cassers, as it were Om-Lans, by the Europeans, according to the peculiar Idiom of their Language; which Opinion is confirm'd by Bertius. However, some of the Cassers who inhabit the Eastern Tracts near the Frontiers of Zanguebar, are much more civiliz'd; neither are they altogether Canibals, without Law, King, or Fidelity: for several Kingdoms are comprehended within the Bounds of this Country, and even those Savages, who wander up and down in the Woods and Mountains, are obedient to their Commanders. In the Eastern Parts of Cassaria, the Inhabitants are Mahometans, and some of those that converse with the Hollanders and Portuguese, follow the sacred Rites and Customs of both these Nations; neither is it to be imagin'd, that the rest are void of all manner of sense of the supreme Deity.

Thus the Coasts of the Cassers may not improperly be divided into three Parts, viz. the Eastern, Southern and Western. The first of these, which borders upon Zanguebar, is the most eminent, as being well cultivated and fruitful. In traversing this Part from North to South, we come first to the Kingdom of Quiteva, call'd Quivava by M. Quiteva Baudrand, with the Capital Town of the same K. Name, now almost ruin'd; and from thence to the Kingdom of Zephala, Zofala, Sofala, or Siffala, where the chief Town, likewise named Sofala, is seated near the Mouth of a River of the same Denomination and well fortify'd: It is a noted Mart, at present in the possession of the Portuguese, and communicates its Name to the most famous Gold-mines of Sofala, which are distant 50 Miles from thence to the West, and call'd the Mines of Manica, by the Natives: Neither does the Land of Sofala only produce Gold, but the Rivers are also impregnated with it. There is also good store of Apes, Elephants and Ivory; so that Raphael Volaterranus, Ludovicus Venetus, and some other Authors, are induc'd to believe that Sofala is the same with King Solomon's Ophir; following the footsteps of the Chaldee Interpreter, who in several Passages, calls the Ships, that were fitted out for Ophir, the African Navy, or Fleet: They also add, that certain remainders of ancient Buildings, Inscriptions and other Monuments, are still to be seen in Sofala, which serve to confirm their Opinion. But we have already deliver'd our Sentiments concerning this matter under the Article of India beyond the Ganges, Chap. 16. Sect. 15. The other remarkable Places of this Part of Cassaria, situated farther towards the South, are the Kingdoms of Sedanda, Sedanda and Chicanga: Fumes, or Terras dos Fumes, according to the Portuguese Diakot, i. e. The Chicanda R.

XII.

Fumes Land of Snoak; And Terra Natalis, or Terra do Natal, so nam'd by Vasco de Gama, becaus'e he first discover'd it on the Festival of our Lord and Saviour's Nativity.

XIII. The Southern Part of Cassaria lies between the Eastern and Western; where the Desert Land, or Coast call'd Costa Deserta by the Portuguese, is express'd in the Maps, bordering upon the Empire of Monomotapa; and M. Baudrand reckons up thirteen particular People or Nations, inhabiting about the Cape of Good Hope and the Sea-coasts, into which (as he says) the Hottentots of these Parts are divided. But nothing is more remarkable throughout the whole Southern Tract than the Promontory, or Cape of Good Hope, which is the most renowned of all that are as yet known in the habitable World, being the most Southern Part of Africa, and lying almost in the middle between England and the East Indies. The Portuguese at first nam'd it The Cape of Storms, becaus'e they were made sensible by experience, that 'twas very dangerous sailing thereabouts; the Waves continually rolling up and down, and violently beating upon their Ships on all sides: But this Name was not approved of by John II. King of Portugal, who order'd it to be call'd for the future El Cabo de bona Esperanza, i. e. The Cape of Good Hope; for he judg'd, that the weathering of it, and the good success of the Indian Voyage, were not at all to be despair'd of; neither indeed was he mistaken, as it appear'd a little while after, from the prosperous Expedition of Vasco de Gama.

The Hollanders, A. D. 1650. erected a Fort on Tafel Bay, or Table-Bay, at the foot of a very high Mountain of the same Name, famous for its little Cloud, the Fore-runner of an unavoidable Tempest; and not far from thence they likewise built a very neat Village. The Air is very wholesome, and the Vallies no less fruitful, bringing forth abundance of the Asiatick and European kinds of Grain: Neither is there any want of Cattel, besides excellent Spring-water, Fish and Fowl; so that Vessels bound for the East Indies which arrive at this Bay may be very conveniently refitted, and supply'd with all sorts of necessary Provisions. The Hottentots of these Parts, whose Speech is scarce articulate, are most fordid Brutes, altogether ignorant of the use of Money, of a low Stature, Lean, of an artificial black Colour, and very swift in running; to which purpose, they usually out off one of the Testicles of their male Children, that are newly born: They are also most expert Archers, and extremely skilful in the application of Medicinal Herbs. Some understand by the Name of the Cape of Good Hope, all that Part of Africa, or Cassaria, that extends itself farthest towards the South, and make its Parts to consist of Saldanha-Bay, termed Saldaigne, by the French; Table-Bay; El Cabo Falso, or False Cape, El Cabo de las Aguias, or Needle Cape; El Cabo do Infante, or Infant's-Cape, Formoso-Bay, &c. but we have taken it in a more strict Sense.

Lastly, the Western Part of Cassaria reaches XIV. from the Southern, to the Kingdom of Angola; being a vast Country, but very mountainous, barren, desert and quite destitute of Towns: On its Northern Tract, situated between the Tropic of Capricorn and the same Province of Angola, the Kingdom of Cimbebas is plac'd in some Maps; in the Northern Part of which is a famous Promontory call'd El Cabo Negro, i. e. the Black Cape. Other Maps likewise contain the Kingdom of Mataman, which lies at a greater distance from the Sea, and K. K. is bounded on the North by Angola, although some do not distinguish this Kingdom from that of Cimbebas.

The new Island of St. Helena appears in the Ethio- XV. pian Sea, at a considerable distance from the Continent, as also the old Island of St. Helena, na Ille. which is much more Western than the former, and lies at a very great distance from all other Islands: It is situated (according to M. Baudrand) in the 16th Degree of Southern Latitude, and takes up about 13 Leagues in compass. It is almost every where beset with Mountains, yet there are several fruitful Vallies, water'd with Rivers, more especially in the Northern Part; and the Soil is extremely rich, being apt to bring forth any sort of Grain whatever; and abounding with Lemmons, Oranges, and most excellent Sorrel: There is also good store of wild Bears, and no want of fresh Water: Lastly, the Harbour is very convenient, and the Sea round about full of Fish: Inasmuch that it is deservedly call'd, The Store-house of the Sea; in regard that most Ships in passing to the East Indies touch upon the Coast, and all that are homeward bound continue there several Days, to be refitted and supply'd with necessary Provisions. This Island was first discover'd by the Portuguese, under the conduct of John de Nova, on the Festival of St. Helena, A. D. 1502, but the English made themselves Masters of it some years ago, and secur'd it with a Fort. It is distant 1550 Spanish Leagues Westward from Goa, 520 from the Cape of Good Hope, 370 from Angola, 1000 from Lisbon, and 540 Eastward from the Coasts of Brazil in America.

C H A P. VII.

The Kingdoms of Congo and Biafar, with the Islands over against Biafar.

I.
Congo
K.

THE next Territory that presents itself to our View on the Continent of Africa, is the Kingdom of Congo; by which Name some understand all that Country, which reaches from the Northern Tract of the Western Part of which is distant two Degrees Southward from the Equator; or else they place it between this Promontory and Cape Ledo, situated in the Tenth Degree of Southern Latitude. Again others will have these Dominions extended no farther than the Kingdom of Congo strictly taken; but according to our determination, this Kingdom is bounded on the South, by those of Mataman and Malemba; on the East, by the Lake Zaire and Abissinia; on the North, by the Kingdoms of Matococo and Gelona; and on the West, by the Sea of Congo, which lies from North to South, from St. Catharine's Cape, as far as the Coast of the Coffers.

Cassaria, as far as Negroc-land, and consequently make it comprehend the remaining Part of the newer Ethiopia: Others enclose it within much narrower Bounds, that is to say, between the same Tract of Cassaria, and St. Catharine's Cape, which

II. The Air would be extremely hot, were it not cool'd by the Winds and the Rain, which falls every Day from April to September, the rest of the Months passing away without any Rain. The Country is fertile, and abounds with large and small Cattel, all sorts of Fowl, Corn, Fruits and Medicinal Herbs. The Inhabitants are of a black Complexion, well fet, with vast Muscles, and very robust: They are generally cloth'd with Cotton-throwds, and live in mean Cottages, making use of Fish-shells and Pottherds instead of Money. They are almost altogether ignorant of Architecture and other Arts and Sciences, yet they have no small skill in Botanicks and the use of Medicinal Plants, every Man being his own Doctor. Part of those that have their Habitations about the Sea-coasts are said to profess the Christian Religion; but there are many Idolaters, more especially in the Eastern Tract, who among other Deities, worship the Earth, Sun and Moon. They are much addicted to the stealing of Foreigners Goods; the Women likewise give themselves to Incontinency, and are great lovers of white Men.

III. Several Kingdoms and States are comprehended within the Extent of this Country; the chief of which are the Kingdoms of Angola, Congo and Loango; and the Territories of the Gale and Anficans. These Kingdoms are subject to their own Princes, who are usually styl'd Mani, i. e. Lords, with which Title the Governours of Provinces are also dignify'd; only adding, for distinction sake, the Surnames of their respective Provinces: Neither is it to be admir'd that the Kingdom of Congo contains so many distinct Kingdoms and Nations, in regard that they either sometime constituted the several Parts of it, or partly depended on its Jurisdiction; which they continue to do even at this day, under the Form of separate Governments.

IV. The Kingdom of Angola, being the most Southern Part of that of Congo, is situated between Mataman on the South; Malemba, on the East; the Province of Congo strictly taken, on the North; and the Sea of Congo, on the West. This Kingdom formerly was compris'd within the Dominions of the King of Congo, and (as we are inform'd by M. Robbe) is still Tributary to that Monarch: It abounds with Elephants, Fish, Fowl, Crystal, Marble, Precious Stones, Gold, Silver, Copper, and other sorts of Metal: It is also very potent, and extremely populous, supplying the Spanish Work-houses (as they say) with above fifteen thousand Natives every Year. The Angolans generally prefer Dogs-flesh before Beef, and their chief Towns are Benguela, Nova, or New Benguela; Quiconga; and Benguela Vulba, or Old Ben- guela; on the Sea of Congo. In the inland Country, on the East, appears Mochima, or Maohima; near, or on the Banks of the Coanza; as also, higher on the same River, Massagan, Massirgan or Massagan; and Engaza, otherwise call'd Dongo, which several Authors take for the Capital of Angola, seated in its Northern Tract, and on the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Congo.

Between the Lake of Aguilunda on the West, and that of Zara, on the East, on the Mountains ^{V. Gale} of the Sun, the Seat of the Gale, or Galle, is plac'd in some Maps, a People who often style themselves Iamban Galla's, and are commonly call'd Giagua's, Giaqua's and Giappes, by the Inhabitants of Congo. They are most notorious Robbers and Cannibals, deriving their Original from the inland Country of Guinea; some of whom (as it has been already observ'd) sub'd a considerable Part of Abissinia. Their Towns (according to Sanfon and la Robbe) are Zaire, or Zars, on the Lake of the same Name; Dangar, or Dagar, or the said Lake, where the Rivulet Zara takes its Rise; and Vamba, situated a great deal farther towards the North, and scarce one Degree from the Equinoctial Line. Between the Territories of these Galla's on the East, and the Kingdom of Loango, on the West, the Anficans, or An-Anficans; ^{VI. People:} zicans, otherwise termed Anzighi and Antiguaners, take up their Abode, and are much of the same Disposition with the former.

From thence we set forward to the Kingdom ^{VI.} of Congo properly so call'd or strictly taken; which Congo is bounded on the East, by the Territories of the proper K. Gale; on the North, by those of the Anficans, and the Kingdom of Loango; on the West, by the Sea of Congo; and on the South, by the Kingdom of Angola. The Country is fruitful, well cultivated, and water'd with several Rivers. This wealthy Kingdom was heretofore of a much larger Extent, and is still divided into six considerable Provinces, viz. Pango, Sundi, Batta, Pemba, Bamba, and Sengo: The four first of these Provinces are situated in the inland Country, and the two last on the Sea-coasts. The Marquisate of Pango lyes on the South of Anficana, and is water'd by the River Marqui-Zara; containing the Towns of Cindi on the Za-fate, Zara; Pango the Capital; and Angota. The Dutchy of Sunde, Sundi or Sundo, borders upon Pango, on Sundi the West, and is likewise water'd by the Zara; ^{Dutchy.} producing good store of Metal, more particularly Iron, on which the Inhabitants set a greater value than on the other sorts. Sunde the chief Town has impos'd its name on this Province: beyond which farther towards the South, are Betequa, and Iri. The Dutchy of Beta ^{Bata} extends itself between that of Sundi, and the ^{Dutchy.} Lake of Aguilunda, and contains the Towns of Cangon, or Gangon, Batta, the principal, and Agishymba. The Marquisate of Pemba appears next to Batta, on the West; in which is the ^{Pemba} Town of Lelenda, on a River of the same ^{Marqui-fate.} Name; S. Salvador, call'd Banza by the Inhabitants, seated on an Hill, near the same River, the Metropolis of the Kingdom, affording a Seat both to a Christian King and Bishop; and Pemba.

From the inland Provinces of Congo, we pass to the two Maritime, of which the most Southern is the Dutchy of Bamba, abounding with Elephants, ^{Bambos} Buffles, Staggs, Tigers, Dragons, Vipers, Civet- ^{Dutchie} Cats, Cats, Eagles, Falcons and Parrets: The most remarkable Place of this Province is St. Paulo de Loanda, or Loando St. Paulo, a Sea-port Town with a safe and capacious Harbour, built in a little Island nam'd Loanda, that has neither Mountain nor Hill, where the Fishery is establish'd for Shells that pass for Money throughout the whole Kingdom, and where a kind of Tree grows, the Branches of which send forth certain small Twigs, which as soon as they touch the Ground, spring up into new Trees, with a wonderful Faculty of Propagation. This Town was taken by the Hollanders, but regain'd by the Portuguese; so that it still continues in the Possession of the latter, and is the usual Place of Residence of the Bishop of Angola. The other noted Towns are Matolo and Bamba. The Country or Earldom of Sogno, or Songo, is extended on the North of Bamba, and its Southern Tract is water'd by the lowest Part of the River Zara. Among other sorts of Animals there is great store of Parrets, both green and gray, Monkeys and Apes. The chief Towns thereabouts are Sonbo, on the Mouth of the Zara; Bonmo, or Bonimo; Matinga; and Malem-ba, a Sea-port.

Kingd.

Lastly, the Kingdom of Loango, is situated between that of Congo strictly taken, on the South; the Territories of the Ansicans, on the East; the Kingdom of Biafar, on the North; and the Sea of Congo, on the West. It produces abundance of Ivory and Fruit-trees, more especially Palms, of which the Natives make Bread, Wine and Oil; and affords plenty of all sorts of necessary Provisions. The Sea-port Towns are Loango the Capital, which has communicated its Name to the whole Kingdom; Sellaga, or Sollaga; Quanni; and Majumba. The Inland Towns are Katta, Bocceda, and Setta, or Zetta.

VIII.

It remains only to give an Account of the third and last maritim Part of the lower Ethiopia, that is to say, the Kingdom of Biafar; under which Name some Geographers comprehend all that Country, which is bounded on the East, by the Lake and River of Niger; on the North, by the Kingdoms of Borno and Zanfara; and on the West, by that of Benin and St. Thomas's Bay. The Air in these Parts is excessive Hot, and the Rain falls from the Month of April to that of August: The Soil brings forth a great number of Palm-trees, with which a pleasant kind of Wine is usually made, and the Champain Country breeds Elephants, Buffles and terrible Serpents. The Natives are savage, subtil, incestuous, and infamous for Robberies, Rapine and Sorcery. They dye their Bodies with several Colours, to render themselves more beautiful, and the Kings make use of Chalk for that purpose; performing Divine Worship to the Sun, Moon, Trees, and even to the Devil himself.

IX. Many Kingdoms are contain'd in this Part, every one of which derives its Name from the capital Town, and is govern'd by its own Prince, who is styl'd Mani in the Dialect of the Country.

The Kingdoms of Macoco and Giringbomba, with the Towns of the same Name, are situated on the East; as also the Kingdom of Medra, the Towns of which are Guidan, on the West of the Lake Niger; Medra, on the left-side Bank of the River Niger; and Tebeldera, on the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Zanfara. The Kingdom of Biafar properly so call'd, lyes farther towards the West, and contains the Towns of Biafar and Borca, which last some make the Capital of a distinct Kingdom. Lastly, the Kingdom of Gabon extends itself on the South, in which are the Towns of Gabon, Corisco and Maccira, next to the Equinoctial Line.

X. Several Islands are remarkable for their Situation in St. Thomas's Bay, over against the Kingdom of Biafar, but the chief of them are four in number, and depend on the Jurisdiction of the Portuguese; the two first that shall be immediately specify'd being farther distant from the Continent than the latter. The most remote of all is Annobon, i. e. The Island of a good Year, so call'd Anno- by the Portuguese, from the first day of the Year, on which they discover'd it. The Island of St. Thomas, lyes farther towards the North-East, under the Equator, and was describ'd by the Portuguese on the Festival of that Saint; being of a large Compass, and almost of a round Figure.

The Air is prejudicial to Foreigners; but its Heat is much allay'd by frequent Showers of Rain and a plentiful Dew: The Soil brings forth Sugar, Ginger, Oranges of an extraordinary largeness, Cucumbers, Melons and Figs. The capital Town bears the same Name with the Island, and is otherwise termed Pavaosan; affording a Place of Residence to the Governour: It is seated on a River and well fortify'd. The Prince's Island, (on which the Portuguese impos'd that Name, because its Revenues were assign'd for the use of the Prince of Portugal) extends itself on the North of the Equinoctial Line, and is lesser than that of St. Thomas: It is somewhat long, and well cultivated, producing great store of Sugar: It also enjoys a healthful Air, and the advantage of a considerable Town, with some Villages. The Island of Fernando Po, so nam'd by the Discoverer, lyes nearest to the Continent; and is larger than the Prince's Isle, but much of the same nature; in which several Villages are built, with a Castle. Upon account of these Islands and some other Places in the Kingdom of Congo that are in the Possession of the Portuguese, the King of Portugal makes no scruple to style himself King of the other side of the African Ocean.

C H A P. VIII.

Ancient Ethiopia, with the principal Rivers of that Country.

I. Ethiopia
der E-pt.

AFTER having taken a Survey of Modern Ethiopia, it is requisite to make a short Description of it according to its ancient State. This Country was heretofore divided into Ethiopia under Egypt, and Ethiopia interior. The former took up almost the same space with the modern upper, or inner Ethiopia; and its Parts were the Territories of the Nubi, Proper Ethiopia, Troglodytica, Azania and Barbaria: The Nubi were settled along the Western-side of the River Nile, where the greatest Part of Nubia is now situated; although M. Sanson is of a different Opinion, and thinks fit to place the Nubi in the inner Libya. Ethiopia properly so call'd, is now known by the Name of Abissinia, and anciently comprehended the Island of Meroe, made by the Nile, the Cinnamon-bearing Country, near the Mouths of that River; and the Myrrh-bearing Land lying out farther on the North-East, towards Azania and Troglodytica, with the Territories of many other particular People. Troglodytica extended itself in Length, along the Coasts of the Arabian Gulph, from Egypt to the Promontory of Aromata, and was inhabited by several sorts of People; but at present, is termed, the Coast of Abex. Azania was situated on the South of Troglodytica, where the Coast of Ajan appears at this day. Lastly, Barbaria supply'd the room of Zanguibar, and that Part of the Ethiopian Sea which wash'd it, was nam'd Sinus Barbaricus, or Pelagus Barbaricum, i. e. the Barbarian Gulph, or Sea; as also Asperum Mare, or the rough Sea, by reason of the great number of its Shelves and Quick-sands.

II. Ethiopia
interior.

The other Part of ancient Ethiopia, was interior, or the inner, which we now call the lower, or the outward; wherein were contain'd the Territories of the Men-eaters, the Country of Agisymba, and the Hesperian Ethiopians: The Canibal Ethiopians had their Abode on the South of Barbaria, where Cassaria is now extended: Agisymba took up Part of the lower Ethiopia, that is to say, that space which is possess'd by the modern Empires of Moenoemugi and Monomotapa: Lastly, the Hesperian Ethiopians inhabited the present Kingdom of Congo taken at large, and Part of that of Biafar, near the Equinoctial Line.

III. Nile
Fluv.

We shall now proceed to give an Account of the principal Rivers of Ethiopia, that run into the Mediterranean Sea, or into those of the Cassers, and of Congo. The Nile, call'd Nil by the Africans, and Abanbi by the Abissines, discharges itself into the first, being the most eminent River not only of Ethiopia, but also of the whole Continent of Africa. Its source was unknown if not to all the Ancients, at least to the most part of them, nay they imagin'd, that 'twas impossible to find it out; which supposition gave occasion to the Proverb, To seek for the Spring-head of the Nile. Ptolemy (to pass by the Sentiments of other Authors) determines, That this famous River issues forth beyond the Equator, out of two Pools or Lakes, one lying Westward and the other Eastward, that receive the Snow from the Mountains of the Moon, which in the Maps are usually express'd on the Confines of the Empire of Moenoemugi, Abissinia, and the Lake of Zambra: Neither indeed is this Opinion very different from that which has almost obtain'd an universal Approbation, intimating that the Nile taking its rise, either from the Mountains of the Moon, or out of the Lake Zara, which is plac'd within the 5th. and 13th. Degrees of Southern Latitude, at first flows through the Western Part of Abissinia; afterwards having made the Island of Meroe, or Gueguere on the Frontiers of Nubia, divides the same Country of Nubia with its winding Course, and at last, passes in like manner through Egypt.

IV.

They that place the Empire of Abissinia only in our Hemisphere, admit of a quite different Origin of the Nile; relying upon the Relations and Journals of the Portuguese and other Travellers, who fix the Spring-head of this noble River in the Land of Sacabala, a Province of the Kingdom of Goyama, being the Western Part of Abissinia, in a Plain surrounded with high Mountains: Where is to be seen a little Lake, out of which two clear and deep Springs issue forth, at the distance of about 12 Degrees from the Equinoctial Line on the North: These Springs having united their Streams, and being enlarg'd with several Brooks on both sides, constitute a moderate River, that at first runs Eastward, and soon after Northward; where on the right side, it receives the Gema, or Jema, directing its course towards the East; then the Keli on the left side, Fluv. and a little lower, the Branti: Afterwards it rolls through the lesser Cataract, and the Southern Tract of the Lake Dambca, without intermixing its Waters: Having pass'd the Lake, it takes in the Gamila and Abea, on the right side, out of the Kingdom of Goyama, and rushes through the greater Cataract; below which, the Baxila falls into it on the left side, from the Confines of the Provinces of Bagamidri and Amara, as likewise does the Ruecam from those of Amara and Oleca: Then it flows towards the South through the Provinces of Oleca and the upper and lower Ado; from whence conveying its Stream Westward, as also by degrees towards the North, it traverses the Provinces of Gafates, Bizam and Gungzar; turns nearer to its Spring-head, and having water'd the Kingdom of Goyama, almost on all sides, sets forward to the Province of Fasculon; below which, on the left side, it receives the Maleg, the largest of all the Rivers, that have hitherto run into its Channel. Not long after, it passes through Nubia, along the Territories of certain People call'd Bugibi, or Funchi, as also those of the Baloi, and there on the right side, joins with the Tacaza a large River, encras'd with the Mareb and fine other Rivulets. At last, the Nile enters Egypt, and waters the whole Country, with a slow and winding Course, receiving the River Nubia in the upper Part, on the left side, near the Town Fluv.

of Asna. Below the ancient City of Memphis; now the Village, or Town of Bulac, it divides itself into two great Arms, or Branches, which with the Egyptian Sea, make a Triangular Figure, resembling the Greek Letter Δ Delta; the top of this Triangle being below Bulac, and its Basis on the Sea. The Western Arm ends in the Egyptian Sea, at the Town of Rosetta, and the Eastern at Damiata; the latter of which in its Course between Bulac and Damiata, is divided into another Branch, which empties itself into the Sea, at Brulli, or Bourles: An artificial Channel thirty Miles long is likewise cut down from the Western Arm to Alexandria, where it falls into the Sea, but is full of Water, only during one Month throughout the whole Year.

V.
The Mouths of the Nile.

The seven Mouths of the River Nile are celebrated by Mela, Syrabo, Diodorus, Herodotus, and other ancient Authors; and their Names (in beginning to count them from the West) were the Canopick, otherwise call'd the Nauocratick and Heracleotick; the Bolbitick; the Sebennitick; the Pathmetick, or Phatmetick; the Mendesian; the Tanitic; and the Pelufian. Ptolemy places two other false Mouths between the Sebennitick and the Pathmetick; and Pliny reckons up four Mouths of the like nature; so that the former Author admits of nine, and the latter eleven Mouths of this great River. But the Constitution of Egypt is now so far chang'd, that scarce any of those Mouths are to be found at this day, in regard that either they were obstructed and quite stop't up in process of time, or else they are so small, as to be of no repute.

VI. The River Nile is more especially remarkable for over-flowing the Country of Egypt, every Year; flowing of which famous Inundation happens (as we are inform'd by M. Boninus) on the twelfth day of June, as it is express'd in the Calendar of the Coptites, or on the seventeenth day of the same Month, according to the Julian Account. In the beginning its increase is very small, but it is afterwards extremely augmented, and rises to the height of many Cubits; by which means the Lands that lye near the River are first cover'd, then the more remote, and at last the whole flat Country of Egypt, which of dry ground, becomes a navigable Pool; and the Course of the Nile, the Breadth of which at other times scarce exceeds one Furlong, extends itself for the space of three hundred, and would run out farther, were it not restrain'd on both sides by the Mountains. When this Flood has attain'd to its greatest height, it does not immediately decrease, but continues for several days in the same Station. The Egyptians give it out (as the same Meltonius assures us) that the over-flowing of the Nile begins to decrease on the seventeenth day of their September, or the twenty fourth of ours, and sinks again into its proper Channel; the Mud that is left, rendring the Soil extremely fruitful. This great River usually over-flows sooner in Abissinia than in Egypt, where its Course is at first slow, but when contracted within its own Bed, it becomes very swift. They add that the Water in the beginning of its increase is of a green Colour, and afterwards turns red.

The River Zambera, or Zambeza discharges itself into the Sea of the Cassars, and its Spring-head is plac'd in several Maps, in that Part of the Empire of Monomotapa, which bears on the South of the Tropic of Capricorn, near the Frontiers of Southern Cassaria and the Town of Musja. From thence directing its Course Northward, it waters the Kingdoms of Monomotapa and Burua, and falls into the Lake Zachab: After having pass'd the said Lake, it runs swiftly through the Southern Tract of Burua, and a little above the Town of Gebagha, is divided into two Arms: One of these Arms, turns on the right hand, and is call'd by the Portuguese El Rio de el Espiritu Santo, i. e. The River of the Holy Ghost; which flowing through the Kingdoms of Burua and Monomotapa, waters the Metropolitan City of the Empire, and at last glides along the Eastern Part of Cassaria; where it is likewise distributed into several Branches, and empties itself through divers Mouths into the same Sea of the Cassars. The other Arm of the Zambera, on the left hand, which does not pass beyond the Tropic of Capricorn, is a great deal larger than the former, and retains its proper Name, within the Bounds of Monomotapa; but upon its Entrance into the Eastern Tract of Cassaria it assumes that of Cuanzo. M. La Robbe gives us this Account, which is not approv'd of by other Authors, who are of Opinion, That the Zambera changes its Name no otherwise in Cassaria, than it does in Monomotapa, and that the said Zambera and the Cuanzo, are altogether distinct Rivers.

Several Rivers, after having water'd the Kingdom of Congo, fall into the Sea that bears the same Name; among which the Sunga, the Coanza, and the Lelunda hold the first rank: But the Zaire, or Zara, is most eminent of all; which taking its rise out of the Lake of Zara, waters the Territories of the Gale and Ansicans; from whence it passes through the Kingdom of Congo strictly taken, and rolls into the Sea at the Promontory of Palmarinko. This River, which is said to be five Miles broad in some places, contains several large and well cultivated Islands, and breeds Crocodiles and River-horses: It is navigable for some Miles, from its Mouth upwards, or against the Stream; but afterwards the Waves that come rushing down from the Cataracts, with great Impetuosity, meeting with the Tide, hinder all manner of Passage: But it disgorges so vast a quantity of Water into the Sea, that the freshness of them (as they say) continues untainted, for the space of ten and sometimes sixteen Miles. It is also reported, That the Zara, and even the lesser Rivers of the Kingdom of Congo, at a certain season of the Year, overflow the adjacent Lands, after the same manner as the Nile does, and render them extremely fruitful.

commonly call'd Trivoads by the Portuguese: So that it is not at all to be admir'd, that the Mariners use so great precautions, to avoid these Coasts in sailing from Europe to the East Indies, and during their Return homeward: for they are often forc'd to continue there a whole Month before they can get off from the Shore. Guinea is situated between the 4th and 12th Degrees of Northern Latitude, as also between the 9th and 37th Deg. of Longitude; its Extent being most of all contracted in the Western Parts of Benin and Malaguetta.

The Air of these Parts (as it sufficiently appears from the above-specified Latitude) is excessive hot, and prejudicial to the Health of the Europeans, by reason of the sultry Weather, and the frequent Showers of Rain, that cause Putrifaction, and abundance of Worms; inso much that very long ones often breed even in Human Bodies, and are usually drawn by degrees out of the Skin. The Soil is fruitful and brings forth plentiful Crops of Rice and Barley with Cotton, a kind of Spice like Pepper, Dates and Palm-trees, the Trunk of which being cut yields a Liquor of an Ash-colour, that is more spirituous than the richest Wine, and somewhat resembles Whey. There are also numerous Herds of Elephants and consequently a great flock of Ivory, with which the Inhabitants drive a vast Trade; besides good store of Bees-Wax, Apes and Monkeys that are very subtil and mischievous, Peacocks, Ash-colour'd Parrets, and Fish; the Plains likewise affording Pasture for Leopards, Tigers and several sorts of tame Cattel. Lastly, the Mines do not only produce Gold, but it is also taken out of the Sea-shores and Rivers.

The Natives are of a Coal-black Colour, and go stark naked, without any sense of shame. They are of a strong Constitution, long-liv'd, ingenious and much addicted to Merchandizing; but fraudulent in their dealings, covetous, arrogant and slothful: They greedily devour raw Flesh, and even the Entrails of Birds, extremely indulging their sensual Appetites, and the female Sex are apt to fall desperately in love with the Europeans: Many of them live in the open Air, or else dispers'd up and down in Huts; adorning their Noses and Lips with Ivory. The wealthier sort of Women, in like manner set off their Leggs, with Rings made of Iron, Tin or Brass, and the Gold-coyn that is current among them has no Inscription. A great number of these People follow the Heathenish Superstitions, and some have embrac'd the Christian Religion. The Country is subject to divers Kings, and several European Nations have settled Colonies therein, more especially the Hollanders. The King of Peringul assumes the Title of Lord of Guinea; but at present he has no Possessions there of any considerable Note. A vast number of Slaves of both Sexes are frequently transported from these Parts to America, and put to hard Labour; to avoid which many throw

I. AFTER having pass'd through Egypt and Ethiopia, that constitute its Eastern and Southern Parts, we set forward to its Western Tracts; where Guinea first offers it self to our View, which some Geographers reckon among the Parts of Negroe-Land. The Portuguese will have the Kingdoms of Congo and Angola likewise comprehended under the name of the lower Guinea, and call that the upper, which is simply nam'd Guinea by other Nations. This Country has for its Bounds, on the East, the Kingdom of Biafar, from which it is partly separated by the River Camarones; on the North, Negroe-Land; and on the West and South, the Sea of Guinea; where a continual calm is almost altogether predominant, which nevertheless is sometimes disturb'd by sudden and most impetuous storms of Wind, throw themselves over-board into the Sea, during their Passage.

III.
Benin
Kingd.

The whole Country of Guinea is usually divided into three Parts, viz. the Kingdom of Benin, Proper Guinea and Malaguetta. The Kingdom of Benin, being the most Eastern Part is bounded on the East, by the River Camerones and the Kingdom of Biafar; on the North, by the Land of the Negroes; on the West, by Proper Guinea; and on the South, by the Gulph of Benin, and St. Thomas. The Monarch of this Kingdom is very potent, and several Kingdoms are tributary to him; but all those Dominions may be conveniently divided into the Eastern and Western Parts. The former lyes between the Kingdom of Biafar, or the River Camerones and the River Benin, and is said to enjoy a healthful Air. The most remarkable Places and Towns of this Part, are Badis, or Budis; Coffo, or Cosfo, on the River Benin; Benin seated somewhat lower, a noted Town, being the largest and neatest of the whole Continent of Guinea, which (according to several Maps) is divided into two Parts, by the said River, and reputed the Metropolis of a Kingdom of the same Name: And Agaton, Agaton, or Gatto, situated lower on the opposite side of the River, as well as Aroba, or Arobon. Ouwerra, the Capital Town of a Kingdom to call'd, stands farther towards the East, and is said to be inhabited by a great number of Christians. The following Towns are built nearer to the Sea-coasts, viz. Belli; Calabari, Callabarry, or Callebar, on the right-side Bank of the River nam'd El Rio Real de Calabari, or the Royal River; old Callebar; Boni; Hodi, or Bodi; Fucko; Cape Formosa, in the middle, between St. Thomas's Gulph and that of Benin; and Loebo on the Mouth of the River Benin.

In the Western Part of the Kingdom of Benin, lying in the middle, between the River of the same Name, and Proper Guinea; are Ody and Cyramo; both on the Lake of Cyramo; the Compass of which is reputed to exceed fifty Leagues; Darroera; Ardras, or Ardar, call'd also Affem, by the Inhabitants, the chief Town of a Kingdom to which it has communicated its Name: Foulæen; and Popon.

IV.
Proper Guinea.

The second Part of this Continent, being the largest and most eminent, is Guinea properly, or simply so termed, dignify'd with the Title of a Kingdom; the Emperour of which is most powerful, to whom many Kings and Princes are oblig'd to do Homage and pay Tribute. Proper Guinea borders on the East, upon the Kingdom of Benin; on the North, upon Negroe-Land; on the West, upon Malaguetta; and on the South, upon the Sea of Guinea. We shall likewise divide the whole Country into its Eastern and Western Parts; the former being situated between the Kingdom of Benin, on the East; and the River Manfu, or Masum, call'd Manes by M. Sanson, on the West; which River falls into the Sea, at the Town of Axym, and on the West of the Promontory nam'd El Cabo de tres Pentas, or The Cape of three Points. The maritum Tract of this Part is commonly termed the Gold-coast, de Goudt Coast in Dutch, deriving its Name from the abundance of Gold there produc'd, and contains the following Places and Towns of Note, viz. Laya; Pompeno; Christianburg, in the Possession of the Danes; Cinko; Akra, a Kingdom and Town; Berka, or Barka; Ananmboa; Cormantin, or Cormentyn under the Jurisdiction of the Hollanders; Anisban; Mouree, or Fort Nassau, a strong Hold built and still possess'd by the Hollanders, with a very convenient Harbour; Cape Corsu, a Castle belonging to the English; the Fort of St. George del Mina, built by the Portuguese, and afterwards taken by the Hollanders; The Kingdom and Town of Commendo; Anta; Achim, Asjun, Axem, or Axym the capital Town of a Kingdom of the same Name, seated on the Mouth of the River Manfu, and possess'd by the Hollanders; Bumas; Fenu, or Fenu, a Kingdom and Town so call'd; as also, are Fantin, or Fanty; and Sabou. In passing through the inland Country we meet with the Towns of Adus; Aboraa, on the River Volta; Dama; Acanes Pequenos, or the lesser Acanes; Great Acanes, and Ocanas, or Ocanu, on the River Manfu. Catamannu, or Catamany; and St. Lourenzo, or St. Lawrence, are situated lower, near the Eastern side of the same River.

The Western Part of Proper Guinea extends itself between the River Manfu, or Masum, on the East; and the Province of Malaguetta, on the West. In the Northern or Inland Tract, the following Towns present themselves to our View, viz. Coriffeno; Xabanda; Cacres; Uxoo, or Uxec; Labra; Parigom; Brum; Alderrada; Bacorees, or Bacerees; and Jamo. The Southern or maritum Tract of this Part of Guinea taking its Name from the great store of Ivory that it affords, is commonly call'd the Ivory-coast, and Tandi-Coast, i. e. Tooth-Coast by the Hollanders, as also Quaquas-Coast, (according to M. Baudrand) and Quaquas, as it is express'd in the Sea-Atlas. Moreover here call the Eastern Part of this Coast, Costa de Bonegens, i. e. The Coast of good Inhabitants, and the Western Costa de Malegens, or The Coast of ill People. A particular People nam'd Adoons inhabit the Ivory-Coast, the chief Towns of which are Bogia; Tabbo, or Tobbo; Affina; Corby; Petoy, or Berby; and Growth, or Growth, which is attributed by others to the Province of Malaguetta, and is remarkable for its Situation near the Promontory call'd El Cabo das Palmas, or Cape Palmas.

The third and last Part of Guinea, being the least and most Western is Malaguetta, so Malagueta. termed by the Portuguese, from a certain kind of Spice brought forth there in great abundance, which tastes like Pepper, and is often stronger than that of Calicut. This Province borders, on the East upon Proper Guinea, on the North, upon Negroe-Land, from which it is separated by the Lions-Mountain, Sierra Leona in Portuguese; and on the West and South, upon the Sea of Guinea. The shape of it resembles that of a Triangle, and its Eastern Part is call'd The Grain-Coast, or De Greyt Coast, according to the Dutch Dialect: The Country is inhabited by different sorts of People, and subject to the Dominion of several Princes. On the Southern Shore, stand the Towns of Great Settera, or Settra; Crow; the lesser Settera; Salyma; little Deppa; Faly-Hamaya; Maffagh; and Fegwonga. In coasting along the Western Shore, we may observe the Towns of Bagga; Sherbro; Tinua; and Bugos, seated on the Mouth of the River of the Lions Mount, near the Promontory of the Lionesses Mount, styl'd by the

Portu-

Portugueses, and Spaniards El Rio et Cabo di Sierra Liona. Horrible Noises are often heard about this Mountain, which is of a very great height, and always cover'd with Clouds. The neighbouring Town of Buzos is well built, and taken by some Authors for the Capital of the Kingdom of Sierra Liona.

FROM Guinea, a Passage lies open to Nigritia, otherwise call'd the Land or Country of the Negroes, as also, Swarten Land, Mooren in Dutch, which derives its Name (as some say) from the River Niger; but others affirm that both the River and Country are so termed from the black Colour of the Inhabitants, who are commonly styl'd Negroes. This Country is bounded on the South, by Guinea and Biafar; on the East and North, by the Defart of Zaara; and on the West, by Cape Verd, or the Atlantick Ocean; reaching from the third to the 45th. or 46th. Degree of Longitude; but its Extent from South to North is a great deal less. On the Coasts of the Atlantick Sea, where its Breadth is largest, it lyes out from the eighth Degree of Northern Latitude, almost as far as the Tropic of Cancer.

The Air is healthful, notwithstanding its great Heat, and the nature of the Soil is different in several Places; that Part which lies next to the Niger being made rich and fruitful, by the overflowing of the said River: So that the Country affords Pastures for Cattel, Corn, Rice, Flax, Cotton, Honey, Spices, and several sorts of Fruit-Trees; more especially Palms, with which the Natives make a kind of Wine: But the other Parts situated at a greater distance from the Niger, are not well cultivated, in regard that they are parch'd with continual Heat, and generally destitute of Water: However they produce Mines of Gold and Brass, with a considerable stock of Ivory. The Negroes are said to be robust, but slothful, timorous, unchaste, and altogether ignorant of Arts and Sciences. They not only expose to publick Sale Captives taken from the neighbouring People and Malefactors, but Parents and Husbands are also us'd to sell their Children and Wives to the Spaniards, Portugueses and other European Nations, who transport them to the Canary Islands, America, or the Islands of that Continent, there to be worn out with the hardest Labour. They are partly Mahometans, partly Idolaters, and most implacable Enemies to the Fews.

III. Negroe-Land may be conveniently divided into three Parts; that is to say, the first lying on the hither side of the Niger, the second beyond the same River, and the third within its different Arms, or Branches. Every one of these Tracts comprehends several Kingdoms, which take their Names for the most part, from the Capital Towns; and the Kings exercise an absolute Power over their Subjects, in their respective Dominions.

IV. In that Part of Negroe-Land which lies on the hither side of the Niger, or extends it self from that River towards the South, some Geographers reckon up eight Kingdoms, viz. those of Biafar, Melli, Soufes, Mandinga, Gago, Guber, Zegzeg and Zanfara: Others place Biafar among those Kingdoms that are enclos'd within the Arms of the Niger, and others again leave out Soufes; so that the former make seven Kingdoms, and the latter only six. We shall follow the first Opinion,

Biafar
K.

beginning on the West, with the Kingdom of Biafar, the People of which are nam'd Biafives; and where M. Sanfon places Besegna, dignified likewise with the Title of a Kingdom; as also are, Buguba, an Island on the Mouth of the most Southern Arm of the Niger, call'd Rio Grande, or The Great River; and Guinala; seated higher on the same River, at its Confluence with

Melli K. the Guinola, or Guinola. The Kingdom of Melli extends it self farther towards the East, abounding with Cotton, Raisins of the Sun and Dates; in its Southern Tract, appears Sierra Liona, i. e. the Lions-Mountain, of an extraordinary Height, and the Natives are said to make use of Cockle-shells instead of Money. Among the noted Towns of this Province, several Authors reckon Cantory the Capital of a Kingdom of the same Name, situated in that Part where the Niger first divides it self into two Arms. But some will have it to be a distinct Kingdom from that of Melli, and others attribute it to the Kingdom of Mandinga. Farther towards the South, are Beria; and Melli, a large and populous City, the Metropolis of the Kingdom of the same Name. The Province of Soufi K. Soufi, inhabited by a certain People nam'd Soufos, or Soufes, lies between Malaguetta and Mandinga, and is beset with Woods and Mountains: But this Kingdom is not so large as that of Mandinga, which is noted for its great store of Gold, and contains the Towns of Mandinga the Capital, and Tocrur on the Southern side of the Niger.

Gago K. The Kingdom of Gago borders on the East upon Mandinga, and affords plenty of Cattel, several sorts of Grain, Fruit, Rice, and the richest Metals: nevertheless, it is not stor'd with Salt, but what is imported. Its chief Towns are Cacces Bonaes, Gago the Metropolis, Tombi on the Niger; Bunci and Dau, somewhat higher on the same River. The Kingdom of Guber situated farther Eastward, is of a lesser compass than Gago, and abounds with Woods; including several

Guber
K.

Towns within its Bounds, viz. Malel or Malet, seated near the Frontiers of Gago on the River Niger, and on the Southern side of the Lake Guarda; Guber, a Place of greater Note; and Tuspa. The Kingdom of Zegzeg is remarkable for its Situation between the River Niger and K. the Kingdom of Benin, and for numerous Herds of Horses: The most considerable Towns hereabouts, are Zegzeg in the middle of the Province, and Chanara on the Niger. The Kingdom of Zanfara is more Eastern, and larger than the others above-specified, producing likewise abundance of Horses. The chief Town bears the same Name, as also does a Neighbouring Desert, which is otherwise call'd, The Desert of Zeth and Regbebil is not far distant from the River Niger.

Having thus taken a View of Part of Negroe-Land, situated on the hither side of the Niger, we pass over to that which extends it self on the farther side, or Northwards from the River. Here (in returning from East to West) we pass thro' seven Kingdoms, the Names of which are, Gangara, Cassena, Cano, Agades, Tombut, Gualata and Geneboa: The two last of these Kingdoms, are not only water'd by the River Niger, but their their Coasts are also wash'd by the Atlantick Ocean: The Kingdom of Gangara or Guangara, Gangara lies over against that of Zanfara; and its Eastern Tract near the Lake Borno is a great deal narrower than the Western: It is a very potent and populous Kingdom, so that the Horse and Foot Soldiers have obtain'd great Repute among the Negroes; and here the River Niger encircles an Island that is 100 Miles long and 50 broad. The most remarkable Towns are, Semegonda, or Semegda, near the Place where the Niger divides it self into two Arms to make the said Island; Secmara, somewhat lower; Tirqua on the Confines of the Desert of Zanfara; and Gangara the Metropolis, where are several Gold-mines. The Kingdom of Cassena bordering Westward upon Gangara, is Rocky and Barren: In its Northern Tract, the Town of Nebrina presents it self to our View, and Cassena the Capital, on the South: Marasa is seated on the Niger, near the Confines of this Kingdom and that of Gangara, to which it is attributed by some Authors; and Tirea, or Tirca, appears a great deal farther towards the West.

The Kingdom of Cano is of a larger extent than Cassena, and its Southern Part is water'd by several Lakes and Rivers. The Soil brings forth Corn, Rice, Cotton, several sorts of Fruit, and affords good Pasturage for Cattel. The most eminent Towns are, Tassava; Germa; Cano, a large, populous and noted Mart, the Metropolis of this Kingdom, and one of the chief Cities of the whole Continent of Negroe-Land. The Kingdom of Agades extends it self on the West of Cano; the famous Lake of Guarda lying between both, near the River Niger, with a great Island in the middle. The Country abounds with Manna and Cattel, and the Capital Town seated in its Northern Tract, is likewise nam'd Agades. The others are, Degbir; Mayma, on a Hill; Mura, on the Western-side of the Lake Guarda; and Cutumbo on the Niger. The Kingdom of Tombut appears next, surpassing all the other Provinces of Negroe-Land in the largeness of its Extent, and abounding with Gold-mines. The King of this Country

Country is also very powerful, and several other Princes are said to be his Homagers or Vassals; nevertheless M. Baubrand assures us, That he himself is Tributary to the King of Gazo: The Towns of this Kingdom are, Berissa on the Niger; Gueguena, otherwise call'd Gueguera and Gueguera; Salla on the Niger, below which it is divided into several Branches; Tumbur, termed Tungubum by the Portuguese, and Tambouton by some modern Authors, the Metropolis of the Kingdom, seated on the River Senega, and on the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Gambia: Carvia; Tooror; Caragoli; and Cassali.

It remains only to give an account of the two Maritime Kingdoms of Negroe-Land beyond the River Niger, the most Northern of which is Gualava, or Galata, containing several Gold-Mines and the following Towns, viz. Falli; Hbedefew; Gandia; Gualata; Angra near Cape Blanco; Aggyyn, a Sea-Port Town and the Capital of a Country of the same Name; and Haden. The other Maritime Kingdom is Geneboa, situated in the middle, between Gualata on the North, and the River Senega on the South. It produces abundance of Cattel, Corn and Cotton; and its chief Towns are, Joslejoba; Sambalamech, or Sambalana; Parsau; Kellen; Ganar; Brack; Kackio; Formalick; and Geneboa, the most eminent of all, water'd by the River Senega.

The third and last Part of Negroe-Land being the least, is more especially noted for its Situation between the Arms of the River Niger, and is inhabited by different sorts of People, particularly, the Jaloffes, Cafanga's, and Bijago's, to which some add the Bisfaves; but a Description has been already made of these last, and of their Kingdom, in treating of that Part of Negroe-Land that lyes beyond the Niger. The Jaloffes are the most Northern, and live between the River Senega and Gambia, which likewise comprehend two Kingdoms of the same Name. On the Mouth of the Senega, the French have establish'd a Colony under the Government of a Society, which they term La Compagnie du Senegal; where they carry on a great Traffick for Negroes and Ivory. The Towns of this Tract are, Julieto; Gambia, the Capital of a Kingdom so nam'd; Budomel; Sollul; Emboul; and Tuala, a Sea-Port on the East of Cape Verde, call'd Green-head by the English, which was heretofore known by the Name of Promontorium aut Cornu Hesperium, (according to Ortelius and Cleverius;) altho' others will have it to be the Arifunarium of the Ancients; it is the most Famous and most Western Promontory of all those that are enclosed within the Arms of the Niger, and was first discover'd by Denis Ferdinand a Portuguese, A. D. 1446; but the Hollanders are now Masters of it, as we are inform'd by Leutholfius. Cape Verde is very much frequented by the Europeans upon the account of Trade, and lyes at the distance of about 25 Leagues from the Mouth of the River Senega, as also 240 Miles from the Town of Geneboa. The other considerable Towns of the Territories of the Jaloffes, are Barbola, Nabara; and Charles-Fort. The People nam'd Cafanga's are settled between the Gambia and the River of St. Domingo; and their chief Towns are, Bintha; Codan; Serara; Casama; and Jura. The Bijago's have their Abode furthest towards the South, between the the River St. Domingo and Rio Grande; where are the Towns of Catcheo, or Cabeo Amatao; Times; Poruzaco; and Boyla, or Bogla.

After having describ'd the whole Country of Nigritia, or Negroe-Land, it is requisite to take a particular View of its principal River; upon account of which we have divided it into three Parts. The Niger then, call'd Nizir by Ptolemy, Niget and at present, Hoid Nijar by the Inhabitants, (according to Marnel;) rises in Ethiopia out of the Lake Niger, and flows Northward thro' the Kingdom of Metra, Part of that of Bisfar, taken at large: From thence it conveys its Stream thro' the Southern Part of the Kingdom of Borno, and is there swallow'd up in a subterraneous Cave, as it is express'd in the most part of the Maps, except that of M. la Rebbe. As soon as it has recover'd it self, it runs thro' the Lake Borno; turns its Course directly Westwards, thro' the middle of Negroe-Land; and is increased with several Rivers, the Names of which are scarce known to the Europeans. In the Kingdom of Gangara it makes a large Island, and in that of Guber, it passes thro' the Lake Guarda: Thus after a very long Course, it divides it self into two great Arms in the Kingdoms of Canor and Tombu, and lower, into several others, which losing the Name of Niger, assume new ones, and at last discharge themselves thro' six very wide Mouths into the Atlantic Ocean. These Arms go thro' or Mounds of the Niger (beginning to reckon Casfathem from South to North,) are nam'd Rio manza Grande, i. e. the Great River; Rio S. Domin o, or St. Dominick's River, otherwise call'd Rio Jarom; Rio Casamanza; Rio dos Oistros; R. Gambia, and R. Senega. The Rivers Senega and Rio Granie, surpass in largeness the others that lye in the middle.

The River Niger overflows the adjacent Territories, at a certain time; and upon that account M. Saxon deservedly calls it, The Nile of the Negroes. This Inundation (as we are inform'd by Leo Africanus;) begins every Year on the 15th Day of June, encreases for the space of 40 Days, and takes up as much time in its Decrease. But it rises so high, that Ships may sail thro' the Countries of Negroe-Land, that lye near this River, nevertheless not without great Danger.

termed The sandy Sea, by the Arabians and other Nations: It is also dry, barren, very little cultivated, and often miserably infested with Locusts. However, numerous Herds of Camels are here bred, in which the Riches of these Parts chiefly consist. The Rivers are very few in number, so that its Eastern Tract is only water'd by the Giras and the Lake Borno; the middle by the Ghir; and the Eastern Part by the Horse-River, which being divided into two Arms, runs into the Atlantick Ocean. Therefore large Wells, or Pits are usually digg'd in the High-Ways, but so inconvenient, and in Places so far distant one from another, that Travellers often dye for Thirst. The Natives are reputed robust, and able to endure hard Labour, the scorching Heat of the Sun and the suffocating Storms of Dust and Sand: Some of them live in Towns, and others wander up and down like brute Beasts; the former being somewhat civiliz'd: But the latter are altogether Savage, Untameable, and extremely addicted to Robbery and Rapine. Part of these People are subject to their own Kings, whom they stile Xeques, or Cheques, i. e. Lords, and profess the Mathometan Religion.

The whole Continent of Zaara is divided into seven particular Provinces, or Defarts, which take their Names, for the most part, from Towns, and are (beginning to count them from the East) Zanhaga, Zuenziga, Targa, Lemta, Berdoa, Borno and Gaoga.

Among these Provinces, Zanhaga, or Sanhaga IV. is only maritim, and of a quadrangular Figure, Zanhaga extending itself for a considerable space from West to East, but not far from South to North.

The Horse-River, of which we have already made mention, takes its Rise in this Province, flows through it, and at last runs from thence into the Sea. The Cities and Towns hereabouts are not only very few in number, but also throughout the whole Country of Zaara. In passing Westward, Tegunt and Almabara present themselves to our View; and the Town of Zanhaga, with the Defart of the same Name, appears farther on the East; as also Puis, and Tegassa, or Tegazza, abounding with Salt, that is digg'd out of a Rock. This last Town is plac'd in several Maps on the South of the Tropic of Cancer, not far from the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Tombut; and in others under the Tropic itself.

Zuenziga, which some take for a Kingdom and others for a Defart, borders on the East, upon Zuenziga Zanhaga, and is water'd by the Rivers Gbir and D. Ziz. It is inhabited by Arabians, who are Man-stealers, and usually divided into Proper Zuenziga, the Defart of Gogden, and that of Ghir. The Defart

I. FROM the Islands of Cape Verd, we return to the Continent, and there (according to our proposed Method) take a View of Zaara, or Zahara, otherwise call'd Sarra and Saara, an Arabian Term which signifies a Defart. This Country is bounded on the South, by Negroeland, and Part of the Kingdom of Biafar, taken at large; on the East, by Nubia; on the North, by Biledulgerid; and on the West, by the Atlantick Ocean: It reaches from the 4th. to the 41st. Degree of Longitude, as also from the 20th. to the 28th. Degr. of Northern Latitude, and consequently lyes under the Tropic of Cancer: Its Extent is narrowest on the West, more especially on the Coasts of the Atlantick Sea, and broadest where it borders upon Biafar, and the opposite Part of Biledulgerid.

II. The Air of Zaara is very hot, nevertheless so wholesome, that it is said to restore sick Persons to their Health, who are convey'd thither out of the neighbouring Provinces. The Soil is so full of Sand; that the whole Country is frequently Defart of Kingdom of Zuenziga strictly taken is its Northern Part, lying next to Biledulgerid, where the Town of Zuenziga is seated on the left-side Bank of the Ziz, and that of Ziz farther Eastward. The Defart of Gogden is extended about the Tropick of Cancer, and that of Ghir, lyes out from thence towards the South; in which the Town of Ghir stands on a River of the same Name.

VI. Targa, the most Northern of all the Provinces of Zaara, is likewise differently reputed a Defart and Kingdom: It affords Pastures for Cattel, and Wells of good Water, with excellent Manna, which is said to fall every Morning. This Province is water'd by the River Ghir, and divided into three Parts, viz. Hair, Proper Targa and Ignid. The Defart of Hair takes up the Western Tract, and its Town bearing the same Name, is otherwise call'd Benefer. The Defart or Kingdom of Targa properly so termed, extends itself farther towards the East: where the Town of Targaa, nam'd also Sagya and Zaghara, is seated on the Western side of a large Lake. The Defart of Ignid is plac'd by M. Sunson on the South of the Tropick of Cancer, and on the Borders of Negroeland, although others set out its Bounds towards Biledulgerid.

Proper Targa.

Ignid D.

VII. Lemta, or Lempta lyes next to Targa, as also Suma, and is one of the largest Provinces of Zaara. Some think fit to dignifie it with the Title of a Kingdom, and others only reckon it among the Defarts. The Towns of this Province are Lemta, Sama, and Casif Elchebir, on the North of the Tropick, with Agrades and Degir, or Digir, on the South of the same Circle.

Lempta D.

VIII. It remains to give a short Account of the three last Provinces, nam'd Berboa, Borno, and Gaaga, which among all the rest (according to the Opinion of some Authors) are only erected into distinct Kingdoms. The Kingdom and Defart of Berboa, bordering on the West upon Lempta, and D. and on the North upon Biledulgerid, is divided (according to its Length) almost into two equal Parts by the Tropick; and is not altogether so dry and barren as the other Provinces. It brings forth abundance of Palm-trees, and its chief Town is likewise nam'd Berboa.

The Kingdom and Defart of Borno, or Bornoa, IX. (as others term it) is the only Province of Zaara, Borno I. that does not lye under the Tropick of Cancer: and K. It is also the largest, most Southern and best cultivated, and affords plenty of Water. The Inhabitants being partly of a black and partly of a tawny Complexion, are of a good Temper, and more civiliz'd than those of the other Provinces. The most remarkable Towns of this Tract, are Borno the Capital of the Kingdom, a Place of some Repute; Kaugh, on the Northern side of the spacious Lake Borno, which lyes between this Kingdom and Negroe-Land; and Amosen, not far from the Eastern side of the same Lake. Besides these Towns, Alhayad, otherwise call'd Alhayajad and Talmama, is seated farther Eastward, near the River Nubia, and the Frontiers of the Kingdom of the same Name.

The Kingdom and Defart of Gaaga, the most X. Eastern of all the Provinces of Zaara, is situated Gaaga I. between Borno and Berboa, on the West, and Nu- and D. bia on the East. It abounds with Cattel, and by that means provides Employment for the Natives; part of whom have embrac'd the Christian Religion, after the same manner as some of the Egyptians. The capital Town of this Kingdom is likewise nam'd Gaaga, or Kaugh, and stands on the Western side of a great Lake.

All Geographers do not observe the same Method in the dividing of Biledulgerid, some making it to contain twelve Provinces, and others only seven or eight. The last Division comprehends all its most remarkable Provinces, which are the Defart of Barca, Proper Biledulgerid, Zeb, Tegorarin, Segelwessi, Taflet, Darba and Teffet. The two first take up almost one half of the Country, situated on the East, and the six last the other half that lyes on the West.

In traversing these Provinces in their Order, from the East, the Defart of Barca first presents itself to our View; being a very large Province, bounded on the South, by the Kingdoms of Nubia and Gazza; on the West, by the Kingdom of Berdoa and Proper Biledulgerid; on the North, by the Kingdom of Barca; and on the East, by Egypt. It is full of most desert Wildernesses, some of which are nevertheless well inhabited, containing the following Towns or Villages, on the East, viz. Sabia; Alguber on a Lake; Covzza; Alcor; Eleocash, on the side of a Lake; Sirr; Anmon; and Ebada. The Western Towns are Aggela; Gorham; Sym, on the Confines of the Kingdom of Barca; Ageladia, or Agedalia, on the River Melel.

Biledulgerid properly so call'd, has for its Bounds on the North, the Kingdoms of Tripoli and Tunis; on the West, the Province of Zeb; on the South, Biledul-Zaara; and on the East the Defart of Barca: It reaches for a considerable space, from East to West; but its Extent from South to North is a great deal less. The Soil, more especially in the North-Western Tract, brings forth so great abundance of Dates, that it has impos'd the Name of Biledulgerid, not only on this Province, but also on the whole Country. However there are several Defarts, but in the Southern Part, we may observe the Towns of Tooregu; Fezzen; Gademes; and Gherguela, refer'd by some to the Province of Zeb, which are the Capital of certain Territories of the same Name. In the Northern Part, appear Tafet, on the left side of the River Capes; Chalbiz; Clemena; Tesfar; and Capes.

The Province or Kingdom of Zeb borders upon Proper Biledulgerid, and its Southern Towns are Zeb Techor seated on a Hill on the South of a River of the same Name; being the chief of the Techor-tine Territory, which is very plentiful of Dates, and taken by some, for a distinct Province of Biledulgerid: And Mezzab, the most eminent Town of a Territory whereto it has communicated its Name, and (as others will have it) a separate Province, through which Travellers frequently pass into Negroce-Land and Barbery, and keep the same Road in returning from those Countries. Farther Northwards are Nessa, otherwise nam'd Nessa, or Nessa; and Borgia, on or near the River Guadalbarbar. In passing lower we come to Pescar; and Dussen, on the Confines of the Kingdom of Algiers; as also Dusser; Teolacha; and Macara.

The Province of Tegorarin lying next to Zeb, on the West is well water'd, and brings forth great store of Dates, and several sorts of Grain, but is not sufficiently stock'd with Cattel. The Inhabitants are much addicted to merchandizing, and the Northern Towns are Tegorarin the Capital; Tesbit likewise the chief of a Country of the same Name; and Tuat. The other Towns on the South,

I. Biledulgerid.

II.

AFTER having pass'd through the Defarts of Zaara, we enter Biledulgerid, which is call'd by the Arabians, Beled el Gerid, i. e. The Country of Dates, and derives its Name from the great plenty it affords of that sort of Fruit. It is bounded on the South, by Zaara and Nubia; on the East, by Egypt; on the North, by Barbary; and on the West, by the Sea of the Canaries, Part of the Atlantic Ocean. This whole Country is situated between the 5th and 61st Degree of Longitude, and between the 22d and 32d Degr. of Northern Latitude; so that its greatest Extent reaches from West to East, but it does not extend itself uniformly from South to North: For its least Breadth takes up one Degr. and half, its greatest almost 7 Degr. and the Parts lying in the middle, indifferently come near to the Dimensions of both Extremes.

The Air of Biledulgerid is much of the same nature with that of Zaara, that is to say, excessive hot, yet very healthful, and the Inhabitants are said to be long liv'd. The Soil is generally sandy, dry, rough, untill'd and barren, and the Country is very little inhabited in many Places; nevertheless, in others it is more pleasant and fruitful; but it abounds with nothing more than Camels and Dates, which are usually exchange'd for Corn and other Grain, that are here extremely scarce. This Country is inhabited both by the Natives and by several Arabian Colonies. The former are savage, rustical, intemperate, stupid, and addicted to Robbery and Rapine: The latter are of a more civil and obliging Temper, and very industrious in the management of their Affairs. They live in Tents, and remove them from one Place to another, seeking for new Pastures, as often as the Cattel have made those bare, where they first settled their Abode; but it is unsafe to trust either of these sort of People. They are partly govern'd by their own Kings or Princes, who are almost altogether tributary to the Turks, Algerines, Tunetans and Tripolitans: Again, Part of them are subject to a multiplicity of Governments; whilst others are quite destitute of Rule, and free from all manner of Laws and political Obligations. The Princes of these Parts and a great number of the People adhere to the Mahometan Superstitions, and many Jews are also intermix'd among them, who have built Synagogues in the chief Towns, where they drive a considerable Trade.

South, are Tegzat; Tegrat; and Benigorai or Benigorait, on the River Ghir.

VIII. Segelmessa P.

The Province of Segelmessa, or Segelmessa, extending it self on the West of Tegorain, is one of the most considerable Parts of Biledulgerid, and is water'd by several Rivers: The chief of these are, the Ghir and the Ziz, which like the Nile, are us'd to over-flow this Country, and the Towns of Note are seated on or near those Rivers; particularly, Feghig on the East of Ghir; Benigumi on its Eastern Bank; and Chasaira higher, near the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Fez: On the Western side of the Ghir, are Mazalig and Abuhinan, somewhat lower: On or near the Eastern side of the Ziz, in descending from North to South, we may take notice of Gastrir; Tamaracoff; Alel; Mamunna; Segelmessa, the Metropolis; Tengen; and Tebubajant: At some distance from the Ziz, Westwards, appear Humledeg; Ummelhefen; and Sugabil, not far from the River Togda.

IX. Tafilet P.

The Province of Tafilet, which others dignify with the Title of a Kingdom, is of a great deal less extent than Segelmessa; lying between it on the East; the Kingdom of Morocco on the North; Darba on the West; and Zuenziga, a Province of Zaara, on the South. The River Farcala runs thro' this Province, and the Territories of Nata, commonly reputed its Southern Part, is subject to its Jurisdiction. Both these Countries are very Meuntainous, and the chief Town of Tafilet bears the same Name with the Province.

X. Darba P.

The Province of Darba, which some likewise erect into a Kingdom, is situated between Tafilet on the East, and Tesset on the South and West. Others will have the Bounds of this Province so far enlarg'd, as to include those of Tafilet and Nata, just now specified, within its Jurisdiction; but we take it in a stricter sense. Darba (according to Marmol) is subject to the Dominion of the King of Tafilet, and a River of the same Name flows thro' the whole Country from North to South. The Towns on the East of this River are, Mucabab, otherwise call'd Benifbib; Suzerin; Tinzed; Darba alias Tesuf, the Capital; Taragalel; and Jameguerut: On the West of the Darba, appear Tinzulin; Tagumaderi; and Afra, on the Borders of Tesset.

Tesset is a very large Maritum Province, and the most Western of all the Parts of Biledulgerid; its Western Tract being water'd by many Rivers. The inland Country contains the following Towns, viz. Archa, on the Confines of Zaara; as also Tesset, the Capital; Iren, on the River Arid; and Guden, on the River Buzador. On or near the Coasts of the Canarian Sea, are the Towns of Buzador, on the East of Cape Bajador; Non, Albena, Ansulima; Munster; Targuez, or Tarquez, a Town of the Province of Sus, the greater Part of which is comprehended within the Kingdom of Morocco, and shall be more particularly describ'd hereafter in treating of that Kingdom; Bulez on Cape Non, heretofore reputed the utmost Boundary of Navigation; and Suana, seated very near the Kingdom of Morocco.

THE Canary-Islands are situated in the Canarian Sea, over against Tesset, the most Western Province of Biledulgerid, and were so termed by the Spaniards (according to Linschoten,) upon their first Discovery, from the abundance of Dogs that were seen on the Coasts: But one of these Islands was long before call'd Canaria, even in Pliny's time (as that Author assures us,) from the great number of Dogs [Canes in Latin] of a prodigious Size found therein, and still retains the same Name; which this Island, being as it were the Principal, communicated to the rest of the Canaries. They are generally supposed to be the same with the Insula Fortunata of the Ancients, in regard that the moderate temperature of the Air and fruitfulness of the Soil, which were more especially remarkable in the latter, as also their little distance from Mauritania, with the particular Name and Condition of every one of them, cannot be more fitly apply'd to any other Islands of the Atlantic tick Ocean. Indeed, it must be acknowledg'd, That the Latitude which Ptolemy assigns to the Fortunate Isles, is more agreeable to that of the Islands of Cape Verd than of the Canaries; but it is not to be imagin'd, that that famous Geographer always set down the Longitude and Latitude of Places, with the utmost Exactness and Accuracy.

II. The chief of the Canary-Islands are situated between the 26th and 29th Degree of Northern Latitude, and the rest that are of a great deal less Note, lye out a little farther towards the North: They also extend themselves (according to several Maps) from West to East, from the first Meridian to the seventh Degree of Longitude. The Air is somewhat hot, but very healthful, and the Soil is extremely rich, abundantly bringing forth the best sorts of Grain, with most admirable Oranges, Lemmons, Pomegranates, Figs and Dates; besides, the finest Sugar and Wine of a most exquisite Taste, which is transported to all the Countries of Europe, and chiefly to England. There is also plenty of Gum and Wood; Oricelum, a kind of Herb that is much us'd in the Dying of Clothes with a Purple Colour: Lastly, These Islands abound with variety of Birds and Cattel, more especially wild Asses and Kids, the Milk and Skins of which are much esteem'd. The Canary-Isles were first discover'd (according to M. Bandrand) by John de Beaucourt, a Noble French Man, who made himself Master of two of them, viz. Forteventura and Lancerota, A. D. 1417. Afterwards Ferdinand Peraza took Possession of Gomera and Ferro, in 1445, and Proper Canary was brought into subjection to the Spaniards, by Peter de Vera in 1483; as also Palma in 1493, by Alfonso Ferdinand de Lugo, who likewise subdu'd Teneriffe in 1496. So that all these Islands still continue under the Jurisdiction of the Spaniards, and are reputed an Appendage of the Kingdom of Castille.

III. Pliny, who is follow'd by Solinus and Capella, reckons up six fortunate Islands, as well as Ptolemy, who places all under the same Meridian; but there is a great deal of difference between the Names that are attributed to them by these Authors. At present the larger and principal Canaries are seven in Number; and beginning to view them from the West, they appear in the following Order, viz. Fer, or Ferro, Palma, Gomera, Teneriff, Canary, Forteventura and Lancerota.

IV. The Island of Fer, in Spanish La Isla del Hierro, or Ferro, is the most Western of all, and farthest distant from the Continent, being altogether Untilled, Rough and Barren, altho' some commend its Fruitfulness: It is also extremely drie, and (as they say) quite destitute of Wells, Springs and Rivers; neither is it ever refresh'd with any Showers of Rain: However, the Divine Providence has afforded a singular expedient to supply this want of fresh Water, and such as is no where else to be observ'd; by the means of a certain Tree of an unknown Kind, bearing somewhat long and narrow Leaves that are always green: The Tree is also said to be extremely ancient, and never to decay, or die; but some deny that it has any such Property, and to retrench its everlasting Continuance, are willing to admit of several others of the same Kind.

This wonderful Tree (as some give it out) is cover'd every Morning with a little Cloud, by which all the Branches, Trunk and Leaves, are so thoroughly soak'd, that a most clear and pleasant Liquor continually drops down from them, which is receiv'd in Vessels set round about for that purpose, and in so great a quantity, as is abundantly sufficient for the use of the Inhabitants and Cattel throughout the whole Island: It is reported, That when the Spaniards first made a descent upon this Island, a certain Harlot discover'd the said Tree to them, which the Natives earnestly endeavour'd to keep from their Knowledge; nevertheless, she only procur'd her own Ruin by the Discovery. The French have made the first Meridian to pass thro' the Western Part of the Isle of Fer ever since the Year 1634, by the special Command of King Leuis XIII. after he had consulted the most skilful Astronomers and Geographers about the matter. This Island (according to the relation of John Nun de Pena,) takes up 6 Leagues in breadth, 7 in length, and 22 in compass, and has a Town likewise nam'd Hierro, with a convenient Harbour.

The Island of Palma is more Northern than Fer, and well cultivated, abounding with all sorts of Fruit: It also produces good store of Sugar, and a kind of Wine like Mahusey, which is transported even as far as America. Its Capital Town bears the Name of Santa Cruz de la Palma, and enjoys the advantage of a safe Harbour. There is also a great number of Villages, particularly Tajfacorda, St. Andrew and Brenia, and a burning Mountain, that casts forth Flames, as we are inform'd by the above-cited J. Nun de Pena, who was a Native of this Place. Palma Isle is said to extend it self for the space of 26 Leagues in compass, 10 in length, and 7 in breadth, and was first possess'd by the Spaniards, A. D. 1493.

The Island of Gomera, situated on the South of Palma, is very fruitful, affording plenty of Grain, Apples, Sugar and Wine, with Pastures for numerous Herds of Cattel. It takes up 22 Leagues in compass, and has a considerable Town of the same Name, with a very capacious Harbour.

The Island of Teneriff, call'd Thenerife by the Inhabitants and Spaniards, lyes next to Gomera on the East, and almost in the middle of the seven Canaries; taking up 48 Spanish Leagues in compass, 8 in breadth, and above 15 in length. Niger takes it for Pliny's Nivaria, that deriv'd its Name from the Snow, with which it was continually cover'd: However, it is at present well cultivated, very pleasant and extremely fruitful, more especially of Grain and Laurel. This Island was heretofore govern'd by several Princes who were its Natives, but after a War of two Years the Spaniards made themselves Masters of it, under the Conduct of Alfonso Ferdinand de Lugo, Septemb. 29. A. D. 1496, and it is still subject to the Dominion of the King of Spain. Here is to be seen a most famous Mountain, one of the highest of the whole World, which is commonly call'd The Pike, as also El Pico de Teyda, or Pico de Terraira by the Inhabitants, and Il Pico di Tenerifa by the Italians. It rises up (says Snel-lius) after the manner of a vast Pillar of a Conical Figure, the lowest Parts of which are most spacious, the higher contracted by degrees into a narrower compass, and the Top ends in a sharp Point.

Point. The Beginning of Longitude is reckon'd from this Mountain in many of the Dutch Maps, as it has been elsewhere hinted. The Capital Town of Teneriff is Laguna, or S. Christopher of the Lake, deriving its Name from a neighbouring Lake, being the Seat (according to M. Baudrand) of the General Governour of the Canaries. There are also several other Towns in this Island, particularly, La Ramela; Gerachico, or Garrico; Ateca; Gratiosa; Santa Cruz, a noted Sea-Port; and La Rotana; with 30 Villages or Parishes, and three principal Harbours. The Island of Teneriff is distant 36 Spanish Leagues from that of Forteventura on the East, 10 from Canary, and 55 from the nearest Coasts of Africa; as also eight from Gomera Isle, and about 18 from Ferro.

VIII. The Island of Canaria, or Canary, sometimes call'd La Gran Canaria, or the Great Canary by the Inhabitants, still retains its ancient Name, imposing it also (as it has been already intimated) on the other adjacent Islands. It is the most Southern of all, lying between Forteventura on the East, and Teneriff on the West; neither is it inferior to any, in the fruitfulness of the Soil and abundance of Delights. The Towns and Villages of this Island are, Tella; Argorez; Galder; Guia; Arginogi; and Canary the Capital, so nam'd by Foreigners, but the City of Palm-Trees by the Natives; the See of a Bishop, subject to the Metropolitan of Sevil: It is a neat, well-built and populous Town, with a very convenient Harbour and a fine Castle, affording a place of Residence (as we are inform'd by M. la Robbe) to the Spanish Governour. The Royal Tribunal, or Court of Judicature for all the Canaries, is also establish'd here, with that of the Inquisition. The proper Island of Canary is extended for the space of 11 Spanish Leagues in breadth, 12 in length, and 38 in compass; being distant 30 of the like Leagues from the Promontory of Bojador in Africa, on the West, and about 100 from Madera on the South.

IX. From Canary we pass to Forteventura, in Spanish La Isla de Forteventura, i. e. The Island of good Luck, which lies nearest to the Province of Bile-tura I. dulgerid, at the distance of 18 Leagues from the Continent, taking up 56 Leagues in compass; as also, 25 in length, and 8 in breadth. The Island Country is partly Mountainous and partly Champain, abounding with Palm-Trees, Olive-Trees, Mastick-Trees, Wood for Dyeis, Goats and Kids. The whole Island is well cultivated, and has a Town likewise nam'd Forteventura, besides several Villages, particularly, Chalros; Baltarbay; Langala; Pojo Negro; Tarafalo; Rieque-rocuca, &c.

X. Lancrota, or Lancarota, so call'd from the Name of a certain Portuguese, as also, L' Isle de Lancrota by M. Sanson, is the seventh and last of the principal Canary Islands, and lies over against Forteventura, partaking also of the same Nature and Constitution. It is said to take up 24 Leagues in compass, and 10 in length, but scarce 4 in breadth. The Harbours and Fortify'd Places of this Island, are Rubicon; Porto de Cavalos; Porto de Naos; and Lancrota, otherwise nam'd Cay-as, the Capital Town.

XI. After having given a particular Account of the seven chief Canary Islands, it is requisite to add a few Words concerning some others, that are of a great deal less Note. Their compass is but small, and M. Baudrand assures us, that they are altogether Desert and Untilled, viz. La Isla de los Lobos, i. e. The Island of Sea-Wolves, situated between Forteventura and Lancrota: Rocco, Gratiosa, S. Clara, and Alagranza, on the North of Lancrota. Two other Islands nam'd Salvage, or The Salvages, lie yet farther towards the North-West, which some reckon among the Canaries, but they are omitted by others.

The most Eastern

St. Michael Isle, with the Town of Punta del Gada
Santa Maria I.

I. T H E R E are several Islands situated on the North of the Canaries, of which it will not be improper here to make a particular Description; those that lie nearest to them, are the Desart Isle, Madera and Santo Porto. The Desart Island, in Spanish La Isla Desierta, so nam'd from its desolate Barrenness, appears on the North of the Salvages, and is but of a small compass, being distant only seven Miles from the Eastern Coast of Madera. The Island of Madera, or Madeira, (according to the Spanish Dialect) is a great deal larger and more eminent than the former, taking up 25 Leagues in length, and about 60 in compass. It was heretofore call'd led Cerne Atlantica, and derives its modern Name from the great store of Wood with which it was stock'd: For when the Portugueses first enter'd this Island; it was nothing but a thick Forest; insomuch that to clear the Ground for Tillage; they set it all on Fire, and by that means caus'd a Conflagration, (which as they say) continu'd for the space of seven Yeas: However, now it is very fertile, affording plenty of the richest Wine, Sugar, most delicious Fruits, especially Oranges, Lemmons and Pomegranates, with Corn, Honey and Wax: It also abounds with Boars and other wild Beasts, and all sorts of Fowl; besides numerous Groves of Cedar-Trees. The Air at Madera is more temperate than about the Canaries, and consequently its Condition cannot be inferior to that of any of those Islands; altho' it is not at present altogether so fruitful, as when the above-mentioned Fire happen'd. The Towns (to take no notice of the Villages which amount to above 30 in number) are, Monceico, or Monchico, Santa Croce and Funchal, Fonzal, or Fonzal, the chief City, so nam'd from the abundance of Fennel that was at first found growing thereabouts. It is the See of a Prelate, who is Suffragan to the Archbishop of Lisbon, and affords a splendid Court to the Portuguese Governour. This Island is said to have been first discover'd by Robert Machin, an English Man; but afterwards John Gondiçalvo Zarco and Trifitano Vas took possession of it for the King of Portugal, A. D. 1419, and it is still almost entirely inhabited by that Nation. It was also remarkable for the Residence of that famous Navigator Cristopher Columbus, and is distant only three Leagues from the Island of Santo Porto; as also, seven from Isla Deserta.

The Island of Santo Porto, call'd Port Saint by the French, and Holy Haven by the English, is a great deal less than Madera; taking up (as some say) only eight Miles in compass: It is likewise possess'd by the Portugueses, and subject to the Jurisdiction of the same Governour and Bishop. The Soil is very fruitful, and as for Honey and Wax, no better sort is to be found in any other Part of the World. But this Island is destitute of Fortifications, and consequently much expos'd to the IncurSIONS of Pirates, by whom it was more especially infested in the beginning of the last Century.

The Islands of Azores, or Azores, lye at a greater distance from the Canaries, on the North-West, and were so nam'd (as it is generally believ'd) by the Spaniards, from a kind of Hawk, call'd Azor in their Language, and in the plural Number Azores; because they abounded with such Birds of Prey. These Islands are also styl'd Terceres from the name of the chief of them, and The Upper, by reason of their Northern Situation, with respect to the Canaries. Moreover, they are usually term'd by the Hollanders, De Vlaemsche Eylanden, i. e. The Flandrian Islands, in regard that (as it is reported) they were first discover'd, by certain Merchants of Bruges in Flanders, who sent Colonies thither to improve them by Tillage; for nothing was then to be found there but Trees, more especially Cedars, and several sorts of Fowl. Afterwards they were made over to the King of Portugal, and are still subject to his Dominion.

The Azores Isles are situated between the 37th and 41st Deg. of Northern Lat. in the middle of the Atlantick Ocean, almost at an equal Distance from Northern America and Africa; upon which account, M. Sanfon in his Map of the Terrestrial Globe, does not place them next to either of those Continents, but between both. However, many refer them to Africa, and we have also follow'd their Opinion; altho' they are somewhat nearer to Spain than to America, or Africa, and are the most remote of all the Islands that belong to the latter. The Air is wholesome, and the inland Territories abound with Corn, Wine, Fruit, Fowl and Cattel. There are several hot Baths and Springs, which turn Wood that is thrown therein into Stone. It is related by Ortelius, That Passengers who set out from our Hemisphere to America, as soon as they have sail'd by the Azores, are immediately freed from Buggs, Fleas, Lice, and all sorts of Vermin of the like nature, which die at that very instant.

These Islands are commonly reputed to be nine in Number, viz. Corvo, Flores, Fayal, Pico, St. George, Gratiola, Tercera, St. Michael and Santa Isle. Maria. The Isles of Corvo and Flores are the Flores I. most Western, so that some Geographers make the first Meridian to pass thro' them; but Beyrius admits of neither into the Rank of the Azores: The former being the lesser and more Northern, is so nam'd from its numerous Flocks of Crows, and the latter from the abundance of Flowers. The Island of Fayal extends it self farther towards Fayal I. the East, and takes its name from the great number of Beech-trees, where (as we are inform'd by Ortelius,) some of the Posterity of the Flandrians who inhabited the Azores, still have a place of Abode. The Island of Pico lying next to Fayal, is larger, and of a somewhat long Figure, deriving its Denomination from a very high Mountain of a Conick Form, which is term'd El Pico by the Portugueses, and sometimes casts forth Flames. St. George's Island is like- S. George wise extended more in length than breadth, and I. a little farther Northward, being so call'd conformably to the usual manner of the Portugueses, who often impose on a Place, the Name of that Saint on whose Festival they first arriv'd there; which singular Custom is observable as well in the Isles of Azores, as in other Parts discover'd by that Nation. The Island Gratiola, which is Gratiola more Northern and of a lesser Extent, owes its I. Name to its extraordinary Pleafantness, as that of Tercera or The Third, is so styl'd from its Situation; for it is the third Island of the Azores, in passing over from the Continent of Spain: It is also the most eminent of all, and often communicates its Name to the rest: Its Metropolis is Angra, i. e. a Station for Ships, dignified with the Title of an Episcopal See, well built and seat'd on the Southern Coast of the Island, with a capacious Harbour, and the Castle of S. Philip, most strongly fortify'd. Alonso King of Portugal, was banish'd by his Brother to this City, A. D. 1668. The Islands of St. Michael and Santa S. Micha- ra Maria, are situated furthest towards the East el and South, and several Geographers make them S. Maria the Standard for the beginning of Longitude. The former takes up 32 Leagues in compass, and is distant 23 from Tercera. Its Towns are, La Punta del Gada, the Capital; Villa Franca, and Sant Anthony, or S. Anthony.

HAVING thus pass'd through the Canary Islands, and those that lye on the North of them, we return to the Continent of Africa, to take a View of its seventh and last Part, which is the most Northern of all, nearest to Europe, and well known by the Name of Barbary. Its Boundaries, on the West, are the Atlantick Sea; on the North, the Strait of Gibraltar, and the Mediterranean Sea; on the East, Egypt; and on the South, Biledulgerid, from which it is separated by Mount Atlas.

This Country is situated between the 9th. and 48th. Degree of Longitude, and between the 35th. and the 38th. Degr. of Northern Latitude; so that it reaches farthest from West to East, and its Extent from South to North is a great deal less; neither is its Breadth every where uniform: It is broadest in the Western Part, but so narrow in the Eastern Tracts, in many Places it scarce takes up the space of one Degree: Its Coasts both on the Atlantick and Mediterranean Seas, are very full of Bays, in which the Natives often find good store of Coral: And indeed it far excels all the others Parts of Africa, although it is one of the the least, as being the most populous, best cultivated, and chiefly abounding with Cities, Towns and Villages. The Air is temperate, and the Soil fruitful, bringing forth Corn, and the most delicious Fruits: The Horfes of these Parts are much esteem'd, as also the Skins of several sorts of Animals, and the Inhabitants profess the Mahometan Religion.

III. The whole Country of Barbary comprehends six Kingdoms, viz. those of Morocco, Fez, Algier, Tunis, Tripoli and Barca. All these particular Territories are maritim, the first of them lying on the Atlantick Ocean; the second on the same Atlantick Sea, the Straight of Gibraltar, and the Mediterranean Sea; and the four last only on the Mediterranean Sea.

IV. The Kingdom of Morocco, situated farthest of all Morocco on the South and West, is bounded on the South, by Teffet; on the East, by Darba, Taflet and Segelmessa, Provinces of Biledulgerid; on the North, by the Kingdom of Fez; and on the West, by the Atlantick Sea. It produces abundance of Grain, Pulse, Oil, Honey, Sugar, and all sorts of Fruit, particularly Grapes of an extraordinary largeness; besides numerous Herds of Cattel, more especially Goats, the Skins of which are call'd Marogrins, and the Shag is of singular use in the making of Hair-Camlet Stuff. There are also several Mines of Gold, Silver and Copper, and variety of Rivers. The Monarch of this Kingdom (as we are inform'd by M. Robbe) assumes the Title of Emperor of Africa, King of Morocco, Fez, Sus and Taflet; Lord of Gago, Darba and Guinea; great Scriph of Mahomet, &c.

V. It is divid'd into seven principal Provinces, which are Sus, Hea, Duccala, Guzula, Proper Morocco, Hafcora and Tedies: The three first are situated on the Sea-coasts, and the four last, in the inland Country. The Province of Sus is the most Southern of the maritim ones, and borders on the North, upon Teffet, deriving its Name from the River Sus with which it is water'd: It is omitted by M. Baurbrand, in reckoning up the Provinces of the Kingdom of Morocco, and attributed to Biledulgerid: But others are of a different Opinion, conformably to the Maps, in which the Southern Part of Sus, lying on the South of the River of the same Name, and containing the lesser Provinces or Territories of Extuca and Ydassmerit, is plac'd in Teffet, or Biledulgerid. Sus abounds with Corn, Flax, Sugar, Figs, Dates and Gold, and its Sea-coasts afford plenty of fine Amber. Its most remarkable Towns are Tagavost, near the Frontiers of Teffet; Tedja; Tarodant, or Taradant, the Capital; Tejem, on the left side of the River Sus, in the Territories about which no other Coy'n is current, but such as is made of Gold and Iron digg'd out of the adjacent Mines; Messa, a Sea-port Town, on the River Sus, not far from its Mouth; Guargessen, on the Sea-coasts of the Atlantick Sea; and Albefus somewhat higher, on the same Coasts.

VI. The Province of Hea lyes next to Sus, on the North, between the River Affnual, on the East; and the Atlantick Sea, on the West; extending itself on the Coasts of it, from Cape Ger, or Geer, to the Mouth of the River Teniffi. The inland Country is rough, mountainous and woody, but yields abundance of Barley. The Natives are ignorant of the Arts of Phylick and Surgery; nay, few of them know how to write or read: They set down upon Mats at their Meals, after the usual manner of the Turks, and possess the following Towns, viz. Tafalla, on the Coasts of the Atlantick Sea; Tefethna, on the Mouth of a River of the same Name, a Mart-Town with a convenient Harbour; Culeja; and Teijub in the inland Tract; Montana, on the Sea-shore; as also, Amama; Tedneff, the chief Town, on the River Savenfi; Hadechis; Teculeth; Santa Clara; and Gozza, on the Coasts.

The third and most Northern Province of the Kingdom of Morocco is Duccala, situated between the Rivers Teniffi and Ommirabyn, and abounding with Corn. Its inland Towns of Note, are Contra and Meramer; and the principal Sea-port Towns, are Azafi which some take for the most eminent, seated at a little distance from the Mouth of the River Teniffi; Emander, on the East of Cape Canin; Teiwria; Tita, sometime in the Possession of the Portugueses (according to M. Sanson) but now demolish'd; Magazan, Magrazan, or Mazagan, a famous and well fortify'd Sea-port, subject to the same Nation; El Medina seated on a Plain, at the Mouth of the River Ommiraby; Azamor, with a fine Harbour, formerly under the Dominion of the Portugueses, but afterwards recover'd by the Moors, and now almost reduc'd to a Village. The Towns of Subeit; Temeracoft; Tergum; and Bublabun follow in Order, on the left side of the Ommiraby.

After having describ'd the Maritim Provinces, VIII. we proceed to those of the inland Country, and Guzula first to that of Guzula, which is the most Southern of all; bordering on the West, upon Sus; and on the South, upon Teffet; and on the East, upon Darba. This Province is water'd by the upper Part of the River Sus, and its Towns are destitute of Walls and Ramparts: But there are many large, rich and populous Villages, where in Fairs are kept every Year, to which the Africans resort in great numbers. The Inhabitants are said to be slow and stupid, but they are very dextrous in making Iron tools.

The Province of Morocco properly so call'd, is IX. situated on the North of Guzula, and separated from Hea, by the River Affnual; as also from Duccala and Hafcora, by that of Teniffi: It is justly reputed the principal Part of the Kingdom, being very well cultivated, and abounding with all sorts of Cattel. The most eminent Towns are Delgumuba; Temmelle, on a Mountain of the same Name; Imogiagen, or Imogiagen likewise on a steep Mountain; Elgumuba, a strong Town on the River Sefava; Tumelajafa; Sefraja; and Morocco, seated in the middle, between the Rivulet Niffi, or Nefsi, and the Town of Agmet, in a very spacious and verdant Plain; the Royal Seat and Metropolis not only of this Province, but also of the whole Kingdom, on which it has impos'd its Name. This City (as Leo Africanus expresses it) was heretofore of an incredible largeness, containing above 100000 Houses, and 24 or 25 Gates: it is encompass'd with a very thick and high Wall full of Towers, and adorn'd with most artificial and magnificent Temples, or Mosques, besides a large and most strongly fortify'd Castle; so that if its Walls, Marble Gates and Comfats be duly consider'd, it may well be taken for a distinct Town. However, a great part part of the City at present lies waſt, and among the Ruins of the Houſes are to be ſeen Palm-tree Groves, ſpacious Gardens, and very fruitful Corn-fields; in regard that it is unſafe to till the Ground, without the Walls, by reaſon of the frequent incurſions of the Arabians. Morocco is alſo inhabited by Jews, and ſeveral Authors ſuppoſe it to the ſame with Ptolemy's Bocanum Hemerum. Buno aſſures us, That the Arts of Grammar, Poefy, Astronomy, and the Knowledge of the Laws of this Nation flouriſh there, and that the Youth frequently repair thither, from all the Parts of Barbary, to follow their Studies. The City of Morocco is diſtant 160 Miles Eaſtward from the Coaſts of the Atlantick Sea, 100 Leagues Southward from Fez, as many from Taradani, and 107 Spaniſh Leagues from the Strait of Gibraltar. The Town of Agmet, appears farther on the South-Eaſt, and was formerly much more noted than it is at this day.

The Province of Haſcora lyes next to Morocco, X. between the Rivers Tenſit and Quad-el-habid. The Haſcora Women hereabouts are beautiful, and apt to fall in Love with Strangers. The moſt conſiderable Places are Bezo, or Bzo, a Mart-Town; Elgimuba, on a Mountain; Tegodaſt, or Tegodaſt, a Mart, built likewiſe on an high Hill; and Elmadin, the Capital, a noted and moſt populous Mart-Town, ſituated fartheſt towards the North, and on the Frontiers of Ducala.

The Province of Tedles is the moſt Eaſtern of all, and remarkable for its Situation between the River Quad-el-habid, on the Weſt; and Segelmeſſa, a Province of Biledulgerid, on the Eaſt. Its Towns are Eitihad; Cibiteb; and Efza, ſeated on Hills; Teſza, a very wealthy Town, and the chief of the Province, on the River Derna; and Tedza, in a mountainous Tract, near the Conſines of Segelmeſſa.

C H A P. XVII.

The Kingdom of FEZ.

I. THE other Kingdom of Barbary, waſh'd by the Atlantick Sea, is Fez, being the moſt Northern of all, and the neareſt to Europe. Its Bounds on the Weſt, are the ſame Atlantick Ocean; on the North, the Strait of Gibraltar, and the Mediterranean Sea; on the Eaſt, the Kingdom of Algier, from which it is ſeparated by the Rivers Mulzia and Zhas; and on the South Segelmeſſa, Part of Biledulgerid, and the Kingdom of Morocco; being diſſever'd from the former by Mount Atlas, and from the other by the River Ommiraby. The Kingdom of Fez is the beſt cultivated and moſt populous of all thoſe of Barbary; abounding with Hills and Valleys; neither is there any want of Champaign Grounds. The Soil brings forth great ſtore of Corn, with ſeveral ſorts of Fruit, particularly, Apples, Pears, Plums, Grapes and Figs. The Weather during the Summer-ſeaſon is hot, calm and ſerene.

II. The Provinces of this Kingdom, which is likewiſe ſubject to the King of Morocco, are ſeven in number, viz. Temefna, Fez, Azgar, Haba, Errif, Chaus and Garet; the four firſt conſtituting its Weſtern Part, and the reſt the Southern. All the Provinces of the Weſtern Part are maritum, and waſh'd by the Atlantick Sea, and the fourth alſo by the Strait of Gibraltar and the Mediterranean Sea.

III. The Province of Temefna extends itſelf from the River Ommiraby its Southern Boundary, to the River Buragrag, on the North, and from the Atlantick Sea to Mount Atlas: The Country is champaign and fruitful, nevertheless there are ſeveral Deſerts that afford Lurking-places to moſt fierce Lions and Leopards; inſomuch, that Travellers cannot paſs but in Companies, and ſome are oblig'd to keep watch in the night, left the wild Beaſts ſhould ſet upon them as they lye aſleep and tear them into Peices: Tortoiſe are alſo to be found throughout this Province, the inland Towns of which are Tegagit, on the River

Ommiraby; Thagit: Adendum, with a Territorie noted for its Iron-mines; and Hainlechalla. On or near the Sea-coaſts appear Beniz; Elcoſſar; Anfa; Fedolla; Soncia; Almanſar; Rotin; and Rabar, built on a Hill, between the River Buragrag and the Sea-ſhore: This Town was formerly in a more flouriſhing Condition than it is at preſent, and is ſtill taken by ſome for the Capital of the Province.

From Temefna, a direct Paſſage lyes open to the Province of Fez, ſituated between the Rivers Buragrag and Suba: its Extent being narrow on the Sea-coaſts, but a great deal wider in the inland Territories. The Air is very temperate, and the Country abounds with Horſes, Sheep, Goats, Kids and Hares. The moſt remarkable Sea-port Towns are Mahmora, with a capacious Harbour on the Mouth of the Suba; Teſſelſelta; and Sala, or Salle, at the influx of the Buragrag, with a Caſtle, on an Hill, a Mart-Town formerly of greater Repute than it now is: The Harbour is choak'd up with Sand by little and little, and the Inhabitants are infamous for their living altogether by Piracy and Rapine. The inland Towns are Fanzar; Gualit; Mechnes; Zavia; Magbill; and Fez, ſuppos'd to be the Volubilis, or Volubile of the Ancients; not only the Metropolis of this Province, but alſo of the Kingdom, and even of the whole Continent of Barbary. The River Fez runs through the middle of it (according to ſeveral Relations) but M. Baudrand and La Robbe will have it ſeated on the Pearl-Rivulet, at the diſtance of 100 Miles Weſtward from the Coaſts of the Ocean, as many Southward from the Mediterranean Sea, and 150 from Tanger; as alſo 100 Leagues Northward from the City of Morocco, about 40 from Ternan. This City is of a prodigious Extent, in form of a long Square, and its high Walls are flank'd on all ſides with numerous Towers; it is ſaid to contain 86 Gates, 200 large Streets, 700 Temples, or Mosques, of which, 60 are elegant Structures, 42 Market-places, and 686 Springs and Wells; besides many Hospitals and Colleges, in which Arts and Sciences are taught in the Arabick Language; a vast number of Houses and Shops belonging to Merchants and Tradefmen; and other stately Buildings both publick and private: Insumch that it may well be reputed the chiefest Ornament of Africa, and one of the most magnificent Cities of the whole World; although others give it out, that its Grandeur has been much diminish'd for many Years, and that it is still falling to decay.

V. After having pass'd through Fez, we come to the Province of Asgar, or Azgar, which enjoys a wholesome Air, abounds with Woods and most verdant Pastures, and affords great store of Cotton. In the maritum Tract are several Pools and Marshes, that breed numerous Sholes of Eels. The chief Towns of this Province are Elgubma, the Granary of the Arabians; Cebir, or Casar-El-cabir; and Ptolemeys Lixa, or Pliny's Lizos, now call'd Larache, or Arache by the Europeans, and Arais by the Africans; heretofore a very large City, where (as they say) was the Royal Court of Anteus that Libyan Giant, whom Hercules put to death, and the Gardens of Heperides so much celebrated for their golden Groves, which others place in the Province Grynaica, not far from the Town of Barca. Larache is at present reputed the Capital Town of Azgar, and fenced with a Castle, as also a convenient Harbour on the Mouth of the River Lixus, or Lusso, and the Coast of the Atlantick Sea. The Spaniards made themselves Masters of this Place A. D. 1610, but it was lately retaken by the Emprour of Morocco.

Habat, call'd Elhabat by Berbers, and Hafbat by M. Baustrand, is of a great deal larger Compass than Azgar; being the most Northern of all the Provinces of the Kingdom of Fez, and only separated from Spain by the Strait of Gibraltar: It extends itself farthest between the Province of Fez and the said Strait, takes up a much less space from East to West, and is narrowest in the Southern Part, and in that which lyes next to the Strait: So that it is wash'd on the West, by the Atlantick Ocean; on the North, by the Strait; and on the East, by the Mediterranean Sea. It has the advantage of a fruitful Soil, and of several considerable Towns, viz. Zilia, or Zelis, now call'd Arzilla by Marmol and other Authors, a strong hold, seated on a Bay of the Atlantick Sea, and (as M. Baustrand says) subject to the King of Fez: And Tingis, or Tingsi, suppos'd to have been first founded by the Giant Anteus, from which Mauritania Tingitana, and Fretum Tingitanum deriv'd their ancient Denominations: It is now known by the Name of Tanger, and situated on a Bay of the Strait of Gibraltar, in a sandy and barren Territory. The Portugueses took this Town from the Moors, under the Conduct of their King Alfonso V. A. D. 1471, but it was granted in 1662 as a Dowry to Catharine Infanta of Portugal, upon her Marriage with Charles II. King of England, who caus'd it to be well fortify'd with two Castles, and a new Mole of free Stone, built in the Harbour: But all these Works were afterwards demolished with the Town, by the Order of the same Prince.

The other noted Places, are Cazar, Ezzagij, on the Eastern Bay of the Strait, at present in the Possession of the Spaniards. Teteguin, Teguan, or Tetuan, a neat and strong Town, in the inland Country: And Centa, anciently Septa, seated on an Hill, that was heretofore call'd Septem Fratres, i. e. The seven Brothers (according to Pliny and Mela) from the number and likeness of its Hilllocks: It is a little Town, but very remarkable for its Fortifications, and the vigorous Defence it has made for several Years against the continual Attacks of the Moors: It stands on the Eastern Coast of the Strait, where it is narrowest, near Mount Abyla, or Alybe, which is now call'd La Sierra de Las Monas by the Spaniards, as also Il monte delle Simie, i. e. The Apes Mountain, by the Italians, and was suppos'd by the Ancients to be one of Hercules's Pillars. The Town of Centa was taken from the Moors, by John King of Portugal A. D. 1409, but has been united to the Kingdom of Castile in Spain, ever since the Portugueses shook off the Spanish Yoke, and chose a new King of their own Nation: It has a large Harbour on the Strait, and is distant 36 Miles from Tanger, as also 30 Leagues from Velez, a Town of the next Province.

From the Western Part of the Kingdom of Fez, VII. we pass to the Eastern, and there enter the Province of Errif, which borders upon Habat, and extends itself along the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea, between the Rivers Gomer and Nocor. It is beset with Woods, high Mountains and Desarts, and produces good store of Fruit, particularly Grapes, Figs, Olives and Almonds, with Pastures for numerous Herds of Goats, Kids, Asses and Apes. Its Towns, for the most part, are either maritum or near the Sea-coasts, and the most eminent of them are Gomer, which some take for the Capital; Tartonella; Netogalla; Terga, on the Mouth of the Cherfer; Salquiz, on the opposite side of the same River; Jettis; Bedis, or Belis; Velez; Pennon de Velez, i. e. The Rock of Velez, a Fort built by the Spaniards on an Island, near that Town, with a good Harbour; Tegassa; Mezemma, on the Mouth of the Nocor, sometime a large and populous City; and Guafezala, in the inland Country at a great distance from the Sea.

Next to Errif, on the South and West, lyes VIII. Chaus, otherwise call'd Elehaus, the largest of all the Provinces of Fez; taking up above a third Part of the Kingdom, and abounding with Mountains, Hills and Desarts. The Rivers Nocor and Mulvoia have their Rise in this Province, in which the following Places of Note are comprehended, viz. Tezza the Metropolis, a large and magnificent City, one of the most eminent of the whole Kingdom; Sofroa; Aenibachlul; and Hamilifisan, on the Confines of Fez: Mabdia; Dubdu; and Hadduggia, on the River Mulvoia: Tewrent, in an hilly Country, on the Rivulet Zhus; and Garfis on the Mulvoia.

It remains only to give an Account of Garet, IX. the seventh and last Province of the Kingdom of Garet. Fez, which is one of the least, and remarkable for its Situation, in the middle between Chaus the Mediterranean Sea, and the Rivers Nocor and Mulvoia. It is altogether dry, sandy, mountainous, barren, and full of Desarts, where Pastengers are much infested by wild Beasts, but it affords most excellent Iron-Mines. The Sea-port Towns are Tarforagel; Fetis; Aloudia, near which lyes lies the most Northern Promontory, call'd El Cabo de tres Forcas, i. e. The Cape of three Forks: Me-lilla, or Melela, the Capital, with a fine Har-bour, in the Possession of the Spaniards, Chafassa, which (according to M. Sanfon) is likewise an-nex'd to the Spanish Dominions; and Jaffarin, near the Mouth of the Malvia, on the borders of the Kingdom of Algier.

C H A P. XVIII.

The Kingdom of ALGIER.

I. AMONG the Kingdoms of Barbary that are seated on the Mediterranean Sea, that of Algier presents itself first to our View; its utmost Boundary on the North, being the Mediterranean Sea, from the Mouth of the River Malvia, to that of the Guadalbarbar: on the East, the Kingdom of Tunis; on the South, Proper Biledulgerid, with the Provinces of Zeb, Tegorarin and Segelmessa; separated by Mount Atlas; and on the West the Kingdom of Fez, from which it is dis-sever'd by the Rivers Zhas and Malvia.

II. It is extended very far from West to East, that is to say, from the 15th. to the 28th. Degree of Longitude; but its greatest Breadth does not amount to four Degrees. This Country is beset with high Mountains, more especially on the South, in which are contain'd the richest Metals, particularly Gold, Silver, and Iron, with Caves and Lurking-Places for a vast number of wild Beasts; neither is there any want of Defarts. In other Parts, the Soil is very fertile, and water'd by many Rivers; producing the best sorts of Fruit, with Corn, Honey and Wax: The Sea-coasts likewise afford plenty of Coral.

III. The Kingdom of Algier, being very potent, and most infamous for Piracy, is usually divided into five Provinces, viz. Telenfin, Tenezza, Gezaira, Bugia, and Constantine. The Province of Telenfin, or Telissin, the most Western of all; dignify'd with the Title of a Kingdom, is bounded on the West by the Territories of Fez, and on the East, by those of Tenezza: Its chief Towns seated on or near the Sea-coasts are, Henzin, with a convenient Harbour, where the adjacent Country brings forth abundance of Cotton, Oranges, Lemmons, Pomegranates, and Figs; Telenfin, otherwise call'd Tremisen, or Tremecen, and heretofore Tunici, the Metropolis of a Kingdom of the same Name, built on the left side of the River Sefsis, or Teffis, not far from its Mouth; formerly a very large and magnificent City, but its Grandeur has been lately much impair'd by most violent Wars: Marsalyqibir, or Mars-el-quibir, under the Jurisdiction of the Spaniards: Oran, or Orano, nam'd Gubaran by the Africans, a little Town on a rugged Hill or Rock, fence'd with a strong Castle, and a capacious and safe Harbour: It was taken by the Spaniards under the conduct of Cardinal Ximenes, A. D. 1509, and still continues in their Possession: And Mazagran, or Mesgran, defended likewise with a Fort, on the Sea-shore.

IV. The Province of Tenezza being of a lesser Com-pass, lies between the Rivers Sies and Mivrom, the former separating it from Telenfin, and the other from Gezaira: The Towns of Note near the Sea-coasts are Mulagan, a Town situated at a little distance from the Mouth of the Setes, which some suppose to be the same with the Car-tenna of Mela and Anonius: Tadra, Tenez, or Tenes, a well fortify'd Town with a good Har-bour, that has impos'd its Name on the whole Province, and on the neighbouring Promontory: It is taken by M. Sanfon for Julia Casarea, the Ca-pital of Mauritania Casariensis, built by King Ju-ba, which was at first call'd Jol, and afterwards had its Name chang'd in Honour of Julius Cesar: Aocher; Brischa; Marfolach; Sersel, or Sercelly; and Meliana, seated on an Hill, and on the left side of the River Mivrom, in the inland Country, abounding with Springs and Nut-trees.

Gezaira, or Proper Algier, remarkable for its Situation in the middle of the five Provinces of this Kingdom, is enclos'd within the Rivers Mivrom, on the West; and Major, on the East. The most considerable inland Town of this Province is Mazura, seated on the right side of the Mivrom: Near the Sea-coasts appear Mivrom, or Maroma; Caxima; and Algier, commonly call'd Gezaira by the Arabians, Algieri by the French, Algiroi by the Italians, and Argel by the Spaniards. Several Authors suppose it to be the same with Ju-lia Casarea, but M. Sanfon is of a different Opini-on, attributing that ancient Name to Tenez (as it has been hinted a little before) and taking Ru-scurum, or Pliny's Ruscurum for Algier. However this City is very wealthy and potent, and reputed the Metropolis not only of the Province of Gezaira, but also of the whole Kingdom. It began to de-cay at first under King Telusinus, and became tributary to the King of Bugia; afterwards it fell into the Possession of Ferdinand surnam'd the Ca-tholick, King of Spain: At last it was taken by Barbarossa the Arch-pirate, and united to the Ot-toman Empire. It is situated at the Mouth of the River Sesata, on the foot of a Mountain, and rises up by degrees, from the Sea-coast, along its steep side, in form of a Theater; the more remote Edifices far surpassing in Grandeur, those that are built near the Shore. It extends itself on all sides almost in a square Figure, and is most strong-ly fortify'd with a broad, thick and high Wall; deep Ditches, but for the most part, destitute of Water, Ramparts, Castles, Towers, several Pei-ces of Ordinance, and a considerable Garrison. It has also the advantage of an excellent Har-bour, and contains about fifteen thousand Hou-ses, some of which are more especially remarka-ble for their Stateliness; besides above 100 Tem-ples, or Mosques, with a great number of hot Baths and Springs; but the Streets are very nar-row. The Inhabitants are extremely numerous, among whom are many Fanizaries, and their Government comes near that of a Common-Wealth.

Wealth, under the Protection of the Grand Signior, whose arbitrary Injunctions nevertheless, they are oblig'd to observe. This Place is well known to be a nest of the most notorious Pirates of Barbary, where many thousands of Christians are always imprison'd, and undergo the severest Slavery. The Emperor Charles V. endeavour'd to make himself Master of it, A. D. 1541, but lost a great Fleet in the Attempt, by a violent and continual Storm at Sea. Algier is distant 30 Leagues Westward from Bugia, and about 36 from Tenez.

The Territory without the Walls of Algier, is diversify'd with numerous Hills and Valleys that are extremely delightful and verdant, abounding with all sorts of Fruit-Trees, particularly most admirable Vines. The other Towns of the Province of Gezaira on the West of Algier, are, Temenfust, or Temenfui, with a good Harbour; Merolla; Teadeles; Berenginet; Garbello; Zaffona; Carbona; and Couco, on the left side of the River Major, at a great distance from the Sea-coasts.

VI. The Province of Bugia, lyes next to Gezaira in Bugia P. the middle, between the River Major on the West, and Constantina on the East: Its Inland Towns on the River Major, are Lebez, in a mountainous Tract of difficult Access; Necaus, and Mesla: As also, Steffa, antiently Sitifis, the Metropolitan City of Mauritania Suisensis, on the River Majarius: On, or near the Sea-coasts, the following Towns present themselves to our View, viz. Bugia, the Capital of this Province, which is commonly taken for antient Saldia; seated on the Mouth of the River Major, and the innermost recess of the Bay of Bugia, with a capacious Harbour: Gema; Ballafia; Gergel, otherwise call'd Gigeri and Gigiari; as also heretofore Igilili, or Igililium, with a little Haven, which the French seiz'd on, A. D. 1664, but were expell'd by the Moors the same Year; Giberamel; Sucatiocad; and Colle, formerly known by the Names of Collu, Collus and Collops Magnus.

The Fifth, or last Province of the Kingdom of Algier, and the most Eastern of all is Constantina, which others term the Kingdom of Constantina, as Constantina P. having been sometime govern'd by its own Prince: Its most eminent Sea-Port Towns are, Sora, the Ruscada, or Ruscicada, of Pliny and Mela; situated on a Bay of the same Name, with a spacious Harbour: Mabra; Hippou, or Hippo, surnam'd Regius, or the Royal, heretofore a large City, and an Episcopal See, which was a long time possess'd by St. Augustine: It is at present call'd Bona, and stand on a Bay to which it has communicated its Name, being reduc'd to a little ill-built Town; but it is Fortify'd, and has the Advantage of a convenient Harbour, with a Fort built on an Hill: Marzacaris; Tabraca, Tabracha, Thabraca, or Tabatra, now commonly styl'd Tabarca, a Village with a Castle and Haven, on the Mouth of the River Guadilbarbar, near the Borders of the Kingdom of Tunis, over against which appears the Island of Tabarca, at a little distance from the Continent; where it is to be found Coral of divers Colours.

In passing thro' the inland Part of Constantina, we meet with Milevum, or Milevis, where a Council was held, in which St. Augustine presided: It is now reputed by several Authors, the same with Mela, on the River Susegmar, not far from the Frontiers of Bugia. A little higher, on the opposite side of the same River, Constantina appears a large Town, the Capital of the Kingdom, and remarkable for its Situation on a Mountain: Some take it for the Cirtha, or Cirta Julia of the Antients; but others are of Opinion, that the latter was nearer to the Sea-coasts, than Modern Constantina: The other Places of Note, are Tifasa, or Tefasa, likewise built on a Mountain; and Tebeffa on the River Magrad, in the Confines of the Kingdom of Tunis; the Walls, Springs and Nut-Trees, of which are much commended.

C H A P. XIX.

The Kingdoms of TUNIS and TRIPOLI.

I. FROM the Kingdom of Algier, we pass over to that of Tunis, which is bounded on the West by the Province of Constantina, on the North by the Mediterranean Sea, on the East by a Gulph of it, heretofore nam'd Syrtis parva, seu Minor, and now Sinus Capfus, in French Le Golfe de Capes, and the River Capfus, or Capes, which separates it from the Kingdom of Tripoli; and on the South, by Proper Biledulgerid.

II. The Kingdom of Tunis reaches from West to East, for the space of about three Degrees, and more than four from South to North; so that its Extent is a great deal less than that of the Kingdom of Algier. The Shores are very full of Bays, and the principal Rivers are, the Guadilbarbar, the winding Course of which is very wonderful, the Magrad and the Capes; this Kingdom formerly extended it self farther than it now does, and was subject to its own Princes. Moreover, several Islands that lye over against its Northern and Eastern Coasts, depend on its Jurisdiction, but it is requisite at first to take a particular View of the Continent.

The Inland Towns of these Parts are, Beija, seated in a most pleasant Plain that is very fruitful of Corn; Hamsmita; Musti, on the River Guadilbarbar; Urbs, or Arobes, in a fertile Country; Camuda, on the Borders of the Province of Constantina; Marmagen, on the River Magrad; Baghani; Hama; Techios; Niofa, Nafra; Capfa, or Cassa, formerly a Bishop's See; Meschianna; Cyrouan, in a barren Tract lying near the Mountains, and destitute of Water; Gueslet; and Zagboan.

The most eminent Sea-Port Towns of the Kingdom of Tunis, are Asfacusa; Africa, or El Media, with a large Harbour, the Entrance into which is but narrow; Monastero, or Lempra (according to Arabs Nubiensis) heretofore call'd Leptis Parva, or Lepte Minus, and now not well inhabited; Susa, antiently Ruspina, a neat Mart-Town built partly on a Rock, with a convenient Harbour; where the adjacent Territory abounds with Pastures, and brings forth great store of Barley, Figs, Olives and Quinces: Eractia; Hammamet, or Mabometta, a considerable Mart, formerly known by the name of Adrumetum; and Tunis, call'd Tunes, Tunis and Tunicense Oppidium, by the Antients, which several Authors take for the Thinissa, or Thynisa of Ptolemy; sometime a Royal Seat, and still the Metropolis of a Kingdom of the same Name, which upon failure of the Royal Progeny, became a kind of Commonwealth, under the Protection of the Turks, ever since the Year 1570: So that their Power being almost absolute, they chose a General, or Governour, commonly call'd the Dey; who constitutes all the Cadis, or Judges, and has the management of all Civil and Criminal Affairs. The Town of Tunis is seated on the innermost Creek of the Bay of Goletta, otherwise call'd Barbasuco, at the distance of nine Miles from the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea, and 13 from Goletta: It was at first of a small Extent, and owes its Rise to the Ruins of Carthage; but it now takes up (as some say) a little Mile in compass, and its Figure, excluding the Castle, resembles that of a long Square: The Streets are narrow, but there are many fine Mosques, Hospitals, Colleges for the use of Students, maintain'd out of the Publick Revenues, and Market-Places; altho' their Number is now a great deal less than it was in former times. To these Buildings is added, a strong Castle on an Hill, and two Suburbs, besides several stately Tombs adorn'd with Marble, and pleasant Gardens round about the Town; which nevertheless, has not the advantage of any River, Spring, or Pit of sweet Water, and is only furnish'd with Cisterns. The Inhabitants, who frequently exercise Piracy, are Mooris, Turks, Jews and Slaves of divers Nations. This Place is famous for the defeat of the Antient Romans by the Carthaginians, with the Auxiliary Forces of Xanthippus the Lacedaemonian, when Marcus Atilius Regulus was taken Prisoner; as also for the Death of St. Lewis King of France, which happen'd whilst he was besieging it, A. D. 1270.

On the North of Tunis, and on the Strait of the Gulph which lyes before that Town, appears the strong Fort of Goletta, the Key of Tunis, noted for the Expedition of the Emperour Charles the Fifth, who made himself Master of both, A. D. 1535; not far from thence stood Carthage, heretofore a most renowned City, founded by the Phenicians, and more antient than Rome, with the Citadel of Byrsa, built in the middle by Queen Dido, which is reported to have taken up the space of two Miles, that is to say, as much ground as could be encompass'd with an Ox-hide cut into Thongs. This City, in process of time, became so extremely opulent and powerful, that it strove for the Mastery, even with Rome it self, subdu'd a considerable Part of Africa, extended its Dominion thro' Spain, and maintain'd a continual War with Italy, Sardinia and Sicily: But these over-cager Attempts to enlarge its Territories, at last procur'd us Destruction; for after the third Punic War, Scipio Aemilianus, raz'd it even with the Ground: It was rebuilt by Julius Caesar, and afterwards at several times miserably laid waste, by the Goths, Vandals and Saracens: So that now it lyes altogether bury'd in its Ruins, which are scatter'd far and near, and call'd Barjack by the Inhabitants of those Parts. The other noted Places are, Benferti, so nam'd by the Inhabitants and Arabians; as also Biseria by the Italians, and Biserie by the French, which several Authors suppose to be the same with Utica of the Antients, that was reputed the most eminent City of Africa after Carthage, where Cato died, who was thence firman'd Uticensis, altho' a Roman by Extraction; being still a large and well-built Town, seated on the Bay, on which it has impos'd its Name: And Rajamilar, a considerable Town, further towards the West.

There are certain little Islands situated at a greater or lesser distance from the Coast, which now belong to the Kingdom of Tunis, or at least sometime depended on its Jurisdiction. The chief of these on the North, are Galata, or La Galata, nam'd Calathe by Ptolemy, the most Western Galata Ile. of all, taking up 10 Miles in compass; and Zim-bala Ile. bala, on the West of Cape Bona. On the East P. are, Panthalarea, or Pantalarea, antiently Cossyra, Pantala- rea I. or Cossura, about 30 Miles in compass, which formerly belong'd to the Kingdom of Tunis, but was united to that of Spain, A. D. 1620, under the Government of the Family of Requesens, and dignify'd with the Title of a Principality; an Island destitute of Corn and sweet Water, being almost altogether Mountainous, and abounding with a kind of rough black Stone; in which is a little Town of the same Name, with a Castle; containing about 600 Inhabitants, who generally speak the Arabick Language: And Melita, or Malta, which was likewise subject to the Kingdom of Tunis; but it has been already describ'd in treating of Europe; altho' many antient Authors and several modern ones, have attributed it to Africa: And the rather, for that this Island lying nearer to Sicily, which is refer'd to Europe, than to Africa; it was for a long time annex'd to the Dominions of the former Continent, and is still possess'd by the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, who own themselves to be Subjects to the King of Spain. The other Isles are situated nearer to the Territories of Tunis, viz. Limosa, or Limoza, which some take Limosā for antient Aethusa; Lopodisa, or Lampodisa, extending it self 15 Miles in compass; famous for Lampodisa I. the Devotions usually paid by Roman Catholic Sea-men to the Virgin Mary, and for the Shipwreck which the Spanish Fleet under the Emperour Charles V. suffer'd there, A. D. 1551: And more especially, Cherchara and Gamelera, at the Entrance of the Gulph of Capes. Cher- chara I. Gamelera I.

In returning to the Continent, the Kingdom of Tripoli presents it self next to our View, which Tripoli K. (according to the common Estimation) is bounded on the North by the Mediterranean Sea, and Syris Major, or the Gulph of Sidra, a spacious Gulph and very formidable to Mariners; on the East, by the Kingdom and Desert of Barca; on the South, by Proper Biledulgerid; and on the West, by the River Capes, and Syris Minor, Minor, VI.

Minor, or the Gulph of Capes, which separates it from the Kingdom of Tunis. Some Geographers extend the Borders of this Kingdom, which sometime constituted a Part of that of Tunis, as far as Egypt, so as to comprehend the Kingdom of Barca, of which we shall hereafter make a particular Description.

VII. The Kingdom of Tripoli is situated between the 30 and 39th Degree of Longitude; but its breadth even where it is widest, scarce exceeds two Degrees, and in some Places is a great deal lesser, more especially in the Eastern and Western Parts. The Maritime Tracts are best cultivated, and those that are remote from the Sea, are more barren and desert. The Towns being few in number, are partly seated on the higher side of the River of Tripoli, and partly beyond it; so that this River divides the whole Kingdom into its Western and Eastern Parts; the former being the lesser, and the other of a larger Extent.

VIII. In passing thro' the Western Part, on the higher side of the River Tripoli, along the Sea-coasts, we meet with Capes, or Caps, antiently call'd Tacape, and afterwards Capsa by modern Latin Writers; a well fortify'd Town, built on the Mouth of the River Capes, and the innermost Bay of the Gulph, on which it has impos'd its Name, with a little Harbour that is dangerous, and incapable of holding Ships of a large size: Maclres; Girba, in Italian Geybi, call'd Lophagites by Ptolemy, Mirmex by Polybius, and Meninx by Pliny and Strabo; a little Island situated on the Mouth of the Gulph of Capes, so near to the Kingdom of Tripoli, that one may pass into it on foot, and at high Tide, over a wooden Bridge. The Spaniards took possession of it in the Sixteenth Century, but were afterwards expell'd by the Turks, with a very great Slaughter: It is well built, and has a Town with a Castle of the same Name.

The other Towns on the Continent, are Chatat; Portata; Gara; Palmera; Zoara, in a very barren Territory; Casarl; Tripoli Vecchin, or Old Tripoli, heretofore known by the Names of Sabrata and Sababra, but now reduc'd to a Village, not much frequented by reason of the unwholsomness of the Air: Zaviaz; and Tripolis, or Tripoli, so nam'd (according to Solinus) from the three Towns of Tapbra, Avrotonum, and Lepcis Magna, the Inhabitants of which agreed together to lay its Foundation: It is also call'd New Tripoli, and Tripoli of Barbary, to distinguish it from another Town of the same Name in Syria, and stands on the Mouth of the River of Tripoli: It is surrounded with a high Wall, and fortify'd with Towers and Ramparts. Its compass is not very large; nevertheless it is a populous, well-built and noted Mart-Town, and the Capital of the whole Kingdom. Its Inhabitants are no less famous, or rather infamous for Piracy, than those of Tunis, Algiers, Salle, and other Ports of Barbary. The Town of Tripoli was taken by the Spaniards, A. D. 1510, and granted in 1523 to the Knights of Rhodes, of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem; afterwards it was subdu'd by the Turks, and continu'd for a long time in their Possession: At this day it is almost a free State, retaining the form of a Common-wealth, and only owns the Grand Signior for its Protector. The following Towns of note are situated at a greater distance from the Sea-Coasts, viz. El-hamma, on the right side of the River Capes, not far from its Mouth; Gargara; Sarmana Zanzora; and Hanroz above Tripoli, at a little distance from the Mouth of the River of the same Name.

In the Eastern Part, or beyond the River Tripoli, near the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea, are Rasaxarra; Tessni; Ragamilar; Lebeda, otherwise call'd Lebeda, Lepeda, and sometimes Neapolis, which Mercator and others suppose to be the same with Lepcis Magna; Brata, and Meravo: On the Gulph of Sitra appear Cesracmid; Colbena; Salinas; Zedico; Sobeico alias Sabrigo and Subeico; Naima, or Taimi; and L'Arcudia, over-against which, at a little distance from the Continent, lyes the Island of Sydra, or Sitra, from whence this Gulph derives its modern Name.

CHAPTER XX.

The Kingdom of BARCA.

I. OF the six Kingdoms into which we have divided the whole Continent of Barbary, that of Barca only remains to be accounted for; being the most Eastern of all, and enlarg'd so far by some Geographers, as to include the Desert of Barca; which we have thought fit to place within the Limits of Biledulgerid: So that this Kingdom (according to our Determination) is bounded on the West, by that of Tripoli and the Gulph of Sitra; on the North, by the Mediterranean Sea; on the East, by Egypt; and on the South, by the Desert of Barca.

II. The Soil is rocky, sandy, dry, extremely barren and untill'd, and the whole Country is subject to the Dominion of the Turks; constituting a part of the general Government of Cairo; as it has been already observ'd in treating of that of Egypt. The Inhabitants profess the Mahometan Religion.

The Kingdom of Barca may be conveniently divided into the Western and Eastern Parts: The former being more eminent and less barren than the other, lyes between the Kingdom of Tripoli and the River Nachel, and is also water'd by the Rivers Doer, Melal, and Salinas, which take their Rise in the Desert of Barca. The most remarkable inland Towns, are Barca the Capital, which has impos'd its Name on the whole Kingdom; where a Turkish Sangiack usually keeps his Court: And Grene, heretofore a magnificent City that vy'd with Carthage, and was founded (as some say) by King Battus, A. M. 3563, A. U.

A. U. 143; taking its Name from Cyrene, the Daughter of Penus, which it communicated to the Country of Cyrenaica: It is now commonly call'd Cairoan and Corene, and stands on the left side of the River Doer, not very far from its Mouth; at the distance of 32 Miles from the Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, and 25 French Leagues Northward from Barca.

The chief Towns near the Sea-coasts, are Ber-nick on the Gulph of Sidra, antiently Berenice, so nam'd from Queen Berenice, the Wife of Ptolemy III. King of Egypt; where Ptolemy the Geographer, and Pliny, place the Gardens of Hesperides: Arfmoë, otherwise call'd Tenchira, and at this day, Taochara, or Trochara: Ptolemais, or Tolometa, deriving its Name from its Founder King Ptolemy; at present only a Village with an Harbour: And Apollonia, now call'd Bon Andrea, seated a great deal farther Eastward in the middle between the Rivers Doer and Nachel, and enjoying the advantage of a capacious Harbour; from whence the adjacent Promontory has its Denomination. Upon account of the five Towns last mention'd, the Northern Part of Cyrenaica bordering on the Sea-Coasts, was termed Pentapolis, or Pentapoliitana Regio, i. e. The Country of five Cities.

The Eastern Part of the Kingdom of Barca, which extends it self between the River Nachel and Egypt, and is destitute of Rivers, contains several Sea-Port Towns; of these the most Western are, Salinas Patriarch-Port; Trabocco; Mesulomara, or Mesulamara; Salamon; Cafale; and Salonoffa. Farther on the East, appear Alberion, heretofore call'd Paratonium; as also, Ammonia, or Hammonia; because a Road leads from thence to the most renowned Temple of Jupiter Ammon; now a little Town, with a convenient Harbour, the Mouth of which is very narrow: Raxa, or Raxa, which communicates its Name to the adjacent Promontory: Raibba; and Ripa Alba, or Ripalta. In the Inland Country, are Puc Almidan; Affaghir; Abdallah; Chareba; Secher-Albaniam, and Altaban; and some other Places of no great Repute.

C H A P. XXI.

Ancient LIBYA, with the greater and lesser Mount ATLAS.

AFTER having made Description of five large Provinces of Africa, that is to say, Guinea, Negroë-Land, Zaara, Biledulgerid, and Barbary, which constitute its Western and Northern Parts; it is requisite to shew in a few Words, what Countries and eminent Nations the Antients plac'd therein, as also by what Names they were usually call'd. The whole Continent of Africa was heretofore divided into Ethiopia and Libya; but we have already set out the Bounds of the former, in Chap. VIII. §. 1, 2. of this Volume; where we have also explain'd the manner of its Division into greater and lesser Parts, and how they agree with the respective Countries of modern Ethiopia. The other Part of Africa was nam'd Libya, or Lybia, (as it is express'd in several antient Inscriptions) and Proper Africa; and comprehended the entire Western and Northern Parts of the Continent, or the five Countries but now mention'd, with that of Egypt. The term Libya is here to be understood in a more limited sense; in regard that among the Grecians, (according to Pliny and Sirabo) it denoted the whole Continent of Africa.

This Libya, or Africa, strictly taken, was twofold, viz. Ulterior and Citerior. Libya Ulterior, otherwise termed Interior, i. e. The Upper, or Inner Libya, being the largest and most Southern Part of Africa, was bounded on the South by the Ethiopick Ocean; on the West, by the Atlantick Sea; on the North, by Libya Citerior; and on the East, by Ethiopia: So that it contain'd Nigritia, the Lands of the Genli and Garamantes, Libya Deserta, and some other Countries, the Southern Parts of which were very little known to the Antients: The Territories of Guinea, Negroë-Land and Zaara, now take up the Place of Libya Ulterior.

Libya Citerior, five Exterior, i. e. The Higher, or Outward Libya, was more Northern, and of a Libya great deal less Extent than the former; lying in the middle between Libya Ulterior and Ethiopia, as also between Egypt, on the South and the Mediterranean Sea, on the North: Its Parts (according to M. Sanson) are four in number, viz. Egypt, Proper Libya, Africa strictly taken, and Mauritania; altho' others do not reckon the first, amongst the Provinces of Libya Citerior; and as for antient Egypt, we have already given a particular Account of it in Chap. II. §. 9. & seq.

Libya, otherwise (for distinction sake) termed Libya Propria, was situated between Egypt, on the East; the Mediterranean Sea, on the North; Propria Syrtis Major, or the Gulf of Sidra, the Kingdom of Tripoli, and Proper Biledulgerid, on the West; and the Country of the Garamantes with Ethiopia under Egypt, on the South: So that its Place is at this Day, possess'd by the Kingdom and Desart of Barca. This Proper Libya was divided into Libya strictly taken, Marmarica and Gyrenaica: Lybia strictly taken, or Libya Exterior, was the most Eastern Part of Lybia Propria, which contain'd the Territory nam'd Regio Hammoniacæ, bordering upon Marmarica, and therein the Temple of Jupiter Ammon, or Hammon, famous for its Oracle. This is the Opinion of several Authors; nevertheless, Claudianus places the Temple of Ammon in Cyrenaica, and others translate it to Marmarica. That Oracle was first consulted by Bacchus, afterwards by Perseus, Hercules, and Alexander the Great; and Cambyses King of Persia, was severely punish'd punish'd for attempting to pillage it. Near the Temple was the Grove of Hammon, and in it among other Springs, that of the Sun, the Water of which (as it is related by Quintus Curtius,) was luke-warm about the break of Day, and cold at Noon, altho' the Weather was excessive hot: The same Water grew hot towards the Evening, and became boiling hot at Midnight; but when the Night was far spent, and the Morning drew near, a great deal of its nocturnal Heat abated, till at the very dawning of the Day, it return'd to its usual lukewarm Temperature. Those Parts of Libya were heretofore inhabited by many different Nations, particularly the Libyægyptii, Nitriæ, Chattani, and Zygiæ. Marmarica extended itself on the West of Proper Libya, and its most eminent People, were the Nasamonæ, Anarite and Libyarchæ. Lastly, Marmarica lay next to Cyrenaica; where among several other Nations, the Phylli had their Abode, whose Bodies are said to have bred a kind of Counter-poison, proper for the destroying of Serpents; as also, the Bærciæ, and therein was included the Territory of Pentapolis, specify'd in the last Paragraph but one, of the preceding Chapter.

V. After Libya Propria, follows Africa likewise termed Propria, to avoid Confusion, and by some Authors Africa Minor, or the lesser Africa, from which the whole Continent derives its Name. Its Bounds were, Cyrenaica, on the East; Syrtis Major, or the Gulph of Sidra, and the Mediterranean, or African Sea, on the North; Mauritania, on the West; and Libya Deserta, on the South. Where Africa Propria was heretofore situated, we may now observe the Kingdoms of Tripoli and Tunis, with the Eastern Part of that of Algier, including the Province of Constantina, and part of adjacent Bugia. The Parts of Proper Africa were four in Number, viz. Tripolitana, Byzacena, Africa strictly taken, and Numidia. Regio Tripolitana took up the Place of the modern Kingdom of Tripoli, and its particular People were the Macci, Sirtæ, Nigbeni, and Loophagi: The Situation of Byzacena was the same with that of the Southern Part of the Kingdom of Tunis; for it extended itself from Adrumetum, or Hammamet, on the North, to Tacape, or Capes, and the innermost Bay of the Guiph that bears the same Name, on the South. Africa strictly taken, commonly call'd Carthiginensis and Proconularis, lay in the middle between Byzacena, on the East and South, and Numidia, on the West, that is to say, in the remaining Part of the Kingdom of Tunis: In this Province liv'd the Carthaginii and Libyphœnicæ, or Libophœnicæ, otherwise nam'd Pœni, and Carthage was its Metropolis City: Lastly, Numidia styl'd Numidia Nova, by Ptolemy was extended on the same Level, with Constantina and Part of Bugia in the Kingdom of Algier; and its most noted People were the Cætesii and Nababute.

VI. It remains only to give an account of Mauritania, the fourth and last Part of Libya Cæterior, which lies out farthest of all Westward: It was bounded on the East by Proper Africa; on the North, by the Mediterranean Sea, and Fretum Herculeum, or the Strait of Gibraltar; on the West, by the Atlantick Sea; and on the South, by Libya Interior. The Natives were call'd Mauri, as also Maurisii by Vitruvius and Maurisii, by the Grecians, as it were the Inhabitants of Mount Aurafus, and still retain the Name of the Moors. Ptolemy divided Mauritania into Tingitana and Cæsariensis, to which others have added Sitifensis: Mauritania Sitifensis, so termed from Sitiss, or Stiffa, its Capital Town, was the most Eastern and least Part of Mauritania taken at large, lying in the middle, between Numidia on the East, and Mauritania Cæsariensis on the West, which Ptolemy comprehends under Cæsariensis: It was also call'd (according to Procopius) Mauritania Prima, and Zaba; and took up the Western Part of the Province of Bugia; being inhabited by the Toduceæ, or Taduceæ, and Cidamusi. Mauritania Cæsariensis, on which the Town of Julia Cæsarea impos'd its Name, was situated between Mauritania Sitifensis on the East, and Tingitana on the West, and had several sorts of People for its Inhabitants, among whom, the Maccæ, Mazyceæ, Mafasili, and Drytæ held the first Rank: Its Place is at this Day possess'd by the Western Part of the Kingdom of Algier. To conclude, Mauritania Tingitana, the chief Town of which was Tingis, or Tanger, border'd on the East upon Mauritania Cæsariensis, and on the West upon the Atlantick Sea: It was also call'd Boguliana, from King Bogud, and Hispania Transfretana, in the time of the Emperour Constantine the Great: The most eminent People of this Part, were the Mawrensii, Hæpeditani, or Hæpeditani, Volubiliani, Succosi and Metagontia, and the Kingdoms of Fez and Morocco are now contain'd within its ancient Boundaries.

Throughout the Territories of the hither Libya, Mount Atlas extends itself with an uninterrupted Course; being the greatest, highest, greatest most renowned, and most fabulous Mountain of the whole Continent of Africa; of which Pliny in Hist. Nat. lib. 5. cap. 1. gives us the following Account: 'It is related (says he) That this Mountain raises itself up to Heaven, out of the middle of the sandy Deserts; so as one side of it that lies next to the Coasts of the Ocean, on which it has impos'd its Name, is altogether rough, foul and barren: But the other Parts, which range along the inland Countries of Africa, are water'd with Groves and shady Thickets, and better with purling Springs; infomuch that all sorts of Fruit naturally grow at the Foot of it without any Tillage, and there is no end of its Delights: That none of the Inhabitants is to be seen in the Day-time, there being profound Silence every where, by reason of the dismal Solitudes, and that the Minds of those who come near, are struck with a secret Terror; more especially in beholding its dreadful Height, advanc'd above the Clouds, and even near the Orb of the Moon: It is also added, That Fires are often seen in the Night, on the same Mountain, and that it resounds with the Noise of Pipes, Flutes and Cymbals, whilst the Fairies and Satyrs are celebrating their nocturnal Sports. This Mountain is suppos'd to have deriv'd its Name from Atlas, King of Mauritania, who being very much addicted to the Study of Astronomy, usually took Observations of the Stars Stars from thence; more clearly and distinctly (according to the Opinion of the Antients) than if he had view'd them from a lower Ground: Upon that account, the same Monarch is reported to have carry'd Heaven on his Shoulders, in regard he was the first Inventaer and Maintainer of the Astronomical Science, and is feign'd by the Poets, to have been transform'd into this prodigious Hill, by Perseus, at the sight of the Gorgon's Head. Mount Atlas is also said to touch Heaven with its Top, and even to support it, because it rises up to the Clouds, higher than can be discern'd with the Eye.

This famous Mountain takes its Rise in Mauritania Tingitana, on the Coast of the Atlantick Sea, and the Promontory Gerym, or Cape Gyer: From thence, with a continued ridge of Hills of a vast Height, it runs Eastward thro' the Kingdom of Morocco, and the Frontiers of Barbary and Biledulgerid, as far as the Desert of Barca; but its Name is often chang'd, according to the diversity of Countries, thro' which it is extended. For at the said Cape (according to Marmol) it is call'd Idevacal, or Aiducal, and Tensif, or Tensit, (as M. Sanson expresses it) in Hafsora, a Province of the Kingdom of Morocco, where it borders upon Darha in Biledulgerid: On the Confines of Tedles, a Province of the same Kingdom, and of Segelmessa, Part of Biledulgerid; it bears the Name of Dedes; as also that of Zizi in the Western Part of Chaus; a Province of the Kingdom of Fez, &c.

The lesser Mount Atlas is the Off-spring of VIII. the Greater, and is also plac'd by Ptolemy in The lesser Mauritania Tingitana, but farther towards the North, and the Fretum Herculeum, or Strait of Gibraltar. It is now nam'd Errif (as we are inform'd by M. Marnol,) and extends it self between the Kingdom of Morocco on the South, and that of Fez on the North, at the distance of about 130 Miles from Larache, to the South-East, and almost 200 from the Strait of Gibraltar.

CHAP. I.

AMERICA in general.

I. THE upper Part, as we may call it, of the Terrestrial Globe which was all that was known to the Ancients, having been hitherto the Subject of our Discourse. We proceed now to take a View of the other Part, which with respect to our Hemisphere, is the lower; and in regard that it first began to be discover'd about two hundred Years agoe, it is often call'd The new World, but more commonly America; which Denomination is from Americus Vesputius a Florentine, who setting out from Cadiz, by the Order of Emanuel King of Portugal, on the 20th. day of May 1497, discover'd the Eastern Part of the Continent, which lyes to the South of the Equinoctial Line, and was the first European that made a descent upon that Part.

II. But though Americus had the Honour to give Name to this new World, the Discovery of it is owing to Christopher Columbus, or rather Colonus a Genoese, but Inhabitant on the Madera Islands; a Man of sound Judgment, and accute Parts, skilful in Navigation, and well acquainted with Astronomy; who by his own Reason and Study, was possess'd with an Opinion, that there must necessarily be Land Westward, beyond the Atlantic Ocean. And having a strong Inclination to find out those unknown Countries he apply'd himself first to the Republick of Genoa; where being refused assistance, he sent his Brother Bartholomew, to Henry VII. King of England: Afterwards, he delivered his Mind, in Person to Alfonso V. King of Portugal; but neither the States of Genoa, nor either of those Princes could be induc'd to countenance so hazardous and expensive an Enterprize, that seem'd to tend but little to their Advantage. Lastly, he communicated his design to Ferdinand V. firnam'd the Catholic King of Castille, and Queen Isabel his Consort, but his Solicitations there too prov'd as ineffectual for several Years: Till at length the Queen thought fit to hearken to Columbus's Proposal, and by her Persuasion, he obtain'd of the King three Ships, furnish'd with all sorts of necessary Provisions, and enter'd upon his so long with'd for Voyage, A. D. 1492: Thus setting out from Cadiz in the beginning of the Month of August (or as others say) of June, or September, he sail'd first to Gomera, one of the Canaries, and from thence made the best of his way Westward. After a course of nine Weeks, he happily arriv'd at the Lucayas-Islands, having first touch'd upon Guanabani, now call'd Salvador, which he took Possession of in the King of Spain's Name, and pass'd from thence to Cuba; then he came to Hispaniola, where having planted Crosses and set up the King's Standard, he returned to Spain to give an Account of his Expedition to the King. This Navigation being thus prosperously compleated, he undertook a second to Hispaniola, by the Command of the same King Ferdinand, September the 11th. 1493. He also visited Cuba again, and discover'd Jamaica, with several other Parts. During his third and last Navigation, which he began from Spain, May 23. A. D. 1493, he made the Caribbee Islands, off Sotovenno, among which Margarita was more especially remarkable, and discover'd the Coast of Terra Firma.

Some affirm, That a certain Sea-Captain, whom they differently name Albrete, Garcilaso Vega, and Alfonso Sanchez de Huelva, was driven by a Storm from the Coasts of Africa, which he frequented upon the Account of Traffick, Westward to certain unknown Lands: This Captain (according to their Report) lodg'd in the Lune Houe with Columbus, in the Island of Madera, and dying a little while after his Arrival, left him the Journal of his late Voyage. Whereupon Columbus having receiv'd such notable helps, and being admirably well vers'd in the Sciences of Astronomy and Geography, apply'd his Mind altogether to the discovering of these Countries. But others suspect, not without good Grounds, that this whole Relation was feign'd by the Spaniards, who could not endure that the Glory of so great a Discovery should redound to a Genoese.

There are also some English-men, who assert, That America was discover'd A. D. 1193, or (as others say) in 1170, by Madoc, the Son of Owen Gwyneth, or Gulsteth, Prince of Wales: Others will have Madoc to be the Prince of Wales's Brother, who (as it is reported) made two Voyages to America, and dy'd there, after having planted several Colonies, in Virginia, or in Florida and Canada, or in the Kingdom of Mexico; the Language of which Country, is said to be intermix'd, even at this day, with many British Words.

This vast Continent is call'd The new World, because it was but lately made known to the European Nations, and is the largest Part of the Terrestrial Globe. It is also suppos'd to have receiv'd the Name of Western India, or the West-Indies, from Columbus, who when he first touch'd upon the American Islands, imagin'd that he arriv'd at the Real or Eastern India. And indeed it may be said that there is a notable Similitude between the West and East Indies in several Particulars; viz. that they were found out about the same time; that the Natives of both (as it is reported) derive their Original from the same Stock; and that their Manners and Customs are much alike; and especially that America supplies Europe with a vast Wealth of Gold and Silver.

America has for its Botunds on the East, the Northern and Ethiopick Oceans, which separate it, at a great distance, from Europe and Africa; on the the South Magellanick Strait, parting it from the Island of the same Name, otherwise call'd Tierra del Fuego; and on the West, the Pacifick Ocean, by which it is cut off, at least for the most part, at a very great Distance from Asia: Its utmost Extent Northward is not as yet sufficiently known; in regard, that certain Straights, Straights, Bays and Coasts are only discover'd, and it is scarce possible to make any farther Progress, by reason of the huge Shoals of Ice that float in those Seas, and the frequent Westerly Winds. The whole Continent (according to its present Dimensions) extends itself in Length from the 24th. to the 34th. Degree of Longitude, and takes up no less space in Breadth; for in beginning to reckon only from Hudson's Strait, it reaches from the 63^d. Degree of Northern Latitude, to the 54th. of Southern; nevertheless its middle Part towards the South is very narrow, so that its Figure may well be compar'd to that of an Hour-Glass. The lesser Part of America is situated under the Southern Temperate Zone; the greatest under the Northern Torrid and Temperate Zones; and an unknown Part lies out far beyond the Arctic Circle; insomuch that the Degrees of Heat and Cold, must needs be very different, in the several Tracts of this most spacious Country.

VII.

When the Spaniards first made a descent upon the Land, they found no Gold, or Silver Coyne, the use of which was altogether unknown to the Americans; but a prodigious Quantity of Billion of those Metals, with which it still abounds, and great store of precious Stones. The Country was also destitute of Wine and Corn, instead whereof it brought forth Mays, a kind of Pulse, and certain Roots, of which Bread was usually made. Neither were there any Dogs, Sheep, Goats, Horses, Asses, Mules, or Oxen, which the Natives extremely admir'd at the first sight: However, there was and still continues to be plenty of Herbs, medicinal Plants, very different sorts of wild and tame Beasts, Fowl, Fish, Sugar and excellent Fruit, and such as are transported thither from Europe, thrive beyond what can be imagined. How much the Herds of Oxen have increas'd appears from the vast quantities of Hides that are brought over into Europe. But the Rivers which formerly had their Sands impregnated with Gold, now scarce retain any; neither does the Sea any longer afford its usual Store of Pearls; which Defect is to be imputed to the Covetousness of the Spaniards. The Natives are ingenious, robust, nimble, revengeful and timorous; being very expert in shooting with Arrows, running and swimming. They that have no intercourse with the Europeans, are partly Savages, and some of them are Cannibals, or Man-eaters: Some go naked, and others are cloth'd with the Skins of Animals; adorning themselves with the Feathers of Birds, and dyeing their Bodies with divers Colours: They that enjoy their own Liberty, adore the Sun, Moor, Water, Fire, nay even the Devil himself, and whatsoever their natural Inclination leads them to: But there are some (as they say) who worship only one God, the Creator of Heaven and Earth; and others that are subject to the Europeans, generally follow their Sacred Rites: Neither is one Language common to all, but they speak many that are very different.

Before the Arrival of the Spaniards, there was a great number of Kings in America, especially the two mighty Empires of Mexico and Peru, the Monarchs whereof, as well as the Petty Kings being entirely subdu'd, and the greatest part of their Subjects destroyed, the middle and best part of the whole Continent, (including the rich Gold and Silver Mines of Pern and Potosi) became subject to the Spaniards, and is still under their Dominion; being one of the most eminent Dependances of the Kingdom of Castille. The Spaniards in bringing this Country into Subjection, exercised a most barbarous and unheard of Cruelty, cutting off the poor unarmed Indians in vast numbers, so that the Country which was formerly populous, is now in a manner desolate, except of Spaniards, who are not very numerous, but have the sole Administration of publick Affairs; the other Inhabitants are either Criolians, which are those that are descended of the Spaniards, but born in America; the Melicio's born of a Spanish Father and an American Mother, which are reckon'd the very dregs of the People; the Negroes, or Ethiopians, a bravery and treacherous Crew, who being bought for Slaves in Africa, are transported thither, and put to the hardest Labour; and some other Europeans, and a very few Indians.

The Governours are chang'd every three Years, and the Inhabitants are forbidden to follow the Smith's, or Armourer's Trade, so that all kinds of Arms and Iron-tools are brought from Spain. Moreover, part of America is possess'd by the English, French, Portugueses and Hollanders, whose Dominions shall be hereafter describ'd in their proper Places. Part of it is still govern'd by its own Kings; and Part (as they say) is inhabited by a People that live without Law, and wander up and down from one Territory to another.

VIII.

Before we proceed to the Division of America, it is requisite to discuss two notable Questions, that are usually started. The first is, From whence when, and by what means, Men (to say nothing of brute Beasts, of a vast bulk) came to this new World, which is separated from Europe, Africa and Asia, by a most spacious Sea? The other is, Whether it was known to the Ancients, and frequented by them? Several Authors make different Answers to the former Question: Some are of Opinion, That America began to be inhabited soon after the time of the Patriarch Noah, and the Confusion of Tongues at Babylon, and consequently ever since the most ancient Dispersion of the Nations: Because, say they, the great Continent of America could not possibly in a few Ages be supply'd with so great a number, variety and order of People, as the European Discoverers found every part of it to be at their first Arrival: These Authors add, That the Americans were not ignorant of the universal Deluge, and that they retain'd among them a Tradition of the ancient Giants. Lerius is inclin'd to believe, That these People are the Offspring of the Canaanites, who being driven out of their Proper Seats by Josua, at last settled themselves there, or else (according to the Sentiments of others) the Progeny of the ten Tribes of Israel, that were at first carry'd away captive into Assyria, afterwards scatter'd abroad far and wide throughout several Countries, and at length pass'd over into America. Robert Compté a Norman asserts, That the Phenicians (or Carthaginians, a Colony of that Nation) being a People of undaunted Courage and very skilful in maritim Affairs, who apparently navigated the Ocean, beyond Hercules's Pillars; first of all arriv'd at those Coasts, and were also the first Inha-

Inhabitants of the inland Country, from whom he says the Americans were descended. Others think fit rather to derive the Original of them from the Tartars, at least from those People who pass'd from the Coasts of Tartary to America; because they suppose, that Tartary, among all the Parts of the old World, lies nearest to that Continent.

IX. As for my Opinion, I cannot be persuaded by any means, That so vast a Country, the Inhabitants of which are so different in their Customs, Constitutions and Languages, receiv'd them all together at once, from one particular Quarter, or after the same manner; and I take it for a great piece of Rashness to attempt to determine the Time, or Circumstances of their Arrival, or the respective Provinces of America that were possess'd by any of those People. However there are sufficient Grounds to conjecture, That the Posterity of Noah, who travell'd the old World; came also to that which we have but lately discover'd, either through some Northern Tract, or a long and more direct Road; the new World being then perhaps less remote from the old, than it is at this day: For Experience plainly shews, that the Surface and Situation of the Islands and Continents are not always the same: And if there was only a Passage to America by Sea, why might not the Art of building and steering Ships be transmitted to After-ages, from Noah the Founder of the Ark? Neither does it seem improbable to me, That the Scythians, Tartars, Chinese and other People of India, pass'd over into America; for it appears from the Relations of Voyages, that that Part of it, which is situated towards Asia, was no less populous, when the Europeans first arriv'd on the Coasts, than the opposite Part, which lies over against Africa and Europe. And indeed, it is no less probable, That the Phenicians and Carthaginians, whose Course might perhaps be promoted by a general Wind, continually blowing from East to West; as also the Norwegians, Greenlanders, and other Nations were convey'd to the same Continent of America, at several times, either by Sea or Land, either accidentally, or of set purpose; for that which might possibly befall any one of those particular People, might also happen, with respect to all in general.

X. These Sentiments will be farther confirm'd, if we consider the common Opinion, That America was known in the most ancient Times, and frequented by the Inhabitants of the old World. It is related in Plato's Dialogues, That Solon was inform'd by the Egyptian Priests, (in whose Archives this Account was extant) That the Egyptian Hercules, otherwise call'd Osiris, after having subdu'd many Countries, beyond and on the hither side of the Herculean Strait, at last undertook an Expedition to Atlantis, an Island situated beyond Hercules's Pillars, in the vast Ocean, and of a great deal larger Extent than Asia and Africa taken together: Which Island he likewise conquer'd, and having made Peace with the Inhabitants, constituted his Grand-son Neptune Governour of it. Moreover, Plato gives us an accurate Description of the nature of the Country, the Manner, Disposition and political Government of the People, with the Situation of the Towns and Castles, and more especially takes notice of the great store of Gold and precious Stones. This Author is follow'd by Pliny and Strabo; and Diodorus Siculus produces a Relation to the same effect, viz. That the Phenicians, in the most ancient times, as they were coasting along the Shores of Africa, beyond the Strait of Hercules, or Gibraltar, were overtaken with a furious and continual Storm: Insomuch that being driven to and fro, in the wide Sea, they at last arriv'd at a great Island, situated over against Africa, in the middle of the Atlantick Ocean; where the Country was well water'd, very pleasurable and extremely fruitful. Theopompus (according to Elvan) likewise made mention of another Continent, as well as Aristotle, who in Lib. de Mirabil. Auscult. informs us, That the Carthaginians found out a certain Island, beyond Hercules's Pillars, distant many days Voyage, from the Continent; where when by reason of the fruitfulness of the Soil, some began to contract Marriages, and to inhabit the Country, the Governours set forth a Prohibition; under pain of Death, importing that for the future, none should enter the Island, and at the same time expell'd those that were settled therein, lest increasing in number, they should at last aspire to the Sovereign Power, and deprive the Carthaginians of part of their Felicity. It were needless to alledge several other Testimonies out of Homer, Horace, Seneca the Philosopher, and Seneca the Poet, the last of whom being transported with inspir'd Fury, is said to have foretold the Discovery of America, in his Tragedy of Medea; more especially since those Records that have been already produc'd, seem appositely to agree with the Nature and Constitution of that most spacious Continent.

Kircher indeed, distinguishes the Island Atlantis, from the old and new World; neither does he take it for a Part of the latter, but supposes it to have been situated in the middle of the Atlantick Ocean, and that when it was thook with a terrible Earth-quake, and suddenly swallow'd up by a great overflowing of the Sea, some few Foot-steps of it were left in the Flandrian and Canary Isles: But this Explication is little consonant to the largeness either of the Island, or of the Ocean, as it is describ'd in the above-cited Testimonies. Barlaus is of Opinion, That whatsoever Plato has deliver'd concerning the Island Atlantis is not a real History, but only a Mythological Relation, and that what Diodorus indeterminately proposes, ought not to be understood of America, in particular. But that the Account which Plato gives of this Island is not fabulous, it seems to be sufficiently evident from the Circumstances that are added; as also from the Testimony of Strabo, who says, that Solon wrote a Book on the same Subject: And if what Diodorus lays down must not be interpreted, with respect to America; let Barlaus or his Followers assign another Part of the World, to which it may be more properly apply'd.

Lastly, it is observable, That others will have America to be the same with King Solomon's Ophir, to which, in those ancient times, a Fleet of Ships set sail every three Years: But it is objected by those of a different Opinion, That Ivory, which the Royal Fleet usually transported among other Commodities, was altogether unknown unknown in America, at least in Peru, to which some refrain the Bounds of Ophir; as also, that it was impossible to perform such a Voyage before the Invention and Use of the Magnetical Needle. However, we shall shew at least, in treating hereafter of the Country of Peru, That no Argument can be infer'd from the likeness of the Terms Ophir and Peru, by the transposition of Letters.

CHAP. II.

Northern AMERICA and the Arctick Countries.

HAVING thus dispatch'd the Preliminaries, we proceed to the Division of America, which is commonly distinguish'd, as it were by the direction of Nature it self, into the Northern and Southern. The former is sometimes call'd Mexicana, from the Kingdom of Mexico, its principal Part, or from the Metropolitan City of the same Name; but it is as yet unknown, how far this Continent extends it self to the North, and by what it is bounded on that Quarter: Its Boundaries on the East, are Davis's Straight, which separates it from Greenland; St. Lau-

St. Lawrence's Bay; the Sea of Canada, or New France; that of Virginia; the Gulph of Mexico; and the little Isthmus of Panama, by which it is cut off from Southern America: It is also bounded on the South, by the Southern Ocean strictly taken, or the Sea of New Spain; and on the West, by the Red or Purple Sea, which the Spaniards term El mar Vermelho, and (according to several Geographers) by the Straight of Anian. The least, but most eminent Part of this spacious Country, lies under the Northern Torrid Zone, and the greatest Part under the Northern Temperate Zone.

M. Samsou divides Northern America into Canadian and Mexican; making the former to consist of two Parts, that is to say, the Arctick Countries, whereto he also adds Greenland and Island, (which shall be hereafter accounted for in the Description of the Countries about the Poles,) and Canada, or New France. Under the Mexican Part, he includes the New Kingdom of Mexico and New Spain. However, we shall admit of six principal Parts of Northern America, viz. The Arctick Countries, Canada, Florida, the New Kingdom of Mexico, New Spain, and the Isles of the Mexican Archipelago: An Account shall likewise be given of the rest of the Islands of Northern America, that are of any Repute, after having describ'd the several Parts of the Continent, over against which they are situated; first shewing the whole at a View in these Tables.

New South-Wales is situated on the East of New Denmark, and wash'd by the Bays of Button, Hudson and James; as also New North-Wales, which is separated from the former, by the Christian Sea: Both these Countries were discover'd and nam'd by the English in the beginning of the last Age.

The remaining Arctick Countries of chief Note, extend themselves farther Eastward, either on the hither side, or beyond Hudson's Strait: On the hither side, or on the North of that Strait, appear the Islands of James, Cumberland and Good Fortune. James Island, so call'd by the English, in honour of King James I. and Cumberland-Isle, is of a vast Extent; and lyes in the middle, between Hudson's Strait, and the Bays of Davis and Baffin: On its Southern side it has a large Gulph nam'd Cumberland-Bay, in the innermost Part of which the Cumberland-Isles are situated, taking up but a small space in Compass. In land-other Maps, instead of one great Island, the Bounds of three are set out, separated from one another by several Straights, that flow between them; in the most Northern of which, the Cumberland-Isles are usually plac'd. These Parts are delineated in the Dutch Sea Atlas according to the former Draught, which is also approv'd by Baudebrand, La Robbe, and other modern Geographers, whose Foot-steps we have follow'd.

The Isle of good Fortune, appears almost in the form of a Triangle, not far from the Entrance of Hudson's Strait: It is a great deal less than James-Island, and was discover'd by the English when they found out the Arctick Countries.

The other Parts of these Countries, situated farther Eastward, and beyond, or on the South of Hudson's Strait, are Mansfield-Isle and Terra de Laborador. Mansfield-Island lyes in the middle, between New Wales and Terra de Laborador, at the Confluence of Hudson's Strait and Bay; extending itself a great deal farther from North to South, than from West to East: It was lately found out by the English, and receiv'd its Name from them.

Terra de Laborador, or Laborador, otherwise call'd Estotiland and New Britain, is wash'd on the North, by Hudson's Strait; as also, on the West, by the Bay of the same Name; and is bounded on the South, by Canada. This Country is very full of Bays, and its Figure is almost triangular; abounding (as they say) with Mountains, Woods and wild Beasts. Estotiland, in M. Sanson's French and Latin Maps is set down among the Parts of Canada, but in regard that no European Colony is settled therein, and nothing is as yet known but the Sea-coast, we are rather inclin'd to refer it, with other Geographers, to the Arctick Countries.

III. The Arctick or Northern Countries, so nam'd from their Situation towards the Arctick Pole, are very cold, and almost altogether unknown to the Europeans. In regard that some of their Sea-coasts only were discover'd about 100 Years agoe, chiefly by the English; as also by the Danes and Hollanders; hoping to find out a Passage from thence into the Pacifick Sea: But their Attempts were always frustrated, and they had only an Opportunity to discover certain Straights and Bays.

IV. These Countries may be conveniently divided into the Western and Eastern: Among the former are New Denmark, New South-Wales, and New North-Wales. New Denmark owes its Discovery to John Munck a Dane, by Virtue of a Commission from Christian IV. King of Denmark, A. D. 1619, or (according to M. Sanson) in 1629: The Arctick Circle passes through this Country, and it is wash'd on the East by the Christian Sea, which was so call'd in Honour of the same Danish Monarch. Munck was forc'd to take up his Winter-Quarters in a little Cottage, or Hut, on the Harbour which bears his Name, and found the Weather so excessive cold, that his Spanish Wines, and even those that were burnt, were quite froze: The whole Company that undertook this Voyage dy'd there, except the Captain and two other Persons, who at last return'd safe to Norway and Denmark. The Names of New Denmark and the Christian Sea, are now almost become obsolete, and are omitted in most Maps:

C H A P. III.

Canada, and the adjacent Islands.

I. FROM the Arctick Countrys we pass to Canada, or New France, so nam'd by John Verazzan, a Florentine, who first took Possession of it in the behalf of Francis I. King of France, A. D. 1525; although it was discover'd several Years before by the English. It borders on the North, upon the Arctick Countries, but its utmost Boundaries on the West, are not as yet sufficiently known; nevertheless 'tis certain that it extends itself very far on that Quarter towards the New Kingdom of Mexico: It is also bounded on the South, by Florida; and on the East, by the Sea of Virginia, that of New France, and St. Lawrence's Gulph. But the Limits of Canada must be restrain'd within a narrower Compass, if we cut off the Countries of Virginia, New York, and New England, with the rest of the English Plantations. According to the former Dimensions of Canada taken at large, is situated between the 34th. and the 55th. Degree of Northern Latitude.

II. The inland Western Part is possess'd by the Natives, but the Coasts both of Sea and Rivers is in the hands of the French and English. The Degrees of Heat and Cold in so spacious a Country must needs be very different: In that Part which is under the French, the Snows that fall in the Autumnal and Winter Seasons are very great, which by reason that the Land is cover'd with Woods, the oblique Rays of the Sun, cannot sufficiently melt; inso much that in process of time, they become a vast heap, and cause the Cold to be extremely intense: The Weather in the Summer-Season is excessive Hot, clear and open; but its serenity is sometimes disturb'd, with suddain Storms, and the Lightning is apt to set the Woods on Fire, which often continues for a long time. However, some are of Opinion, That New France, if it were industriously and duly manur'd, would soon become as fruitful as Old France; because they are both situated, almost in the same Latitude, and Experience shews, that the Soil is very proper for such Tillage.

Moreover, the Country abounds with Mountains, Rocks, Marshes, Lakes, Rivers, Pastures, Meadows and very rich Arable Lands, and affords good store of Mayz, Tobacco, Fruits, Herbs, Heath, Pit-coal, Silver and several other sorts of Metal. In the Woods are bred Stags, Elks, Bears, Ounces, Porcupines, Foxes, Martins, wild Cats, Weasels, Snakes and Rabbits: There are also several sorts of Birds, more especially Eagles, Vulturs and Falcons; and the Rivers, Lakes, and Seas, are very full of Fish: The former are frequented by Beavers and Otters; with Pikes, Carps, Eels, Lampreys, &c. In the latter are Whales, Sea-Wolves, Seals, Porpoises, Urchins, and Dog-fish; besides Dolphins, Salmon, Tortoises, Crabs, Cockles, Oysters, and chiefly abundance of Cod-fish; even sufficient to supply the whole Continent of Europe. The Canadians, who are said to be of a quick Apprehension, ingenious and long-liv'd, usually dwell in Huts, which they sometimes change: In the Winter, they cloath themselves with the painted Skins of Animals, and adorn their Faces with divers colours: They are much addicted to Polygamy, and take great Delight in dancing, smoaking Tobacco, and drinking burnt Wine; as also in hunting, fishing and fowling: They generally live in great Peace one with another, without Ambition, Envy, or Contentions; and do not trouble themselves in the least with any Care for the future: But the Iroquois, Armonchi-quois, and some other particular Nations are naturally deceitful, treacherous, and very cruel to their Enemies. Their Bodies are well proportion'd, and their Complexion naturally white; yet they make it of an Olive-colour, by anointing themselves with Oils mingled with Bears-grease, &c. 'Tis also reported, That their ordinary Remedy when they are sick, is to let themselves blood in the Belly, and that they use certain Herbs, the Virtues of which are known to them by Experience. These savage People are altogether Idolaters, but seem to have some general Notions of a God, whom they call Atakocan, i. e. The Author of all things. They are govern'd by Sagamo, or Captains chosen with great Solemnity out of the eldest Sons of their most eminent Families; to whom they usually give the Names of their immediate Predecessors, to revive them as it were in their Persons. In their general Assemblies, the Sagamo, and some old Aumoins, or Priests, have the decisive Voice. These last likewise perform the Office of Physicians; but are indeed no better than ridiculous Sorcerers.

To render our Descriptions more clear, we shall divide the whole Country of Canada into three Parts; so as the first may contain that Tract which lies beyond the River Canada; the second, that which appears on this side the said River; and the third, the principal Islands situated over against the Continent. That Division of Canada which is set out on the farther side of the River of the same Name, extends itself farthest on the North and West; and its chief Parts are the Provinces of Saguenay, the Territories of several sorts of People, and Lovissana.

The Province of Saguenay, so call'd from a River of that Name, which runs through it and Saguenay falls into the Canada, is the best cultivated of all Provinces that are in the Possession of the French. The most remarkable Places and Towns of this Province (according to M. La Robbe) are Port de Quavier; Port S. Nicholas; and Chichebedec; all situated on St. Lawrence's Gulph: Port Neuf, on the Mouth of the River Canada: Taloussac, higher on that of the Saguenay: And Quebec, the Metropolis of New France, divided into the upper and lower Towns, the former being built on an Hill, with a well fortify'd Castle, of a square Figure; and the other, on the foot of the Hill, with a little Harbour: It was erected into an Episcopal See by Pope Clement X. Octob. 1. 1674; and is the Seat of the chief Governour of New France,

III.

IV.

France, as also of the highest Court of Judicature. This Town is distant 300 Miles Westward from the Coast of the North Sea, and 60 Leagues Eastward from the Island of Mont Real. The other Places of Note, are Sillery, a Fort about a League higher: Les trois Rivieres, a little Town at the Mouth of the three Rivers: And Fort Frontenac, with a large Harbour, built A. D. 1673, on the Eastern side of the Lake of the same Name, otherwise termed Ontario. The Place was formerly call'd Katarakoui, and derives its modern Denomination from Count Frontenac, Governour of the whole Country, who caus'd it to be well fortify'd, to keep the Iroquois in Subjection. Monsieur de la Salle the late Governour added much to its Beauty and Strength, having enlarg'd it to the Extent of 360 Fathoms, and surrounded it with Battions and Out-works of Freestone.

V. Besides the Province of Saguenay, and the above-specified Colonies, we may take notice of the Territory of the Algonquins, and that of the Hurons, which the Iroquois have almost entirely laid waste, situated on the Fresh-water Sea of the Hurons, hereafter describ'd. It is needless to make any mention of several other sorts of People, who are very numerous, and live on the hither side of the Canada, in regard that they are of less Note, and their Names are scarce known.

VI. Farther, on the West and South, appears a large Country, lately discover'd by M. de la Salle Governour of Fort Frontenac, Father Lewes Hennepin, and others, by the Order of the present French King, and nam'd Louisiana, or Louisiane, in his Honour. They found therein most spacious Meadows; a great number of Lakes and navigable Rivers, very full of Fish, notable Mountains, Forests, Woods, Trees of a vast thickness and height, more especially Oaks, wild Vines, and several other sorts of Fruit-trees, excellent Hemp, and a Soil fit to bring forth all things that are produc'd in the most fruitful Countries of Europe. There was also abundance of Buffles, Stags, Hedgehogs, Beavers, Otters, wild Cats, Parrets, Swans, Patridges, Tortoises, &c. Besides Bears of a prodigious size, Wolves, Vipers, Physical Herbs, Iron and Bras. The Air is temperate and healthy, and the Natives are of a very robust and strong Constitution; the Men exercise themselves in hunting Wild-Bulls, whereof vast Herds are found here; and the Women perform all the laborious Works at home, carry vast Burthens, Till the Ground, &c. Their common Food is the Flesh of Wild-Bulls, and their Skins afford them Cloathing. They are of an affable Disposition, lively and active, excellent Marksmen, indefatigable Huntsmen, and very swift of Foot: They have no Fire Arms, or even Weapons of Iron and Steel, but make their Knives and Axes of Flints or other Stones. There are several Nations whose Languages are perfectly different, and are each under the Government of certain Chiefs or Kings, who are honour'd and obey'd by the Subjects. They seem to have but little Sense of Religion, the chief Marks of Devotion appear in the Reverence they pay to the Sun, to whom they offer the best Parts of the Beasts they kill.

The French have built two Forts in Louisiana, viz. One on the South Coast of the Lake of the Illinois, where the River Mississipi empties itself into that Lake; that River hath its Name from the neighbouring People, and the Castle is donominated from the River, being call'd Fort de Mississipi. The other is nam'd Fort Crevecoeur, and stands about 100 Leagues more to the West, upon the River Illinois, or as the French call it Saguenay.

The River Meschassipi, that hath been so much talk'd of since Father Hennepin publish'd his Memoirs of these Parts, is a very large and deep Stream, issuing from divers Lakes in about the 55th. Degr. of North Latitude; from whence running Southward with many windings and turnings, falls at last into the Gulph of Mexico, in the 27th. Degree of Latitude, having perform'd a Course of above 800 Leagues. The River is deep enough to afford Passage to the biggest Ships, but the Navigation is interrupted by some Cataracts or great falls, whereof that nam'd by Hennepin St. Anthony, he tells us, is 50 or 60 Foot deep. Several considerable Rivers fall into the Meschassipi, and the Country on its Banks is good Soil, and capable of much Improvement.

And now having survey'd the Countries of Canada beyond the River, we shall return and take a View of those lying on this side of it; whereof the English Plantations take up much the greatest Part, and therefore deserve our first Notice; but because we are now upon the French Territories, we will pass through Iroquois, the Etechemis's Country, to their Provinces of Acadia and Proper Canada; and also give an Account of the Lakes and Rivers of Canada, before we enter our English Empire in America.

VII. Irocoisia, or Iroquois, a Country, whose Situation is differently express'd in several Maps: For Vischer places it between New England, on the East, and New Netherland, or New York, on the West, from which it is separated by a mountainous Tract: He also delineates the vast Lake of the Iroquois, which contains several Islands, and receives the great River of the Iroquois, with that of Canada, or St. Laurence: But the Author of the Description of Louisiana, sets out the Bounds of the Iroquois, or People of Irocoisia, on the West of New York, and for the most part, on the Southern and Eastern Coasts of the Lake Frontenac, or Ontario, on the North of which, some are likewise settled: The French have built Fort-Courcy, on the Southern Coast of the same Lake. The Iroquois are divided into five distinct Nations, and are generally of a tall Stature: They cloath themselves with the Skins of Beavers, Wolves, and other Animals, and are of a savage and cruel Disposition; but they are said to have been much civiliz'd of late Years, since their Conversation with the French.

VIII. The Country of the Etechemis, a particular People, borders on the North, upon Proper Canada; on the East, upon Acadia; on the South, upon New England; and on the West, upon the River Canada: It is water'd by several Rivers, and among the rest, one of the same Name, but it does not contain any remarkable Places.

IX. There only remain two Provinces of that Part of Canada, which lyes beyond the River Canada, or St. Laurence, viz. Acadia and Proper Canada, both annexed to the Crown of France. The former is bounded on all sides, by the Sea, except its Western, which borders upon the Territories of of the Etechemins. This Country was sometime a Part of the English Plantations, and call'd New Scotland; but being made over to the French, by the Treaty at Breda, it obtain'd the Name of Acadia. It is very full of Harbours, and its chief Towns are built on the Sea-coasts, particularly Port-Royal the Capital, with a very capacious Harbour, in the innermost Part of the Western Bay; and Tauchequet, farther on the South: The following Towns appear farther on the Eastern and Northern Quarters, viz. Port Rossignol, La Heve; Paspay; Macomode: and Mariengo. The People nam'd Souricois inhabit the inland Country.

X. In passing on the North of Acadia, beyond the Bay Des Chaleurs, we come to the Province of Canada, otherwise for Distinction sake termed Proper Canada, which the spacious Gulph of St. Lawrence bounds, on the East, the Estuary of the River Canada, on the North and West; and the Country of the Etechemins, with the Bay Des Chaleurs, on the South. Its Towns are not very considerable, but M. Sanson and La Robbe, among others, make mention of Richelieu, or Sawrel, seated on the Eastern side of the River Canada; and Mont-Real, in an Island of the same Name; a neat Town, which has been well inhabited within these few Years.

XI. The Lakes of Canada, are very numerous, and the most spacious are those that lye in the Western Part, and on the Frontiers of Louisiana, being five in number: They contain fresh Water, are full of Fish and navigable; so that Ships of a large size may sail in them, but not without great Difficulty in the Winter, by reason of most boisterous Winds which blow during that Season. The most Northern of these is the Upper Lake, otherwise nam'd the Lake of Tracy and Condé, scarce distant twelve days Journey Southward from Hudson's Bay. Its Extent (as they say) from West to East, takes up 150 Miles, 40 from North to South, and 500 in Compass: Besides several Islands, it receives ten navigable Rivers, and discharges itself into the Lake of the Hurons, through the Straight, or Cataract of Maria, the Course of which is rapid, and obstructed by a great number of Rocks. The great Lake, or The Fresh-water Sea of the Hurons, is so call'd from the Hurons, certain People who have settled themselves in the adjacent Parts, and otherwise The Lake of Orleans: Some take it for the greatest Lake of the whole Continent of Northern America, and it is suppos'd to reach in Compass, for the space of above 700 Leagues, as also 200 in Length from North to South; but its Breadth is of a different Extent, and largest in the middle. Many Islands are contain'd in this Lake, which by means of the Straight of Misslimakinack, has a Communication with that of the Illinois, i. e. The Lake of Illinois Men. The latter is so term'd from the People, who inhabit its Western and Southern Coasts, as also the Dauphin's-Lake, by modern Writers, and takes up 400 Leagues in Compass: It is distant about 15 Leagues Southward from the Upper Lake, and its Northern Part lying next to that of the Hurons, is known by the Name of Stink-Bay. The Lake of Erie, or Comy, being more Southern than Erie L. the former, and nearest to Northern Florida, is said to extend itself from West to East, for the space of 140 Leagues: It receives four Rivers into its Channel, besides the Lake of the Hurons, on the North, through a most eminent Straight: and at last runs into Frontenac-Lake likewise on the Northern Quarter. The last of these Lakes which owes its Name to Count Frontenac Governour of New France, was formerly call'd Ontario, i. e. The Fair by the Iroquois, who inhabit the adjacent Territories. It is almost of an Oval Figure, and lyes out from West to East, for the space of 80 Leagues; abounding with Islands. In the Description of these Lakes, we have not follow'd the common Maps, which are very faulty, but that which M. Hennipin has annex'd to his Relation of Louisiana.

The River Canada is the largest of all those of this Part, and even of the whole Continent of Northern America, and is so call'd from the Country it waters; although others will have the Country rather to derive its Name from the River, which is also termed St. Lawrence's River. Several modern Authors are of Opinion, that it takes its Rise in the Lake of the Hurons, and on the Confines of Florida; from whence it runs into the Lake Erie, and afterwards passes through that of Frontenac: But Father Hennipin in his History of Louisiana, affirms, That the River of St. Lawrence springs out of divers Lakes, the largest of which are the five but now specify'd, and that as soon as it has issu'd forth from that of Frontenac, it directs its Course towards the North-East: Afterwards having receiv'd on the left side, the Rivers Des Prairies, i. e. The Meadow-River, De Mons, and Les trois Rivieres; or the Triple River, its waters Quebec, and Tadoussac lower; where it is augmented, on the same side, by the Saguenay: At last, having divided Canada in two Parts, and made many Islands; it rolls with a wide Mouth by the Island Anticosti, into St. Lawrence's Gulph, after a Course of 800 Leagues. Men of War may conveniently sail up this River, to the Town of Tadoussac, and Merchant-Ships of a considerable Burthen, as far as Quebec, but above Mont-Real it does not admit of Boats by reason of the Cataracts.

CHAP. IV.

The English Plantations on the Continent of Canada, viz. NEW-ENGLAND, NEW-JERSEY, NEW-YORK, PEN-SYLVANIA, MARY-LAND, and VIRGINIA. Together with the Islands of Newfound-Land, the other Islands on the Coasts, and Bermudas.

NEW ENGLAND, the most Northern of all the English Colonies in America, was first discover'd by Sebastian Cabot, a Portuguese, A. D. 1497; but was not inhabited by any Christians, till Sir Philip Amadas, and Captain Arthur Barlow having taken Possession of it for Queen Elizabeth, in 1584, a Colony was establish'd there next Year, under the Government of Mr. Ralph Lane: And although K. James I. 1606, gave all Encouragement to another Colony sent thither, to plant and improve it for the Benefit of the Crown; nevertheless so many Obstructions and Accidents befell the Adventurers, that it turn'd to no Account, till about the Year 1620, when New-Plimouth being built, it became a Place of good Trade, and one of the most flourishing Plantations of the English, as it continues at this day.

The whole Country is situated between the 41 and 45 Deg. of Northern Latitude, under the Temperate Zone, at an equal distance from the Arctic Circle and the Tropick of Cancer. It is bounded on the East, by the Atlantick, or Great Western Ocean; on the North and West, by Canada, or New France, particularly the Country of the Etchemins; and on the South by New York.

The Air is very wholesome, and agreeable to the temper of the English, and the Soil is not only fruitful of such things as are the peculiar Productions of the Country, but also of all sorts of Grain convey'd thither from England; which it as kindly cherishes, as if it were the natural Mother. The Woods afford Oak, Elm, Firr, Alder, Ash, Asp, Pine, Birch, Maple, Walnut, Chestnut, Cedar, Cypress, Sassafras, Sumoch, &c. The Fields and Orchards yield abundance of Fruit, as Apples, Pears, and Plums, with several other kinds that are common to this Province, with Maryland and Virginia. The Forests and Swamps are full of Bears, Lions, Foxes, Deer, Hares, Rabbits, Moose, Musquashes, Raccoons, Otters, Beavers, &c. The Plains and Meadows have Pasture for numerous Herds of tame Cattell; as Horses, Cows, Sheep, Goats and Swine. The Rivers and adjacent Sea abound with excellent Fish, viz. Ale-wives, Basses, Clams, Cod, Cockles, Crab-fish, Eels, Grampuses, Haddock, Herrings, Hollibuts, Lamprons, Lobsters, Mackarel, Mufcles, Oysters, Porpoises, Salmon, Sturgeon, Seals, Sharks, Smelts, Thornback, Tortoises, Whales, &c. Moreover, there is great variety of wild and tame Fowl; as Partridges, Pheasants, Heath-cocks, Cranes, Cormorants, Snipes, Hérons, Black-birds, Humming-birds, Widgeons, Didappers, Loons, Turkeys, Swans, Geese, Ducks, Sheldrakes, &c. Among the noxious Animals, the Rattle-Snake is most formidable, and different sorts of stinging Flies, that are very troublesome. The staple Commodities of these Parts, are rich Furs, Tobacco, Flax, Linnen, Cotton, Amber, Iron, Pitch, Tar, Cables, Masts, Timber for the building of Ships, divers sorts of Grain, &c. The Inhabitants usually supply Barbadoes and other English Plantations, with Flower, Bisket, Flesh, Fish, Salt, &c. receiving in exchange Sugar and other Merchandizes, both for their own use, and to sell again: They also maintain a great Traffick with England, for Wearing-apparel, Cloth, Silks, Stuffs, Iron, Bras, Household furniture, and other necessary Provisions.

The Natives are generally Cannibals, or Man-eaters, and are often at variance one with another: They are very inconstant, timorous, subtil, soon angry, and so malicious, that they seldom forget an Injury; nevertheless, they are Ingenious, of a quick Apprehension, and of a tractable Temper: They cloath themselves with loose Mantles of Deer-skin, and Aprons of the same; and paint their Bodies, thinking those most gallant that are most deformed: They have several Towns and Settlements, and their Riches consist chiefly in Furs and Skins, which they sell to the English; with whom for the most part, they have kept a fair Correspondence; making Leagues, and carrying on a Trade with them: But this Complacency seems to proceed rather from Fear than Love; as it evidently appears from the frequent Breaches and Violations of their Contracts made at several times. As for their Religion, they are meer Idolaters, and worship the Devil; under the Name of Okee, having Conference with him, and fashioning themselves according to his Shape: Besides him, whom they make their chief God, they are also us'd to adore every thing they fear will hurt them; as Thunder, Lightning; Fire, &c.

These Savages are distinguish'd into several Tribes, observing different Customs, and Manners, as those Indians that inhabit Maryland and Virginia with the other Parts of America; and are subject to their particular Kings, Sachams and Sagamores, who command them with sovereign and absolute Authority: Neither have they any Laws, but what they receive from the Mouths of their Governours.

The English, who are very numerous and potent, demean themselves conformably to the Manners of their Ancestors in Old England, and are govern'd by Constitutions of their own making: They have several Courts of Judicature, and other publick Places, where they assemble once a Month, to enact or repeal Laws; to determine Causes, and to chuse a Governour, Deputy-Governour, Assistants, Burgeses, and other inferior Magistrates; each County electing such Officers every Year, for the management of State-Affairs. But it is observable, That the Government both Ecclesiastical and Civil, is in the Hands of Presbyterians and Independents.

The three principal Colonies of New England, are those of Plimouth, Connecticut and Massachusetts; which contain five Counties, viz. Pecquid, Naraganset, Pocasset, Mobeggans, and Nipnak, with a great number of fine Towns advantageously situated for Traffick, either upon the Sea-coasts, or on navigable Rivers, and well inhabited: Among others, the following are chiefly remarkable, viz. BOSTON, the Metropolis, commodiously seated on the Sea-shore, to the West of Cape Ann, where the Governour usually keeps his Residence: A large City, very populous; having uniform Streets, and fair Houses, inhabited by Merchants and Trademen; who maintain a great Commerce to Barbadoes, and the other Plantations in America; as also to England and Ireland: It is a Place of considerable Strength, surrounded with two or three Hills, on which several Fortifications and Batteries are rais'd; and its Harbour is very capacious. Charles-Town, remarkable for its Situation between the Rivers Charles and Misick, and beautify'd with a spacious and well-built Church: The Market-place is near the River-side, and and two Streets take their Rise from thence, containing several good Houses. Dorchester, a considerable Town, built near the Sea, and water'd by two Rivulets. Cambridge, on the River Quinebeckin, formerly call'd New Town, the Seat of an University, adorn'd with two Colleges and divers elegant Structures; besides a Printing-House, where the Holy Bible was printed a few Years ago, in the Indian Language, and publish'd for the benefit of the Savage Natives: St. George's Fort, on the Mouth of the River Sagadahock. New Plymouth, on the spacious Bay of Powuxed. Reading, a well-inhabited Town, conveniently seated about a great Pond; where there are two Mills, one for Corn and the other for Timber: And Salem, pleasantly situated between two Rivers.

The other noted Towns on or near the Sea-shore, are, Westchester; Merrenack; Greenwich; Stanford; Chichester; Fairfield; Shauford; Milford; New-haven; Brenford; Guilford; Seybrook; Loose; Seaton; Ninicroft; Wickford; East-ham; Warwick, on the River Pawuxet; Providence, on a River of the same Name; Seaconck; Swansey; Tamson; Sandwich; Barnstable; Tarmouth; Escham; Marshfield; Bridgewater; Duxbury; Hugobam; Hull; Weymouth; Brainree; Milton; Roxbury; Medfield; Dedham; Newton; Water-Town; Woburne; Malden; Lyons; Shobean; Beaverley; Manchester; Gipester; Wenham; Aplinch; Roxley; Newbury; Salisbury; Hampton; Portsmouth; Exeter; Dover; Kerry; York; Hedek; Wells; Scarborough; Falmouth; and Shippuz, on a River that bears the same Denomination: On or near the sides of Connecticut River, are Adeldecorn; Websterfield; Hartford; Windsor; Westfield; Springfield; Northampton; Hartley; Hartfield; Diersfield; Swanfield; Sydsbee; &c. On the River Thames, are London; Norwich and Ungas-Mendon, near Providence River. Farther in the inland Country, appear Worcester; Maryborough; Lancaster; Craton; Sudbury; Concord; Billerica; Chelmsford, &c. Lastly, on or near the River Marimack, are Bradford; Amherst; Andover; Haveril; and Pensacook. Kennebeck, on a River of the same Name, &c. The greatest part of these Towns derive their Names from those in Old-England, and are also known to the Indians, by other Terms.

The Sea-coasts of this Country, are fence'd especially on the South, by the great Sand-beach of Malabar; and the inland Parts are water'd by many Rivers, the chief of which, are the Connecticut, Navigable above 50 Miles; Thames, which receives the Glaas-River; Pawuxet; Ware, that falls into the Providence; Quinebeckin; Martimake; Saco; Casco; Sagadahock; Kennebeck; and Rensselaer.

The Province, or Colony of NEW JERSEY, lies between the 39 and 41 Degr. of Northern Latitude, having for its Bounds on the South and East, the Western Ocean; on the North-East, Hudson's River, which parts it from New York; and on the West, the River Delaware, by which it is separated from Pensylvania, extending itself in length, on the Sea-coast, and along Hudson's River, above an hundred English Miles. It is divided into two Parts, viz. East-Jersey and West-Jersey, by reason of the different Proprietors; for the greatest Part of the former belongs to Mr. William Pen, Mr. Robert West, &c. and the latter to the Possession of Mr. Edward Billing, or his Assigns.

The Temperature of the Air is healthful, and the nature of the Soil, with respect to its Richness, different in several Places, but it is generally fertile; bringing forth plentiful Crops of all sorts of English Corn, besides Indian Wheat, which increases here prodigiously, and is found very wholesome: It also produces good Flax and Hemp, proper for Linnen-Manufactures, with abundance of Oak Timber fit for Shipping, Cedar, Ash, Firr, &c. and variety of delicious Fruits, as Apples, Quinces, Pears, Peaches, Plums, Grapes, Mulberries, &c. The Tobacco planted by the River Delaware, is more especially remarkable for its Excellency. In the Woods are bred Deer, Conies and Wild-Fowl of several sorts, as Turkeys, Partridges, Swans, Geese, Ducks, &c. and the Pastures feed numerous Herds of Horses, Cows, Hogs, and some Sheep. Lastly, Some Mines and Minerals have been already discover'd, and many more might probably be found out, if the Inhabitants apply'd themselves to the search of them: However, a Smelting-Furnace and Forge are already set up, for the making of good Iron, which proves very advantageous to the Country: As for the Commodities of these Parts, Whale-Oil and Whale-Fins, with Bever, Monkey, Raccoon and Martin-Skins, are often transported thence for England. In like manner, great store of Horses, Beef, Pork, Pipe-staves, Boards, Wheat, Barley, Rye, Indian Corn, Bread, Flower, Butter and Cheese, is convey'd to Barbado's, Jamaica, Mevis, and the other adjacent Islands; as also to Portugal, Spain, the Canaries, &c.

The Indian Natives are but few in number, if compar'd with those of the neighbouring Colonies; but they are very serviceable to the English, not only in Hunting, and taking Deer, and other Wild Beasts, and catching Fish and Fowl for them, but also in killing and destroying Bears, Wolves, &c. whose Skins they bring, and sell for small Matters. The Political Constitutions of the Country, were establish'd A. D. 1666, by John Lord Berkley, and Sir George Carteret, the first Proprietors, in which such Provision was made for Liberty in Matters of Religion, and Property in Estates, that all Persons may live happy under the Government, and by that means this Colony has been actually much encreas'd; a great number of Inhabitants continually resorting thither from the adjoining Plantations: The present Proprietors have likewise confirm'd and enlarg'd the same Constitutions; for the benefit of Planters and Adventurers, and for the complete Settlement of this advantageous Colony; which is divided into Six Counties, viz. Bergen, Essex, Middlesex, Jersey properly so call'd, Adamowick, and Cape-May.

The principal Towns and Places of New Jersey, are Bergen; Newark; New-Barbado's; Proprietors-Farm; Elizabeth-Town; Woodbridge; Pasquaway; PERTH, or Amboy-Perth the chief City, near which within Sandy-Point, lies a noted Bay, well known not to be inferior to any of the American Ports, and where Ships of 400 Tunnage sail with all Winds, and arrive before the Houses of the Town, within a Plank's length of the Shore. Middleton; Shrewsbury; York; Malanapan; Cape-May Town; Doncaster; Bridlington; or Burlington, &c. The Country is every where plentifully supply'd with lovely Springs, Inland-Rivers, Brooks and Creeks, which not only afford many convenient Harbours for Shipping, but also great store of excellent Fish, both for Merchandize and Food, as Whales, Cod-Fish, Cole, Hake-Fish, Sturgeon, Basses, Eels, Oysters, &c. with many other Kinds of flat and small Fish. The most remarkable of these Rivers and Creeks are, Part of Hudson's River, where is plenty of fresh Fish and Water-Fowl; the Pisack; Hacking-sack; Raritan; South-River; Millstone-River; Never-sink; Manasqua; Prince Maurice's River; and Delaware River: With Fishing-Creek, Slip-bin's Creek, Agreement Creek, Coban's Creek, Halfway Creek, Ceden Creek, Crabwick Creek and Lawrence Creek, besides a great number of Inlets, Bays, Rivulets, &c.

III.
New York.

The next English Colony is NEW-YORK, which took its Name from the late King James the Second, when Duke of York, to whom it was granted by King Charles the Second, A. D. 1664, who the same Year, convey'd all that Part of it which lyes between Hudson's River and Delaware River, to John Lord Berkley and Sir George Carteret, jointly, by the Name of Nova Casarea, or New Jersey: So that New York now only contains that Part of New England which the Dutch formerly seiz'd, being situated between Hudson's and Connecticut Rivers, with the Isles of Manahattens and Long-Island, over against the Continent; that is to say, between the 41 Degr. 30 Min. and the 43 Degr. 15 Min. of Northern Latitude. It is bounded on the North-East by New England; on the South-West, by New Jersey and Maryland; on the East, by the Western Ocean; and on the West, by Part of New Jersey and Pennsylvania. This Country was sold A. D. 1608, by Mr. Hudson, its first Discoverer (but without Authority from his Sovereign King Charles I.) to the Hollanders, who impos'd on it the Names of Nova Belgia and New Netherland, and continu'd in the possession of it till 1664, when they were expell'd by the Forces which King Charles II. sent to subdue it, under the Command of Sir Robert Carr. The Colony of New York likewise comprehended New Sweden, which was at first possess'd by the Swedes, and afterwards by the Hollanders. That Tract extended itself along the lower Course of Delaware River, but its Name is now almost grown out of use; neither is it any longer express'd in the Maps. Thus the English having settled themselves there, improv'd their Plantations from time to time, with good Success, and had Col. Nichols for their first Governour, who reduc'd several Parts under his Majesty's Obedience, and made so firm a League of Peace and Amity with the Indians, that no particular Person has been since disturb'd in the peaceable Enjoyment of his Lands or Possessions. Towards the Spring-head of Hudson's River, New Albany is situated, a Place of great Trade with the Indians; between which and New York, for the space of above 100 Miles, lyes as good Arable Land, as can be found in any other Part of the habitable World: But it could not be brought to perfection during the Dutch Government; in regard that the Savages then possess'd all, except one Garrison, call'd The Sopers.

The Air is of a very good Temperature; the Country every where extremely pleasant; and the Soil so rich and fertile, that it is reported, to have produc'd 100 Bushels of Wheat out of one Bushel brought from Europe, and sown there. Besides the Fruits, which this Province naturally yields, as Wild Grapes and Nuts, with plenty of Herbage and Plants; it also abounds with variety of Grain and the best sorts of European Fruits, viz. Apricocks, Peaches, Grapes, Chestnuts, Olives, &c. Moreover, it affords as good Tobacco as any that is usually made in Maryland, or the other English Plantations, with Hemp, Flax, Hops, Rape-seed, Madder, Wood, Oil, Beef, Pork, Peas, Farris, Elk-Skins, &c. Lastly, The Woods are well stock'd with Deer, and other Kinds of Wild Beasts and Fowl, and the Pastures have Fodder for numerous Herds of tame Cattel.

The Old Inhabitants are several sorts of Indians, not much different from those of Virginia; swarthy, and black-hair'd, but well-proportion'd, robust, of quick apprehension, and very tractable. They live chiefly upon Hunting, Fowling and Fishing, and are very dexterous at their Bows and Arrows; their Wives being generally employ'd in planting their Corn, and tilling the Ground. Their cloathing is a Mantle of Broad-cloth, about half a Yard of which is put between their Leggs, and fasten'd at two Corners to their Girdle before and behind; their Food is Venison, Fowl, Fish, Turtles, Raccoons, Pole-cats, &c. and their Money is Periwinkle-Shells strung like Beads. They live in movable Tents, generally set up where their Corn grows, and are much addicted to Sports and Pastimes, which consist chiefly in Dancing, Foot-Ball and Cards, at which they'l play away all they have, except a Flap to cover their Nakedness. They love strong Drink, but will not drink at all, unless they have a quantity sufficient to be drunk with, and therefore never carouze in greater Companies, than they have Liquor enough to intoxicate their Brain: In their Drinking-bouts, they drink all alike, and pour the share of those that are first fuddled, down their Throats; often murdering one another in these Debauches: They marry many Wives, but turn them away upon the least Dislike, and the Women are forc'd to take care of the Children. The Virgins are permitted to lye with any Man for Money, and the same Liberty is allow'd to Wives, if they can get their Husbands leave. However, these People are extremely good-natur'd, and freely impart to their Friends what they can spare, or what they take in Hunting. They are also very serviceable and courteous to the English, and have never given them any Disquiet since their first Arrival; nevertheless, they cannot endure them to be present at their Religious Solemnities, because say they, their God will not come till their Departure. And indeed, they are said to worship the Devil with Magical Rites and Ceremonies, who often visits them in the Shape of a Man, Beast or Fowl, and is commonly call'd by the Name of Moneito: Their Priests are so many Conjurors, who cause him to appear by their Pawawing, or strange Incantations. They usually ally bury their Dead sitting upon a Seat, and furnish'd with a Gun, Money and Goods, to serve for their use in the other World. To conclude, They frequently make War one against another, and seldom give quarter to any but Women and Children, whom they preserve for the recruiting of their Strength.

The Indian Natives are subject to a King, or Sachem, who in all Affairs of State, takes the Advice of a Council; but passes the definitive Sentence himself, which the People generally accept with great Shouting and Applause. They rarely inflict Capital Punishment upon Malefactors, but for Incest, or Murder: So that when any are found guilty of those Crimes, they do not confine them, (for they have no Prisons,) but the King and his Guards pursue them, and shoot them to Death. The English are govern'd by a Deputy, appointed and sent over by the King of Great Britain.

The most remarkable Places and Towns of this Colony, are Orange-Fort, now nam'd Albany, or New Albany, seated on the West-side of Hudson's River; The Fort of Good Hope, on the Western Bank of the Fresh-water River; Arasapha, that has the advantage of a strong Castle; and NEW-YORK, formerly call'd New-Amsterdam, the Capital Town of the whole Country, and the Seat of the Governour; conveniently situated for Trade, Security and Pleasure, on the Southern Part of the little Island of Manahattens, which lies at a small distance from the Continent, at the Mouth of Hudson's River: It is wall'd and fence'd by the strong Fort of St. James, and contains 500 Houses, built for the most part, of Dutch Brick and Stone, and cover'd with red and black Tiles; so that the Land being high, it affords a very pleasant Prospect to Spectators afar off. This Town is govern'd by a Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriffs and Justices of the Peace, and chiefly inhabited by the English and Hollanders, who drive a considerable Trade among the Indians, for the Skins of Bears, Deer, Elks, &c. as also for those of Beavers, Otters and Raccoons, with other Kinds of Furr. They likewise buy Fish in the Summer, with Venison and Fowl in the Winter, of the Natives at an easie rate, and receive continual Supplies of all sorts of necessary Provisions from the neighbouring Territories and Colonies.

The Province of New York is water'd by several Rivers; among which, the most remarkable are Hudson's River, about two Leagues broad, and very commodious for Shipping; and the Raritan.

IV. The Country of PENNSYLVANIA, derives its Name from the Proprietor of that Tract of Land, William Penn, to whom King Charles II. in consideration of his Father's and his own Sufferings for their Loyalty, gave it by Patent, March 4. 1680. It is bounded on the North, by Canada; on the East, by Delaware River and Bay; on the South, by Maryland; and on the West, by New France.

The Air is wholsom and clear, and will refine, as the Woods are more clear'd: The Sky is also very serene, as in the Southern Parts of France, and seldom over-cast with Clouds. The Soil is different, containing divers sorts of Mould, as Sand yellow and black, Gravel loomy and dusty, and and in some places a fast fat Earth, especially by the inland Rivulets: There is also great store of a black hazel Mould, upon a stony Bottom; and the Back-lands are much richer than those that lye on Navigable Rivers. The Woods afford great plenty of Trees, viz. Ash, Beach, Cedar, Chestnut, Cypress, Gumwood, Hickery, Oak of several Kinds, as Red, Whitand Black, Poplar, Sassafrax, Swamp, Black Walnut, Wild Myrtle, &c. They are also adorn'd with great variety of fragrant Flowers, and divers Kinds of Plants, some of which are Medicinal, and of singular Efficacy in the curing of Burns, Cuts, Swellings, &c. The Country likewise naturally brings forth good store of delicious Fruit, as Chestnuts, Walnuts, Plums, Strawberries, Cranberries, Hurtleberries, and several sorts of Grapes, little inferior to Frontinack's and Muscadel's. Its artificial Products, are, Wheat, Rye, Barley, Oats, Beans, Peas, Squashes, Water-Melons, Musk-Melons, Pumpkins, &c. with all manner of Plants, Herbs and Roots, that usually grow in our Gardens in England. Moreover, this Province is well stock'd with wild and tame Beasts both for Food and Profit, as Bears, Elks, Deer, Horses of considerable value, Neat Cattel, Sheep, Beavers, Raccoons, Rabbets, Squirrels, &c. Neither is there any want of Fowl, as Turkeys of 40 or 50 Pound weight, Pheasants, Partridges, Pigeons and Heath-birds.

The Natives, like those of the other Parts of Northern America, are of a tawny and swarthy Complexion; yet not naturally, but by anointing their Skin on purpose. Their Houses are made of Poles, cover'd with the Bark of Trees and Mats, and their Diet is Mayz, or Indian Wheat, dress'd after divers manners: They eat twice a day, and sit on the Ground at Meals; taking great delight in strong Liquors, especially Rum, and drinking of it till they fall asleep. In Sickness they are very impatient for Cure, and will part with any thing upon that account. Their Language is lofty and very significative: they treat Strangers with extraordinary Civility, but look for Respect themselves, and think nothing too good for their Friends. They bring up their Children to Fishing, till Fifteen years old, and send them a Hunting in the Woods: So that when by their Skill in Archery, they can make a good Return of Skins, they Marry, which is usually about Eighteen years old for the Man, and Fourteen for the Woman. These Indians believe a God, and the Immortality of the Soul; admiring, There is a great King that made them, who dwells in a glorious Country Southwards, and that the Souls of the Vertuous shall be convey'd thither, where they shall enjoy everlasting Bliss. Their Worship of the Deity, is made up of Sacrifices and Cantico's: The former consist in the first Fruits of their Hunting, which they burn with a great deal of Ceremony: Their Cantico's are perform'd, by toning a mournful Ditty over their Sacrifices, with Dances, Songs and Shouts. They bury their Dead, both Men and Women, in their Apparel, and their Kindred throw in some pretious Things into their Graves, as a token of their Love: They Mourn by blacking their Faces, and preserve the Graves, which are heaps of Earth neatly made, by plucking off the Grass that grows on them.

These Savage People are govern'd by Kings, or Socenia's, who attain to that Dignity by Succession; but always by the Mothers sides, yet no Woman is suffer'd to aspire to the Royal Authority. The King's Council consists of Two hundred of the oldest and wisest Men of his Tribe, and no Affairs of moment are transacted without their Advice. These Princes are powerful, and very exact in the Administration of Justice, but their Mulct's are generally Pecuniary, even for Murder itself; in which case, they pay twice as much for a Woman as a Man, and the Reason alledg'd by them, is, because they breed Children. The English that inhabit Pennsylvania, are for the most part, advantageously settled upon the Upper Rivers, which are pleasant, and generally bounded by fruitful Territories: They are of different Persuasions, but generally Quakers, who went over with their Governour William Penn. As for their Government, it is conformable as near as conveniently may be, to the Grant express'd in the Patent; in general, aiming at Duty to the King, Preservation of Right to all, the suppression of Vice and Immorality, and the encouragement of Virtue and Arts: To that purpose, Courts of Judicature are establish'd in every County, which are six in number, viz. Philadelphia, Buckingham, Chester, Newcastle, Kent and Sussex.

The Capital Towns of this Colony, is Philadelphia, seated on a Neck of Land between the Rivers Delaware and Skunkill, both Navigable, with convenient Harbours for Ships: It is well built, populous and large, and furnish'd with all useful Trades. About two Miles from hence, are several Springs of Mineral Waters, which are of the same Efficacy with those of Barnet and North-hall in England. The other Places of Note; are Newcastle, Chichester, Chester, &c.

Lastly, Pennsylvania has the advantage of many considerable Rivers and Creeks; the chief of which are, the Sasquehahanough, or Sasquabana, a great River, which runs up Northward to the Simcius, above 200 Miles, with several Rivers and Branches on both sides, on the East and West; being full of Falls, and Islands till about 10 or 12 Miles above the Indian Fort that bears the same Name: From whence it flows clear, yet is not Navigable downwards, but with great danger, with Canoes steer'd by Indian Pilots. The Delaware, a fine River, which is common to this Province and New Jersey, and ends in a commodious Bay of the same Denomination. And the Skunkill, which affords a Passage to Boats 100 Miles above its Falls, and after having water'd Philadelphia, rolls into the Sasquehahanough. The lesser Rivers and Creeks, yet convenient for Sloops and Ketches, and other Vessels of considerable Burthen, are Christian Creek, Brandy-wine River, Filpot Creek, Chichester Creek, Chester Creek, Prest Creek, Gun Creek, Derby Creek, Wall Creek, Hollander Creek, Francford Creek, Dublin Creek, Potquesin Creek, and Neshamun River, that all empty themselves into the Delaware. Moreover; it is observable, That these Rivers and Brooks which are so numerous, have for the most part gravelly and stony Bottoms; and consequently their Waters are very MARYLAND, has for its Bounds on the North, Pennsylvania, New England and New York; on the East, the Atlantick Ocean Delaware Bay, and Part of New Jersey; on the South, Virginia, from which it is separated by the River Patomack; and on the West, a Meridian Line drawn from the first Spring-head of the Patomack; which is continu'd Southward to the farther Bank of the same River, following the Western and Southern Course of it, to a certain Place call'd Conequak, near its Mouth; and from thence to the Promontory, or Cape of Land nam'd Watkins-Point, which lyes in 37 Degr. 50 Min. of Northern Latitude.

This Country was formerly reckon'd as a Part of Virginia, till the Year 1631, when King Charles I. erected it into a distinct Province, and granted the Propriety of it to the Right Honourable Sir George Calvert, Lord Baltimore. At the signing of the Bill, his Majesty nam'd it Maryland, in honour of Henrietta Maria, his Queen Consort; but his Lordship dying before the Patent pass'd the Great Seal of England, the said King made a new Grant of the Country to his Son Cecil Calvert Lord Baltimore, which bears Date June 23, 1632. By this Patent, his Lordship and his Heirs were created the true and absolute Lords and Proprietors of the said Province, saving the Allegiance and Sovereign Dominion due to his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors: Moreover, not only the whole Continent and adjacent Islands, with all Royal Mines and Quarries, were granted to the said Lord, his Heirs and Assigns; but also all manner of Royal Prerogatives and Jurisdictions, Military and Civil, both at Sea and Land: As Power of enacting Laws Civil and Martial, conferring Honours, pardoning Offences, making War and Peace, coining Money, &c. All to be held of the Crown of England; in common Socage, yielding and paying yearly for the same to his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, two Indian Arrows at Windsor-Castle, on Easter-Tuesday; and the fifth Part of all the Gold and Silver-Oar, which should happen to be found in the said Province. Whereupon his Lordship in November 1633, sent thither his second Brother, Mr. Leonard Calvert, in Quality of his Governour, accompanied with Mr. George Calvert, his third Brother, and several other Persons of Quality, to take possession of this Province, and to settle a Plantation therein.

The Air since the felling of the Woods, is sufficiently healthful, and nor disagreeable to the Constitution of the English, who at their first Arrival, were seiz'd by a Distemper somewhat like an Ague, usually term'd Seasining; of which for some Years, many dy'd for want of good looking to, and a right Management of themselves. But since the Country has been more clear'd from Woods, and that a better Provision is made for Diet and Lodging, with the improvement of the Art of Physick, in applying proper Remedies; very few die of these Seasining, and many now are not troubled with them at all. As for the Temperature of the Air, the Heats in Summer; which are as intense here as in Spain, generally receive seasonable Allays about Noon, sometimes from gentle Breezes, and sometimes by fresh Showers. The Cold of the Winter

Winter is seldom excessive; neither do the Frosts continue long; but the Vernal and Autumnal Seasons are extremely pleasant, mild and temperate.

The Country is very fertile, plain and for the most part level; yet rising in some places with gentle Ascents, up to pleasaunt Hills of a moderate height, which set off the Beauty of the adjacent Valleys. The Trees, Fruits, Fish, Fowl, Birds, and Commodities naturally produc'd here, are much the same with those Plants of the neighbouring Colony of Virginia. There is also plenty of Indian Corn, commonly call'd Mayz, with all sorts of English Grain and Pulse, as Wheat, Rye, Barley, Oats, Peas, Beans, &c besides Garden-Herbs and Roots. Among the great variety of Birds, the Eagles, Falcons, Lanners and Sparrow-hawks, are more especially remarkable, besides a beautiful Bird with black and yellow Feathers, which is call'd the Baltimore-Bird, in regard that the Colours in the Field of his Lordship's Coat of Arms, are Ory and Sable. There are also most other kinds of wild and tame Fowl; that are commonly known in England and other Parts of Europe. Great store of Cider, Perry, and Quince-drink is made here and in Virginia, as good as in any Country whatsoever; and considerable Quantities of Furs, Hides, Beef, Pork, Bacon, Butter and Cheese have been often exported from hence; But the chief Trade of Maryland, consists in Tobacco, which being esteem'd most proper for a foreign Market is for the most part vend'd abroad, to the great advantage of the Planters, who in exchange for it and some other Merchandizes, receive all manner of necessary Provisions; inso-much that 100 Sail of Ships have of late been known to trade thither in one Year from England, and the rest of the English Plantations in America. The general way of Traffick in these Parts is by bartering or exchanging one Commodity for another; although there is a competent stock of English and other sorts of Money, besides the Coynt that is peculiar to the Lord Proprietary.

The Customs, Dispositions, and Manners of the Natives are much the same with those of Virginia, and they are likewise distinguish'd into many different Tribes, each govern'd by a particular King. The Men are robust and well proportion'd, delighting chiefly in hunting and warlike Enterprizes; The Women are employ'd not only in managing their Household-Affairs, but also in planting, manuring and improving their Land. They cut their Hair (which is long, black, and uncurled) after odd fantastick Modes, and dye it of divers Colours; anointing their Skins with Bears-grease; by which means, their Complexion becomes more tawny, and their Bodies more capable of enduring the hardshipp of Weather. They live in Huts that have but one large Room, and a Fire-place in the middle; lying round about it upon Mats, which are their own proper Manufacture. They are usually cloath'd in Winter with a shagg'd Mantle, and in Summer the greatest Bravery their Grandees pretend to, is the wearing of Wan-Pompeag and Roanack, a kind of Fish-shells, which they string like Beads and also use instead of Money. Their military Furniture consists only of a Bow and Arrows, with a Gun, a Hatchet and Canoo, or little Boat made of the Trunk of a large Tree. These Indians have many strange Rites in their Divine Worship, and maintain a plurality of Deities; but acknowledge one independent Sovereign and eternal Being, who created the inferior Gods to be subservient to him, in the Works of Creation and Providence; among whom they reckon the Sun, Moon, and Stars. They Believe that in a future State, the Soul shall be dispos'd of according to its Works done upon Earth, either to the Mansions of the Gods, there to enjoy everlasting Happiness, or to Popogasso, i. e. A Pit of unquenchable Fire. They also worship Idols, the chief of which is call'd Kinasa.

The Government of Maryland, is fram'd according to the model of that of England, and maintain'd by wholesome Laws, that tend much to the Advantage of the Inhabitants; Liberty of Conscience being allow'd to all that profess Christianity though of different Persuasions: So that none is molested for difference of Judgment, in matters of Religion, and this Liberty is establish'd there, by an Act of Assenbly, to continue for ever; by which means so many have been induc'd to settle under this Government, that the number of the English in the Year 1670, amounted to near 20000, and they all live together in the greatest Peace, Order and Concord imaginable. Upon emergent Occasions the Governour calls a General Assembly of the Estates of the Province; which is distinguish'd into an upper and lower House: In the former sits the Governour and Council, with such Lords of Manours and other Persons; as the Lord Proprietary, or his Deputy shall summon thither by Writ, from time to time; and the other House consists of Delegates chosen by Free-holders in the respective Counties: This Assembly is conven'd, prorogu'd, or dissolv'd at his Lordship's Pleasure; and whatsoever is decreed therein, with his Approbation, is of the same force there, as an Act of Parliament in England. The chief Court of Judicature is the Provincial; held every quarter of a Year, at St. Mary's City, of which in the absence of the Lord Proprietary, his Deputy, or Governour and Council are Judges. There are other inferior Courts which are kept six times of the Year in every particular County, for the Tryal of Causes, not relating to Life or Limb, nor exceeding the value of 3000 weight of Tobacco; from whence Appeals lye to the Provincial Court.

The whole Country of Maryland in the Possession of the English is divided into ten Counties, five of which are situated on the West-side of Chesapeake-Bay; viz. St. Mary's, Charles, Calvert, Ann Arundel, and Baltimore. The other five lye on the Eastern Coast, viz. those of Somerset, Dorchester, Talbot, Cecil and Kent. There are Foundations laid for Towns more or less, in all these Counties, which in a little time may come to due Perfection. In Calvert County about the River Patuxent, and the adjacent Territories, the Bounds of three Towns are set out, viz. one over against Point-Patience call'd Harrington, or Harvey-Town; Calverton, or Calvert's Town, in Battel Creek; and Herrington, upon the Cliffs. The other noted Places are Warrington, Arundelton, Darrington, Baltimore-Town, Caxilion, Newark, Somerset-Town, &c. But the Metropolis of the whole Province is St. MARYS, seated on the East-side of St. George's River;

River; which has impos'd its Name on the County, and is dignify'd with the Privilege of a City; where the Governour resides, and the Provincial Courts are kept, with the publick Offices. The Ground-plot of a Fort and Prison is lately laid upon a Tract of Land nam'd Windmill-Point, from a Windmill which formerly stood there; being a very proper Situation for the commanding of St. George's River. Besides the Governour's Mansion-house in this City, known by the Name of St. John's, the present Governour has another very fair and pleasant Houſe, built partly of Brick and partly with Timber, about eight Miles distant from St. Mary's.

The spacious Bay of Chesapeake gives entrance for Ships into this Country, and passes through the Heart of it; receiving many considerable Rivers, viz. the Patomack before-mention'd, which is the largest of all, and separates Maryland from Virginia, the Patuxent, the South-River, the Annamindell, alias Sovern, the Patapsko, the Gun-powder River, the Bull-River, and the Sesquehahanough, all on its Western side: On its East-side in like manner fall in the Wigbea, alias Pocomock, the Wighe-cocomoco, the Nanicoke, the Trelquaquin, otherwise call'd St. Catharine's River, the Little and great Chaptanck, St. Michael's River, Chester River, the Sassafrax, the North-East River, &c.

VI. The most Southern of all these Parts is VIRGINIA, which was first discover'd in the Year 1497, with all the other Coasts of North America, from the Cape of Florida on the South, to Newfoundland in the North, and even as far as the 67 Deg. 30 Min. of North Latitude, by Sebastian Cabot the Venetian, upon Account of Henry VII. King of England. In 1584 Capt. Philip Amadas and Capt. Arthur Barlow made a particular Discovery of the Country, at the proper Costs and Charges of Sir Walter Raleigh Knight, who is said to have given it this Name, in Honour of Elizabeth the Virgin-Queen of England. The next Year Sir Richard Greenville setting out with seven Ships from Plimouth on the 9th of April, arriv'd at Wokokon May 26, and began to make a Settlement in August following, at Roanoc, which lies in 36 Degr. of Northern Latitude: He continuing there till June 1586, and made several Discoveries; but was forc'd to return to England, by reason of the incessant Moleſtations and treacherous Practices of the Natives, and landed at Portsmouth July 27. 1586. The same Sir Richard Greenville undertook a second Voyage to Virginia, not long after with three Ships, and touch'd again upon Roanoc, but found the Place deserted. Many other Attempts were made to establish an English Colony in those Parts, which likewise prov'd ineffectual; for all that had been hitherto left, were either utterly destroy'd by the Savages, or having made their Escape, got home again, with a great deal of difficulty. However, some other Discoveries were carry'd on; notwithstanding these Discouragements, particularly of Martin's Vineyard, and Elizabeth's Isle, by Capt. Gosnot; of Whitson Bay, by Marvin Prigg; and of Pentecost-Harbour, by Capt. George Weymouth, who set forth at the Charge of Thomas the first Lord Arundel of Warder. At last, King James I. having granted a Commission for the Plantation and farther Discovery of the Country, Capt. Newport set sail with two Ships, and being cast upon Cape Henry at the Mouth of Chesapeake-Bay, rais'd a Fort near the Mouth of the Powhatan, now call'd James-River; where he left a Garrison of 100 Men, and return'd to England. This was the first Colony that maintain'd their Post, and which increasing by continual Supplies from time to time, has attain'd to that flourishing Condition which it now enjoys. Afterwards several new Discoveries were made, on the Eastern Coast, and to the Head of Chesapeake-Bay, by the singular Industry of Capt. John Smith and other worthy Personages. However, the inveterate Hatred and Cruelty of the Indians did not cease for several Years after, but broke out with greater Fury, when all things seem'd to be in a state of Peace and Tranquility; for in 1621, Sir Francis Wm being Governour, they conspired the total Destruction of the English, and manag'd their Plot with so much Secrecy and Subtilty, that no less than 700 Men, Women and Children were murder'd in one day, when the Colony did not consist of above 1500. Again, in 1643 another barbarous Massacre was committed, wherein 500 English miserably lost their Lives. But those savage Infidels were punish'd for their Cruelty by Sir William Berkly, who almost entirely defeated their whole Party, and took their Emperor Opichancono Prisoner, since when they have not been able to make any considerable Attempt upon the English; however, their chief Security does not so much depend on a change of the Disposition of the Indians, as upon the increase of their own Strength and Number, which now amounts to above 40000.

This Country was call'd Apalchen by the Natives, and formerly comprehended all that Tract of Land which reaches from Norunbeque to Florida, that is to say, the Provinces of New England, New York, Maryland, and Part of Carolina, besides that which now bears the Name of Virginia. But at present it lies between the 33 Degr. 40 Min. and the 42 Degr. of Northern Latitude; being bounded on the North, by Maryland; on the West, by the Territories of the Eriechronous, a particular Indian People; on the South, by English Florida, or Carolina; and on the East, by the Western Ocean, on which it has impos'd its Name. The Extent of it from South to North takes up about 150 Leagues, as alio 80 from East to West, and it is distant 1000 Leagues from the Coasts of England. The Climate of Virginia is generally health-Climatous, and not disagreeable to English Constitutions, if Diet and Lodging be duly regulated. The Temperature of the Air and Seasons is much govern'd by the Winds, with respect to Heat and Cold, or Driness and Moisture. The North and North-West Winds are extremely Cold and Piercing and cause very sharp Frosts, so as to freeze over the biggest Rivers from 3 to 9 Miles wide; though they are not of long continuance, as neither the somewhat deep Snows, with which they are accompany'd. The South and South-East Winds bring Heat in the Summer-months, and cease in July and August, when the Air grows excessive hot and troublesome. The Weather breaks suddenly in September, and turns into great Rains; occasioning an Epidemical Sickness, commonly call'd Seasoning, which nevertheless of late is not so frequent, and much less mortal than formerly; with with Cachexies; Fluxes, Gripes, Scorbutick Dropsies, &c. The Thunder is often attended with fatal Circumstances, killing many Persons, and overthrowing their Houses; and in one Particular is very remarkable, That it generally does most hurt nearest the Fire, and frequently comes down the Chimneys, especially if they have any Fire in them: It beats down great Trees, and twists others like a Withy; leaving a Sulphureous Smell in the Air, when 'tis over. There also often happens a kind of Whirl-wind, which whisking round in a Circle, carries up Leaves into the Air, that fall again in calm days, some time after in great Showers.

The Country for the most part lyes low, and has but few Stones, yet there are very pleasant Hills. The Earth in some Places is intermix'd for several Miles together with Oyster-shells, so thick that they are equal in quantity to the other Mould, and continues so for some Yards under Ground. These Oyster-shells in other Places, lye in Mines cemented together as hard as Rocks, three or four Yards thick, and the Inhabitants usually make Lime of them. In the loose Banks of Shells have been found Teeth two or three Inches long, with the Back and Ribs of a Whale. The Country is also over-spread with Woods, and seems to be as it were one entire Forest, consisting of large Trees of several sorts of Oak, Ash, Poplar, Pine, Cedar, Elm, Hickery, Dog-wood, Black Walnut, Chestnut, Cypress, &c. Yet it is free from Thickets, or Under-Wood, the small Shrubs growing only on Lands that have been clear'd, or Swamps, and thus it holds for several hundreds of Miles. The Soil is generally sandy, and even more fertile of Corn than England, yielding for the most part, between 25 and 30 fold; so that an Acre of Ground commonly produces 200 Bushels of Corn. There are few or no Meadows, by reason that the Natives have not as yet learn'd the manner of drayning their boggy Marshes, or Swamps, which would make excellent Pasture-ground, so that they are extremely put to it, for Fodder for their Cattel in the Winter, and lose many. The Uplands are weak and will not bear above three Years good Tobacco, because they have no means to enrich them; but folding Cows therein, as we do Sheep in England; though they have good Marle and Stith, the Use of which is unknown to them. They have likewise a sort of Clay that is very proper for Pipes and Pots; and Talk of which is made a delicate White-wash: besides great store of Pitch, Turpentine, a kind of Earth like Terra Siggillana, Allum, Black Lead, Copper and Iron. As for Fruits, there is abundance of divers sorts, which may well be compar'd with those of Italy, or Spain, as Apples, Pears, Quinces, Apricocks, Peaches, Plums, Grapes, Cherries, Figs, Chestnuts, Walnuts, Chinco-Pines, Melons, Olives, Strawberries, Raspberries, Goosberries, Mulberries, &c. There are also several sorts of Fruits peculiar to this Country and Maryland; as the Puchamines, a kind of Damsons, Messamines, a kind of Grapes; Chechinguamins, a Fruit that resembles a Chestnut, as the Rascomen does the Goosberry; Macoquer, a sort of Apple; Mattaquesunnauks, like Indian Figs; Morococks, a kind of Strawberry, and a Berry call'd Oconghanamnis, somewhat like to Capers. All sorts of Roots and Garden-herbs grow there plentifully, as Potatoes, Carrets, Turneps, Onions, Asparagus, Artichokes, Cabbages, Colly-flowers, &c. with many Physicall Plants, as Radix Serpentina, Dittany, Turbith, Mecboacan, Ague Root, the best Tobacco, &c. The Roots peculiar to Virginia and Maryland, Herbs, are Tockawagh, both wholesome and savoury to the Tast; Wichakan, very efficacious in the healing of all manner of Wounds; Pocosis of admirable Vertue to assuage Swellings and Aches; and Musquaspet, with the Juice of which affording a pleasant Colour, the Indians paint their Mats and Targets. The Plant call'd Martonna is no less esteem'd among them, of which they make Bread, besides the Assentamen, a kind of Pink, and a rare Plant commonly call'd Silk-grass, having thin and fibrous Leaves, of which is made a kind of fine Stuff, with a Gloss like Silk, and Cordage much better than of Hemp, or Flax, both for continuance and Strength.

Before the coming of the English, there was not so much as one Horse, Bull, Cow, Hog, Cattle, or Goat, but now there is plenty of most sorts of Cattel, except Sheep, which the Inhabitants are discourag'd from keeping, because the Wolves devour them so fast. In the Woods are numerous Herds of red Deer, and Elks, whose Flesh Beasts, is said to be as good as Beef, Buffles, Lions, Bears, Leopards, Tigers, Wolves, Dogs that are like Wolves, but do not bark, Raccoons (which are a Species of Monkeys) Hares, Squirrels, Martins, Pole-cats, Weasels and Foxes. There is also great store of Land and Water-Tortoises, Beavers, Otters, different sorts of Frogs, of which one is eight or ten times as big as any in England, and make a Noise like the bellowing of a Bull; Lizards, and several kinds of Snakes, of which the most remarkable are Rattle-Snakes that have a Rattle in their Tails, made of Bones, enclos'd in a dry Husk; their Bite is deadly, yet they never meddle with any thing unless provoked. The blowing-Snake, a kind of Viper to nam'd, Serpents, because it blows and Swells the Head very much e'er it gives a Bite, which is accompanied with fatal Consequences: Moreover the Bite of the red Snake and Horn-Snake is mortal; but the Black, Corn and Water-Snakes are not so venomous. Other sorts of wild Beasts bred here and in Maryland, are the Aroughens, somewhat like a Badger; the Mussalems, a kind of Water-rat, or rather Musk-rat, that smells very strong of that Perfume; the Uchbungois, a sort of Wild Cat; the Opassum, a certain Beast, the Female of which has a Bag under her Belly, wherein she carries her young ones, and the Assapanic, or Flying-Squirrel.

Virginia affords great variety of Birds, as three Birds, sorts of Eagles, viz. the Gray, Bald and Black; the last of which is usually very destructive to young Lambs, Pigs, &c. Some Species of Hawks, as the Fishing-Hawk, Goshawk, Falcon and Stannel. There is an Owl as big as a Goose, that kills the Poultry in the Night; a delicate feather'd Bird, Milk-white and upt with a Punctal of Jet-black. The Wood-peckers are many of them lovely to behold, being variegated with Green, Yellow, Black and white, and having a large Scarlet Tuft on their Crown. The Turkeys are here very large, some weighing between 50 and 60 Pounds. There are also Cocks and Hens, without without Rumps or Tails, or Partridges, Pigeons, Turtle-Doves, Herons, of which there is one kind Milk-white, Cranes, Swans, Wild Geese, Bitterns, Curlews, Sandpipers, Snipes, Tewits, Wild Ducks, Teal, Widgeons, Dotterils, Heath-cocks, Brants, &c. To these may be added innumerable Flocks of small Birds of divers sorts, as Black-birds, very voracious of Corn; the Mocking-bird, which imitates the Notes of all Birds; it hears, and is esteem'd the finest Singing-bird in the World; the Virginia Nightingale, of a pure Scarlet colour, with a Tuft on the Head; Larks, Swallows, Ox-eyes, Martins, Red Birds, Blue Birds of a curious Azure colour; Goldfinches that are very beautiful, with Red, Orange-colour'd and yellow Feathers; Sparrows, Snow-birds, Humming-birds, &c.

Fish. The Rivers abound with variety of excellent Fish, as Sturgeon, Perch, Crokers, Taylers, Cods, Thorn-backs, Grampuses, Porpeffes, Basses, Coney-fish, Rock-fish, white Salmons, Mulletts, Soles, Plaice, Mackerel, Trouts, Eels, Roach, Shad, Herrings, Oysters, Cockles, Mussels, Creyfish, Crabs, Shrimps, &c. Beside some other kinds of Fish that are peculiar to this Climate, as Drums, Sheeps-heads, of which Broth may be made like that of Mutton, Cat-fish, Sting-rays, &c.

Plants. The natural Productions of the Country, are, Wood, Madder, Hemp, Flax, Hops, Rape-seed, Anis-seed, Pitch, Tar, Rosin, Turpentine, Wax, several sorts of Gums, and Balsoms of admirable Vertues; Elk-Skins that make excellent Buff, and other Hides; but the most staple Commodity at present, is Tobacco, being the General Standard by which all others are rated: There are two sorts of it, viz. one call'd Sweet-scented, the best sort of which is planted about Tork-River, and the other Oranoco, i. e. bright and large; the former bears the greatest Price, and the latter is more common: It is observable, That such vast quantities of Tobacco are transported from Virginia to England, that the Custom and Excise paid for it, yields the King a yearly Revenue of Fifty or sixty thousand Pounds Sterling: For above 100 Sail of Ships are bound thither every Year from England, and other English Plantations, on purpose to take off this Commodity. But the Plenty of it extremely diminishes its Value, and makes it so great a Drug, that the Merchant sometimes had rather lose it, than defray the charges of Freight, Custom, &c. inasmuch that the Inhabitants might perhaps, employ their Time to better purpose, in improving some other Products, and more especially in the making of Silk, in regard that Mulberry-Trees, proper for the breeding of Silk-worms, thrive so well in these Parts. Trades-men find good Encouragement there, and the usual way of Traffick is by bartering one Commodity for another; altho' upon occasion, there is no want of English and other Foreign Coins: They receive from England all sorts of Apparel, Silks, Stuffs, Linnen and Woollen-cloth, Household-Stuff and Utensils, with Wine, Brandy, and other strong Liquors, in exchange for Tobacco, and other Commodities above-mention'd.

Indians. The principal Tribes of the Indian People, whose Names were known to the English at their first Arrival, were the Keconghians, Wenocks, Airohmocks, Appamtocks, Nansaminds and Che- peaks, who inhabited the Country about the River Powhatan; the Paspahges, who possess'd the Territory where James-Town is now seated; upon the River Pamunkee, were those of the Yowng-tanunds and Matapamens: And the Manaboacs, with the Mocoughiacunds and Cutatawomens, liv'd near the River Toppahmock. The Natives are somewhat tall, yet not corpulent, their Hair black and flabby, and their Skin tawny, which they anoint with certain Oils mingled with Bears-grease. They usually wear Deer-Skins for cloathing, and Shoes, paint their Faces, and suffer their Hair to grow to an extraordinary length. They dwell in Cabins or Huts made of Poles and Boughs, cover'd with the Barks of Trees, and the Chimney or Fire-hearth is plac'd in the middle: They lye on Mats, and sit on Banks of Earth; their ordinary Food being Venison, Fowl, Fish, &c. They sit on the Ground to eat their Meals, the Men on one side, and the Women on the other; and burn the Bodies of the Dead: The Features of the Female Sex are very agreeable, only they have small Eyes, broad Noses and wide Mouths: As to the Dispositions, Manners, Customs, Religion, &c. of these People there is some Difference, but most of all in their Languages; so that they may well be reckon'd as so many distinct Nations. They are of a quick Wit, very Subtil, Treacherous, and great lovers of their Ease: They are also much addicted to Hunting and going to War, and are very expert in Shooting. Traffick. Their Traffick consists in the Skins of Deer, Beavers, and other wild Beasts, which they exchange with the English, for Guns, Powder, Shot, small Iron-tools and Brandy. Their Arms are Bows, Arrows and Clubs, with two Knobs at the end: They fight only upon Surprise, but are very vindictive, and will revenge the Death of a Person, upon the Family of the Murderer, two or three Generations after. These Indians Religion. are Idolaters, believing that there are several Gods of different Orders, who are subject to one Eternal Being: They maintain the Transmigration of the Soul, and have odd Fancies about the Creation of the World: But they have a particular Veneration for a certain God, call'd Okee, who (as they say) often appears to them, and discovers his Will, answering Questions put to him, about Hunting, journeying, Trafficking, &c. They offer to him the first Fruits of all Things every Year, affirming, They cannot expect good Luck without so doing. They account the God of the English better than theirs, because he often beats them; yet they observe strange Ceremonies, and their Priests are generally thought Conjurers: For in the time of a Drought, they are us'd to bring abundance of Rain, by their Pawawing or Incantations: The English keep themselves to the Forms of Divine Worship establish'd in the Church of England.

Almost every Indian Town, or rather poor Village, is the Seat of a Monarch, and the People wear certain Marks, or Badges on their Backs, shewing to what Kings or Lords they belong, whom they call Wernans: However, there are no Courts of Judicature, nor any Justice administer'd among them, but what particular Persons do themselves, by revenging their own, or their Friends Quarrels. They live in continual Wars one with another, and by that means are are in a great measure destroy'd.

The Supreme Magistrate of the English Colonies; is a Deputy sent over by the King of Great Britain, who governs the Country by Laws agreeable to those of England, for the decision of all Causes both Civil and Criminal. The Legislative Power is lodg'd in the Governour and a General Assembly, consisting of two Houses, viz. the Upper, which is his Council, and the Lower, wherein sit Burgesses chosen by the Free-holders. These Laws are put in execution, by the Sheriffs, Justices of Peace and other Officers, in every County; and Causes are decided by the Monthly Courts, from whence there may be an Appeal to the chief Court of Judicature at James-Town, commonly call'd the Quarter-Court; as being held every Quarter of a Year, where the Governour and Council are Judges. Upon that account, the whole Country of Virginia, as far as the English Colonies reach, is divided into nineteen Provinces or Counties, the greatest part of which take their Names from those of England: On the Eastern Shore, appears the County of Northampton, in Acomack; and on the Western Coasts, are those of Carotuck, Lower Norfolk, Nassamund, Isle of Wight, Surrey, Warwick, Henrico, James, Charles, York, New Kent, Glocester, Middlesex, Lancaster, Northumberland, Westmoreland, Rappahannock and Hartford.

Besides the Indian Villages, which are only Knots of forty Huts, or Cabbins, scarce deserving that Name, there are several considerable Towns, for the most part built by the English since their Settlement, either on the Sea-coasts, or upon or near the Rivers, with respect to the advantage of Trade, or the richness of the Soil. The chief of these are, Onarwoc; Secotan; Pomejoc; Demamattiqua; Pastenzon; Croking; Powhatan, or Pawhatan, on the North-side of a large winding River of the same Denomination, call'd James River by the English.

JAMES-TOWN, or rather James-City, conveniently seated a great deal lower in a Peninsula, on the North-side of the same River: It was first founded and so nam'd by James I. King of Great Britain, A. D. 1606; but it has been since fortified with regular Bulwarks, and adorn'd with many beautiful Brick Buildings; being the Capital Town of the whole Country, where the Courts of Judicature and Publick Offices are constantly kept: At a little distance from this City, Northward, stands a fair Brick-house, call'd Green-Spring, where the Governour usually resides. The other Places of Note, are Elizabeth-City, a well built Town; containing several good Houses of Brick and Stone, and remarkable for its Situation, on the Mouth of Powhatan, or James-River: Henricopolis, or Henry's Town, so call'd in honour of Prince Henry, eldest Son of King James I. to whom it owes its Foundation, in a commodious Part of the Inland Country, at the distance of 80 Miles from James-Town: Dales-gift, built and planted at the proper Costs of Sir Thomas Dale, Deputy-Governour, A. D. 1610; Bermuda; Wicocomoco; Ketoughtan, a Sea-Port Town much frequented, on Chesapeake Bay, &c.

Rivers. No Country is better water'd with many large and swift Rivers; the chief of which are James-River, York-River, Rappahannock, and Potowmack, that all run into the Gulph or Bay of Chesapeake, which divides the Country into two unequal Parts, and gives Entrance for Shipping into it, and the adjacent Province of Maryland. This large and commodious Bay is said to extend itself Northwards for the space of 75 Leagues in length; its Breadth in many Places, taking up 5, 6 or 7 Leagues, and sometimes more: It is 6 or 7 Fathom deep, and its Opening on the South between Cape Henry and Cape Charles, is about 10 or 12 Leagues wide. The Powhatan, or James-River, on the West-side of the Mouth of this Bay, is three Miles wide at its Entrance, and Navigable about 150 Miles. York-River, formerly call'd Pamunkee, at the distance of 14 Miles Northward from the former, is likewise Navigable for 60 or 70 Miles, and carries small Vessels about 30 or 40 Miles farther. The Rappahannock, antiently termed Toppahanock, admits of a Passage for Ships, about 130 Miles; but the Potowmack is the biggest River, being 9 Miles over, in many Places, and serves as a Boundary between this Country and Maryland. They all ebb and flow, but when the Wind is at North-West, their Course is scarce discernable; at other times, they rise at high Tides about two Foot. Besides these navigable and principal Rivers, there are several others of less Note that run into some of them; particularly, the Poyankatane and Matapeny, which fall into the Pamunkee, or York-River: In like manner, the Powhatan, or James-River, receives the Apimattuck or Elizabeth-River, Southward; the Quyonocabanuck, Nassamund and Chesapeake, Eastward; and the Chickamahania, or Chicobomin, on the North; near the Source of which, out of a Hill, issu'd forth a kind of glittering Sand, like the Filings of Brass, and so continu'd downwards, that the Ground seem'd to be cover'd all over with the same Brassy-stuff.

It is now requisite to give an Account of the principal Islands that lye over against Canada, and constitute its Third Part, according to the above-mention'd Division. In St. Lawrence's Gulph, are Anticosti, or L'Assomption, taking up 35 Antico-Leagues in length and about 7 in breadth; which st. I. was first discover'd by James Quarrier, and is remarkable for its Situation at the Mouth of St. Lawrence's Gulph, where several French Colonies are settled. St. Jean, or St. John's Isle, lying in St. Jean the innermost Bay of the same Gulph, and likewise possess'd by the French: Cap Breton, an Island, with a Promontory of the same Name, st. I. somewhat farther towards the East, of a larger Compass, and full of Bays; in which is the Town St. Pierre, or of St. Peter.

NEW-FOUND-LAND, a very large Island, situated at the Mouth of St. Lawrence's Gulph, between the 46 and 53 Degr. of Northern Latitude, found at the distance of about 600 Leagues from England I. Land, and only separated from the Continent of Northern America, by a little Straight call'd St. George's Channel. It extends itself (as some say) from North to South, for the space of 120 Leagues, as also 100 from West to East, and takes up 340 in Compass; but these Dimensions are much enlarg'd by others. It is almost of a Triangular Figure, and more especially noted for the multilicity of admirable Bays, Harbours and Creeks, on the Sea-coasts.

This Island was first discover'd A. D. 1494, by Sebastian Cabot, the Portuguese, for Henry VII. King of England, and was review'd by Mr. Thorn and Mr. Elliot, in 1530, in order to a more accurate Discovery of it; but no Trade was manag'd thither by the English, many Years after, only the Portuguese, Normans and Britains of France, made some settlements there; changing the Names of the Bays and Promontories. However, the English did not quit their Claim; for in 1583, Sir Humphry Gilbert was order'd to take possession of the Island for Queen Elizabeth, who had a Design to establish a Colony therein; but his misfortune in suffering Shipwrack, as he return'd, quash'd that Purpose: Insomuch that no Colony was sent till 1611, when Mr. Guy a Merchant of Bristol, having receiv'd a Commission from King James I. undertook the Matter, and arriv'd safe there, in 23 Days. This Colony thriv'd, and turn'd to so good account, that in the Year 1623, Sir George Calvert, then principal Secretary of State, afterwards Lord Baltimore, obtain'd a Patent to settle a Plantation in the Province of Avallon, and caus'd a stately House and Fort to be built at Ferryland; where he resided with his Family, for some time, and manag'd the Government himself: Afterwards he left it to a Deputy, and his Posterity are still Proprietors of this Province.

The Air is very healthful, yet somewhat cold in Winter and hot in Summer, but never to excess. The Country in most Places, is fertile, and naturally beautify'd with Roses and stately Trees; producing abundance of Peas, Filberds, and other Fruits, necessary for Humane Life and Delight; it has also afforded to the English, when Till'd, good Wheat, Rye, Turneps, Coleworts, &c. The Woods are well stock'd with Deer, Hares, Foxes, Squirrels, Otters, Musk-cats, Muskrats, and other Wild Beasts that yield excellent Furs. There is also no less plenty of Land and Water-Fowl, and Fish, with variety of fresh Springs, the Waters of which are extremely delicious. On the Sea-coasts many Morfes, or Sea-Oxen, are catch'd and kill'd, which is an amphibious Creature, as big as an Ox, tho' its Shape rather resembles that of a Lion: They have Teeth like those of Elephants, of as large a size, and as good Ivory. Their Paunches serve to make Train-Oil, and their Skin is twice as thick as an Ox's or Bull's, and short-haired, like that of a Seal.

The Natives are of a middle-siz'd Stature, beards and broad-fac'd, colouring their Faces with Oker, and some of them go naked, all but their Privities. Their Houses are nothing but Poles set round like our Arbours, and cover'd with Deer-Skins, the Hearth, or Fire-place, being set in the middle. Ten or twelve Families live together in one of these Huts, and lye upon Skins, with their Dogs; often make Feasts, during which they dance and sing; they pass the Rivers in Canoes, or Boats, made of Birch-tree Bark, strengthened with little wooden Hoops. These savage People are said to believe in one God, the Creator of all Things, but have many fantastical Notions and ridiculous Opinions about his Essence, Providence, &c. They also acknowledge the Immortality of the Soul, and usually bury all the Goods of their deceased Friends in the same Grave with them, to serve for their use in the other World. They have recourse to a certain Deimon, when they go a Hunting, to know where they shall find Game, and often speed; but do not otherwise worship him. Lastly, There are many Coniurers among them, whom they use for Physicians and Priests to consult their Oracle.

Their peculiar Form of Government is not known; but 'tis certain, they are rul'd by a Sagamore, or King, as the English, by their Governours. The Europeans do not inhabit the middle of the Isle, but content themselves to live about the Ports, which are very convenient, where they carry on a great Trade with Morfes, Whale-Oil, Cod, Stock-fish, Poor-John, and other Kinds of Fish. The English are settled in the Province of Avallon, and are Masters of the following Ports, viz. Conception-Bay, a spacious Bay, five Miles broad in the narrowest place; yet safe and of very good Anchorage. Trinity-Bay; and the Bay des Trespasses, i. e. of the Dead. The French retain in their possession, the Port of Plaisance, and some other Places.

About 25 Leagues from this Island, to the South-East, over against Cape Raz, lyes a vast Bank, or ridge of Ground, which is cover'd with Water, when the Sea is high, and uncover'd and dry at the ebb; extending itself in length, from North to South, almost for the space of 150 Leagues, and above 50 in its greatest breadth, from West to East: The Sea is 200 Fathom deep all round it, and the Sand so movable, that Ships of a considerable Burthen may ride over it. About this Bank are several little Islands, on which Sebastian Cabot impos'd the name of Los Baccalaos, i. e. The Cod-fish Isles, from the prodigious quantities of Cod-fish and Stock-fish there found, which were said to obstruct the Passage of his Vessels: So that every Summer, three or four hundred Sail of Ships, from England, France and Holland, come to these Parts, where they are sure of sufficient Freight of such Fish; this Cod-fishing continues from April to September. Moreover it is observable, That with the Livers of the Cods, (which are immediately disbowell'd and salted) the Mariners bait Hooks, and catch a large sort of Bird, call'd by them, Tauquers and Happesfoyes, which serve them for Food in this Voyage.

Over against the Eastern Part of Acadia, appears Isle de Sable, i. e. The Sand-Island, so call'd Isle de by the French, who settled themselves there for Sable some time, but were afterwards forc'd to abandon it for want of fresh Water: It takes up 15 Leagues in compass, and is distant as many from Cape Breton. The principal Islands situated over against New England, are Nanuket; I. The Sturgeon-Isles; Martin's Vineyard; Vieland, Martin's call'd Narocke by the Natives, and formerly possess'd by the Hollanders; Texel, or Elizabeth's; Vieland Isle; Block Isle; Rode Isle, the Towns of which are, Newport and Portsmouth; Isle of Wight; Plum Isle; and Fishers Isle. Eliz. I. Rode I.

Over against the Province of New York, lye Manahattens, an Island so nam'd by the Indians, Manahattens about 14 Miles long and two broad; chiefly remarkable markable for the City of New York, built on the South-end of it. Saten Island, of a square Figure, taking up about 10 Miles in length and as many in breadth; and containing Long Island, several confideral Towns, viz. Wells; Dover; Bilkop, Old Town, New Town, &c. And Long Island, formerly call'd Matowacks, and Yorkshire, after it was united to the English Plantations: It is parted from the Continent by the Mouth of Hudson's River, and lyes out about 150 Miles from West to East; being in some places eight, in others twelve, and in others fourteen or twenty Miles broad. The whole Island is well inhabited, and exceeding plentiful of all sorts of English Grain, with an admirable variety of Trees, Plants and Fruits, particularly Tobacco, Flax, Pumpkins, Melons, &c. In the Month of May, the Fields and Woods are so finely bedeck'd with Roses and other fragrant Flowers, that all seem to be but one entire and most delightful Garden. In the middle of this Island, a spacious Champain Tract, commonly call'd Salsbury-Plain, extends itself above 16 Miles in length and four in breadth, which brings forth very fine Grass, and affords good Pasture for Sheep and other Cattel: A Horse-race is also run there every Year, and the Victor rewarded with a Silver-cup. Moreover, there are two or three other little Plains of about a Mile square, which tend much to the Advantage of the neighbouring Towns; and the Southern Coasts are frequented by Whales and Crampuses; besides an innumerable multitude of Seals that lye all the Winter upon the broken Marshes and Beaches, or Bars of Sand. The Dutch Towns of Long-Island, noted for the making of China Ware, are Utrecht, Middleburg, and Flushing. The chief English Towns are, Dover; Gravesend; Elath-bush; Bedford; Greenwich; Jamaica; New Town; Hambled; Huntington; Chatham; Ashford; Egerton; Nettlested; Northfleet; Feverham; East-hampton; South-hampton, &c.

X. Lastly, over against Virginia and Carolina, but at the distance of 200 Leagues Eastward, the Islands of BERMUDAS present themselves to our View, in the 32 Degr. 30 Min. of Northern Latitude: They are likewise distant about 15 or 1600 Leagues from England, 1000 or 1200 from the Madera Isles, and 400 from Hispaniola. They take their Name from the first Discoverer of them, John Bermudas a Spaniard; and are also call'd The Summer-Islands, from Sir George Summers, who suffer'd Shipwrack upon those Coasts, A. D. 1629. But the Mariners usually style them The Devil's Islands, by reason of the Storms that often arise thereabouts, and the extreme difficulty of the Passage. These are a great cluster of Islands, amounting (as some say) to the number of 400, and the Shape of all taken together, resembles that of a Crescent or Half-moon: Bermudas properly is call'd, being the largest, is 18 Miles long, yet scarce three broad in its widest Extent; and all the rest, which bear the Names of St. George, St. David's, Coopers Isle, Nonisuch, Longbrid, Ireland, Daniel, Somerset, &c. are of a great deal less compass. They have the Advantage of many convenient Ports, Bays and Roads, the chief of which are, The Great Sound, Pager's Bay, Abbot's Bay, Hav- ton's Sound, Whalebone Bay, Southampton Harbour, Harris's Bay, Elbow Bay, Great Turtle Bay, Port-Royal, &c. The Avenues are every where well fortify'd by Nature, and fence'd about with Rocks; insomuch that the English by the means of their numerous Block-houses and strong Forts, especially those of Dover and Warwick have made them altogether impregnable: Neither can a Boat of ten Tuns come near the Harbours, unless the Passages are well-known; altho' Ships of the greatest Burthen may be brought in by a skilful Pilot.

As for the Air, it is of an admirable Tempera- ture, and so exceeding wholsom, that few Persons die of any Distemper but Old Age: So that many have caus'd themselves to be convey'd thither from England, and other Parts, on purpose to enjoy the benefit of a long and healthful Life; and those that have resided there for a considerable time, are fearful of removing out of so pure a Climate. The Sky is almost continually serene and clear; altho' this Tranquility is sometimes disturb'd by very tempestuous Weather; with Thunder and Lightning even for the space of 48 Hours. The North and West Winds occasion a kind of Winter, in the Months of December, January and February; which nevertheless is so moderate, that the Marks of Spring appear in the Growth of Plants, and Breeding of Birds. The Soil is extremely Fruitful, and yields two Crops every Year, which are generally gather'd in July and December. There are several sorts of excellent Fruit, as Oranges, Dates, Palmitos, Mulberries, both White and Red, breeding abundance of Silk-worms, &c. The Cedar-Trees are much different from those in other Places, but very sweet. Our English Corn and Plants thrive well here, besides Tobacco and Cochineal, with which the Inhabitants drive a considerable Trade; not to mention their Pearl and Ambergrece. They have plenty of Tortoises, the Fleth of which is very delicious, and a great increase of Hogs, that were left by the Spaniards: They are also well provided with Fowls and Birds, chiefly Cranes, and a sort of Wild-Powl that nest in the holes of the Rocks, like Rabbits. Moreover, it is observable, That no venomous Creatures are found in these Islands, and that none will live, if brought thither. The Spiders in particular, are not poisonous, but large, and of different Colours; making their Webs so strong, that the small Birds are often entangled and catch'd in them.

The English are the sole Proprietors of the Bermudas Islands, and began their first Settlement there, A. D. 1612; so that the Colony is now become very powerful, and consists of about Five thousand Inhabitants. They have divided the whole Cluster of Islands, into several Tribes or Cantreds, viz. those of Sands, Southampton, Warwick, Pager, Penbroke, Devonshire, Smith, Hamilton, &c. in every one of which is a Borough Town, regulated by the Magistrates, according to the Government of England, both in Church and State: To conclude, Every thing seems to contribute somewhat towards the completing of their Happiness, and they have but one great inconvenience, which is scarcity of Fresh Water; in regard that there are no Springs; Rivers or Brooks, in any of these Islands: But this Defect is in some measure supply'd by Wells and Pits that ebb and flow with the Sea, and Cisterns for Rain-Water. About Midsummer, A. D. 1616, five Men set out from these Islands, in a Boat open at top, only capable of containing three large Tuns, or Hogheads; and after having sail'd seven Weeks, they all arriv'd safe in one of the Ports of Ireland; so that it may well be presum'd, The like Undertaking was scarce ever perform'd within the Memory of Man.

C H A P. V.

FLORIDA and CAROLINA.

I. FROM the Bermudas Islands, we return to the Continent, there to take a View of FLORIDA, which is said to have receiv'd its Name from Ferdinand Soto, who arriv'd there after some other Navigators, A. D. 1534, on Palm-Sunday, commonly call'd by the Spaniards, La Pascua de Flores: Others affirm, That he impos'd this Name on the Country, upon account of the florid and fragrant Fields, verdant Meadows, delightful Savanas, &c. that were observ'd by him at his Arrival. However 'tis certain, That Sebastian Cabot a Portuguese, first discover'd it in 1496, for Henry VII. King of England, but did not stay there, having a Design to find out a Passage that Way into the East. In 1512, John Ponce of Leon (to whom some attribute the naming of this Province,) was sent thither by the King of Castile, but was expell'd by the Natives in 1520. Luke Vasquez, D' Aillon, with some other Spaniards, undertook an Expedition in 1524, to subdue those People, and to force them to work in the Mines in the Spanish Islands, and Pamfilii Narvaez cross'd the Country in 1528. Lastly, Ferdinand Soto first above-mentioned, after the Conquest of Pernu, invaded it May 24, 1538, and dy'd there of Grief, because he could not accomplish his Designs. Afterwards, the French under Charles IX. got footing in several Places, and built the Caroline Fort; but were often attack'd by the Spaniards with various Success, and at last oblig'd to give Place to the English.

II. The whole Continent of Florida is bounded on the North by Canada, and the Tracts of Land that are hitherto unknown, the Apalachean Mountains separating it from them; on the West, by the New Kingdom of Mexico and the Northern Part of New Spain; on the South likewise, by New Spain and the Gulph of Mexico; and on the East, by the dangerous Strait, or Canal of Bahama and the Atlantick Ocean. It extends it self from the 25 to the 35 Degr. of Northern Latitude, and from the 273 to the 297 Degr. of Longitude.

III. The Air is very pure and temperate, and the Soil made extremely fruitful by the frequent Dewes. The Country near the Sea-coasts, is Sandy; but the inland Parts are for the most part Champain and well Water'd, altho' they have the ill Fortune not to be thoroughly Tilled. It brings forth abundance of Trees, as Pines, Laurels, Palm-trees, Cedars, Cypresses, &c. with Nuts, Chestnuts, Grapes, Plums, Medlars, and other Kinds of most delicious Fruit, besides variety of Pulse. It likewise produces great store of Cattel and Wild Beasts, viz. Lions, Leopards, Bears, Wolves, Deer, Hares, wild Dogs, wild and tame Cats, Crocodiles and Serpents of a prodigious Size, that devour Men as often as they can surprize them: Neither is there any want of Fish or Fowl, more especially Partridges, Peacocks and Parrets. There are also precious Stones, and some Mines of Gold and Silver; the Rivers in like manner, affording Gold-Sands and Pearls.

The Natives are naturally of a white Complexion, but by anointing themselves with certain Ointments made on purpose, they become of an Olive-colour: They are brawny, robust, and of a tall Stature, especially those that dwell in the Plains: They are addicted to Robbery and Lasciviousness, and go for the most part naked, altho' some of them are cloath'd with the Skins of Animals, taking great delight in adorning themselves with Plumes of Feathers of divers Colours: They often make War, and are very obedient to their Captains, termed Paroussies: There are many Hermaphrodites among them, who serve for their Slaves, and are commonly us'd instead of Labouring-Beasts. These Savage People have a great veneration for the Sun and Moon, and believe the Immortality of the Soul: They likewise pay much respect to their Priests, call'd Joaas, who are also their Physicians and Surgeons; and are thought to be meer Sorcerers.

The greatest Part of Florida, especially the inland Country, is still in the possession of the Natives; and the Spaniards were sometime Masters of almost all the Sea-coasts, but by degrees they abandon'd the most part of them. At present, the English possess the Maritime Coasts, which are extended from Caratack-Inlet, near the Frontiers of Virginia on the North, to the River S. Matheo on the South, and formerly belong'd to the Jurisdiction of the French, lying between the 29 and 36 Degr. of Northern Latitude.

This spacious Country was united to the Imperial Crown of England, A. D. 1660, and call'd CAROLINA, in honour of King Charles the Second, who granted it by Patent to George Duke of Albemarle, Edward Earl of Clarendon, William Earl of Craven, John Lord Berkley, Anthony Earl of Shaftsbury, Sir George Carteret Baronet, Sir William Berkley Knight and Baronet, and Sir John Colleton Knight and Baronet, and to their Heirs and Successors. It has Virginia for its Bounds on the North; the Atlantick Ocean, on the East; the Apalatian Mountains and Spanish Florida.

Florida, on the West; and on the same Sea, with the Peninsula of Tegefa, and the Canal of Bahama, on the South.

The Air is very wholesome and temperate, so as the Heat is not offensive in Summer, nor the Cold in Winter, which is not so sharp as to check the growth of Trees, Plants, &c. inasmuch that several Inhabitants of the Bermudaz Islands, who live in a most pure Air, and durst not venture themselves in any other Country, have remov'd thither; with many others, from most of the English Colonies in America. The Soil is generally rich and fruitful, producing, besides what is proper to the Climate, good Wheat and Barley, with all other English Grain, Herbs, Roots, &c. particularly, Turneps, Carrets, Parsnips, Potatoes, and many kinds of Pulse which are not to be found in England: The Fields are full of English and Indian Corn, and the Gardens are adorn'd with the choicest Flowers and Fruits, viz. Apples, Pears, Apricocks, Peaches, Cherries, Figs, Grapes, Plums, Olives, Quinces, Marachocks, Mulberries, Strawberries, Walnuts, Water-melons, &c. The Southern Tracts yield abundance of Oranges, Limes, Lemons, Pome-citrons and Pomegranates. The Woods not only afford all Trees useful for Timber, as red and white Oak, Poplar, Ash, Pine, &c. but likewise many sweet-smelling Trees and Shrubs, as Bay, Cedar, Cypress and Myrtle; among which, there harbour Hares, Conies, Squirrels and Raccoons. The spacious and most delightful Savanna's, are crowded with fat Deer; the Meadows are well stock'd with stately Herds of Cattel; and the pleasant Pastures abound with Sheep. To these may be added several sorts of Wild Beasts, as Otters, Bears, Wolves and Leopards, but no Lions, with some strange and monstrous Creatures, as Rattle-Snakes of two Yards and a half long, and Wild Cats bigger than a Fox. Moreover, there is great store of Hogs, which increase wonderfully; as also of Fowl, as Paroquets, Cranes, Herons, Curlews, Heath-cocks, Swans, Geese, Wild Turkeys, Doves, Doterrels, Widgeons, Brants, Ox-eyes, Teals, Ducks, Mallards, and divers other Birds, whose Flesh is most grateful to the Taste.

The Natives are a strong, lively well-shap'd People, generally of a good Disposition, and ready Wit, honest, and sincere in their Dealings: So that they maintain a perfect Friendship with the English, and are ready to serve them upon all Occasions. They are not inclin'd to Vice or Extravagance, but are moderate in their Diet and Apparel, and live a long and pleasant Life, taking little care for the future: Their Old Women are usually employ'd in planting Mayz, and for the rest, the Rivers and Woods afford them sufficient plenty of Provisions. They are much addicted to Mirth, and take delight in Dancing. For the account of Time, they are said to make use of Hieroglyphicks, and instruct their Children in Matters relating to their Country and private Families. Where a signal Battel has been fought, or a remarkable Colony established, they erect a Stone-Pyramid, expressing the number of Persons kill'd, or settled at such a Colony. They are great admirers of Valour, preferring it to all other Vertues, and consequently very often engag'd in War, which tends much to their Destruction. As for their Religion, they worship one God, the Creator of all Things, under the Name of Okee, and their High Priests offer Sacrifice to him; but they maintain, that he minds not Humane Affairs himself, but commits the Government of them to lesser Deities, i. e. to good and evil Spirits: They believe the Transmigration of Souls, and future Happiness after Death: They are of Opinion, That the whole Race of Mankind was propagated from four Women, and upon that account divide themselves into so many Tribes. Lastly, They observe many superstitious Ceremonies at their Marriages, and bury their Dead in four several Burying-places, according to the number of their Tribes: They also inter with the Corps, all sorts of Provisions and Household-stuff, for their use in Paradise, which they imagine to be situated beyond the Mountains and Indian Ocean.

There are many petty Kingdoms throughout the Country, and several Indian Towns, that afford a place of Residence to the Monarch of the adjacent Territory. The Savages are subject to these Kings, whose Will is their Law; but the English are govern'd according to the Statutes and Constitutions of England, and such By-Laws, as their Governours find necessary for that Province, and there are proper Magistrates to put them in Execution. No Money can be rais'd, nor Laws made, without the consent of the People, or their Representatives, in a general Assembly. A Register is kept of Grants and Conveyances of Land, to prevent Law-Suits and Controversies: Liberty of Conscience is also allow'd to all Persons of different Persuasions; but Atheism, Irreligion, Immorality and lewd Practices, are condemn'd and discountenanc'd. In short, the whole Model of Government has been so well fram'd by the Proprietors, for the welfare and advantage of the Inhabitants, that it is generally esteem'd beyond compare. These Encouragements have given Rise to two considerable Colonies, or Settlements of the English in those Parts, viz. one situated Northward on Albemarle River, in 35 Degr. 30 Min. of Northern Latitude; and the other much farther towards the South, in the Heart of the Country, on the Navigable Rivers of Ashley and Cooper. The latter is a most flourishing Colony, and the principal Mart for the whole Country, by reason of the healthfulness of the Place, and its convenient Situation for Shipping. The Commodities usually Exported thence, are Tobacco, Silk, Cotton, Indico, Ginger, Oil, Wine, &c.

The Province of Carolina is divided into several Counties, which take their Names from the Proprietors, viz. those of Albemarle, Clarendon, Craven, Berkley, and Colleton. The principal Towns are, CHARLES-TOWN, remarkable for its Situation upon a Promontory or Neck of Land, between the Mouths of Ashley and Cooper Rivers: Old Charles-Town over against the former, on the farther side of the Ashley: New London, seated on the Northern Bank of South-Edisto River: And Cambabe, on a River of the same Name. The Country is every where well water'd with many great Rivers, about which the numerous Plantations are advantageously seated:

settled: Some of them are Navigable, and abounding with variety of excellent Fish, which are for the most part, of the same Kind as those of Virginia. The most eminent of these Rivers, beginning to reckon them from North to South, are Albmarle River, which receives the Noraway and the Noratoke; the Pamlico; the Newse, or Nus; Cape Fear, or Clarendon River, divided into two Branches; the Wingoe; Waree; Santee, or Craven; Seewee; Bowat; Cooper River, into which fall the Wando, the Back River; Goose Creek, Turkey Creek, &c. Ashley River; Sono River; North-Edisto; South-Edisto; Collerson River; the Cambake; Sapola; Wallea; May River; and St. Matheo. Lastly, There is a great number of convenient, spacious and safe Harbours, besides innumerable Rivulets, Brooks, Bays, Creeks, Inlets, &c.

VII.

The most considerable Places of Spanish Florida on the East, are S. Matheo, a little Town, now almost ruin'd with its Fort and Harbour, near the River of the same Name: And S. Augustino, a Town likewise of a small Extent, defended by a Castle, and built a little farther towards the South: Both these Towns are seated in the Province of Tegesta, a Peninsula lying between the Gulph of Mexico, on the West; and the Straight of Bahama, and the North-Sea, on the East; which is also call'd Proper Florida, by the Spaniards: They were also sometime Masters of Savonia; in Carolina; Mollona, on the West-side of the River May, abounding with Gold and Silver; Edelano, on the Eastern Bank of the same River; Anatequa, or Onatequa; and the Caroline Fort, nearer to the Sea-coasts and the Confines of Virginia: This last Place was the chief of all those that were in the possession of the French, till at last it was taken, and demolish'd by the Spaniards. To these Towns may be added Melilor, the Capital of the Country of the Apalachites, situated not far from the Apalatean Mountains, and the most spacious Lake Theomy, and comprehending six well-cultivated Provinces; which are subject to a Monarch, who keeps his Royal Court in the same City. On the side of Espiritu Santo River, the Spaniards have Achalague; Ossabile, somewhat lower; Guxi: And Hirribigna, otherwise termed Hirribigna and Hirriga, not far from the Mouth of the said River, and the Sea-coasts.

The other Towns farther Westward, belonging to the Spanish Jurisdiction, are Olima; Capaha, water'd according to M. Sanson, by the River Chucagua; Coza, or Cocã, which the same Author places on Rio Grande, and where admirable Gems are said to be found; Tascaluca, nearer to the Sea; Quigata; Xualatino, or Xaulatino; Chillano, on the West-side of Espiritu Santo River; Chagus; and Naguater, or Naguater, higher on the same River. But M. Sanson's Descriptions are dissonant one from another, with respect to the Situation of these Places, as also the Situation and Names of the Rivers of this Country; among which the most remarkable are, S. Matheo, Rio Grande, R. de Canaveral, R. del Espiritu Santo, R. de Montanhas, R. Bravo, R. de la Madalena, R. Ejcondido, R. de Palmas, &c.

CHAPTER VI.

The New Kingdom of MEXICO, with CALIFORNIA, and the other Islands over against it.

I.
New Kingdom of Mexico.

THE New Kingdom of Mexico, otherwise call'd New Granada, is bounded on the East, by Florida and Louisiana; on the South, by New Spain; and on the West, by the Gulph of California, or Purple Sea; but its utmost Extent on the North is not as yet known. It reaches (according to the most modern Maps,) from the 24^o to the 268^o Degr. of Longitude, and the Latitude takes up almost 27 Degrees. So that it is a most spacious Country; which the Spaniards discover'd, A. D. 1598, and still retain Part of it in their Possession.

II.

The Air of this Kingdom is said to be wholesome, altho' hot during the Summer-Season, and very sharp in the Winter. The Country is beset with many high Mountains and Woods; affording numerous Cedars and Pine-Trees, rich Pastures for wild Beasts and tame Cattel, and several kinds of Pulse, with Mines of Gold and Silver, Crystall and Precious Stones, which the Purple Sea likewise produces: There are also divers Lakes abounding with Fish, and considerable Rivers; the chief of the latter is, Rio del Norte, i. e. The North-River, which flows thro' the middle of the Kingdom, and (as it is express'd in the common Maps) falls into the Purple Sea; but (according to Baudrand,) into the Gulph of Mexico; for this Author assures us, He receiv'd that Information from a certain Learned Person, who had an opportunity to take a particular View of those Parts, a few Years ago. The Country is inhabited by many Nations, whose Languages, Constitutions and Manners, are different; yet some of them are tractable, and get their Livelihood by keeping Cattel and Hunting: They are govern'd by their own Princes, and the greatest Part of them are addicted to Idolatry, altho' some (as it is reported,) worship one God, the Lord of Heaven and Earth, whose Throne is in Heaven; and the Spaniards endeavour to convert them to their Religion.

M. Baudrand divides the New Kingdom of Mexico into eighteen Provinces; which Division he declares, to have receiv'd from an illustrious Personage, nam'd Senor de Pensola, who was sometime General Governour of those Parts; but in regard that these Provinces are not delineated lined in the Maps, we shall omit this Division.

IV. M. Sanson reckons up many People and Provinces, that are not as yet distinctly known. The Apaches, a warlike People, have enlarg'd their Territories further of all throughout the Northern Part of New Mexico; and both Men and Women are said to cloath themselves with Stags-Skins: They are distinguish'd by the Spaniards into four Nations, two of which live on the South, viz. Apaches de Perillo, between the North-River and the Purple Sea; and Apaches Vagueros between the same River and Florida: The other two Nations, whose Seats are more Northern, are nam'd Apaches de Navajo, or Nabajox, and Apaches de Xila.

V. We shall not take any farther notice of the other People and Provinces of this Country, but proceed to the Description of its most remarkable Places and Towns, and first of those that are situated nearest to the North-River. The most eminent of them, is Santa Fé, call'd also by the Inhabitants Santa Fé de Granala, and New Mexico by others, a neat City dignify'd with an Episcopal See, and the Spanish Governour's Court; being built altogether with Stone, by the Spaniards, a few Years ago in the middle of the Kingdom. It is plac'd in several Maps, on the Western-side of the North River; but M. Baudrand says, it is distant nine Leagues from it. Farther on the South, appear Sevilletta; Pilabo; Senecu; and Socorro, which in M. Sanson's larger Map, are likewise set down on the Western Bank of the same River.

VI. The following Places are situated at a greater distance from the North River, viz. Acoma, a very strong hold, built on a high and steep Rock; Zaguato; Roy Coronado; S. Miguel, and Porto de Santa Clara, on the Coasts of the Purple Sea.

VII. Many Islands lye over against the New Kingdom of Mexico, and the nearest are contain'd in the Purple Sea, or Gulph of California, particularly La Isla de Santa Cruz,

i. e. Holy Cross Island and La Isla de Gigante, or the Giant-Isle, both of a small Compass: California, being somewhat more remote, is wash'd on the East by the Purple Sea, which separates it from New Mexico; as also, on the South, West, and North, by the Pacifick Sea. Several Authors have doubted, Whether it is a Peninsula, or an Island, and some have taken it for the former; but that Scruple has been since remov'd by the Experience of Navigators. This Island was first discover'd by Ferdinand Cortez, A. D. 1535, and is situated between the 23 and the 46th Degr. of Northern Latitude: Its most Southern and least Tract lyes under the Torrid Zone, and the Tropick of Cancer, and the rest take up the most part of the Northern Temperate Zone; extending itself from North to South, for the space of 460 Leagues, and 140; in its greatest breadth; which is widest in the Northern Part, and narrowest in the Southern. So that it is apparently the most spacious Island of all Northern America, and even one of the greatest in the whole World: It is of a long Figure, and very full of Bays, on the North and West. The temperature of the Air and Soil, is supposed to be agreeable to that of New Spain; but no certain Account can be given of the Manners, Religion and Government of the Natives; in regard that only some Bays, Harbours, and Promontories, are as yet known to the Europeans. M. Baudrand tells us, That the Spaniards have lately erected in a fruitful Territory, on the Southern Coasts, a Colony, or little Town, of the same Name with the Island; which nevertheless, is not express'd in the modern Maps.

On the West and South of California, many little Islands appear in the Pacifick Sea; the chief of which are, S. Clement; Isla de Poraros; I. de Ceintas; Ulloa; Lanblada; St. Thomas; and Las tres Marias, three small Isles that lye next to the Continent of New Spain.

CHAP. VII.

New SPAIN, or the Kingdom of MEXICO.

I. New Spain. WE are now come to New Spain, the best and most noted Part of the Continent of Northern America, which is more inhabited by the Spaniards than any other Country of the New World, and is often call'd the Kingdom of Mexico, from its Metropolitan City. It is bounded on the West, by the Purple Sea, and that Part of the Southern Ocean on which it has impos'd its Name; the latter serving also for its Boundary, on the South; on the East, by the Isthmus of Panama and the Gulph of Mexico; and on the North, by Florida and the New Kingdom of Mexico. It is situated between the 8th and 30th Degr. of Northern Latitude, and between the 254 and 292 Degr. of Longitude; being broadest under the Tropick of Cancer, but very narrow in many Places on the South-East: So that its most considerable Part is only an Isthmus, and is justly termed by the Natives, Anabanc, i. e. Near the Water.

The

II. The Air of this Kingdom is said to be exceeding temperate and healthful, although its greatest Part lyes under the Torrid Zone. The Storms of Wind and Showers of Rain, sometimes continue for a long time; but the Country abounds with Pasture, Corn, Mayz, excellent Fruits and Cattel, particularly Cows, Sheep, that bring forth Lambs twice a Year, and fine Horses of the Spanish breed; besides many other sorts of Beasts, that are often kill'd for their Skins, and variety of Birds; among which one call'd Cincon is more especially remarkable, being no bigger than a Beetle, yet adorn'd with delicate Feathers: This little Bird lives upon the Dew and the Smell of Flowers, and sleeps in the hollow of a Tree till the Month of April. There is also an admirable Tree, known by the Name of Mayuey, or Mayaguey, which yields Wine, Vinegar, Honey, Thread, Needles, Stuffs, and Timber for Buildings. The Commodities usually transported hence into Europe, are Gold and Silver, which are not only produc'd in the Mines, but also in the Rivers; Precious Stones, Balm, Cocheneal, Salsaparilla, Mexicoacan-Roots, Brimstone, Furrs, Wool, Silk, Sugar, Cacao-nuts to make Chocolate. This Country scarce affords any Wine, because the Weather is always rainy during the time of Vintage. It has been united to the Dominions of the King of Spain, ever since Ferdinand Cortez subdu'd it in less than four Years, viz. from 1518 to 1521, notwithstanding the numerous Armies that oppos'd his Progress: For the Kings were then able to bring 3 or 400000 fighting Men into the Field. The whole Kingdom is still govern'd by a Spanish Vic-Roy, who keeps his Court in the City of Mexico, and presides over all the Governments of those Provinces which his Catholick Majesty possesses in Northern America.

The Natives are civil, tractable, courteous to Strangers, and sincere in their Dealings, but not easily reconcil'd to those that deceive them, or do them an injury. They are somewhat slothful, but have a great Inclination to Music, Painting and making Pictures, with the Feathers of the above-mention'd Birds nam'd Cincons: They are also so expert in curious Gold and Silver-works, that nothing can be more ingeniously and artistically done: These People in appearance conform themselves to the Roman Catholick Religion, which is generally profess'd in this Country. But as the Censure of Thomas Gage a Dominican is too true, viz. That most of the Spanish Priests are abominable Hypocrites and extremely covetous, their Converts cannot be expected to be very good Christians. The want of Charity among these Priests is no less evident; by the Hatred between the two different sorts of Monks of the same Order, in the same Convent; that is to say, the natural Spaniards, who are sent from Spain, from time to time, in the Quality of Missionaries to fill up the vacant Benefices, and strengthen the Spanish Faction; and the Circles, or Religious Persons descended of the Spanish Race in America, who seldom come to any Preference, or are entrusted with any publick Office; because it is the Interest of the former to keep them under; being admitted to no considerable Employments, lest they should tempt the Natives to revolt from the Spanish Government.

The Kingdom of New Spain is divided by the Spaniards into three Jurisdictions, or general Governments, commonly call'd Audiencias, viz. those of Guadalajara, Mexico, and Guatemala.

The Audience of Guadalajara, otherwise termed New Galicia, or La Nueva Galicia, being the most Northern of all, is bounded on the North, by the New Kingdom of Mexico; on the East, by Florida and the Audience of Mexico, which with the Sea of New Spain; bounds it likewise on the South, and on the West, by the same Sea, and El Mar Vermojo, or the Purple Sea. The Country in many Places rises up very high, and is full of Woods; abounding with Silver, Copper, Lead, and the same sorts of Fruit that are produc'd in the Kingdom of Castille: But it is often infest'd with terrible Earth-quakes, impetuous Storms of Wind, violent Thunder and Lightning, and hasty Showers of Rain even in the Summer-Season. The Magpies hereabouts are not bigger than Sparrows, yet make great havock of the Grain, and the Bees have no Sting. The Inhabitants are said to be long-liv'd, by reason of the extreme healthfulness of the Air, which is altogether free from Infection.

The Provinces of this Audience are seven in number, viz. Cinloa, Culiacan, Chameilan, Xalisco, Proper Guadalajara, Zacateca, and New Biscay. The five first are maritim, and the two others are situated in the inland Country. The Province of Cinloa is the most Northern of all, lying between the Purple Sea, on the West, and the New Kingdom of Mexico, on the North and East. Its chief Town bears the Name of St. Juan, or St. John.

The Province of Culiacan borders upon Cinloa, on the South, at the entrance of the Purple Sea; and contains the following Towns, Culiacan not far distant from the Sea-coasts, viz. Pe-Peatlan; Culiacan the Capital; St. Michael; and Quinola.

The Province of Chameilan, or Chiamelian, lyes next to Culiacan, on the South, under the Tropic of Cancer, and is wash'd by the Sea of New Spain; having Aguacaca, for its chief Town.

The most Southern maritim Province of this Government, or Audience, is Xalisco, which (according to M. Baubrand) is otherwise nam'd New Galicia. The most remarkable Places, are Compostella, founded by Nunio Guzman, a Knight of Guadalajara, who first discover'd this Province; Xalisco the Capital Town; and La Purificacion.

The Province of Guadalajara, the least Part of which lying between Chameilan and Xalisco only borders upon the Sea, is not distinguish'd from the latter, by M. Baubrand. Its principal Towns are Chimiquipagua, or Centiquipagua, built on the Sea-coasts, and at the Mouth of a River; Quazacatlan, or Guaxacatlan; Zaporaco, on the South of the Lake Chapala, in Spanish La Laguna di Chapala, which takes up 40 Leagues in Compass: And Guadalajara, seated on the North of the same Lake, and on the River Baranja, the Metropolis not only of the Province, but also of the whole Government of the same Name: It was built by the Spaniards, A. D. 1531, and erected into an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitane of Mexico in 1570. The Courts Courts of Judicature, or general Assizes of the Provinces are usually kept in this City, which is distant 80 Spanish Leagues Westward, from that of Mexico, and 40 from the Coast of the South-Sea.

X. The two last Inland Provinces of this Audience, are that of Los Zacatecas, and New Biscay. The former is so nam'd from the People who are its Inhabitants, and is partly situate under the Tropick of Cancer. Its most eminent Towns, are Xetex at the Fraterna, or the Confines of Guadalajara San Luis de los Zacatecas, or simply Zacatecas the Capital, near the Tropick: Ellerena; Durango, on the Foot of the Mountains, dignify'd with an Episcopal See; and Nombre de Dios.

XI. The other inland Province, is La Nueva Biscaya, or New Biscay, situate on the North of Zacatecas, and extending to the Kingdom of New Mexico, and remarkable for its Silver-Mines. The Places of Note in this Province, are Endeja; Mesquite; St. Juan; and Santa Barbara.

XII. The general Government, or Audience of Mexico, has for its Bounds on the West, that of Guadalajara; on the North Florida; on the East, the Gulph of Mexico, Bay of Honduras, and the Audience of Guatemala, and on the South, the Pacifick Ocean. It is inferior to none of the Countries of the New World, in the richness of its Soil, and number of Inhabitants; enjoying an admirable temperature of the Air. It abounds with all sorts of Cattel, Māyz, Wheat, Fruit, Salt, Honey, Wax, Precious Stones, Gold, and more especially Silver; but it is almost destitute of Wine and Oil.

XIII. This Audience likewise contains seven Provinces, viz. those of Mechoacan, Proper Mexico, Panuco, Tlascala, Guaxaca, Tabasco, and Jucan; the two first of which are situated on the Sea of New Spain, or the Pacifick, and the rest in their Order, on the Gulph of Mexico. The Province of Mechoacan, from whence the Mechoacan-Root derives its Denomination, is very fruitful, and borders upon Guadalajara: Its most considerable Towns are San Philippe, or St. Philip; S. Miguel, or S. Michael; La Concepcion de Salaya; Vila de los Lagos; Cusco; Mechoacan i. e. A Fishing-place, call'd Valladolid de Mechoacan, by the Spaniards; a large City, the Capital of the Province, and a Bishop's See; being distant but seven Spanish Leagues Southward from the Lake of Mechoacan. and 47 South-West from the City of Mexico: Tispa; Colima; and Sacatula, on the Mouth of a River of the same Name.

XIV. Next to Mechoacan lyes the Province of Mexico, properly so call'd; and otherwise Themistitan, the Principal not only of this Audience, but also of the whole Continent of America, under which Tlascala is often comprehended; but we shall describe them separately: The inland Country hereabouts affords the best sort of Metals, and the Coasts yield abundance of Oysters. The most remarkable Ports on the South Sea are Petalan; Cataluba; and Acapulco, a little Town newly built, with St. James's Castle, most strongly fortify'd on a Hill; having five Bastions and a very capacious Harbour, from whence Ships set sail every Year to the Philippine Islands and China. The chief inland Towns are Chianla; Ostuma; Tasco; Cuen- nabaca; Atlisco; Subimaleo; Xulaxa; Tlascala; and Mexico a famous City, which has impos'd its Name not only on this Province and Audience, but also on the Kingdom of Mexico, or New Spain, and even on the whole Continent of North-ern America. It was heretofore the Royal Seat of the Kings of Mexico, of a very large Extent, adorn'd with a stately Palace and many fine Temples, and built like Venice, in a spacious Lake: But the greatest Part of it was burnt and ruin'd by the Spanish Forces, under the Command of Ferdinand Cortez, who having taken the whole Town after a long Siege Aug. 13. A. D. 1521, remov'd it to the side of the same Lake, and caus'd it to be magnificently rebuilt on a most pleasant Plain: So that its Streets are very broad and all uniform, and the publick Buildings extremely sumptuous; the chief of which are the Cathedral Church, the Royal Palace, and that of the Marquis de Velle of the Cortesian Family; besides a great number of Colleges, Monasteries, and Hospitals, a fair Printing-House, and a most admirable Aqueduct, three Miles long: However, this great City is destitute of Gates, Walls, Trenches, Fortifications, and Pieces of Ordinance: And it has often suffer'd much damage by the overflowing of the adjacent Lake, more especially on September 21. 1629, when 40000 Inhabitants were destroy'd: But it is now well repair'd, and sufficiently secur'd against such Inundations, by the means of vast Ramparts of Earth; and the Waters of the Lake are somewhat abated, ever since their Course, not without prodigious Expences and Labour, has been turn'd another way; so as to discharge themselves between the Mountains: Leaving only long Causeways to the Town, viz. one on the West, another on the North, and the third, which is the longest, on the South; as we are inform'd by Thomas Gage an English-man, who travell'd through those Parts. The City of Mexico was first dignify'd with an Episcopal See, by Pope Clement VII. in 1527, and afterwards rais'd to a Metropolitan by Paul III. in 1547. A University was erected there by the Emperor Charles V. in 1551, and farther endow'd in 1553. It is the Seat of the Vice-Roy, whom the King of Spain sends to North-ern America, of the Arch-Bishop, and of the Court of Inquisition: There also is establish'd the chief Tribunal or Supreme Court of Judicature, commonly call'd La Audiencia Real, and the Mint for the coining of Money. To conclude, it is said to be inhabited by above 4000 Spaniards and 30000 Indians; being a most famous Mart, into which the Merchandizes of America, the East-Indies, and Spain, are imported; so that it may be justly reckon'd among the finest Cities of the whole Universe: It is distant 80 Spanish Leagues Westward from the Port of Vera Cruz and the Coast of the North-Sea, as many Eastward, from Guadalajara; as also Northward from Acapulco, on the Pacifick, or South-Sea; about 500 from Santa Fé in the New Kingdom of Mexico; and 300 from Guatemala, to the North-West.

Moreover it is observable, That Ferdinand Cortez, who subdu'd the whole Country of New Spain, and took this City, dyed there in the 63 Year of his Age, Decemb. 2. 1547. The Lake on which it stands, in Spanish, La Laguna de Mexico, is twofold, twofold, or divided into two Parts, one of which contains fresh potable Water, and is full of Fish, extending itself for the space of seven Leagues in Length, six in Breadth, and twenty in Compaſs: The other Part, the Waters whereof are brackiſh and bitter, yielding great quantities of Salt, is almoſt of the ſame Extent: So that the whole Lake takes up about 49 Leagues in Compaſs: This Lake was formerly ſurrounded with 60 Cities, or well-built Towns; but now only ſix Towns, and 30 Villages are ſeated near it; ever ſince the Spaniards reduc'd the Natives to the utmoſt extremity, and ſtill continue to harraſs them. On the Eaſt of Mexico City, are the Towns of Chaco and Cacatlan.

XV. Having thus given a particular Account of the two Provinces that border upon the Pacifiſk Sea, we proceed to the reſt belonging to this Audience, which are waſh'd by the Gulph of Mexico. The moſt Northern of theſe is Panuco, ſituated in the middle, between the Country of Florida and the Provinces of Mechoacan and Mexico. It contains the following noted Towns, viz. S. Jago de los Vallas, i. e. St. James of the Valleys; Panuco, which ſome call Sant Eſtevan del Puerto, or St. Stephen of the Port, a little Town, yet the Capital of the Province, built on the South ſide of a River of the ſame Name: S. Lays, or St. Lemes, near the Sea-coaſts: Tampica: Aguacatlan: And Tilicipozapan.

XVI. Tlaſcala, otherwiſe nam'd Los Angeles, or the Province of Angels, and Guaſtacan lyes between two Seas; a large Tract of it on the Eaſt, being waſh'd by the Gulph of Mexico, and its leaſt Part, by the Pacifiſk Sea: It is bounded on the Weſt, by the Province of Mexico; and on the South, by Guaſtaca; and on its Weſtern Part, the Mountains of Tlaſcala extend themſelves for the ſpace of 18 Leagues, which are of a great height, very pleaſant, and well cultivated. The moſt conſiderable Places of this Province, are Tlaſcala, an ancient Town ſeated at the Foot of a Hill, on the little River Zahuatlá, and on the Conſines of Mexico; formerly very potent, and govern'd in form of a Common-wealth, but now much fallen to decay, ſince the Spaniards became Maſters of it; although 28 Villages ſtill depend on its Jurisdiction: Los Angeles, or La Puebla de los Angeles, the capital City, large and populous, built by the Spaniards, A. D. 1630, in a moſt fruitful Valley, on the very borders of the Province of Mexico; ſo that the Epiſcopal See of Tlaſcala was tranſlated thither in 1550, and its Grandeur ſeems daily to encreaſe: Xalipa; Segura; Mantlan; Almeria, termed alſo Villa Rica, i. e. The rich City, a little Town, on the Coaſt of the Gulph of Mexico and the Mouth of a River of the ſame Name: La Vera Cruz Vieja, i. e. The Real Croſs, ſo call'd by Ferdinand Cortez, becauſe he firſt diſcover'd it, on Holy-Croſs day, in the Year 1519, ſometime a large Town, ſeated on the Coaſt of the Bay of Mexico, with a wide Harbour, of difficult and dangerous Access: Upon which Account it was abandon'd by the greater part of the Inhabitants, who remov'd their Effects to S. Juan de Ulma, which is now often call'd Vera Cruz, and is diſtant ſix Leagues Eaſtward from the former: Its Harbour is likewiſe capacious, but not very ſafe for Ships to ride in, by reaſon of the Rocks: The Town alſo wants Walls, and the Air is unwholſome: Over againſt the ſame Harbour, and for its Defence, the Fort of S. Juan de Ulma, of a Triangular Form is built on a little Iſland, or rather a Rock, near the Continent: This Place is very conſiderable, becauſe it is the Port to Mexico. Paſſengers arriving from Europe, to go to that City, uſually landing here, and the Merchandizes are likewiſe brought aſhore here; as on the contrary, thoſe that are to be transported from Mexico to Europe, are firſt convey'd hither. The other Towns of the Province of Tlaſcala ſeated near the Pacifiſk Sea, are Pacla and Caſtla.

The Province of Guaſtaca, or Oaxaca, is no leſs XVII remarkable than the former, for its Situation be- tween the two Seas; and borders on the South, upon P.

Tlaſcala: It is extremely fertile, and was formerly dignify'd with the Title of a Marquiſate, in favour of the Family of Cortez, which is now enjoy'd by that of Pignatella. The Towns near the Coaſt of the Pacifiſk Sea, are Tuculula and Aguamilca. And on the North and Eaſt, appear Antequera frequently call'd alſo Guaſtaca, the Metropolis of the Province, built in a fruitful Valley, and erected into an Epiſcopal See, by Pope Paul III. 1535, although it is but of a ſmall Extent, and not very populous. S. Jago, or St. James; S. Iſeñojo, and Eſpiritu Santo.

The Province of Tabaſco, being the leaſt of all, XVIII lyes between Guaſtaca, on the Weſt; and Jucatan on the Eaſt; extending it ſelf fartheſt between thoſe Bounds, and for a great deal leſs ſpace, from South to North: Its Northern Coaſts are waſh'd by the Gulph of Mexico, and its chief Town is Tabaſco, or Nueſtra Señora de la Victoria: Near this Town Ferdinand Cortez obtain'd a great Victory over Motekuma II. the laſt King of Mexico, inſomuch that 30000 Indians of thoſe Parts, were killed in the Fight.

The laſt and moſt Eaſtern Province of the XIX Government of Mexico, is Jucatan, or Tucatan, lyeing in form of a Peninſula, which is made by the Gulphs of Mexico and Honduras. This Province being mountainous, abounds with Staggs, and wild Boars, and is water'd with very few Rivers; but that defect is ſupply'd by a conſiderable number of Springs. Its chief Towns are four in number, viz. Campeche, or S. Francis de Campeche; Merida, the capital City and a Biſhop's See; Valladolid; and Salamanca, a little Town, the moſt Southern of all, near the Coaſt of the Gulph of Honduras.

We are now come to the third and laſt gene- XX ral Government of New Spain, which is Guan- commonly call'd The Audience of Guatimala, and lyes out fartheſt on the Eaſt and South: It is the Iſthmus that unites North and South America, having the Bay of Honduras and the North-Sea on one ſide, and the Pacifiſk or South-Sea on the other; with Mexico on the Weſt, and Terra Fir- ma on the Eaſt: It is above 300 Leagues Long, but in ſome Parts not 40 Broad. The Country produces ſtore of Cotton, Mays, all ſorts of Grain and Fruit-Trees, and is well ſtock'd with wild and tame Beaſts, Mountains and Springs, neither is it deſtitute of Rivers.

The particular Provinces of this Audience are XXII eight in number, viz. Chiapa, Soconuſca, Proper Guatimala, Vera-Paz, Honduras, Nicaragua, Caſta Rica, Ricca, and Veragua. The first is only situated in the inland Country; the second and third are wash'd by the Pacifick Ocean, the rest by the North-Sea.

Chiapa P.

The Province of Chiapa is the most Northern of all, and borders upon those of Jucatan, Tabasco, and Guaxaca, being almost of a Triangular Figure: It abounds with all kinds of Trees, Pulse and Animals, more especially well-shap'd Horses, which surpass the rest of those that are bred in New-Spain; but the Country is infested with most venomous Serpents of a prodigious size. The principal Towns are Chiapa de los Indos, the Metropolis seated in a spacious and fruitful Valley, and made an Episcopal See by Pope Paul III. A. D. 1547, which was sometime fill'd up by Bartholomew de los Casas a Dominican, who acquir'd a great Reputation by his Writings under the Emperour Charles V. and was highly offended at the Cruelty which the Spaniards exercis'd upon the poor unarm'd Natives of America. And El Real Chiapa, or Ciudad Real, i. e. The Royal City, built likewise in a fertile Territory.

XXII.

Soconusco P.

The Province of Soconusco, lying between Chiapa and the Pacifick Sea, yields all sorts of Grain, except Wheat, and is famous for the Merchandize of Cocoa-nuts, which are here produc'd in great plenty. The Cocoa (according to Herrera's Description) is a Tree of a middle size, and the Fruit of it is like a Chestnut, but somewhat bigger: It brings forth Flowers and Fruit every Month, and thrives much better in moist Grounds than in those that are expos'd to the Sun-Beams; so that they are usually planted only in shady Places. The chief Town of this Province call'd Gueveilan is a Sea-port, but not much frequented.

XXIII.

Guatemala P.

The Province of Guatemala, being a great deal larger than the former, borders upon Soconusco, on the South-East; and extends itself farthest on the Pacifick Sea, between the Territories of the Soconusco and Nicaragua. The Air is not very healthful, by reason of the Heat and abundance of Rain, which falls in the Months of April and October. The Country is mountainous, yet produces great store of Spanish Fruit; as also Cocoa-nuts, Mayz, Cotton, and the finest Brimstone; and in the Rivers are bred Crocodiles of a prodigious bulk. The most eminent Towns of Proper Guatemala on the Coast of the Pacifick Sea are, La Trinidad, and S. Miguel: At a little farther distance from the Shore, appear Xarex, and S. Salvador, a Town of a small Compass. S. Jago de Guatemala, the Metropolis of this Province and Audience, on which it has impos'd its Name, is the most remote of all the Towns from the Coast; being seated in a very pleasant Valley, on the River Mutalaya, and near a Volcano, or burning Mountain, that often casts forth Flames. It was built A. D. 1524, and admorr'd with an University, founded by Philip IV. King of Spain, in 1628. It is also the See of a Bishop, who is Suffragan to the Archbishop of Mexico, and the Supreme Court of Judicature for the whole Country is usually kept there. From thence we pass to the rest of the Provinces of this Government, which are wash'd by the North-Sea.

XXIV.

Vera-Paz P.

The Province of Vera-Paz, i. e. Real Peace owes its Name to the Dominican Monks, because it is said to have been reduc'd to Obedience and peaceable Subjection, by the means of their Preaching: It is situated on the innermost Bay of the Gulph of Honduras, between the Territories of Chiapa, Soconusco, Guatemala and Honduras. This Province is of a great deal less Extent than Guatemala, but is water'd with many Rivers: It is more especially noted for its Lakes, Hot Baths, Medicinal Springs and high Mountains, and is very fruitful of Mayz, as also of China and Mexican Roots, Salsaparilla, and Cedar-trees: There are divers sorts of wild Beasts, particularly Lions, Tigers, Fallow Deer, Apes, Monkeys, and Serpents, besides Eagles, Parrets, and other kinds of Birds, the Feathers of which are highly esteem'd. The Weather continues rainy for a long time, and the Serenity of the Air is often disturb'd by Thunder, Lightning and impetuous Storms of Wind. The capital Town likewise nam'd Vera-Paz stands in the inland Country, on the Foot of the Mountains, near the River Dolce, and is but of a small Extent: Its Episcopal See establish'd A. D. 1556 was united to that of Guatemala in 1607.

XXV.

The Province of Honduras, i. e. The Deep, being the largest of this Audience presents itself to our View, next to Vera-Paz. It is bounded on the North, by the Northern Sea, and the Gulph to which it has communicated its Name; on the East, by the same Sea; on the South, by Nicaragua; on the South-West by Guatemala; and on the West, by Vera-Paz: Its greatest Extent from West to East, between Vera-Paz and the North Sea, takes up about 200 Leagues, but its Breadth scarce contains 100. It is beset with Mountains, and affords great plenty of Mayz and Wheat, besides Pasture for all sorts of Cattel, and Mines of Gold and Silver. The most considerable Towns of this Province, are Truzillo, or Trugillo, seated on the Gulph, with a fine Harbour, Villa de Naco, not far from the Sea-coast; S. Pedro, or St. Peter's in the inland Country; as also Gracias a Dios; S. Jago de Olancho, so nam'd by Herrera, and St. Jago de Olancho by others; and Valladolid, which the Inhabitants generally call Comayagua, a little City; yet the Metropolis of Honduras built near the Mountains, in the middle, between the Northern and Pacifick Seas: It was created into an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of S. Domingo, A. D. 1558, and is distant 100 Leagues from S. Jago de Guatemala.

XXVI.

The Province of Nicaragua, otherwise termed The New Kingdom of Leon, lies next to Honduras and Guatemala, on the South; and its Coasts are wash'd by two Seas, viz. the Northern on the East, and the Pacifick on the West. It extends itself farthest between those Seas, and is reckon'd among the largest Provinces of this Audience, or general Government. The Country produces good store of Mayz, Cocoa-nuts, Cotton, Cloth, and several kind of Cattel; but it wants Wheat and Sheep, and is water'd by few Rivers. However, some make no scruple to style it the Paradise of Mahomet, upon Account of its fruitfulness and plenty of Gold. The most noted Places and Towns of Nicaragua, are Segovia la Nueva; Realajo, on the Coast of the Pacifick Sea; La Possejon, a very convenient and safe Harbour, distant only one League from that Town; Leon, or Leon de Nicaragua, the chief City of the Province; seated feated on the Lake of Leon; in Spanish, La Laguna de Leon, which takes up 25 Leagues in Compass, and not far from a burning Mountain. This City is the See of a Prelate, who is suffragant to the Arch-bishop of Mexico, and is distant 12 Leagues Eastward from the Coast of the Pacific Ocean, and the Town of Realejo; as also 18 from Granada: This last Town stands on a spacious Lake of the same Name, otherwise call'd the Lake of Nicaragua; extending itself in length from West to East, for the space of 35 Leagues; as also 20 in Breadth from North to South, and about 90 in Compass: The Lake receives several considerable Rivers, and contains many Islands, among which six are chiefly eminent and well cultivated: At a little distance Southward from Granada appears Mount Massiya, which casts forth Flames. Lastly, the Town of Jaan is remarkable for its Situation, at the farther end of the Lake of Granada, where the River Desaguadero issues forth; which is also call'd El Rio de S. Juan, or S. John's River, by the Spaniards, who inhabit those Parts: It flows from thence Eastward, and after a Course of 30 Leagues, discharges itself with three Mouths into the North-Sea: This River is very broad, but its Passage is obstructed by three Cataracts.

XXVII. The Province of Costa Rica, or Rica, i. e. The Costa Rica Coast, borders on the South of Nicaragua, of which some will have it to constitute a Part; lying in like manner between the two Seas, so that its largest Tract is wash'd by the Pacifick, and the other by the North-Sea. It is of a lesser Extent than Nicaragua, but not inferior to that Province in Fruitfulness, affording also several Mines of Gold and Silver. Its Towns are Nicoya, on the Coast of the Pacifick Sea and the Gulph of Salinas: Aranjuez, on the same Coast, but a great deal farther towards the South-East: Castro d' Austria, in the inland Country: And Carriago, the Capital, almost in the middle of the Province.

The eighth and last Province of this Audience, XXVIII. or general Government, is Veragua, which lyes Veragua next to Costa Rica, on the East, between the Northern and Southern Seas, and on the Borders of Terra Firma, a Province of Southern America: It was dignify'd with the Title of a Dukedom in favour of the Family of Colon, or Columbus, and contains the following Towns, viz. Parita, with a convenient Harbour on the Coast of the Pacifick Sea, to which the adjacent Gulph owes its Name: Carlor, on the same Coast: Santa Fe, in the inland Country: La Trinidad, near the North Sea: And not far from thence, La Concepcion, a little Town, but the Capital of the whole Province.

C H A P. VIII.

The Antilles Islands, viz. Cuba, Jamaica, Hispaniola, Porto Rico, and the Caribbee Islands, as Barbados, Nevis, Antego, St. Christophers, &c.

Consult the Map of Terra Firma.

I. Antilles Islands.

AFTER having made a distinct Description of the several Parts of the Continent of Northern America, together with some of the principal Islands that lye over against them; it is requisite in like manner to describe the sixth and last Part of the same America, that is to say, the Islands of the Archipelago of Mexico. They are all in general call'd by divers Geographers Antilla, q. d. Ante Insula, i. e. The Fore-Islands, by reason of their Situation before the Gulph of Mexico, and in regard that they first come in sight to those that sail from Europe, or Africa, before the Coasts of New Spain: Others only understand by that Name, the four greater Islands, viz. Cuba, Jamaica, Hispaniola, and Porto Rico; to which some add the Caribbee-Isles. But we shall here take the Term Antilles in its largest Signification, comprehending all the Islands which appear between Florida, a Part of Northern America, on the North; and Terra Firma, a Province of Southern America, on the South.

II. The Antilles may be conveniently divided into the Lucayas, the Great Antilles, the Caribbees, and the Sotovenito-Isles. The Lucayos-Isles, or Bahama Islands, lye in the middle, between the Eastern Coasts of the Province of Te- gesta, or Proper Florida, and the Northern Coast of Hispaniola; that is to say, between the 295 and 305 Degr. of Longitude, and the 21 and 28 Degr. of Northern Latitude. They are said to have the Advantage of a more temperate Air, than the rest of the Antilles, abounding with Mayz, several sorts of Fruit and Fowl, among which there are numerous Flocks of Pigeons and Doves. Brisfochius assures us, that the chief of these Islands on the North, are inhabited by the English; but since no mention is made of any Colonies in the newest Relations, several Authors are of Opinion, that they are under the Government of their own Princes, and that there are no Plantations belonging either to the English, or Spaniards, although both these Nations have often made Descents upon them.

III. The Lucayos-Isles are many in number, so that it is sufficient only to give an Account of the chief of them. The following Islands reach from the Tropic of Cancer Northward, viz. Bahama, to which the adjacent rapid and formidable Straight call'd Il Canal de Bahama by the Spaniards, owes its Name; Lucayonequa, the most Northern and most eminent of those Isles; Bimini, which is surrounded by the Quicklands; as also Abacoa; Ciguacae;

Ciguateo; Guarao; Curateo, from whence a very large Sand-bank extends itself on the West and South; Jama; Cotoniera; Guanabani, with a capacious and safe Harbour, which was discover'd first of all the Parts of the New World, on Thursday Octob. 11. 1492, by Christopher Colon, or Columbus, who gave it the Name of S. Salvador; in Honour of our Saviour, by whose Divine Providence he escap'd Death, to which the Spaniards design'd to put him, unless some Land, or Coast were descri'd that very day, Guanima, a long Island, reaching 12 Leagues from North to South, which the same Columbus found out, and call'd Santa Maria de la Concepcion; Triangula so nam'd from its Figure; and Samana. Yucuetá lyes under the Tropic of Cancer, and the rest of these Islands are extended Southward from the same Tropic, viz. Majahana; Caidá; Auriana; Linaga; Hnagua; and Tortuga, a little Island call'd La Tortue by the French, who have been Masters of it for some Years: It takes up 7 Leagues in Length from East to West, and about 4 in Breadth from North to South; being scarce distant 8 Miles from the Northern Coast of Hispaniola, and only 35 Spanish Leagues from the Eastern Part of Cuba: This Island is mountainous; but has a convenient Harbour and a little Town, which stands on an Hill, and is defended by Doggon-Fort, so call'd from Bertrand Dogberon who built it; and first planted the French Colonies in Hispaniola.

IV. From the Lucayos-Isles, we pass to the great Antilles, to which A. Costa thinks fit to appropriate that Name, excluding all the rest: They are four in number, viz. Cuba, Jamaica, Hispaniola and Porto Rico, which with the neighbouring Islands, M. Sanfon supposes to have been the Hesperides of the Ancients.

Cuba Isle. CUBA formerly nam'd Ferdinanda, by Columbus, the first Discoverer of it, is the most Northern and Western of the four Islands but now mention'd, the largest of all the Antilles, and one of the chief that belong to the whole Continent of America; the Coast of its Western Part lyes out but a little Southward from the Tropic of Cancer. It is distant 18 Leagues Westward from Hispaniola, and 20 Northward from Jamaica; extending itself to the Space of 220 Spanish Leagues from East to West; but its Breadth, where it is widest, scarce takes up 35 Leagues, and only 13 in its narrowest Extent. This Island is beset with Mountains, one of which yields a kind of Blimen, or Pitch, that is of singular use in the calking of Ships. There are also many Woods, and several Rivers with Golden Sands, besides great quantities of Madder for Dyers, and Ox-hides. The Country breeds Serpents of a prodigious size, but free from Poison, and certain Stone-Balls, which Nature makes so round, that it cannot be exceeded by Art. The Island of Cuba has continu'd in the Possession of the Spaniards, ever since the Year 1510, when it was first subdu'd by Diego Velasquez, and its Metropolis is Havana, or S. Christoval de Havana, a most strongly fortify'd Mart-Town, with the most renowned and most capacious Harbour of all Northern America, on the North-Coast; where the Royal Fleet is usually fitted out, and continues in that Station till the Season of the Year, and the favourable Winds seem to promise a prosperous passage to Spain. This City is also the Seat of the Governour, and the whole Island is often call'd Havana from its Name. Santa Cruz is seated somewhat more Eastward; as also Porto del Principe, a great deal farther; Espiritu Santo, on the Southern Coast; Mancanilla, on the innermost Bay of the Gulph; and S. Jago de Cuba on the Eastern Part of the Southern Coast; formerly the Capital Town, but now almost reduc'd to a Village; nevertheless it still retains its Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of S. Domingo, and has the advantage of a Fort, with a very large Harbour.

The Island of JAMAICA, being a great deal less than the former, was first discover'd by Christopher Columbus, the Genoise, in his second Voyage to America, and by him call'd St. Jago, or S. James's Isle; where he was in great danger of losing his Life, for want of Provisions, and procur'd a timely Relief for himself and Company, by an accurate Prediction of an approaching Eclipse of the Moon. Thus the Spaniards became Masters of it, and retain'd it in their Possession; till they were expell'd by the English, under the Conduct of Col. Venables and Penn, in the time of O. Cromwell's Usurpation, A. D. 1654. This Island is situated between the 17 and 18 Degr. of Northern Latitude, and is distant about 20 Spanish Leagues Southward from Cuba; as also 35 Westward from Cariacena, on the Continent of Southern America. It takes up 170 English Miles in Length from East to West, about 70 in its greatest Breadth, from North to South, and 350 in Compass. Its Shape comes near to an Oval Figure, lyeing out fittest in the middle and growing narrower by Degrees, at both ends. A continual Ridge of lofty Mountains runs quite through the Heart of the inland Country, from East to West: They rise up on all sides with a gentle Ascent, and abound with Springs, that give rise to the great number of Rivers, with which the whole Island is so plentifully water'd.

The Air is very serene and calm, and more temperate than in many of the neighbouring Isles: the Heat being much qualify'd by fresh Breezes, which continually blow Eastwardly, frequent Showers of Rain, and great Dew that fall in the night and extremely promote the growth of Plants: Neither do those destructive Hurricanes and Earthquakes happen here, with which the rest of the Cimbees, and other Places are so often infested. Upon which Account, the late terrible Earth-quake in 1692, may well be look'd upon by the Inhabitants, as a special Judgment of God, drawn upon them by their great Sins. It is observable, that the Western and Eastern Parts are most subject to Winds and Rain; the thick Woods making the Air less agreeable, than in the Northern and Southern Territories, which are more Champion and open. The mountainous Tracts are a great deal cooler, and small Hear-Frosts are often seen there in the Morning. The most remarkable wet Seasons are in November, or May, and the Winter can scarce be perceiv'd, but by a little more Rain and Thunder than is usual in the Summer. The Winds constantly blow blow from the Eastern Quarter, all the Day, from nine a Clock in the Morning, and become more fresh, as the Sun rises higher; by which means hard Labour is render'd tolerable, even at Noon: But from eight at Night to the same Hour in the Morning, the Western Winds are often predominant; and by the help of those gentle Gales or Breezes, the Vessels get out of the Harbours. The Days and Nights are almost always of an equal length, without any sensible Increase, or Diminution.

The Soil in most Parts, especially the Northern, is rich and fat, consisting of a blackish Mould; in many places it is intermix'd with a kind of Clay; and in the Southern and Western Tracts, it partakes of a more reddish and loose Earth. But it is every where wonderfully fruitful, being often refresh'd with moderate Showers of Rain and fattening Dew; so that the Country enjoys a continual Spring, and is extremely delightful, in regard that the Trees and Plants are never disrob'd of their Summer-Livery. The Forests afford great variety of useful Woods, both for Dyers and Artificers, as Brasiletto, Cedar, Fustick, Red-wood, Lignum Vita, Mithogeny, Ebony, Granadilla, &c. of which great quantities are Exported, and much Advantage made of them. The Ground likewise by labour in Tillage, brings forth great store of Corn, Tobacco, Peas, Beans, Collyflowers, Cabbages, and all sorts of Garden-herbs, Pot-herbs and Roots, as Parsley, Lettice, Purslain, Lavender, Rosemary, Sage, Sweet-Marioran, Savoury, Time, Potatoes, Radishes, Carrets, Turneps, &c. It also produces plenty of choice Fruits, as Avocatas, Cocao-Nuts, Alumee-Sypota's, Cucumbers, Bonames, Custard-Apples, Cashnes, Grapes, Greavars, Limes, Mainmees, Oranges, Phaintains, Prickle-Apples, Prickle-Pears, Pines, Pomegranates, Sower-Sops, Suppottillia's, &c.

There are many delightful Savana's, diversify'd with Hills and Woods, which formerly were Fields of Mayz, or Indian Corn, and were converted into Pasture by the Spaniards. These Plains, altho' otherwise barren, as being left so long untill'd, yield abundance of luxuriant Grass, for the feeding of numerous Herds of Cattel, as Horses, Cows, Afnegroes, Mules, Goats, Sheep, and Hoggs both wild and tame, whose Flesh is far more agreeable to the Palate, more nourishing, and of easier Digestion, than those of England; upon that account it is much eaten in this Island, and even throughout all the American Plantations. Among the noxious Animals, which are very few, the most remarkable are, the Manchonel, a sort of Crab, common in all the Caribbee Isles, and the Alligator, a kind of Crocodile: The latter are extremely voracious, and some of them are ten, fifteen, or twenty Foot long, having four Feet, or Fins, with which they go, or swim: Their Backs are scaly and impenetrable, and they are hardly to be kill'd, unless wounded in the Belly, or Eye: They are very swift in running forwards, and as slow in turning; so that they may be easily avoided, and may likewise be discover'd by the smell of their Musk-cods, which are stronger scented, than those of the East-Indies: They are observ'd to make no manner of Noise, but usually lye on the Banks of Rivets, resembling a dry Log of Wood, or dead Carcass, and suddenly seize on any Beast or Fowl that comes to drink; these Creatures lay their Eggs in the Sand, of the bigness of a Turkey's, and carefully cover them; afterwards the Young ones are hatch'd by the heat of the Sun, and naturally creep into the Water. However, an Ointment made of their Fat, is said to be an efficacious Remedy, for any internal Aches in the Joints, or Bones. There are also Snakes and Gnina's, but they do little hurt; besides, Musketoos, and Merry-wings, a sort of stinging Flies that are very troublesome in some Parts of the Isle, but seldom annoy the English Plantations.

The Sea-coasts and Inland Tracts, are frequented by innumerable Flocks of Wild Fowl; as Geese, Ducks, Turkeys, Guinea Hens, Teals, Plovers, Widgeons, Snipes, Flemmings, Parrets, Parroquetto's, &c. To which the tame Fowls, as Hens, Turkeys, Geese, and Ducks, Pigeons and Turtle-doves, are not much inferior: The Rivers, Brooks, Bays and Creeks, afford great store of admirable Fish, and especially such as are peculiar to the West-Indies; the chief of which are Tortoises, taken in great quantities on the Coast, as also about 20 or 30 Leagues to the Leeward of Port Negril, by the Canavos Isles; where many Vessels resort in the Months of May, June and July, to be load'd with this Fish, which is reckon'd among the most wholesome and best Provisions of these Parts; for the Commodities of this Island, the chief and most beneficial are Cocao-Nuts and Chocolate, by reason of the aptness of the Soil to bring forth that sort of Fruit, above other Places: Infomuch that above 100 Cocao Walks are already completed, besides abundance of young Walks that are growing up, and fill more a planting. The other considerable Productions, are Sugars, so good that they out-sell those of Barbadoes Five Shillings per Cent. Indico; Cotton of an extraordinary Fineness; Tobacco; Hides; Salt; Tortois-shells; which are us'd in England for several curious Works; Cochineal, Ginger, Cod-peper; and Jamaica Pepper, that has the Taste of divers Spices, and grows here plentifully, even Wild on the Mountains. To these Commodities may be added an admirable variety of Physical Drugs; Gums, Roots, and Balsams, as Acacia, Achitts; Aloes, Benjamin, Cassia, Contrayerna, Cyperus, China-Root, Fijula, Guaiacum, Sarsaparilla, Sumach, Tamarinds, Vinello's, and several others; the Virtues and Names of which are not yet known.

The Indians or Original Natives of Jamaica, were utterly destroy'd by the Spaniards, to the number of above 60000; and as for the English, who are the present Inhabitants, they are govern'd by Laws, made as consonant to those of England, as the different Circumstances of the Places will admit: They have their several Courts, Magistrates, and Officers, for putting these Laws in Execution; hearing and determining all Causes and Controversies between adverse Parties, &c. Divine Service in their Parish-Churches, which are Fourteen in Number, is perform'd according to the Form and Ceremonies of the present establish'd Church of England, and under the Jurisdiction of the Bishop of London. The whole Island is divided into Fourteen Precincts; or Parishes, viz. St. Elizabeth's Elizabeth's, Clarendon, St. Catherine's, St. John's, Port-Royal, St. Andrew's, St. David's, St. Thomas's, St. James's, St. Ann's, St. Mary's, St. George's; and two Precincts, that have not as yet any particular Names, but both border upon St. Elizabeth's, one Northwards and the other Eastwards. All these Precincts (according to an Account taken by Sir Thomas Madsford, the third Governour of this Isle, and set down by M. Blome,) contain'd 17298 Inhabitants; besides 3000 lusty Mariners and Boat-men belonging to the Island, who have signaliz'd their Valour in their late Attempt upon the Spaniards at Panama: But this Number has been extremely encreas'd since that time, and may well be suppos'd at present, to be above thrice as great as it was under the Regency of the aforesaid Governour.

English Towns.

The Island of Jamaica, as yet has but few noted Towns; the chief of which are, the Spanish Town nam'd S. JAGO de la Vega, i. e. St. James of the Plain, seated in a Champain Territory, on the Copper-River, at the distance of 6 Miles Westward from the Harbour, and 10 on the North-West, from the Town of Port-Royal. When the Spaniards were in possession of it, 'twas a large and noted City, and is still the Capital of the Island; containing about 4000 fair and convenient Houses, with two Churches. It is very well fill'd with Inhabitants, as being the Governour's Seat, and the place where all the Courts of Judicature are held: It is also more especially remarkable for its Havana, where the better sort of Citizens usually divert themselves every Evening in their Coaches, or on Horseback, as the Gentry do here in High-Park. Port-Royal, formerly nam'd Cagway, a large and populous Town, built on the end of a Point of Land that lies out near ten Miles from the Shore, towards the South-West, and makes the Harbour exceeding safe and commodious; it is also secur'd by a strong Castle, on which above 60 Pieces of Ordinance are well mounted. The Copper River that waters Los Angeles and St. Jago, empties it self into this Harbour, which is about three Miles broad in most Places, and so deep, that before the late Earth-quake, a Ship of 1000 Tun might have laid her Side to the Shore, so as to load and unload at pleasure. The Town is a famous Mart, and the Seat of all the Trade in the Isle; being inhabited upon that account, by Merchants, Factors, Vintners and Victuallers, and frequented by Traders of all sorts. It contain'd about 800 Houses; which for the most part, are Let at as high Rents, as if they stood in well-traded Streets in London; altho' its Situation is very inconvenient and unpleasant; for there is an absolute want of Wood, fresh Water, and even Earth, the Soil consisting only of a hot loose Sand. The Earth-quake, and following inundation of the Sea, which happen'd here July 7. 1692, was but of a very short continuance, yet so violent, that it not only ruin'd this Place, but also extremely indamag'd the greatest part of the Island. Passage, so call'd, because it is the common Thoroughfare to St. Jago, and other adjacent Plantations; a Town not very large, but of Note for Storage, and conveniences for Passengers into the Country: It stands near the Mouth of the River, six Miles distant from St. Jago, and four from Port-

Royal; and is defended by a considerable Fort. St. Mary's, a considerable Town seated in the Northern Part of the Isle, on New-Port Bay; formerly call'd Porto Maria, by the Spaniards. And St. Margaret's Town, farther Eastward, on Rio Grande River.

Besides these Towns, the Spaniards, during their Spanish Towns abode in the Isle, built several others, which are now almost reduc'd to Ruins: The most remarkable among them, were Los Angeles, or The Angel's-Town, on the Copper River, about 5 Miles Northward from St. Jago: Sevilla, or Sevilla del Oro, situated on the Northern Coast, and once adorn'd with a Collegiate Church, of which Peter Martyr was some time Abbot, who wrote the History of the West-Indies in Decades. Melilla, farther Eastward, near which the Spaniards had their first Settlement, and where Columbus refitted his Vessels that were very much shatter'd by a Storm at Veragua: And Oriflan, on the Southern Coast, over against which lye many Rocks and Shelves, with some Isles; as, Bivoras; Serravilla, or Serranilla; Quiofvena; and Serrana: In the last of these little Islands, Augustin Peter Serrana, having lost his Ship, continu'd in a solitary and disconsolate condition for the space of three Years; and at the end of that Term, had the Company of a Mariner for four Years more, who was likewise shipwreck'd there, and only found means to save himself. Moreover, there are many other Villages in Jamaica, well-stor'd with plenty of all necessary Provisions, in which the English dwell in great Numbers, and enjoy their rich and large Plantations.

The principal Mountains and Hills of this Island, are the Long Blue Mountains; those of Negril, Caparito Hills, Bread-nut Hills, La Montes de Santa Cruz, the Pearl Hills, May-day Hills, Montes dos Hevevas, Portland Hills, the Sand-hills, &c. As for the Rivers, none of them are fair, or navigable, far up the Country; yet the Seacoasts abounds with commodious Bays, Roads and Harbours: Among these the chief are, Port-Royal, or Cagway Harbour, of which we have already given a particular Description: Old Harbour, a convenient Port for Shipping, on the West of St. Jago; formerly the only Road the Spanish Vessels rid in, and the Landing-place to the Town: Port Morant, now call'd Port Thomas, near the Eastern Point of the Isle; a very capacious and safe Harbour, about which the English have numerous Plantations: Negril-Harbour, at the farthest Western Point, a large and secure Port, where Men of War frequently ride, when they look out for the Spanish Ships: And Port Antonio, now known by the Name of St. George's Port, on the North-East; a very safe Land-lock'd Harbour, altho' its Entrance is somewhat difficult, the Channel being made narrow, by a little Island that lyes before the Mouth of this Port. The other considerable Havens, Bays and Roads, situated on the Southern Part of the Isle, as they appear from West to East, are White Bay; Blewfield's Bay; Banister's Bay; Hudson's Harbour; Black-River Bay; Starve-gut Bay; Frenchman's Bay; Devil's Hole; Alligator-Pond; Coquer-Plum Bay; Maccary Bay; Michael's Hole; Taylor's Bay; Bull Bay; Cow Bay; Tallagh Bay; Fisherman's Bay; Craw Bay; Sedge Bay; Mangrove Bay, &c. On the North, are Orange Bay; Anisquito Hole; pear the Towns of Sybo, or Zeybo; and Hguel.

Hole; Lucia Harbour; Cove Harbour; Mantica Bay; Long Bay; Belifs Bay; Mannatee Bay; Island Bay; Platform Bay; Dry Harbour; Whifan's Bay; S. Ann's Harbour; Drax's Bay; Rio Nuevo, where the Spaniards fortify'd themselves in order to recover the Island; Charles Bay; Fig-tree Bay; Buff Bay; Drivers Bay; Plum-tree Bay; Cold Harbour; Han's Cove and Hobby's Cove. On the East, are Long Bay; Little Bay; Sandy Bay; Bassnet's Cove; Hobby Hole; Manchester's Harbour; Governor-Savanna Bay, and Plantain-Cully.

The fourth and last of the great Antilles is the VIII. Island of Porto Ricco, otherwise ty'd La Isla de Porto Rico San Juan de Puerto Rico, and Boriquem, or Borico I. quen by the Inhabitants, being the most Eastern of all, situated in the middle between Hispaniola, on the West, and the Caribbee-Isles on the East. Its length from East to West, takes up 35 Spanish Leagues, and its breadth about 16. The Weather is often rainy; and in the end of Summer, those most tempestuous Winds commonly call'd Hurricanes, are predominant, especially at the New Moon. The Country is beset with Mountains, yet remarkable for its Fruitfulness; affording great plenty of Furrs, Sugar and excellent Ginger, besides Gold and several other sorts of Metal. This Island was first discover'd by the Spaniards, A. D. 1493, who sent a Colony thither in 1510, and still retain it in their Possession: Its chief Towns are, S. German, on the Western Coast; and Puerto Ricco, or S. Juan de Puerto Ricco, on the Northern: The latter being the Metropolis of the Island, to which it has communicated its Name, and a Bishop's See, is fortify'd with two Castles, and has a very capacious Harbour.

VI. Hispaniola I. HISPANIOLA, call'd Espanola, Spagnuola, and S. Domingo by the Spaniards, as also La Isla de San Domingo, lies in the middle between Jamaica and Cuba, on the West (being separated from the latter by a narrow Straight, but from the other by a great deal wider Channel,) and the Island of Porto Ricco, on the East. It is almost of the same Extent and Figure with Cuba, but not altogether so long; taking up 130 Spanish Leagues in length from East to West, 60 in breadth, and 350 in compass. The inland Country is Mountainous, yet very fertile and pleasant, producing all kinds of Fruit-trees that thrive in the Climate of Spain, with great store of Sugar, Cassia, Mastick, Lignum Aloes, Cinnamon, and the best Ginger: It also abounds with Gold, Silver, and several sorts of Minerals, more especially of a blue Colour; and the Herds of Cattel are so numerous, that vast quantities of Skins are transported every Year to Spain. This Island was first discover'd by Christopher Columbus, A. D. 1492, and has for a long time continu'd in the sole possession of the Spaniards, who still retain the Eastern and Southern Tracts under their Jurisdiction; but the French have made themselves Masters of its greater Part, on the West and North: So that the following Colonies belong to the latter, viz. La petite Anse, i. e. The little Bay; Le Cap, or the Promontory; Les trois Rivières, or The three Rivers; Leogane; Le grand Gonave; Le petit Gonave; Nipe; and La grand Anse, or The great Bay; altho' these Colonies are not delineated in the common Maps, except Gonave, a little Town on the Western Bay. The chief Towns of the Spanish Territories, are S. Jago, not far from the Northern Coast; La Concepcion de la Vega; and S. Domingo, seated on the Southern Shore at the Mouth of the River Ozam, with a commodious Harbour, and a Castle built by Bartholomew, the Brother of Christopher Columbus, A. D. 1494; it is the most eminent of all the Towns that are possess'd by the Spaniards, and has impos'd its Name on the whole Island: It is dignify'd with the Residence of an Archbishop and University, and the Court of the principal Governour, whose Authority is not only supreme in this Island, but likewise throughout all the other Antilles, that are subject to the King of Spain: Here also is kept the highest and most ancient Court of Judicature of America, commonly call'd La Audiencia Real, the Jurisdiction of which extends to the Antilles, Florida, and Part of Terra Firma in Southern America. This City had its Metropolitan See establish'd by Pope Paul III. A. D. 1547, and was taken by the English under the Conduct of Sir Francis Drake, in 1586. Farther on the East, ap-

The Caribbee, or Caribal Islands, are so nam'd VIII. from certain savage People feeding on Man's Caribbee Flesh, by whom they were formerly inhabited. Isles. Some will have all those Isles comprehended under this Name, which are situated between the Eastern Tract of the Island of Porto Ricco, and those of New Andalusia, and Venezuela, two particular Governments of Terra Firma. But many take them in a stricter sense, and only appropriate the Term of Caribbees, to those Islands which are extended from the Eastern Coast of Porto Ricco Isle, in form of a Bow, as far as the Government of New Andalusia; being the most Eastern of all the Antilles, and lying between the 10 and 19 Degr. of Northern Latitude; which are also termed, The Proper Antilles, and by the Spaniards, Las Islas de Barbovento, i. e. The Islands by the Wind. They are more especially fruitful of Sugar and Tobacco; besides Cassia, Cotton, Indico, several sorts of Fruits and Roots, and now depend for the most part, on the Jurisdiction of the English, French and Hollanders.

The chief of these Islands, in which the English IX. have settl'd any considerable Plantations, are Anguilla, S. Christophers, Nevis, Montserrat, Dominica, Barbuda, Antego, Barbadoes, S. Vincents, and Tobago.

ANGUILLA, or Snake-Island, the most Anguilla. Northern of the Caribbees, that are possess'd by the English, is so nam'd from its Shape, which resembles that of a Snake; for it is ten Leagues long, and but three wide: It lies in the 18th Degr. 21 Min. of Northern Latitude, at the distance of about 9 Miles Northward from S. Martin, and 40 from S. Christophers.

The English are still Masters of this Island, and raise much Tobacco there, which is highly esteem'd by the Judicious in the Art of Smocking. There is also great plenty of Horses, Kine, Oxen, Sheep, Sheep, Goats, and some Hogs; but they were put on the Place by Sailors, since its Discovery, and have extremely encreas'd; for it does not naturally breed any such Creatures. However, there were some Animals of a very strange Nature: As, 1. The Opassum, about the bigness of a Cat, having a Bag, or Purse under the Belly, which it can open and shut at pleasure: So that these Creatures are us'd to carry their Young Ones in this Bag, and the Male and Female perform that Office by Turns. 2. The Agouty, a little Beast, much resembling a Rabbit in Shape and Size; having but two Teeth in each Jaw, and feeding itself like a Squirrel: But they are fierce, and when angry, stanp with their Hind-feet, and set their Hair perfectly upright. 3. Musk-rats, that live in Burroughs, like Rabbits, and have a Scent like Musk; by which means they are easily discover'd, but their Smell is said to cause Melancholy. 4. The Tatons, a Beast as big as a Fox, and cover'd with Scales, like Armour: It can wrap itself up so artificially in them, as to be secur'd from all the attempts of the Huntsmen, or Dogs, and can roll itself down a Precipice, like a Bowl, without Harm. 5. The Favaris, a sort of Swine, with the Navel on the Back, good Meat, but hardly taken; because it is almost indefatigable in running, and so furious, that when 'tis forc'd, it tears every Thing to pieces with its Tusks. 6. The Alligator, or Crocodile, that keeps both in the Water and on the Land: These monstrous Creatures grow as long as they live, and are sometimes 18 Foot long, and as big as an Hoghead: They only move their upper Jaw, but can open it so wide, as to swallow a Man: They smell like Musk, so strongly, that the Air is scented for 100 Paces about them, and the Water in which they lye: Their Bulk is like that of a huge Tree, or Log of Wood, and they know, how to counterfeit it so well, that both Men and Beasts are often deceiv'd by them, and devour'd, when they suspect no Danger.

X. S. CHRISTOPHERS, which owes its Name to
S. Christopher Columbus, its first Discoverer, is situated in the 17th Degr. 25 Min. of Northern Latitude, and takes up about 75 Miles in compass. The English and French took possession of this Island, at the same time, A. D. 1625, and divided it by Agreement, into two equal Parts, that is to say, into four Cantons, or Quarters; two of which are possess'd by the former, and the other two by the latter: So that to prevent difference, both Parties keep continual Guard upon the Avenues of their respective Divisions or Territories.

The Air is sufficiently pleasant and agreeable; and the Soil being light and sandy, is apt to produce all sorts of Fruits, Provisions and Commodities natural to these Countries; as Sugar, Tobacco, Cotton, Ginger, &c. The Land lyes high and mountainous, especially in the middle of the Isle; insomuch that the Rivers, which have their Source in the Mountains and the Torrents, caus'd by impetuous Storms of Rain, often overflow the lower Grounds. There are also steep Rocks, dreadful Precipices, Springs of hot sulphureous Water, and thick Woods, that render those Parts almost unpassable; altho' the Ascents are divided into several Stages, or Stories, in which are some spacious Ways. However, the whole Island is extremely delightful, and yields a very fine prospect of curious Gardens, and numerous Plantations, bounded by rows of Trees, always in their Verdure, and adorn'd with fair Houles, cover'd with glazed Slate; all gently descending towards the Sea-shore: So that the lowest Stage does not hinder the Beholder's Eye from taking a clear view of those that are situated at a greater distance, and terminated by the utmost height of the Mountains. Near the Sea-coast, is a Salt-pit nam'd Cul de Sac, and not far from thence a narrow Isthmus, or Neck of Land, extending itself within a Mile and half of the adjacent Isle of Nievis.

As for the Living-creatures bred in this Island, some of them are very remarkable and wonderful, viz. 1. The Rocker, a four-footed Beast, having its Skin of the Colour of a faded Leaf, marked with yellow or blewish Spots; they leap up and down perpetually, and take great delight in looking upon Men. 2. The Orinoco-Eagle, a Bird in shape much like the common Eagle, but its Feathers are curiously diversify'd with black Spots, and the ends of the Wings and Tail yellow: This Bird lives upon Prey, but shews so much Generosity, that he never sets upon the weaker sort of Fowl, but such as have crooked Beaks and sharp Talons like himself, and that never but in the Air. 3. The Crane Fowl, about the bigness of a large Duck, cover'd with Feathers, very hideous to the Eye, and having under the Neck a Bag, capable of holding two Gallons of Water: They live by Fishing, and can discern a Fish above a Fathom under Water. 4. The Pintadoe, a kind of Pheasant, adorn'd with that variety of Colours, as if they were most artificially painted. 5. The Colibus, or Humming-Bird, so call'd, because in its Flight it makes a Noise like a Whirl-wind, tho' 'tis no bigger than a large Flye: It feeds on Dew; the Colours of its Feathers are admirable, and the Smell is as Odoriferous, as Musk, or Amber.

The Natives are either utterly destroy'd, or have made their escape out of the Island. The French, besides several Habitations dispersed up and down their Quarters, have a Town of a considerable Extent, nam'd Basse Terre, built of Brick and Free-stone near the Harbour, and well inhabited by Merchants, Trades-men, &c. It is defended by four strong Forts, and adorn'd with a large Church, a fair Hospital, a Town-House, in which the Courts of Judicature are held, and a stately Castle: This Castle is more especially remarkable for the Governour's Residence; as also, for its pleasant situation on the foot of a high Mountain, at a little distance from the the Sea-coast; its spacious Courts, fine Gardens, delightful Walks, &c.

The English are more numerous than the French, and have three good Towns, five Churches and two Forts, at Sandy Point, Palm-tree and Cayonne, with many elegant Structures. Their Territories are much better water'd than those of the French; but the latter are more fit for Tillage, Ecclesiastical and Civil Affairs are manag'd according to the different Constitutions of the two Nations to which they belong.

NIEVIS, i. e. The Snow-Isle, now call'd NEVIS, or MEVIS, lyes at a little distance South-wards wards from S. Christopher's, in the 17 Degr. 19 Min. of Northern Latitude. It is but of a small Extent, and does not take up above 18 Miles in compass. The English settled themselves there in the Year 1623, and are still possess'd of it; driving a very good Trade, by exchange of the natural Productions of the Island, for such Commodities as they have occasion for.

The Air is very temperate, and its Heat is alway'd by the constant Breezes; neither is any Ice to be seen there at any time. The Soil is indifferent fruitful of Sugar, Cotton, Ginger, Tobacco, &c. There are several Hills and Mountains, especially one in the middle of the Isle of a great Height, but easie Access, beset with Trees from top to bottom; besides, Woods replenish'd with store of Deer and other sorts of Wild Beasts. There are also divers Springs of fresh Water, and one of hot Mineral Waters, of which the Inhabitants have made several Baths, by Experience found useful in curing of many Distempers.

This Island as the rest of the Caribbees, is infested by Muscheetoes, Chigo's, Murigoins, and other stinging Flies and Lizards; but it breeds some strange and wonderful Creatures, viz. The Anolis, about the bigness of a Lizard and of a yellowish Skin: In the Day-time it is continually prouling about the Cottages for Food, and in the Night lyes under Ground, making a great Noise. 2. A Land-Pike, which is like the Fish of the same Name, but has Leggs instead of Fins, with which it crawls very odly upon the Ground: These Creatures lurk about the Rocks, and are seldom seen but towards Night, when they make a noise more sharp and grating than Toads. 3. The Snail, call'd A Soldier, which having no Shell of its own, harbours in that of the Periwinkle; they have a Foot like a Crab's Claw. 4. A monstrous Spider with ten Feet, which have every one four Joints, and are horny at the ends; these Feet when they crawl, are spread as wide as a Man's Hand: She has also two solid sharp black Tushes, big enough for a Tooth-picker, and often apply'd to that use: These Creatures prey upon Flies and other Vermin of the like nature; and their Webs are so strong, that a little Bird can scarce break thro' them. 5. The Palm-Worm, remarkable for its infinite number of Feet, and two Claws at Head and Tail, with which it wounds and poisons Men; putting them to very great pain for 24 hours. This Insect is half a Foot long, and extremely swift in its Motion. 6. The Fly-catcher, a little Animal with four Leggs, and naturally of a great variety of Colours; but seems to convert itself (like the Chameleon) into the colour of any thing it approaches; for about a Palm-tree 'tis green, and about Orange-trees yellow: It does no mischief, but clears all places of Flies, and such kind of Vermin: These Creatures are very tame and familiar, and come upon the Tables to pursue their Game. 7. The Horn-fly, which has two Snouts like an Elephant, painted all over by Nature, with an admirable diversity of Colours. 8. The Flying-Tiger, spotted like the Land-Tiger, having six Wings and as many Leggs: It feeds on Flies and other small Insects, and spends the Night in singing upon a Tree.

Of all the Caribbee-Islands; none is so well govern'd as this; Justice being administer'd with great impartiality, and all Debaucheries and Immoralities severely punish'd, by a Council of the most eminent and ancient Inhabitants. It contains three Churches for the celebration of Divine Service, and is defended by a Fort, on which are mounted several Pieces of Ordinance, that command at a great distance, for the security of Ships in the Road, or Harbour, commonly call'd Bath-Bay; where all sorts of Commodities imported for the use of the Inhabitants, are laid up in the Publick Store-houfe, to be distributed to them as occasion may require.

MONTERRAT, is an Island of a small Extent, being not above 10 Miles long, and 9 Montfer-wide, distant about 8 Leagues Northward from Guadalupe, and lying in the 17th Degree of Northern Latitude: It was so call'd by the Spaniards, the first Discoverers from one of its Mountains, which they imagin'd to resemble that of Monterrat, near Barcelona in Spain. And indeed, the whole Island is very Mountainous; but these Hills produce abundance of Cedar, and many other useful sorts of Trees. The Valleys and Plains are likewise exceeding pleasant and fertile: It is chiefly inhabited by the Irish, intermix'd with some English, and has the advantage of a very fair Church, adorn'd with curious Seats, fram'd by great Art out of the most precious Sweet-scented Woods.

About this Island several strange Creatures are found in the Sea, viz. 1. The Flying-Fish, which have Wings like Bats, and sometimes to avoid being made a Prey by the greater Fish, fly 20 Foot above Water, 100 Faces in length, and then fall again into the Sea: They are like Herrings, and thought good Meat by hungry Seamen. 2. The Lamantine, Manafy, or Sea-Cow, a Fish that is 18 Foot long and delicate Food; its Head resembling that of a Cow: It has no Fins, but two short Feet with which it creeps upon the Rocks and Shallows for Meat. 3. The Sea-Devil, so call'd by reason of his terrible Aspect, and black Horns like a Ram: It is a strange kind of Monster, having a Bunch on the Head like a Hedge-hog, Tushes like a Boar, and a forked Tail; and the Flesh is of a poisonous Quality. 4. The Sea-Unicorn, a Fish 18 Foot long, with Scales as big as a Crown-piece, six large Fins, like the end of a Galley-Oar, a Head like a Horse, and an Horn issuing out of the Forehead 9 Foot long, so sharp as to pierce the hardest Bodies; its Flesh is wholesome and very grateful to the Palate. 5. The Sword-fish, which has at the end of the upper Jaw, a Weapon like a Sword, with Teeth on each side of it, five Foot long and six Inches broad, near the Jaw: It also has Vents near the Eyes, to spout out Water, and seven Fins; and is at perpetual enmity with the Whale, which it often wounds to Death.

The Island of DOMINICA, so call'd, because it was first discover'd by the Spaniards on the Dominick's Day, is situated in the 15 Degr. 30 Min. ca. of Northern Latitude, between Guadalupe on the North, and Martinico on the South, at the distance of 8 Leagues from the latter. It takes up about about 12 Leagues in Length, eight in Breadth, and 20 in Compafs. It is very mountainous in the midft, harbouring Dragons, Vipers, and other most venomous and dreadful Creatures; yet-nevertheless there are many fruitful Valleys, yielding feveral Productions, but chiefly Tobacco, and a convenient Harbour, on the Western Coast.

The English have fome Plantations in this Ifland, but are hindered from making an absolute Settlement by the Natives, who are Canibals, and very numerous. For though they are very friendly to the French; yet they have an averfion to the English, upon account of a former Grudge, and will not by any means be reconciled to them. Thefe Savage People, are for the moft Part of a tractable Difpofition, and fuch Enemies to Severity, that they dye of Grief, whenever they meet with any hard Ufage from other Nations. They defpife Riches, and often reproach the Europeans for their Covetoufnefs, faying The Earth affords fufficiency for all Men. They are very neat, living free from Ambition and Thoughtfulnefs for future Events: they are extremely averfe from Thieving and Pilfering, and live without Diftruft, frequenting leaving their Houfes and Plantations, without any to guard them; nay, they love one another entirely, and are very feldom or never at Variance: Laftly, they fhew a great deal of refpect to aged Perfons, and were very chafte, both Men and Women, till the Europeans corrupted them by their ill Example, and made them more diffolute:

XIV. BARBADA, or BARBUDA, is a fmall Ifland lying in 17 Degr. 30 Min. of Northern Latitude, on the Eaft of St. Chriftophers, extending itfelf 15 Miles in Length, and not fo much in Breadth. The Air as in the reft of the Caribbees, is temperate and pleafant, and the Soil being generally fruitful, as alfo fufficiently ftored with Sheep and other Cattel, might produce feveral good Commodities, were it well cultivated by the Inhabitants; who are only the English, befides the Natives: But they are fuch Enemies one to another, that as the latter have no Inclination to it; fo the former dare not make chargeable Improvements, by reafon of the frequent Inroads of thefe Savages, who once or twice a Year, break in upon them with great Fury; deftroying and laying all wafte with Fire and Sword.

This Ifland naturally brings forth variety of excellent Fruit, viz. Citrons, Oranges, Pomegranates, Raiſins, Indian Figs, and Coco-nuts, the Shells of which fupply the Natives with Barrels, Tubbs and Difhes, and the Kernels with delicious Meat, (in taſte like an Almond) and with Drink better than Florence Wine: Befides divers rare kinds of Wood, Herbs, Roots, and Drugs, as Brazil, Ebony, Caſſia, Cinnamon, Pine-apples, Sugar-canes, Cotton, Tobacco, Pepper, Ginger, Indico, Potatoes, &c. But the moft admirable Plant here, is the Senſible, or as ſome call it The chafte Plant; becauſe when touch'd, the Leaves hang down and run together, as if they were wither'd and dead; but as ſoon as the Hand is remov'd, it ſpreads itfelf open, and flouriſhes again. There are alfo ſeveral ſorts of Serpents, very large, and ſome of them not venomous, but ſerviceable to the Inhabitants, by deſtroying Rats, Toads and Frogs; and others fo poiſonous, that a Wound made by their Teeth, if no Remedy is apply'd in two Hours, becomes incurable.

The Natives are handſome, and well-proportion'd; black-ey'd and hair'd; never lame, or crooked; but as for the Scars got in War, they look upon them as ſo many Badges of Honour. The Men uſually pluck off their Beards and count them Deformities to the Europeans: Both Men and Women go ſtark naked, but ſuffer none to touch their privy Parts. Laſtly, theſe Savages dye their Skins with a red Ointment, and when they would appear Gallant, they draw black Circles about their Eyes, with the Juice of Juniper-apples; wear a Crown of Feathers, adorn their Lips, Noſes and Ears with Rings, Fish-bones and other Toys, made of Gold, Silver, or Tin, and put on Neck-laces of Coral, Chryſtal, or Amber.

ANTEGO, or ANTIGOA, another little Ifland is ſituated in the 16 Degr. 11 Min. of Northern Latitude; taking up fix or ſeven Antego. Leagues in Length, and about as much in Breadth. The English after having ſettled themſelves in it, found out ſome freſh Springs, for want of which 'twas before thought inhabitable; this Defect is likewiſe ſupply'd in a great Meaſure, by the means of Ponds and Ciſterns, for preſerving Rain-water. It is of a difficult and dangerous Access for Ships, by reaſon of the Rocks that lye round about on all ſides. The Soil is ſufficiently fruitful of Sugar, Ginger, Indico, Tobacco, &c. There are ſpacious Woods and Fens, which furniſh the Inhabitants, with moſt ſorts of Wild Fowl and Veniſon, and feed great ſtore of tame Cattel.

Among the Birds and Fowl, ſome are of an unuſual and admirable Species, as 1. The Canader, which ſome eſteem as the moſt beautiful Bird in the World, upon account of the curious variety of its Feathers: Its Eyes are red like a Ruby, and the Head adorn'd with a Cap of Vermilion-colour'd Feathers, ſparkling like a live Coal: It is about the bignefs of a Pheafant, very kind to Friends, but ſevere to its Enemies. 2. The Flamer, a large and fine Fowl, as big as a wild Goofe, having the Legs and Neck very long, with fo exquisite a Scent and quick Sight, that it is hard to be ſhot. Inſomuch that the Fowler is oblig'd to get the Wind of them, and to creep along in an Ox-hide, till he is within Gun-ſhot.

The Sea-coaſts afford plenty of all ſorts of Fiſh, and ſome of them are very remarkable, viz. 1. The Sea-Parret, which has very ſparkling and beautiful Eyes, the Balls of which are as clear as Chryſtal; no Teeth, but Jaws fo ſolid, that it can crush Oiſters, Muſcles, Cockles, and other Shell-fiſh to pieces, to get out their Fleſh: Theſe Sea-Parrets are excellent Meat, and ſome weigh 20 Pounds. 2. The Dorado, Sea-bream, or Amber-fiſh, which is very ſwift in ſwimming, and not taken without great difficulty. The Head in the Water, is green, and the Body as yellow as Gold: It is as good Meat as a Trout or Salmon, and is uſually catch'd with a piece of white Linnen, faſten'd to an Hook. 3. The Shark, a kind of Sea-Wolf, or Sea-Dog, the moſt ravenous of all Fiſh, and of a vaſt Length and Bignefs: Swimmers are in great danger from them; for they'll chop a Man in two at a bite, their devouring Jaws being set with three or four rows of sharp broad Teeth: Their Flesh is not good to eat; but their Brains are said to be an efficacious Medicine against the Stone and Gravel.

4. The Beam, a Sea-monster, in shape resembling a Pike, a most dreadful Enemy to Mankind, whom he seizes like a Blood-hound, and will never let him go, if he can get fast hold: His Teeth are so venomous, that the least touch of them is mortal, unless an Antidote be immediately apply'd. There is a sort of these Fishes that have a Beak four Foot long, like a Woodcock's Bill, a large Plum under the Belly like a Cock's Comb, and two Horns under the Throat, which may be theath'd in an hollow place under the Belly.

5. The Sea-Urchin, or Sea-Hedge-hog, because it is round, and full of Prickles, like a Land Hedge-hog roll'd up. These Fish are often sent as Presents to the Curious, to hang in their Repositories, Closets, &c.

XVI.
Barbadoes.

BARBADOES is the most considerable of all the lesser Charibbee-Islands, that are in the Possession of the English, and ought to be distinguish'd from Barbata, or Barbuda already describ'd. It is also situated farther towards the East in the 13 Degr. 20 Min. of Northern Latitude, at the distance of 25 Leagues Eastward from the Isle of St. Lucia, and a little more from Martinica, on the South-East: It extends itself about eight Leagues in Length, five in its greatest Breadth, and 25 in Compass; being of great Strength and very populous. This Island was first discover'd by Sir William Carriean, under King James I. but had no Inhabitants; for it was all over-run with Wood, in which were no Beasts, but Swine, left there by the Portuguese. The English took much pains in the clearing of it, and suffer'd great Hardships, before they could make any Advantage to themselves, by planting Tobacco, Indico, Cotton, and Fustick-Wood; but at last they master'd all Difficulties, and became a flourishing Colony, as they still continue to this day.

The Air is very hot for eight Months, but made tolerable by the constant Breezes of the North-East Wind, which rises with the Sun, and blows brisker as the great Luminary ascends higher. 'Tis also observable, That although the Inhabitants sweat very much, nevertheless they are not subject to that Faintness as we are in England, in the Months of July and August; nor to Thirst, unless occasion'd by excess of Labour, or of drinking strong Liquors. Notwithstanding the Heat of the Air, it is very moist; inasmuch that all Iron-tools, as Swords, Knives, Locks, Keys, &c. if not constantly us'd, will be eaten up with Rust: But this Conjunction of Heat and Moisture causes the Trees and Plants to shoot out to an extraordinary Largeness and Height. The days and nights are almost of an equal Length throughout the Year; the Sun rising and setting at six a Clock, except in October, when there is some small Variation.

The Soil is extremely fruitful, and bears Crops all the Year round, the Trees being in a perpetual Verdure; but the two principal Seasons for planting are in May and November: It brings forth abundance of all sorts of Fruit, as Acajasse, Bonanos, Cherries, Citrons, Cocos, Custard-apples, Dates, Grapes, Gauvers, Icacoer, Indian Figgs, Juniper apples, Lemmons, Limes, Land and Water-Melons, Macous, Monini, Mombani, Oranges both sweet and sower, Papayers, Pine-apples, Plantains, Pomegranates, Prickle-apples, Prickle-pears, Ruifins, &c. As also most sorts of English Plants, Pot-herbs and Roots, as Cabbages, Colworts, Colliflowers, Lavender, Lavender-Cotton, Lettice, Marigolds, Marjeron, Onions, Parsley, Purslain, Rosemary, Sage, Tansey, Time, Winter-Savoury, Garlic, Potatoes, Radishes, Turneps, Carrets, &c. As for Trees, there is great variety of them, both for Building and other Uses, viz. The Calabash Tree, the Shell of whose Fruit, being of the Nature of a Gourd, serves to make Dishes, Bowls, Cups, &c. Cassia, Cassary, of which a kind of Bread is made; Cedar, Coloquinilla, Fittula, the Iron-wood Tree, Lignum Vite, Locust, Mungrass, that grows to a vast Bulk; Mullick, Palmeto, very large and beautiful Tree, Physick-nut, Poyson-tree, Redwood, Racoon, the Bark of which is of great Use for the making of Flax and Ropes, Tamarind, &c.

The Inhabitants have no Beasts and Cattel; but what are tame, and brought them from other Countries, as Bulls, Cows, Oxen, Camels, Horses, Afuegroes, Sheep, Goats and Hogs, which are very plentiful in every Plantation, and yield them wholesome Food: But they have great store of Fowl and small Birds, as Hens, Muscovy-Ducks, Pigeons, Turtles, Turkeys, Black-birds, Sparrows, Thrushes, &c. The Sea affords abundance of Fish, as Cavallos, Coney-fish, Crabs, Lobsters, Mackarel, Mulletts, Parret-fish, Snappers, Terbums, Green Turtles of a most delicious Taste, and several other sorts peculiar to this Isle and the rest of the Caribbees; although there are few or none in the inland Ponds and Brooks. The Snakes, some of which are a Yard and half long, and the Scorpions as big as Rats, do no manner of hurt: The Lizzards are likewise exceeding harmless, much frequenting the Houses, and delighting in the company of Men. But the Musketoos, Cock-roches, and Merry-wings are very troublesome in the night. Moreover, there are some things in this Island very remarkable, viz. 1. Several spacious and deep Caves, big enough to contain 500 Men, suppos'd to have been heretofore the Habitation of the Natives, and now only the Harbour of fugitive Slaves, who run from their Masters, and lurk here a great while before they are discover'd. 2. Land-crabs that are good to eat, and very numerous. 3. The Rock-fish, taken in the adjacent Sea, which is red mix'd with divers other Colours, very delightful to the Eye. 4. The Cacoyos, a kind of Fly, which gives such a lustre in the night, that Men may not only travel, but also write and read by the Light of it: The Indians go a hunting at midnight by the Help of these Insects, fastening them to their Hands and Feet. 5. The River Tuigh, the Waters of which yield an Oil, on their Surface, which serves to burn in Lamps.

The Inhabitants of Barbadoes are very numerous, and may be distinguish'd into three several Ranks, viz. Masters, Christian Servants and Negroe-Slaves. The Masters are English, Scotch and Irish, with some few Hollanders, French and Jews, who dwell upon and manure their own Plantations, which yield them so large a Profit, that that they are generally Wealthy, have plenty of all things, and enjoy all manner of Pleasure. Their Apparel, especially that of the better sort, is exceeding profuse and costly, and their Fare is no less delicious: For the Tables of the Master-Planters, Merchants, and Factors, are generally well furnish'd with dainty Dishes, as Botardo, Neats-Tongues, Anchovies, Sturgeon and Caviary; besides variety of other sorts of Fish, Fowl, Beef, Mutton, Kid, Pork, Peas, Beans, divers Roots, Custards, Cheese-cakes, Tannies, &c. For Drink, they have Wine, Brandy, Strong-waters, and English Beer, to which are added several other Liqueurs peculiar to the Country, as Beveridge of Spring-water, Sugar and Orange-juice; a delicious kind of Wine made of the Juice of Pines, Crippo, Punch, &c. The profitable Commodities, in which their Merchandize chiefly consists, are Sugar, Cotton, Indico, Ginger, Logwood, Fustick, and Lignum Vita: Of these Commodities they have so great store, that above 200 Ships are yearly freighted for England and Ireland.

The Christian Servants, as well as the Negroes, are bought at a certain Rate, that is to say, about Ten Pounds a Head; but those that have learn'd a good Trade, as that of a Carpenter, Joiner, Bricklayer, Smith, &c. yield a much greater Price; a higher value is likewise set upon such of the Female Sex, as are young and beautiful. These Servants are usually bound for five Years, and at the expiration of that Term, are made free of the Island: So that then they are at liberty to make their Fortunes, according to their several Abilities, either in procuring a Plantation of their own, or in working in those of others, or else in following any Trade or Occupation. During their Servitude, the Men are allow'd yearly six Shirts, as many pair of Drawers, three Monmouth Caps, and 12 pair of Shoes. The Women have four Coifs, three Petticoats, and 12 pair of Shoes, besides a Rug-Gown, to keep them warm in the Night, and to put on when they come sweating from their Labour.

The Negroe-Slaves are likewise bought on Ship-board, as it were Horses in a Fair, and are more or less valu'd according to their Age, Strength, Shape, and Beauty. The common Rate for the better sort of Men, is 20, or 25 Pounds Sterling, and about Fifteen Pounds for Women; an equal number of both Sexes being generally taken for the increase of Stock: In regard they are never free from Bondage, and the Children they get are also perpetual Slaves. Their allowance of Cloaths is very little, that is to say, only three pair of Canvas Drawers a Year for the Men, and three Petticoats for the Women: Neither is their Lodging more commodious; for after having labour'd all the Day in so hot a Country, they content themselves only to take their Rest in Hats, or rather Hog-slies, on the bare Boards, without any Rugs or Coverlets; but the Christian Servants have a peculiar privilege to lye in Hammocks. As for the maintenance of these Servants and Slaves, their ordinary Food is Lob-lolly, made of beaten Mayz, mingled with Water, Potatoes, Cassander-bread, Bonavist, &c. Their Stomachs are seldom over-charg'd with Meat; yet on the Festivals of Christmas, Easter, and Whitsonide, they usually receive a Dole of Hoggs-flesh; and of late, the Servants are allow'd every Week a small quantity of Pork, or Salt-fish. When any of the Cattel die accidentally, or of a Distemper, they are given to the Negroes, who feed on them like Epicures, and count it a sumptuous Banquet. Their Drinks are Mobby, or an infusion of Potatoes in Water; Primo, made of Cassary-Root, which is poisonous of itself, but render'd wholesome by Art; Plantain-drink, of the Juice of that Fruit, &c. These poor Wretches are under the severe Discipline of their Oversees, whose business it is to call them to Work, by the Ring of a Bell, at six a Clock in the Morning, to set out their several Tasks, and to give them due Correction for Misdemeanours: The same Officer likewise orders them to go to Dinner at Eleven a Clock; calls them again by the Bell, at One, and discharges them at Six in the Evening.

The whole Island is divided into Eleven Precincts, or Parishes, viz. Christ-church, St. Michael's, S. George's, S. Philip's, S. James's, St. Thomas's, S. John's, S. Joseph's, All-Saints, S. Andrew's, and S. Lucy's; containing Fourteen Churches and Chapels: However, 'tis observable, That altho' the English set apart Sunday themselves for Divine Worship, nevertheless they take little or no care to convince the Negroes of the necessity they lye under, of serving their Creator: For being left to their own liberty, they are either employ'd in getting the Bark of Trees and making Ropes, to be exchange'd for Shirts, Drawers, &c. or else they spend the Day in Sports, more especially Dancing and Wrestling, which they take much delight in, yet are not very expert in either of those Exercises: For in their Dancing they use anticke Actions, their Hands moving faster than the Feet, and their Head than either: Their Musick is a sort of Kettle-drums of different Sizes, which make a strange and confused Noise. The Government of Barbadoes is establish'd by Laws agreeable to those in England, with some few Constitutions peculiar to the State of the Isle, which is divided into four Circuits. For the due Administration of Justice, five Sessions are held yearly, with several superiour and inferiour Courts of Judicature. There are also Justices of the Peace, Constables, Church-wardens, Tithing-men, and other Officers, for putting the Laws in execution.

The most considerable Towns are, St. Michael's, or Bridge-Town, seated on the Southern Part of the Island, and on Carlisle-Bay, which is very deep, and capable of containing 500 Vessels: 'Tis a convenient, well-built and populous Town, the Governour's Residence, the chief Place of Judicature, and the Staple of Trade; where most of the Merchants and Factors have their Store-houses. But it is not very healthy, by reason that the Ground lyes lower than the Seabanks, the Spring-tides overflow, and make a kind of moonish Bog: This Town, for its security and the defence of the Ships, has two strong Forts, with a Platform in the middle, which also commands the Road, all being well furnish'd with Pieces of Ordinance, &c. James-Town on the East-side the Island, is a place of considerable able Trade and a good Road for Shipping: It has the Advantage of several fortified Breast-works; and in it are kept the monthly Courts for the Precinct. Little-Bristol, formerly nam'd Sprites-Bay on the same Coast but more Northward, and reckon'd about four Leagues distant from Bridge-Town; enjoys the Benefit of a great Trade; having a commodious Road for Ships; and likewise defended by two Forts. And Charles-Town, situated on Oyster-Bay, at the distance only of two Leagues Eastward from S. Michaels, and fence'd by two strong Forts, with a Platform in the middle: In this Town good weekly Markets are kept, and monthly Courts for the Precinct. The noted Bays and Creeks beginning to count them from the Eastern Quarter, are Michael's Bay, Skull-Bay, Foul-Bay, Penney-Hole, Mills-Bay, Austin's Bay, Long-Bay, Maxwell's Bay, Black-rock, Pelicans-Bay, the Hole, Read's Bay, Sprights-Bay, Six-men Bay, Humphry's Bay, Mecock's Bay, Balises Bay, Clark's Bay, Concets Bay, Knots-Bay, Baker-Bay, &c.

Lastly the Island of Barbadoes is remarkable for its great Strength both Natural and Artificial: For in some Places chiefly on the South-East, it is fence'd by a continued Course of Rocks and Shelves; besides the Woods that grow quite round along the Sea-coasts. In the other Places that are not thus defended by Nature, it is well fortify'd with Ramparts, Trenches, Curtains, Counter-scarps, Pallisadoes, and several considerable Forts. Moreover for its farther Security, a standing Militia is establish'd, consisting of valiant and well disciplin'd Men, who are to be always ready to appear upon the first Alarm, or beat of Drum: So that it is in a Condition to bid defiance to the most resolute Enemies, and has at several times actually baffled the Attempts of the Spaniards.

This Isle is not over-plentifully water'd with Rivers, Brooks or Fresh-Springs; there being but one River, or rather Lake, which may deservedly lay claim to that Denomination: However, the Land lying low, and for the most part level, gives rise to several Ponds or Pools; and the Inhabitants in most Houses have Cisterns, or Wells, which are continually supply'd with Rain-water.

S. VINCENTS lies in 13 Degr. of Northern Latitude, between S. Lucia, on the North, and the little Isle of Bequia, on the South, about 24 Miles in Length, and 18 in Breadth: It has many Mountains, with fruitful Plains, yielding store of Sugar-Canes, even without the Labour of planting: It is also well water'd with Rivers, and has very convenient Harbours for shipping. The English have some Settlement here; but the Caribbee-Indians are most powerful, and inhabit many pleasant Villages.

These Wretches have no Notion of the Deity, nor Form of Worship; their Religion consisting only in invoking their false Gods, to revenge them of their Enemies, to heal their Diseases; to know the event of their Wars, and to protect them from their Grand Devil Mobaya: For it is certain, This evil Spirit cruelly beats and torments them, when they are not so forward upon War, as he would have them, and that in a visible Form. They devour the Flesh of their Enemies, not so much out of Delight in such Food, as for the Pleasure they take in Revenge. They cannot be persuaded to eat Swine-flesh, lest they should have small Eyes, which they judge a great Deformity; nor Turtles, lest they should partake of their Laziness. However, they are very peaceable Neighbours, and give the English no Disturbance at all; but blame them often, for coming so far to gratify their covetous Minds, and that through so many Dangers.

TOBAGO, or TABAGO, is situated in XVIII the 11 Degr. of Northern Latitude, not far from the Island La Trinidad and the Continent of Southern America: Its Extent is not above 32 Miles in Length, and 11 in Breadth. Some part of this Island was formerly possess'd by the Hollanders, who built the Town of New Flushing, and were rudely attack'd by the French in the Year 1677.

The Country is very happy in a temperate and wholesome Air, notwithstanding it is so near a Neighbour to the Equinoctial Line; for the gentle Breezes so moderate the Heat, that the Inhabitants have no inconvenience by it, but enjoy a perpetual Spring. The Soil naturally produces Indian Corn, but no English Grain will grow here, except Peas and Beans; yet there is good store of Guinea-Corn, Bonevie, the French Pea and Bean, the Kidney and Pigeon-Pea. There are also several sorts of Roots and Plants, as Potatoes, Eddies, Yams, Carrets, and other English-Roots, Tobacco, which is said to take its Name from this Isle, Tea, Cinnamon, Long Cod-bell, Round and Jamaica Pepper, &c. Neither is there any less variety of delicious Fruits, as the Cushion-apples, Prickle-apples, divers other kinds of Apples, Bonano's, Cherries, Plums, Spanish Figs, Oranges, Lemmons, Melons, Cucumbers, Pumpkins and Penguins: But above all, the Coco-nut Tree, and the Fruit of it is that which the Indians chiefly admire, because it serves for Meat, Drink, and Cloath, and therefore they commonly call it God's Tree; besides the Maccaw-nut, Physick-nut, Lignum Vine, Brazil, Ebony, Yellow Saunders, Cedar, Box, and many others. Numerous Herds of wild and tame Beasts are likewise bred in this Isle, as Wild Boars, Pickeries a Beast like a Hog, Aposhi's, a Creature so much in love with Mankind, that it follows them, and delights to gaze on them; Armadilloes, Guanos, Coneyes, Deer, Horses, Cows, Negroes, Sheep, Swine, Goats and Land Tortoises. The Sea affords different kinds of excellent Fish, as the Groppers, Porgo's of two sorts; Cavallio's, Mullets, the Manassy, or Sea-cow, Turtles, &c. There is also great plenty of Fowl, and among them the Bill-bird is admirable, because the Bill of it is as big as its whole Body.

The English are rul'd by a Governour, Deputy-Governour and Assembly, chosen by the Freeholders, to make wholesome Laws for the Benefit of the Island; and all Controversies are decided by the majority of Votes. Liberty of Conscience is allow'd to Persons of all Persuasions, except Roman Catholics: Their vendible Commodities are Sugar, Tobacco, Indigo, Ginger, Balm, Balsam, Sarsaparilla, Silk-grass, Tar, &c.

The French have establish'd Colonies in the following Islands, viz. 1. L' Isle de Sainte Croix, i. e. Holy-Cross Isle, of which they took Possession, A. D. 1650. It lies between S. Christophers, on the East, and Porro Ricco, on the West, and takes up 30 Leagues in Compas. 2. St. Baribolomew. 3. St. Eustache. 4. Guadalupe, or Guardelupe, a fruitful and well water'd Island, containing several considerable Colonies and Forts, with a neat Town and three Castles on the Sea-coast; and extending itself for the space of 60 Miles in Compas. It was first possess'd by the French in 1627, and is divided into two Parts commonly call'd La Grande Terre and La Basse Terre, i. e. The Great and Lower Territories; being distant 12 Leagues Northward from Dominica, six from Marigalante, and 15 Southwards from Antego. 5. La Desiderade, or Defeata, according to the Spanish Dialect, so nam'd by Christopher Columbus, who first discover'd it, in his second Voyage to America: It is a little Island, but fertile and well cultivated, and lyes at the distance of 10 Leagues Eastward from Guadalupe. 6. La Marigalante, a very fruitful Island of 18 Leagues Compas, which became subject to the French, A. D. 1648. It lyes 7 Leagues Southward from Guadalupe, and 10 Northward from Dominica. 7. La Martinique, or Martinica, one of the chief Islands of the French, who made themselves Masters of it in the Year 1635. It is remarkable for its fruitfulness, numerous Colonies, and Forts, by the Force whereof the Hollanders were repuls'd in 1674: It takes up about 45 Leagues in Compas, and its chief Town (according to M. Baudrand) bears the Name of Basville. It is also observable, that the present French King caus'd a great number of his Protestant Subjects, who refus'd to embrace the Popish Religion to be transported to this Island, there to undergo a most dreadful Slavery. 8. S. Lucia. 9. Granada. 10. S. Martin partly possess'd by French, who first subdu'd it in 1645, and partly by the Hollanders, it lyes between Anguilla, on the North, and S. Baribolomew, on the South, at the distance of 9 Leagues Northward from S. Christophers; and takes up 25 in Compas.

and

XX. The Hollanders have the sole Possession of Saba a little Island scarce 20 Miles distant from the Western Part of S. Christophers, which was formerly subject to the Danes. La Trinidad, or Trinity Isle, the largest and most Southern of the Caribbees, is under the Dominion of the Spaniards, and lyes over against the Mouth of the River Paria, or Oronogue, in a Bay of the same Name; where the Pearl-fishing manag'd by Negro Slaves is very considerable. It reaches from East to West for the space of 110 Miles, and is distant but 30 from the Coast of New Andalusia, being separated from it by Drake-Straight, in Spanish La Bocca del Drago. This Island has a Town nam'd S. Joseph, the Governour of which Antonio Berio, was taken by Sir Walter Raleigh, and is reckon'd by M. La Robbe, among the Sotavento-Isles; of which we shall now give an Account in their Order.

Las Islas de Sotavento, as they are call'd by the Spaniards, who are the Proprietors of the most part of them; and in English are stiled the Leeward Islands, extend themselves from East to West over against New Andalusia and Venezuela, two Provinces of Terra Firma, a Part of Southern America. The chief of these on the East, is Margarita, a very fruitful but imountainous Island, taking up 40 French Leagues in Compas, which was discover'd by Christopher Columbus, A. D. 1498, and is still famous for the Pearl-fishing, from which its Name is deriv'd: It is water'd with two Rivers, and has a little Town nam'd S. Jago de la Vega, with several Villages; being only distant eight Leagues from the Continent of Southern America, and 40 Westward from La Trinidad: Blanco, a Desert Isle; Tortuga, about 14 Leagues Westward from Margarita, and 26 Northward from the Continent; Urchila; Rocca; and La Isla de Aves, i. e. The Isle of Birds, encompass'd with seven other very small Islands: Farther on the West appear Bon Ayre, or the Isle of good Air, taking up 16 Leagues in Compas, which is scarce distant 10 Spanish Leagues Northward from the Coast of Venezuela, and depends on the Jurisdiction of the Hollanders: Curacao, or Curassow, according to the Dutch Dialect, a well cultivated Island, which the Hollanders took from the Spaniards in the Year 1634, and still retain it in their Possession. And Oruba, the most Western of all these Islands.

Southern America in general, and Terra Firma in particular.

F. Southern America. THE whole Continent of Southern America, sometimes call'd Peruana and Peruviana, from its principal Kingdom, is bounded on the North, by the Gulph, or Archipelago of Mexico, and the Atlantick Ocean; on the East, by the Ethiopick Ocean, or the Seas of Brasil, Paraguay, and Magellan; on the South, by the Strait of Magellan; and on the West, by the Pacifick, or South Sea, with the Gulph and Isthmus of Panama. So that it is a most spacious Peninsula almost in Form of an equilateral Triangle, surrounded on all sides with the Seas, except a narrow Tract of Land, where it is join'd to Northern America, by the Isthmus of Panama: Although a very large Part of it in the inland Countries, lying between Peru and Brasil; as also between the River of the Amazons and that of Plata, is as yet unknown to the Europeans. This vast Continent is situated between the 295 and 345 Degr. of Longitude, and between the 13 Degr. of Northern Latitude, and the 54 Degr. of Southern Lat. Thus its greatest and most obtuse Part is included within the Torrid Zone; and the other, which grows extremely sharp-pointed towards the South, takes up the largest Tract of the Southern Temperate Zone.

M. Sanfon divides Southern America into Peruvian and Brasilian, making the former to consist of Terra Firma and Peru, and the latter to comprehend Brasil and Paraguay: But we shall take notice notice of seven principal Parts, viz. Terra Firma, Brasil, Paraguay, the Country about the River of the Amazons, Peru, Cile or Chili, and Magellanica. The first of these Divisions or large Provinces lyes on the North; the second, on the East; the third and fourth in the middle of the Continent; the two next, on the West; and the last, on the South. The more particular Division and chief Towns of every Part are seen in this Table.

VI. Chili

TERRA FIRMA, or Firm Land, derives its Denomination from Christopher Columbus, who having first discover'd the Islands of the Mexican Archipelago, afterwards descry'd this spacious Coast, and call'd it by that Name, because he took it for a Continent. It is also nam'd La Castilla del Oro, i. e. Golden Castille, according to M. La Robbe, but others appropriate this Term to its Western Part. Its bounds on the North, are the Gulph of Mexico and the North-Sea, which also washes it on the East; on the South, the Country about the Amazons River and Peru; and on the West, the Pacifick Sea, with the Gulph and narrow Isthmus of Panama, by which it is separated from Northern America: This Country is situated between the 293 and the 329 Degr. of Longitude; that is to say, between the Isthmus of Panama, on the West, and the Mouth of the Amazons River, on the East; as also between the 2d. Degr. of Southern Latitude, and the 13th. of Northern. The Air is excessive hot yet healthful, except on the Coast of the Isthmus of Panama, where there are many Marshes: The Country is beset with Mountains and Woods; but hath good Land producing plenty of Mayz and several sorts of Fruit, besides Pasture for Cattel, and Mines of Gold, Silver, and Copper, with Azure, Emeralds, and some other kinds of precious Stones. There is also great number of odoriferous Trees, and others that yield Gums: Tigers and other wild Beasts are bred in the Forests, and the Rivers are infested with Crocodiles, and noxious Insects. The Natives are of a tawny Complexion, usually going naked to the Waste, and some of them are notorious Robbers.

III.

The

TERRA FIRMA.

IV. The Spaniards have made themselves Masters of Part of Terra Firma; the Natives inhabit another Part, and Part of it is possess'd by the English, French and Hollanders. It is divided into eleven Governments, viz. Proper Terra Firma, Cartagena, S. Maria, Rio de la Hacha, Venezuela, New Andalusia, Caribana, the Northern and inland Part of Popayan, the New Kingdom of Granada, Paria, and Guiana. The seven first are remarkable for their Situation on the Sea-coasts, and the four last extend themselves in the Heart of the Country: All the Maritim Provinces, except Caribana, are subject to the Spaniards, besides Part of Popayan, and the new Kingdom of Granada, in the inland Territories.

V. Terra Firma properly so call'd, or Tierra Firme (according to the Spanish Dialect) adjoins on the West, to the Audience of Veragua, a Province of North America, the last mention'd in our Account of that Continent; on the East, the Gulph of Uraba and the great River of Darien, part it from New Granada and Popayan; on the North, the Gulph of Mexico; and on the South, the Pacifick Sea wash its Shores. The Western part of it is sometimes call'd the Isthmus of Panama; and of late Years has been known to us by the Name of the Isthmus of Darien: Over which Dampier pass'd by Land, and he and Mr. Wafer have given us a very particular Account of that part of the Country. In his first Journey Mr. Dampier travell'd but 60 Miles from a Bay near Golden-Island to St. Maria, a Spanish Fort seated on a River which gave him Passage to the South-Sea. And though in returning he spent 23 days and travell'd travell'd 110 Miles through bad Grounds and over Rivers which made the Journey very troublesome; yet as that was occasion'd by a fear of the Spaniards, he declares that a Journey over the Isthmus is to be made in three days time. This we may suppose was the motive that tempt'd the Scots Company of Merchants to send Shipping, Plant a Colony, and build a Fort on Darien. The Success of that Expedition is known to every body, so that 'tis unnecessary to say when and how the Spaniards beat them off. The Weather is generally very hot, and the Country abounds with Mountains and Marshes, insomuch that the Vapours which rise from them, extremely infect the Air, and cause great Rains, which are often accompany'd with terrible Thunder and Lightning: However, it affords Plantain-Walks, Potatoes, verdant Pastures, Woods, divers kinds of Beasts, particularly wild Cats, tame Cattel Fowl and Fish. Its most remarkable Towns, are Panama, a little City, the Houses of which are built of Timber: Nevertheless it is the Capital of the Province, and a Bishop's See, under the Metropolitan of Lima, seated on the South-Sea Coast, in the narrowest Part of the Isthmus, on a Gulph to which it gives Name, and having the advantage of a strong Fort and safe Harbour: It is a most famous Mart, and the Store-houfe of the Spanish Bullion, which being brought thither from Lima by Sea, is convey'd by Land over the Isthmus which is about 13 Leagues wide, to Porto Belo, on the Gulph of Mexico, on the Coast of the North-Sea, where it is shipt off again for Spain. Merchandizes are likewise transported from Spain by the Ports of Porto Belo and Panama to Pernu: Moreover the high Court of Judicature, commonly call'd La Audiencia Real, is kept in this City, which was taken and burnt by the Buchaneers, under the Command of Sir Henry Morgan in the Year 1685; but the Spaniards have rebuilt it a little more Westward. It stands in the 8 Degr. 30 Min. of North Latitude, and in the 296 Degr. Longit.

Over against the Town of Panama, at the distance of 12 Leagues, at the entrance of the Gulph of the same Name, appear the Pearl-Islands, in Spanish Las Islas de Perlas, formerly of good Note: Among these there are two somewhat large, nam'd Del Rio, and Taravequi, with about 20 of a lesser Extent, which may be more properly termed Rocks.

Porto Belo, i. e. The fair Port, is situated opposite to Panama, on the Coast of the North-Sea, with a safe and capacious Harbour, and two well fortify'd Castles built on an Hill, which bear the Names of S. James and S. Philip: It is a considerable Mart-Town, and famous for its Fairs and Markets, but it was taken and pillag'd by the English and French in 1668. The other Towns are Nombre de Dios, i. e. The Name of God, which stood farther Eastward on the same Coast; but it has fallen quite to Ruin, within these few Years, the Inhabitants having abandon'd it by reason of the unwholesomeness of the Air, and remov'd their Effects to Porto Belo: Comagre, near the same Sea; and Darien, on the Western side of the Gulph of Urraba, noted for the late Expedition of the Scots.

The following Governments lye on or near the North Sea, and the most Western of them is call'd La Governacion de Cartagena: It is bounded on the West, by Terra Firma and the Gulph of Urraba; on the East, by the Government of S. Martha; and on the South, by Popayan, and is water'd by the River of S. Martha. The chief Towns are S. Sebastian, or S. Sebastian de Buenavista, at the entrance of the Gulph of Urraba; Mopox, on the Western side of the River Magdalen; Santa Maria, beyond the same River; Cenu; Toly, and Cartagena Nueva, or Cartagena la Inda, the Metropolis of the Province, and the See of a Prelate, who is Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of Santa Fe. It stands on the Sea-coast, and has a safe and very spacious Harbour. It was also walled the first of all the American Towns, and is well fortify'd with two Castles; nevertheless it was taken and laid waste by the English, and again by the French in the late War, A. D. 1696. Moreover, this City is the Port for the Ships that arrive in these Parts from Cadix, and the adjacent Territory is stor'd with Balin, Rosin, and several sorts of Gums.

From the Province of Cartagena, we pass that of S. Martha, or La Governacion de Santa Martha, which affords great store of Brasil Wood, Gold, precious Stones, and divers kinds of Fruit, and contains the following Towns, viz. Baranca, otherwise call'd Baranca de Mumbo, and Malimba, built on the Eastern side of the great River, not far from the Sea-coast, and dignify'd with a Bishop's See: Tenerifa, higher at the Confluence of the Rivers Mariba and Magdalen; Tamalamequa, on the Magdalen; Al Puerto, higher on the same River; Ocauna; Ciudad de los Reyes; S. Martha, the Capital Town of the Province, and an Episcopal See, with a Harbour and a strong Castle, which nevertheless was taken by the English and Hollanders; and Ramada farther Eastward, on the Coast of the same Sea.

The Government of Rio de la Hacha, the most Northern of all the Provinces of Terra Firma, as also of the whole Continent of Southern America, is but of a small Extent; lying in the middle, between the Government of S. Martha, on the West, and the Gulph of Venezuela and the Lake of Maracaybo, on the East. The Soil is fruitful, and the Country affords plenty of Salt, with variety of Gens: Its Capital Town is Nuestra Señora de las Nieves, otherwise call'd N. S. de Remedios, and frequently Rio de la Hacha, i. e. The Torch-River, from a River of the same Name, at the Mouth of which it is seated. The other Places of Note, are La Rancharia, a neighbouring Sea-port Town, and Coquibacoa, at the entrance of the Gulph of Venezuela, from which the adjacent Promontory El Cabo de Coquibacoa, or Coquibacoa, the most Northern of this Continent of America, derives its Name.

Beyond the Gulph of Venezuela, and the Lake Maracaybo, to the East, appears La Governacion de Venezuela, a large, pleasant and fertile Country, reputed the Granary of the other Provinces: The Metropolis of it is Caro, or Venezuela, situated between the Lake Maracaybo and the North-Sea, as it is commonly set down in the Maps: But M. Baudrand places Venezuela in the inland Country at the distance of 50 Leagues from the Sea-coast coast, and dignifies it with an Episcopal See translated thither from Coro. The other Towns, are Trujillo, or Nuestra Señora de la Paz; Porvilla de Carora; Tucuyo; Nueva Segovia; Nueva Xerez; Nueva Valencia, on the West of the Lake Tocarigua; S. Jago de Leon; N. S. de Carvelleda, or Carvelledes; and Comanagotta, on the farthest Eastern Boundary.

X. New Andalusia, lies between Venezuela, on the West; and the River Oronoque, on the East; and its principal Part is call'd Paria, which Name is also often attributed to the whole Country: Its East and South Boundaries are wash'd by the vast River Oronoque, or Paria, and its Sea-coasts afford good store of Pearls. Its chief Towns are Comana, or New Corduba, near the Gulph of Caricoba, or Caricaco, where there are several Salt-Pits. S. Jago, over against the Gulph; S. Joseph, on the Gulph of Paria; and Acamacan, on the West-side of the River Paria; beyond which lies the Territory of Aromáia.

XI. Caribana, or the Coast of the Caribbees, a very large Province, is wash'd by the Northern Sea, from the Mouth of the River Oronoque, to that of the Amazons River, and (according to several Authors) constitutes a Part of Guiana taken at large. It extends itself a great deal farther, between the Mouths of the said Rivers, than between the Sea and Proper Guiana, which is its Boundary on the South. The heat of the Air is here much moderated by the East-winds, the plentiful Dew, thick Woods and Mountains: This Country, the Natives of which are long-liv'd, abounds with wild Beasts, tame Cattel, Fish, Sugar, Cotton, Honey, Wax, and several sorts of Fruit, and is water'd by many Rivers that fall into the North-Sea: Its Coasts are often discover'd by the Europeans, who have settled divers Colonies between the River Oronoque, and the Promontory of Conde, otherwise term'd Orange-Cape, and Cecil-Cape. The Hollanders are Masters of some Places near the Mouth of the Rivers Essekebe and Berlice; as also of Surinam a noted Fort, built five Leagues above a River of the same Name, on its Western side, and on a Rock near the spacious Marshes: The French about the Year 1640 first erected this Fort; which was afterwards possess'd with the adjacent Territory, by the English, and at last granted to the Hollanders, by the Treaty at Breda. But several other Forts (according to M. Baudrand) are still in the Possession of the French, who commonly call the Territories under their Jurisdiction, by the Name of Equinoctial France, with respect to the Situation of the Country: They have also a Colony in Cayena, an Island that lies near the Mouth of the River Cayena, to which it owes its Name, and that of Wia: This Island takes up 18 Leagues in Compass, and is distant about 100 Northward from the Amazons River; having St. Lewis's Fort for its Defence, which was taken by the Hollanders, and recover'd by the French in the Year 1676. The English have likewise settled several considerable Colonies along the Coasts of this Province, which generally lie low, and are extended above 250 Leagues in Length. There are some other Places of Note, in Caribana, viz. Wetali, near the Mouth of the Amazons River, with a Promontory of the same Name: Moresbege, on the East-side of the River Maryyn, and Taupna- ramunen, somewhat lower, on the opposite Bank: Moreover, these Parts are inhabited by many different sorts of People, among whom the most eminent are the Arrawari, Arriari, Arwacca, Arracofi, Kiari, Wacowai and Caribbees: These last seiz'd on the Eastern Auilles Islands (as it has been already hinted) and turn'd out the ancient Inhabitants; but they themselves being afterwards expell'd by the Europeans, were forc'd to return to their former Seats.

We must now travel into the inland Countries XII. of Terra Firma, viz. the Northern Part of the Government of Popayan, the new Kingdom of Granada, Paria, and Guiana. The Government of Popayan in Spanish, La Governacion de Popayan, is situated in the middle, between Terra Firma, on the West; Cartagena, on the North; and Proper Quito, with the Territory of Quisico, on the South; the two last being Parts of the Province of Quito, which is the most Northern of all the Governments of Peru. The Country is beset with very high Mountains, wherein a great number of Springs and Rivers take their Rise, and the Soil affords admirable Veins of Gold. The greater Part of Popayan, which lies out farther on the South and West, is comprehended with the Government of Quito, and shall be hereafter describ'd under the Article of Peru: So that the Northern and Inland Part of Popayan is only reckon'd among the Provinces of Terra Firma; and its chief Towns, are Cartagena; Santa Anna de Anzerma, or simply Anzerma; Arma; Caramanta; and Santa Fé de Antiochia, or de Antequera.

The New Kingdom of Granada, call'd El Nuevo Reyno de Granada by the Spaniards, as also La Nueva Granada, or New Granada, and Bogota by the Natives, lies in the middle, between Popayan, on the West; and Paria, on the East. It is furnish'd with Mines of divers sorts of Metal, more especially Silver and Copper, besides Emeralds and other precious Stones: The River Magdalen has its Source in this Kingdom, and runs through it. The most considerable Towns, are Nuestra Señora de los Remedios, on the Frontiers of Popayan; Mariqui; Tbagua; S. Juan de los Llanos; next to the Spring-head of Magdalen River; Santa Fé de Bogota, the most eminent City of New Granada, and (according to M. La Robbe) of the whole Country of Terra Firma; dignify'd with the Title of a Metropolitan See; and built at the Foot of Mount Bogota, from which its Name is deriv'd; as also near the River Pai, and the Lake Guaravita: Tocayma, lower on the same River, at its Confluence with the Magdalen; Palma; S. Miguel; Tunia; Tudela; La Trinidad; Plasencia; Pamplona; Velez; Caceres; S. Christoval on the Borders of the Government of S. Martha; and Merida.

The spacious Province of Paria borders on the West, upon New Granada, and on the East, upon Guiana; and the River Paria, or Oronoque (as Prov. it is express'd in some Maps) runs through its Southern and Eastern Parts. In this Country, which is little known to the Europeans, the Provinces of Gotoquancya, and Gataperygo usually are plac'd towards New Granada, the former on the North, and the other more Southward; as also Urraba along the Western side of the River Paria. Beyond the same River is situated the Province of Orenoqueans, with the Territories of the People nam'd Amarawaqueri, Cassipagoia, Emapanomia, Arawagoti, and Eparagoti, whose chief Town is Macurewaray, on the Eastern side of the Lake Cassipa: All these People inhabit the Country that lyes round about the said Lake, which empties itself through several Rivers, into that of Paria.

XV.
Guiana
P.

Guiana, the most Eastern of all the inland Provinces of Terra Firma, is separated from Paria by a continu'd ridge of Mountains; bordering on the North and East, upon Caribana, and on the South, upon the Country about the Amazons River. But it ought to be understood in a strict Sense; for this Province taken at large, comprehends Proper Guiana and Caribana, as it has been already observ'd. Its Southern Tract lyes under the Equinoctial Line, and the Country is very mountainous; neither have the Europeans any distinct Knowledge of its several Parts. It is said to contain a Lake of a vast Extent, like a Sea, which the Caribbees call the Lake, or Sea of Parimé; but the Faoyi, or Faoti, another sort of People term it Roponowini: However, this Lake is only known to the Europeans by Hear-say and Name; since none of them ever as yet travell'd so far as to discover it. On the Western side of the same Lake, the Town of Manoa, in Spanish El Dorado, is commonly plac'd in the Maps; which the Inhabitants affirm to be an exceeding large and magnificent City, the Metropolis of a Kingdom of the same Name, which is very potent, and may well be compar'd with Perry; abounding with Gold and precious Stones. But others look upon all the specious Reports that are spread abroad concerning this Country, as meer Fictions. Lastly the Territories of the Muckikeri, a particular People, are set out in the Maps, on the Frontiers of Paria, and on the Northern Coast of the Lake of Parimé.

C H A P. X.

BRASIL.

I.
Brasil.

AFTER having taken a View of Terra Firma, we proceed to the second Part of Southern America, which lyes out farthest Eastward, and is commonly call'd Brasil. It is reported, That Peter Alvarez Caprale, a Portuguese, as he was prosecuting a Voyage to East-India, was accidentally driven by a furious Tempest, whereby his Life was much endanger'd, from the Coast of Africa, to this Country; which was at first nam'd Holy-Cross Province, because he discover'd it on Holy-Cross day, or Easter-Eve, A. D. 1501. A little while after, Americus Vesputius the Florentine, by Commission from Emanuel King of Portugal, made a more accurate Discovery of the same Country, and afterwards several Colonies were settled there by the Portuguese; who still possess the Sea Coasts, and as far up the Country as they have thought fit to cultivate. The Country was at first named America, from Americus the first Discoverer of it; which Denomination in process of time, being translated to the whole Continent of the New World, the Name of this Province was chang'd and deriv'd from a kind of red Wood call'd Brasil, which is there produc'd in great abundance, and is of singular Use in the dying of Clothes.

II.

Brasil is bounded on the North and East, by the Sea on which it has impos'd its Name; on the South by the same Sea and Paraguay; and on the West, by Paraguay, and the Country about the Amazons River. It is situated between the 321 and the 345 Degr. of Longitude, and reaches almost from the first to the 24th Degree of Southern Latitude, or to the Tropic of Capricorn; beyond which its Bounds are extended by several Geographers after different manners. The Air of this Country, notwithstanding its Situation under the Southern Tract of the Torrid Zone is not excessive hot, but admirably well temper'd, not only by the continual Length and Coolness of the Nights, the abundance of Dew, and plentiful Showers of Rain, but more especially by the gentle Gales of Wind coming from the Sea, which daily disperse the Mists and Vapours: By which means the Air becomes serene and very healthful; insomuch that the Inhabitants are said sometimes to attain to the Age of 150 Years.

The Country is partly Champaign, and partly rises up by degrees to fine pleasant Hills, abounding with arable Lands, rich Pastures, and well water'd Meadows, that are always verdant: The Soil is very fruitful of Sugar growing in long Canes, out of which the most delicious Liquor being press'd by Mill, is boyl'd in Cauldrons and clarify'd: It also brings forth great store of Tobacco, Cotton, Apple-Trees, Brasil-wood, Millet and Mayz, with an admirable variety of Roots, as Anana's, Acajous, Araticous, Aypi's, Potatoes, and Marrioc, or Mandioc, which last the Natives grind to Flower, and eat instead of Bread. Moreover all sorts of Grain and Fruit, brought over from Europe by the Portuguese, thrive there mightily, more especially Oranges, Lemmons, Pomegranates, Grapes, Figs, Cucumbers, Melons, &c. It is commonly said that the Mountains of Brasil, are noted for Wood, the Valleys for Tobacco, the Fields for Sugar, and the Coasts for flying Fish, which rise in great Flocks above the Sea, as Starlings or other Birds upon the Land. They are at the bigness of a large Herring, and their Wings resemble those of a Bat. There are also several other sorts of excellent Fish, the various Colours of which are extremely delightful to behold, particularly Albacores, Cod-Fish, Bonitoes, and Tortoises of a prodigious Bulk and Strength, that are very full of Eggs. The Country likewise affords variety of Fowl, and Beasts both wild and tame; besides numerous Herds of Horses and other sorts of Cattel transported ported from Portugal, which bring forth Young in great abundance. There are several kinds of Creatures unknown to the Europeans, among which the most remarkable, are the Tanusi, that is cover'd with Scales, and the Pigritia or Sloth, of the bigness of a Fox, which, although it has Feet and is always in motion, creeps so slowly upon the Belly, that it scarce goes 100 Paces in twelve or fifteen days. The Lizards, Serpents and Toads are not venomous, but are usually eaten by the Inhabitants.

IV. The Natives of Brasil of both Sexes generally go naked, only with their Hair hanging down from the Crown of the Head; for they sometimes shave the other Parts of the Body: They anoint their Skin with the black Juice of a kind of Apple, and paint it with divers Colours, adorning their Face and Lips with little Stones, that art of no value: These People are capable of enduring the hardest Labour and the greatest Hunger, being able to live three days together without eating: They are very expert in the Arts of shooting with Arrows, swimming and diving, and when occasion requires it, continue under Water for a long time, with their Eyes open: They are addicted to Lasciviousness, Anger, Cruelty and Revenge; their Courage engaging them in many rash Attempts, so that they are always at War with their Neighbours: After having taken their Enemies in Battel, they cause them to be fatted many days for Slaughter; then they kill them in a solemn manner, with great Acclamations and Dancing, roast their Limbs on Spits, and feed upon the Flesh; esteeming it as a most delicious Banquet.

Banquet.

Banquet. They dwell in Cottages scatter'd here and there, several Families often lodging in the same Hut; and they sleep in Hammocks made of Cotton-sheets, hang'd up above the Ground, to secure themselves from noxious Animals. They live from Hand to Mouth, only laying hold of the present Opportunities, without being solicitous for the future, and take great delight in the Art of Divination, but extremely dread evil Spirits. They have little regard to Matters of Religion, yet they believe the Immortality of the Soul, and have some notions of a God, who makes the Thunder, and of certain Demons that come to torment them. This is the Character of the Brasilians, who retain the Customs of their Country, and inhabit the inland Territories; but those that live on the Sea-coasts, are more civiliz'd, and reclaim'd from their Savage Disposition; by the means of their Commerce with the Portuguese and other European Nations. As to the Government of these Savages, some of them are subject to a Supreme Governour, whom they choose out of their principal Tribes, as the Topinambous, Margajas, Ourtacates, Paraiba's, Tapouges, &c. Others live without any Law, or Ruler, as the Miramonins, Cariges, &c.

The memorable Decision of Pope Alexander VI. who invest'd King Ferdinand of Aragon, and Queen Isabel of Castille his Consort, with all the Land that they should discover on the West-side of an imaginary Line drawn from Pole to Pole, 100 Leagues beyond the Azores Islands; and granting at the same time the Countries that could be discover'd Eastward of that Line to the King of Portugal; occasion'd great Contentions between these two Crowns, about the Place where this Line ought to be fixed, and about the Limits of Brasil: The Portuguese made it reach from the River Maranhon, or Maragnan, to that of Para, whereas the Spaniards would not allow it to lye beyond the Captainry of St. Vincent in Brasil.

However, the Portuguese still possess the Sea-coasts and 60 or 70 Leagues up the Land. The Coasts are divided into fourteen distinct Governments, commonly call'd Capitanias, or Captainries, viz. those of Para, Maragnan, Sara, Rio Grande, Paraiba, Tamaraca, Pernambuco, Seregippe, All-Saints Bay, Ilheos, Porto Seguro, Spiritu Santo, Rio Janeiro, and St. Vincent. The three first are situated on the Northern Coast; the nine next, on the Eastern; and the two last on the Southern. Every one of these Divisions, has its peculiar Governour; but they are all accountable to the King of Portugal's Vice-Roy, who keeps his Court at S. Salvador.

Among the Governments of the Northern Coast, (beginning to count them from the West) that of Para, or La Capitania de Para, first presents itself to our View, and contains the following Towns, viz. Commota, on the Mouth of the Amazons River; Para, the Capital to which this Province owes its Name, being distant 130 Leagues Westward from Maragnan, and 40 above the Mouths of the Amazons River; and S. Jago.

The Captainry of Maragnan lyes on the East of the former, and its chief Towns are Juni-para and Marignan, or San Luis de el Maranhon, (as it express'd by the Portuguese) the Metropolis of the Province on which it has impos'd its Name, seated in the Island of Maragnan over against the River Mary. It was erected into an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of S. Salvador, by Pope Innocent XI. Aug. 30. 1677. This little City was first built by the French in 1612. and was taken by the Hollanders, but it is now subject to the King of Portugal. Peter Teixeira affirms, That the Province of Maragnan depends on that of Para; so that some only reckon up thirteen Captainries on the Coast of Brasil.

The Captainry of Sara is of a larger Extent, and lyes farther Eastward than those above-mention'd. Its most remarkable Places, are S. Jago; Sara the chief Town, with a Castle built on an Hill, and a capacious Harbour, although its compass is but small, and the Inhabitants few in number; And El Cabo Corso, or Cape Corso.

The Eastern Coast of Brasil appears next, comprehending nine Captainries. The six first extend themselves farthest on the East, and the first of them bears the Name of La Capitania de Rio Grande, i. e. The Captainry of the Great River; the Coasts of which on the North and East, are wash'd by the Northern Ocean. The said River divides this Province into two Parts, and Naal, or Los Reyes, i. e. The King's-City, stands on the Mouth of it.

The Captainry of Paraiba, the next in Order, takes up but a small space in Compass, and is water'd by a River of the same Name, on which the chief Town likewise nam'd Paraiba is seated, scarce 8 Miles from the Ocean. It is well fortify'd with the two Castles of St. Catherine and St. Anthony, and has a large Harbour. However, the Hollanders made themselves Masters of it in the Year 1634, and impos'd on it the Name of Frederickstadt: But it was afterwards retaken by the Portuguese, who are still in the Possession of it, and often call it Nossa Senhora das Nieves.

The Captainry of Tamaraca is likewise a small Extent, and over against its Coast lyes an Island of the same Name, taking up 22 Miles in Compass, in which is a little Town commonly call'd Santa Maria de la Concepcion.

The Province or Captainry of Pernambuco is larger and more considerable than the former, extending itself for the space of 60 German Miles along the Coast, and containing eleven Towns and Villages: The chief of these, are Pernambuco, or Olinda de Pernambuco, built on an Hill, near the Mouth of the River Bibirida, with S. George's Fort and a large Harbour. The Hollanders took this Town, A. D. 1629, but abandon'd it some time after, and it was made a Bishop's See in 1676. And Reciffa, or Recif, so termed as it were a Rock, a well frequented Village on the Sea-coast, which continu'd for some time in the Possession of the Hollanders, and was taken by the Portuguese, A. D. 1654.

The Captainry of Seregippe, otherwise call'd of Seregippe-Criji, from a River of the same Name, is of less Extent than the Province of Pernambuco, and is separated from it by the River of St. Francis. The capital Town of this Government Seregippe del Rey, is but a small Place, and stands on an Hill, at the Mouth of the said River.

The Captainry of All-Saints Bay, in Portuguese A Capitania de Bahia de Todos los Santos, is situated on the Bay C.

the most eminent of all the Provinces of this Country, lying between Seregippe, on the North; and Ilheos, on the South. The Metropolis of this Government, as also of the whole Country of Brasil is San Salvador, i. e. S. Saviour, often call'd A Bahia, The Bay, by reason of its advantageous Situation at the entrance of All-Saints Bay, in which are many Islands: It stands on an Hill, and is fortify'd with three Castles, and has a very fine Harbour. It affords a Place of Residence to the King of Portugal's Vice-Roy and to an Archbishop, and the Royal Tribunal, or Court of Judicature is kept therein. This City was taken by the Hollanders, A. D. 1624, but the Portugueses recover'd it the next Year, and its Episcopal See was erected into a Metropolitan by Pope Innocent XI. in 1676.

Ilheos C. The next Government or Captainry nam'd Dos Ilheos, i. e. Of the Islands, is water'd by the River Paipa, and its chief Town is Ilheos, a Sea-port of a small Compass, on the Mouth of a River of the same Name, which it has communicated to the whole Province. It is distant 40 Leagues Southward from All-Saints Bay.

Porto Seguro C. In the Captainry of Porto Seguro, on the Sea-coast, are the Towns of Santa-Cruz, or Holy-Cross, and Porto Seguro, i. e. A safe Harbour, where Peter Alvarez Cabral first arriv'd, when he accidentally discover'd the Country of Brasil.

Espiritu Santo C. The Captainry of Espiritu Santo, i. e. Of the Holy Ghost, is water'd by the Rivers Paraba and Espiritu Santo, and the chief Town of this Province likewise nam'd Espiritu Santo, is seated not far from the Mouth of the latter; being of a small Compass, but well fortify'd.

The two remaining Governments of Rio Janeiro and S. Vincent, are extended farthest of all Rio Janeiro C. Westward, and on the Southern Coast of Brasil. The former takes its Name from the great River Janeiro, call'd Ganabara by the Natives, and La Riviere de Genevre by the French, which runs through the middle of the Province, and discharges itself through a very wide Mouth, into the Sea of Brasil. On the Western side of the same River, appears S. Sebastian the chief City of this Captainry, dignify'd with the Title of an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of S. Salvador, and having a capacious Harbour with two Forts: Angra dos Reyes, another considerable Sea-port Town, is situated farther Westward, on the same Coast.

The last Government or Division of Brasil, is S. Vincent the Captainry of S. Vincent, which lies under cent C. the Tropic of Capricorn. Its most remarkable Towns, are St. Vincent, the Capital, seated on the Southern Coast, with a large and convenient Harbour; Santos; Flitachi; S. Paulo and Philippovilla.

Having thus describ'd the Maritim Coasts of IX. Brasil, we should now proceed to give an Account of its inland Part; but it is inhabited only by savage and fierce People, who are not subject to any Government, and whose Names, for the most part, are scarce known to the Europeans: So that no certain Description can be made of the Situation and Bounds of those Countries, the farther Discovery of which must be left to future Ages.

CHAP. XI.

PARAGUAY, or RIO DE LA PLATA.

I. WE are now come to the middle Part of Southern America, that is to say, Paraguay, and the Country which lies about the River of the Amazons: The former call'd Paraguay by the Natives, and Rio de la Plata by the Spaniards, derives its Denomination from the River of the same Name: Its Boundaries on the East, are the Seas of Paraguay and Brasil; on the North, the Country about the Amazons River; on the West, Peru and Chili; and on the South, Magellanica, with the Sea of Paraguay.

II. This spacious Country extends itself from the 11th. or 12th. Degree to the 37th. Degr. of Southern Latitude, and consequently is divided into two Parts by the Tropic of Capricorn, the lesser of which is included within the Southern Tract of the Torrid Zone, and the greater within the Northern Part of the Southern Temperate Zone. It is also situated between the 310 and the 334 Degr. of Longitude. The Air is said to be temperate and wholesome, and the Soil very fruitful; yielding abundance of Corn, Fruits, Cotton, and several sorts of Herbs, among which the Plant Coparibus is more especially remarkable, the Juice whereof is a Balsam of admirable Virtue; inso-much that the brute Beasts bitten by Serpents, or wounded by Hunting, by instinct of Nature resort to it for Cure: There are fine Meadows and Pastures along the sides of the Rivers, which are very numerous, and the Marshes are full of Sugar-canes. There is also great store of Cattel, more especially Horses, Cows, and Sheep, with variety of wild Beasts, as Bears, Tigers, Cerigons, &c. Lastly, the River Paraguay, otherwise termed by the Spaniards Rio de la Plata. i. e. The Silver-River, affords plenty of that rich Metal; neither is the Land destitute of Mines of Gold, Silver, Iron and Copper.

The Natives are of a tall Stature, almost as big as the Patagons, have the same disposition of Mind and Body, and speak the same Language: They are very swift in running, and their chief Arms, are a Bow, Arrows and Sling. Several Companies of these People live together in Huts, so that eighteen or twenty Families sometimes lodge under one Roof, which is supported by Trees. Many of them who are not as yet brought into Subjection, are addicted to Idolatry, and do not acknowledge any God; but they stand in

v. The Province of Paraguay, call'd also Proper Paraguay for distinction sake, extends itself in the middle, between the upper Course of the River Paraguay, the Lake Xarayes, and the Province of Chaco, on the West; and Brasil, on the East; Its greatest Extent reaches from North to South, and its most Southern Part lyes under the Tropick of Capricorn. The Inhabitants are said to be more civiliz'd, docible, and apt to learn the Principles of Religion, as well as Arts and Sciences: So that some of them have Skill in Husbandry, and the Women know how to make Cotton-cloth. The People of this Country are very numerous, among whom (in beginning to reckon them according to their several Territories that lye from South to North) are the Payembos, Bafcherepos, Sorsucses, Guebocases, Latins, or Itakins, Guaracarapos, or Guararapos, Xacous, Xagufes, Chunafes, Tapapecoues, Payzunoos and Xarayes, who have impos'd their Name on the neighbouring Lake. The most considerable Places and Towns, are or were Xirez, now demolish'd; Nuestra Senora de la Fe; Maraacaju, just under the Tropick; Guaybiato, a little lower, on the River Paraguay; and Villa Rica.

iv. The Province of Parana being of a lesser Extent than the former, borders upon them on the South, and is water'd by the lower Part of the River of the same Name. The Country is woody and fertile, and there are some Cataracts or Water-falls above 20 Cubits high, in the River, which the Natives are us'd to pass in Boats call'd Zains, made of one entire piece of Timber. The chief Towns of this Province, are La Natividad de Nuestra Senora, i. e. Our Lady's Nativity; otherwise call'd Acaras; Santa Maria de Yguazu, La Incarnacion, or Itapoti, lower on the Parana, and Sant Ignacio.

vii. On the South of Parana, beyond the River appears the fourth and last Province that lyes on the hither side of Paraguay River, and is known by the Name of Uruguay, or Urugaig: It is of a great deal larger Compass than Parana, and is wash'd by the Sea from the Mouth of the River Paraguay, to the Coast of Guayr. This Country is fruitful, and water'd by many Rivers, the chief of which is Uruguay, or Urugaig, so termed as it were the Snail River, from the abundance of Snails that are bred in those Parts. It contains several Provinces, or particular Territories, as Tape, Farez, Charuas, Ibicuit, Caapi, Ibiturna, Carioes, Tierra dos Patos, &c. with the following noted Towns, viz. Santa Anna; S. Joseph; S. Nicholas, on the River Piratin; S. Xavier, on the Uruguay; La Concepcion, lower on the same River; S. Salvador, on the Mouth of the Paraguay; La Visitation, or Tapyra, somewhat higher; and La Purificacion, or Ibicuit.

viii. The next Province is that of Rio de la Plata, Rio del Plata, through which the lower Course of Paraguay River, otherwise call'd Rio de la Plata, is convey'd, and divides it into two Parts. It extends itself farthest between Proper Paraguay, on the North; and Magellanica, on the South. So that it is one of the Principal Provinces of this spacious Country, and its most eminent People are the Morocotes, Penbues, Mequarata's, Mepenes, Frentones, Aigaises, Amaguais, &c. The capital City of these Parts is La Asuncion, seated on the Eastern side of Paraguay River, near the Confines of Proper Paraguay. It is the Seat of the chief Governour of the whole Country; under the Vice-Roy of Peru, as also of a Prelate, who is Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of La Plata, and of the Royal Court of Judicature. It is distant 80 Leagues Westward from the Town of Guayr, and 200 Eastward from S. Cruz de la Sierra: The other Places of Repute are Las Seis Orientes, i. e. The seven Currents, a considerable Town, on the Confluence of the Rivers Paraguay and Parana; Santa Fe, lower on the opposite side of the Paraguay; as also S. Espirito, or Torre de Gabolo, and Buenos Ayres, otherwise call'd Ciudad de la Trinidad, or La Santa Trinidad de Buenos Ayres, and Bonaire by the French, a noted Mart Town which M. Baubrand takes for the Metropolis of the whole Country, built at the Mouth of the great River Paraguay. It is dignify'd with a Bishop's See and a Sovereign Court of Judicature, and has the advantage of a very convenient Harbour.

ix. It only remains to account for the two last Provinces, which are situated beyond the River Paraguay, on the West. The most Southern of these, and more remote from the River (although some will have it extended even to its side) is Tucuman, which lyes in the middle, between the Province of Rio de la Plata, on the East, and the Mountainous Tracts of Chili and Peru; on the West. It is a very Champain Country, abounding with Cotton, and verdant Pastures for Sheep. The Natives are said to be docible and averse to War, and their Riches consist in Cattel. The Southern Part is inhabited by certain People named Quirandies, who live in Tents and wander up and down like the Scythians, being always well arm'd against the Spaniards; besides the Territories of the Juries and Diazulas and the Country of Trapalanda: Farther on the West and North are the Carcaras and Tonocoteres. The noted Places of this Province, are Ordoaba; S. Jago del Ezeiro, formerly call'd Varco, on the River Ezeiro, i. e. The Ma-River; which some take for the capital Town; S. Miguel de Tucuman, otherwise termed S. Miguel del Ezeiro by the Inhabitants, the Metropolis (according to M. Baubrand) of the whole Province, remarkable for its Situation on the foot of the Mountains, and its Episcopal See; Las Junias, or Madrid; Xuxeni, or S. Salvador; and Villa Leima, or Salca.

x. The other Province beyond the Paraguay is Chaco, situated between that River, on the East; the Lake Dos Xarayes and Proper Paraguay, on the North; and the Kingdom of Peru, on the West. Its farthest Extent lyes between Amazonis, on the North; and the Confines of Tucuman and Rio de la Plata, on the South. It does not contain any considerable Places within its Jurisdiction; nevertheless the Town of La Concepcion Antigna, which is now fallen to Ruin, is plac'd in some Maps in its Southern Tract, next to the Province of Rio de la Plata. This Country is inhabited by a great number of different People; viz. the Chimenes, Chanes, Orechsos, Guaicuroes, Taperues, Chumurates, Chiguitos, Tebaves, Mocונים, Payaguas, Zipalaguars, Gorgotocques, Varais, and others, whose Names are scarce known.

C H A P. XII.

The Country about the River of the AMAZONS, or AMAZONIA.

I. The Country about the Amazons River.

BESIDES the spacious Province of Paraguay but now describ'd, the middle of Southern America is also taken up by a vast Country lying about the River of the Amazons; which is bounded on the South, by Paraguay; on the East, by Brasil, and the Mouths of the said River; on the North, by Terra Firma; and on the West, by Peru. It extends itself from the 308 to the 328 Degree of Longitude, and from the first Degree of Northern Latitude to the 15 or 16 Degree of Southern Latitude.

- II. The Heat of the Air (notwithstanding the Situation of the whole Country under the Torrid Zone) is extremely moderated, not only by the length of the Nights, but also by the frequent blowing of the East Wind, the yearly overflowing of the Amazons River, the great number of Woods, and other Accidents of the like nature. The Country is said to abound with Meadows, along the sides of the Rivers, which are very numerous, Apple-trees, Brasil-Wood, and Ebony; besides much variety of Grain, Herbs, Flowers, Honey, Cotton, Tobacco, and Sugar-canes: There are also several Mines of Gold and Silver, and good store of Fish, some think the Soil to be of the same Nature with that of Brasil; because it produces the same kinds of Fruits and Animals, besides those that are transported thither out of Europe.

The natural Disposition and Manners of the Natives are much like those of the Brasilians; for they are said to be cruel Man-eaters, altogether savage, fierce, robust, and of a strong Constitution. As they shew no Pity or Compassion, so neither have they any Shame, but go all naked both Men and Women, painting their Bodies with divers Colours. Their Faces are likewise chequer'd with several sorts of Stones, which were set in their Skin, in their Childhood: They usually sleep in Cotton-sheets or Blankets hang'd up in the Air, between two Trees, to avoid the Hurt they might otherwise receive by Wild Beasts and noxious Animals; which Custom is generally observ'd in most Parts of America, where the Air is either hot, or temperate.

It is reported that these People have no Kings, Laws, or political Governments; but every one is at liberty to follow the Dictates of his own Will and Capricious Humour: Neither have they any Notion of a God, or Religion; so that many of them have only the Shape of a Man, without any other marks of Humanity.

The Country is divided by the Amazons River into its Southern and Northern Parts, the former of which is of a great deal larger Extent than the other, and lyes out much farther beyond the said River. The Southern Part, on the hither side of the Amazons River, contains many different sorts of People and several Provinces, of which the Europeans have but little Knowledge. The principal Provinces are Cayana, Mataya, Tapayja, and Paranayba, situated in the Eastern Tract of this Part and towards Brasil. The most eminent People are the Pacaches, Urubingues, Sabucares, Cayanes, Surines, Oragmagues, Curianes, Cushnages, Torimanes, Pacuanes, Corosirares, Tacurics, Cacygares, and several others.

The Northern Part of the Country about the Amazons River or beyond it, affords the like variety of People and Provinces, of which there are no Accounts as yet extant, that are more certain or accurate than those of the former. The chief Provinces best known to us, are Aparia bordering upon the Kingdom of Peru; Caribana, a great deal farther Eastward; Apanta and Coropa, lying in the middle, between the Lake of Parimé and the Amazons River. Among the People, we meet with the Homaguas, Agayapes, Aguares, Cemanares, Guayaribes, Torunes, Tecunes, Cunes, &c. Besides the Toupinambous, a famous People, who inhabit a great Island made by the Amazons River, on the South of the Lake of Parimé. To conclude, Time will no doubt, make a more accurate Discovery of the several Parts of this Country, as well as of many others that belong to the vast Continent of America, of which we have as yet little more than the bare Names.

CHAP. XIII.

The Kingdom of PERU.

1. WE proceed now to the Western Part of Southern America, where the Countries of Peru and Chili, present themselves to our View. The Kingdom of Peru, in Latin Peruvia, or Perua, in French Le Perou, and in Spanish El Peru, is said to have been erroneously so nam'd by the Spaniards, who, when they ask'd one of the Natives by what Name his Country-men were call'd, and he made answer, that his own was Bern; the Spaniards mistook it for the Name of the Country. Others say the Native reply'd, that the Country was call'd Pelu, and was water'd by the River Velu, from whence the Spanish Term Peru was deriv'd, only by variation of one Letter; but that its ancient Name was Tavaninsijun. Let the Case be how it will, 'tis evident, that no Argument can be inferr'd from the likeness of the Terms Peru and Ophis, by the transposition of Letters, to prove, that Peru is the same with King Solomon's Ophir, as some vainly imagine.

- II. This most famous Kingdom, from which the whole Continent of Southern America is sometimes call'd Peruviana, is bounded on the North, by Proper Terra Firma, with the Southern and Eastern maritim Parts of Popayan, which are included within the Bounds of Terra Firma taken at large; on the East, by the Country about the Amazons-River and Paraguay; on the South likewise, by Paraguay and Chili; and on the West, by the Peruvian Sea, part of the Pacifick Ocean. It is situated between the 298 and 316 Degr. of Longitude; as also between the 4 Degree of Northern Latitude, and the 26 Degr. of Southern Latitude: It extends itself furthest from North to South, and is narrowest in its Northern and Southern Tract; the former lying under the Equinoctial Line, and the other under the Tropick of Capricorn. Its utmost Length (according to M. Baudrand and others) from North to South, on the Coast of the Pacifick Ocean takes up 602 Leagues, and its Breadth about 90 from East to West, or from the Mountains to the Sea-shore; although in some Places it is somewhat wider, and in others narrower. The Country was first discover'd and subdu'd in the Year 1525 by Francis Pizarro, who being assist'd by Diego Almagro, made himself absolute Master of it, taking advantage of the Discord between two Brothers that contended for the Crown. The insatiable Desire these Spanish Generals had for Gold, hurry'd them on to commit most horrible Outrages and Massacres upon the poor Indians, under pretence of Religion, and to put their King nam'd Athabaliba to a cruel Death; till at last the Divine Vengeance overtaking them, they were brought to condign Punishment: For when they could no longer agree about the dividing of the Spoil, Ferdinand the Brother of Pizarro took an opportunity to assassinate Almagro; whereupon one of Almagro's Sons treated Francis Pizarro after the same manner: Then Gonzale the third Brother of the latter reveng'd his Death, and behav'd himself so insolently in the Country, that the Emperor Charles V. was oblig'd to send Peter Gasca a Lawyer to regulate Matters, A.D. 1546.

- III. The Air of Peru is very different; according to the diversity of the Climates; for in some Places it is excessive hot, in others cold, in others extremely kind and temperate, and elsewhere foggy and unwholesome: In some Places the Weather is continually rainy, in others the Rain falls now and then, and in others it never Rains. The inland Country is best with Mountains, among which the Andes are the highest, and their Tops are always cover'd with Snow. There are also very low Valleys, and spacious Plains, where the Rain seldom or never falls. The Sea-coasts are level, sandy, full of Desarts, barren, hot and dry, by reason that the parched Ground is not refresh'd with Showers of Rain, neither is it water'd by any Springs, Rivers or Lakes. However the Valleys are well inhabited and made wonderfully fertile by means of the moderate temperature of the Air, and the great number of Rivulets that run down from the Mountains: So that they abound every where with green Fields, Meadows full of Grass, and rich Pastures, plentifully bringing forth many sorts of Trees, Fruit, Grain, Herbs and Pulse, particularly Corn, Mayz, Sugar-canes, Cotton, and excellent Grapes. Moreover, the Soil is not only fruitful of such things as are peculiar to the Climate, but also yields great increase of those that are sown, or planted by the Spaniards. Among the Herbs some have admirable Virtues, more especially a certain Plant commonly call'd Coca by the Natives, the Leaf of which being put into the Mouth, nourishes and allays Hunger and Thirst; and the Coparubus Plant, a Sovereign Medicine for all Wounds, and a singular Antidote against Poison. The Pastures afford Fodder for numerous Herds of Cattel, more especially Sheep as big as Horses, which are frequently us'd for drawing and Carriage; being able to carry a Man, with a considerable Load on their Back for several Miles: The Wool of their Fleeces surpasses that of our Sheep in thickness, fineness and in length, and their Flesh is very grateful to the Palate. There are also divers sorts of wild Beasts, as Hairs, Foxes, and Cerigons that have under their Belly a Skin like a Sack wherein they carry their young ones till they are able to travel, with some few Lions, Tigers, and Bears in the mountainous Tracts; besides great variety of Birds both wild and tame, as Ostridges, Parrots, Pigeons, Turtles, &c. Some of the Rivers and Lakes have Salt at the bottom, though the Water of them be fresh, and there are several Springs of hot Water. Earthquakes are very frequent and dangerous in those Parts, and there happen'd so violent an one in the Year 1633, that the Town of Truxillo was quite swallow'd up.

But the Excellency of this Country is not in any respect so transcendent, as in the number and quality of its Gold and Silver-Mines, which are the finest of all that ever were found throughout the whole Universe: So that it may be justly esteem'd the richest Treasury upon Earth, and the best Jewel in the Crown of Spain. And even so wealthy is this Country, that when Pizarro first arriv'd, the Kitchen-vessels us'd by the Natives were all of pure Gold, and their Houses cover'd with Plates of that Metal: The Spaniards for want of Iron, were oblig'd to shoe their Horses with Gold and Silver. Neither will this account seem incredible if it be consider'd, That one single Mine at Potosi has yielded to the King of Spain, in less than fifty Years, for his fifth Part above three Millions Weight, at three Royals and a Quarter, each Weight; as it is related by Linschoten, Herrera, Acosta, Garcilasso, Bartolomeu de las Casas, and other Authors. It is also reported, That the ancient Peruvians made a Rope of massive Gold, and call'd it The Rope of Pleasure, of so prodigious a thickness and length, that six hundred lusty Men were not able to lift it up from the Ground, which they afterwards cast into a Lake, lest the Spaniards should get the Possession of it. Their Temple in Honour of the Sun was not only adorn'd with a vast deal of Gold, but had also in it a huge Statue and a Table made entirely of the same Metal; several other Temples dedicated to the Moon, Stars, Thunder, Lightning, Rain-bow, &c. were beautify'd in like manner and fill'd with Golden Statues: Nay they are said to have had all sorts of Animals and Plants form'd in Gold, according to the full size, proportion and shape of every every one of them, with infinite quantities of precious Stones. Atabaliba the last King of Peru (so he is commonly call'd, and Arabalpa by others) was carry'd in a Golden Chair upon the Shoulders of his Guards; but when this unfortunate Prince was taken by the Spaniards and loaded with Chains, he offer'd Pizarro their chief Commander for his Ransom, an heap of Gold sufficient to fill the outer Court or Hall of the Royal Palace, at Cajamalca (which was 22 Foot long and 17 broad) to such an height, that Pizarro standing on the Pavement might only reach to the top of it with the tip of his Finger: Otherwise if the General thought fit to have the Ransom paid in Silver, he promis'd such a quantity of that Metal as might serve twice to fill up the whole space of the said Hall. To conclude, both the Peruvians and Spaniards formerly were us'd to boast, not without good Grounds, That the Foundation of this Kingdom consisted of Gold and Silver. Neither is there any want of these rich Metals even at this day, as it appears from the Fleet so richly laden with Bullion that sails every Year from thence to Spain. The Mines likewise afford great store of Quick-Silver, red Lead, Sandarack, and such kinds of Earth of different Colours, that are much us'd in the dying of Clothes; besides Gems, Bezoar-Stones, Salsaparilla, and other sorts of Minerals.

IV. The Natives of Peru, who are of a fairer Complexion than the Spaniards, wear long Hair; with woollen Shirts and Walfcoats: The Women have a long sleeveless Garment, which is girt about with several Folds below the Navel. These People are generally simple and inconstant, having little regard to their Words; but the Mountaineers are more subtil, and well vers'd in the Art of Dissimulation, and implacable Enemies to the Spaniards; nay, the Christians there are look'd upon by those that are not yet converted, as Monsters for Malice and Barbarity, by reason of the outrageous Cruelties that were exercis'd by them: Inso much, that the Manatians and other People who live on the Mountains, make no scruple to kill as many of them as they can meet. The Peruvians before the Government of the Yucas, or Ingas had a great number of Gods, both natural and artificial, whose Worship was often perform'd with Humane Sacrifices: But when that Family reign'd, they ador'd the Supreme and Invisible God, Creatour of the Universe; and the Sun, by reason of the innumerable Benefits which that great Luminary confers on Mankind; to whom likewise they offer'd Sacrifices, but only brute Beasts and Herbs: They also render'd Divine Honours to the Moon, in Quality of the Sun's Sister, and to Thunder and Lightning, as the Managers of his Justice. It is said that their political Government had some resemblance to that of the ancient Greeks and Romans, that it was very easy and advantageous to all the Members of the Commonwealth: And indeed, many excellent Laws were then enacted, and amongst others, That no Person should do that to another which they would not have done to themselves. Strict Prohibitions were set forth against Adultery, the Marriage of Children without their Parents Consent, Robbery and Rapine, and an extraordinary Provision was made for the Poor.

Neither was the Industry and Magnificence of these People less remarkable; for they made two great Roads, viz. one through the Plains, and another through the Mountains, each five hundred Leagues in Length, and built Houses upon them at convenient Distances, for the Lodging and Entertainment of Strangers, that they might travel quite through them without Charge. And so Polite, Virtuous and Ingenious were these People, that Sir William Temple thinks fit to rank Peru among the Nations that might vie with Greece and Rome for Heroick Virtue. Thus the Kingdom of Peru was govern'd above three hundred Years before the Arrival of the Spaniards, by the Royal Progeny of the Yuca's, which Francis Pizarro and Diego Almagro, the above-mention'd Generals for the Emperor Charles V. almost extinguish'd in Favour of the Crown of Spain. The thirteenth and last of those Princes was Atabaliba, who being taken in Battel, in which 5000 of his Subjects were killed (notwithstanding his Proffer of so vast a quantity of Gold and Silver for his Ransom, and the Promise Pizarro had actually made to spare his Life) was cruelly strangled by the Order of the same General, May 3. 1531. Neither did the Spaniards shew more Compassion to his distressed Subjects: For it is affirm'd by some Authors, That they destroy'd above 15 Millions of these poor innocent People in less than fifty Years, and that the Blood of those who perish'd in the Mines, where they continually labour'd, outweighed all the Gold and Silver taken out of them: By such means they made themselves Masters of this ancient Kingdom, and still retain it in their Possession.

The whole Country of Peru is usually divided into three Governments, viz. those of Quito, Los Reyes and Charcas, the first of which lies on the North, the second in the middle of the Kingdom, and the third on the South.

VI. The Government of Quito, in Spanish La Governacion, or La Audiencia de Quito, is situated between Terra Firma, on the North; the Government of Los Reyes, or Audience of Lima, on the South; and the Peruvian Sea on the West; extending both Northward and Southward of the Equinoctial Line: It contains four principal Parts, viz. the Southern and middle Tract of the Government of Popayan, the other Tract having been already accounted for in the Description of Terra Firma; Proper Quito; the Province Los Quixos and that of Pacamores.

VI. The Southern and middle Tract of the Government of Popayan is the most Northern Province of the Government of Quito; lying in the middle, between Terra Firma strictly taken, on the North; Proper Quito, with Los Quixos, on the South; and the Sea, on the West. The chief Places and Towns of this Province are Cali built on the foot of the Mountains, in a Plain, near the Western side of the River Cauca, or S. Martha; Popayan, the Metropolis of a Government of the same Name, dignify'd with a Bishop's See, and situated higher on S. Martha's River, at the distance of 140 Miles Eastward from the Coast of the Pacifick Sea, and 22 Leagues Southward from Cali; Guadalajara, or Guadalajara de Enga;

Proper
Quito.

On the South of Popayan, appears the Province of Quito strictly taken, which is bounded on the East, by Los Quixos and Pacamores; and on the West, by the Pacifick Ocean. Its most remarkable Towns on or near the Sea-coasts, are Puerto Viejo, i. e. The Old Port, Guayaquil; and S. Miguel. In the inland Country are Taen; Zamora; Loxa; Cuenca; Rio Bamba; and Quito, or S. Francisco del Quito, seated in a Valley between the Mountains, at a little distance Southward from the Equinoctial Line; as also 50 Spanish Leagues from Paño; 250 Northward from Lima; 60 Eastward from the Sea-shore, and only eight (as Peter Texiera assures us) from the Source of the great River of the Amazons: It was heretofore one of the most eminent Cities of the Kingdom of the Yucas, and is still the Capital of the Province and of the whole Government of Quito. It is also the Seat of a Prelate, who is Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of Lima; of an high Court of Judicature, commonly call'd La Audiencia Real, and of an University founded A. D. 1586. Near this City (as we are inform'd by Girava a Spanish Author) were certain Mines which yielded a greater quantity of Gold than of Earth, or Soil.

Los Quixos
P.

The Province of Los Quixos, otherwise call'd Canela, is of a great deal less Extent than Quito, and borders upon it, on the East: It is water'd on the North and East, by the upper Part of the Amazons River, and comprehends the following considerable Places, viz. Anete, noted for its Situation upon the same River, very near the Equator; Baeza the capital Town of the Province, Avila; Archidona; and Sevilla del Oro.

Paca-mores P.

The last Part of the Government of Quito, is the Province of Pacamores, having that of Los Quixos for its Boundary, on the North; and the Amazons River, partly on the East; which receives the Curaray and Maregnon, two other Rivers of this Province: Its principal Towns are Valladolid, or S. Juan de Salinas the Metropolis, with an Episcopal See; Loyola; and S. Jago de las Montanas.

VII.
Los Reyes Gov.

From the Territories of Quito, we pass to those of La Governacion ò Audiencia de los Reyes, i. e. The Government of the Kings (otherwise nam'd the Audience of Lima) the most eminent of all; being bounded on the North, by the Government of Quito; on the South by that of Charcas; and on the West, by the Peruvian Sea. It comprehends within its Bounds Proper Peru, a very spacious Country, through which the Mountains Andes of a great Height, extend themselves from North to South. The most noted Places of this Government, on the East, are S. Juan de la Frontera, or Chacapoyas; S. Jago de los Valles; and Cusco formerly the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom of Peru, and the most opulent Seat of the Monarchs call'd Yucas, or Incas, where the Spaniards found many Houses cover'd with Golden Plates (as it has been already hinted) both on the inside and outside, and Francis Pizarro their General took away a prodigious quantity of Gold and Silver. The ancient Kings kept their Court in a strong Castle, which was built on Mount Sachlabuama, but is now quite demolish'd. However, this City enjoys the Title of an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Lima, and stands near the Hills between the Rivers Ancay and Apurina, about 120 Spanish Leagues Eastward from Lima. It is divided into the upper Town, commonly call'd Hanan-Cusco and the lower nam'd Huran-Cusco; but it is now much fallen to decay; and suffer'd a great deal of Damage some few Years ago by an Earthquake: The next Towns are S. Francisco de la Victoria; S. Juan del Oro; and Floruro, on the Northern side of the Lake Tiucara.

In passing further Westward we meet with Guamanga a Bishop's See; Oropesa; Guanuco seated near the Lake Chincacocha, and otherwise named Leon de Guanuco, or Guanuco de los Cavalleros; Guamachuco; Caxamalca; Miraflores; Truxillo, a large and neat City built in a fertile and well water'd Country, and dignify'd with an Episcopal See; about two Leagues distant from the Sea-coast, where it has a capacious Harbour; Santo; Guaura; Arnedo; and Lima, or Los Reyes, i. e. The City of the Kings, so nam'd by its Founder Francis Pizarro, because the Inhabitants began to settle themselves there on the Festival of Epiphany, or Twelfth-day, It is the Metropolis not only of the Government of Los Reyes but also of the whole Continent of Southern America, and was built A. D. 1535, in the fruitful Valley of Lima, call'd Rimac by the Natives, on a River of the same Name; where the Air is very temperate, and the adjacent Country no less fertile. The City is very magnificent, although it has no Walls and the Houses built of Timber. It is adorn'd with a great number of fine Buildings and Churches, among which the Cathedral dedicated to St. John is more especially remarkable. It is also the Seat of the Vice-Roy, of an Arch-Bishop, and of an University founded A. D. 1614; besides the Royal Court of Judicature, and that of the Inquisition: It is a notable Mart, being the Port whence the Silver that comes from the Mines of Potosi is shipped off, to be carried to Panama thence over Land to Portobelo, from which it is again shipped off for Spain; but no other Nations than Spaniards are permitted to traffick there, or indeed in any Town all along this Coast; nay, they will not permit any other Nation to set foot there; and make it their utmost Care to destroy any other Shipping that come into the South-Sea. For the Wealth of the Plate-Mines is Temptation enough to the Spaniards to take Care of them, and to the Buccaneers sometimes to pillage them. This City is some distant one League Eastward from the Coast of the Pacifick Sea; two Eastward from its Harbour commonly call'd El Callao de Lima; 120 from Cusco formerly the capital Town of Peru, on the North-West; and as many Northward from Arequipa. The other Places of Note are Val Verde; S. Miguel de la Ribera; and Arequipa, a little Town on the River Quilca, erected into an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Lima.

The

VIII. The third and last Government of Peru is that of Charcas, in Spanish La Gobernacion, ó Audiencia de los Charcas, ó de la Plata; which borders on the North, upon the Government of Lima; on the East, upon Paraguay; on the South, upon the same Country, and the Kingdom of Chili; and on the West, upon the Southern or Pacifick Sea. This Government extends farthest of all Eastward, and Part of it lyes under the Tropick of Capricorn: It may conveniently be divided into the Province of Los Charcas and the Mountainous Tract; to which some add Tucumán; but an Account of this Country has been already given in the Description of Paraguay.

La Sierra. The Mountainous Tract, or La Sierra, being of a less Extent, is situated on the East, in the inland Country, and its Eastern Part contains Laguna Grande, or the Great Lake. The Towns of this Tract are Santa Cruz la Nueva, and S. Cruz de la Sierra, on the foot of a Hill, near the Confines of Paraguay, having the Advantage of an Episcopall See, under the Metropolitan of La Plata; although some say, it is quite ruin'd, and its Bishop usually resides in the Town of Misique.

Los Charcas Prov. The Province of Los Charcas lyes between the mountainous Tract and the Peruvian Sea, and comprehends the following remarkable Places, viz. La Paz, Laxa; Oropesa; La Plata, a large, rich and populous City, more especially famous for the neighbouring Silver-Mines, from which it derives its Denomination. It was lately built by the Spaniards, in the Valley or Territory of Chuquisaca, near the River Picolmayo, and dignify'd with an Episcopall See; which was afterwards erected into a Metropolitan by Pope Paul V. So that it is now the capital City of the whole Government of Los Charcas, to which it sometimes communicates its Name, and affords a Place of Residence to a Prelate, who has four Suffragan Bishops under his Jurisdiction, and is often styl'd The Arch-Bishop of Los Charcas. This City is distant 165 Spanish Leagues on the South-East from Cusco; 18 Eastward from Potosi; and about 110 from the Sea-coast: Potosi, a spacious, neat City, famous for the rich Silver-Mines, well frequented, and flourishing daily more and more, although it is built in a dry Territory, at the foot of a Mountain, call'd by the Spaniards El Cerra de Potosi; the Silver-Mines of which excell all the others of Peru, and were discover'd A. D. 1544. It is reported that twenty thousand Men are employ'd there in digging the Ground, and that they are oblig'd to descend into the Pit at least 400 Steps; but these Mines are not now so considerable as at first, when they afforded that vast Revenue to the King of Spain, which has been already mention'd in the third Section of this Chapter. The other Towns near the Sea are Arica, the Inhabitants of which are few in number, although it has a capacious and safe Harbour, with a strong Castle; Pica; and Tobiso.

CHAP. XIV.

CHILI.

I. THE Western Part of Southern America, besides Peru, contains also the Country of Chili, or El Cile, as it is termed by the Spaniards, who first discover'd, it A. D. 1535. It is bounded on the North, by the Kingdom of Peru; on the East, by Tucuman, a Province of Paraguay and Terra Magellanica; on the South, by the same Magellanica; and on the West, by the Sea of Chili. It is situated between the 29th and the 30th Degree of Longitude; as also between the 26 and 50 Degree of Southern Latitude. The Extent of this Country is narrowest in its Northern and Southern Parts; and the Andes, a very high continued Ridge of Mountains, which the Spaniards call La Cordillera de los Andes, and La Sierra Nevada, run through its whole Eastern Tract from North to South.

II. The Air of Chili is healthful, and hottest in the maritum Parts; the Temperature of the Climate in the Summer-Season being almost the same with that of Spain, but colder in Winter; when most part of the Rivers freeze in the Night, but thaw in the Day, and continue their usual Course: In the mountainous Tracts, the Winter is said to be so severe, That Men and Beasts are often starv'd to Death, and Horses with their Riders are quite froze up as hard as a Stone: Insomuch that 'tis no wonder the Natives call their Country Chili, i. e. Cold, in their Mother-Tongue; However it abounds with Pastures, and numerous Herds of Cattel, more especially Weather-Sheep, which are almost as big as Camels, and are us'd to carry Burthens. It likewise brings forth variety of Fruit, with plentiful Crops of Corn and Mays, which bears an Ear 15 or 18 Inches long, upon a Stalk seven or eight Foot high; besides those Fruits that are transplanted out of Spain, and thrive as well as in their natural Soil. There is also abundance of Ostriches, and the Mines afford great store of the purest Gold and Silver, with Copper, Lead, Quick-Silver, and divers kinds of Minerals; but Earth-quakes sometimes happen in several Places of this Kingdom, and there is a great number of Volcans or burning Mountains.

The Natives are of a huge Bulk and strong Constitution, their Limbs being compact and well set. They are hardy, bold, cruel, ambitious, impatient, inur'd to Labour, Fatigues and War, and are reckon'd valiant, especially the Araucans, whom the Spaniards have not been yet able to subdue: They are also very swift in running, running, admirable Hunters, and most skilful Archers: They are usually cloth'd with the Skins of wild Beasts, and Sea Wolves, and many of them are addicted to Idolatry; worshipping the Devil, whom they invoke by the Name of Eponanomon, i. e. The Powerful, that he may do them no Mischief. The greatest Part of Chili is subject to the Vice-Roy of Peru, but under the immediate Jurisdiction of a particular Spanish Governour: Another Part is still posses'd by the Natives, who have courageously defended themselves against the Attacks of the Spaniards, above an Age and a half, and have often defeated them, with a great Slaughter.

III.

The whole Country is divided into three Governments, viz. Proper Chili, Concucito and The Imperial; every one of which is subdivided into several Territories, that take their Names from the chief Towns.

The Government of Chili, or Cile properly so call'd, is maritum and the most Northern of all; lying between the Kingdom of Peru, on the Chili. North; and the Imperial Government on the South: Its particular Territories are three in number, viz. Serena, Quillara and S. Fago de Cile: Serena The first and most Northern of these Provinces contains the following noted Places, viz. Port Copiapo, Guafo and Coquimbo, otherwise nam'd La Serena, the capital Town; all seated not far from the Mouth of the River Coquimbo.

The

Quillata T. The Territory of Quillata is situated in the middle, and its principal Places are Chuapa; Pongotoma; Ligua; near the Rivers that bear the same Denominations; and Quillata the chief Town of the Province.

S. Jago de Chile T. The Territory of S. Jago de Chile is the most Southern, and its most remarkable Places are Pozogera; Rapel, on a River of the same Name; Melipilla, or Melilla; and S. Jago de Chili, the Metropolis not only of this Territory, but also of the Government, and even of the whole Country of Chili; where the Supreme Court of Judicature is usually kept; It is a large and populous City built by the Spaniards, on the River Maipo, at the foot of the Andes, and dignify'd with an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Lima: It is distant 25 Leagues Eastward from the Coast of the Pacific Sea.

VI. Chucuito to Gov. The second Government of Chili is Chucuito, otherwise call'd Oyo, being the most Eastern, and of the least Extent: It is also remarkable for its Situation in the inland Country, and is separated from Proper Chili and the Imperial Government by the continued Ridge of the Andes Mountains: It contains several Lakes in the Northern Part, on the Confines of Tucuman, a Province of Paraguay, and its distinct Territories are only two, viz. S. Juan de la Frontera and Mendoza. The former lyes on the North, and its chief Town likewise nam'd S. Juan, &c. stands at the foot of the Andes, on the West of the Lake Guanagache. The Territory of Mendoza borders upon the other, on the South; in which are Mendoza the capital Town; Uto; and Diamante.

VII. The Imperial Gov. The third and last Government of Chili being the most Southern, is The Imperial, in Spanish La Gobernacion del Imperial; which has for its Boundaries on the North, Proper Chili; on the East, the Andes Mountains; and on the West, the Sea of Chili. It comprehends eight particular Territories or Provinces, the Names of which are Villa Ricca, Angol, Chillan, La Concepcion, La Imperial, Baldivia, Oformo, and Chilue: The three first of these Tracts lye in the inland Country, near the Andes, and the rest on the Seacoasts.

Villa Ricca T. The Territory of Villa Ricca is the most Southern of the inland ones; and its chief Town call'd Villa Ricca stands on the foot of the Andes; although it is of a small Compass and not well inhabited.

Angol T. The little Province or Territory of Angol is situated between the Imperial and that of Chillan, and its chief Town is likewise nam'd Angol. The Territory of Chillan, borders upon the former on the North, and its capital Town bears the same Name.

La Concepcion T. The most Northern of the maritim Tracts is that of La Concepcion; the principal Towns of which are Itata, on a River of the same Name; and La Concepcion, one of the most eminent Cities of the whole Country, with a capacious Harbour, on the innermost Part of the Bay. It is noted for the See of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Arch-Bishop of La Plata, and is well fortify'd; although it has been several times storm'd by the Araucans and other Savage People of Chili.

The Imperial Province or Territory is of a Imperial larger Compass than that of La Concepcion, extending itself from the Ocean to the Andes Mountains and the Frontiers of Magellanica: Its most considerable Places are Colcura; Arauco, a strong Fort belonging to the Spaniards, not far from the Mouth of the River Lebo, with a well cultivated Valley of the same Name, inhabited by the Araucans, who often maintain their Liberty against the former with a great deal of Valour and prosperous Success; as well as the People who live in the Mountains and Valleys of Tucapel and Puren, which are likewise Parts of the Imperial Territory: And El Imperial a little Town, yet reckon'd the Metropolis of this Province, and of the whole Government: It is seated on a River of the same Name, and was lately repair'd by the Spaniards, after the great Damage it received from the Araucans.

The Territory of Baldivia borders upon the Imperial on the South, and its capital Town bears the same Name; which is seated on the Mouth of the River Chabin, and has the advantage of a very capacious Harbour; at the distance of 200 Miles Southward from the City of La Concepcion, and 75 from that of El Imperial. This Town has been often ruin'd by the Araucans, but is now rebuilt and stands near a Lake to which it has communicated its Name. Near the Southern Coast of this Province is the Town and Harbour of S. Cebrinan, or S. Cyprian.

The Province of Oformo lyes in the middle, between Baldivia and the Archipelago of Chilue, on the West; and the Andes Mountains, on the East. The principal Towns of this Tract are Oformo, on the Borders of Baldivia, and El Puerto de S. Clara.

Over against the Territory of Oformo, in the Archipelago of Ancud, or Chilue, above fifty Islands Ile. are situated which are of a small Compass, and are partly subject to the Spanish Jurisdiction. The Island of Chiloe, or Chilue, being the most Western, surpasses all the rest in largeness, and serves for the Boundary of the Archipelago, on the West, extending itself farthest from North to South: It is the eighth and last Province of the Imperial Government, and contains several Gold-Mines; but the Natives durst not dig them, lest they should be for ever condemn'd to that Drudgery. It has a Town of the same Name, commonly call'd El Castro de Chilue, and built on the Eastern Coast of the Southern Part; which it taken for the Capital of the Island and of the whole Province.

CHAPTER XV.

MAGELLANICA.

I. Magellanica.

IT remains only to give an Account of the seventh and last Part of Southern America, which is situated on the South, and commonly call'd Magellanica, or Terra Magellanica: It was first discovered A. D. 1520, by Ferdinand Magellanus, or Magalhaens the Portuguese, whom we have often mention'd, in the Name of the King of Spain; when he sought for a Passage out of the Ethiopick Ocean, into the Pacifick, and found out the famous Straight, which as well as the adjacent Country derives its Name from its first Discoverer: Afterwards the Sea-coasts of this Country were more particularly discover'd not only by the Spaniards, but also by the English and Hollanders; but its inland Parts are very little known.

II. Some Authors think fit to comprehend under the Term Magellanica not only the remaining Part of the Continent of Southern America, but also the Islands that lye over against it in the Magellanick Sea. However, Magellanica strictly taken, being the most Southern Part of America, is bounded on the North, by Paraguay; on the West, by Chili, and the Magellanick Sea; on the South, by the Straight of Magellan; and on the East, by the same Sea.

III. The whole Country is included between the 296 and the 323 Degree of Longitude, and between the 37 and the 54 Degree of Southern Latitude. Its Extent is narrowest towards the Magellanick Straight, and the continu'd Ridge of the Andes Mountains runs through its Western Part, to the same Straight: It is water'd by several Rivers, the chief of which are the two most Northern, viz. Desaguadero, and Rio de los Camarones.

IV. The Northern Part of Magellanica which borders upon the two Governments of Chili, nam'd Chucuito and the Imperial, are inhabited (according to M. Simson) by certain People call'd Pulches, and the Southern Part by the Pulches and Patagons P. The latter (according to the Spanish Relation) are of a prodigious Bulk and Gigantick Stature, above ten or twelve Foot high: They generally shave their Heads like Monks, and paint their Faces with divers Colours made of the Juice of several Herbs: They live in Caves, cloath themselves with the Skins of wild Beasts, and use a kind of Root call'd Capar for Bread: These Savages are of a very strong Constitution, fierce, audacious, swift at running, and arm'd with Clubs, Bows and Arrows, taking great Delight in Hunting and Dancing. They are notorious Gluttons, and devour Mans-flesh raw, they are also said to drink a Bucket of Wine, and to eat a Calf at a Meal: Nay, it is reported that they can put Arrows a Cubit and half long down their Throat to the bottom of the Stomach, without any harm. They are Idolaters and worship the Devil under the Name of Setebos. Moreover it is said, that one of these Demi-Giants has Strength enough to carry a Tun of Wine, that three or four of them make no difficulty to row a huge Ship at Sea; that they run as swift as a Stag; and that fifty Spaniards are scarce able to bind one of them: However, the English, who have sometimes made Descents upon those Coasts, are of a quite contrary Opinion, and say, the Natives of this Country are of no bigger size than our Europeans.

The most remarkable Places of Magellanica, are or were Desaguadero, a Town seated in the inland Country, on the Western side of a River of the same Name; El Cabo de las Virgines, i. e. The Virgin-Cape, a Promontory at the entrance of the Magellanick Straight, so nam'd by Magellanus, because it was discover'd on the Festival of St. Ursula, and the 11000 Virgins her Companions; as also, The Virgin Mary's Cape: by the English: Nombre de Jesus, i. e. The Name of Jesus, a Town built by the Spaniards near that Promontory, for the Defence of the Straight, but it soon fell to Ruin: La Ciudad del Rê Felipe, or King Philip's City, which the Spaniards likewise founded, A. D. 1585, in the middle of the Straight, on purpose to obstruct the Passage of the English and Hollanders, but their Design was frustrated; for all the Inhabitants perish'd a little while after, being either destroy'd by the Savages, or starv'd with Hunger; insomuch that the English arriving at that Place two Years after, deservedly impos'd on it the Name of Port Famine: Cape Fromard, or Cape Fruerd, not far from thence; and El Cabo de Victoria, or Cape Victory, at the Mouth of the same Straight, where it runs into the Pacifick Sea.

From the Continent we pass over to the Magellanick Islands, situated over against it, in the Sea that bears the same Name. Among these Madre de Dios, i. e. The Mother of God, a large Island, and Los Evangelistas, or the Evangelist-Isles, call'd Sorlingues by the French, of a small Compass, lye opposite to the Western Coast: Over against the Southern Shore, appear the little Islands nam'd Los Apostolos; and Tierra La Tierra del Fuego, i. e. The Land of Fire, so call'd by Magellanus, because he saw a great number of Fires there in the Night: Others term it The Magellanick Island, by way of Excellency; and indeed it is the largest of all, being separated from Magellanica, by the above-mention'd noted Straight, and extending itself farthest from West to East, between the 285 and the 300 Degree of Longitude: Its Figure resembles that of a Triangle, and its most Southern Promontory is call'd Cape-Horn, by reason that Jacob Le Maire, a Native of Horn in Holland first discover'd it, A. D. 1616, with the adjacent Straight; but the Spaniards impose on it the Name of El Cabo de S. Salvador, i. e. S. Saviour's Cape: At the same time the most Eastern Part of this Island lying next to Le Maire's Strait, was nam'd Mawrice-Land, in Honour of Mawrice Prince of Orange: However, there is no Town or Colony belonging to the Europeans, who only had an opportunity to desery the Sea-coasts.

Staten-Landt, an Island likewise discover'd by the Hollanders in 1616, is remarkable for its Situation, in the middle, between Brower's Strait on the East; and that of Le Maire on the West; being separated by the latter from Tierra del Fuego, or Mawrice-Land. Several other Islands of lesser Note lye between Staten-Landt and Cape Horn, viz. Heremiteus Eylands, i. e. The Hermits Island, the largest of all; those of Thosalo, Barnevelt, Maria, Jesus, Joseph, S. Ilesoufo, &c. Lastly, the Island of Diego Ramirez appears on the West of Cape Horn.

Heremiteus I.

Navigators round the Globe.

It may not be improper perhaps to take some notice of the principal Navigators that made Discoveries toward the Southern parts of the Globe, both South-East and South-West. The first of these was Ferdinand Magalines, or Magellanus, a Portuguese Gentleman, who not being (as he thought) sufficiently encourag'd by his Master King Emanuel, apply'd himself to the Court of Castile, and obtain'd of the Emperor Charles V. five Ships well furnish'd with necessary Provisions, and 250 Men. These set sail from Sevil, Aug. 10. 1519. And at first endeavouring to find a Passage through the great River Plata, were oblig'd to Winter in Port S. Julian, but afterward they happily sail'd through that famous Strait call'd the Magellanick, from the Inventer's Name, and so pass'd from the Atlantick into the Pacifick Ocean, as far as the Islands of los Ladrones, or of Thieves, where Magellanus himself was poison'd; although others affirm that he perish'd in an Engagement at Maran, one of the Philippine Islands, after he had subdu'd that of Cebu, in 1520. However, one of his Ships having sail'd round the Globe, came by the Molucco's and Cape of good Hope, and at length arriv'd safe at Sevil, Sept. 8. 1522.

In the Year 1525, Garcias de Loyasa, a Spaniard, enter'd into the same Strait, giving Names to several Places; and was follow'd by Simon de Alcazova, in 1534. Afterward three Ships were equip'd by the order of the Bishop of Placentia, in 1539, and one of them got through the Strait to Arica, a Port of Peru.

On the thirteenth of November 1577, Sir Francis Drake with five Ships, and 164 Seamen, set out from Plimouth, and having sent back two of them as Impediments, pass'd the Magellan Straights only with three, and enter'd into the Pacifick Sea, where these Ships were dispers'd by a violent Storm, and one of them was never heard of after; nevertheless Drake continu'd sailing along the Coasts of Peru, New Spain, Mexico, California, and other Parts of America, and took several Spanish Vessels richly laden during this famous Voyage round the World, which he finish'd within the space of three Years, returning by the East Indies and Cape of good Hope to the Coasts of England, where he arriv'd on November 2d. 1580. In the mean while Captain John Winter having been separated from Sir Francis, upon their Entrance into the South-Sea, was driven back again into the Strait of Magellan, which he re-pass'd, and was the first that sail'd through this Passage from the Pacifick into the Atlantick Ocean.

The third Compasser of the World was Thomas Candish Esq; who set out in 1586, and very fortunately finish'd that Course in two Years and two Months; in the carrying on of which, both Magellanus and Sir Francis Drake had spent three whole Years. The same renowned Navigator pass'd the Magellanick Straights a second time in 1591, but died in this last Voyage. In 1593, Sir Richard Hawkins sail'd for a long while in sight of Terra Australis, in the Latitude of fifty Degrees, run through the Straights of Magellan the next Year, and was at last taken by the Spaniards, after a sharp fight, on the Coasts of Peru.

The fourth Circum-navigation of the Globe, was perform'd by Oliver Noort, or Noordt, a Hollander, his chief Pilot being Captain Melis an English-man, who had accompanied M. Candish in his Voyage. This Noort steer'd much the same Course with Magellan, Drake, and Candish, and spent three Years in encompassing the Earth. About the same time also, the Dutch Fleet under Sir James Mahe, Simon de Cordes, Sebalt de Wart, &c. where in William Adams was chief Pilot, suffer'd great inconveniencies in these Straights. They discover'd Sebaldi Isles, and a Gulph call'd by them Green Bay, in 54 Degree Latitude. In 1614, George Spilberg, Commander in chief of another Dutch Fleet of six Ships, sail'd through the Straights of Magellan, and the South-Sea, to the East-Indies, and came back from thence by the Cape of good Hope, to the Texel, after having been out near three Years, and finish'd the fifth Circum-navigation of the World.

In 1609 and 1610, Pedro Fernandez Giros, a Portuguese, and Ferdinand de Quir, a Spaniard, (as they both affirm) sail'd at several times about 800 Leagues together on the Coasts of a Southern Continent, to the height of 15 Degree of South Latitude; where they met with a very fruitful, pleasant and populous Country. This vast Tract of Land may be perhaps some part of Fansen Tasman's Land, Van Diemen's Land, New Zealand, New Holland, New Carpentaria, and New Guinea, which were discover'd and coasted by the Dutch, who gave Names to many Bays, Rivers, and Capes hereabouts, in the Years 1619, 1622, 1627, 1628, 1642, and 1644, from the Equinoctial Line, as far as the 44th. Degree of South Latitude. And indeed the Hollanders have made the greatest Discoveries toward the South Terra incognita, but have publish'd very little concerning their Expeditions in those Parts.

In 1615, William Cornelius Schouten of Horn, and Jacob le Maire of Amsterdam, encompass'd the Globe a sixth time, discovering a new Entrance Southward from the Straights of Magellan into the South-Sea, by Cape Horn, in the 57 Degree of South Latitude; which Passage has been ever since known by the Name of Le Maire's Strait. Here they impos'd Names on several Islands and Countries; and having spent two Years and eighteen Days in this Voyage return'd by the East-Indies to Holland. Afterwards in 1618, a Spanish Fleet under the Conduct of Bartholomeo Garcias de Nodal, sail'd through Le Maire's Strait. And in 1623, part of Prince Maurice's Fleet steer'd the same Course, discovering some small Islands in their Passage.

In 1642, Abel Jansen Tasman, a Hollander, made a very remarkable Voyage toward the South Terra Incognita. And in 1643, Captain Brewer, or Brower, found out a new way into the South-Sea, by a Passage call'd after his own Name, lying East of Le Maire's Strait. But in 1669, that famous Navigator and valiant Commander Sir John Narborough, having receiv'd a Commission from King Charles II. to make a better Discovery of these Parts, more especially of the Country of Chili, set out with two Ships, viz. the Sweep-stakes and Bachelour Pink; the former of 300 Tuns burthen, and the other of 70, and return'd in 1671, after having spent above two Years in passing and re-passing the Strait of Magellan, and sailing along the Coasts of Patagonia and Chili, whose Observations and Draughts since publish'd are most judicious and accurate.

In 1680 and 1681, Captain Sharp rambl'd over the South-Sea, steering one while near 800 Leagues to the Eastward; and at another time as many to the Westward; and beating about many Islands and Coasts: But in his return not being able to recover the Straights of Magellan, or those of Le Maire, or Brewer, he was constrain'd to seek for a new Passage farther South than by Cape Horn, and sail'd to the 60 Degree of South Latitude, where in departing from a small place call'd by him the Duke of York's Island, he met with abundance of Ice, Snow, Frost, and Whales, and saw no Land for three Months together, till his arrival at the Island of Barbadoes. Since these Attempts, divers English Ships have pass'd on several Occasions into the South-Sea, both by the Magellanick Straights; and by the South of Cape Horn. Among which that where in Mr. William Dampier travell'd, in the Years 1684, 1685, and 1686, sail'd round the Terra del Fuego by Cape Horn, and pass'd all along the Coasts of Patagonia, Chili, Peru, Terra-Firma, Mexico, and even to the height of California, whence they stood over to the Ladrones and Philippine Islands, and so came home to England by the Cape of Good Hope. None that ever sail'd this Course have done such Service to future Navigators as that ingenious Person; for in the Relation of this Voyage which he printed, all those Coasts are so plainly describ'd, the Latitudes and Longitudes so exactly set down, the Tides, Currents, Trade-Winds, &c. so judiciously and (in all probability) faithfully given an Account of, that his Work would be of inestimable Value, if the State of Affairs ever happen to be such that our Nation may have Occasion to navigate those Seas.

CHAP. XV.

The principal Mountains and Rivers of Southern America.

I.
Andes
Moun^t.

AFTER having made a Description of the whole Continent of Southern America, it is requisite to give a short Account of its principal Mountains and Rivers. The highest Mountains, before mention'd, are the Andes commonly call'd Los Andes by the Spaniards, as also, La Cordillera de los Andes, and La Sierra Nevada, which take their rise in the Province Dos Quixos, in the Northern Part of Peru; from whence they extend themselves in Length with a continu'd Ridge, above 1000 Leagues, through the Countries of Peru, Chili, and Magellanica, as far as the Strait of the same Name. They are distant from the Coast of the Pacifick Sea in some Places twenty Spanish Leagues, in other thirty, and elsewhere forty, and among them are many burning Mountains that cast forth Flames, call'd in Spanish Los Volcanos; more especially in the Country of Chili and its Confines.

II. Among many Rivers that water Southern America, the most eminent are the Orenoque, the Amazons River, and the Paraguay. The River Orenoque, or Orinoque, is otherwise call'd Paria, que^{ll}.

and Yayapari, or Yayapari by the Natives of the adjacent Country: Its Spring-head is plac'd in some Maps in the Southern Tract of that Part of Popayan which is comprehended under Terra Firma, and near the Borders of the Country, which lies about the Amazons River: From thence it passes a great way Eastward through the Southern Part of the vast Province of Paria, and is thus far termed by others Cabeta or Caketa: Afterwards it divides itself into two great Arms, one of which assuming the Name of Negro, flows Southward, waters the most Southern Part of Paria with a small Tract ^{Negro} of the Country about the Amazons River, and at last falls into the same River. The other Arm of the Orenoque retaining its Proper Name, directs its Course Northward, and receives several Rivers during its Passage through Paria; particularly on the West, the Goazar, the Guacar, and the Cassanar, which falls into it in the Confines of Paria and New Andalusia: On the East it takes in the Caora, the Aloica, the Aroy, and the Caroli, by the means of which the spacious Lake Cassipa empties itself into its Channel.

nel. Then this mighty River leaving Paria, traverses New Andalusia, where it is also augmented with several Rivers, and at last disburthens it self thro' a very wide Mouth, which contains a great number of Islands, into the Northern Ocean.

III. We come next to take a view of the Amazon River, commonly call'd El Rio de las Amazonas, and Amazone Rio by the Spaniards; altho' the Country be not inhabited by any of the Race of that Warlike Nation of Women anciently known by the Name of Amazons. This vast River has its Source at the foot of the Andes Mountains, in the Province of Proper Quito, in the Kingdom of Peru, about eight Leagues from the City of the same Name, near the Equinoctial Line and the Frontiers of the Province Dos Quixos: taking its Rise out of two Pools, the greater of which lies on the Hill Guamana; and the lesser, on that of Pulcan; at the distance only of two Leagues one from the other. Thence it flows towards the East and South, thro' the Borders of the Provinces Dos Quixos and Pacamores; and afterwards from West to East, thro' the Northern part of that spacious Country that lies along its Banks; making many Islands, especially towards Peru; which are the Seat of a certain People nam'd Homagnes: It likewise encompasses a large Island, on the South of the Lake Parimé, where the Toupinambous have their Habitation, as it has been elsewhere observ'd. Many Rivers run into that of the Amazon, on its Northern and Southern sides; but we shall only take notice of some of the principal. The River Negro, the largest of all, falls in on the North, with those of Basuruna, Aragantuba, Topara, or Jopara, and Pucumaya: On the South, are receiv'd the Xaxa, or Maragnon, the Yeran, the Amarumaya, the Tapy, the Cava, the Casignares, the Madera or Cayana, the Tapayá, the Paranayba, and the Pacache. Lastly, the Amazon River continues its course for the space of 1200 Leagues, and towards the end becomes extremely wide; and discharges it self thro' two remarkable Mouths, into the Mar del Nord, or Northern Sea; and Caribana, a Province of Terra Firma, and the Country of Brazil. These Mouths are said to extend themselves 84 Spanish Leagues, in breadth, and are beset with a great number of Islands. Moreover, some call it Orellan's River, from John Orellan, a Spaniard, who first discover'd it A. D. 1541; and M. Sanfon observes, that it overflows the adjacent Countries like the Nile in Egypt. The Amazon River is describ'd at large by Peter Teixeira, who view'd it with great accuracy, and spent ten Months in travelling along its whole Course, A. D. 1630.

The third and last noted River of Southern Paraguay America is the Paraguay, call'd by the Na-Flav. natives, as it were, The River of Peabers; and Rio de la Plata, by the Spaniards, from the pieces of Silver that are found therein. It is a great deal wider than the former, and may justly be reckon'd among the largest Rivers of the whole World. It was first discover'd A. D. 1543, by John Diaz a Portuguese; and takes its Rise (according to the opinion of several Authors) in the most Northern Tract in the Country of Paraguay, above the Lake de los Xarayes; at least it flows out of that Lake Southward, and at first separates the Province of Charcas from Proper Paraguay: It divides the Province of Rio de la Plata into two Parts, and is there augmented by several other Rivers. On the West, it receives the Picolmayo, almost over against the City of L'Assuncion, with the Rio Verméjo, R. Blanco, R. Salado and R. Tercero: On the East, the River Paraná falls into it, at the Town of Corrientes; as also, the Uruguay, or Urugaig, on the Confines of the Provinces of Rio de la Plata and Urugaig. At last, below the City of Buenos Ayres, between the same Provinces it rolls into the Sea of Paraguay, thro' a very wide Mouth, which lies out for the space of 40 Leagues, between the Promontories of Sant' Antonio and Santa Maria. The Course of this River is so swift, that the Waters are said to continue fresh at the distance of 20 Miles from its Mouth; and Maffeus assures us, that it overflows the neighbouring Territories every Year: Its first Increase, which happens in the Month of June, is inconsiderable; but afterwards it rises up to a great Height, and when it returns to its proper Channel, the Mud that is left behind, renders the Ground extremely fruitful: So that it is in some respects very like the River Nile, of which we have before given a particular Account, in Chap. VIII. of the preceding Part, among the principal Rivers of Ethiopia.

COUNTRIES about the POLES,

North and South.

BY the Countries about the Poles I understand not only the Countries that lie near the Poles, but also those Islands and Peninsulae lying over against the old and new Continent; that have been lately discovered; which I shall divide into the Arctick or Northern, and Antartick or Southern, as they are set down in this Table, viz.

S E C T. I.

The Arctick, or Northern Countries.

I call by the name of the Arctick Countries all those Regions, which lye toward the Northern or Arctick Pole, which are newly discovered. Their situation is almost all in the Frigid or Cold Zone. The Extent of them is so irregular, that I know not how to write any thing of that. 'Tis enough, That they are discovered, and to set down the Names by which the Natives call them, as we have them from divers Travellers thither. Nevertheless we may describe their Bounds which part them in our Upper Hemisphere, from Muscovy and Tartary by the Frozen-sea; and in the other Hemisphere by the South-sea, Christian-Sea, and Hudson's Streights, which separate them from the Northern America.

According to our last Relations, the Air is extremely cold; the Sun appears but little in several places for above the greatest parts in the the Year; but in some places more, in some less, according to their distance from the Equator. In general it may be said of them, They have much Pasture, large Meadows, many Forests, where the Inhabitants maintain a great number of Beasts; That they live in some of the Countries upon Hunting and Fishing; That they have no Corn nor Wine. All the Country is Islands and Peninsulae. They have divers sorts of Beasts, especially Bears, Foxes and Deer. Hudson, Davis and Frobisher's Streights are in this Lower Hemisphere; so called, because Gavot, Willoughby, Frobisher, Davis, Hudson, and some other Englishmen, discover'd 'em, endeavouring to find a Passage that way to the East-Indies; as the Dutch did, by the Streights of Weigats or Nassau, which are on the North of our Continent; but both to no purpose, because of the continual Ice which hindred their Sailing, and prevents all Navigation, beyond the 80 Degr. of Latitude. Tho' it be said, That some Dutch Pilots went to the 88 Degree, and found a Passage towards China; that Passage is unknown to the other Nations of Europe, who make ordinarily but three Voyages towards the North: 1. To Archangel in Russia, for Furs. 2. To Spitzberg in Greenland, for Whale-fishing. 3. To Norway, for Wood and Herings.

However, it may not be improper here to Discover, give a brief Account of the several Navigations, viz. and Discoveries made toward the North-east North and North-west; viz. Nova Zembla, North-east East and Greenland or Spitzberg, and North-west Greenland, North-land, West- land, commonly call'd Greenland and Engroland. The first Discovery of these Countries is owing to an Accident; for in 1380, Nicholas and Antony Zani, two Brothers and rich Citizens of Venice, having set Sail from the Streight of Gibraltar for Flanders and England, were accidentally driven Northwards by violent Storms, even as far as Friezland, Iceland and Greenland. But in 1497, John Cabot and Sebastian his Son of the same Nation received a Commission from our King Henry VII. to undertake the like Voyage; who made a Draught and Description of some North-west parts of America, and brought along with them four of the Natives.

These Discoveries gave rise to a Project of finding out a nearer Passage that way to the East-Indies; which was attempted many times, but without success. A short Account of those Voyages is as follows.

Sir Hugh Willoughby was the first that attempted to discover a North-east Passage into the Indies; and to that purpose set out with three sail of Ships in the year 1553. It is very probable that he landed on Nova Zembla and Greenland; but we have no Memoirs of this Voyage, except certain short and imperfect Notes which were taken off from his Table after his death; wherein it is express'd, That the Fleet under his Command parted from Seynam, which lies in 70 Deg. of North Lat. on the second day of August: That on the fourteenth they were above 160 Leagues from the same place to the North-east, and continu'd sailing until Septemb. 14. when they came ashore on a high, rocky and desert Country; from whence the Cold and Ice forc'd them to return more Southerly, which they did till they reach'd a River in Lapland call'd Arzina, where, by the continuance of foul Weather they were shut up in the Harbour, and the next Spring were all found frozen to death in their Ship.

A few years after this misfortune, viz. about 1556, one Captain Stephen Burroughs, sometime Comptroller of the Navy to Queen Elizabeth, prosecuting the same Design, pass'd the North Cape, and sailing farther Eastward, discover'd the Wayats, or Streight that runs between the South part of Nova Zembla and the Country of the Samoieds; thus, continuing his Course, he arriv'd in 112 Deg. 25 Min. of Longitude, and 76 of Northern Latitude. Afterward he sail'd to 80 Deg. 11 Min. Latitude, and return'd thence to Nova Zembla; having cruiz'd (as it most probable) on the Coasts of Greenland; since he makes mention of the desolate Country, and the blew Ice, and great numbers of various Fowl thereabouts.

The first Person whose Name we find celebrated in History for endeavouring to search out a North-west Passage into China, was Sir Martin Frobisher, who, in three several Voyages, made divers new Discoveries of large Bays, Streights, Islands, Capes, &c. and impos'd on them different Names. For in the year 1576, arriving with two Barks at the height of 62 Deg. North Latitude, he descri'd a great Inlet, since call'd Frobisher's Streights, and sail'd into it 60 Leagues; with main Land on each side. He met with Inhabitants along the Coasts, whose Canoes of little Boats were made of Seal-skins, but had wooden Keels. The Ships Company exchange'd Toys with these Natives for Salmon and other Fish; and brought home certain Marcasites; which were taken for Gold-odr; but after they had made a more exact search the next Year, with a Design to carry away a quantity thereof, it prov'd to be nothing but black Lead. At the same time they found a Silver-mine, which nevertheless lay so deep within the Rocks, that it could not be dug; as also a dead Fish about 12 Foot long, somewhat resembling a Porpois in its shape. It had a Horn growing out of its Snout (of the same nature as those commonly call'd Unicorns Horns) which is still preserv'd in a Repository at Windsor, and is six Foot in length. In 1578 the same Sir Martin undertook his third Voyage, wherein; having pass'd as far as seem'd convenient to him, he took possession of the Land in the Name of Queen Elizabeth, and call'd it Meta Incognita.

In the Year 1580, Arthur Pett and Charles Jackman having receiv'd a Commission from Queen Elizabeth to follow the Track of Stephen Burroughs, rambled over the Northern Seas, and in all likelihood landed in Greenland; but there is nothing particularly known concerning their Voyage, except that they pass'd the Streights of Wayats and launch'd into the Ocean to the Eastward, where, meeting with vast heaps of Ice, they were constrain'd to return with great peril and labour; insomuch, that they lost one another by reason of the foul Weather, and Pett was never heard of after.

In 1583, Sir Humphrey Gilbert, by the direction of Sir Francis Walsingham, Principal Secretary of State, sail'd, upon the same Design; to Newfound-land and the great River of St. Lawrence in Canada, took possession of the Country in the Name of Queen Elizabeth, and settled a Fishing-trade there. This Voyage was made upon suggestion of a certain Greek Mariner, who positively affirm'd to some English Gentlemen, That himself had pass'd through a great Streight to the North of Virginia from the North-west Ocean, and offer'd to be Pilot for the Discovery, but died before he came into England.

In 1585, Mr. John Davis having undertaken with two Barks to search out the North-west Coasts, made farther Discoveries in those Parts; and nam'd the Land he came to Cape Desolation, being a part of Greenland; where he found many pieces of Furr and Wool like Beaver, and exchange'd some Commodities with the Natives, who often repair'd to him in their Canoes bringing Stag-skins, white Hairs, small Cod, Muscles, &c. Afterward he arriv'd in the Latitude of 64 Deg. 15 Min. where was found a great quantity of such Oar as Frobisher had before brought into England; and steer'd thence to 66 deg. 40 min: as far as Mount Raleigh, Torne's-sonnd, &c. In 1586 he made a second Voyage to the same Coasts, searching out many places toward the West; and the next Year, in a third Voyage, came to 72 Deg. 12. Min. the Compass varying to 82 Deg. Westward. He gave the Name of London-Coast to the Land, and the Streight (being 40 Leagues wide) was from him call'd Fretum Davis.

Thus the English Nation alone, for a long time, frequented those Northern Seas till 1578, that a Dutch Ship came to Kola in Lapland, and a Year or two after another to St. Nicholas, by the instigeinfliction of an English Man who set himself against the Company of Russian Merchants; whereupon the Hollanders crept in more and more, and in 1594, sent William Barents, a skilful Navigator, and some others, to find out a Passage from thence to the Indies. In 1596 the same William Barents; accompanied with two other Dutch Pilots, viz. Jacob Heemskirk and John Cornelis Ryp, first discover'd Beav or Cherry Island, and pass'd from thence to Greenland; but Barents being separated from them, sail'd along the Coasts of Nova Zembla to the 76 Degree of Latitude, until at length his Ship was driven ashore, and broke in pieces by the Ice, so that all the Mariners were compell'd to Winter there, and endur'd the utmost extremity of Cold. Afterward with much difficulty, in two Boats they got to Kola in Lapland; but William Barents dyed before their Arrival, to the great grief of the whole Company.

Cherry
Island.

In 1603 Stephen Bennet was employ'd, but went no further than Cherry Island, and brought from thence a certain quantity of Lead Oar. In 1608, that famous Navigator Mr. Henry Hudson, was sent forth to discover the North Pole, and sail'd even to the 82 Degree of North Latitude; but being satisfied that there was no North-East-Passage, he was appointed to make the like trial in the North-West Seas. Therefore in 1610 he set sail again, and proceeded 100 Leagues farther than any had done before, and gave several Denominations to certain Places, as Desire provookes, Ile of God's Mercies, Prince Henry's Cape, King James's Cape, Queen Ann's Cape, &c. besides the Straight and Bay that still bear his Name. But the Ice hinder'd him from continuing his Course farther, and the Sedition of his Men from returning home.

Hudson's
B.y.

In 1611 Sir Thomas Button, Servant to Henry Prince of Wales, eldest Son of King James I. being enjoy'd by that renowned young Prince to pursue the North-West Discoveries, pass'd through Hudson's Straight; and sailing above 200 Leagues to the South-Westward over a Sea above 85 Fathom deep, discover'd a large Continent, call'd by him New Wales. Afterward having endur'd great Fatigues in his wintering at Port Nelson, notwithstanding the loss of many of his Men, he search'd out the whole Bay, which is now known by his Name, even back again almost to Digge's Island, and found out the large Tract of Land which he nam'd Cory's Swans Nest. Moreover in the Years 1612, 1615, 1616, James Hall, and William Baffin, proceeded much farther in the North-West parts, and impos'd Names on divers Places discover'd by them, besides that the English Merchants perceiving these Northern Voyages to be so very profitable, encreas'd the number of their Shipping to thirteen or fourteen yearly, under the Conduct of Poole, Fotherby, Edge, Hely, and other skilful Pilots, from whom several Sounds, Bays, Promontories, &c. have receiv'd their respective Names.

In the mean while the King of Denmark observing the Progress of the neighbouring Nations in these Northern Seas, began to consider that the Traffick of his own might be much advanc'd by the like discoveries, being also desirous to renew his ancient Pretensions to these Countries, in case any thing should be found out worth the claiming. Therefore he caus'd two Ships and a Pinnace to be fitted out in the Year 1605. Of these, Captain John Cunningham, a Scot was Admiral; Godske Lindenax, a Danish Nobleman was Vice-Admiral, and the chief Pilots were James Hall and John Knight, Englishmen. Godske arriving on some part of the Country, barter'd some small Wares with the Natives, took two of them, and return'd to Denmark. The other two Vessels came to Cape Farewell, sail'd from thence to Frobisher's Straights, gave Danish Names to certain Places, seiz'd on three of the Inhabitants, and at Cunningham's Ford met with a kind of Silver Mine, which was afterward try'd by the English, and found to be of no value. In 1606, four Ships and a Pinnace were sent thither under the same Godske Lindenax Admiral, and James Hall Pilot-General, who brought away five of the Natives. In 1607 James Hall receiv'd a new Commission; but the Sea-men mutining as soon as they made the Coast, brought the Ship back again into Denmark, without effecting any thing. However, his Danish Majesty set out two other Ships mann'd with Norwegian and Islandish Mariners, and commanded by Christian Richardson, a Holsteiner; but these returned before they came in view of the Shore. The rest of their Expeditions are unknown until An. 1619, when John Munck was sent out with two Ships, which arriv'd safe at Cape Farewell, from thence this Pilot steer'd to 62 Degree 20 Min. (as it is probable near Digge's Island) and winter'd there, calling the Place Munck's Winter Harbour, and the Continent New Denmark. The South-part of Hudson's Bay New he likewise nam'd Mare novum, and that part Denmark toward Greenland, Mare Christianum. But of all his Christi- Company, which consisted of forty six in a Ship, an-Sev. and sixteen in a Pinnace, scarce so many were left alive, as were able to bring the Pinnace through extrem Danger to their own Country. However, in the Year 1653, Frederick III. King of Denmark, resolving to advance the Northern Discoveries, caus'd three Ships to be fitted out with skilful Mariners, enjoining them to take a most exact Account of all the Coasts and Places where they arriv'd. These having pass'd the Straight of Waygats, met with some Inhabitants of Nova Zembla in their Canoes or little Fishing-boats, and steer'd from thence to Greenland. These particular Adventures are contain'd in the French Relations of the Danish Voyages publish'd at Paris by M. Peyrere and Martiniere.

We do not read of any more Voyages from England to find out the North-West Passage since the last Expedition of William Baffin in 1616, until the Reign of King Charles I. when Captain Luke Fox was sent upon the same design in 1630, in his Majesty's Pinnace nam'd the Charles, victuall'd for eighteen Months. He trac'd Frobisher, Hudson, Davis, Button and Baffin, meeting with Whales, much Ice and Fowls, and built a Pinnace in Port Nelson, where he found several Remains left by Sir Thomas Button, but no Natives or Inhabitants, though in other parts of those Seas he saw some Savages. About the same time, viz. in 1631, Captain

Thomas

Thomas James being employ'd by the Merchants of Bristol for the like purpose, sail'd from Cape Farewell by the Islands of Resolution to Mill and Nottingham Isles, as also those of Mansfield, from whence he steer'd over a large Bay to the Westward near Port Nelson, and nam'd the Land New South Wales, Hereabouts meeting with Captain Fox, they congratulated one another, but were soon separated by foul Weather; so that Captain James still continu'd roving up and down, and giving Name to divers Places; as Cape Henrietta Maria, Lord Weston's Island, The Earl of Bristol's Island, Sir Thomas Roe's Island, Earl of Danby's Island, Charlton Island, &c. in this last he Winter'd in the Latitude of 52 Deg. 3 Min. and having built a little Pinnacle out of his Ship, pass'd over to Cary's Swan's Nest, whence he return'd by Cape Charles and Salisbury Isle, and arriv'd on the Coasts of England in 1632. The Voyage of this most skilful Navigator was publish'd in 1633, by the special Command of King Charles I. containing a very accurate and judicious Account of the Hardships he endur'd; as also of the Straights, Capes, Bays, Tides, Soundings, Variations of the Compass, Natural Rarities, &c.

The last Voyage, in order to make a more perfect Discovery (if it were possible) of the North-east Seas; for a Passage to the East Indies, was undertaken in the Year 1676, by the Ingenious Captain John Wood. Having receiv'd a Commission from King Charles II. he arriv'd in the 76 Degree of North Latitude, but unfortunately lost his Ship nam'd the Speedwell on the Coast of Nova Zembla, and return'd home in the Prosperous Pink that accompanied him under the Command of Captain Flaxer. His Opinion is, that it is impossible to Sail this Way to China and Japan, as Captain James before had declared, being both induc'd thereto by the situation of the Land, the reversion and uncertainty of half Tides, the motion of the Ice, &c. Besides, that the Fogs, Snow, Frosts, the vast Islands of Ice, and the tempestuousness of the Weather, are altogether insuperable.

ESTOTILAND is on the North of America, and is divided from it by Hudson's Strait. Antonius Zomi the Venetian, is said to have discover'd it in 1390, or thereabouts; and John Scolve, a Polonian, found it out again in 1477. He was lost in the Sea, as well as Michael Corterealis. This Country is very fruitful, especially in Gold. The Inhabitants are very industrious. The English possess on the Coast, Terra Labrador, or New Britain, or Terra Cortereales; but they know nothing but the Coast.

GROENLAND, Groenlandia, call'd also Groinland, and more anciently Engroenland, lies (according to the report of the Islanders) like half Moon about the North of the Country, at the distance of four Days sailing. Cape Farewell, its most Southern Promontory, is situated in the Latitude of 60 Degr. 30 Min. but how far the Continent may extend it self Northward, is unknown. The Eastern and Western sides are encompass'd with two vast Oceans, but at what Degrees of Longitude, is not yet discover'd. This Land is suppos'd to have been first discover'd by a Norwegian Gentleman nam'd Eric Rotsep, or Red-head, who having committed a Murder in Island, to save his Life attempted to make an escape into another Country, whereof he had only heard some obscure flying Reports. This Gentleman was so fortunate as to get safe to the Harbour of Sandibaia, lying between two invidious Promontories, one on an Isle over against Greenland, which he call'd Huidferken or White Skirt, by reason of its being covered with Snow; the other on the Continent, bearing the Name of Hans Eric. He Winter'd in the Island, and afterward passing into the Continent, impos'd on it the Name of Greenland or Greenland, from its flourishing Verdur. His Son being sent to Olaus Trugger King of Norway, to procure a Pardon, easily obtain'd it upon Information of the new Discovery. Thus, in process of time, a Plantation was settled there, and two Cities were built, viz. Garder and Albe; the latter was honour'd with a Bishop's See and the Residence of the Norwegian Vice-Roy, the Cathedral Church being dedicated to St. Antony. However, these new Inhabitants having been long since destroy'd, either by the Natives, the Rage of an Epidemical Disease call'd the Black Plague, or otherwise, very little Intelligence concerning Greenland has come to us since the Year 1349. Nevertheless in 1389 (as they say) the King of Denmark determining to re-establish his Dominion in those Parts, sent a Fleet thither; which having suffer'd Shipwreck, he was discourag'd from any farther Enterprize, until of late that Navigation was somewhat renew'd by Christian IV. who was wont to call this Country his Philosopher's Stone; in regard that it was sometimes not to be found when his Ships undertook a Voyage thither; and because a certain Dane in 1626 brought some Sand from thence which was of the same colour and weight with Gold.

The Air in Greenland is so excessive cold that the Danes cannot dwell there; neither does the Soil produce any thing but Moss, with some few Bushes and Plants; the Country consisting for the most part in High-lands and Mountains continually cover'd with Snow; but the Southern parts more than the Northern, which by reason of the terrible Ice and Cold, are very little known. Among the Beasts, the chief are Bears, Foxes, Rain-deer and Dogs; there is also great plenty and variety of Fish, as Whales, Seals, Dog-fish, &c. But on these Coasts are caught the greatest quantities of Sea-Unicorns, whose Horns are so much esteem'd, and kept as Rarities even in the Cabinets of Princes. All the Navigators that arrive here often observe a wonderful Meteor call'd a North-light, which usually appears about the time of the New Moon, and tho' only in the North, yet enlightens the whole Country; perhaps it may be the same which is sometimes seen in England, especially in the Northern Parts, and commonly termed Sircaising. It is said to resemble a great Pillar or Beam of Fire, darting out Rays and Streams every where. It also moves from one place to another, leaving behind it a kind of Mist and Cloud, and continues till hid by the Sun-beams.

The Greenlanders are generally of a low Inhabitants Stature, of a ripe Olive Colour, and some of them them them quite Black; having black Hair, flat Noses, broad Faces, and Lips turned up. The Women frequently stain their Faces in blew, and sometimes black Streaks, letting the Colour into their very Skin by pricking it with a sharp Bone, so that it can never be worn out. These Natives are not unlike the Somoyeids and Laplanders, being very healthy, active and strong. They are also courageous, and sometimes desperate, often choosing rather to throw themselves down the Rocks, than stand to be taken. But they are true Barbarians, extremely thievish, treacherous and revengeful, not to be won by any kindness or fair dealing. They live altogether by Hunting and Fishing, make Bread of Fish-bones ground to Meal, and drink the Sea-water without receiving any prejudice by it. They ordinarily go a Fishing with Darts, which are strongly barbed, and have Bladders fasten'd to them at the other end; that the Fish, when struck, may spend its strength in struggling to get under Water, yet can't do it, and so is easily taken. Their Cloaths are either made of Bird-skins with the Feathers and Down upon them, or of those of Seals, Dog-fish, or Wild Beasts. They wear the hairy sides of them outward in Summer, and inward in Winter, and in vehement cold Weather carry two or more Suits one upon another. They also dress their Skins very well, and sew them exceeding strong with Sinews of Beasts and Needles made of Fish-bones. But their Ingenuity appears in nothing so much as in their Canoes or Boats, which are made of Whale-bone about an Inch thick and very broad, stitch'd close together with strong Sinews and cover'd with Seal-skins. These Boats are wrought sharp at both ends in form of a Weaver's Shuttle, so as they may be row'd either way, being from ten to twenty Foot long, and two broad; they have a Deck of the same Materials fasten'd to the sides, in the midst whereof is a round hole as big as the waist of a Man; so that when he goes to Sea he sets himself in that Hole, stretching out his Feet forward into the hollow of the Vessel, which is row'd only with one Oar about six Foot long, having a Paddle six Inches broad at each end, serving both to balance and move the Boat, which is done with incredible swiftness, inso-much that one of our Skiffs with ten Oars is not able to accompany them. And we are inform'd by the Danish Relations, That the Groenlanders row'd so swift, that they even dazzl'd the Eyes of the Spectators; and tho' they often crossed, yet never interfer'd or fell foul one upon another. As for their Religion they are Idolaters, and seem to have a great veneration for the Sun. They have also been seen lying flat on the Earth, and muttering certain Prayers or Charms to the Devil; whose proper Habitation they believe to be under Ground. John Munck, and divers others that have travell'd farther into the Country, found many Images, such as we commonly make of Demons and hellish Fiends with Horns, Beaks, Claws and cloven Feet; near which lay quantities of Bones of Beasts, as of Deer, Foxes, Dogs, &c. suppos'd to have been offer'd to them in Sacrifice.

New Land; but was known to the Ancients (as it is probable) under the Name of Cerambrina. It lies on the North of Moscovy, separated from thence by the Straights of Waygat or Nassaw; but whether it be an Island, or join'd to the Continent of Tartary, is not certainly known. It was discovered by Stephen Burroughs, in the Year 1556; and since visited by several Persons both of the English and Dutch Nation; who have in vain attempted to find out a Passage that way into the Tartarian Sea, and so farther to Cathay, China, Japan, &c.

This Country (according to the Information of Captain John Wood, who lost his Ship there) is for the most part perpetually cover'd with Snow, neither can one walk on the few bare Plats of Ground, by reason that they are boggy; upon the Surface whereof grows a kind of Moss, bearing a small blew and yellow Flower; under which Green-sod, in digging about two Foot deep, appears a firm Body of Ice. The same Ingenious Pilot assures us, That the Snow lies here, contrary to what it does in any other Country; since in all other Climates it melts soonest away near the Shoar, but here the Sea beats against the snowy Cliffs, that in some places are as high as either of the Forelands in Kent; the Sea having wash'd underneath the Snow a prodigious way, and the Snow hanging over, most fearful to behold: But there are many Rivulets of very good Water, melted from the Snow, which run down every quarter of a Mile from Hills into the Sea. On the Hills are found abundance of Slate-Stone, and on the Shoar very good black Marble with white Veins. The Dutch, who wintered in Nova Zembla, mention no other Beast than Bears, Foxes, and such others as live upon Prey; for that (say they) there is neither Leaves nor Grass to afford any Fodder for tame Cattel; nevertheless Captain Wood found the track of many large Deer, and saw a small Creature much like a Coney, but not so big as a Rat, together with some few little Birds like Larks. Moreover some English Merchants that resided in Russia, have affirm'd that there is a spacious Lake upon Nova Zembla, wherein are bred a great number of Swans and Geese, which molt their Feathers about St. Peter's Day; and that at that Time the Russians pass over thither to gather these Feathers and kill the Fowls, which they dry and bring into their own Country for Winter-Provision.

SPITSBERG, otherwise call'd North-east Green-GREENLAND, took its Dutch Name from the land. (sharp-pointed Rock and Mountains with which it is environ'd; Spirz in that Language signifying pointed, and Berg a Hill or Mount. It reaches from the 76 Deg. of North-Latitude, to Deg. 82, but how much farther, as also whether Island or Continent, is not as yet discovered. Indeed our Mariners generally take it for an Island, and the Dutch only conjecture that the Land is extended more North, because the Ice stands firm, and does not float as in the open Sea. The South Parts look toward the Promontories of Finland, Lapland, the North-Cape, &c. The next Land on the East is Nova Zembla, and the large Territories of Greenland or Engraenland on the West, but those at so vast a distance, that they cannot be reckoned as its Confines. The principal Harbours are, 1. Soub-haven, which is capable of containing above 40 Ships at one time, and where-in faulty Vessels are often repair'd. 2. Mauritus-Bay, so call'd by the Hollanders, where some have winter'd; and near it stand a few Cottages, which they built for the trying up their Oil, with a Piece of Ordnance for their Defence. These Houses they termed Schneavenberg, from Schmer, signifying Griefe, and the Herlem-Cookery, but all other Nations usually burn theirs before their Departure. 3. The Northern-Bay, where is an Island the Dutch name Vogel-Sang, from the great Noise the Fowl make there in taking their Flight. 4. Monyer's-Bay, the farthest North of the Western-part of Greenland. 5. Muscle-Haven, lying at the Mouth of the Straits of Wygats. 6. Walter-Thymen's Ford, which the English commonly call Alderman Freeman's Inlet, and is a large Mouth of a River, as yet undiscover'd.

NOVA ZEMBLA, was so call'd by the Russians, the word in their Language signifying

The whole Country is so encompassed with Ice that it is very difficult to come near the Shores, and the Air is so extreme cold that the Europeans cannot dwell there with safety of their Lives; as neither in Greenland nor Nova Zembla. The Soil, as much as hath been hitherto discovered, is nothing but Rocks or Heaps of vast Stones, so steep that they seem ready to tumble down; and indeed many great Pieces often break off from the Tops with a terrible Noise. The greatest part of the Mountains are of Red Earth, and communicate that Colour to the Snow upon them, which often appears marbled, and resembles as it were the Boughs and Branches of Trees, giving a bright Lustre to the Air or Skies, as if the Sun shone. There are also 7 bright blue Mountains in a Line, which tinge the Snow and Ice with the same colour, and be twixt them many sharp-pointed Rocks, the Holes whereof afford Nests to an infinite multitude of Fowls, whose Dung being mixt with the Moss, washed down by the melted Snow, makes Mould in the Clefts and Valleys, which lying open to the Sun-Beams, when the Ice is dissolv'd produceth some few Plants, as a kind of Cabbage-Lettice, Scurvy-Grafs, Sorrel, Snakeweed, Mouffe-ear, a kind of wild Strawberry, divers sorts of Ranunculus's semper vivas, &c.

The Beasts of this Country are only these, viz. Foxes white, grey, tawny and black; Rain-Deer, which grow extreme fat by feeding upon yellow Moss; white Bears of a prodigious Size, some of them being 6 Foot high, and their Skins 14 foot long; Water Bears, that live by what they catch in the Sea, where they have been seen swimming 12 Miles from any Shore, Seals or Sea-Dogs and Morfes. Very few Land-fowl breed here, of which the most remarkable is the Snite or Strand-Runner, of the bigness of a Lark, with a four-square Bill resembling a Rask, that feeds on Worms and does not taste fishy: But of Water-Fowl there is great variety, as Snow-Birds and Ice-Birds, so call'd from their running upon the Ice; Mountain-Ducks, Willocks, Red-Geese, Stints, Gulls, Noddies, Sea-Pigeons, Sea-Parrots Kirmews, Mallebucks, Pigeon-divers, Lumbs, Rathlers or Aldermen, Burgermeisters or Mayors, Rotger-Divers, Strunt-Jagers or Dung-Hunters, &c. Most of these Birds, except the Strunt-Jager, Kirmew and Mountain-Ducks, make their Nests upon the high Rocks, to be secured from the Bears and Foxes. They sit in so numerous Flocks, especially at the time when their young ones are hatch'd, about the latter End of June and beginning of July, that at their taking Flight they shade the Ground from the Sun-Beams, as it were a Cloud, and make such a Noise that one can hardly hear another speak. There are also great quantities of Fish in these Seas, as Seals or Sea-Dogs, Morfes or Sea-Horses, Hays, Dragon-Fish, Buts-Head, Unicorns, Sword-Fish, Mackarel, Lobsters, Garnets, Shrimps, Star-Fish, &c. But the chiefest Profit that draws Men to these desert and disconsolate Places, ariseth from the Whale-Fishing, of which perhaps it may not be unpertinent here to give a Description.

As to the natural History of Whales, the Writings of Authors are confus'd, some reckoning Fishing to several Species, and others, as Wormius and Bar-djavil. ibolinus, making them up 22; giving them various Names from their Difference in Colours, Fins, Teeth, Whalebone, Oyl, Sperma Ceti, &c. But the Fish properly call'd the Whale, for the catching of which our Ships chiefly undertake the Voyage to Spitsberg and Greenland, differs from other Whales in his Fins and Mouth, that is altogether destitute of Teeth, instead whereof there are long, black, somewhat broad and horny Flakes, all jagg'd like Hairs. The Head is commonly the third part of the whole Fish, yet some have bigger than others. Their Lips are plain smooth and black, somewhat bended, like the Letter S, and end underneath the Eyes, before the two Fins, being lock'd one into another when drawn together. Within, on the uppermost Lip, lies that which we call Whale-bone, of a brown, black and yellow Colour, with Streaks of several Colours, others being of a blue and light blue Tincture, are reputed to come from young Whales; the smallest Whalebone is before, in the Mouth, and behind toward the Throat, but the middlemost is the largest and longest, reaching sometimes about the length of 2 or 3 Men; these are covered all over with long Hairs, like Horse-Hair, hanging down on both Sides round about the Tongue; on one Side, all in a Row, are 250 pieces of Whalebone, and as many on the other, besides some others so small that they cannot be conveniently cut out, which is a peculiar Trade, abundance of Iron-Tools belonging thereto. The lower part of the Whale's Mouth is generally white, and the Tongue, lying amidst the Whale-bones, is very close ty'd to the undermost Chap or Lip; it is large and white, with black Spots at the Edges, consisting of a soft spongy Fat, so hard to be cut that it is often flung away, tho' otherwise it would yield 6 or 7 Barrels of Train-Oil. On the Head stands a Hovel or Bump, and at the Top of it, on each side is a Spout hole, bended like an S, or the Hole of a Violin, out of which the Whale blows the Water, especially when wounded, so fiercely that it roars like a hollow Wind, or the Waves of the Sea in a Storm; which Noise may be heard at a League's Distance. The Eyes lye very low almost at the End of the Upper-Lip, and are not much bigger than those of a Bullock, with Eye-Lids and Hair like those of a Man; the Chrysal of the Eye is not much bigger than a Pea, clear white, and transparent, the Colour of some is yellowish, and of others pure white. The Shape of the whole Fish is not unlike that of a Shoe-Maker's-Last, if you look upon it from beneath; their Belly and Back are generally reddish, but underneath the Belly they are white; yet some of them are Coal-black, some of them are also curiously marbled on their Fins, Back and Tail. The young ones are bigger than a Hoghead, when first brought forth. At the Sides of the Pudendum, of the Female, stand out two Breasts, with Teats on them like those of Cows, which nevertheless are, as it were, sheath'd within till the young one comes to suck; some of these Beasts are all over white, others speckled with black and blue Spots, like a Lapwing's Egg, the Milk that issues from them being white and sweet, but of a somewhat fishy Taste. The Bones of the Whale are hard as those of large four-footed Beasts, but porous as a Sponge, and filled with Marrow. His Flesh, which appears coarse and hard, like that of a Bull, is alone by it self, and the Fat lying at the Top, between the Flesh and Skin, is about 6 Inches thick on the Back and Belly, as also a Foot thick upon the Fins, proportionable to the Size of the Fish, but the Fat of the under Lip is often thicker than two Foot. The Tail does not stand up as those of most other Fishes, but lies horizontal, as that of the Fin-Fish, But's-Head, Dolphin, &c. being three, three and a half, and sometimes four Fathom broad; with this the Whale winds himself as a Vessel is turned by the Rudder, and his Fins serve instead of Oars, so that he rows along as swiftly as a Bird flies, and makes a long Track in the Sea, which remains divided for a while as that of a huge Ship under Sail.

As for the Food of the Whale, the Ancients thought that he liv'd upon the Froth of the Sea, churn'd with his violent beating on the Water; others say, he is nourish'd with such Weeds and Plants as the Sea affords, since good store of them have been sometimes found in his Stomach: But it is most probable that his chiefest Meat are a certain sort of small Crabs, otherwise call'd Sea-Beetles or Sea-Spiders, with which the Bays of Greenland are so cover'd that they seem all over black; these frequently hang thick on his Fins and Hairs, and are afterward suck'd into his Mouth. Indeed not only the Crabs themselves, but also great quantities of little Stones, call'd Oculi Cancrorum, have been taken out of his Stomach. The Whales, as well as other Beasts, have their peculiar Distempers and divers Enemies; of these last the chief are, 1. A kind of Lowse or Insect, having many Feet and a Head like an Acorn, with 4 Horns, which eats through the Skin to devour the Fat. 2. The Saw-Fish or Sword-Fish, which has a long Bone on the End of his Snout, set on each side with Teeth like a Saw; he seldom gives over encountering the Whale till he has kill'd him, yet eats up nothing but his Tongue. 3. The Hay, a long round and thin Fish, yet very voracious, whose Mouth, shap'd as that of the Sword-Fish, is full of sharp Teeth, three upper and three under Rows one by another; with these he bites great Pieces from the Whale, as if dug out with a Spade, and often devours all his Fat. These Fishes are also very eager after the Flesh of Men, and assault many that go to swim or wade in the Sea; they are usually taken with a Bait of Flesh fasten'd to a Hook with a strong Iron Chain, for they would soon sheer a Rope asunder with their Teeth.

The manner of Catching Whales is thus; When any are seen or discover'd by their Blowing or Spouting up of Water, which may be discern'd at a great distance, upon notice given, all the Mariners get into the Long-Boats, which hold about 6 or 7 Men apiece. These row till they come very near the Whale, and then the Harpooner, who always sits before in the Boat; takes an opportunity to throw out his Harpoon; which is an Iron shap'd at the Point like an Arrow, and fix'd at the End of a Stick or Pole, having two Beards, sharp at the Edge and blunt on the Backs, otherwise it would tear out and all the Labour would be lost. The best Harping-Irons are made of clean and fine Steel, not too much harden'd, so that they may be bended without snapping, for 200 Pound (a middling Whale being valued at so much) is often lost for want of such a well-temper'd Instrument, which is light behind and heavy toward the Point, so that fling it which way you will, it always falls upon the Point: To the End or Handle of the Harpoon is fasten'd a Rope 5 or 7 fathom long, and about an Inch thick, being more pliable than the other Cords that are afterward tyed to it (for it is made of the finest and softest Hemp, not daub'd with Tar, so that it swells and grows hard in the Water.) In every one of the Sloops a whole Heap of Lines lye between the Seats, divided into 3, 4, or 5 parts, and each of them is of 80, 90 or 100 Fathom long. The first of them is tyed to the Fore-runner of small Line, and as the Whale dives they tie more and more Line to it. These Ropes are thicker than the Fore-runner, wrought with strong and tough Hemp, and tarr'd over; but the Line-Furnisher or person whose business it is to look after the Ropes, as also the other Men in the Long-boat, must take great Care that they be not entangled, or that they may not run toward the Side of the Boat, lest it should be thereby overset, but they must run out just before in the middle, commonly call'd the Slave by the Sea men. The Harpooner darts the Harpoon with his Right-Hand just behind the Spout-Hole of the Whale (if he can conveniently) or in the thick Fat of his Back, for he dies sooner if wounded thereabout than if he were launch'd into the Belly or through the Guts; but about the Head the Harpoon can do him little Hurt, because the Fat is very thin there upon the Bones, so that it breaks out more easily, and the Whale finds means to escape. However, for the most part the Seamen do not much mind where they lance or push them, doing it as well as they can, since there is no Time to take great Deliberation. The Beast, as soon as wounded, runs away with the Long-Boat as swift as Wind, and diving underneath draws the Rope very hard, so that great Care must be taken to give him Rope enough lest the Boat be overset. In the mean while all the other Sloops row out before, and take notice which way the Line stands, for if it is stiff and heavy, the Whale still draws it with main Strength; but if it hangs loose, so that the Boat both before and behind is equally high out of the Water, then the Men hale in the Rope, laying it in good order, that if the Whale should draw on again, it may be given him without being entangled. It is also to be observ'd, Thrt if the Whale runs upon the Level, too much Rope must not be allow'd, lest in turning much and often about he should wind it about a Rock or heavy Stone, so that the Harping-Iron would be loosen'd and tear out, which has often happen'd. Whensoever the Whale rolls upon the Ground, the Long-boat lying still, the Lines are drawn in again by degrees, and the Rope-Master lays them down in their proper Places. If he runs underneath a great Ice-field, and the Rope is not long enough to follow him, they draw it in as much as is possible, and cut it off, losing the piece of Rope and the Whale; and indeed they frequently run away with the Lines belonging to 5 or more Sloops. Where great quantities of small Ice are crowd'd together it is very dangerous and difficult to pursue the Whale, for he is so cunning as to retire thither immediately, and the Long-Boats are very often dash'd to pieces against the Rocks of Ice. But when he rises they sling one or two more Harping-Irons into him, accordingly as they perceive him more or less tir'd, and then he dives under Water again, some swim even all-a-long, playing with their Tail and Fins, so that great Care must be taken not to come too near them, for they can beat a Long-Boat to pieces at a Blow. Thus the Seamen wait till the Whale is pretty well tir'd, and then kill him outright with Launces, nevertheless not without great Danger, for they strike as well upon his Body as at his Sides, and receive many severe Blows, all the other Men in the Sloops rowing diligently, sometimes forward and sometimes backward, whilst the Whale lifts himself up and often beats so violently with his Tail and Fins that the Water dashes up into the Air like Dust. The Launces are fixt to a wooden Pole above two Fathom long, or somewhat shorter than a Pike-staff; the other part of the Lance being commonly 2 Fathom long, and pointed before, as that of a Pike; is made of Steel or tough Iron, so as to bend without breaking: For the Harpooniers, having made a deep Hole in the Whale's Back or Sides with their Launces, continue thrusting them first one way then another; but if one or more are got out of their Hands they soon take another, every Sloop being furnished with at least 5, 6 or 7; yet sometimes the Whale has them all out of 3, 4 or more Boats sticking in his Body. After he is struck he spouts Water or Blood with all his force, so that the Noise thereof may be heard as far as the Report of a Cannon; but when he is quite wearied it comes out only by Drops, for he has not Strength enough to force it upward; some Whales blow Blood to the very last, dashing the Men most filthily, and dying their Sloops as deep as if they were painted with Vermillion, nay the very Sea is tinged red along wheresoever they swim. Those Whales that are mortally wounded, heat themselves so excessively that they reek, and the Birds sit on them and eat their Flesh whilst yet alive. They are surest struck with a Harpoon, as they spout Water, and so do not mind the striking of the Oars, for when they lie still they listen, and are sometimes above and sometimes under Water; but it is very dangerous to assault the Females, especially when big with young, for they defend themselves very long and are harder to be dispatch'd than the Males.

The Long-Boats often waste 6 or 7 hours, nay even a whole Day before one is seen; but when he is thus kill'd they convey him to the Ship's Side, fastning that part where the Tail is cut off to the Fore-Castle, and the Head toward the Stern: Then 2 Sloops hold at each End of the Fish, whilst the Harpooniers stand in them before or upon the Whale, clad with a leathern Suit. These 2 Men, who have their peculiar Wages, viz. about 4 or 5 Crowns apiece, slice his Sides with long Knives, raising the Blubber or Fat from the Flesh, which the more it is loosen'd, as the Hide is slea'd from an Ox, the higher it must be haul'd up with the Pulleys, that it may be more easily cut. Afterward the Fat is cut into small pieces in the Ship, and kept in Vessels or Cardels (as they call them) until they try it up into Train-Oil. The Blubber of some Whales is White, others Yellow; and some of Red: The White, being full of small Sinews, does not yield so much Oil, as the Yellow; the Red and watery Fat comes from dead Whales, taking its Colour from the Settling of the Blood, and affords the worst and least Oil, but the Yellow Fat, which looks like Butter, is the best. The Fat being thus chopt into small Pieces, and slic'd thin, is boyl'd in Cauldrons or Coppers: Afterward the Liquor is lad'd out into a Vessel, half full of Water, that it may be cool'd, and that the Dirt, Blood and other Dregs may fall to the bottom; then it is put into Troughs, to be more cool'd, and convey'd thence into the Cardels or Hogheads, which generally hold 64 Gallons. It is reported that one Housson, a Diep-man, in the Year 1634. got 26 Hogheads (Cados) out of the Tongue of one Whale, and 120 out of its Body. The Train-Oil is us'd by divers Tradefinen, as Frize-makers, Carriers, Cloth-Workers and Soap-Boilers. The Greenland Ships, of the largest size, carry 30 or 40 Men, and sometimes more, having 6 Sloops to tend them, and hold from 800 to a 1000 Cardels of Fat: The lesser Ships contain fewer Cardels, viz. from 400 to 700, and have commonly 5 Sloops or Boats belonging to them. There also go some Galliot to Spitsburg to catch Whales, which have only 3 or 4 Sloops.

The Hollanders attribute the first Discovery of Greenland or Spitsberg to three of their own Pilots, ^{land} viz. Jacob Heemskirk, William Barents and John Cornelius Ryp, imposing Names on several Creeks ^{red.} and Promontories, according to their Fancy. But it is certain that they only followed our Steps, and that had our Men been as diligent in that particular from time to time, as also no less careful in making of Sea-Charts on such occasions, divers Discoveries would have been unquestionably asserted to this Nation, which are now almost disput'd from us. Indeed it is not to be doubted but that Sir Hugh Willoughby, in the Year 1553, and Stephen Burroughs in 1556, landed in this Country long before the arrival of the Dutch Fleet; therefore the latter had no other way to derogate from Sir Hugh's Honour, but by conferring on him an imaginary Title of an Island, which they call Willoughby's Land, a Place near Nova Zembla: However, in 1610. the Russia Company of English Merchants, sent a Ship, nam'd the Amity, under the command of Jonas Pool, for Whale-Fishing, who fell upon this Country formerly discover'd, tho' not much regarded, and call'd it Greenland; either by reason of the green Moss with which it was cover'd; or perhaps mistaking it for Greenland, a large Northern Continent before discover'd. He also gave Names to many of the principal Places on the Western Side; as Horn-Jound, (because a Unicorn's Horn was there found) Ice-Point, Bell-Point, Black-Point, Knotty-Point, Lownes's Island, Cape-Cold, Ice-Sound, Fowl-Sound, Deer-Sound, &c. This was the first Time that any Benefit was made by the Fishing in these Seas. In 1611 the Company hir'd six Basques, expert Fishermen, and furnis'd them with two Ships to fish for Whales; the first that was taken by them yield 12 Tuns of Oil, and they likewise kill'd 500 Morfles. In 1622 two other Ships were sent, which caught seventeen Whales, together with some Morfles, and made 180 Tuns of Oil. The Hollanders came thither the same Year with one Ship, conducted by Andrew Swallow an Englishman, whilst another English Pilot likewise brought a Spanish Vessel. Afterward many other Voyages were undertaken on the Company's account, and these Coasts were frequented by the English, Dutch, Danes, and other Nations; nevertheless we find little worth relating of Greenland till the Year 1630, when some English, commanded by Captain William Goodler, were forc'd to wander up and down the Country, and to winter there; a large Relation whereof has been publish'd by Dr. W. Watts, to which we shall refer the Reader. Some English in like manner, winter'd in Greenland, A. D. 1633, and another Company in 1634, but the latter all perished there. The last that has brought us any considerable News from this Country is Frederick Martens a Hamburger, who set sail from the River Elbe April 15. A. D. 1671, and return'd thither on Aug. 21. He set forth a large and very accurate Description of the Land, and all things therein, as Mountains, Plants, Beasts, Fowls, &c. chiefly upon a desire to satisfy the Curiosity of some Gentlemen of the Royal Society. This Work was first writen in High-Dutch, and after printed in English.

In these Countries there is a continu'd Day for four or five Months in a Year, and a perpetual Night for three Months; so that for the most part there is either all Light, or all Darknes. The English that winter'd in Greenland in the Year 1630, entirely lost the Light of the Sun Octob. 14, and saw it not again till Feb. 3. It is reported by those that staid there in 1633, that Octob. 5. was the last Day that they beheld the Sun; tho' they could see to read in the Twi-light, which continu'd till Octob. 17. That on the twenty-second the Stars plainly appear'd all the twenty-four Hours, and were visible during the whole Winter. That on Jan. 15 they perceiv'd for six or seven Hours about Noon, so much Light as they could make a shift to read by it: And that on Febr. 12 they discerned the Sun-Beams upon the tops of the Mountains, and the next day his whole Body. Our Men that remain'd in Greenland in 1634, and all perish'd there, left in Writing before their Deaths, that the Sun disappear'd Octob. 10. and was seen again Feb. 14. The Hollanders that winter'd in Nova Zembla A. D. 1596, on Novemb. 2. New Stile, or Octob. 23. Old Stile, (according to Purchas) saw the Sun not fully above the Earth; when it rose South-south-east, and set South-south-west. After Novemb. 4. New Stile, or Octob. 2. Old Stile, the Sun was no longer seen, but the Moon appear'd Day and Night, as long as the continu'd in the highest Degrees. On Jan. 24. they perceived the edge of the Sun above the Horizon, and on Jan. 27. he came totally in view; being in 5. Deg. 25. Min. of Aquarius. It is difficult to assign a Reason of these various Appearances, unless they proceed from the differences, of Latitude, wherein the English and Dutch took up their Winter-Quarters: But the Cold in Nova Zembla, was more intense than that in Greenland.

The English that Winter'd in this Country lived upon Venison, as Rain-Deer, Bears, Foxes, Morfles, &c. The Bear's-flesh was tolerably pleasant and wholesom, but the Liver caus'd their Skins to peel off; which was also observ'd by the Hollanders, that abode in Nova Zembla. As the Sun and Day began to appear, the Fowls and Foxes crept abroad, for which they set many Traps and Gins; inso much that a vast number of Birds were taken, and at several times, above 50 Foxes: These last prov'd very good Meat, and the Dutch in Nova Zembla were likewise much reliev'd by them in their Scurvies. Afterward, in going abroad to seek Provisions, they found great quantities of Willock's Eggs, that afforded no small Refreshment: But the effects of the Cold upon their Bodies were wonderful, raising Blisters on their Flesh, as if they had been burnt: Iron stuck to their Fingers when touch'd, and their Stockings were all over sing'd as they sat by a great Fire, yet their Feet felt no warmth, and their Backs were frozen. However, our Men either had not altogether endur'd so much hardship, or at least were not so ready to complain as William Barents's Company in Nova Zembla; for the Cold was so excessive sharp in those Parts, that (as it was related by them at their return) their Shoes froze as hard as Horn to their Feet, their Sack and other strong Liquors were likewise frozen, and a Barrel of Water became perfect Ice in one Night. They also add, that their Carpenter taking a Nail out of his Mouth, the Skin and Flesh follow'd, glu'd to it with Ice; that in their Huts they were wont to apply Stones heated at the Fire to their Feet, and other Parts of their Body, to keep them from freezing; and that they suffer'd many other Calamities, the particular Circumstances whereof it would be too tedious to recite.

The Land of JESSO, Terra ESONIS (of Land of which we have already spoken in our Account of Jesso. China) is altogether unknown, except some Coasts of it which lie in 42 Deg. of Latitude. It is seated between Asia and America, and is a long continued Tract of Land; by some thought to be contiguous to both Continents, and that thereby America was Peopl'd. But the Strait of Jofis or Tessay which parts it from Tartary, and the Strait of Anian that separates it from that part of America which has been yet discover'd, seem to contradict that Opinion. The Nature of the Soil and Air is not known; 'tis thought that they are like Canada, and that the Country is fruitful in all things. The Inhabitants, so far as we know of them, live upon Fishing and Hunting, and they are cloath'd with the Skins of Beasts. Their Canoes, or little Gallies, are salted fastned together with Cords made of the Bark of Coco's, which never rots in the Water. They Trade with the People of Japan, and are subject to that Emperor, paying him Tribute: Upon which account it is, that this Prince forbids all Strangers which Trade to his Kingdom, to have any Commerce in the Land of Jesso. The Natives are Idolaters.

As for NEW DENMARK, NEW NORTH-WALES, the Isles of CUMBERLAND and RAWLEY, we know nothing of them but the Names, and some Coasts; so that all we have to say of them is, That these Countries lie on the North of America, toward Hudson's-Sea, that they are very Cold, and that we have little Account of them.

S E C T. II.

The Antarctick, or Southern Countries.

These Countries are call'd ANTARCTICK from the Pole of that Name, near which they lie; they are also nam'd Southern, because of their Situation. The Dutch Relations pretend, that they are not less than America, and as Fruitful and well Peopled as Europe. They reach not farther than the Sixtyeth Degree of Southern Latitude: Magellan, who discover'd them first, gave them them the Name of Magellanica.

The Air is very different, according to the several Regions of it; but it is said, the Soil is generally fertile in all sorts of Fruit, wild and tame Beasts, some of which are unknown to us. Fernando Quiros the Spaniard, Mayre, Brower and Schouen, Dutchmen, observ'd several Mouths of Rivers, but durst not venture upon the Land; they only entered some Gulphs and commodious Havens. The Strait of Magellan, discover'd in 1520, is two hundred Leagues in length; and in some places two or three, in other six or ten Leagues wide. Mayre's Straights, on the East of Terra del Fuogo, discover'd in 1615, is ten Leagues long, and as many wide. Brower's Strait, found out in 1643, is much like Mayre's. The English and Dutch go that way sometimes to the East-Indies; and Dampeir chose rather to go this Way, and Coast the Terra del Fuogo, than venture thro' the Magellanick Strait; because of the difficulty of that Passage.

NEW GUINEE, NOVA GUINEA, is near the Equinoctial Line; it is one of the biggest Isles in the World. It is so call'd, because it seems to be diametrically opposit to Guinee in Africa, and because 'tis part of the West-Indies: It is separated from the Continent by a Strait or Current of the Sea of the Land of Papar, which is a very considerable Island on the East of Gilolo; it is a good Country, but little frequented by the Europeans.

TERRA del FUOGO, already mention'd, is on the South of America; it consists of several Islands, call'd the Magellanick, the Straights of Magellan, and the Fires which they observ'd there gave Name to the Land. The Air and Soil are very good.

The STATES ISLAND lies South-east ^{States} of it, and hath almost the same Nature and Island Air.

The SOUTHERN UNKNOWN ^{Terra} REGION, or TERRA AUSTRALIS Australis INCognITA, is a vast Tract of Land, as ^{Incogni-} we judge by the Coasts. I have distinguish'd the ^{ta} Parts of it by the several Names given it by Pilots and Captains, who have sail'd by them, which are to be seen in the foregoing Table. The Inhabitants are white, of a large Stature, strong, industrious and courageous; it is very sad to fall into their Hands, as some Europeans have found by unhappy Experience. Some modern Relations tell us, That in all that vast Country they have neither King nor Prince, all the People are only combin'd together in several Factions, in the Form of a Commonwealth. They chuse Governours only to make the Lazy work, punish Offenders, and render Justice to every Man. They are Idolaters, and have Oratories to pray to their Idols in: They observe certain Fasts, and Wash their Bodies on certain Days every Year.

The Country of NEW ZEALAND ^{is New} ^{Zealand.} Antipodes to France; the Dutch, in the Year 1642, were us'd cruelly by the Men they found there of an extraordinary Stature. Fernando de Quiros, who spent 14 Years in these Voyages, discover'd it before those Republicans. He was fourteen Months at the Court of the King of Spain, to persuade his Catholic Majesty by eight several Petitions, to send Colonies thither; and represented a thousand Advantages that would arise to them by the Extent of it, Fruitfulness, People, and Conveniency of the Ports, but was not regarded. It is placed in the Dutch Maps between the 34 and 44 Degr. of South Latitude, and between the 189 and 194 Degr. of Longitude.

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND is situated ^{Van Die-} ^{men's} farther Westward, between the 163 and 169 ^{Land.} Degr. of Longitude; and between the 41 and 44 Degr. of Southern Latitude. This Country was first discover'd Novemb. 24. A. D. 1642, by Abel Tasman a Hollander, who impos'd on it that Name in Honour of Anthony van Diemens, Governour of the Dutch East-India Company; whence it is also termed, The Country of Anthony van Diemens: But 'tis not known, whether it be an Island, or a Continent; in regard that its Northern Coast only was descry'd, with Frederick-Henry's Bay, &c.

The other Parts of Terra Australis lie farther Northward, and follow in their Order.

NEW HOLLAND is wash'd on the ^{New} North, by the Seas of the Molucca's and Arabidul, ^{Holland} and on the West and South by the Indian Ocean. Its Sea-coasts were discover'd by the Hollanders, above Fifty Years ago; and its Bounds are usually set out in the Maps, between the 12 and 35 Degrees of Southern Latitude, and between the 134 and the 169 Degr. of Longitude. This

This Country is divided into several Parts, viz. Peter Nuitz's Land, which derives its Name from its first Discoverer, who arriv'd on those Coasts A. D. 1625; Her Landt van Lewinnen, or, The Lionest-Island; The Land of Concord, in Dutch, 't Land van Eentracht; accidentally found out, and so nam'd by the Hollanders, as they were making a Voyage to the Molucca's, A. D. 1618; the Countries of Edels, Du-Wit, and Arment.

CARPENTARIA, or CARPENTER'S-LAND, owns its Denomination to one Carpen-ter, a Dutch Commander, who first made a discovery of its Coast; and is remarkable for its situation between New Holland and New Guinea, in the innermost part of the Indian Ocean.

LA TIERRA AUSTRAL DEL ESPIRITU SANTO, i. e. THE SOUTHERN COUNTRY OF THE HOLY GHOST, a large Tract of Terra Australis, in the Southern part of the Pacifick Sea, was first found out and so call'd, by Peter Ferdinand de Quiros, in the Name of Philip III. King of Spain, A. D. 1606. It is extended very far from the North-west, to the South-east; and to 15, or 16 Deg. of Southern Latitude: It contains the Harbours of S. Felipe, S. Jago, and Vera Cruz, near the Rivers Jordan and S. Salvador; and many Islands lie over against its Northern Coast, according to the Relation of John de Torrecremata, in the Voyage of the said Ferdinand Quiros. M. Sanson places this Country on the South-east of New Guinea, and on the North of it the Islands of Solomon; but both are omitted in the Dutch Maps. Jacob le Mayre took the Island of Good Fortune, and the Horn-Isles, which he discover'd in his Voyage to New Guinea, for those of Solomon; because he found them to agree with Ferdinand Quiros's Description. Others make the Number of Solomon's Islands to amount to 20, but their Names are scarce known; neither are they inhabited by any Euro- pean Colony. The chief of them are, S. Isabella, which is of a larer extent than the rest; Guadalcanale, and S. Nicholo. Anthony of Leon informs us, That the Spaniards made three several Discoveries of these Island: viz. The first by Alvarez de Mendana, A. D. 1567; the second by the same Alvarez, in 1599, who was then accompanied by Peter Ferdinand de Quiros, and died there; and the third by the same Ferdinand de Quiros, in 1605.

We have but lightly touch'd upon the Parts of Terra Australis, in regard that its Sea-coasts only were discover'd by the Hollanders about 50 Years ago; but the nature of the inland Country is altogether unknown to them, as well as to the rest of the European Nations.

Neither indeed can much more be deliver'd, concerning a great number of Islands of the Pacifick Sea, which are but of small compass, and were only discover'd accidentally upon several Occasions. Those that lye on the North of the Equinoctial Line, were discover'd and nam'd by the Spaniards, as they were sailing from America, to the Ladrones and the Philippines: But those that appear on the South of the same Line, were found out, for the most part, by Jacob Le Maire, and William Cornelius Schouten, and call'd by their Names, when after having pass'd the New Straight, they sail'd from South America to New Guinea.

Time may possibly bring to Light as particular Accounts of all these Countries, as we now have of America, which was as much unknown to former Ages. But for the Present these Descriptions are as succinct as are to be had, or at least as good as needs of Countries which are never travell'd to, nor from which anything is brought for our use. And with them we shall close our Description, which we hope has answer'd the Reader's Expectation, and given him an Idea of all the Known Parts of the Earth. We heartily wish him as much Pleasure and Profit in reading it, as we have had Care and Pains in composing it, and then I am sure we shall both be pleas'd.
